Japan leaves trade 'hit list'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Friday removed Japan from a "hit list" of countries judged to have erected the most offensive trade barriers against American products, rewarding Japanese efforts to ease trade tensions between the two economic superpowers.

Instead, the president said he had decided to cite only one country — India — under a tough section of U.S. trade law which provides for economic retaliation if the offending barriers are not removed.

The decision brought immediate protests from members of Congress, who charged the administration had made a serious mistake in not naming Japan, the country Congress specifically had in mind when it wrote the provision, known as Super 301, into the 1988 Trade Act.

"I am thunderstruck," Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said in a Senate floor speech. "Excuse me, Mr. President, but this boggles the mind..."

Letting Japan off the hook is a serious mistake and I think Congress ought to take a look at it.

Critics said Japan needed to be targeted to keep pressure on the government of Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu to live up to a flurry of trade concessions he has made aimed at lowering America's huge $49 billion trade deficit with Japan.

"It is clear that Japan should be on the list," said Sen. Don Riegle, D-Mich., one of the sponsors of the Super 301 provision. "Our government is not using the tools that are available to correct this continuing hemorrhage of U.S. capital and jobs."

But Bush, in announcing his decision, said he was persuaded that Kaifu shared "my commitment to ensuring that trade strengthens, rather than undermines, the friendship between our nations."

Administration officials said targeting Japan could provoke a public backlash against the United States.

'Ugly' inflation rate mars beautiful GNP

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy grew at a surprising 2.1 percent rate in the first quarter, the government reported Friday, but analysts said an "ugly" inflation rate could mean higher interest rates that would slow growth later this year.

"We have set ourselves up for a halfway decent first half of 1990," said Donald Straszheim, chief economist for Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York. "But, by the end of the year, the economy will be slowing."

"In addition to the strength in the gross national product — the nation's total output of goods and services — the Commerce Department reported that inflation jumped 6.5 percent, its steepest jump since a 7.7 percent increase in the fourth quarter of 1981. The GNP inflation rate for 1989 was 4.5 percent.

"The inflation number was absolutely ugly," remarked Robert G. Dedrick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

He and other analysts said the pace of inflation — boosted in part by the weather — probably will slow during the current quarter to the 4.5 percent-5 percent range.

But that still means the Federal Reserve will not lower interest rates and may decide to boost them further to slow the price spiral, they contend.

Higher rates curb growth in the construction and other interest-sensitive industries by raising the cost of borrowing.

J. Antonio Villamil, the Commerce Department's chief economist, called the inflation report "disappointing news." Without the weather effect and a federal pay raise that went into effect in January, prices still rose 5.2 percent during the quarter, he said.

But Villamil was upbeat about the 2.1 percent GNP growth, which nearly doubled the 1.1 percent rate during the fourth quarter and came close to matching the administration's 2.2 percent forecast.

The administration is counting on a growing economy to help narrow the federal budget deficit.

Mudslingers

Although Boy Scouts aren't generally supposed to have an aversion to mud, Ben Phillips, left, and Casey Miller seem to have had enough of the gooey stuff. They were planting trees at Hazelton Elementary School on a rainy Friday afternoon in celebration of Arbor Day. Five groups of Scouts from the area planted 13 trees at the school.

Lithuanian immolates himself in protest

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — A man who burned himself to death was sending a message to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev — that Lithuanians will not live in a Lithuania that is not independent," according to suicide notes released Friday.

In the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, Russian trucks lay down in front of the riggs and blocked rush-hour traffic to protest the Baltic republic's declaration of independence on March 11.

The suicide victim, Stanislavas Jamaitis, 52, died Thursday of burns suffered when he doused his clothes with gasoline and set himself ablaze in front of the Bolshoi Theater in central Moscow.

Jamaitis, a Lithuanian, left suicide notes to his wife, Stasata, and to Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis. The Lithuanian Supreme Council, or parliament, released the texts Friday. Spokeswoman Rita Radzevicius translated them from Lithuanian to Russian and read them over the telephone.

The official Soviet news agency Tass also reported the existence of the note but did not mention any political motive. Tass said the letter "spoke of an impossible family life and a desire to commit suicide."

The version released by Lithuanian authorities apologized for "some thing bad" in his marriage, but stressed political motives.

"I went to Moscow to set myself on fire in Red Square," he said. The Bolshoi is a few blocks from Red Square, where security is heavier.

"The occupiers have cut off energy supplies and people are being thrown out of work," wrote Jamaitis, who officials say was recently laid off.

"I have lived my whole life in occupied Lithuania," wrote Jamaitis, who was born two years before the Soviet-Union forcibly annexed Lithuania and its sister republics of Latvia and Estonia during World War II.

"Let Gorbachev know that Lithuanians will not live in a Lithuania that is not independent," said the note read by Ms. Radzevicius.

The suicide recalled the 1971 self-immolation of a Lithuanian student, Romas Kalanta, in the western Lithuanian city of Kaunas. That act was a symbol of Lithuanian resistance in the 1970s and 1980s, activists say.

The truck blockade in Vilnius marked a new level of protest by non-Lithuanians in the republic. Demonstrators lay-down-in-front-of their trucks in the center of Vilnius to protest "adventurist decisions" of the Lithuanian parliament, Tass said.

State: Octane rarely mislabeled

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Although the state has received a number of complaints about mislabeling octane ratings on retail gasoline pumps, the chief of Idaho's Weights and Measures Bureau said there doesn't appear to be widespread incidence of the problem in the state.

