Swan settles in

Times-News photo/ANDY ARENZ

A white mute swan stretches its wings at its new home at Sunset Memorial Park. Two mute swans and a pair of Australian black swans are among additions and improvements to the cemetery park, according to its president, Frank Harney. After two months of renovations, Swan Lake has been revamped, ready for exotic ducks and the four swans. A 50-foot-tall chime tower has been equipped to pipe out electronic music. A dedication is planned Mother's Day, Harney said, and a new centennial garden should open by Memorial Day.

Jacklin Seed returns to Jerome plant site

By MARK KIND
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jacklin Seed Co., drawn by a vigorous display of community support, has renewed its plans to build a lawn-seed processing plant south of Jerome.

"We're really looking forward to being a part of your community," Vice President Don Jacklin said Tuesday.

Just last month, the company decided to look elsewhere in the Magic Valley after about 60 Jerome County residents signed a petition against a special-use permit for the plant. They objected to the increased truck traffic the plant would bring to country roads south of town.

But community leaders begged the company to reconsider, they collected 2,500 signatures on petitions and spearheaded a letter-writing campaign.

"The overwhelming positive support that has been expressed by the citizens, business leaders, elected officials, and media in Jerome and Twin Falls has convinced the company that its original selection of Jerome was the best decision," the family-owned company said in a press release.

The company will move ahead with plans to purchase 30 acres of cow pasture south of 1-84 along Lincoln to construct a $3.5 million plant. The land belongs to Con Paulos-Chevrollet-Pontiac-GMC Trucks and Geo.

Jerome County Commissioner George Andrus was happy with the company's decision.

"It made my day," he said. "We need the revenue they will generate in the county."

President promises 'appropriate response' to Lithuanian fuel cuts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush warned Tuesday of "appropriate responses" if Moscow imposes announced cuts in fuel supplies to Lithuania, but also said he does not want to damage superpower relations.

A Soviet journalist, meanwhile, was quoted as saying Moscow would cancel the cuts. The journalist denied having made the remark.

"I want to be sure anything we do is productive," Bush said. "There's been dramatic change in the world and I don't want to inadvertently take some action that would set it

The Soviet government said it had ordered drastic cuts in natural gas supplies to Lithuania on Tuesday, followed by cuts in oil and gasoline on Wednesday. U.S. officials said they would not confirm any slowdown.

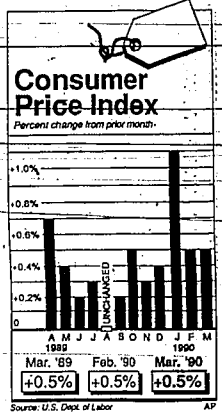

But by Tuesday night, a Soviet journalist was reported as saying Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would revoke the order. Vladimir Matyash, the Washington bureau chief of the Soviet news agency Tass, told CIA Director William Webster the order "was a mistake" and that that "President Gorbachev will have an announcement tomorrow revoking that," according to National Public Radio.

The conversation took place at a reception held by the Public Broadcasting System. The NPR account said Webster had raised the issue with the Soviet journalist, eliciting his reply.

When asked how he knew Gorbachev's intentions, Matyash replied, "You can be sure it's true. I have a direct line to Moscow," according to NPR.

The NPR reporter, Daniel Schorr, said he overheard the Webster-Matyash conversation and both knew he was lying.

But Matyash said after Schorr's

Too many surveys plus junk mail leave Americans ignoring census

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Census officials believe the sluggish public response to filling out 1990 forms may be rooted in two new social realities:

Americans have less time at home and less tolerance for an increasing flood of surveys and junk mail.

These factors, coupled with the intimidating nature of the questionnaires and skepticism about their confidentiality, could force the Census Bureau to reassess its 200-year-old method of counting every head and start using sampling techniques to gather all or some of the same information.

"The census environment is becoming more and more difficult every decade," said Kirk Wolter, a vice president at A.C. Nielsen and a former census official. As a result, he said, the bureau "must start looking at other techniques that acquire data faster, more comprehensively, and cheaper."

The search for explanations and solutions comes as census officials grapple with a disturbingly low return rate: only 61 percent of the nearly 100 million households that received forms in the mail have sent them back. The bureau had expected the figure to be closer to 70 percent by now.

For every percentage point of the population that does not mail back the questionnaires, the bureau must spend $10 million to send out enumerators to track down the information door-to-door.

In addition to the social factors contributing to the low return rate, the bureau has been plagued by technical failures — as many as 9 million homes received their forms late or not at all, census officials said.

Representatives of several large cities complained about the missing forms at a news conference Tuesday, saying the problem would jeopardize the accuracy of the count and cost the communities billions of federal dollars. J. Thomas Cochran, executive director of the U.S. Conference of Mayors said that 19 account was "not accurate."

"What I said and what I meant was, there was no confirmation from Moscow that Moscow would exercise the sanctions" that Gorbachev announced, the interruption gas supplies.

"Schorr misunderstood me. Please kill the story," Matyash said.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., conferred separately with Bush about increased tensions in Lithuania.

Mitchell said that, based on what happens in Lithuania, Bush should review whether the United States proceeds with closer cooperation with Moscow on trade, tax matters and the environment. "I regard the action taken by the Soviets as wrong," Mitchell said.

"Lawmakers have warned that Congress might act on its own with economic pressure against Moscow if the Soviets escalate efforts to block Lithuania's drive for independence."

Bush took a two-pronged approach of warning and conciliation as the administration waited to see if Moscow carried out threats of economic sanctions against the breakthrough Baltic republic.

Responding to the latest news, Bush said the United States was monitoring developments "very, very closely, and we are waiting to see if the Soviet announcements are implemented."

"Clearly those announcements are contrary to the approach that we have urged and that others have urged upon the Soviet Union," Bush said. "We are considering appropriate responses if these threats are implemented."

He refused to elaborate, saying, "I would simply repeat that what we need is dialogue, discussion, and a peaceful resolution of this great difficulty there."

Bush commented at a picture-taking session in the Oval Office.

Inflation alive, well in America

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices, fueled by sharp increases in clothing, housing and medical costs, shot up 0.5 percent in March to push inflation to the highest level since 1982, the government said Tuesday.

Private economists saw the unexpectedly brisk advance in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index as a discouraging sign that inflation was not retreating as they had hoped.

The inflation rate is "dangerous and potentially devastating for financial markets and the economy," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co.

Through the first three months of the year, inflation has risen at an annual rate of 8.5 percent, the fastest quarterly increase since a 10.1 percent increase in the spring.

Report of mouse in milk carton has sour ending

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

GOODING — A Gooding man who claimed to find a mouse in a quart of half-and-half faces a felony charge of trying to extort money from a dairy.

James Archie Roller, 61, pleaded innocent to a charge of attempted grand theft by extortion before District Judge Phillip M. Becker on Monday. He was arrested on March 29.

According to documents filed by the prosecutor, Meadow Gold Dairies Inc. was contacted on March 22 by a man who wanted to meet someone from the company about some bad milk he had purchased.

representative met the disgruntled customer at a cafe in Wendell, prosecution documents say. The man explained that he had purchased a quart of half-and-half dated March 23, and that he had found a dead mouse in it. He gave the dairy representative a letter for his supervisors, in which he asked for $800,000 or he would contact newspapers, television and the "20/20" and "60 Minutes" news programs.

The two met again at the cafe the afternoon of March 29. This time, the Meadow Gold employee was wired. For sound, and a Gooding County sheriff's deputy listened to the conversation; the prosecutor alleges.

At the second meeting, the man

Seeing red

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — They are the staple neckwear of presidents, politicians and power brokers.

They brighten drab suits and look great on TV. They are to establishment businessmen what Sansabelt stacks are to golfers.

At a time when the variety of men's neckties has never been greater, people are seeing red — the traditional, risk-free hue for ties, no matter if they come with polka dots, paisleys, prints, patterns, stripes or geometric designs.

"Red is the brightest color that goes with all men's suits in a business environment," said designer Alan Flusser, who created the neckwear for Michael Douglas in "Wall Street," the tale of yuppie greed in the 1980s.

"It gives new life to somber, conservative business suits," he said.

But be advised, Flusser's personal tie rack is devoid of red. The reasoning is similar to what Yogi Berra once said about a nightspot being too popular: "Nobody goes there anymore. It's red is too obvious a color," said Flusser, whose only concession to red are his luxurious, woven Jacquards in claret, burgundy or Bordeaux.

But in places like the nation's capital, crimson is red hot in the corridors of power.

President Bush favors them. TV anchormen love them, and ABC's Sam Donaldson wears red ties so often they've become a personal trademark. Donald Trump flashes them the same way he runs business — unblushingly.

Some trace red's staying power to the 1988 presidential campaign, when politicians out-did themselves to prove their red-blooded patriotism without sticking their necks out.

"I saw one Democratic debate when all seven of the candidates had a blue suit, white shirt and red tie. It was like a uniform," said Bob Beauchamp, fashion editor for Esquire magazine.

The necktie is the only part of a man's wardrobe that has no function other than to decorate.

"The average man owns 30 to 40 ties, although only 10 to 15 of them are worn regularly, according to the Neckwear Association of America, a New York-based industry trade group. It said about 95 million are sold each year, and red can be found more than any other color."

"A tie allows room for self-expression," said the association's Jerry Anderson. "It's probably the most noticeable item he wears. It says more about your personality than a suit or a shirt."

Fashion forecasters note the mainstream tie is widening from 3½ to 3¾ inches. Some risk-takers are even pushing the 4-inch barrier, Anderson said.

Global warming delegates want action rather than Bush's cautious approach

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush urged an international conference on global warming Tuesday to conduct more study before ordering cuts, but his cautious approach failed to convince many of the delegates.

"Environmental policies that ignore the economic factor, the human factor, are destined to fail," Bush told delegates from 17 nations gathered for the two-day White House Conference on Science and Environmental Research Related to Global Change.

He urged them to consider the economics before ordering additional cuts in the industrial gases that many scientists believe collect in the upper atmosphere and trap heat on the Earth's surface, creating what is called the greenhouse effect.

Bush administration already has called for phasing out the use of chlorofluorocarbons, the chemical blamed for ripping a hole in the Earth's protective ozone layer and which also is a greenhouse gas. But the administration has resisted calls to cut carbon dioxide, the No. 1 greenhouse gas.

Bush underscored his administration's policy that there is too much scientific uncertainty about the effects of global warming to order immediate cuts in most greenhouse gases.

"What we need are facts, the stuff that science is made of," he said.

But many of the delegates said enough is known about global warming to warrant more dramatic actions.

"The gravity of the situation requires immediate, determined action," West German Environment Minister Klaus Töpfer said.

Töpfer said the soon will propose that the West German government order a 25 percent cut in the emissions of carbon dioxide by 2005.

Carbon dioxide, produced by the burning of fossil fuels in cars and industry, is the single biggest contributor to global warming.

"It is too risky to delay action," said a Dutch study presented to the meeting.

Dutch Environment Minister Hans Alders told delegates that nations should at least stabilize carbon dioxide emissions while continuing research.

"We needed Love Canal before hazardous waste was tackled, before a dying Rhine River, Rhine before waste water was treated," he said.

"My country has decided to learn the lessons from the past and act on global warming now."

The Dutch study said its own economy could continue to prosper even with a dramatic plan to curb greenhouse gases, including energy conservation measures, better mass transit, driving restrictions, better waste recycling and reduced fertilizer use.

Police rescue abducted 8-year-old
 • ROME (AP) — A police SWAT team burst into a seaside hideout in northern Italy Tuesday night and freed the 8-year-old daughter of a leading sportswear manufacturer, ending a 78-day kidnapper ordeal that touched all of Italy.

Officials said Patrizia Tacchella was in good condition and was being reunited with her parents in Verona. Three kidnappers were arrested.

Authorities said members of an elite police commando stormed the kidnappers' villa in Sagin Margherita Ligure, a small town near Genoa on Italy's fashionable Liguria coast.

Interior Minister Antonio Gava said no shots were fired and no one was injured.

The girl's father, Imerio Tacchella, co-owner of the Carrera jeans and sportswear firm, said no ransom was paid. News reports have said the kidnappers demanded up to $16 million.

Leftist guerrillas slay former official
 • LIMA, Peru (AP) — Leftist guerrillas on Tuesday shot to death the former director of the Peruvian State Security Institute and dumped his body on a beach 20 miles south of Lima, police said.

Officials said Felipe Santiago Salaverry's body, riddled with four shots, was found near a sports club on the beach.

Leaflets found near Salaverry's body indicated he was killed by the Shining Path, a radical Maoist-inspired guerrilla group that began its insurgency 10 years ago in the Andean highlands. More than 18,000 people have been killed since their uprising began, most in the mountains but more recently in Lima.

Wetlands preservation bill ready
 • WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said Tuesday that he will introduce a bill this week with the most comprehensive wetlands policy yet sent to Congress.

He said the bill follows President Bush's policy of no overall net loss in wetlands and would restore and create such areas.

It is supported by the National Wildlife Federation and former New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, who chaired a national committee that evaluated wetland policies and made recommendations to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Bennett said the bill makes improvements on the agreement reached last year between the Army Corps of Engineers and the EPA over wetlands. That agreement originally was applauded by environmentalists but met with such opposition from developers that it was modified.

Part of the surge earlier in the year was attributed to an unusually cold December that froze crops along the Gulf Coast and sent fuel oil prices skyward. But March declines in energy and fruit and vegetable prices were not enough to offset widespread increases elsewhere.

The March figures are "a reminder that inflation is a chronic problem, that it's not going away if it's not getting better," said Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRIMAGRAW Hill.

While inflation is still expected to slow in coming months, the March figures sent some economists scurrying to revise upward their forecasts for the entire year. Some said consumer prices could rise by 5 percent in 1990. That would be up from a 4.6 percent increase in 1989 and the highest annual rate since 1981.

In another economic report Tuesday, the government said industrial production rose 0.7 percent in March, reflecting a rebound in auto production. It was the second consecutive strong showing and provided evidence, some analysts said, that the slump in American manufacturing may finally be coming to an end.

In a third report, the Commerce Department said that housing construction fell for the second consecutive month, declining by 9.3 percent as new homes and apartments were being built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.32 million units in March.

Analysts predicted the 0.5 percent inflation rate in March — which followed an equal gain of 0.5 percent in February and a 1.1 percent increase in January — would strengthen the Federal Reserve's resolve not to lower interest rates, despite pressures from the Bush administration.

Over two-thirds of the March inflation came from rising housing and clothing prices.

Housing costs rose by 0.5 percent, the biggest advance since January's 0.7 percent.

Clothing costs, which climbed a modest 3.3 percent in February, rose 1.6 percent last month as the impact of sharply higher costs for new spring lines continued to be felt.

So far this year, clothing prices are up at an annual rate of 21.4 percent, compared to an increase of just 1 percent for all of 1989.

This time, the company probably will need no special-use permit. Jerome County Planning and Zoning Administrator Glenn Ellwell changed his mind last week and said the company could build on the light-industrial site without a special-use permit.

He said Tuesday that if no one objects to the plan, he will sign a zoning commission before May 22, Jacklin Seed Co. will need only a building permit to proceed.

Potential protesters will need to know what they're talking about.

"In this case, they would have to show why, using the ordinance, that it isn't an appropriate decision," Ellwell said.

Robert Johns, who lives southeast of the plant site, said he might challenge Ellwell's decision after he looks at the zoning ordinance.

"They've got to settle a few questions before I'm satisfied," Johns said.

Jerry and Karen James, neighbors who have opposed the plant, were unavailable for comment Tuesday. Community leaders have worked hard to convince the Jameses that Jacklin Seed Co. would be a good next-door neighbor — going so far as to fly Jerry James north for a special tour of the company's Post Falls headquarters.

Jacklin Seed Co. plans to build a merge lane on South Lincoln Street for trucks turning north out of the plant, Don Jacklin said. The company will also partially fund other improvements to South Lincoln, including a left turn lane into the plant site, Jacklin said.

The company markets turf-grass seed internationally. It has been expanding into southern Idaho since last summer, seeking contracts with farmers to produce 20,000 acres worth of Kentucky bluegrass seed for expanding Asian markets.

The company in January postponed public hearings on the special-use permit after state legislators became concerned about field burning — an agricultural practice used annually in grass-seed fields.

The public's dampened enthusiasm for the census is one reason some experts have urged that federal again expressed his unhappiness with the half-and-half without company representative asked to see him, the man said it was frozen and 80 miles away. He said he would go to "the TV people" if the matter was not taken care of, prosecution documents say.

The dairy representative offered to replace the milk, but the man said he wanted a "few bucks" — $20,000, prosecution documents say.

Idaho's 4-year schools to receive increases if board adopts plan

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho and Lewis-Clark State College stand to get substantial increases in operating funds if the Idaho Board of Education later this week adopts its finance committee's proposal.

But Boise State University and Idaho State University stand to get even bigger increases.

According to the budget proposal, Idaho State would get 16.6 percent in additional operating money, LCSC would get a boost of 16.3 percent, Boise State would receive 15.6 percent more and Idaho would trail with an increase of 12.5 percent.

Idaho lawmakers appropriated 14.5 percent more $20 million for the state's four-year schools for the fiscal year starting July 1. Of that additional money, $6 million is designed to address critical one-time needs.

The board meets Thursday and Friday at Lewis-Clark State College at Lewiston.

Keith Hasselquist, the board's chief financial officer, said the proposed increase in UI's operating budget lags slightly behind those at the other institutions in percentage terms primarily for three reasons.

He said enrollment at UI has been rising at a slower rate than at the other three institutions. Consequently, UI would receive proportionately less to adjust to the larger workloads created by higher enrollments in the next fiscal year.

Under the finance committee's proposal, BSU would get nearly $1.1 million and ISU would receive $795,000 for "enrollment workload adjustments." UI would get $628,100 and LCSC would get $144,100.

Secondly, $457,000 would be allocated for Idaho State University's proposed communication disorders program, Hasselquist said.

Thirdly, BSU would get $208,200 for operating its renovated Campus School and LCSC would receive $148,000 to operate its new library, he said.

Joseph J. Geiger, UI's financial vice president, said UI supported giving operating money to BSU and LCSC for the two new buildings.

UI will have similar needs for its expanded library and Advanced Technology Building in the next few years, he said.

LCSC Financial Vice President Dean Froehle said he doesn't anticipate any objections to be raised about the proposed distribution of the money Thursday.

The Idaho Board of Education Thursday also will consider raising student fees by 7.7 percent at LCSC, 7.4 percent at Eastern Idaho Technical College, 6.1 percent at ISU, 6.2 percent at UI and 4.5 percent at BSU next fall.

If the proposed fee hikes are approved, it would cost $1,120 a year to attend LCSC and $1,166 a year to go to UI. Presidents at both institutions have made compromises with their student body presidents to try to avoid a showdown before the state board on what has been a controversial issue.

Idahoan selected for justice institute

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Administrative Director of the Courts Carl Bianchi has been selected as a board member for the State Justice Institute following President Bush's nomination.

Idaho Supreme Court Chief Justice Robert Bakes on Tuesday said the appointment will help boost court programs in rural states.

The institute is a non-profit corporation created by Congress to improve judicial administration in state courts. It provides matching federal funds and grants, this year it will award $10.8 million for education, research and other work.

Deputies suspended for part in fight

POCATELLO (AP) — Two Bannock County deputies involved in a fight at a Pocatello motel have been suspended for two weeks and placed on one-year probation, Sheriff Bill Lynn says.

Capt. Tom Canfield, 37, and Deputy Mark Black, 29, were suspended Monday, Lynn said. One week of the two-week suspensions will be without pay and the sheriff said he has not sure what action he will take concerning their ranks.

Pocatello police on Monday served misdemeanor citations on both officers, charging them with simple battery. The complaints were lodged by Sterling Anderson, 29, and Peter Jaime, 24.

Idaho receives grant for home program

BOISE (AP) — Idaho will receive a grant of more than $1.5 million to help low-income families make their homes more energy efficient, Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced.

"Idaho's weathering program is making it possible for Idaho's low-income families to make their homes more energy efficient thus reducing their winter heating costs," Andrus said. "At the same time it is helping our state as a whole conserve our natural resources."

In addition, $120,636 is available for the same purpose from funds allocated under the "stripper well" settlement. That federal money came from penalties against the oil companies for overpricing petroleum produced from the stripper wells.

Utility: Conservation worth 2 dams

BOISE (AP) — Energy efficiency programs over the next 20 years could save the same amount of electricity as two American Falls power plants would generate running at full capacity, Idaho Power Co. officials say.

The Boise-based utility intends to spend $1.4 million over the next three years researching how those savings could be achieved.

Idaho Power this week submitted a conservation plan with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. The company said that within the coming year, it intends to expand its Good Cents home program to include manufactured housing.

Idaho Power also will conduct a survey of irrigation companies and create programs to reduce energy inefficiencies in irrigation equipment and existing commercial buildings.

Accidents on I-15 kill 1, wound 3

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Three separate traffic accidents along a stretch of Interstate 15 here left an Idaho woman dead and three other people injured, authorities said.

A fatal pickup-truck rollover at 11:50 a.m. Monday, north of the on-ramp from 21st Street, was the first of the accidents. Dead at the scene was Edith Jenkins, 66, of Rigby, Idaho.

The two crashes that followed within the next 40 minutes forced closure of the highway between 24th and 21st for about two hours.

Stallings better funded than GOP opponents

STALLINGS

A campaign finance report received by the secretary of state's office Tuesday for the period through March shows Idahoans for Stallings received $58,365 from political action committees and individuals.

The Stallings campaign spent about $25,983 in the first three months of 1990, and with carryover from previous campaigns had $78,567 still in the bank and no outstanding debts at the end of the reporting period.

In contrast, GOP hopeful Sean McDevitt of Pocatello reported last week that he was running his campaign, including television advertising on six stations, on a $20,000 personal loan. Janet Reid of Idaho Falls, also seeking the Republican nomination in the May 22 primary, reported raising only $2.7 by the end of March. She reportedly had spent $207.

Reports had not been received late Tuesday from 2nd District Republicans Dan Hawley, a Boise attorney, and state Sen. Ann Rydalch of Idaho Falls. Finance reports had to be postmarked by the close of business Monday.

Stallings received $8,250 of his contributions from individuals and $34,400 from PACs, including one representing Mrs. Rydalch's employer, according to the report received Tuesday.

EG&G Inc. of Wellesley, Mass., the parent company of EG&G Idaho Inc., the primary private contractor at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory where Mrs. Rydalch works intermittently as a subcontract administrator, contributed $200 this year and $300 during the last quarter of 1989 to Stallings.

Mrs. Rydalch currently is on a leave of absence from EG&G Idaho Inc. while she pursues the 2nd District nomination. The company joined PACs for such high-tech companies as Raytheon and Westinghouse in supporting Stallings, who is on the House Science, Space and Technology Committee.

He received $7,200 from 15 PACs representing the agriculture industry, including the Farm Credit Council, the National Cattlemen's Association, the National Farmers Organization, the Colorado-based Potato PAC and the Southwest Peanut PAC.

Boise hotline funding fails after 20 years

BOISE (AP) — The Boise telephone Hotline is hanging up. After 20 years of taking calls from Boise-area residents in crisis, the Boise Hotline will discontinue service May 30.

The lines will be cut because United Way of Ada County — the hotline's primary sponsor — has denied a request to increase funding by 96 percent, United Way spokeswoman Linda Laky said.

With the additional resources, the Hotline's board had planned to hire a director to coordinate volunteers and expand from four hours in the evening to 12 hours. The hotline has been operated on a part-time basis during its 20-year history.

The decision was made by a United Way distribution committee over a three-month period.

"When they looked at the whole picture, they didn't think investing those dollars was the best return for United Way dollars," Ms. Laky said.

She said the United Way committee, which reviews funding requests from area agencies, did not have the additional $12,280 in this year's coffers for the 96 percent increase.

The year-end federation supported 24 local human-service agencies with the $1.78 million it raised. That met about 88 percent of the more than $2 million in requests, Ms. Laky said.

Hotline Board Chairman Jim Nicholson said the hotline asked United Way to increase its allocation from $14,000 in 1989 to $27,430 for 1990.

"We've been at it for long time and served a major function," he said.

Idaho Power reminds farm workers:

Watch where you're going!

Watch out for power lines. They're deadly. The deadliest you're likely to work around carry about 69,000 volts of electricity. That's enough to light up a city of 5,000. Or kill a careless farm worker. True, you can't be looking up for them all the time, so here are some simple safety rules to remember whether or not you're near a line. Don't climb power poles. Two things can happen to you up there. One, you can fall off. Two,	you can touch a wire. Neither is good, but you're more likely to survive the fall. Don't raise pipe on end. Carry all irrigation and other pipe parallel to the ground. Raising it on end could cause it to hit a power line, which could lead to electrocution. Look up before elevating equipment. Check overhead before elevating augers and other equipment to make	sure no power lines are around. Like pipe, they're good conductors. Don't move a conveyor or stacker when it's elevated. You might pull it into a power line, and the consequences could be fatal. In general, be as careful around power lines as you would be around any farm equipment. If not, you could be in for the shock of your life. Idaho Power

Craig smugly awaits his Senate inheritance

He tries not to show it, but it must be hard for Congressman Larry Craig not to display at least a little smugness now that he is out front and coasting in his primary bid to succeed retiring U.S. Sen. James McClure.

Well-financed by a long list of PAC contributors and the inheritance of McClure's campaign staff and well-connected volunteer network, Craig doesn't even seem to be making an effort to hide his confidence that he will handily defeat Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones in the May 22 Republican primary.

In financing reports through March, Craig has banked more than $200,000, almost half of it from PACs in such industries as oil, utility, timber, mining, railroad and agriculture. Jones has less than a tenth that amount.

Since politics is a game of money even in a small state like Idaho, Jones is in danger of simply being overwhelmed by Craig's mailings, advertising and organization.

Jones has struck back with his claim that Craig is, in effect, inheriting a seat paid for by big PAC money, much of it from the energy, defense and agribusiness interests which have long supported both McClure and Sen. Steve Symms.

But Craig has not risen to the temptation. Instead, he is playing it safe.

Perhaps that explains the mind-numbing boilerplate Craig has presented in recent Twin Falls appearances.

At a fund-raiser and meet-and-greet last week, he gave little hint of what his position was or would be on any issue of substance.

On transportation: He said he wanted to "work with Steve Symms on transportation issues." On change: "Idaho is changing...we understand that...but we want it to change the way we'd like to have it, not (according to) someone from the outside."

On wilderness: "I don't have all the answers." On the farm bill: a "key to Idaho agriculture." On Saylor Creek expansion: "We have to bring the citizens into the process." And so on.

The shame of this is that Craig has been a better Congressman than he has sounded so far in this campaign.

For example, you wouldn't know it from his I'll-take-money-from-anyone approach to PACs, but Craig has been a member House Ethics Committee, which looked into the affairs of House Speaker Jim Wright.

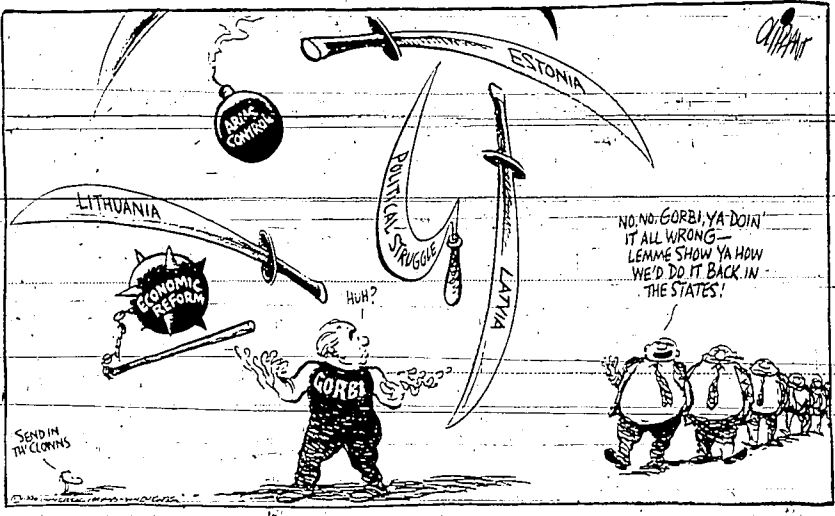

His approach to this campaign seems to be to say as little as possible and to slide into a pass-down Senate seat into which he wants to step as if it were a fiefdom. That seems to be the betting of the long list of special interests who have lined up behind him.

Jones, on the other hand, has a long record of working hard in Idaho and working to protect Idahoans' interests in such areas as Swan Falls water rights and consumer protection. He has also refused to take out-of-state PAC money.

The last position has earned him something of a reputation of a maverick, a sort of populist Republican, who (God forbid) speaks his mind and stands up for the little guy.

But Jones has had trouble getting his message out and the primary is only a month away. He is betting that Idaho voters are watching and listening carefully.

Craig, on the other hand, seems to know all he has to do is stay cool and run out the clock.

Can't understand abortion foes

For the life of me, I can't understand those anti-abortion people. Do they actually think an anti-abortion law is going to solve all their problems? Is such a law going to do away with pre-marital, extra-marital or (in the case of divorce) post-marital sex? Will it even make a dent in the abortion rate?

If you believe an anti-abortion law will accomplish any of these goals, then you must think that the Volstead Act eradicated old "Demon Rum" and that Al Capone accumulated all that money and power by selling vacuum cleaners door to door.

I can see it now - the first week that abortions become illegal, sleazy little characters will appear on every street corner, accosting every woman that walks by with "Pst, hey lady, want to buy some French-made abortion pills?" Banning abortion isn't going to work, just as banning alcohol didn't.

The anti-abortion group, as I understand it, is mostly a coalition of fundamentalist Christian groups. If this is the case, then they read the Bible literally; that is, every bit of the Bible is God's word.

If this is the case, then how can they call abortion murder? The Bible says that abortion is a civil matter and that if a man injures a pregnant woman so as to cause her to abort her baby, then that man owes the family of that woman a civil judgment.

If the anti-abortion crowd really wants to lower the abortion rate in this country, then they should start acting like the Christians they profess to be instead of like secular political groups.

Environment issue manipulated?

Is environmental propaganda being used to force more government control over our lives and force the United States into a one-world government?

The architects of world government, the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), clearly state that they will use environmental concerns - real, imagined and exaggerated - to justify more regulation and government. Writing in the Spring 1988 "Foreign Affairs," CFR journal, Columbia Professor Richard Gardner (CFR) recommended the use of environmental concerns to justify more internationalism.

Not satisfied with an array of taxes, regulations and controls they have spawned, environmental lobbyists are gearing up for another assault on America's producers and U.S. independence with their Earth Day 1990.

Yet a growing number of scientific authorities now feel that many of the environmental claims are unsubstantiated hogwash.

For example, concerning ozone depletion, University of Colorado Professor Peter Beckman has concluded that it is ludicrous to attempt to draw any firm conclusions from the skimpy data assembled to date.

Professors Richard Lindzen of Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Jerome Namias of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography claim that forecasts about global warming "are so inaccurate and fraught with uncertainty as to be useless to policymakers."

Remember just a few years ago, the environmentalists said we would all freeze due to pollution. They can't have it both ways.

As an example of environmental extremism, Earth Day 1990 Director/Sec. Timothy Wirth of Colorado, a CFR member, has stated: "We've got to ride the global-warming issue - even if the terms is wrong, we will be doing the right thing in terms of economic and environmental policy." This is one-worlder madness!

We should be concerned about pollution and protecting the environment, but the demands of doomsday environmentalists would have us give up personal and national freedom to address highly speculative theories.

We must not allow our nation to be steam-rolled into a loss of sovereignty and personal freedom in the name of environmentalism. Unproven theories should be tempered with provable facts, the test of logic must be scrupulously applied and the hidden agenda of the environmental lobby and the goal of world government by the Council on Foreign Relations should be exposed and rejected by freedom-loving Americans.

Nuclear power the ultimate source

Something of interest to Mr. Graf: As of March 1989, a full 20 percent of America's nuclear power was being produced by nuclear facilities.

With the Holy Holiday of Earth Day so near, Mr. Graf should keep in mind that even if not for his California cousins who successfully stopped a new nuclear-powered plant from meeting the needs of that region, we here in Idaho wouldn't be faced with the proposition of breathing carcinogenic particulates emitted from the proposed coal-fired plant 60 miles south of Twin Falls.

The concept that nuclear power plants are "garbage creators" is asinine.

What about "dangerous" radioactive waste tailings from nuclear plants?

Uranium is the fuel for nuclear plants; its radioactivity is exceedingly weak, which explains its 4.6-billion-year half-life (the time it takes for one-half to disappear).

If the folks at the INEL had put it under his house, there would likely be a most horrid clamour being projected across the nation by the media, but Mother Nature put that uranium there when the world was made.

Any objections? Why not take that uranium out of the ground and get good use out of it instead of letting it "radiate" the lungs and bloodstreams of posterity. Which brings us to the main point - posterity.

Within 500 years, buried coal ash mix will be more toxic than its nuclear counterpart (not to mention more radioactive).

Just by sheer volume, coal ash contains more radioactivity in America than all of the wastes produced by nuclear power plants! Such information is available from the USCEA, 1776 I St., N.W., No. 400, Washington, DC 20006.

If Mr. Graf needs some facts; they exist in black and white. Finally, what about solar and wind power? Our land would have to be littered from sea to shining sea with countless windmills and still not have enough electricity.

The production of photovoltaics for solar cells produces toxic by-products.

A true environmentalist has some grasp of the complexities of man and environment and will affirm that nuclear is the way to go - everything else is a "waste." Besides, all power can be traced to nuclear processes anyway. Therefore, were it not for God's gift of nuclear power to mankind, there wouldn't be mankind. Happy Earth Day!

Excessive weaponry true threat

I would like to ask Mr. Roy Uptain, who thinks it's a good idea for people to have assault weapons to protect themselves against the police and the government, how many in his family have been gunned down in a school, restaurant or anywhere else for that matter? I'd be willing to bet not any by the way his mind runs.

If we ever lose our right to own guns, it can all be blamed on those who thought it was OK for the public to have all the deadly weapons they could lay their hands on.

They would care less if anyone wanted to make organ donors out of them. Mr. Uptain, you also keep bringing up the Second Amendment, claiming people need guns to protect themselves against the police and their government; our prisons are full of outlaws who thought the same way - many have ruined lives because their guns went off accidentally.

As a boy, I watched a lot of western movies. My heroes always were the ones who would take off their guns and fight like men; and in those days, people didn't even have assault weapons.

How free are the people, Mr. Uptain, when those in big cities are afraid to go outside for the fear of being hit by a stray bullet? Guns and wars are not what makes people free - they only determine who can do the most killing and dominate the other.

Decorative yew highly poisonous

These past five years, we have been outfitters in the Sun Valley and Stanley Basin area and our lives have been far from dull. We have had many interesting experiences - both good and bad - and a recent bad experience we feel is worth passing on to you.

A very real danger was revealed to us that very few people are aware of.

Without our knowledge, some Yew branches and small clippings were put in the pasture where we were wintering our horses. We were aware the Yew plant was poisonous but little did we know just how deadly it was.

After finding our best pack and riding mare dead in the pasture, we did some investigating and discovered the source of our anguish - the Yew plant.

The horse died within one hour of ingesting the plant and our lead pack mule died eight hours later.

We contacted our veterinarian and the Poison Control Center and worked with them on the situation.

They were very interested in following our progress as we discovered through the Poison Center that the Yew plant is highly toxic and it takes only a minute amount to be effective. It can kill a human in up to 90 minutes and much to our dismay can stay in a horse's system for up to 14 days!

It is our hope that through this letter, more people will become aware of just how deadly this pretty little shrub can be to you, your children and your animals.

Hopefully, you, the reading public can benefit from this tragic loss of ours.

The Yew plant is a common yard shrub in this area. It is a dark green; short, flat-topped evergreen and it may be a spreader or an upright.

Letters/Abortion, story on child abuse draw reader comments

Let's focus on living children

Thank you, Donna Stalley, for all you are doing. To pro-life and pro-choice activists: Neither side is going to change a woman's mind, law or no law, they will do as they please - always have, always will. And you've rode that horse long enough.

Now, please put your time, money and mouth where the real tragedy is - with children who are already living and being hurt by incestuous relatives and friends. They cannot protect themselves and don't have any say about how they are treated.

The child cannot lie about such itubous treatment, so believe them and go for the guilty parties and give them the fullest sentence - and then more. Use their time and money and help set these children free.

Dog the legislators until they make laws against such vile actions because it is rape, pure and simple... in the family or out. Just plain rape!

News story verification needed

Your writer apparently made no attempt to verify the statements made by Donna Stalley.

Why is it that The Times-News has a double standard when it comes to reporting? In your recent article on Fathers For Equal Rights-Idaho, you made a point to seek out comment from the other side. This you called "trying to get a balanced story." FFR-Idaho directly contradicts some of your pet liberal views. Guardian ad Litem, on the other hand, reflects them. Stories on their view don't need to be balanced.

For the record, I am unaware of any of the organizations mentioned in the article except Victims of Child Abuse Laws. I am not a member of VOCAL, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, there is no VOCAL chapter in the Magic Valley. If there is, will someone please contact me.

I do, however, know a little bit about the organization and can tell you that the statement that VOCAL "encourages child sexual abuse" is absolutely false. VOCAL is opposed to child abuse in all forms, including the abuse of being manipulated by scheming adults.

VOCAL is aware that some allegations of child sexual abuse are true and believes that people who do these things should be dealt with very severely. VOCAL is also aware that a very large percentage of these charges are false, and they oppose the stripping of the Constitution to allow over zealous persons to obtain convictions in these instances of false charges.

The statement that VOCAL has an "annihilation team" is also false. What they do have is a number of professional people who realize that some allegations of sexual abuse are false and are willing to examine each case on its own merits and try to arrive at the truth - whatever it may be.

If it be mandated, an organization with the record that Guardian ad Litem has, I would examine just what I am doing here.

This abortion logic simpler

To Mr. Douglas Arendsee, April 13, 1990.

Your logic lesson was amusing, but permit me to simplify your convoluted reasoning a bit.

At the heart of freedom to choose is do not have the right to force anyone to undergo an unwanted abortion, and no one has the right to force me to continue an unwanted pregnancy.

If you were striving for clean logic, then morality is another issue and another argument.

Civil rights leader, King confederate Abernathy dead at 64

ATLANTA (AP) — The Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, who created the civil rights movement with Martin Luther King Jr., but decades later enraged the main leader's supporters by writing about his alleged infidelity, died Tuesday.

Abernathy, who had cradled the fallen King's bloodied head after he was struck down by a bullet in 1968, was 64.

Abernathy died at 12:10 p.m. at Crawford Long Hospital, said hospital spokesman Mendel Bounknight. He had been undergoing a lung scan when his heart stopped, and efforts to revive him at an operating room failed, Bounknight said.

Abernathy had been in the hospital since last month for treatment of a sodium deficiency. He had suffered strokes in 1983 and 1986.

colleagues for passages in his 1989 autobiography, "And The Walls Came Tumbling Down." He wrote that King had spent time with two women and had a violent argument with one in the 24 hours before his 1968 assassination.

But the Rev. Joseph Lowmy, who succeeded Abernathy as president of the Southern Christian Leadership Council, described Abernathy on Tuesday as "a faithful servant of the cause of liberty and justice."

"I extend my love and support to his family," he said.

King's son, Fulton County Commissioner Martin Luther King III, called Abernathy's death "a very tragic loss to our nation."

Abernathy was pastor of Atlanta's West Hunter Street Baptist Church and president emeritus of the SCLC, which he founded with King in 1957 as a vehicle for the movement they began with the 1955 bus boycott in Montgomery, Ala.

Abernathy had said he had no desire to lead the movement, preferring to leave that role to the more charismatic King. But two days after King's assassination, the remaining aides picked him as SCLC president, according to King's wishes.

He was SCLC president for nine years, as the focus of the movement shifted from voting rights and civil rights to such economic issues as full employment and anti-poverty programs.

He left the SCLC presidency in 1971, when he resigned to run for Congress. He was defeated in the Democratic primary. In 1980, he supported Ronald Reagan in his presidential bid.

Abernathy suffered a stroke in 1983 and underwent brain bypass surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. After he recovered, he returned to preach at West Hunter, where he had been pastor since 1961, and backed Jesse Jackson in his 1984 presidential bid.

When Abernathy mentioned

King's relationships with women in his book, he became the first of King's inner circle to do so, even though the matter had been chronicled by several noted biographers.

Black leaders asked Abernathy to retract the passages, and insinuated that his memory had been impaired by the strokes and brain surgery. But Abernathy, whom King praised as his closest friend and confidant, insisted the accounts were true.

Abernathy, born March 11, 1926, in Linden, Ala., was King's right-hand man for 13 years, sharing jail cells with him, traveling with him and advising him.

"We were known as the civil rights twins," Abernathy once recalled. "We always sought to complement each other: I never tried to be a copy of him and he never tried to be a copy of me."

It was Abernathy who comforted King's head as he lay dying of a bullet wound on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968. He took care of various funeral details for King's widow, Coretta Scott King, and delivered the eulogy.

Although he helped found the civil rights movement, stood at King's side through the great battles and went to jail as often as King did, Abernathy "consistently found himself in King's shadow."

And if bothered him.

In a 1986 interview, he lamented that once, when he visited a school in Connecticut, "not a single student knew who I was."

In his autobiography, Abernathy said he felt other King aides saw him as "no more than an appendage; to Martin, someone who served as a part companion, part bodyguard, but who never played an important role in the decisions that affected the direction of the movement."

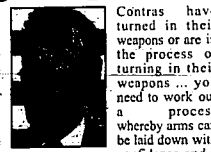

Bush pledges speedy Contra demobilization

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush assured Honduran President Rafael Callejas on Tuesday that the Contra camps near the Nicaraguan border will be dismantled by the time Daniel Ortega steps down as president of Nicaragua April 25, a top U.S. official said Tuesday.

Honduras is pressing for the rebels' speedy repatriation.

Assistant Secretary of State Bernard Aronson said, meanwhile, that it is doubtful all the Contras will surrender their weapons by the time Violeta Chamorro takes over from Ortega.

The time frame is moving along faster than people anticipated" for demobilizing the rebel forces, Aronson told reporters. "The camps should be dismantled in Honduras before the inauguration—those

BUSH

Contras have turned in their weapons or are in the process of turning in their weapons... you need to work out a process whereby arms can be laid down with confidence and a sense of security."

Under peace accords reached by the five presidents of the region, the Contras are to demobilize into security zones inside Nicaragua and disarm under U.N. supervision.

"Clearly the entire demobilization will not have taken place by April 25th," Aronson said. "President Ortega knows that," he said in reference to Ortega's demand

Monday that complete disarmament take place so a peaceful transition can occur.

Aronson said that 3,000 to 5,000 Contra fighters remain in the Honduran camps, down from a peak of 12,000. In addition, the camps house 40,000 family members and Honduras is home to about 125,000 refugees who have fled Nicaragua, Aronson said.

Pressed by Honduras for economic and trade assistance, the United States is preparing a bridge loan to help Honduras with its $247 million foreign debt, Aronson said following the visit.

He said that the exact amount of the U.S. loan is not decided yet and that it will be part of a package that also includes new international lending, with participation by Japan and other countries.

Bush, after his Oval Office meeting with Callejas, lauded the role Honduran peace process that led to the Feb. 25 Nicaraguan elections and the end of the decade-long Contra war.

"We support this process and will work to ensure humanitarian assistance to those in need in both Nicaragua and Honduras as they return to their homes, their families and their jobs, and play a vital role in helping Nicaragua establish lasting democratic institutions," Bush said.

Aronson said the two presidents had discussed concerns involving Nicaragua, in particular, the longstanding desire by Honduras to rid itself of the border camps housing the U.S.-backed Contras.

Briefly

U.S., UNESCO differences remain
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Tuesday the United States won't renew its membership in UNESCO because the organization continues to be mismanaged and show political bias against Israel.

The United States withdrew from UNESCO in 1984 and Baker, in a report to Congress, said the same problems that plagued the agency then have not been resolved.

Federico Mayor, UNESCO's director-general based in Paris, said in a statement issued at the United Nations that Baker's report "failed to take account of the changes in program which have already taken place... as well as the management and structural reforms."

Mayor said he "regrets that the postponement of U.S. re-entry may make more difficult the implementation of UNESCO's reform process."

Some touring writers are anti-semitic
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Tuesday that some Russian writers on an officially sponsored tour of the United States hold anti-semitic views.

Spokeswoman Margaret D. Tutwiler called their views abhorrent and said one purpose of the tour, funded by the U.S. Information Agency, was to educate the writers about how the United States works as a multiethnic society based on individual freedoms.

The U.S. official, reading from a prepared statement, added, "Bringing them here does not signal that we approve or sanction their views."

Panel urges against Apache purchase
WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional investigative agency will recommend that the Army not buy the final 132 Apache attack helicopters it plans because of serious problems with the aircraft, congressional sources said Tuesday.

The General Accounting Office is expected to make its recommendations Thursday in testimony before the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

The subcommittee also has subpoenaed Army Secretary Michael Stone, whom the panel sought because of his prior role in the Pentagon as the Army's chief acquisition executive.

Subcommittee sources, who requested anonymity, said Stone initially refused to testify before the panel. The Army had no immediate comment on the report.

Researches: Alcoholism gene found
CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers say they have pinpointed for the first time a gene that may make people prone to alcoholism, adding weight to the argument that alcoholism is a disease and not a moral weakness.

Government scientists called the finding "provocative and promising," even if it requires more study, but a leading investigator in the field declared it was impossible to say an "alcohol gene" had been identified.

The researchers reported in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association that they found a particular gene on a chromosome previously linked with alcoholism to be far more common in alcoholics than in non-alcoholics. If verified, the finding would represent the first specific identification of a genetic root for alcoholism.

Sony to take over Pittsburgh factory
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Sony Corp. will manufacture picture tubes for large color television sets at a shuttered Volkswagen assembly plant outside Pittsburgh, creating about 1,000 jobs in the next three years, Gov. Robert Casey said Tuesday.

Casey said at a news conference the Japanese electronics company plans to spend about $300 million to refurbish and equip a 600-acre parcel of the plant site near New Stanton, about 45 miles southeast of Pittsburgh.

Court orders requirements for nuclear plant workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission must set up training requirements for nuclear power plant workers, a federal appeals court said Tuesday.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the NRC had circumvented a 1983 change in the Nuclear Waste Policy Act. The NRC issued a policy statement in 1988 that encourages, but does not compel, nuclear plant operators to create training programs.

The NRC concluded that the best way to get civilian nuclear power plants to improve training was to create a model training code and urge utilities to voluntarily comply.

Public Citizen, a group founded by Ralph Nader, filed lawsuits in 1986 and 1988 challenging the NRC's approach.

The NRC looked again at the training issue in 1988 and decided not to impose requirements, relying on language in the amendment that allows the agency to issue

"appropriate... regulatory guidance." The term "regulatory guidance" is ambiguous, but the language mandating the instructional requirements is clear and controls the issue, Chief Judge Patricia Wald wrote.

"Whatever the commission's regulatory guidance is, it must establish instructional requirements, and non-mandatory suggestions fail to do this," she wrote in the 3-0 decision. "When Congress gives an agency its marching orders, the agency must obey all of them, not merely some."

Wald noted that a presidential panel examining the accident at Three Mile Island said inadequate training contributed significantly to the risks posed by nuclear power plants.

The NRC and utilities argued that imposing mandatory requirements would make the nuclear power industry less safe because it would choke off the industry's self-regulatory efforts. Companies could regard the NRC's requirements as a maximum rather than a minimum level of appropriate training, the agency said.

"The NRC and the industry must take this argument to the Congress, not to the courts," said the appeals panel.

Nursing shortage expected to increase
 WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be an adequate supply of physicians and most other health professionals through the end of the century but the shortage of nurses is expected to worsen, the government said Tuesday.
 The number of registered nurses has grown from 750,000 in 1970 to more than 1.6 million in 1988, according to a report sent to Congress by Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.
 However, even though the number is expected to continue to increase over the next 15 years, it will not be enough to alleviate the shortages, the report said.

Secretary recommends Medicare hike
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan is recommending a 9.9 percent increase in Medicare payments to physicians for the 1991 fiscal year, his office said Tuesday.
 The recommendation to Congress is "a realistic goal for physicians, one consistent with both the prudent practice of medicine and the necessary restraint on cost increases," Sullivan said.
 Medicare payments to physicians have been growing by 12 percent a year in recent years, about double the rate of inflation.
 Under legislation passed by Congress last year, the secretary must recommend annually a Medicare physician payment target. Congress is to review the recommendation and set a Medicare Volume Performance Standard. If Congress does not act, the law provides for the performance standard to be determined based on a specified formula.

Experts split on AIDS funding issue
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Experts are almost evenly divided about whether the federal government is taking too much money away from cancer, heart disease and other medical studies to support AIDS research, according to a survey by the Office of Technology Assessment.
 The OTA survey, released Tuesday, said most of the experts also believe AIDS research "has made many important contributions to advances in the biomedical and behavioral sciences" and that virtually every medical specialty has benefited, to some degree, from money spent on AIDS studies.