But Glen Jex said the state has no program for routinely verifying the accuracy of the octane ratings on the thousands of retail pumps throughout Idaho, relying only on consumer complaints to identify any problem areas.

Congressional investigators reported Thursday that mislabeling gasoline, such as putting leaded gas in pumps that dispense unleaded premium, is costing the nation's motorists $150 million a year.

Service stations in the Magic Valley are not routinely checked unless there is a complaint.

There have been no confirmed violations of pump labeling standards to date, Jex said, but "I haven't heard what's happening on a couple of complaints."

Mislabeling the octane rating on gasoline carries a maximum fine of $300 for each sale.

Jex conceded it was difficult for motorists to isolate mislabeled octane as the reason their vehicles' performance has declined since fouled spark plugs or an out-of-adjustment carburetor could be the culprit.

The complaints, he said, generally come from "people who are on the road all the time and know how their automobiles perform."

Nicaragua cuts value of money

The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Nicaragua's two-day-old government slashed the value of the national currency in half Friday in an effort to patch up the battered economy, but it left angry consumers with wads of virtually worthless banknotes.

Prices shot up accordingly, but the wages of most Nicaraguans, many of whom earned the equivalent of $30 a month before the devaluation, did not.

At the new prices, a pound of rice, one of beans and one of beef cost a total of 205,000 cordobas, or $1.46. Violeta Barrios de Chamorro assumed the presidency Thursday, inheriting an economy flattened by more than a decade of leftist Sandinista mismanagement, war with the U.S.-backed Contras and an American trade embargo, since lifted.

The unpopular devaluation was an austerity measure that will squeeze impoverished Nicaraguans even harder in the short term.

In another development, the Organization of American States has begun providing food to the Contra rebels even though the fighters say they will keep their weapons until their Sandinista enemies leave the military.

The rebels were balking at disarming as pledged by June 10, citing fears of retaliation by Sandinistas, who remain at their posts in the police and the military.

One OAS official, speaking on condition of anonymity Thursday, said the organization fears the rebels would resort to "felonies" if they go hungry.

Going hungry appeared to be a fear on the minds of some Nicaraguans as they coped with the price hikes. Some basic commodities were one-third or even half again as expensive as before.

"This new government will be good for nothing. Everything is more expensive," a housewife with two children in tow said to nobody in particular.

Mormons soften outlook toward women, churches

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Sacred ceremonies for the living and dead, performed by faithful Mormons behind the walls of the church's temples, have undergone what some view as their most significant changes in this century.

The revisions, effective April 10 in the faith's 43 temples, are being greeted with enthusiasm by church members who say they reflect a greater sensitivity toward women and other religions.

"The temple is an important part of my spiritual life and the changes have allowed me to go to the temple with renewed joy," said Leona Fielding Anderson, editor-in-chief of the Journal of Mormon History.

The revisions are contained in the "endowment" ceremony, seen by Mormons as necessary for eventually dwelling with God. Among the changes, women no longer must vow to obey their husbands. And a portion of the ceremony with an actor portraying a non-Mormon "preacher" paid by Satan to spread false doctrine has been eliminated.

"The general consensus is that it's a breath of fresh air," said Ross Peterson, co-editor of Dialogue, an independent Mormon journal. "You don't put down other churches, or imply that they are Satan's children," Peterson said. Many Mormons who never had expressed a negative word about the endowment ceremony are thrilled with the changes, indicating there had been elements that "were silently upsetting to them."

"I think we're gradually moving away from the subjugation of women," Peterson said. "I think (church)

Insect repellents begin to disappear

NEW YORK (AP) — Summer camp directors planned letters to parents and pharmacies yanked cans from shelves Friday after two top insect repellents were recalled because a long-used ingredient harmed laboratory rats.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced Tuesday that the makers of Deep Woods Off! and Cutter insect repellents had voluntarily recalled their products because of the findings.

The ingredient's manufacturer, McLaughlin Gormley King Co. of Minneapolis, told the government that preliminary testing showed an additive known as R-11 gave tumors to lab rats and withered their ovaries. The company asked that its license to make the product be withdrawn.

For the first time in any state, corporate raiders will be forced to surrender short-term profits from takeover attempts.

Governor signs recycling measure

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Gov. Tommy G. Thompson on Friday signed what he called the nation's strictest recycling law, which bans bottles, newspapers and other recyclable waste from Wisconsin dumps by 1995. The law requires every community to draw up a mandatory recycling plan by that date and imposes a $11 million-a-year tax on big businesses to help pay for stemming the tide of trash.

Health ministry recalls L-tryptophan

TOKYO (AP) — The Health and Welfare Ministry on Friday recalled food and medicines containing the dietary supplement L-tryptophan produced by Showa Denko Co., one of Japan's largest chemical manufacturers, officials said.

L-tryptophan produced by Showa Denko has been tied to a potentially deadly blood disorder in 1,500 people in the United States, officials said.

"The ministry instructed the recall upon receiving a report from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration this morning that linked Showa Denko's L-tryptophan to the blood disorder cases," said Toru Ebihara of the Pharmaceuticals and Chemicals Safety Division.

Pennsylvania gains anti-takeover law

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — The nation's toughest anti-takeover law was signed Friday by Gov. Robert F. Casey, who said it would discourage corporate raiders from stripping jobs and economic vitality from Pennsylvania.

Within hours, the law was challenged by two lawsuits filed in federal court that claimed unconstitutional infringement on shareholder and investor rights. The law, which took effect immediately, is expected by analysts to create ripples in boardrooms and legislatures throughout the nation.

Hit journal follows Quayle's foibles

States News Service

WASHINGTON, April 27 — When Dan Quayle bought that tacky South American souvenir, when he bought Americans to "succeed... or risk the risk of failure" when he compared perestroika to Stalinism — he knew America was watching.

But, as the first vice president with a journal dedicated to his humbles and bumbles, he may have forgotten that America is not only watching, but also reading — and buying — that Veep-watch journal, The Quayle Quarterly, in a devoted effort to stand by their Dan.

Subscribers, ranging from comedian George Carlin to economist John Kenneth Galbraith, the Connecticut-based Quayle Quarterly is sending out its second edition this week to its growing list of 8,000 plus groups.

Bearing Dan's picture on the front with the caption "Ready Any Time," the quotable quarterly is also turning up at newsstands all around Manhattan, as well as in Washington state, South Carolina, Texas and Minnesota — an almost unheard-of feat.

Although the new publishers expected the quarterly to take off slowly, the magazine/newsletter is exceeding all predictions. "Publications with such a narrow focus aren't usually successful," said Werksman.

"The success of this whole thing really has to do with the vice president. The atmosphere around him is so charged — people really have strong opinions about him one way or another," said Managing Editor Deborah Wickham of Bridgeport, Conn., who started the quarterly earlier this year with her husband Jeff Yoder, who is editor and publisher.

No wonder the Office of the Vice President, formerly so helpful to the Quayle journalists, has slammed the door on future dealings. "The office actively refused to give us information after they received the first issue," said Werksman.

Lithuania

Supporters of the Lithuanian popular front Sajudis dragged the trucks from the streets with tractors, Tass said. It also reported that local authorities released truckers arrested in the protest to keep the peace.

Because of gas shortages caused by the Kremlin blockade, rush-hour traffic was much lighter than usual Friday. Many people walked to work or used the city's extensive trolley system.

The blockade, shown on the Soviet evening TV news show "Vremya," involved about 50 trucks and was organized by members of a Lithuanian Communist Party splinter that remains loyal to the Kremlin. Other organizers were members of Yedinstvo, consisting mostly of Russian residents of Lithuania, said Ms. Badzevicius.

Just over 80 percent of the republic's population is Lithuanian, and since Russian, Polish and other non-Lithuanian residents have expressed fear their rights will be violated.

Gorbachev has ordered curbs on supplies of oil and natural gas to Lithuania in an effort to stem the independence movement, and Lithuanian and Soviet media stressed the hardships caused by the embargo. Gorbachev also has refused to negotiate with Lithuania.

Soviet authorities have restricted Western reporters from traveling to Lithuania, except by invitation on trips organized by the Foreign Ministry. The Associated Press was not invited on one trip currently under way.

In London, maverick Soviet politician Boris Yeltsin criticized Gorbachev's handling of the Lithuanian independence crisis.

and make Kaifu's job of reforming Japan's trading system even more difficult.

"We believe that the most effective way to achieve results is through cooperation, not confrontation," U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills told reporters.

Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama praised the president's decision, saying it upheld his government's position that it would not negotiate with the United States under threat of retaliation.

But House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt called the decision a "free trade furlough."

"If we have learned anything over the years as we have fought to reduce our monumental trade deficit with Japan, it is that the only thing that works is clear, constant, consistent pressure for needed change," Gephardt said.

A year ago, the administration used the Super 301 provision to target Japan, India and other countries with the highest barriers.

Japan was cited for barriers to sales of U.S.-made supercomputers, satellites and wood products. In the past month, U.S. and Japanese negotiators have reached market-opening agreements in all three areas.

Brazil was targeted for restrictive import licensing practices. Hills said recently enacted legislation in that country should meet U.S. concerns in this area.

But India, which was cited last year for a ban on operations of foreign, private insurance companies and for controls on foreign investment that distort trade, has refused to make concessions.

The 1990 target list names those barriers again: Hills said India was singled out because it had created more trade barriers than any non-Communist country.

leaders are developing a recognition that there are many highly intelligent, independent, capable and educated women in our ranks today who have a great deal to offer."

Rebecca England, a member of the planning committee of the independent Mormon Women's Forum, which circulates a newsletter to 1,400, said the changes may boost temple attendance.

"I know quite a number of Mormons who stopped going to the temple because they found it demeaning. And I think this revised ceremony addresses many of the concerns that we and I, as a feminist Mormon, have had," she said.

Mormon women cannot hold the faith's priesthood, which is open to worthy males 12 and older. Women are authorized to serve in the local lay clergy of the church's hierarchy. They serve missions, but without the priesthood cannot baptize converts.

Mormons attending the temples of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints perform several rituals, including baptisms, marriages for eternity and endowments for themselves and, by proxy, for individuals who have died.

They believe that all mankind, in this life or the next, will have an opportunity to accept and reject the true church of Jesus Christ as revealed to Joseph Smith and his successors church presidents. If they accept it, holy ordinances considered necessary for their "exaltation" with God already will "have been performed for them."

Only adult Mormons in good standing are permitted participation in all temple ordinances. Among the prerequisites for attendance are honesty, payment of 10 percent of gross income to the church and adherence to a health code that forbids use of tobacco, alcohol, tea, coffee and illegal drugs.

Bruce L. Olsen, managing director of the church's Public-Communications-Special Affairs office, said church leaders would have no comment on the revisions because temple ceremonies are considered too sacred for public discussion.

The changes were not announced to the membership at large, but temple attendees are being read a statement from the governing First Presidency which says the revisions, following long and prayerful review, were unanimously approved by that three-member body and the advisory Council of the Twelve Apostles.