U.S. seeks access to drug accounts
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Tuesday sought records of 754 U.S. bank accounts where it said Colombia's Medellín cartel has stashed $400 million from cocaine sales on American streets.
 The action marks the first time that federal authorities traced "dollar for dollar" drug money from U.S. street sales that has laundered through foreign accounts and returned to American banks, officials said.
 The department asked federal judges in Atlanta, Miami and New York to order U.S. banks in 22 states and the nation's capital to turn over the records that officials said could yield a wealth of financial information about the cartel.

FDA approves new transplant drug
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration on Tuesday approved a new biological product to help protect kidney transplant patients from a potentially fatal infection.
 The product, Cytomegalovirus Immune Globulin Intravenous, or CMV-IGIV, contains cytomegalovirus antibodies, giving the patient the ability to fight CMV infections that can be carried by donated kidneys, the FDA said.

Study: 5 nations smuggle nuclear materials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five nations — Pakistan, India, Brazil, Argentina and Iraq — have been able to build or expand nuclear weapons capabilities by smuggling materials from supplier countries, according to a private study released Tuesday.
 To counter these activities, the report recommends that the United States and other suppliers threaten military and economic sanctions against countries engaging in such operations.
 Titled "Nuclear Exports: The Challenge of Control," the report was prepared by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, a private research group. It was written by Leonard Spector, a veteran expert on nuclear proliferation, with assistance from Jacqueline Smith.
 The report said West Germany has been the "weak link" in the international export control system and must tighten its export laws. Both India and Pakistan have relied on West German suppliers for their nuclear programs, the report said.
 Shortly before the report was released, the new head of Brazil's nuclear energy commission, Jose Luis de Carvalho Santana, said Brazil will not build a nuclear bomb. But he declined to say whether it had the technical ability to do so. Argentina has repeatedly proclaimed the right to develop and explode a nuclear device even though experts claim it seems far from being able to achieve that goal.

 Three weeks ago, Iraq denied any intention of developing nuclear weapons and reaffirmed that denial on Monday. It said devices described by U.S. prosecutors as nuclear warheads smuggled to Baghdad were to be used in a non-nuclear university laser project.
 In mid-March, British investigators arrested four people they claimed had tried to smuggle these devices to Iraq.
 President Saddam Hussein has expressed concern in recent days about a possible nuclear attack by Israel against his country. The report lists Israel among countries where there is a "proliferation concern."
 Of the five countries the report focuses on, it said Iraq's program was far behind those of the other four.
 The report said in some instances, agents of the five countries have engaged in simple smuggling — "for example, by attempting to export commodities without required export licenses or by making blatantly false declarations on export documents."
 In other cases, it said, these agents have been able to minimize any suspect characteristics of the commodities at issue, taking advantage of a relaxed attitude by licensing officials or exploiting gaps in export regulations.
 If controls had been enforced effectively, Spector said, it is possible Pakistan would not be able to manufacture nuclear weapons today, that India's nuclear weapons potential would be a fraction of its current size and that neither Argentina nor Brazil would have facilities capable of producing nuclear weapons material.

Court rules against drug use for religious reasons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Tuesday there is no constitutional right to take illegal drugs, such as peyote, for religious reasons.
 Dissenting justices said the 6-3 ruling permits religious oppression of Indians and perhaps others with unorthodox views.
 The court ruled that Oregon officials may deny unemployment benefits to two fired drug counselors who took small amounts of peyote, a cactus "button" containing the hallucinogen mesquite, in Indian religious ceremonies.
 Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the court, said it "would be outrageous" to let a few do what is illegal for everyone else.
 "We have never held that an individual's religious beliefs excuse him from compliance with otherwise valid law prohibiting the conduct that the state is free to regulate," he said.
 But Scalia said states may allow religious use of illegal drugs.
 In fact, many states and the federal government already permit use of peyote in religious ceremonies.
 In other rulings, the court made it more difficult for employers to withdraw recognition of a labor union representing striking workers after new employees are hired to break the strike. The justices, voting 5-4 in a Texas case, reinstated a National Labor Relations Board policy against firing the new employees opposite the union.
 Ruled 9-0 in a case from Illinois that lawsuits charging employers with violating a key federal anti-bias law may be filed in state as well as federal courts.
 In the peyote case, Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote a stinging dissent that said the court reduced religious freedom for Indians to "an unfulfilled and hollow promise."
 Indians, who have endured a history of "religious persecution and intolerance," may have no choice but to move to a state that permits them to practice their religion freely, he said.
 Blackmun said Tuesday's ruling is ironic if it was prompted by concern over the growing menace of illegal drugs.
 Peyote use by members of the Native American Church is "far removed from the irresponsible and unexcusable recreational use of unlawful drugs," he said. The church, which preaches against alcohol abuse, "exemplifies values that Oregon's drug laws are presumably intended to foster," Blackmun added.
 He was joined by Justices William J. Brennan and Thurgood Marshall.
 Scalia's opinion was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, John Paul Stevens and Anthony M. Kennedy.
 Justice Sandra Day O'Connor also voted to deny the unemployment benefits to the fired drug counselors. But she said in a separate concurring opinion that the five other justices in the majority went too far in limiting religious freedom.

Environment, growth compatible, NAM declares

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a reversal of what business preached 20 years ago, the National Association of Manufacturers said Tuesday that experience shows environmental improvement and economic growth are compatible.

Alexander Trowbridge, chairman of the trade group's Industry Coalition for the Environment, said the "dire predictions about environmental improvement coming at the cost of jobs and national economic strength and high prices" have proven to be overstated.

"Environmental improvement has been a corollary to economic growth and not come in spite of it," he said.

In recent weeks, a number of major corporations have announced environmentally-motivated business decisions. Conoco said it would acquire only double-hull oil tankers

Booby-trap shotgun kills suspect, 19

DENVER (AP) — A burglary suspect was killed when he broke into a warehouse and tripped a booby-trapped shotgun, police said.

Authorities said three youths with the teen-ager said they were looking for adventure.

Michael McComb, 19, was shot in the chest at the warehouse Saturday night while leading three juveniles in what police called a burglary attempt. Police said a shotgun was propped up inside the warehouse and attached to a trip wire.

The downtown warehouse, leased to Philip Conaghan of suburban Arvada, had been burglarized eight times since 1987, with shop tools targeted each time. The handyman lost more than $7,000 in tools in a burglary last July. The warehouse also housed vehicle parts, acetylene torches and camper shells.

Conaghan, who has out of town and spoke once to authorities by telephone, has denied any knowledge of the booby trap, according to police.

A city ordinance prohibits the setting of booby traps at businesses, and violators can face misdemeanor charges, said city assistant district attorney Chuck Lepley. He said the ordinance was enacted because booby traps can backfire and injure the innocent.

In cases where someone dies, whoever set the booby trap can be charged with murder, said Lepley.

The three youths were arrested Saturday night and were booked for investigation of burglary and released to their parents.

City District Attorney Norm Early said Colorado's "Make My Day" law, which allows householders to use deadly force to defend themselves, probably does not apply. The law was nicknamed after a line from a Clint Eastwood movie.

San Francisco sets up water rationing plan

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Water Department, citing low reservoirs, called for mandatory water rationing to cut use by 25 percent for its 2.2 million customers.

The department's recommendation Monday proposes the same formula used during the 1988 drought year, based on 1987 usage.

"Anybody who was in the program last time will be getting the same allotment," said John Mullane, acting director of the department.

The recommendation heads to the Public Utilities Commission next week. If approved, rationing probably would begin May 1, according to Mullane.

Mullane, who noted reservoirs are only at 38 percent of capacity, said rationing is necessary to guarantee enough water to get through another dry winter.

Supplies also will be cut by 25 percent for the 32 suburban agencies in San Mateo, Santa Clara and Alameda counties that buy water from San Francisco. However, those agencies have the option of creating their own rationing plan.

to reduce the likelihood of oil spills; three major U.S. tuna canners announced they would buy only tuna caught by methods that don't also kill dolphins and some oil companies said they will market less-polluting gasoline.

Trowbridge, a former secretary of commerce and an oil executive, said these actions were "typical of the concern which is being put at the front of the decision process" by many U.S. companies.

"Environmentalists, however, expressed skepticism about Trowbridge's message. "Talk is cheap and action is not cheap," said David Gardner, legislative director of the Sierra Club. "It's the don't-worry-be-happy message at the same time the NAM and their members are spending millions of dollars lobbying against changes in law which would do a better job in improving the environment. ... What we're seeing from industry is Earth Day earth-hype."

"It is an encouraging-sounding message, but just in the last month and a half we've seen from the Business Roundtable and other industry groups the most apocalyptic hype about how the Clean Air Act is going to kill the economy," added David Doiniger, senior attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council.

"It will be interesting to see if, next time there is a piece of legislation to be acted upon, the NAM will take a more enlightened line," he said.

Trowbridge said he was not contending there would not be tradeoffs between jobs and the environment.

But, he said, the record since Earth Day—1970—shows that economic growth, moderate but real, has taken place in these 20 years and environmental improvement has also taken place.

"My judgment is that we've made progress both in the economy and the environment."

Governor defends veto

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Tommy G. Thompson defended his veto of a bill requiring public schools to teach students about date rape, saying younger pupils didn't need exposure to such lessons.

The bill, passed during the Legislature's winter session, called for instruction three times between the first and 12th grade on how to recognize and prevent sexual assaults, particularly those that can happen with an acquaintance on a date.

Thompson said he also believed the bill duplicated existing state law.

SYDNEY OMARR

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF APRIL 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Current cycle highlights marital status, possible addition to family; travel, gain through written word. Many persons are drawn to you with their problems. You are better at helping others than when it comes to promoting your own cause.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll say, "I am happy I waited because now my wish is coming true!" Focus on fulfillment, aspirations, powers of persuasion. Home will be a more harmonious place. Taurus prospects prominently.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Individual at top makes promise but possibly speaks out of turn. Menace expect-delay. Eventually you'll get what you need but this might take seven weeks. Lunar emphasis on promotion, achievement.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar aspect coincides with communication, romance, idealism; possible invitation to travel. Relationship is serious, will require change of itinerary. Cancer, Capricorn persons play roles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You'll say, "I've proven it and now the money will be forthcoming!" You are speaking the truth. Long-range prospects outlined; love relationship flourishes. Libra represented prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Check Cancer message. Key is to diversify, to ask questions, to satisfy curiosity. You'll shine at social affair; you'll add to wardrobe and become more aware of body image. Romance intensifies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opportunity exists to demonstrate your speciality. Individual you respect will ask, "Why have you been hiding this talent?" Focus on security—property, long-range prospects. Taurus involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You'll breathe sigh of relief as money, lost article recovered. Focus on communication, variety, flirtation that could become "serious." Get ideas on paper, realize many are enthusiastic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on possessions; basic values, special collections. Significant domestic adjustment relates to life style, home, marital status. What had been lost, missing or stolen will suddenly "show up."

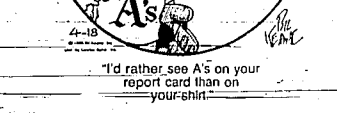

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Moon in your sign accents personality, vision, correct timing. Wear electric blue. Show confidence, be open to word-of-mouth suggestions. You no longer will be swimming against tide.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Scenario could include correspondence from overseas. You'll learn more about what goes on behind scenes. Focus on inside information. Emphasis on responsibility, intensity, ample funding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Trust

"NOTHING MUCH JOEY. JUST SITTING AROUND WONDERING WHY I'M WEARING A SUIT."

"I'd rather see A's on your report card than on your shirt."

What's that?

Trail of a snake
You can look at a snake's trail in the sand and tell what kind of snake it was and how fast it was going. Or some people can.

April 23rd is Lover's Day and Book Day, combined. In Spain, I mean. If you're Hispanic, you're supposed to give a rose and a book to the object of your affection. If you're not Hispanic, you might want to do it anyhow, suggests our Love and War man. It's a happy-maker.

It was Erma Bombeck who said, "The only reason I'd take up jogging is so I could hear heavy breathing again."

Q: Of all history's killers, who killed the most people?
A: Josef Stalin, it's believed. He's blamed for the deaths of 20 million.

DRIVERS
Traffic statisticians say the accident rate of 75-year-old drivers is about the same as that of 16-year-old drivers.

A Greek named Draco first codified the laws of ancient Athens. Tough cookie. Death was the prescribed punishment for just about every offense. When any orator spoke, his apprehensive audience customarily showered him with their cloaks. Draco spoke. His audience showered him. But kept at it. He died of suffocation under all that clothing.

Illustrators color the sun yellow. It's not, though. It's white.

THE HOOVERS
Q: President Herbert Hoover and his First Lady talked to each other in secret code, didn't they?
A: Not exactly. They both spoke Chinese well enough for private comment in the presence of people who didn't t. Doubt that happened often; though. They were too well-mannered for such.

Q: What's a "sealed road"?
A: What Australians call a dirt road after it's paved.

Abraham Lincoln once applied for a permit to sell hard liquor, historians say. But they maintain he personally never partook of same, ever.

Prince donates $2,000 to Minnesota senator

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Rock star Prince has joined the list of celebrities whose names appear on U.S. Sen. Rudy Boschwitz's campaign spending reports.

Prince, a Minnesota native, gave his home state a senator a $2,000 check in February for his 1990 election campaign, according to Federal Elections Commission documents released Monday.

But a spokesman for the Minnesota senator put a little distance between his boss and the rock star's image.

"It's safe to assume that Rudy is not familiar" with the sexually suggestive nature of some lyrics in Prince's songs, campaign director Tom Mason said. He suggested that one of the record industry moguls who have attended Boschwitz fundraisers may have acted as the conduit.

The publicity-shy rock star made the contribution around the time of a Boschwitz fund-raiser at the Armwrestling Deli in Los Angeles. He didn't attend the event, but sent a check signed with his legal name of Prince Rogers Nelson.

Prince's business management firm in Los Angeles, which pays his bills, could offer no further explanation.

"He just said, 'Go ahead and pay

IDOL HARRELSON PRINCE

it," said Lyn Tan of the Breslauer, Jacobson, Rutman & Sherman firm. "If he says go ahead and pay it, that's what we do."

Boschwitz's list of campaign contributors include cinematic heavyweights Arnold Schwarzenegger, Entertainment Tonight host Mary Hart, advice columnist Abigail Van Buren and movie tough guy Chuck Norris.

Rock star Idol to have more surgery on leg

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock singer Billy Idol's right leg isn't healing properly from injuries he sustained in a February motorcycle crash, so more surgery is scheduled, his publicist said.

Idol, 34, will enter Cedars-Sinai

Medical Center on Wednesday for the fifth operation on the leg, said spokeswoman Ellen Golden.

"They're going to insert a steel rod in his right leg, which has not been healing properly," she said Tuesday.

Idol broke the leg and fractured an arm on Feb. 6 when his motorcycle struck a car. He was heading home after completing work on the album "Charmed Life."

Quayle tapped to lead Indy 500 race parade

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle will make Indianapolis 500 history when he serves as grand marshal for the race parade May 26.

Quayle, an Indiana native, will be the first sitting vice president to lead the 104-unit parade.

"Parades are not what a president or vice president would normally do, something they aren't always invited to," said Ray Yonkus, special agent in charge of the Secret Service in Indianapolis. He said Monday he assumed Quayle's last parade was at the 1988 inauguration.

"There's only so much you can do with a parade crowd because it is open to the public, so it gives you extra headaches," Yonkus said. He declined to say how many officers would be needed to protect Quayle.

The vice president, his wife, Marilyn, and their children, Tucker, Benjamin, and Corinne, are expected to spend three days in the city.

Harrelson presents award to his professor

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Woody Harrelson jokingly says he returned to Indiana because he mistakenly thought he was going to receive an award from the governor.

The actor, who plays bartender Woody Boy on "Cheers," actually flew into Fort Wayne on Friday to present "Sagamore of the Wabash" awards to his former theater professor.

Before presenting Hanover College Professor Tom Evans and his wife, Barbara Farrar, with Sagamores, the highest award given by the governor for contributions to Indiana, Harrelson said he was "kind of embarrassed, because I flew all the way out here, and I kind of thought this award was for me."

Harrelson, who was born in Texas, graduated from Hanover in 1983. His character on "Cheers" is from Hanover.

Pizza chain owner fires daughter, others

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The daughter of Domino's Pizza Inc. founder Tom Monaghan is one of 14 people being laid off in the latest streamlining of the company.

"That news came from public relations Director Ron Hingst, who is being laid off himself, along with Maggie Monaghan, 19, and the rest of the company's public relations and international marketing staffs."

For the last couple of years, Domino's Pizza has been undergoing a number of streamlining processes and changes, Hingst said Monday. "It's no secret that Tom Monaghan is interested in selling the company."

Monaghan, 97-percent owner of the company, said in December he wants to sell the company to its employees, and two New York investment firms were hired to study the feasibility of that.

Abdul-Jabbar tapped to produce new movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Less than a year after retiring from basketball, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has bounced back into the public eye as an executive producer on the motion picture "Recruiting Violators."

Abdul-Jabbar was tapped for the project on the basis of his basketball expertise. The movie centers on the relationship between a white college basketball coach and a top black recruit who fails to show up on campus.

The five category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

- G - General audiences, all ages admitted.
- PG - Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.
- PG-13 - Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for children.
- R - Restricted, under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.
- X - No one under 17 admitted.

Prison editor makes 7th effort to regain freedom

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A prison journalist serving a life sentence for cutting a bank teller's throat and shooting two others after a holdup is asking the state pardon board for clemency for a seventh time.

Inmate Wilbert Rideau has gained fame as the editor of the award-winning Angolite, the Louisiana State Penitentiary magazine, but that hasn't helped his attempts at freedom.

Today, he will go before the Louisiana Pardon Board, which has on three previous occasions cleared the way for him to be freed. But each time a governor has turned him down, citing the brutality of his crime.

Rideau, 48, was sentenced to die in the electric chair for the murder of Gulf National Bank teller Julia Ferguson after a 1961 armed robbery in the southwest Louisiana town of Lake Charles.

Rideau, now 19, used a pistol in the holdup and got away with $14,279 stuffed into a suitcase. He forced two tellers and the branch manager, all of whom he knew, into a car, drove them to a deserted road and shot all three. When Mrs. Ferguson begged for her life, Rideau cut her throat and stabbed her in the heart. She was the only one who died.

In 1973, his term was commuted to life in prison without parole after the U.S. Supreme Court overturned the death penalty.

Rideau's prison prose earned the Angolite and its editor national acclaim, including the Robert F. Kennedy Journalism Award, the American Bar Association's Silver Gavel Award and the George Polk Award for special interest reporting.

It also has allowed him to travel with guards. Two weeks ago, Rideau went to the American Society of Newspaper Editors' meeting in Washington, D.C., to speak about prison journalism.

He says he has offers of journalism jobs if he can get out of prison. But he worries that his case attracts so much attention it puts extra pressure on the governor.

In 1984, the pardon board voted to cut Rideau's sentence to time served. But then-Gov. Edwin Edwards rejected clemency. Two years later, the board voted to cut Rideau's sentence to 60 years, but Edwards refused to sign the release.

In 1988, a newly appointed board affirmed the 60-year sentence, but Gov. Buddy Roemer turned Rideau down.

10-year-old girl rescues brother from choking

LEVANT, Kan. (AP) — A 10-year-old girl whose mother taught her the Heimlich maneuver used it to save her brother, who was choking on a jawbreaker.

Adrienne Sharpe and two younger brothers were at their grandparents' home Saturday when the youngest, Schuyler, 4, got the jawbreaker lodged in his throat.

Two uncles rushed to Schuyler after the boy began waving his arms for help, but they couldn't dislodge the candy.

Adrienne first ran to the house to tell her grandfather, then returned, grabbed her brother and began the maneuver, a thrusting motion from behind the victim that forces the rescuer's fist into the rib cage.

"When I did the Heimlich the second time, the jawbreaker just flew out," the girl said.

Schuyler didn't need to be hospitalized.

The children's mother, Glenda, a licensed practical nurse who works at an adult care center, taught her children the maneuver last summer when she had to be recertified in lifesaving techniques.

Adrienne said she found the training fun at the time.

"I didn't think it was funny when my brother was choking though," she said. "I was glad mom had taught me."

Ivana lays down the law for Trump reconciliation

Newsday

NEW YORK — For the first time since the Trump war began two months ago, Ivana Trump on Monday laid down peace terms for a reconciliation with billionaire husband Donald.

In a statement, her publicist, John Scanlon, said that Ivana "has always hoped for a reconciliation, but under certain conditions." Those conditions, Scanlon said, are "No. 1, commitment to fidelity and No. 2, an 'equitable' distribution of property."

The proposed peace terms came a day after the estranged couple appeared together publicly at the Trump-owned Plaza Hotel to spend Easter Sunday with their three children, Donald Jr., 42, Ivanka, 38, and Eric, 6.

The first demand clearly refers to Donald Trump's alleged affair with actress-model Marla Maples. But that relationship reportedly is over. Although neither Ivana nor Donald has filed for divorce, the second demand is the central issue in a court case brought by Ivana.

There was no direct reaction Monday from Donald Trump's camp to the peace overture, but it did fire a volley of its own in the form of court papers challenging Ivana's claim for at least half of his assets.

The court papers offered some interesting tidbits. For example, Donald's lawyers said that he "lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth" of Ivana's background before they were married. But he does deny that she "spoke English poorly" when they were married.

And, surprisingly, the court papers deny that Donald was "a person of financial sophistication and experience" when the couple married.

Israeli court upholds eviction order

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Jerusalem District Court panel on Tuesday upheld an order to evict 150 Jewish settlers from the Arab Christian quarter of the Old City, fueling anti-Israeli protests.

The settlers immediately appealed the decision. Several dozen Palestinian women and masked youths demonstrated inside the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, venerated as the site of Christ's burial and regarded by many as Christianity's holiest shrine. Visiting pilgrims and tourists stared as 40 to 50 protesters waved Palestinian flags and chanted "PLO! PLO!" and "Israel no! Palestine yes!" inside the dark church.

It was the first time Arabs had staged a protest inside the church, since the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip began 28 months ago.

Street battles erupt in Beirut, Sidon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Street battles raged Tuesday in the Muslim and Christian sectors of Beirut, sparked by separate power struggles for control of the Shiite Muslim and Maronite Christian communities.

Clashes also broke out in the southern port of Sidon between the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army and the leftist Nasserite militia. Police said one Nasserite militiaman was killed and two were wounded.

Police said at least seven people were killed and 38 wounded in fighting between rival Shiite Muslim factions using machine guns, assault rifles and grenade launchers in Syrian-policed west Beirut and the city's southern slums.

Concerts recall democracy protests

PARIS (AP) — Rock concerts are planned in Paris, New York and at least four other cities on June 3 to commemorate the anniversary of the crack down on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing, organizers said Tuesday.

Hong Kong, Taipei, Prague and Sao Paulo also will be concert venues, the organizers said. Top musicians will record a special version of John Lennon's song "Imagine" in conjunction with the anniversary, they said.

No further details were disclosed. The concerts were announced at a press conference called by the Federation for Democracy in China, a Paris-based dissident group, and by the French news magazine Actuel.

Bomb explodes near nuclear plant

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A bomb exploded near a nuclear power plant in western India Tuesday, killing a woman, a news agency reported.

The blast occurred near the Tarapur power plant, 70 miles north of Bombay on the Indian Ocean, Press Trust of India news agency said. Another twin-tower tower was found nearby, it said. No further details were immediately available and there was no claim of responsibility.

Nepal opposition sworn in this week

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Nepal's first opposition-led government in almost 30 years will be sworn in this week to rule the Himalayan nation until free elections are held, an opposition leader said Tuesday.

Prime Minister designate K.P. Bhattarai made the announcement after he and another opposition leader, Ganesh Man Singh, met with King Birendra at the royal palace. The Cabinet will be sworn in on Thursday, he said.

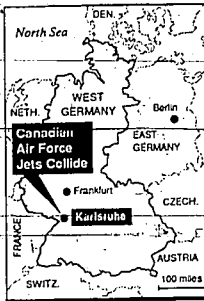

Bhattarai said the names of ministers or their portfolios have not been finalized but only two members of the 11-member Cabinet will be appointed by the once all-powerful king.

U.S.: Japan crop protection wrong

TOKYO (AP) — Japan need not abandon its farmers for the sake of opening up world trade, but it should end protection of specific crops, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

Proposals made by Washington at trade talks on agricultural products would permit nations to help their farmers, said U.S. Undersecretary of Agriculture Richard T. Crowder.

"We're not asking countries to give up agricultural support programs. What we're asking is the support of agriculture in ways that do not distort, or minimally distort, trade patterns," Crowder told reporters.