England and others see the changes as evidence that Mormon leaders listen to "faithful members with real concerns."

more so than demeaning. I think it also shows that the leaders have responded to concerns and acted on those concerns," she said.

The endowment ceremony, wrote the late Mormon theologian James E. Talmage, includes instruction — within a theatrical setting — on the creation of the world, Adam and Eve's expulsion from the Garden of Eden, God's plan of redemption and description of a widespread apostasy preceding restoration of the true gospel.

It also includes sacred covenants, among them virtue and devotion to truth, Talmage wrote. Graphic depictions of penalties for breaking them, considered gruesome by some, were among the recent deletions.

Friday his office has received a number of complaints about misleading octane ratings on retail gasoline pumps.

Jones said state lawmakers should make the financial investment needed to at least check the accuracy of octane rating labels.

Congressional investigators on Thursday estimated that 9 percent of the gasoline sold nationwide is mislabeled by half an octane number or more, but in several states where pump testing has proven misleading, the federal government has done little to stop the deception.

The report comes as Jones demanded from the nation's top gasoline distributors an explanation of why pump prices for all octanes have jumped dramatically in recent months while pipeline prices have fallen.

Anti-abortion rally backers hope for record turnout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anti-abortion leaders are hoping for a "massive display" of opposition to abortion at a rally Saturday at the Washington Monument that will help put their movement back on the offensive after months of political setbacks.

"We hope to impress the Congress... We hope to impress the nation," said Dr. J.C. Wilkie, president of the National Right to Life Committee.

President Bush will address the crowd by telephone hookup, as he has done at previous anti-abortion rallies and as President Ronald Reagan did before him. Vice President Dan Quayle will speak in person to the crowd.

The National Right to Life Committee, the leading anti-abortion lobbying group and the rally's sponsor, declined to predict the size of the crowd. But Wilkie said he hoped it would be the largest rally ever on the Washington Mall, exceeding past crowds of more than a quarter of a million people.

"Yes, it's a numbers game," Wilkie said in an interview.

Wilkie said their intent was "to take more of an offensive... to give a massive display" of opposition to abortion.

In the works for more than a year, the rally comes at a time when anti-abortion forces have sustained a series of losses in elections and in state capitals.

Since the Supreme Court's so-called Webster decision last summer, in which states were given more leeway to impose restrictions on abortions, supporters of abortion rights have succeeded in a series of major elections.

Candidates who support legal abortions have won elections for governor of Virginia and New Jersey and lieutenant governor of Virginia, and they have succeeded in blocking abortion restrictions in many state legislatures.

In addition, a number of candidates for office this year have switched positions to support abortion rights. And despite a strongly anti-abortion plank in the Republican Party's platform, party officials have made clear they do not want the issue to be a litmus test for the party's candidates or supporters.

"They have a public perception problem," Eddie Mahe—a political consultant to Republican candidates on both sides of the issue, said of the anti-abortion forces.

"There is clearly the perception the movement is on the pro-choice side," Mahe said. Wilkie disputed the suggestion his group is on the defensive. He said the anti-abortion movement has won more races than it has lost when state legislative and congressional special elections are considered—a point disputed by abortion rights advocates.

But even abortion opponents acknowledge they have been frustrated by the other side's success in framing public debate on the issue as a question of a woman's right to make her own reproductive decisions. The rally was part of their effort to put the focus back on the unborn child.

Rally volunteers pound in rows of crosses

"Our first goal is to keep up front in the public eye the unborn child," said Father John Guldick, executive director of the National Conference of Bishops' Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities. "That seems to have been lost in the debate since Webster."

The Rally for Life is being billed as a celebration rather than a protest or march. Among those scheduled to appear are Cardinal John O'Connor, chairman of the Bishops' pro-life committee; Christian singer Sandi Patti; and country singer Terri Gibbs.

Nancy Myers, spokeswoman for the right-to-life group, said more than 2,000 buses were arriving for the rally from as far away as California, including 425 from Pennsylvania.

Saturday's rally was intended to counter a large abortion-rights rally a year ago and has caused some controversy in anti-abortion circles.

Shells, herbicides, wastes affect closure of Army proving ground

Chicago Tribune

MADISON, Ind. — The military has not been kind to Mother Earth, especially at the Jefferson Proving Ground here at the southern tip of Indiana, where explosive shells, leaking solvents, herbicides, and thousands of radioactive tank munitions have contaminated more than 50,000 acres.

At this installation, just one of 900 military facilities nationwide that have been identified as suspected hazardous-waste sites, the Army is facing a staggering cleanup bill, running anywhere from $500 million to $5 billion, according to estimates done by Indiana and on-base officials.

These expenses arise at a time when the Army's budget is declining, forcing hard choices between cutting troops, buying weapons or cleaning up the environment.

Jefferson is among 80 bases that a congressionally mandated commission recently selected to be closed to save an estimated $694 million over six years. But the estimates for cleaning up Jefferson alone wipe out the projected savings from closing all 80.

The high cost relates to the unique contamination at Jefferson. Not only does it have toxic herbicides, but also something that is far more hazardous and costly to remove: unexploded ordnance.

More than a million unexploded shells and mines on and under the ground at Jefferson must be removed before the base's land can be sold.

In fact, if Jefferson had not been scheduled for closing in 1995, the problem of cleaning up all the ordnance never would have come up. According to various Pentagon officials, "under" current environmental laws, spent munitions are not considered hazardous waste while firing ranges are open.

When Congress voted in 1988 to create the base-closing commission, it wanted the National Environmental Policy Act, which would have forced the commissioners to consider the environmental cleanup costs in their base-closing decisions.