Canadian jets collide in air over Germany

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — Two Canadian air force fighter jets collided near this southwestern city Tuesday.

The crash killed one pilot and showered the area with flaming debris, police said.

The other pilot landed in his ejection seat on a busy highway and was injured, officials said. Police spokesman Manfred Frey said he could not confirm earlier reports the pilot was hit by a car on the A5 autobahn.

Anton Gramlich, another police spokesman, said the second pilot had been "seriously injured."

Fire officials and police rushed to put out small fires started by the falling aircraft debris. At least two people on the ground were slightly injured, police said. Much of the debris landed near the train station.

Chunks of an aircraft engine crashed to the ground in front of a busy train station in Karlsruhe, a southwestern city of 285,000 people, officials said.

"Luckily, damage (on the ground) was minimal," because where the planes came down is not densely populated, said a police spokesman.

Baerbel Newman, a spokeswoman for the Canadian air force in Lahr, said the planes crashed at about 4:10 p.m., south of Karlsruhe. She confirmed that one pilot was killed and the second was injured.

Police identified the aircraft as American-made F-18s.

Moscow's new city leadership wants a free-market economy

MOSCOW (AP) — The radicals running the Moscow city council discussed getting rid of the giant bust of Lenin from their meeting hall Tuesday, then spent their lunch hour at an anti-corruption rally next to Red Square.

That was only the beginning for the new dominant force in city hall, which wants to turn the capital of communism into an experimental economic zone where the free market reigns and foreign cash flows freely.

"We'll be trying to bring in a program of the privatization of the economy," said Lev Balashov, a member of the Democratic Russia bloc that took control of more than 60 percent of the 495 council seats in an election in March.

The key figure in the economic revolution brewing in this city of 9 million is Gavriil Popov, an outspoken economist and lawmaker whom the council is expected to elect mayor Wednesday.

Popov, round and steely haired, has pushed for free-market concepts to replace the Soviet planned economy. He was always in the minority, until now.

Popov refused to be interviewed during a break in Tuesday's session, but his bloc's plans are laid out in Kommersant, a new business newspaper with a decidedly capitalist slant.

Proclaiming that under Popov's administration Moscow's reforms would far outpace the country as a whole, it said the city would "become a testing zone" for economic reform, leading the way for less-progressive areas.

The newspaper listed among plans being worked out by the Democratic Russia bloc's "Group on Urgent Measures":

- Moves to free the private businesses known as cooperatives from a tangle of regulations.
- Incentives to attract foreign capital "on an unprecedented scale for Moscow," including easing rules on long-term leasing of buildings and allowing firms to pay in part with services to ease city problems.
- A virtual free market in agricultural produce.

A "visiting card" system that would allow goods in Moscow to be sold only to Muscovites with proof of residence.

Takeover and redistribution of some Communist Party property and sell-off of some government property.

The program aims to heal Moscow's deplorable state with an injection of what Kommersant calls "commercial activity," and what most would call capitalism.

There has been no Kremlin reaction. The city is largely independent when it comes to funding.

Radicals are banking on being able to do more to change the economy. They say President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who began instituting reform after coming to power in 1985, is increasingly oriented toward a market economy.

Moscow clearly needs help, as Pravda reported Tuesday: "Public transport works badly, the housing program is on the point of breaking down, the health system is in a depressing state, the list of food and goods shortages is lengthening, the ecology is getting worse, financial prospects are unclear and the crime rate is growing."

But the new council's first session, which began Monday, raised doubts about how effective it would be, despite the Democratic Russia bloc's plans.

Legislators bogged down for hours in procedural wrangles typical of Soviet bloc parliaments.

Shoshone school levy passes by 2-1 margin

SHOSHONE - The school district's bid to raise its annual supplemental levy to take care of some building problems and help eliminate $80,000 in debt gained voter-approval at the polls Tuesday.

Shoshone residents voted 138-62 in favor of a $255,000 levy for each of the next two years.

About $155,000 each year will be used to run the school, about $45,000 will go toward eliminating the debt and $25,000 will go for school repairs, including repairing the heating system at Lincoln Elementary. The cost to taxpayers is estimated to be about $1.20 for every $1,000 of assessed property value.

Teen who escaped April 9 back in custody in Jerome

TWIN FALLS - The teenager who escaped from the Jerome juvenile detention center last week was picked up after four days of freedom and returned to the center, according to Twin Falls police Detective Ron Roberson.

The 15-year-old had escaped with two other teens the evening of April 9, but the other two were both apprehended in a field near the center shortly after they left the building. The third youth remained at large. City police officers received a tip and went to a residence in the president streets Friday, Roberson said. The youth was picked up there at 10:47 p.m. by three city officers, he said.

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man was in good condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Tuesday evening, a nursing supervisor said, with injuries from a car accident.

Carl Johns, 79, 427 Ash St., was taken to the hospital after he blacked out at the wheel of his car and struck a house, according to the police accident report. The accident occurred at 3:33 p.m., the report said. Johns was driving east on Fourth Avenue East, at the intersection of Walnut Street, he struck a stop sign and continued to go to hit the house at 402 Walnut St., the report said. Both Johns and his passenger, Louise Johns, 74, wore seat belts, the report said. Louise Johns was not taken to the hospital. No citations were issued, according to the report.

Centennial train requests accepted by Union Pacific

BOISE - Anyone interested in riding the special Centennial train this summer should apply now.

Union Pacific Railroad has begun accepting requests to ride on the Idaho Centennial Special as it makes its whistle-stop tour of southern Idaho in late June and early July. The train will be pulled by Union Pacific's historic steam locomotive 344, which was retired in 1969. The trip will be broken down into 16 legs, beginning on June 28 in Montpelier and concluding on July 4 when the train returns to Montpelier.

Preference will be given to Idaho individuals and families. UP official Charles G. Clark said. The railroad will make 200 tickets available for each leg of the trip, free of charge. Families may apply for up to six tickets for family members. Riders will be selected on a first-come, first-served basis. Applications are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed return envelope to Idaho Centennial Special, Union Pacific Railroad, P.O. Box 1745, Boise, Idaho 83701.

F&G faces Big Wood ruling here

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - A final decision will probably be made on fishing rules for sections of the Big Wood River and Silver Creek when the Idaho Fish and Game Commission meets here Thursday and Friday.

The commission will also establish big-game hunting regulations for the fall at its quarterly meeting at the Weston Plaza.

Area sportsmen will have an opportunity to discuss these and other issues during a public hearing slated for 7:30 tonight at the Plaza. The commission's deliberations will begin at 9 a.m. Thursday.

The commission changed fishing regulations on the Big Wood and Silver Creek last summer, but a group of Magic Valley sportsmen obtained a court injunction to prevent the Idaho Department of Fish and Game from enforcing the new rules. The controversy came to a head in the recently adjourned Idaho Legislature with an attempt to block the Senate reconfirmation of two commissioners who supported those changes, Norm Guth of Salmon and Lou Racine of Pocatello.

In the final days of the Legislature, a compromise was reached between the various parties and that will be the basis for final commission deliberation on the issue.

In addition to those items, the commission will have a full agenda to cover in its two days. It will consider acquisition of property in Owyhee County and hear a legislative summary from Fish and Game Assistant Director Ken Norrie.

A 15-year policy draft will be reviewed along with the fisheries management plan that will include a proposal to introduce sauger in the Bear River in eastern Idaho. The commission will set tentative opening dates for wild game seasons and hear a fish and game report on the loss of hunting at City of Rocks. The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation will send two representatives to discuss that species.

The commissioner will also consider the possibility of a spring chinook salmon season this year and look at forage fish projects.

Adjustments in funding of 12 ongoing projects, ranging from the Bitterroot grizzly survey to spending authority for department auction funds, will be considered.

Wilbur Brown, selected to be the superintendent of Jerome's schools, will take the post in July.

Oregon man chosen new Jerome school superintendent

By H.R. WEIKEL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Developing a spirit of togetherness and fostering trust among administrators, the School Board and teachers are the first goals of Jerome's new school superintendent.

Wilbur "Will" Brown, 58, from Oregon, was unanimously approved by the School Board Tuesday as the new superintendent of the Jerome School District. Brown was hired under a three-year contract.

Brown has been superintendent of the North Marion School District, Aurora, Ore., since 1987 and was selected from a field of 16 applicants, board Chairman Alvin Chojnacky said. He was an administrator in Wilder and Weiser schools from 1973-84.

"I'm happy to be here," Brown said. "I still regard Idaho as my home."

Brown said he hopes to work with the board to develop surveys that will assess the concerns of patrons, students and teachers.

He said he will develop strong management teams of administrators, community members and teachers to develop a school program that will meet the needs of schools and kids in the future.

"I'm sensitive to people," he said.

"Their feelings are important to me. I like to set clearly defined goals, missions and values and systematically harness the brainpower of the people who work in the district in identifying problems and generating solutions.

Chojnacky said he is pleased with the appointment and with the selection process using school board members, principal, teachers and community members to handle the applications.

Current Superintendent Richard Kugler is retiring, effective June 30.

Judy Enos, president of the Jerome Education Association, also said she

TWIN FALLS - Parent-group leaders are aiming election-season criticism at a School Board member who moved his child from her neighborhood school to one across town that they say has a better reputation.

"I'm real upset," said Pam Olsen-Parent Teachers Organization president for the Bickel Elementary School. "If you are representing a school, you should be at that school."

distance of her grandmother, who watches her after school, he said.

"Just because you're on the School Board doesn't mean you have to stop being a parent," he said.

District PTO presidents already are displeased with Sommer over the board's decision two weeks ago to replace Acting Superintendent Keith Tolzin. Of the board members who voted against Tolzin, only Sommer is up for re-election this year.

Olsen said she will work to replace Sommer in the May 15 election, partly because of the superintendent decision.

"My feeling is I hope he gets his pants beat off of him," Olsen said.

The new dispute raises issues of whether board members have a responsibility to represent schools serving their zones, and of perceived educational inequalities among elementary schools within the district.

Also at issue is whether the move was approved because of Sommer's status as a board member.

Sawtooth PTO President Geraldine Buek said board members have a special obligation to the schools in their zones. She contends that if a board member ships his children across town, he will lose touch with the schools they represent.

Burley delays home school decision

By STACEY KINDIG
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY - The School Board, working to develop a policy for keeping track of home schooling in the district, has delayed a decision on whether to accept a proposal presented by some parents teaching their children at home.

The alternative includes allowing home-schooled children to participate in district extracurricular activities.

School Superintendent Norman Hurs told the board Monday such a policy could create problems and recommended the board reject the idea. "It could be very difficult with kids going in and out, and hardly seems fair," he said.

John Horjes, who, along with his wife, Elaine, presented the alternative, said their children should be able to participate because they pay school taxes that support these programs.

Students not enrolled in the district, however, are not counted when the state does out tax dollars, board Chairman Jack Hunsaker said.

The board decided to study the Horjes' proposal before making a decision.

The board wants to develop a policy governing home schooling in the district. It currently has no policy and district officials say state law mandates some responsibility for students taught at home.

The district has discussed a number of ideas, including requiring parents to fill out a form outlining curriculum and goals.

The Horjes' said they fear a policy adopted by the board might be too restrictive. The Horjes' have been teaching their children at home for three years. It has a number of advantages, they said, including enabling them to choose their own textbooks, curriculum and schedule.

Another parent, Lynn Williams, told the board she considers home teaching to be a form of private schooling. "Our homes are private, and should not fall under the School Board's jurisdiction," she said.

Board member Kent Fletcher, an attorney, said the district does not necessarily interpret the law that way. Further study is needed, he said.

The board doesn't want to "regulate" parents or home schooling but wants a way to keep track of the number of kids being taught outside the school system to ensure, as much as possible, they are being adequately educated, he said.

The board hopes to have a decision resolved by the 1990-91 school year.

In other matters, the board rejected all bids for putting in new windows at Burley High School but accepted the $25,650 bid of Larry's Electric, Burley, for fluorescent lighting.

The bids for the window project came in $35,000 higher than expected.

The district has received an energy conservation grant for work on the high school. Set-back thermostats for the heating system have already been installed as the first phase of the project.

The board accepted an agreement to place a Burley High School message board at the corner of 15th and Overland.

The $7,000 sign has been donated by Key Bank.

The Lions Club will pay for the estimated $3,000 installation cost of the 9-by-7-foot sign.

Investigators wary of alleged rape account

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

JEROME - A rape investigation is at a dead end, and investigators suspect that the alleged victim may have been less than truthful, according to Undersheriff Mito Alonzo.

"I'm pretty much exhausted all the leads she gave us and people gave us," Alonzo said.

The case won't be closed until it's solved, Alonzo said. But investigators have only a few leads to follow up before they'll have to wait for new information to develop.

A 21-year-old Jerome woman reported being raped around midnight Feb. 4. She told deputies she had been driving west on Route 25 when her car broke down just east of Hazelton.

She said she began walking toward town when two unknown men in a pickup stopped and offered her a ride.

She accepted, but shortly after she got into the truck the driver pulled over and the passenger pulled her out and raped her.

He carried a revolver, she said.

Descriptions of the men and truck were publicized, providing the sheriff's office with some leads.

But Alonzo said those leads are almost exhausted.

The woman said the pickup's license plate began with 21, and the sheriff's office took her to a typist to try to help her remember the rest of the license plate number, Alonzo said.

It didn't work, but through the typist the sheriff's office learned "she wasn't being truthful about all of it," Alonzo said.

The woman did have sexual contact, Alonzo said, but he declined to elaborate on how the woman may have been untruthful.

Officer fires shot, stops theft try

TWIN FALLS - A 13-year-old boy was taken into custody following the attempted theft of a motorcycle from the residence of a Twin Falls city police officer.

Sgt. Mick Turner, the administrative assistant to police and fire chief Paul Du Fresno, fired a shot in the air to frighten away two youths he heard in his yard early Tuesday morning, Du Fresno said.

No one was injured. Du Fresno said the shooting will be reviewed by an outside panel as a formality.

The incident is still under investigation by the police department, Detective Ron Roberson said.

Turner, who lives in the 300 block of Third Avenue North, heard noises outside his house at 1 a.m., according to the police report.

Five motorcycles were outside the house, and two youths were trying to take one of them, Roberson said.

Turner, off-duty, fired one shot from a 9mm automatic pistol, Du Fresno said.

The pistol was his own weapon, not his service sidearm, Du Fresno said.

A 13-year-old Twin Falls boy was apprehended at the scene, and has been taken to the Jerome juvenile detention center, Roberson said.

Israeli court upholds eviction order

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Jerusalem District Court panel on Tuesday upheld an order to evict 150 Jewish settlers from the Arab Christian quarter of the Old City, fueling anti-Israeli protests.

The settlers immediately appealed the decision. Several thousand Palestinian women and masked youths demonstrated inside the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, venerated as the site of Christ's burial and regarded by many as Christianity's holiest shrine.

Visiting pilgrims and tourists started as 40 to 50 protesters waved Palestinian flags and chanted "PLO! PLO!" and "Israel-no! Palestine yes!" inside the dark church.

It was the first time Arabs had staged a protest inside the church since the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip began 28 months ago.

Street battles erupt in Beirut, Sidon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Street battles raged Tuesday in the Muslim and Christian sectors of Beirut, sparked by separate power struggles for control of the Shiite, Muslim and Maronite Christian communities.

Clashes also broke out in the southern port of Sidon between the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army and the leftist Nasserite militia. Police said one Nasserite militiaman was killed and two were wounded.

Police said at least seven people were killed and 38 wounded in fighting between rival Shiite Muslim factions using machine guns, assault rifles and grenade launchers in Syrian-policed west Beirut and the city's southern slums.

Concerts recall democracy protests

PARIS (AP) — Rock concerts are planned in Paris, New York and at least four other cities on June 3 to commemorate the anniversary of the crackdown on pro-democracy demonstrators in Beijing, organizers said Tuesday.

Hong Kong, Taipei, Prague and Sao Paulo also will have concert venues, the organizers said. Top musicians will record a special version of John Lennon's song "Imagine" in conjunction with the anniversary, they said.

No further details were disclosed. The concerts were announced at a press conference called by the Federation for Democracy in China, a Paris-based dissident group, and by the French news magazine Actuel.

Bomb explodes near nuclear plant

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A bomb exploded near a nuclear power plant in western India Tuesday, killing a woman, a news agency reported.

The blast occurred near the Tarapur power plant, 70 miles north of Bombay, on the Indian Ocean. Press Trust of India news agency said. Another bomb-like object was found nearby, it said. No further details were immediately available and there was no claim of responsibility.

Nepal opposition sworn in this week

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Nepal's first opposition-led government in almost 30 years will be sworn in this week to rule the Himalayan nation until free elections are held, an opposition leader said Tuesday.

Prime Minister designate K.P. Bhattarai made the announcement after he and another opposition leader, Ganesh Man Singh, met with King Birendra at the royal palace. The Cabinet will be sworn in on Thursday, he said.

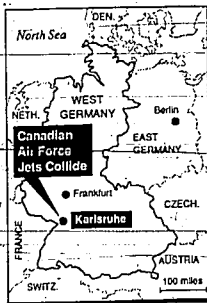

Bhattarai said the names of ministers or their portfolios have not been finalized but only two members of the 11-member Cabinet will be appointed by the once all-powerful king.

U.S.: Japan crop protection wrong

TOKYO (AP) — Japan need not abandon its farmers for the sake of opening up world trade, but it should end protection of specific crops, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

Proposals made by Washington at trade talks on agricultural products would permit nations to help their farmers, said U.S. Undersecretary of Agriculture Richard T. Crowder.

"We're not asking countries to give up agricultural support programs. What we're asking is the support of agriculture in ways that do not distort, or minimally distort, trade patterns," Crowder told reporters.

Canadian jets collide in air over Germany

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — Two Canadian air force fighter jets collided near this southwestern city Tuesday.

The crash killed one pilot and showered the area with flaming debris, police said.

The other pilot landed in his ejection seat on a busy highway and was injured, officials said. Police could not confirm earlier reports the pilot was hit by a car on the A5 autobahn.

Anton Gramlich, another police spokesman, said the second pilot had been "seriously injured."

Fire officials and police rushed to put out small fires started by the falling aircraft debris. At least two people on the ground were slightly injured, police said. Much of the debris landed near the train station.

Chunks of an aircraft engine crashed to the ground in front of busy train station in Karlsruhe, a southwestern city of 285,000 people, officials said.

"Luckily, damage (on the ground) was minimal," because where the planes came down is not densely populated, said a police spokesman.

Baerbel Newman, a spokeswoman for the Canadian air force in Lahr, said the planes crashed at about 4:10 p.m. south of Karlsruhe. She confirmed that one pilot was killed and the second was injured.

Police identified the aircraft as American-made F-18s.

Moscow's new city leadership wants a free-market economy

MOSCOW (AP) — The radicals running the Moscow city council discussed getting rid of the giant bust of Lenin from their meeting hall Tuesday, then spent their lunch hour at an anti-corruption rally next to Red Square.

That was only the beginning for the new dominant force in city hall, which wants to turn the capital of communism into an experimental economic zone where the free market reigns and foreign cash flows freely.

"We'll be trying to bring in a program of the privatization of the economy," said Lev Balashov, a member of the Democratic Russia bloc that took control of more than 60 percent of the 495-council seats in an election in March.

The key figure in the economic revolution brewing in this city of 9 million is Gavriil Popov, an outspoken economist and lawmaker whom the council is expected to elect mayor Wednesday.

Popov, round and steely haired, has pushed for free-market concepts to replace the Soviet planned economy. He was always in the minority, until now.

Popov refused to be interviewed during a break in Tuesday's session, but his bloc's plans are laid out in Kommersant, a new business newspaper with a decidedly capitalistic slant.

Proclaiming that under Popov's administration Moscow's reforms would far outpace the country as a whole, he said the city would "become a testing zone for economic reform," leading the way for less-progressive areas.

The newspaper listed among plans being worked out by the Democratic Russia bloc's "Group on Urgent Measures":

• Moves to free the private businesses known as cooperatives from a tangle of regulations.

• Incentives to attract foreign capital "on an unprecedented scale for Moscow," including easing rules on long-term leasing of buildings and allowing firms to pay in part with services to ease city problems.

• A virtual free market in agricultural produce.

• A "visiting card" system that would allow goods in Moscow to be sold only to Muscovites with proof of residence.

• Takeover and redistribution of some Communist Party property and sell-off of some government property.

The program aims to heal Moscow's deplorable state with an injection of what Kommersant calls "commercial activity" and what most would call capitalism.

There has been no Kremlin reaction. The city is largely independent when it comes to funding.

Radicals are banking on being able to do more to change the economy. They say President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who began instituting reform after coming to power in 1985, is increasingly oriented toward a market economy.

Moscow clearly needs help, as Pravda reported Tuesday: "Public transport works badly, the housing down, the health system is in a depressing state, the list of food and goods shortages is lengthening, ecology is getting worse, financial prospects are unclear and the crime rate is growing."

But the new council's first session, which began Monday, raised doubts about how effective it would be, despite the Democratic Russia bloc's plans.

Legislators bogged down for hours in procedural wrangles typical of Soviet bloc parliaments.

Shoshone school levy passes by 2-1 margin

SHOSHONE - The school district's bid to raise its annual supplemental levy to take care of some building problems and help eliminate $80,000 in debt gained voter-approval at the polls Tuesday.

Shoshone residents voted 138-62 in favor of a $255,000 levy for each of the next two years.

About $155,000 each year will be used to run the school, about $45,000 will go toward eliminating the debt and $25,000 will go for school repairs, including repairing the heating system at Lincoln Elementary. The cost to taxpayers is estimated to be about $1.20 for every $1,000 of assessed property value.

Cassia County schools set graduation dates for May 21-22

BURLEY - The School Board has set graduation dates for Cassia County School District's high schools.

The dates are May 21, Raft River and Declo; and May 22, Burley and Oakley. Promotional exercises for Burley Junior High School students moving on to high school will be May 23.

Teen who escaped April 9 back in custody in Jerome

TWIN FALLS - The teenager who escaped from the Jerome juvenile detention center last week was picked up after four days of freedom and returned to the center, according to Twin Falls police Detective Ron Robertson.

The 15-year-old had escaped with two other teenagers on the evening of April 9, but the other two were both apprehended in a field near the center shortly after they left the building. The third youth remained at large. City police officers received a tip and went to a residence in the president streets Friday, Robertson said. The youth was picked up there at 10:47 p.m. by three city officers, he said.

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man was in good condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Tuesday evening, a nursing supervisor said, with injuries from a car accident.

Carl Johns, 79, 427 Ash St., was taken to the hospital after he blacked out at the wheel of his car and struck a house, according to the police accident report. The accident occurred at 3:33 p.m., the report said. Johns was driving east on Fourth Avenue East. At the intersection of Walnut Street, he struck a sign and continued to go on to hit the house at 402 Walnut St., the report said. Both Johns and his passenger, Louise Johns, 74, wore seat belts, the report said. Louise Johns was not taken to the hospital. No citations were issued, according to the report.

Centennial train requests accepted by Union Pacific

BOISE - Anyone interested in riding the special Centennial train this summer should apply now.

Union Pacific Railroad has begun accepting requests to ride the Idaho Centennial Special as it makes its white-stop tour of southern Idaho in late June and early July. The train will be pulled by Union Pacific's historic steam locomotive 844, which was retired in 1960. The trip will be broken down into 16 legs, beginning on June 28 in Montpellier and concluding on July 4 when the train returns to Montpellier.

Preference will be given to Idaho individuals and families. UP official Charles G. Clark said. The railroad will make 200 tickets available for each leg of the trip, free of charge. Families may apply for up to six tickets for family members. Riders will be selected on a first-come, first-served basis. Applications are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Idaho Centennial Special, Union Pacific Railroad, P.O. Box 1745, Boise, Idaho 83701.

F&G faces Big Wood ruling here

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - A final decision will probably be made on fishing rules for sections of the Big-Wood River and Silver-Creek when the Idaho Fish and Game Commission meets here Thursday and Friday.

The commission will also establish big-game hunting regulations for the fall at its quarterly meeting at the Weston Plaza. A Area sportsmen will have an opportunity to discuss these and other issues during a public hearing slated for 7:30 tonight at the Plaza. The commission's deliberations will begin at 9 a.m. Thursday.

The commission changed fishing regulations on the Big-Wood and Silver-Creek last summer, but a group of Magic Valley sportsmen obtained a court injunction to prevent the Idaho Department of Fish and Game from enforcing the new rules. The controversy came to a head in the recently adjourned Idaho Legislature with an attempt to block the Senate reconfirmation of two commissioners who supported those changes, Norm Guth of Salmon and Lou Rasmussen of Pocatello.