Miami officer killed during traffic stop

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

MIAMI — A Metro-Dade County police officer was killed Friday by a pistol shot that tore into his neck after he and his partner made a pre-drawn traffic stop that suddenly exploded into a gunfight.

Officer Joseph Martin, 28, was pronounced dead at Jackson Memorial Hospital about an hour after the 4 a.m. shooting. His partner, officer Carlos Crespo, was not injured.

All three suspects — one of them wounded — were in custody Friday, but police did not immediately identify them.

The wounded suspect, who police investigators say shot Martin, fled but was tracked down by a police dog after an intense, hour-long manhunt.

The other two men, neither of them armed, quickly surrendered at the site of the shootout.

"With a great deal of pain, I report the death of one of our officers, Joe Martin, a four-year veteran. He has a wife and two children," Metro-Dade Police Director Fred Taylor said shortly before 7:45 a.m. as he stood in the driveway in front of the hospital's emergency room.

Martin was the son of retired Metro-Dade homicide detective Larry Martin, who completed 25 years of service on the force last year.

7 Chinese disappear from airport

ATHOL, Mass. — (AP) — Authorities on Friday searched fruitlessly for seven Chinese peasants reported abducted upon arriving in this country. Suspicions rose that they may have been trying to escape China.

Adding to the mystery was the question of why the Chinese were being brought to a farm in this remote western Massachusetts town to study organic agriculture, an art that has been practiced in their country for centuries.

"The Chinese have never really had a foreign exchange to buy chemicals. They are really knowledgeable from a millennium of organic farming," said state Agriculture Commissioner August Schumacher Jr.

The seven missing Chinese were among a group of 16 farmers who were brought here by Molly Aitken, president of the World Green Foundation and owner of Green Gables Farm, a modest spread on the outskirts of town.

Federal authorities investigating the disappearance at New York's Kennedy International Airport say they suspect it may have been a scheme to get away from the group and stay in the United States.

But Aitken said Thursday she trusted the seven and believes foul play was involved. She said she and the Chinese government selected the group.

"I cannot believe they would deliberately jeopardize our project by running off," she said. "They were very excited about the project. It doesn't make any sense for them to want to do this."

The group was from Fujian Province in southern China.

Cheney says U.S. military to be significantly smaller than today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, acknowledging his warplane cutbacks could be just the beginning of major Pentagon changes, predicted Friday that America's military is destined to be "significantly smaller than it is today."

Cheney met with reporters one day after the intimated Congress of plans to curtail purchases of the B-2 Stealth bomber and the C-17 transport jet, and delay production of the Pentagon's next generation of fighters.

It was Cheney's most significant step to date in his effort to realign the nation's military expenditures in response to the nation's budget woes and the lessened Soviet threat.

But during his testimony, Cheney also indicated he's looking at paring the Navy's fleet of aircraft carriers from 14 to 12 and that he was considering further cuts in Air Force tactical fighter wings.

These statements come on the heels of disclosures by top Army officials that they may be forced to trim hundreds of thousands of soldiers from the force in the coming years.

Asked about such developments, Cheney noted that the service chiefs are scheduled to give him their long-term spending plans next week and that this will set off a debate "on how we think that force ought to look like."

"There's clearly going to be a smaller Navy, clearly going to be a smaller Marine Corps, smaller Army, smaller Air Force," Cheney said, adding, "Obviously, we are looking at a force that is significantly smaller than it is today."

But he added that there are several assumptions that must be taken into account in any plan to draw down the forces, such as the successful completion of the talks in Europe to reduce conventional forces and the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks with the Soviets.

Cheney's aircraft review called for reducing the proposed number of B-2 bombers from 132 to 75 and reducing the proposed purchase of the C-17 long-range transport plane from 210 to 120.

The defense secretary also called for cutting back on the Navy's A-12 attack aircraft and delaying purchases of the Air Force's advanced Tactical Aircraft and Advanced Tactical Fighter.

He predicted the changes would trim $2.4 billion from President Bush's $307 billion defense budget for 1991 and would save $34.8 billion through 1997.

Meanwhile in Capitol Hill, an Air Force official told a Senate Armed Services subcommittee Friday that a reduction in the 36 tactical-fighter wings by 1996 is likely.

"I don't think I can say today whether we'll get below 30, but we're going to get smaller," Maj. Gen. Richard E. Hawley, director of operations, told the subcommittee on conventional forces and alliance defense.

Pressed by Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee, about whether 30 wings is a fair assumption, Hawley said: "I would not be surprised to see numbers in that range."

The Air Force official also indicated that Cheney's decision to delay procurement of the Advanced Tactical Fighter poses a risk but it was determined that the risk was acceptable.

"There is additional risk imposed by skipping the ATF," Hawley said. "I guess the question is, is it an acceptable risk and I think the judgment is that it is an acceptable level of risk given the changing nature of the threat we face."

Founder Rev. Pat Robertson talks to reporters about the bombing of CBN

Guard injured in explosion at CBN

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A bomb in a package addressed to the Rev. Pat Robertson exploded Friday at his Christian Broadcasting Network's mailroom, injuring a security guard, CBN officials said.

Authorities confirmed there was a bombing but did not release details.

The package had a North Carolina postmark and was thought to be suspicious, said Frankie Abourjile, a CBN spokesman.

Security guard Scott Sheepers was summoned, and the bomb exploded when he opened the package, Mrs. Abourjile said.

Sheepers, 33, was taken to Sentara Norfolk General Hospital. Pat Robertson, a 1988 Republican presidential hopeful, accompanied the guard to the hospital, Mrs. Abourjile said.