In the final days of the Legislature, a compromise was reached between the various parties and that will be the basis for final commission deliberation on the issue. In addition to those items, the commission will have a full agenda to cover in its two days. It will consider acquisition of property in Owyhee County and hear a legislative summary from Fish and Game Assistant Director Ken Norris.

A 15-year policy draft will be reviewed along with the fisheries management plan that will include a proposal to introduce sauger in the Bear River in eastern Idaho. The commission will set tentative openings for upland game seasons and hear a Fish and Game report on the loss of hunting at Elk of Rocks. The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation will send two representatives to discuss that species.

The commissioner will also consider the possibility of a spring chinook salmon season this year and look at forage fish projects.

Adjustments in funding of 12 ongoing projects, ranging from the Bitterroot grizzly survey to spending authority for department auction funds, will be considered.

Wilbur Brown, selected to be the superintendent of Jerome's schools, will take the post in July

 Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Developing a spirit of togetherness and fostering trust among administrators, the School Board and teachers are the first goals of Jerome's new school superintendent.

Wilbur "Will" Brown, 58, from Oregon, was unanimously approved by the School Board Tuesday as the new superintendent of the Jerome School District. Brown was hired under a three-year contract.

Brown has been superintendent of the North Marion School District, Aurora, Ore., since 1987 and was selected from a field of 16 applicants; board Chairman Alvin Chojnacky said. He was an administrator in Wilder and Weiser schools from 1973-84.

"I'm happy to be here," Brown said. "I still regard Idaho as my home."

Brown said he hopes to work with the board to develop surveys that will assess the concerns of patrons, students and teachers.

He said he will develop strong management teams of administrators, community members and teachers to develop a school program that will meet the needs of schools and kids in the future.

"I'm sensitive to people," he said.

"Their feelings are important to me. I like to set clearly defined goals, missions and values and systematically harness the brainpower of the people who work in the district in identifying problems and generating solutions."

Chojnacky said he is pleased with the appointment and with the selection process using school board members, a principal, teachers and community members to build the applicant pool.

Current Superintendent Richard Kugler is retiring, effective June 30. Judy Enos, president of the Jerome Education Association, also said she

Mideast trip leaves McClure hopeful for peace in region

WASHINGTON — Returning from a nine-day trip to the Middle East, Sen. James McClure said Tuesday he remains hopeful for peace in the war-torn Middle East despite Iraq's threats to use chemical warfare against Israel.

The Idaho Republican said Iraq's President Saddam Hussein promised him during a meeting he would only use chemical weapons against Israel if attacked with nuclear weapons.

McClure also said that Iraq, which recently concluded an eight-year war with Iran, appears more preoccupied with that nation. He noted that the two nations have not signed a treaty to officially resolve their long and costly conflict.

McClure and Sens. Alan Simpson of Wyoming, Frank Lautenberg of New Jersey, Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio and Minority Leader Robert Dole returned Monday from their trip to several Middle Eastern nations.

During a meeting with Hussein Thursday in the Iraqi city of Mosul, the senators urged him to drop any efforts to continue development of nuclear, biological or chemical weapons.

Speaking after the group met with President Bush to brief him on the trip, McClure said he saw a movement on the part of Arab leaders to accept the presence of Israel in the Middle East.

"I see an increased willingness, a recognition on the part of Arab leadership that Israel does exist and that they're not going to destroy Israel... and that they're going to have to learn to accommodate to the fact of the existence of that nation in their midst," McClure said.

The group of senators met with 10 Palestinian leaders who said they were ready to negotiate a peace settlement with Israel.

While noting "brutal measures of repression" against Palestinians by Israel, McClure affirmed that the United States is committed to bolstering Israel's security.

Consultant says INEL cool to bidding for spinoff work by area companies

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory has missed opportunities to help itself and neighboring communities by ignoring local technical spinoff businesses, those concerned say.

But some Idaho Falls businessmen hasten to add that things are getting better.

A "hometown technical infrastructure" has had a rough time establishing itself in town because of the INEL's ambivalence or opposition to the spinoff companies, said the former president of EI International, one INEL spinoff that currently is struggling.

"Cases of other nearby towns — Hanford and Oak Ridge, for example — have shown that a philosophy which fosters hometown technical support resulted in a healthy high-tech spinoff business structure, and in fact lowered costs to the government," said William Botts, former president of EI International.

Botts and others said INEL officials discouraged technical work by being "fanned out" to local concerns, stifling their development through the 1960s and 1970s.

While the Department of Energy's Idaho Operations Office now actively supports technical work locally, INEL contractors still keep much of their potential spinoff work in-house, said Larry Ybarondo, president of Sciencetech and a former EG&G Idaho engineer.

Sciencetech has six offices nationwide and 120 employees, and does a lot of engineering consulting and related technical work with other national laboratories.

Ybarondo said its access to work is easier.

"There are no individuals or organizations to blame, it's cultural," he said. "It's always been that way."

Jim Zane, manager of EG&G Idaho, said the INEL's prime contractor has offered technical work to subcontractors through a bidding process. It does not, as a rule, favor local companies.

"We don't take into account intangibles to tip and funnel money into Idaho Falls," Zane said. "We don't think that's what the taxpayer wants."

Defender, judge heat up as election nears

CALDWELL (AP) — A Canyon County public defender claims incumbent 3rd-District Judge Wayne Fuller is handing down harsher criminal sentences since County Prosecutor Richard Harris mounted a challenge to Fuller's re-election.

But Fuller, who stepped into the shoes of Harris of ethical misconduct for politicizing a vehicular manslaughter case — a charge Harris denies.

The seating election conflict erupted publicly in Fuller's courtroom on Monday when the judge disqualified himself from further participation in the case against Max Lyons, 38, of Ontario.

Lyons was convicted in the July 1989 crash that claimed the life of Violet Woolley and injured three others.

Fuller is one of just three incumbent judges facing opposition in the May 22 judicial election.

Sandpoint attorney Don Featherston is challenging 1st District Judge James Michaud, who has been criticized for the number of his rulings that have been reversed, and Bonneville County Magistrate Marvin Smith is running against 7th District Judge H. Reynold George, a 16-year veteran of the Idaho Falls bench.

Obituaries

Margaret Buchanan
TWIN FALLS — Margaret Buchanan, 61, of Boise and formerly of Twin Falls, died Monday, April 16, 1990, in a Boise hospital of cancer.

She was born Aug. 17, 1928, in Roberts, Idaho, the daughter of Curtis and Effie Hawker. She grew up in Menah, Idaho, and graduated from Menah High School in 1946. She went to work for Bell Telephone Co. as an assistant staff manager and worked in Caldwell, Twin Falls and Boise. She retired in 1970 with 25 years of service. Sommer

"I strongly felt that's wrong," she said. "I think it really shows that he is using his position to do what he wants for his child."

Sommer, however, said she received no special treatment. And, he said, board members do not represent just their own neighborhoods' schools.

"You're not locked into representing one school," he said. "We represent all the schools. We don't play any favorites."

The fact that some other board members have no school-age children does not affect the way they represent children, he said. Nor, he said, is his representation affected by his daughter's move to Sawtooth — or by her move next year to a junior high.

Olsen said Sawtooth, in the northeast part of town, is widely reputed to be the Twin Falls district's elite school. Many parents there are well-to-do and have donated heavily for programs, materials and facilities, Buck said.

Those extras include a 15-computer laboratory, a $13,000-year spellingathon program and a field-up arts program with textbooks, Buck said.

Olsen asserts that Bickel has not received the same representation as Sawtooth. The perception is that Sawtooth receives preferential treatment, she said.

For example, she said, in order to get a lawn for Bickel, which had no grassy playground, parents had to split the cost with the district. At Sawtooth, the district recently paid the entire cost of laying sod behind the city's new pool.

Sommer said the two situations are different because the lawn near Sawtooth serves the high school as much as it does Sawtooth.

"That's a moot point," he said.

Anyway, when the Bickel PTO asked for matching funds for the lawn three years ago, the board approved the request after he and board member Steve Tolma spoke out in favor of it, Sommer said.

Olsen said, however, that she does not remember Sommer saying anything about the Bickel lawn at school board meetings.

"He did not say one word," she said. "Behind closed doors I don't know what he said."

Olsen said that Sommer's decision to send his daughter to Sawtooth proves he thinks it's a better school than Bickel.

"Otherwise, why would you move your child?" she said.

Sommer said the decision had nothing to do with which school is the best. He also said that in moving his daughter he exercised the same privilege extended to district teachers and administrators.

Tolzin confirmed that under district policy, teachers often take their children with them to the schools where they teach.

Other parents also can request school transfers, but because the changes can disrupt planning and cause overcrowding, the district discourages them, Tolzin said.

"We generally don't want them to move," he said.

Transfer requests, however, are more often approved than denied. In this school year, more than 80 transfer requests were approved, and only 34 were denied. Tolzin said he rules on the requests after consulting teachers, principals and parents.

Sawtooth's sixth-grade classes aren't crowded, Tolzin said. If an ordinary citizen made a request similar to Sommer's, various issues would be weighed, but the request probably would be approved, Tolzin said. He said requests based on proximity to baby sitters have been both granted and denied.

The district has been working on a new transfer policy to tighten controls, Tolzin said.

He said it has nothing to do with Sommer.

Jerome

was pleased with the selection process.

Chojnacki praised Kugler for his tenure in the district, including his efforts to eliminate a $400,000 debt.

Brown said he is looking forward to the job.

"I like the challenge of helping make a strong school district even better, and the strong commitment to education by the board and community make serving as superintendent of the Jerome School District very attractive," he said. "Its size and location are exactly what I was seeking, personally and professionally." The Jerome School District will test my mettle with a new set of challenges.

The new superintendent sites as strong points his skills in communications, human relations, staff development, administration and fiscal management. He said he is sensitive to people and stressed the importance of the plus on being highly visible in the schools and community.

Brown has degrees from Laurence University, now known as Santa Barbara City College, and the University of Idaho and University of California.

He also was superintendent in Wilder from 1976-84 and in North Powder, Ore., from 1984-87; principal in Weiser from 1973-78; director of special services in Winnemucca, Nev., from 1969-73; and curriculum and testing acting principal in Oakley, Calif., from 1965-69.

He has been an elementary and junior high teacher in California and Washington.

Brown and his wife, Neta, have six children. All but Gary, a high school senior this year, are grown and living away from home.

The Browns said they plan to move to Jerome by the latter part of June.

Turn with tragic result

Probe clears BYU film studio

PROVO, Utah (AP) — No evidence has been found to support Brigham Young University's film studio misused tax-exempt Mormon church funds, the Utah County attorney's office says.

"We have concluded that the allegations made to us through numerous personal interviews are without criminal foundation," Deputy County Attorney Craig Madsen said. "We have found nothing on which to base either a criminal (charge) or on which to base further criminal investigations. Therefore the investigation has been terminated."

The county attorney's office began the preliminary investigation last month after former employees said the studio misused $4 million in tithes from the church, which owns

BYU.

Madsen said there may be a need for policy or administrative changes at the studio, "but that is their business. That is not our concern and not part of our investigation."

BYU Spokesman Paul Richards said the university was pleased by the results of the investigation.

"We've been on hold waiting for it and now we can go back and look at the situation. We may do some fine-tuning in the management structure, but that hasn't been determined yet," he said.

Richards said that any management changes that evolve from the probe's findings will not imperil Studio Director Peter Johnson.

Allegations included that the studio produced commercial for-profit projects by using tithes or other donated money; that Johnson used studio employees to do private remodeling at his home; that studio employees used their positions to make improper purchases, and that employees were improperly fired.

Richard Casto, an investigator from the sheriff's office who assisted in the investigation, questioned 12 complainants, BYU auditors and other university officials and found no substance to the accusations, Madsen said.

The county attorney and sheriff's office were called in by BYU to do an independent investigation, even though Madsen said "we were somewhat reticent at the beginning to conduct the investigation in the absence of clear-cut allegations of criminal activity."

California firm enters cleanup at Hanford site

TORRANCE, Calif. (AP) — International Technology Corp. said it has been awarded a $23.3 million contract by Westinghouse Hanford Co. to assist in the cleanup of a federal nuclear waste site in Washington state.

Under the five-year contract, the company will study legal, environmental and other issues involved in cleaning up the U.S. Department of Energy's Hanford nuclear reservation.

Murray H. Hutchinson, IT chairman and chief executive officer, said Monday the company was pleased to be part of the Westinghouse Hanford team "and to work with them on the environmental cleanup effort at Hanford."

Experts say textbook opinion poll flawed

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A poll that caused school board members to change their minds and reject a controversial textbook series was flawed, national and regional pollsters said.

The North Idaho Polling Service poll contained no demographic information, may have understated the margin of error and apparently did not verify respondents' answers, pollsters said Monday.

The random telephone poll reportedly showed that 71 percent of respondents thought the "Impressions" reading series should be removed. Based on that, the board last week voted to return the textbooks to the publisher.

Bob Paulos, director of the polling service, declined to discuss the survey Tuesday morning.

"Any poll that a company does for an individual is highly confidential, so I wouldn't have any comment," he said.

School board member Tim Olson, who commissioned the survey out of pocket, said he had received calls from some district patrons questioning the poll's validity. But he defended the survey.

"The polling service is independent. It has nothing to gain or lose on this thing. It's objective," Olson said. "I have no reason to doubt its accuracy."

Both Olson and board member Vern Newby voted twice to keep the reading series despite some parents' complaints that it promoted Satanism and witchcraft. But both said the poll's results caused them to switch.

"The survey changed my mind," Olson said. "I was very surprised at the overwhelming response."

Representatives of the Gallup Polling Service of Princeton, N.J., and Market Trends Research Co., a Spokane competitor, said the survey did not measure up to national polling standards.

Frank Newport, editor-in-chief of the Gallup Poll, said credible surveys include descriptions of the people surveyed, including ages, gender, geographic location, sometimes income level and more.

The American Association of Public Opinion Research has included demographic information in its standards for adequate polls, Newport said.

"Without demographics, red flags should go up," said William Robinson, vice president of Market Trends. "If a survey is going to be accurate, it has to have them."

Poll takers also should call back 10 percent to 15 percent of the respondents to verify their answers, Robinson said.

The four-page report Olson received on the poll indicated, 200 Coeur d'Alene School District residents were contacted in a random phone survey at various times of the day and evening March 10 and 11.

The report specified the survey results could vary by 3 percent. However, University of Idaho statisticians, Gallup and Market Trends pollsters said the margin of error on a sample of 200 people would be at least 7 percent.

For a good representation of the population, pollsters should identify the variety of respondents they need, Robinson said.

"If you just talk to the first 200 people who answer the phone, you'll have a disproportionate amount of older and poorer people and more women," he said. "That's not good unless that's the population the poll is targeting."

The polling service's report did not explain how its random sample was selected, nor whether callbacks were made to verify responses.

Missing men found in northern Utah canyon

WILLARD, Utah (AP) — Two Mormon missionaries and a third man were found in "excellent" condition Tuesday after spending the night in a rugged northern Utah canyon, authorities said.

Searchers who began combing Holmes Canyon at dawn in search of the men, who failed to return from a hike Monday, found them sitting at the top of the canyon at about 11:20 a.m., said Box Elder County Sheriff's dispatcher Brenda Atencio.

"Apparently they were all in such good condition they doubted they'd have to see a doctor," she said.

Ethan Weyand of Idaho Falls; Idaho, and Lata Fifita of Vavau, Tonga, both 21, are allied with the Utah Ogden Mission of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said church spokesman Don LeFevre.

The third man was identified as Ethan's brother, Austin Weyand, no age available, also of Idaho Falls.

About 20 search and rescue specialists were joined by dogs, a helicopter and an airplane, dispatcher Ron Ogborn said earlier. The helicopter brought the men out.

He said the three men told friends they were going for a hike Monday morning in the canyon about a mile south of here and failed to return 7 p.m. The friends notified authorities shortly before 10 p.m.

Ogborn said they told friends they intended to climb to a mountain peak and return Monday, but he said it's a climb that normally would take three days in rugged, steep terrain.

Church returns tithes paid by ex-facility chiefs

PROVO, Utah (AP) — More than $244,000 in tithes paid by former Timpanogos Community Mental Health Center administrators have been returned to the facility by the Mormon Church, officials say.

The tithes were paid to the church by three of the center's former top officials — Glen R. Brown, Craig R. Stephens and Carl V. Smith. They are serving prison terms for stealing $3.5 million in public funds.

The tithes were characterized by Timpanogos officials as "a wrongful and illegal transfer of (center) funds to the church."

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said the church would never knowingly accept stolen funds. The settlement releases the church from any further liability for the men and satisfies all claims made by the center against the church.

The $244,341 return brings the center's repayment fund to about $800,000. More than $600,000 was returned to Timpanogos by Brown, Stephens and Smith and others involved in the scandal.

More money is expected to be returned, but the center will probably be short about $2 million, said Utah County Commissioner Malcolm Beck.

Japanese consul says U.S. must reduce its deficit

LEWISTON (AP) — The consul general of Japan says most of the policy change needed to eliminate the $41 billion trade imbalance between the United States and Japan must be made by U.S. officials.

Speaking at Lewis-Clark State College Monday, Shinzuke Hirai said "even if Japan did all that the United States has requested, it would only resolve about 20 percent of the trade deficit with Japan. That leaves 80 percent to be dealt with by the United States."

Hirai also said Japan citizens want and need to import more finished products from the United States, such as finished wood products rather than raw logs, sporting goods, frozen french fries, and other processed food products.

Hirai was the featured speaker the first day of LCSC's second annual Japan Week. Monday's activities included a Japanese tea ceremony, a calligraphy lecture and demonstration, and a tree-planting ceremony.

Hirai told more than 80 people at Monday's luncheon Japan has recommended the United States address several domestic issues to help resolve the growing trade imbalance between the two countries.

Those issues include:

- Reducing the $3 trillion federal deficit.
- Increasing savings and investment rates.
- Spending more time and energy on research and development.

- Improving its education system.
- Adopting the metric system.

The consul general said he realizes the recommendations "deal with some very sensitive, domestic issues." But, Hirai added, the U.S.-Japan relationship is strong enough to allow honest communication.

"Trade talks will never occur between the United States and the Soviet Union or between Japan and the Soviet Union," he said. "The trade relationship between the United States and Japan has very much matured from our mutual trust."

Hirai called the latest round of trade talks between Japan and the United States important, and he said what the two countries do in the future "will have a great impact, not only on our mutual interests but on the global economy."

"Japan and the United States have been unable to develop an unprecedented economic interdependence."

Judge rules Rocky Flats under state

DENVER (AP) — The Rocky Flats weapons plant stored hazardous waste illegally for a decade by claiming it was being saved for recycling, a federal judge has ruled, apparently making the plant subject to state regulations.

"This takes a big step toward making clear what they can and cannot store and what is and is not hazardous waste," said Maggie Fox of the Sierra Club, which sued the U.S. Department of Energy over storage of the material at the plant.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Lewis T. Babcock, which was issued Thursday but did not become publicly known until Monday, does not call for fines or other penalties.

But it apparently will force the plant to meet state-hazardous-waste regulations on storage of ash and other residue left over from waste incineration.

The plant shut down its incinerator last year as part of the lawsuit, but for years it had burned waste tainted with radioactive plutonium.

Plant operators had argued that the resulting ash was exempt from state regulation because the plant was storing the material for recycling of the plutonium it contained.

Court records showed that plutonium actually was recovered from less than 10 percent of the tons of residue stored.

Triggers for nuclear weapons were assembled at the plant, but most of the plant's plutonium-related operations have been shut down since late last year, partly for a seasonal inventory and partly because of technical problems.

Energy Department attorneys argued that any ruling designating the residue as regulated waste would jeopardize an agreement with the state over the handling, storage and generation of hazardous waste at the plant.

John Haggard, Rocky Flats program coordinator of the Colorado Department of Health, said the ruling strengthens the state's authority to regulate the waste.

Marriott firm co-founder dies

VERNAL, Utah (AP) — Hugh Wilkens Colton, a rancher, lawyer, war hero and co-founder of the company that later became the Marriott Corp., has died. He was 89.

Colton died Saturday at his home in Vernal.

In 1927, Colton opened a root beer stand in Washington, D.C., with his longtime friend J. Willard Marriott.

The partners went on to open three Hot Shoppes Restaurants before Colton sold his interest to Marriott for $5,000.

Colton, who graduated from the University of Utah and George Washington Law School, was a commander in the Utah National Guard. He was called to active duty before Pearl Harbor and commanded troops that landed at Normandy on D-day.

He achieved the rank of colonel and was awarded military honors of three countries, including the Silver Star with oak leaf cluster, French Croix de Guerre and Belgium Medal of Honor.

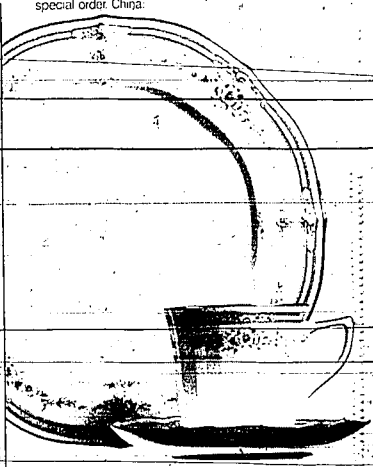

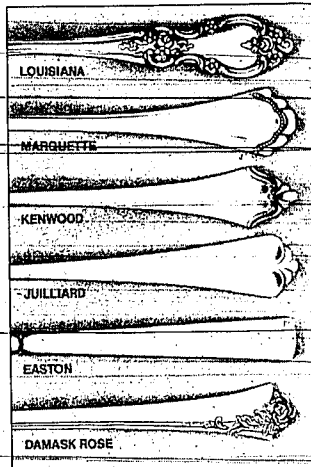

Colton raised cattle and horses and was a director of the Utah Cattlemen's Association and the National Cowboy Hall of Fame.

Colton is survived by his wife, Marguerite Maughan Colton, three sons, 13 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Former champ Foreman

knocks Jameson out

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion George Foreman punished the amply bolly of overcast Mike Jameson, bloodied his eye and knocked him out in the fourth round Tuesday night to stay on track for a title shot.

Foreman, slow and plodding-but still much quicker and sharper than Jameson, ended the bout at 2:16 of the fourth with a left hook that dropped Jameson in a heap in his own corner. Earlier in the round, Foreman knocked Jameson's mouthpiece out for the third time in the fight, and opened a deep, ugly gash over his left eye that led to a brief halt while the ringside doctor checked the damage.

Early error puts Bruins past Burley

By JEFF HOSKISSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sometimes it's the little things that determine the final outcome. Tuesday that little thing was a second-inning error by Paul Rasmussen of Burley that opened the flood gates for the Twin Falls Bruins as they knocked off the Bobcats 9-0 in a Region III high school baseball game here Tuesday.

The win, Twin Falls' ninth straight, improved the Bruins record to 16-2 overall and 4-0 in Region III. The Bobcats fell to 8-15 overall and 2-3 in region.

"You can't expect to beat Twin Falls when you do things wrong fundamentally," remarked Bobcats coach Doug Bailey. "The error and our inability to score runs killed us."

Burley's biggest mistake came in the second inning with two outs and one man on base. Jeff Ames hit a line shot to shortstop Paul Rasmussen that he couldn't handle, allowing the Bruins another baserunner. Before the Bobcats could manage the third out, Twin Falls had struck for five runs to blow open the game.

"One mistake made the difference," commented Bruins coach Bill Ingram. "They're a good team."

As the game opened it looked as if it might be the Bobcats who would run away with things. In both the first and second innings the Bobcats loaded the bases but could not get any runs across.

"We just couldn't score," said Bailey. "We had the chances but didn't take advantage of them."

The Bobcats cause was aided three-bases on balls, a hit batsman and two hits, yet none coming in critical times to get any runs home.

The Bruins on the other hand went down quickly in the first inning and the first two batters in the second made it five straight outs for the Bobcats and pitcher Troy Meredith.

Hornet girls take revenge against Filer at invitational

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

DECLO — The Declo girls' team is back on track. No pun intended. Upended by the Filer Wildcats at the Filer Invitational in Twin Falls last week, the Hornets bounced back and took the seven-team Declo Invitational title by seven points over Burley and easily outdistanced Filer.

The Valley Viking boys' team built up a strong lead after the field events and held off Burley to win the boys' event at the meet while the host Hornets finished third on Declo's 440-yard cinder track.

There was no question that the Hornet girls' team would be challenged in the meet, but most were surprised by the showing of the Bobcat girls. In a meet in different track and weather conditions, the Wildcats couldn't muster enough points to pull off a second straight upset.

"We had two good practices after we lost to Filer. We jumped in a few places. I am really pleased with them," said Declo girls' coach Jay Darrington.

Sophomores Rena and Gina Miller paced the Hornets with Rena winning the mile and 660-yard run while her counterpart took the 800-yard run. Declo also placed in first and second in the mile run and junior Thais Kidd won the triple jump and took second in the long jump.

Angela Boden was a bright spot for Raft River taking both the 100-dash and the 100-meter hurdles. In the 220-yard dash, Boden finished second behind Burley freshman Jessica Baggers.

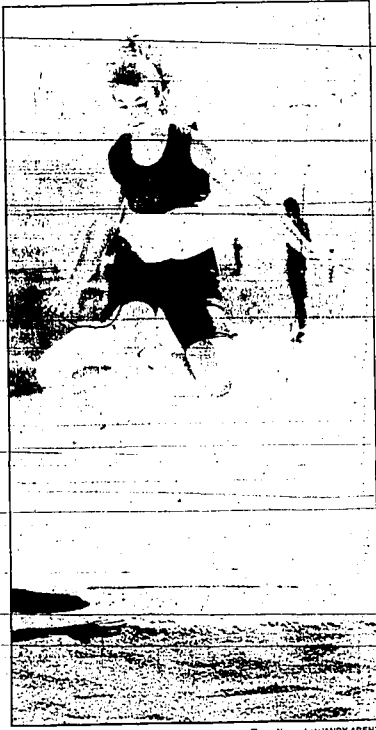

For the Valley boys' squad, it turned out to be a Viking-dominated event after the field events. The Vikings placed two in the high jump, the triple jump and the discus, but Valley picked up 20 points in the shot put with a Viking in the second-through-fifth places.

"It's a sign of good depth in the field events," said Valley coach Scott Tinney. "It's been a long time since we've had that."

Marc Lutz had his usual fine performance winning both of the distance races and Mark Udy dominated the short sprints and ran on two winning relays for Raft River.

Reds down San Diego for 7th straight victory

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — For now, the Cincinnati Reds have an unbeatable combination: good play and luck. Billy Hatcher and Barry Larkin had three singles each Tuesday as the Reds beat San Diego 2-1 and remained baseball's only unbeaten team.

The Reds' seventh victory left them one shy of the club record for best start and kept intact their streak of luck on home openers — they've won their last eight.

"We've had luck for a long time now," said Larkin, who went 3-for-4 to raise his average to .594. "Things are going well. We're getting tremendous pitching, defense and clutch hitting. Everybody feels confident."

"I'm impressed," Padres manager Jack McKeon said. "I have been in for four years. The difference this year? In a word, experience."

The Reds had a bad experience at the start of last year; the gambling investigation of Pete Rose that put the club in a fishbowl. The players are reveling in the difference under Lou Piniella.

"We're definitely more relaxed," Larkin said. "With all the hoopla last year, you couldn't walk through the clubhouse or say what you wanted to say without being accused of something in the media."

They've also been a lot more fortunate so far. The home opener was a good example. Padres starter Andy Benes (1-1) had one bad inning, and it cost him. He gave up two walks to open the second and then a pair of soft RBI singles to Mariano Duncan — who hit a weak liner just over the infield — and Billy Hatcher, whose grounder hit the mound and squirted through the infield. "They beat me with a couple of base hits through the infield," Benes said. "But they were up there swinging. Larkin must be hitting like .790, and Hatcher had three hits. It was like I was pitching behind on everyone."

Reds starter Tom Browning (2-0) allowed seven hits over six-plus innings, but paid for just one of his mistakes — a leadoff homer by Benito Santiago in the seventh. That brought on Norm Charlton, who allowed one single and fanned four in two innings.

"I would have liked to have gone longer," Browning said. "But with the bullpen we've got, it's hard not to go to the bullpen."

Randy Myers struggled in the ninth before getting his third save. The left-hander gave up a single and a walk before retiring Joey Cora on a grounder to end the Padres' five-game winning streak.

"Nont" won the game-for-us," Myers said. "He shut 'em down when he had to."

Benes walked Todd Benzing and Joe Oliver to open the Reds' second — his second and third walks of the game. Duncan drove in Benzing with a soft single to left, and Hatcher singled up the middle one out later for a 2-0 lead.

Benes' found his control in the third, and ended up fanning six and allowing seven hits in five innings.

In the sixth, a tiring Browning gave up singles to Shawn Abner and Roberto Alomar and a two-out walk to Jack Clark. After Manager Lou Piniella walked the mound and left Browning in, the left-hander retired Joe Carter on one pitch — a flyout to right.

One more victory will match the 1980 club for best start. That team went on to finish third.

CSI settles for split, but pitching strength returns

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho baseball coach Jim Walker was so happy with his team's pitching in a doubleheader against Snow College Tuesday that he sent hurler Steve Cooke to the plate as a pinch-hitter with two runners on base.

"Hey, if it lasted long enough, I would have given the rest of the (pitchers) a chance to hit too," said Walker.

The Eagles split with the Badgers, winning the opener 2-1 and losing the nightcap 5-3, but the good news for Walker was that his team's belted earned run average shrunk a bit Tuesday.

"Every one of our pitchers today got their hitters out except (left-handed reliever) Shane Warenski, and we kicked a cue for him," Walker said. "After last weekend, that was good to see."

The CSI pitching staff, which pumped up its 4.52 team ERA last weekend by giving up 24 earned runs and 33 hits in 25 innings against Treasure Valley Community College, was a model of conservatism on Tuesday. Mark Keeble, Traver Hunter and Eric Miller combined for a five-hitter in the opener, striking out seven Snow batters and walking just two.

In the nightcap, Dan Foulton, Brian Avramo, Warenski, Miller and Mike Brady tossed a six-hitter and gave up just three earned runs.

"I hope we got some things straightened out the last couple of days," said Walker.

whose Eagles will leave for Coeur d'Alene Thursday and a crucial three-game northern division Region 18 series against North Idaho College this weekend. "I feel better about our pitching that I did."

The Eagles, who beat Snow on Monday, improved their season record to 22-16 and added another couple of wins with the news that TVCC will have to forfeit two of its early season victories over CSI because the Chukars used a pitcher who wasn't eligible. That makes the Eagles 24-14 headed to Coeur d'Alene.

In the opener, CSI scored a single run in the third inning when Kent Schow walked, stole second, went to third when catcher Guy Mackay heaved the ball into center field and scored when Stacey Ayers grounded out.

The Eagles added another fourth out former Pocatello High School pitcher Jim Hallinan when Don Slattery led off with a single, went to second on Sean Hicks' single, took third on Lonnie Reiber's sacrifice bunt and scored on an error.

Snow scored its only run in the second with two outs. Anthony Jenkinson singled, went to second on Dave Taylor's single and scored on Shawn Osborn's hit.

But Keeble, the first-game starter, got out of that jam with a fly ball. Hunter put the first two batters he faced in the fourth inning on base before retiring three in a row and Miller got out of jams in the fifth and sixth.

The key play in the sixth came when Official says Raider deal could be renegotiated

By Newsday

—Although Oakland, Calif., Mayor Lionel Wilson has said the deal to bring the Raiders back to Oakland is almost dead — a victim of mayoral politics — a spokesperson from the city's office said Tuesday that Wilson planned to tell the city council Tuesday night that there still was a chance that terms of the deal could be renegotiated.

"The mayor is not saying, 'That's it. We don't want you,'" said Carol McArthur of the mayor's office. "It's not dead. A renegotiation most likely will be occurring. It's just that he knows it's not acceptable to the Raiders organization to put the issue on the ballot."

The Oakland City Council, Alameda County Commission and the Oakland-Alameda Coliseum Commission previously approved a deal that would have guaranteed the Raiders $602 million over 15 years.

Opponents of the deal, including supporters of mayoral candidate Elihu Harris, who is running against Wilson in a June primary, began circulating petitions calling for a referendum on November 1. The Raiders then made concessions that would have reduced the guaranteed money to $478 million, but opponents submitted their petitions with 33,000 signatures, easily surpassing the 19,000 needed to place the issue on the ballot.

Wilson planned to ask the city council Tuesday night to rescind his offer to the Raiders, who moved to Los Angeles in 1982, but continue negotiations to see if an acceptable solution is possible. The group opposed to the deal has said it wants all risk to the taxpayers to be removed from the deal by eliminating the guarantees.

The likely compromise would be a deal in which a $53 million relocation fee and $50 million in stadium improvements would be financed by the sale of bonds. Even that possibility faces opposition at a hearing Thursday to determine what kind of bonds to sell.

Alameda County Supervisor Don Perata, the architect of the deal to return the Raiders to Oakland, described Wilson's talk of renegotiating as "an 11th-hour gasp. It's very difficult to imagine a scenario in which this thing could have life breathed back into it. If the city wanted to renegotiate, they should have done that weeks ago."

"I don't want to hold out any false hope. I talked to (Raiders principal owner) Jack Bronke, and he expressed regret. He said they would sit and talk without an offer of optimism, but I got the definite sense they feel the water is pretty much over the dam. There would have to be something very concrete to bring them back to the bargaining table."

Kangaroo cuisine may soon become common

—The kangaroo may soon become common cuisine in Australia's most populous state, now that New South Wales plans to make it legal to dine on Australia's national symbol.

—"Quite clearly this is a food product which is very much going to waste, and there does seem to be a certain demand for it among restaurateurs and among people who like game meat," Ian Armstrong, the state's agriculture minister, told the Associated Press.

—The New South Wales Parliament is considering a bill to legalize kangaroo consumption, and Armstrong predicted it would pass during the current legislative session. The state of South Australia and the Northern Territory already allow kangaroo cuisine.

—The National Parks and Wildlife Service estimates that Australia has about 20 million kangaroos. The agency says more than three million are killed annually, mainly for their skins and to be used as pet food. Animal welfare groups oppose New South Wales' plans and promised to picket restaurants or butchers selling kangaroo meat.

Gallup survey shows kids like pizza, chicken nuggets

Fort Lauderdale News & Sun-Sentinel

—Gallup recently surveyed 3- to 11-year-olds on their favorite foods, and the results were none too surprising (especially to any parent). The top food by far was pizza, listed 82 percent of the time. Chicken nuggets were ranked second at 51 percent, followed by hot dogs (45 percent), cheeseburgers (42 percent) and macaroni and cheese (38 percent). Finishing the top 10 were hamburgers, spaghetti and meatballs, fried chicken, tacos and grilled cheese sandwiches.

—Incidentally, this survey was commissioned by ConAgra Frozen Foods, which makes Kid Cuisine, a line of frozen foods for children that just happens to include six of the top 10 kids' food choices.

Some helpful suggestions on care, cooking of chicken

Knight-Ridder News Service

—Chicken handling and cooking: Clip and save these tips on the care and cooking of chicken from the April edition of Bon Appetit magazine:

• Keep all chicken refrigerated until it is ready to be cooked.

• Thaw frozen chicken in the refrigerator to prevent spoilage.

• Wash chicken with cool water and then pat dry with paper towel. Use warm, soapy water to wash off work surfaces, knives and hands after preparing chicken.

• To remove skin from cut-up chicken, dry each piece very well so it doesn't slip out of your grasp. Pull the skin-off with your hands, using a paper towel for a firmer grip if necessary. Trim any remaining fat with a knife.

• Whether chicken is cooked on the stove-top, in the microwave or baked in the oven, always make sure it is fully cooked but still moist. Do not overcook. To check for doneness of whole chicken, pierce the thigh meat with the tip of a knife. Juices should run clear rather than pink. Individual pieces are done when springy to the touch. Dark meat takes longer to cook than white.

Peanut-butter play dough fun for children - and edible

The Washington Post

—Midweek vacation blues can be alleviated by letting your kids make peanut-butter play dough. It's easier to make than regular play dough, because you don't have to cook it, and more fun because it's edible.

—The recipe, from "Kids are Natural Cooks" by Parents' Nursery School (Houghton Mifflin Co., 1972) is simple: Take a big jar of peanut butter. Spoon out some big glob into a bowl. Then pour in a few spoonfuls of honey. Now add some powdered milk and start mixing with hands, adding more powdered milk until it makes a good dough.

—Then it's playtime (if it hasn't already started). All sorts of shapes can be made - and even decorated with raisins, chocolate chips, anything edible.

—One word of caution needs to be added, however: Dogs like peanut butter too, so be careful where the finished sculpture is left.

Doctors warn people not to overindulge on Easter goodies

Fort Lauderdale News & Sun-Sentinel

—Doctors caution about overindulging in Easter basket goodies. Dr. Philip Mirrell, of the Allergy and Immunology Institute of South Florida, said health professionals see a rash of food allergy cases at this time of year, brought on by eating large quantities of chocolates and other treats found in Easter baskets. Symptoms that often occur when someone has an allergic reaction to chocolate include skin eruptions and swelling, cramping and gastrointestinal problems, nausea and vomiting.

Welcome spring with easy elegance

—Spring is an ideal time to try California cuisine - the special way of cooking that originated on the West Coast and has traveled cross-country to rave reviews.

—This style of cooking calls for the freshest ingredients, and they're now readily available. Combining dates, artichokes and olives with tender moist turkey breast creates an elegant, healthful, great-tasting springtime dinner that can be prepared in just moments.

—Start with fresh-steamed artichokes, now at their peak, served with creamy mustard sauce. Artichokes, available year-round in most markets, are rich in fiber, low in fat, and are fun to eat. Look for artichokes that are compact and firm with an even green color.

—Next, serve a salad which features ripe olives and bell peppers, tossed with a tasty vinaigrette dressing heightened with a dash of hot pepper flakes. It's an easy salad to make. For best flavor, prepare it the night before, so the dressing mellows into the vegetables. Ripe olives, with their rich, full taste, add color and texture to any dish.

—The main course is lemon-garlic turkey breast, a tangy dish with a wonderful tempting aroma. It's especially easy and quick to fix in the microwave. Delicately flavored turkey breast is a convenient and favorite modern-day food, since it's low in cholesterol and saturated fat.

—The dessert combines luscious dates, toasted nuts and other fruit with chocolate sauce for an easy, do-it-yourself fondue.

ARTICHOKES WITH CREAMY MUSTARD SAUCE

- 1/2 cup plain yogurt
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh or 1 teaspoon dried basil
- 2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
- dash bottled hot pepper sauce
- 1 tablespoon olive oil
- salt and pepper to taste
- 4 cooked artichokes

—Combine yogurt, basil, mustard and hot pepper sauce; mix well. Slowly drizzle olive oil into yogurt mixture, whipping constantly. Season with salt and pepper. Serve with cooked artichokes.

—Makes 4 servings.

—To cook artichokes: Trim stems so artichokes stand upright. Cut 1/4 to 1/3 off tops of artichokes. Stand artichokes in deep pot with about 3 inches boiling salted water. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 2 large basil leaves or 1 teaspoon dried basil and 1 tablespoon olive oil. Cover and boil gently 25 to 40 minutes or until plant near center pulls out easily. Stand artichokes upside down to drain.

—Microwave Method: Place prepared artichokes in deep microwave-safe dish. Add 1-cup water and seasonings per cooking directions above; cover and microwave at HIGH (100 percent power), in a 600 to 700 watt microwave oven, 12 to 15 minutes. Rotate dish one-quarter turn halfway through cooking time. Let stand 5 minutes. When done, plant near center will pull out easily.

One way or another, fake fats will change diets

By MALCOLM GLADWELL
 The Washington Post

—If chocolate cake had half the calories, a fraction of the fat, and none of the guilt, would Americans eat more of it than they do now?

—That is the question raised about the national diet by the advent of so-called fake fats, according to health experts and nutritionists.

—It is possible, for example, that when fake fats are approved for cooking, a move expected in the next few years, Americans will go on a collective binge, less inclined than ever to heed the call of nutritionists to switch to something truly healthful for dessert.

—On the other hand, it is possible people will eat no more fake-fat cake than they did real cake. Then fat substitutes could be a blessing, bringing a sizable reduction in dietary fat without the need for a painful change in eating habits and giving nutritionists a new opportunity to influence what people eat.

—No one disputes that in one way or another fat substitutes are about to change the American diet. Already there is fake-fat ice cream - Nutrasweet's Simple Pleasures - in the supermarket and the next generation of fake fats for cooking low-calorie french fries and diet potato chips is expected to follow.

—But in recent months health experts have engaged in a sharp debate about whether the latest of the food industry's high-tech concoctions is going to help or hurt the struggle to improve the country's diet.

—Health experts have recommended a reduction both in overall fat consumption and consumption of saturated fats by most Americans.

—"This is going to further erode our ability to teach people about what they should be eating," said Joan Gussow, a nutritionist at Columbia Teacher's College. "Instead of retraining your taste buds, instead of learning to like the foods that are good for you, people are now being told by the food industry that they can go ahead and have their favorite foods."

—The approach we've been using regarding fat is the just say no approach, countered Adam Drewnowski, a nutritionist at the University of Michigan. "Just say no and eat broccoli. I'm sorry. It's just not working. We need a more sophisticated approach and that's what these substitutes provide."

—The ingredient in fake ice cream, called Simplex, breaks down when heated and cannot be used in cooking. But compounds are being developed by food firms and chemical companies to replace some of the natural fats used in baking and frying. Chemically, this second generation of fake fats is as close as possible to real fat, giving the fakes similar taste and cooking characteristics. But a small alteration is made in the structure of the fat molecule so it cannot be digested.

—The result is a dramatic decrease in the fat and caloric content of some food, french

By JOAN BEAN
 Times-News correspondent

—GOODING - Carol-Ann Jensen has lived in Utah for 25 years, but her roots are in Idaho. And potatoes, no pun intended, are very much a part of those roots.

—Growing up on a farm in Gooding, she picked potatoes, cooked potatoes, collected potato recipes, and of course, ate potatoes.

—"Because I'm from Idaho, and because I like to cook, potatoes have been a mainstay of my life forever," she says. "I cooked for hired men and neighbors and community functions, and it got to the point that people started saying, 'Carol-Ann will bring potatoes.'"

—Jensen has a collection of spud recipes that include those given to her by friends, some she has created herself and others she has adapted. A couple of years ago she decided to put them together for her children.

—As the project began to take shape, she saw the potential for a cookbook. And so, because she is a free-lance writer and her daughter, Lance Quinn, is an artist, they collaborated to create the "Spud Bugg Cookbook."

—There are about 100 recipes for potatoes in the book, including a good many that use spuds as an ingredient in such dishes as fudge, doughnuts, pancakes and more. The spiral-bound, large-print book also has information about potatoes, and tips on preparing them.

—She advises scrubbing spuds and leaving their skins on whenever possible. "And when you're boiling them, try not to drown them," she says, adding that just a bit of water in the bottom of the pan is all that is needed.

them, prick them with a fork and put them in a 400 degree oven for 45 minutes to an hour, depending on their size. And when they come out I slash them across the top, and they're nice and fluffy."

—In her book, Jensen defends the potato chip, saying they are not a "junk food" but a cooked vegetable that is nutritious. In the following recipe they are used as an ingredient.

GOOD-FOR-SPUD-BUGS COOKIES

- 1 cup mashed potato chips
- 2 sticks soft margarine
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 2 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts
- 1/4 cup wheat germ
- 1/4 cup raisins, dried apricots, prunes or dates, chopped, or a combination of these —Cream margarine, sugar and vanilla. Stir flour and soda together and add to first mixture. Stir in remaining ingredients. Drop by heaping teaspoonfuls on ungreased cookie sheet.

—Press with a fork or small glass. Bake 12 minutes in preheated 350 degree oven. Do not overbake. After removing from oven, let stand a few minutes on cookie tray before spreading them on a rack. Yield: about 12 to 18.

—"They're kind of crunchy," she says. "And they are a lot like many of the cookie recipes today that are being made with the different cereals."

—The next recipe is one Jensen created. She calls it...

The three major tuna canners may succeed in erasing the image that they kill dolphins in the pursuit of business, but it is less clear how much that will help them at the supermarket.

Last Thursday, H.J. Heinz Co., which owns Starkist-Seafood Co., the world's largest tuna canner, announced that it would only buy dolphin-safe tuna. Within hours, the other two major canners, Van Camp Seafood Co., which markets Chicken of the Sea, and Bumble Bee Seafoods Inc. — followed suit.

Tuna is regarded as an intensely competitive commodity in which brand recognition is less important than price. Thus, the questions for the canners are, can they absorb higher costs without passing a major price increase along to consumers, and will they win new consumers or woo back boycotters? by guaranteeing a dolphin-safe catch in the can?

The answer to the first question seems to be yes. The three companies, which control 70 percent of the domestic market, already had been moving for months to lower the amount of tuna they bought that was caught in ways that kill dolphins.

Industry experts are less hopeful that canners can win over new consumers, but at least one tuna executive said that last week's announcement may head off future erosion of the market.

Daniel Sullivan, president of Bumble Bee, said that despite added costs, "I'm concerned we don't generate an entire generation of (children) who would turn away from tuna."

Analysts and company officials say that boycotts of canned tuna, which date as far back as 1976, did not have much financial effect. Per capita tuna consumption in the United States has remained flat in recent years, after some unexceptional growth in the early 1980s, for other reasons. Analysts say that it is a mature market, meaning most households that are going to buy tuna already are doing so.

On the other hand, the companies said that the public pressure from the boycotts and increasing consumer awareness of dolphin kills was a factor in last week's decisions. "I don't think they are doing this to attract a new consumer. I think they are doing it because they feel it's the right thing to do" without significant cost attached to the move, said John M. McMillan, a food industry analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. "And they get rid of a lot of aggravation."

Health groups urge fast-food restaurants to stop using beef fat

By SANDY ROVNER
The Washington Post

What's in a french fry?

For one thing, too much saturated fat, says a coalition of health groups that has appealed to the presidents of McDonald's, Burger King and other fast-food restaurants for fry potatoes in shortening high in beef fat.

Led by the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a non-profit Washington-based consumer group, the coalition, which includes the American Heart Association and the Association of Black Cardiologists, urged the presidents of fast-food chains to offer customers healthier fare that is less likely to clog their arteries.

"As you know," the coalition wrote in its April 11 letter, "a small serving of your french fries contains more beef fat than your regular hamburger."

The letter is unrelated to a recent advertisement that ran in the nation's major newspapers paid for by an Omaha businessman and anti-cholesterol crusader who accused McDonald's for the high fat content of its hamburgers.

A McDonald's spokeswoman said that in response to customers' concerns about diet, the chain already has begun to test-market french fries made in cholesterol-free vegetable oil at 500 outlets around-the-country. Next month, low-fat frozen yogurt will replace McDonald's higher-fat soft ice cream, reducing fat content in that dessert from 5 percent to .5 percent.

A Burger King spokesman said the company uses vegetable oil for everything except its french fries — as does McDonald's — and at this time does not plan to switch. "We have tried doing the potatoes in vegetable oil, and our customers just don't like them as well as those fried in beef tallow," he said.

Michael Jacobson, executive director of CSPI, said he expects the changes by McDonald's, the industry giant, "to have a major impact." "If they start advertising that their french fries are cooked in vegetable oil, the other burger chains will fall in line," he predicted. Otherwise, he said, "what will they do? Advertise 'Our fries are made in beef fat'?"

Jensen

- Continued from Page C1
- CRANBRAN MUFFINS
- 4 eggs
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/2 cup molasses
- 1/2 cup oil
- 1 cup each unprocessed wheat bran and oat bran
- 1 cup each grated carrots, apples, cranberries (if you can't find fresh cranberries, omit this ingredient — canned cranberry jelly does not work) and 1/2 cup mashed potato
- 1/2 cup mashed banana
- 1/2 cup milk or juice (such as: apple, cranberry, pineapple or orange)
- 1/2 whole wheat flour
- 1/2 cup untaoasted wheat germ
- 1 cup processed potato granules — not flakes
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup each raisins and chopped nuts
- 1 cup nuts (optional)
- In a large bowl, beat eggs, add brown sugar, molasses, oil, bran, carrots, apple, potato, cranberries, banana and liquid. Stir well.

In a separate bowl, mix whole wheat flour, wheat germ, potato granules, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Stir in raisins, dates and nuts. Add dry mixture all at once to first mix. Because this makes such a big batch of muffin batter, Jensen uses her mixer on low — just a few turns — to thoroughly mix all ingredients.

Prepare muffin tins with no-stick baking spray. (Paper liners do not work well for this.) Fill each muffin cup 3/4 full. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven for 25 minutes. This makes 30-36 medium size muffins.

These freeze well and contain enough nourishment for a quick breakfast.

"They are not real sweet," she says. "They have a very branny taste to them."

Jensen says when she was a little "spud bug," her father used to take her to auctions, "and oh, how I loved the excitement of all the farmers, their wives and kids gathered for a big sale," she recalls in her book.