Sheepers was in a stable condition with shrapnel wounds to his left leg, said Rhonda Hoover, a hospital spokeswoman.

Robertson said the package was addressed to him.

"This could be part of a pattern of attacks against evangelical Christians," said Robertson, noting two other recent attacks — the explosion of a letter bomb at the home of the Rev. John Osteen of Houston that injured his daughter and an arson fire at the Indiana recording studio of gospel singer Sandi Patit.

"This is evidence of extreme hatred by some deranged individuals who want to silence the Christian voice in this country," Robertson said. "They should realize that devices sent through the mail will never reach those for whom they are intended. Their victims will be innocent men and women who have devoted their lives to serving God."

Virginia Beach police spokesman Lou Thurston declined to give details about Friday's bomb.

"We don't want to jeopardize our investigation or prosecution," Thurston said.

He said the explosion caused no damage but debris from the package was scattered about.

Defense cuts spark GE layoffs

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — General Electric Co. and Lockheed Corp. on Friday announced thousands of job cuts, a move analysts say is fueled in part by decreases in defense spending.

GE said it will eliminate about 4,200 hourly and salaried jobs during the next two years at five GE Aerospace locations in New York and New Jersey.

Lockheed of Burbank, Calif., plans to lay off 2,500 workers in its plane building division, including about 2,000 in Southern California.

The cuts, which had been expected, were the second big round of aerospace layoffs in as many days to hit Southern California.

On Thursday, McDonnell Douglas Corp. said it will eliminate 3,000 jobs at its Long Beach-based Douglas Aircraft unit this summer to reduce the costs of jet aircraft production at the money-losing division.

"The basic reason for the reductions we're looking at cuts in the defense budget," said Wendy Abramowitz, an analyst for Argus Research Corp. in New York. "If they keep all those people, they will be expending money and will not have the same amount coming in."

Steven Binder, an analyst at Bear, Sterns and Co. in New York, said the job cuts are "a definitive of future defense cuts and spending."

"During recent years the Defense Department has had to cut procurement and research and development. That has made it necessary for companies to reduce employment," he said.

GE's cuts stem in part from efforts to reorganize its aerospace defense businesses so the company can remain successful despite a shrinking market and increased competition.

GE says it will take advantage of projected industry and retirement of about 2,000 employees to reduce significantly the number of employees actually laid off.

The reductions are scheduled to take place at plants in Binghamton, Syracuse and Utica, N.Y., and Camden and Moorestown, N.J.

"We are taking decisive actions now to enable our business to meet its future commitments to customers and ensure that GE Aerospace will be a vital, industry-leading business for many years to come," said Jon Rittenhouse, senior vice president for Valley Forge-based GE Aerospace.

"We're entering a decade that will provide a difficult challenge for defense companies," he said. "By taking these steps, we are protecting the long-term competitive outlook for the business."

Bush urges faster response to census

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Friday that completing the nation's problem-plagued 1990 census is becoming a mammoth undertaking and he urged Americans who have not returned their forms to get moving.

Thirty-seven percent of the 95 million census questionnaires sent in March haven't been returned.

"I simply want to urge every American who has not returned the census form to go, to stand up and be counted," Bush said in remarks to a group of state legislators at the White House.

"We really need to get moving on this."

In his first comments on the difficulties vexing the U.S. Census Bureau, Bush said census takers had begun "to visit all address from which census forms have not been received, a mammoth undertaking."

Rep. Thomas C. Sawyer, D-Ohio, chairman of a House subcommittee that oversees the Census Bureau, estimates that fielding the expanded array of census takers needed to cope with the low return rate could add $180 million to the $1.3 billion earmarked this year for conducting the census.

Bush told the American Legislative Exchange Council that helping persuade Americans to do a better job of returning their census forms was "a project that needs your involvement."

"Census data will help you make important decisions for the states. And it really fits into this theme of decentralization, part of the decentralization of government, of putting our trust where it belongs — with the people," Bush said.

The census will help determine distribution of hundreds of billions of dollars in federal and state aid among states and local communities for the next 10 years.

It will also be the basis on which congressional and state legislative district lines will be redrawn. Preliminary data suggests that as many as 14 of the 435 House of Representative seats may shift into different states as a result of the 1990 count.

Some Democratic critics have assailed Bush for not doing enough to guarantee an accurate census.

Abortion dispute slows foreign aid bill in Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $3.4 billion bill that includes aid for new democracies in Central America became embroiled in the abortion issue Friday as the Senate sought to deal with dozens of potential amendments.

The core of the bill provides $300 million to Nicaragua and $420 million to Panama. Lawmakers and President Bush hope the money will give solid starts to those countries' new governments.

Unrelated provisions in the legislation have slowed its progress in the Senate.

Much of Friday's session was spent debating language permitting the District of Columbia to use local funds to pay for abortions for poor women. The bill survived two attempts by conservatives to remove the language, 51-45 and 54-42.

It appeared there could be a protracted debate over the potentially divisive issue, which has prompted White House threat of a "virtually certain" veto.

"This is supposed to be an urgent supplemental bill for Panama and Nicaragua," lamented Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

"We've forgotten that because we want to debate abortion all day. We have a responsibility to the president" to expedite aid to the two fledgling democratic governments.

Surveying a list of dozens of potential amendments to the bill proposed by both Democrats and Republicans, Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, added: "I don't think either side has displayed any restraint."

When passed, the measure still must go to a conference with the House to work out differences with that chamber's $2.4 billion version. The money is for the rest of this fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

The aid to Panama and Nicaragua, as well as money for a centennial on domestic programs added on by members of Congress, being paid for largely through cuts in the Pentagon budget.

Hubble opens, astronauts ready for home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Hubble Space Telescope orbited with its big eye open Friday after ground controllers overcame communications problems and lifted its lens cover.

The shuttle Discovery's astronauts prepared for Sunday's return to Earth.

"You've been released from Hubble support. It's on its own," Mission Control's Story Musgrave told the five crew members.

"That's great news," replied Discovery commander Loren J. Shriver.

"There are handshakes and smiles all around up here. I'll bet it's just that way back down there, too," added mission specialist Steven Hawley. "What's buying tonight?"

"We'll buy when you all get back," Musgrave replied.

Flight director William Reeves said it was too early to cheer.

"We still have an important part of the mission to go," Reeves said.

"We reserve our celebration until the crew is safely on the ground."

Discovery is to land at 9:48 a.m. EDT Sunday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. Landing would have been delayed a day if astronauts Bruce McCandless and Kathryn Sullivan had had to perform a space walk to crank open the telescope's lens cover, or aperture door. The shuttle trailed 50 miles behind Hubble when the aperture door opened 380 miles above Earth, but was to pass two miles beneath the telescope later in the day.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans to release its first test image from the $1.5 billion telescope on Tuesday, showing an open star cluster in the constellation Carina. Scientific data will follow in a month or two.

Hubble's 10-foot aluminum aperture door was opened to the heavens at 10:30 a.m. EDT, nearly four hours later than planned, exposing its finely polished 94.5-inch mirror to starlight for the first time. Ground controllers sent a signal commanding the door to lift even though the telescope was in an automatic "safe mode" with all motion stopped because of problems linking its high-speed antennas with a relay satellite.

Steve Terry, director of orbital verifications, said the opening of the aperture door could not have been delayed much longer.

"I have to be a point where you say 'they have to go their way and we have to go ours,'" he said of the astronauts.

Nevada says cricket problem under control

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The worst Mormon cricket infestation in Nevada since the 1930s appears under control, a state agricultural official said Thursday as the federal government launched a second aerial attack on the voracious insects.

The infestation covers some 700,000 acres in five counties of north-central Nevada with crickets counted at up to 100 per square foot in some areas near Winnemucca, 160 miles northeast of Reno.

"I think we've made real progress in killing the insects, although there's a lot of them out there," said Dick Rowe, coordinator of the Nevada Department of Agriculture's Plant Industry program. "At the present time I think we've got things under control."

"I might change my mind 30 days down the road, but for now it looks like we're doing OK and the insects haven't done any real damage yet."

Rowe said the crickets, which are related to grasshoppers, are about three quarters of an inch long now but will grow up to two inches long within the next month — the size of a small mouse.

"If the juice-splitting insects aren't killed at the mouths of canyons where they hatched, they'll merge together in a hungry march across rural Nevada at a rate of one-half mile to one mile a day, eating everything organic in sight such as crops, gardens and grasses."

Migrating bands can be one-half to one mile across and one to 10 miles long and usually aren't stopped except by cold weather or poison. The barbed-legged insects have few natural predators, authorities said.

The insects, which can bite humans if disturbed, got their name from a similar infestation reported in Utah in the 1800s. Sea gulls from Salt Lake City reportedly flew over the infested land, eating the crickets to save the area from total destruction, according to Mormon legend.

Santa Ana pays homeless in settlement

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Fifteen homeless people, some with only pennies in their pockets, came into a windfall when the city paid out $50,000 to settle a lawsuit protesting the mass street cleanup of stashed bedrolls.

"I've come up a long way in the world in just a matter of minutes," said Chuck Daigle, who began Thursday practically penniless and later received his share — a check for $3,308.46.

The unemployed restaurant worker planned a steak and lobster dinner, while co-plaintiff George Ellithorpe eyed a haircut and a shave. Most recipients wanted to use the money to help them get off the streets, said attorney Christopher A. Mears, who represented the group.

"I hope it's not naive to be hopeful that, for a number of these people, the money is going to help turn things around," said Mears, who accepted only $373.10 to cover his expenses and court costs. Plans ranged from finding a room for the night to car buying and traveling to Alaska in search of long-lost relatives, Mears said.

Daigle, who said he and Ellithorpe had less than 2 cents between them before receiving the checks, planned a train trip to Marysville in Northern California to visit relatives and look for work.

"I have a one-shot chance to change my life, and I'm going to do it. No more dreaming," said Daigle, 40.

The plaintiffs, who live in the streets near the Civic Center, filed suit in 1988 after their bedrolls and personal belongings were taken during a street sweep.

The confiscated belongings were not returned and some said they lost valuable identification papers, medical prescriptions and irreplaceable mementos.

At Mears' request, Sunwest Bank in downtown Santa Ana agreed to open savings accounts or to cash the checks, even though most in the group have limited identification and no permanent address.

Trump considers selling properties

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Trump, the king of glitzy real estate and casinos, now says he wants to become the king of cash.

The tycoon said Friday he has discussed selling or refinancing virtually every major asset he owns to raise money to buy new properties. Trump said he has hired Merrill Lynch & Co. to negotiate a possible sale of the Trump Shuttle less than a year after buying the airline from Eastern Airlines.

"If I got the right offer, I would consider selling it," Trump told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Trump was confirming remarks made to the Wall Street Journal, which published details of his financial plans in a story Friday after its own interview with him. The Journal's account said Trump was so adamant about his cash strength he threatened to sue the newspaper if it suggested otherwise.