"I wanted to grow up to be an auctioneer, but instead I created this spicy soup for my daughter and all these other melodious-voiced, fast-talking colonels who hypnotize their crowds into just one more bid!"

AUCTIONEER'S SPECIAL

- 1 pound hamburger
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 quart spicy tomato juice
- 3 medium potatoes, cubed (she leaves on the peels)
- 2 stalks celery, chopped
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1/2 cup shredded cabbage
- Seasoning salt, to taste
- Pepper, to taste
- Put vegetables in a pot. Add enough water to cover. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer until tender, 10-15 minutes. In the meantime fry hamburger and garlic until crumbled and brown.
- Mix cooked vegetables, browned hamburger and tomato juice together in soup pot. Stir and simmer until flavors blend — about 30 minutes.
- Jensen says she serves this with hot crusty bread (made with potatoes), cheese strips and a fruit plate of whatever is in season.
- "It has a hot, spicy tomato juice flavor," she says. "It's basically a hamburger soup."

fries cooked in 75 percent olestra — the fake-fat under development by Procter & Gamble — have 4.1 grams of fat and 215 calories compared to the 16.3 grams of fat and 325 calories in french fries cooked in oil.

With these decreases, however, comes a concern: Will people compensate for the lower nutrient level of fake-fat foods by eating more? If, for example, french-fry eaters have a biological craving for 16 grams of fat, will they eat another plate of fries to get their fix?

Something like this appears to have happened with artificial sweeteners. Although diet soft drinks have been widely used by consumers looking to cut their sugar and caloric consumption, the best available evidence suggests that consumers have tended to make up the sugar they miss in their drinks from other sources.

The introduction of artificial sweeteners has not cut sugar consumption. In the last 10 years, for example, per capita consumption of fake sugar has tripled while per capita consumption of sugar climbed from 126 pounds to 132.

Only a few studies have been done on fake fat but they show a different pattern. When people are given a meal that contains a lower-than-normal amount of fat — and therefore calories — they do tend to compensate by eating more at the next meal. But they make up only for lost calories.

In other words, a french-fry eater might well eat more than he otherwise would to make up the 110 fewer calories in fake fries. But he wouldn't really have begun to test-market french fries made in cholesterol-free vegetable oil at 500 outlets around-the-country. Next month, low-fat frozen yogurt will replace McDonald's higher-fat soft ice cream, reducing fat content in that into fast-food restaurants?

Some nutritionists think the real danger of fake fat is that it will make it more difficult to persuade people to switch to the food they should be eating.

"People like the quick fix," said Manton Nestle, a nutritionist at New York University. "They think they will be able to eat this kind of (fake fat) food and get away scot-free. But I think a more major change in the way people live is required. What people really need to do is eat more fruits, grains and vegetables and less processed food."

"It's an important point," said Howard Schutz, a professor of consumer sciences at the University of California-Davis. "Obviously if you can pig out on all the forbidden foods you are going to have less room for the foods that are good for you. It's hard to believe that this is going to help the move toward fruits and vegetables."

But Schutz added, "We weren't about to evolve into a country of vegetarians," and other proponents of fat substitutes say that improving what people eat may be a more realistic approach to better nutrition than the difficult task of changing how they eat.

Spring

- Continued from Page C1
- 1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil
- 1 teaspoon dried
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1/2 cup white wine vinegar
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 4 red bell peppers, roasted, peeled and sliced
- 1/2 cups pitted ripe olives
- 6 ounces green beans, steamed
- 6 ounces feta cheese, sliced or cut into chunks
- Combine garlic, basil, salt, pepper and vinegar; whisk in oil. Pour oil mixture over peppers, olives and beans. Marinate at room temperature 2 hours or in refrigerator overnight. Drain vegetables, reserving marinade, and arrange on platter with cheese. Pour marinade over vegetables and cheese.
- Makes 4 to 6 servings.
- Tip: Broil peppers until blistered and charred, turning frequently. Place peppers in paper or plastic bag; close tightly. Let stand 10 to 15 minutes. Peel skins.
- MICROWAVE LEMON-GARLIC TURKEY BREAST
- 1 bone-in-turkey breast half (2 to 2 1/2 lbs.)
- 1 tablespoon garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 small lemon, thinly sliced and seeded
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 1 tablespoon margarine, melted
- 1/2-teaspoons paprika
- Garnish: fresh rosemary and lemon slices
- Starting at narrow end of turkey breast half, gently loosen skin to create a pocket, leaving skin attached at breast bone; set aside. In small bowl combine garlic and salt. Spread mixture under turkey skin. Arrange lemon slices under turkey skin on garlic mixture. In a 2-quart, microwave-safe 11 1/2 x 7 x 2-inch dish, fitted with microwave-safe meat rack, place turkey breast skin side down. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave at MEDIUM (50 percent power), in a 400 to 700 watt microwave oven, 12 to 15 minutes.

In small bowl combine honey, margarine and paprika; set aside. Turn turkey skin side up and spread honey mixture over entire breast. Cover with waxed paper. Microwave at MEDIUM (50 percent power), 12 to 15 minutes or until thermometer registers 170 to 175 degrees.

Makes 4 servings.

CALIFORNIA DATES AND FRESH FRUIT WITH CHOCOLATE FONDUE

- 20 shelled hazelnuts or filberts
- 20 whole dates, pitted
- 4 kiwifruit, pared and sliced
- 1 pint strawberries
- 1 Red-Delicious apple, cored and sliced
- 1/2 cup warm prepared chocolate fudge sauce

Toast hazelnuts at 350 degrees until nuts are golden brown; cool and rub off skin. Place one or two hazelnut halves into each date. Arrange fresh fruits with nut-filled dates on large platter and serve with warm fudge sauce for dipping.

Makes 4 servings.

Optional dipping sauce: In small bowl, combine 8 ounces softened cream cheese, 1/3 cup plain yogurt and 2-tablespoons sugar. Stir until mixture is smooth and creamy.

Makes 1-1/3 cups.

Ragu under fire for claiming sauce is 'fresh'

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
The Washington Post

A new line of pasta sauces in a jar, Ragu Fresh Italian, has drawn the ire of some members of Congress, consumer groups and federal regulatory agencies who say the name of the product may be deceptive.

The Food and Drug Administration this month cited Connecticut-based Ragu Foods Inc. for six violations of federal labeling laws in connection with its new product. In an April 3 letter, Janice F. Oliver, director of FDA's division of regulatory guidance in the Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition, said the term "fresh" is "false and misleading" because the product is made in part from tomato paste and has been heat processed.

FDA prohibits the use of the word "fresh" to describe foods that have been subject to any form of chemical or heat processing. Ragu says the company uses crushed tomatoes, which are heated, combined with tomato paste and spices, poured into jars and then sterilized at a temperature of 205 degrees Fahrenheit.

Ragu Foods Inc. spokeswoman Eileen Sharkey acknowledges that its sauce is heat processed but denies that the label is misleading. Sharkey said the term "fresh" is part of its trade name, which the company believes exempts it from the federal government's policy regarding heat-processed foods. "We are selling Ragu Fresh Italian pasta sauce," she said, "not Ragu Fresh Pasta Sauce."

What's more, Sharkey said, the product is made by a process that exposes the sauce to less heat for a shorter time. Unlike other commercial sauces, she said, the product has twice as many fresh crushed tomatoes as tomato paste. "It maintains more of a fresh-tomato flavor," she said. Sharkey said the firm stands by its labeling and expects to respond to the FDA later this week.

FDA also cited Ragu for its use of the term "Italian." That, the agency said, "may falsely imply geographical origin." FDA policy states that any food that claims to be "Italian" must be made in Italy; otherwise, it must be called "Italian-style." Sharkey said the word "Italian" is part of the product's trade name.

Other violations cited by the FDA relate to the way certain ingredients are listed on the label. FDA's letter to Ragu comes after a series of congressional, state regulatory, consumer and industry complaints about the product, specifically about the company's use of the term "fresh."

Two months ago, Reps. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., and Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., wrote to James Benson, acting commissioner of the FDA, urging the agency "to take prompt action to assure that consumers are not misled by use of the term 'fresh.'"

Competitors protested the label, because they said they believed it gave Ragu an unfair advantage in appealing to customers. "The regulation at the FDA says you can't put 'fresh' on a product that's been processed. We abide by those rules," said David Hackney, spokesman for Campbell Soup Co., maker of Prego spaghetti sauces.

And some consumer groups said they thought the label was confusing to buyers. "The product is not necessarily nutritionally inferior" to other commercial sauces, said Linda Goldner, executive director of the National Consumers League, a non-profit organization. "But we don't want people to think it's nutritionally superior."

Easter's logical successor: Egg salad week

What's the logical successor to Easter? Egg Salad Week, dedicated to the dozens of uses for after-Easter hard-cooked eggs.

You should plan not to eat cracked eggs or eggs which have been out of refrigeration for more than 2 to 6 hours. So, if you are planning to use colored eggs as decoration for a centerpiece, where the eggs will be out of refrigeration for many hours or several days, you should prepare extra eggs and simply discard them after they have served their purpose. Eggs which have been refrigerated as much as possible throughout the process should be used within a week.

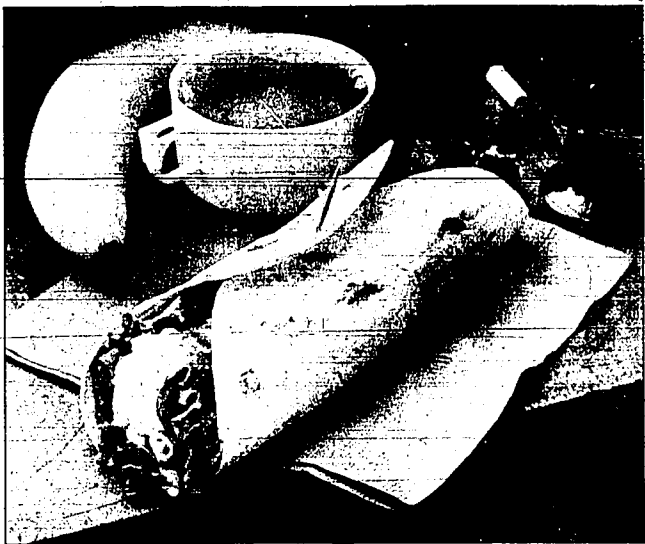

Egg salad is probably the most popular use for post-Easter eggs and lends itself to almost unlimited possibilities. Have you ever considered these options? Instead of mayonnaise, moisten with bottled salad dressing, sour cream, yogurt, pureed cottage cheese or softened cream cheese thinned with milk. Season with most any herb or spice from your cupboard. Then, spread on bagels, rolls, crackers, English muffins, tortillas or even waffles!

Get crazy and stir in apples or avocados, chili peppers or cheese, pickles or pimiento, water chestnuts or watercress. Scoop egg salad into pineapple boats or praty shell, baked potatoes or pizza pockets, tomato cups or large pasta shells. Fold in cooked pasta, diced potatoes or rice to make a main-dish salad or hot casserole.

Devised eggs are another age-old use for hard-cooked eggs: Here's how to make them with no muss, no fuss, no bowl and no spoon! Simply cut eggs in half and place the yolks into a sealable, plastic food storage bag. Add mayonnaise, seasonings, and any other ingredients you choose to use. Seal the bag and knead until the mixture is well blended. Then, cut off one corner of the bag and squeeze the yolk mixture back into the egg white halves. Discard the bag and your "clean-up" is done! Some inventive cooks place deviled eggs atop cooked noodles or rice and top with sauce for a quick and delicious main dish.

So, you see, your cache of decorated hard-cooked eggs doesn't have to end up in sandwich after sandwich. Let them do double duty, use your imagination and make your egg salad anything you want it to be.

Spread it... wrap it... roll it... and eat it... it's egg salad, and Egg Salad Roll-Ups are a fun alternative to the traditional post-Easter sandwich. Start with a soft flour tortilla and line it with lettuce leaves and ready-to-eat beef slices. Top with tangy egg salad (or your own favorite egg-salad blend) and you're ready to roll. The result is an eat-out-of-hand sandwich that tastes great and is next to eat. If you like, wrap in plastic wrap or aluminum foil to pack for lunch. (Be sure to include a frozen ice or coolant pack to keep the sandwich cool if refrigerator storage is not available.)

Best of all, eggs make a nutritious sandwich filler. Each large egg provides 15 percent of the U.S. RDA for protein plus 13 vitamins and many well combined minerals. (For safety's sake, hard-cooked eggs should not be eaten if out of refrigeration more than 2 to 6 hours or if they are cracked.)

- 4 Servings
- 1/3 cup reduced-calorie mayonnaise
- 1/4 cup sliced green onions with tops
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon liquid hot pepper seasoning
- 4 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- leaf lettuce leaves
- 1 package (2.5 oz.) ready-to-eat smoked beef water

In small bowl, stir together mayonnaise, onions, mustard and seasoning until well blended. Stir in eggs until cooled.

For each roll-up: Line one tortilla with lettuce leaves and 1/4 of the beef slices. Spread with 1/4 of the egg salad mixture. Fold in side edges and roll up. Moisten top edge with water to seal. Serve immediately or wrap tightly in plastic wrap and chill until serving.

To hard cook, place eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add enough tap-water to come at least 1 inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand covered, in the hot water about 15 to 17 minutes for large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about 3 minutes for each size larger or smaller.) Immediately run cold water over eggs or place them in water until completely cooled. To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll egg between hands to loosen shell, then peel, starting at large end. Hold egg under running cold water or dip in bowl of water to help ease off shell.

Yogurt a key to slim, satisfying soups

Hot soups, clear soups, cold soups, thick soups. Nothing continues to charm our senses like a good homemade soup. A big, deep bowl can warm our hearts, stimulate our palates, satisfy our appetites.

An infinite number of recipes exist, enough to keep us in soup for fifty years to come. But some of the best call for heavy cream, an ingredient that allegedly can narrow our arteries while widening our waists. The trick to preparing these creamy, delicious soups is simple: substitute yogurt, which can easily replace cream in any hot or cold soup recipe with the same — if you get the results.

Yogurt reduces calories substantially and accentuates flavor, adding a subtle tartness which enhances the taste of the soup's ingredients. When introducing yogurt into hot liquids, lower the temperature of the liquid and add yogurt gradually, stirring after each addition to avoid curdling.

A stabilizer like flour or cornstarch helps, too. As a rule of thumb, use two tablespoons flour or one tablespoon cornstarch per one cup of yogurt. If curdling occurs after following this recommended technique, strain the soup through a strainer just before serving.

One unusually delicious soup that can be served hot or cold is Nectarine and Yogurt Potage, which blends nectarines (or peaches), cilantro and black pepper. The recipe calls for fresh fruit; however, canned fruit packed in natural juices can be substituted with equally wonderful results. The fruit is chopped finely and simmered with cinnamon, lemon and wine to impart flavor, and either ladled into soup bowls or allowed to cool. A generous swirl of yogurt is added to each serving, and topped with chopped fresh cilantro and black pepper. Serve for lunch or as a prelude to dinner.

Unlike the contemporary pairing of fruit, cilantro and black pepper, the three ingredients in Chilled Minted Cucumber Yogurt Soup enjoy a centuries-old relationship. Yogurt has always played a prominent role in the Indian vegetarian diet because of the benefits of its active cultures.

Mint, cucumber and yogurt are traditionally blended together and served as a cooling balance to the standard hot and spicy Indian menu. Following in that Eastern tradition, Chilled Minted Cucumber Yogurt Soup combines soothing refreshment of yogurt, mint and cucumbers with onion, garlic, and a pinch of red pepper that just enough zest and liveliness.

NECTARINE AND YOGURT POTAGE

- 4 large ripe nectarines or peaches (1½ pounds)
- ½ cup water
- ½ cup dry white wine
- 3 tablespoons granulated sugar

- ¼ teaspoon lemon peel
- ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1½ cups plain, nonfat or lowfat yogurt

freshly ground pepper

To peel nectarines, bring a medium-size saucepan of water to a boil. Add nectarines, one at a time, and boil 1 minute, turning several times. With a slotted spoon, lift out of saucepan and put in a bowl of cold water. When fruit is cool, slip off skins. Cut fruit off pit and chop finely (you should have about 4 cups). Put nectarines, water, wine, sugar, lemon peel and cinnamon in a heavy medium-size nonaluminum saucepan and stir to mix. Bring to a boil over high heat. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 5 minutes, until nectarines are very tender. Remove from heat and ladle into 4 soup plates or bowls. Top each serving with a generous swirl of yogurt, sprinkle with cilantro and grind a little fresh pepper over each.

Makes 4½ cups soup; 4 servings.

CHILLED MINTED CUCUMBER YOGURT SOUP

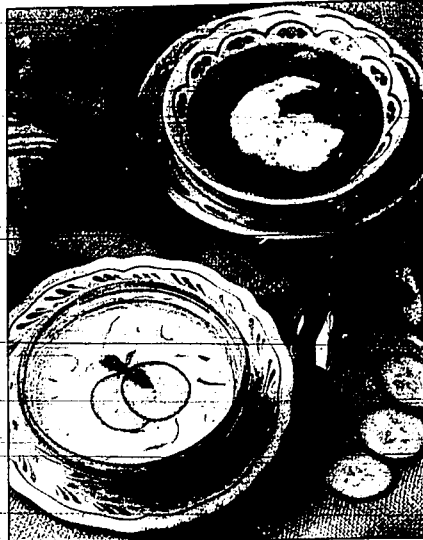

- 2 medium cucumbers
- ¼ small onion, cut in 2 pieces
- 1 medium-size garlic clove
- 2 cups plain nonfat or lowfat yogurt
- 3 tablespoons thinly sliced fresh mint leaves
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
- pinch ground red pepper
- 4 thin cucumber slices for garnish

Peel cucumbers and halve lengthwise. Scoop out seeds with a teaspoon and discard. Cut cucumbers in chunks. Put cucumbers, onion and garlic in a food processor. Process until pureed. Add half the yogurt and process until fairly smooth. Scrape into medium-size bowl or soup tureen. Stir in remaining yogurt, mint, salt, pepper and ground red pepper. Chill at least 2 hours before serving. To serve, ladle into 4 soup bowls and garnish each with a cucumber slice.

Makes 3½ cups; 4 servings.

Soak up some helpful hints on marinating

By GERRALD ETTER
Knight-Ridder-News-Service

Numerous recipes call for marinating foods before they go under the broiler or on top of the grill. Marinating is nothing more than soaking food in a specially prepared liquid, seasoned with spices, herbs and other flavorings.

This liquid is the marinade. The word marinade comes from the Spanish marinar, which means to pickle in brine.

There are three reasons to marinate food — for flavor, moistness and tenderness. Once you understand the process, it's easy to assemble a marinade to match the food.

A marinade has three components — an acidic liquid, oil and seasonings.

For the acidic ingredient, citrus juices, vinegar, wine or soy sauce are fine. Olive, peanut and sesame oil, among others, are frequently used in marinades. Seasonings include herbs, spices, honey, mustard and any number of flavoring agents.

The acidic portion of the marinade acts as the tenderizer, the oil is the moisturizer, and the seasonings play the role of flavor enhancer.

Before concocting a marinade, consider two key questions: What are you cooking, and how will it be prepared? Is it fish on the grill, or chicken in the oven? Understanding the properties of your food is also important in assembling the marinade.

If a typically tough cut of meat, such as London broil from the flank, is being prepared on the grill, use a high-acid marinade: a 2-to-1 ratio of acidic liquid to oil would be sufficient. For example, two tablespoons of soy sauce to one tablespoon of olive oil.

When grilling fish, which is vulnerable to drying out and where the primary need is flavor, it's best to use the opposite ratio, that is, twice as much oil.

Chicken parts differ in their tendency to become dry. The breast meat is very lean and will dry out more quickly than the whole legs. So if you're using just the breasts, go heavier on the oil portion of the marinade. If you're using the whole chicken, parts, use acidic liquid and oil would be fine.

Flavorings are more the cook's choice. Consider the flavors inherent in the marinade's ingredients and pick flavorings that complement them. Ginger, soy sauce and sesame oil combine to form a marinade with Asian flavors. Garlic, balsamic vinegar and olive oil make a basic Mediterranean marinade.

Foods should be marinated in the refrigerator for anywhere from several hours to overnight, depending on how tough or tender they are.

Most cookbooks recommend bringing foods back to room temperature before cooking them. Another tip is to save the marinade and to use it to baste the food while it cooks.

Here is a recipe from "The New Basics Cookbook" (Workman Publishing) for a mixed grill of London broil and hot Italian sausage:

GRILLED MIXED GRILL

- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
- 1 tablespoon sliced lemon zest
- 2 teaspoons sesame oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced

1. teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper

- 1 teaspoon brown sugar
- 1 flank steak, about 1½ pounds
- 2 pounds hot Italian sausage, in 2 coils

Olive oil

In a shallow bowl large enough to hold the steak, make a marinade by stirring together the soy sauce, ginger, zest, sesame oil, garlic, pepper and sugar. Add the steak, and turn it in the marinade; rub the marinade into the surface. Cover loosely, and refrigerate overnight.

Pierce each sausage coil with two skewers at right angles, to hold the shape and facilitate turning. Brush the sausages well with olive oil.

Grill the sausages over high heat until cooked through and lightly charred, about seven minutes per side. Set aside, loosely covered with aluminum foil.

Remove the steak from the marinade and grill it over high heat, four to five minutes per side. Slice the steak thinly on the diagonal, and cut the sausages into large chunks. Serve immediately. Makes six servings.

Adjusting to braces tough to swallow

By CAROL TEEGARDIN
Knight-Ridder News Service

Hey, tinsel teeth! There's a mouthful of reasons to wear those braces. Sure, you're going to have a sensational smile and swell, right?

Unfortunately, in the meantime, you have to feast amid a fence of bands and brackets, which means no Fritos, Doritos, Chee-tos, corn-on-the-cob, pizza crust, hard taco shells, apples-on-the-core or ice cubes. You can't crack peanuts or pistachio shells with your clompers.

If you tear into anything hard or sticky you'll loosen the works, so forget taffy, raisins, licorice, caramels, Tootsie Roll Pops, chewing gum and jaw breakers. If you have to have popcorn, you can only munch a few kernels at a time. And cross off fried chicken, because it tends to get stuck.

If you're depressed, try to remember that you're not alone. About 1.2 million people begin orthodontic treatment each year in this country. About 73 percent are under age 18, according to the American Association of Orthodontists in St. Louis. Most eventually learn to adjust to the dining dilemma.

Except for Melissa Talaski, 12, of Bad Axe, Mich.

"I hate them," she moans. "Sometimes you just don't know what to eat and boys call you 'brace-face.' I love apples and popcorn but they get stuck in my brackets. My gums cut open when I eat certain things like hard candy. I can eat lots of ice cream, soft chocolate and the cookies my mom makes, but it's still not fun and I have to wear these for three more years!"

Her father, Roger Talaski, encourages her to grin and bear it.

"We don't cook special meals or buy special food," he says. "She's gotta bear with it and I just hope it's worth it for as much money as I have spent on it."

Sorja Hanna, 11, of Warren, Mich., who just had her braces removed, learned that planning before eating works wonders. "I cut carrot sticks into circles and that was fine. You just can't bite right into anything — that's all. I like gum but you just can't eat it with braces on. That was the main thing that bothered me."

Melissa Manley, 12, of Woodhaven, Mich., who has had braces for a year, avoids big food hassles by choosing kinder, gentler foods. "It was hard getting used to them because you're not used to having stuff on your teeth, so I ate soft foods like spaghetti, yogurt, pudding and soups. Now, I can eat anything I want if I cut it up small."

Dr. John Marx, a Madison Heights, Mich., orthodontist, handed out a pamphlet to his patients, "Tasty Tips For Tender Teeth," on how to eat with braces. He also includes a collection of recipes concocted by some of his patients that are either in braces or retainers.

"We instruct people to do things like cut fruit and vegetables into bite-size slices, make a milkshake using meat and the bones. At times it may seem a bother to cut up something or put it in the blender, but a little thought, a little time and good eating habits can be maintained through this period.

"This is where creative cookery comes in," adds Marx. "We have one recipe where you cut a grilled cheese sandwich into squares, spear the squares with a fork and then dunk them in cold milk."

For some people, learning to live with braces is no big deal. Lisa Ross, 38, of Birmingham, says she has always wanted straight teeth. She just got braces, and is willing to accept a bit of sacrifice: "You just don't order a triple-decker sandwich in a restaurant and you don't eat pretzels whole — you break them up. But, I have no problem with ice cream. I definitely have no problem with ice cream," she laughs.

Foods that are difficult to eat while wearing braces:

- Pumpkin seeds, pistachios and most other nuts
- Taffy, hard candy, chocolate candy with nuts or caramels
- Gum (not even Freedem)
- Popcorn (unpopped kernels can bend wires)
- Crunchy ice cream bars on a stick
- Salads, unless vegetables and lettuce are chopped finely
- Any fruit with a pit or core, unless the pit is taken out first and fruit is cut in chunks
- Steak, fried chicken, beef strips or any other meat that you must tear with your teeth
- Breads, rolls or cookies with seeds, nuts or raisins
- Big sandwiches and hamburgers
- Chunks of hard cheese, bologna, salami or anything chewy.

The following foods are fine to eat with braces and retainers:

- Chip dips on bread instead of on chips
- Soft candy like Reese's Peanut Butter Cups, a Mounds bar or Hershey bar without the nuts
- Non-candy sweets such as cakes, brownies, pies, doughnuts, Twinkies
- Ice cream (plain), ice cream sandwiches or yogurt
- Bagels, if torn into bite-size pieces
- Soft shelled tacos and pizza minus the crust
- Creamy peanut butter
- Milk, cottage cheese, hot chocolate
- Custard, gelatin desserts, puddings, hot bouillon with melted cheese
- Meat, chicken, pork chops if cooked in a sauce or casserole
- Mashed potatoes
- Sloppy joes
- Scrambled eggs

Recipes compiled to help feed tinsel teeth

By Knight-Ridder News Service

Here are recipes compiled from the patients of Dr. John Marx, a Madison Heights, Mich., orthodontist. There are peanut butter balls (with smooth peanut butter), a spaghetti casserole, and saucy mushroom-covered pork chops topped with mashed potatoes.

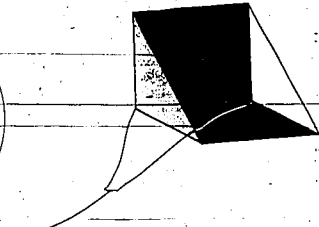

SPAGHETTI CASSEROLE
4 or 5 slices bread
2 to 3 tablespoons butter

1 pound leftover spaghetti garlic powder to taste
28 ounces spaghetti sauce
2 to 3 cups shredded mozzarella or Colby cheese Preheat oven to 350. Butter bread on one side and sprinkle with garlic powder. Place bread upside down in a 13-by-9-inch casserole dish. Layer spaghetti, spaghetti sauce and cheese. Put in oven and bake for 30 minutes or until cheese has melted. Remove from oven, let stand for 5 minutes. Cut in squares and serve it like lasagna. Serves 6 to 8.

SAUCY MUSHROOM PORK CHOPS
2 10-ounce cans cream of mushroom soup
6 to 8 pork chops, 1½ to 2 pounds, fat trimmed
2 to 4 cups mashed potatoes, optional
Preheat oven to 375. Place pork chops in a 9-by-13-ounce pan and cover with soup. Cover pan with foil and bake for 45 minutes. Serve with mashed potatoes, if desired, and gravy from the pan. Serves 4 to 6.

PEANUT BUTTER BALLS
2 cups powdered milk
2/3 cup honey
1 1/2 cups smooth peanut butter
In a medium bowl, blend milk and honey, using a wooden spoon. Gradually stir in peanut butter until it is evenly mixed. Cut dough into thirds, from each third roll 1-inch balls. Yields 3 dozen.

GO FLY A KITE!

Celebrate Earth Day SUNDAY, APRIL 22

The Times-News Kite Fly-In and Jamboree...

(vacant field west of C.S.I. Tower) at C.S.I. from 1:00 to 3:00 p.m. Sunday, April 22.

PRIZES & REFRESHMENTS

ATTENTION!!! TEACHERS ... SCHOOL CHILDREN!

Make this one of your outstanding projects of the year and have fun at the same time. We're celebrating Earth Day and National Science & Technology week with a Kite Flying Contest. You're invited to be a part of this important time.

A good planet is hard to find. At some point in the next century, our earth's population will have doubled. Even now we are polluting and depleting its resources at an unprecedented rate. This week is dedicated to encouraging everyone to think about the individual decisions that must be made to save our planet. THINK GLOBALLY...ACT LOCALLY! THERE ARE NO OFFICIAL ENTRY

BLANKS ... ONLY ONE RULE. Just bring a kite made from The Times-News issue of Saturday, April 14th ... and show up for the fly-in on Sunday, April 22nd. For your convenience ... here's some simple directions on building a kite from an old newspaper. You are not required to stay with this design - but if it will help - you are welcome to use this method of building your kite.

Newspaper Kite Instructions

INSTRUCTIONS:

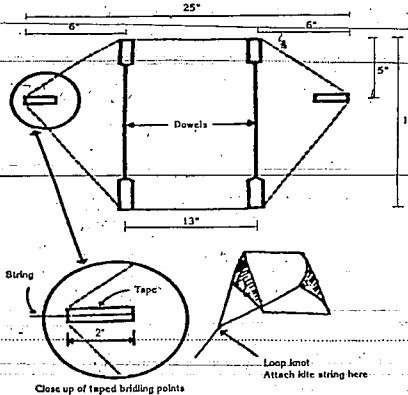

Gather all of the needed materials. Make a pattern for the kite from the illustration. Cut out the kite. To strengthen the edges of the kite, reinforce them with a binding of tape. Cut six 3"x1.5" bridling points from paper or plastic remnants. (This is where the dowels or string will be attached.)

If you want to decorate the kite, do so now. Turn your kite face down. Place four pieces of 2" tape at the four corners where the dowels will be secured. Place the dowels over the tape, secure with four of the bridling attachments and securely tape the strips of paper in place, making certain that the tips of the dowels also are taped in place.

The remaining two bridling points will hold the string. Cut two 18" lengths. For extra strength, sew the string through the bridling pieces with a darning needle, then tape in place. Attach as shown in the illustration.

In order to balance the kite, you need to locate the center of the bridle. To do this, hold the two strings, letting the kite dangle. Tie them at the point where the kite is level, using a loop knot. Attach the main kite string at this point, also. To fly the kite, place it face down on the ground and step back about 15 yards. Now you can run like crazy, but all you really need to do is jerk the line gently and the kite should rise. At this point, you may want to step into a slow slide. The rest is a breeze. Enjoy.

Kite instructions provided by Barbara Anne O'Neil, Seattle Times

MATERIALS:

- One full center-(double) sheet of the April 14th, Times-News
- Two 1/8"x16" dowels
- A roll of masking tape
- A roll of 8-lb. cotton line and a kite spool
- Scissors, Magic markers, yardstick, darning needle, and a smooth cutting surface.

Twin Falls County Farmers are invited to run for County Committee.

Twin Falls, 4-10-90 — Eligible farmers in Twin Falls County are invited to become nominees for the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) County Committee, FmHA County Supervisor, Melvin S. Weil announced today.

Generally, farmers who are residents of the county are eligible to become nominees for the FmHA County Committee. Regulations approved in 1988 allow that a farmer eligible for an FmHA loan is eligible to serve on the Committee so long as no more than one such individual serves at the same time.

"Farmers in this county, serving on the committee, play an important role by assisting in the process of loan applications and reviews," said Melvin S. Weil.

For this election one member will be elected for a term of three years. Nominating petitions must be returned to the FmHA Twin Falls County Office by May 30, 1990.

Additional information and application forms for those who are interested in becoming nominees for the County Committee are available at the FmHA County Office, 693 Filer Avenue, or by calling 733-8891.

Letters of thanks

Friends of elementary school thanked for help

Dear Friends of Central Elementary:

I would like to thank all the parents, students, teachers and friends and Paul's Market, IGA and the March of Dimes for all their support in the Campbell's Soup Label contest. It was a great success!

We were able to purchase enough gym balls for each class and basketballs, softballs and footballs for the school to share and enjoy. Thanks for all your help!

Congratulations to our class winners: fourth grade, Mr. Pearson; fifth grade, Mrs. Chojnicky and Mrs. Rupert; sixth grade, Mrs. Newman.

Thanks again,
RAYLENE PARKER
 Campbell's Soup Coordinator

 Jerome

Mike Baughman, Magic Valley Distributing and The Times-News made special donations.

Thank you to Dwayne's Market, Wood's, Farmer Jack, Anderson's IGA, Dwayne's and Albertson's for the special bonus certificates.

A very special thanks goes to Green Giant and the Castleford School Board for believing in our cause. We love the IBM computer and find it most helpful in our learning.

We ended up with 35,000 Campbell's labels. We ordered 12 software programs.

Next year, we will participate in this program again and would appreciate any Campbell's labels once more.

Humane Society thanks many for benefit dinner

People for Pets Humane Society would like to send a special thanks to the following people for the part they played in making the Operation SPOT pet adoption benefit dinner at A'romas such a great success.

This fund helps many homeless pets have a second chance at life. Peter, Matt, Raleigh, Haynes, KMYT, Willey Dodds and The Times-News were very helpful in advertising this event. Sarah Harris, Cathy Trotter and Pegan Venzon helped with a very successful raffle. Many very gracious businesses from around the valley helped to raise funds for this adoption program. The Humane Society is grateful to all those who had a part in the dinner.

We would also like to especially thank Mark and Dawn Makin for the delicious food that A'roma served and the Humane Society members who served as waitresses. Last but not least, thanks to those people who purchased tickets helped to make a big difference for the homeless pets in our community.

Thanks to all supporters of kids in Spell A Thon

Our special thanks to all of you who generously supported our boys and girls in the recent Spell A Thon. Approximately $3800 was collected. A portion of this money will be used to purchase a printer for our new IBM computers, as well as a variety of supplies to enhance the effectiveness of the computers.

Thanks to the Armando Quintana family for the donation of a Commodore computer, color monitor, printer, disk drive and assorted supplies! These will be placed in our computer lab at once.

Dr. Sugden and Dr. Irwin recently donated several hours to help sixth-grade students understand the graining-up process. A thank you to each of you.

Chamber of Commerce sponsors girls' pageant for Wendell Dairy Day

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - To celebrate Dairy Day on June 23, the Wendell Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a girls' pageant with a new twist.

The girls will visit dairy operations and answer dairy-related questions in the contest, chamber President Bob Burks said.

This is not a "beauty contest," Burks said. "There's no swimsuit or talent competitions. We're looking for personality, speaking ability, career-type girls who would be good saleswomen for the dairy industry."

Other judged areas include appearance (gown, grooming, poise, carriage and posture), personality, "inner beauty" (goals, philosophy, maturity and grace), scholastic and community involvement or achievements, and work performed in jobs, charity or church.

The Magic Valley Dairy Days Princess Pageant winner will receive a $2,000 savings bond. First runner-up will win a $1,000 bond and a section of other prizes will be awarded.

Entry deadline, originally set for Monday, has been extended with a new deadline to be announced.

Applicants must be single, without children, age 16 by June 23 but not older than 18.

Each contestant should try to obtain a sponsor to contribute a $100 contestant fee. However, Burks said, if a girl cannot find a sponsor, one will be provided.

Pageant organizer Pat Goedhart said the pageant is intended to benefit the contestants by teaching them self-presentation.

Judging will be based on each contestant's impromptu response to questions regarding the dairy industry and products, as well as on the Magic Valley, the Idaho centennial and the United States.

Contestants will also be asked to deliver a three- to five-minute speech on a topic related to this contest and attend about 12 hours of training classes on hair, makeup, dress and poise.

Soroptimist International honors 3 local women

TWIN FALLS - Soroptimist International has presented a $250 scholarship to a Twin Falls mother and honored two other women for their outstanding service to the community.

Daniene Lierman received the Soroptimist Training Award, designed to aid a mature woman in completing an undergraduate program or vocational or technical training.

As the local award recipient, Lierman is eligible to compete for one of two regional $1,500 awards. Lierman, a single parent with four children, is pursuing a nursing degree at CSI.

Janis Quinn was awarded the Women Helping Women certificate of honor for her efforts to aid abused women, and Betty Dameron was awarded the Women of Distinction certificate of honor for her efforts in social and community development. The Soroptimists will contribute $25 in each woman's name to community organizations of their choice.

Quinn, currently director of Volunteers Against Violence, joined the organization five years ago as a crisis-line volunteer. She has also trained other volunteers and presented workshops on sexual assault and domestic violence.

Since funding to Volunteers Against Violence has been cut, Lierman and one other employee do the work previously carried out by five people, and her typical workday runs from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Dameron has volunteered for numerous community organizations including the Salvation Army, Magic Valley Alcohol Rehabilitation Center (now Port of Hope), Volunteers in Corrections of the Fifth Judicial District, Red Cross, United Way and the Chamber of Commerce Visitors Center. She's also privately volunteered aid to many Juvals.

Committee working on 2nd volume of historical book

GOODING - The Gooding County History Book Committee is busy finalizing the details of the second volume, "A Pictorial History of Gooding County."

This book will contain never-before-published pictures depicting the lifestyle of generations past and present. The emphasis is being placed on people, places, buildings, scenes or any other aspect of early country life.

If you have photos you are willing to contribute to this book, please contact a member of the book committee in your area or call Alberta Butler at 934-5322 before April 30. Special memorial or tribute pages are also available on a limited basis. This pictorial book may be ordered for a pre-publication price of $25 plus tax and postage where applicable from any committee member.

Copies of Volume I are on sale at Dwain Butlers in Gooding, from Emma Coleman or Berdell Lesneski in Wendell or in Bliss from Helen Bray or Helen Butler.

Size a problem for woman of short stature

DEAR ABBY: I've been thinking about that letter from "Big and Battered" - the extra-large woman who recited the trials and tribulations of being big. She said, "Petite women are given more courtesy and consideration." Well, that ain't necessarily so.

I happen to be 4 feet 10 inches, 21 years old and petite. And I've had my share of insults. I've been accused (at my age) of trying to get into R-rated movies while being underage. When I go to a bar, I have to bring two IDs to convince them that I'm actually 21. Also, taller people pat me on the head, and I don't know whether to bark like a dog or cry like a baby.

Some people assume I'm empty-headed because I look like a Kewpie doll. And when some nice person patronizes me with "good things come in small packages," there's always some wise guy who adds, "So does poison." I hear there's a club for little people. Will you please print the address?

ITTY-BITTY-BETTY IN BOISE

DEAR BETTY: Actually it's an organization. Those interested in learning more about this well-established national organization may write to the Billy Barty Foundation for Little People Inc., 4007 W. Magnolia Blvd., Burbank, CA 91505. Please enclose a long (business-size), self-addressed, stamped envelope, and Mr. Barty will put you in touch with the chapter in your area. Don't delay - the national convention will be July 20-28 in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: A few years back, you published a letter in which a reader told you off, saying that God alone was the only truly qualified "family planner."

I clipped it out to save and now I can't find it. If you recall that letter, will you please run it again? I thought your answer was one of your best.

RUTH C. IN LA JOLLA

DEAR RUTH: I found it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: Since God alone can create life and since God alone knows what tomorrow brings, HE alone is truly qualified as a family planner.

How did a smart girl like you ever get taken in by Planned Parenthood?

A LONGTIME ADMIRER

DEAR ADMIRER: I read the figures on population explosion, and saw the pictures of thousands of starving children born of parents who did not want them and could not feed them. I then concluded that a just God could not possibly have given life to innocent children only to doom them to death by starvation in their infancy.

DEAR ABBY: A while back I read about the woman who will be 57 years old when she graduates from college. I know someone who can top that.

In my class at law school in Tacoma is a wonderful man, Dixon McDonald, who works as a hospital administrator during the day and attends Puget Sound Law School from 6 to 10 p.m. four nights a week. Dixon will be past 70 when he becomes a practicing lawyer. His daughter, Kimberley, is a lawyer in Seattle, and his goal is to practice law with her. Their shingle will read: "McDonald and Father." My hat is off to him!

Hardy vegetables prefer cool growing temperatures of spring

Hardy vegetables such as lettuce, peas and carrots can be planted several weeks earlier than tender ones like tomatoes and squash.

They prefer the cool growing temperatures of spring and early summer. Hardy vegetables can also withstand considerable frost, often down to 20 degrees of lower, so late April and early May are safe times to plant them.

For leafy, root and flower bud vegetables are hardy. Although potatoes are not hardy, it requires two weeks of more for them to come up, so they are usually planted earlier than most tender vegetables.

Almost all fruiting vegetables except peas and fava beans are tender and usually should not be planted before late May or early June. Peas are best planted early.

Corn is a little more cold tolerant than most other fruiting vegetables. I usually plant corn about two weeks ahead of more tender vegetables like beans and squash.

Soil temperature is as important as air temperature in planting vegetables. Lettuce and spinach seed will

Adding insulation can be as effective as replacing it

Q: I'm planning to replace the insulation on the floor of our unheated attic to improve the energy efficiency of our house. The insulation, between the floor joists, is faced on one side and is the rolled-blanket type. I'm thinking of replacing it with blown-in insulation. What are the advantages of each type—and which is the most effective? — R. Henry.

A: Simply adding to the insulation might be just as effective, cost less and save a lot of work.

Removing the insulation is probably justified or necessary if it is wet or compressed, either of which greatly reduces the effectiveness. Also, if the vapor barrier or facing has holes or tears that reduce its ability to stop migration of moisture, the facing should be repaired, a new vapor barrier should be installed (polyethylene plastic sheeting will do), or the insulation should be replaced. The vapor barrier should be installed on top against the ceiling of the heated area.

Unfaced fiberglass or mineral wool insulation of the roll or batt type can be placed directly on top of the existing material (don't add another vapor barrier by using faced insulation) — the attic or crawl space is not used for storage, and there is good access to corners, eaves and so forth, one good system is to install new blankets on top of the joists and at right angles to existing insulation. Blown or poured insulation also can be installed on top of insulation.

Roll or batt insulation and insulation designed to be blown or poured often are basically the same type of material — fiberglass or mineral wool — although there are some variations. Both types generally have an R value or insulating effectiveness of about 3 per inch. The R value (the higher the number, the better) should be clearly indicated on the product or package. In much of the northern United States, R-30 is considered good level of attic insulation and R-38 ideal, though it sometimes is difficult to reach those levels in existing homes, and lesser amounts often are adequate.

Among the advantages of blowing or pouring insulation are that it can be installed in areas that are difficult to reach and have a natural ability to fill gaps. Roll or batt insulation is easy and convenient to install, can be bought with the facing or vapor barrier attached, and has a constant thickness or insulating ability.

Q: There are a number of ugly rust stains on the concrete near our house. How can I remove them? — K. Tilley.

A: Special products for cleaning rust stains from concrete are available, but sometimes difficult to find. Brand names include Rust-X, Drive-away and Iron Ike. A hardware store or home center near you might stock one of these products or a similar cleaner.

A widely recommended homemade cleaning solution for rust on concrete can be made by slowly adding one pound of oxalic acid to a gallon of water. Caution: Adding the water to the acid can cause dangerous splashing. Oxalic acid, a bleaching ingredient, can be bought at some paint and hardware stores.

The acid should be used with care, wear goggles and rubber gloves and boots and observe all cautions on the container. Apply the solution to the spots with an old mop or rags attached to a handle, and discard the mop after use. Wait two or three hours and rinse while scrubbing the spots with a stiff-bristled, non-metallic brush. A second application of the solution might be necessary.

Allen Wilson Gardening

germinate at the coldest temperature, only a few degrees above freezing. Root vegetables such as radish, turnip, onion and carrot will germinate when temperatures reach about 45 degrees.

The cabbage family vegetables such as broccoli, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, kohlrabi, mustard and kale will also germinate at 45 degrees. Although cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower are usually grown from transplants, they are quite easy to grow from seed.

Sometimes plant seed and plants at the same time. Those planted from seed are ready about a month after those which are transplanted.

Onions are one of the easiest vegetables to grow in the Intermountain area. They can be started early from sets, seed or transplants. Extra large varieties such as Walla Walla should be grown from transplants because they need a long growing season.

Some of the new early hybrids such as Buffalo, Norstar and Tarmagon can be seeded directly outside. They will mature as early or earlier than sets and are of superior quality to set grown varieties.

Perennial vegetables such as asparagus, rhubarb and horseradish should also be planted early. I check the soil temperature with the bulb of a thermometer pushed about an inch into tilled soil. When the temperature reaches 50 degrees, I make my first planting of early sweet corn.

Sometimes help the soil warm up faster by applying a 3-foot-wide strip of black plastic over premarked corn rows in late April. The black plastic warms the soil enough so that seed can be planted through holes about a foot apart two or three weeks earlier than normal.

Plants are sometimes nipped by frost, but when the weather cooperates you can harvest corn a week or two earlier than normal.

I have a 12-page leaflet with planting times and methods for all the major vegetables. It also contains information on how to use black plastic and row covers to speed vegetable growth. For a copy, send $1.00 and a stamped self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 343, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for vegetable guide.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices were mixed on Wall Street Tuesday after a double dose of bad economic news...

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues... Both reports punctured hopes that the Federal Reserve might nudge interest rates lower.

Higher log prices cut Boise Cascade profits

BOISE (AP) — Weak demand for paper products coupled with higher prices for logs and wood chips sent Boise Cascade Corp. first-quarter profits plunging.

The work backlog on March 31 was $2.6 billion, up slightly from the level reported at the end of 1989.

The Boise-based wood-products company announced Monday that first-quarter earnings totaled $33.6 million, off dramatically from the $78.2 million reported during the record January-March quarter a year ago.

The bright spot for the company was its office products segment that reported record sales and operating income in the first quarter.

Sales were off fractionally to remain over $1 billion in the first quarter, and per-share profits sunk from $1.78 for the first three months of 1989 to 73 cents this past winter.

Fery said sluggish demand for most paper grades manufactured by the company along with higher prices for wood chips in the Pacific Northwest aggravated downtime at some facilities undergoing capital improvements.

"The decline in first-quarter income was the result of continuing adverse market conditions for the company's paper business," Board Chairman John Fery said in a statement.

"Our pricing-in-the-company's pulp and paper business should show little change overall while we expect additional downtime associated with the segment," Fery said.

Operating income from the company's paper segment, which has accounted for up to two-thirds of Boise Cascade's income, dropped to under $51 million in the first quarter of this year from nearly $127 million in the same period a year ago.

"Our office products business should be seasonally down while our building products business should show some improvement."

"Pricing-in-the-company's pulp and paper business should show little change overall while we expect additional downtime associated with the segment," Fery said.

M-K posts 14% profit increase over quarter

BOISE (AP) — Morrison Knudsen Corp. continued its resurgence, posting a 14 percent increase in earnings in the first quarter of 1990 despite a decline in revenue.

The international construction and engineering company, based in Boise, announced on Monday that net profits in the January-March quarter totaled $7.2 million, or 62 cents a share, compared to $6.3 million in earnings a year earlier, or 56 cents a share.

While total revenue dropped from $461 million in a year ago to $399 this winter, Board Chairman William Agee said the improved profit picture reflected a better overall earnings margin on receipts.

The new company has already entered a joint venture with Chevron Resources Co. for gold exploration in southeastern Oregon.

"Our concentrated efforts to generate consistent growth in our core businesses are reflected in these earnings," Agee said.

MK Gold also owns a large tract in Montana that will be explored for precious metals.

Robert Timstman, president of the corporation's mining group, is the president of MK Gold, which is one of all existing precious metals operations in California, Arizona and Nevada.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues... Both reports punctured hopes that the Federal Reserve might nudge interest rates lower.

The Treasury's bellwether 30-year bond was down more than $10-per-$1,000 face value for much of the day, and the losses in the credit markets spilled over to stocks.

But the blue chips, as they have done during a number of recent sessions when there is bad economic news, gradually regained ground, leaving the secondary stocks behind.

This trend, known as a two-tier market, reflects trader caution: While investors are looking to buy, they want to stay with stocks perceived as safe.

Earnings reports influenced the performance of some stocks, most notably NCR, which fell 5K to 65 1/2 and topped the NYSE most active list after reporting a first-quarter profit decline.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

A big one got away from today's South. Look over his technique and see if you can find a way to make the game.

South took the first spade, cashed the top diamonds and led a third diamond, hoping to split the suit. (Finding a doubleton honor would also work.) West discarded on the third diamond, and South knew he was in trouble. He won East's spade exit, and in desperation he played his ace and queen of hearts, hoping for a 3-10 doubleton with West. Nothing worked for South, and the final result was two down.

South's line of play had its chances, but given the bidding and the lack of entries to North's diamonds, South might have considered an alternative plan. (Some pre-emptors are more frisky than others.) After winning the first spade, instead of cashing the high diamonds, South fares better by passing the diamond 10 to East. (It does no good for East to duck.) East wins and returns a spade. South wins and overtakes his diamond king with dummy's ace. Another diamond to East establishes a third diamond winner in dummy, and a successful heart finesse brings the total to nine shabby tricks.