Speculation about Trump's net worth and business intentions have gathered momentum ever since his marital problems became the latest gossip tabloid fodder earlier this year.

Forbes magazine, for example, said it has slashed an estimate of Trump's net worth by more than $1 billion, to around $500 million. In its May 14 cover story, which Forbes made available Friday, the magazine says it revised the estimate after examining nonpublic documents submitted by Trump last year to a government body, which Forbes declined to specify.

The article questioned whether Trump's cash flow is sufficient to cover the debt and interest payments from his vast holdings.

Trump denied that his empire faces any cash shortage problems, saying he has cash reserves of $380 million.

"I'm very liquid now," he told the AP. "I want to build up cash because I think cash is going to be king." He did not elaborate, but said he is interested in raising cash, so that he will have funds on hand in the future to acquire additional properties.

Among Trump's assets are New York's Plaza Hotel, the glitzy Trump

Tower skyscraper on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue, and casinos in Atlantic City, N.J., including the $1 billion Taj Mahal casino, which recently opened with much fanfare.

Some people in the financial community are watching for signs that Trump might be accumulating cash to cope with a current or anticipated cash crunch caused by a heavy debt load.

"He's in a cash squeeze. Why else is he doing this?" said a hotel industry analyst.

He and other analysts spoke on condition they not be identified, partly out of fear of arousing Trump's lawsuit threats against people whose views he doesn't like.

Last month, gaming industry analyst Martin Hoffman was fired by his firm, Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Philadelphia, after he made negative comments published in the Journal about the Taj Mahal's long-term prospects. Trump threatened to sue the firm and Hoffman was fired after he rescinded his initial written apology to the developer.

New York halts deposits at 5 sperm banks

NEW YORK (AP) — The state Health Department said Friday it has barred deposits at five sperm banks, including two being sued by women who say they were impregnated by the wrong sperm.

In a letter delivered Wednesday, each bank was told to "cease collecting and processing human semen for artificial insemination and to either destroy all anonymous, semen samples of hold them until it meets requirements for (anonymous) donor screening and testing."

Authorities said none of the banks had applied for a state license as required by a regulation that took effect in October.

The banks, all in Manhattan, included Advanced Fertility Services, which has been sued by Julia Skolnick, and University Fertility Center of Research, which has been sued by a married couple identified in court papers as Jane and John Doe.

"Mrs. Skolnick gave birth to a daughter who is half black. Mrs. Skolnick is white, as was her late husband, whose sperm was supposed to have been used in the insemination."

Jane Doe sued University after she gave birth to a child whose blood type allegedly did not match her or her husband. She arranged to be impregnated by his sperm.

The three other banks were Fertility Research Foundation, the Fertility Institute of New York, and the Mary Wilson Fertility Center.

According to investigators, the most serious problems were at Advanced Fertility. The investigators said there was no evidence:

• that Advanced Fertility quarantined semen from anonymous donors for six months before it was used;

• that donors were given appropriate physical exams;

In addition, the bank failed to apply for a state license even after it being told, said Maryanne Gardineer, a Health Department regulator.

Robert Whittaker, a lawyer for the bank, said its operator, Dr. Hugh Melnick, "is working with the state and has indicated that whatever bookkeeping problems exist will be corrected."

Vicki Zeldin, a health department spokeswoman, said Advanced Fertility "claimed these were only paperwork problems, but if they can't document that something happened, how do we know they did it?"

A nun prays while kneeling at closed doors of Church of the Holy Sepulcher in Jerusalem

Israeli holy sites closed to protest Jewish settlement

JERUSALEM (AP) — Church bells tolled, black flags fluttered in the breeze and the doors of Jesus' burial site were shut Friday for possibly the first time in 800 years as Christians protested a Jewish settlement in Jerusalem's Old City. In an unusual show of unity, about 150 clergymen from nine major Christian sects gathered to oversee the closing of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which marks the site of Jesus' crucifixion and burial. Latin Patriarch Michel Sabbah, Greek Orthodox Patriarch Diodoros I. and Armenian Orthodox Patriarch Torqum Manogian recited the Lord's Prayer in Arabic, Armenian and Greek before the massive wooden doors swung shut. Wajih Nussseibeh, a Muslim whose family keeps the key of the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, said it was the first time the doors were closed since the Crusaders were driven out of the city by the Islamic warrior Saladin in the 12th century A.D.

The Church of the Nativity, which marks the site of Jesus' birth in Bethlehem, and holy sites throughout the country were also closed in the daytime protest. Church bells rang in somber, funeral cadence for about five minutes every hour. In an act of solidarity, Muslim leaders closed the Al Aqsa mosque and Dome of the Rock shrine to visitors. Only worshippers were permitted in the complex.

Bishop Samir Kafiti, the head of the Anglican Church in Jerusalem, told reporters Christian leaders were dissatisfied with an Israeli Supreme Court decision to evict the 150 Jewish settlers by next Tuesday from the building where they are living.

The building is in the Christian quarter of Jerusalem's old walled city. The Old City is on land seized by Israel during the 1967 Middle East War and is divided into Moslem, Christian, Jewish and Armenian quarters.

Kafiti said the court decision Thursday was ambiguous because the judges did not return full control of the building to the Greek Orthodox Church, which owns it. The church alleges the settlers are in the building under an illegal sublease. "It is a half solution," Kafiti said, referring to the court's decision to allow 20 guards and maintenance staff to remain in the building pending a final ruling on the tenancy dispute.

George Hintlian, secretary to Manogian, said if the courts did not eventually rule in favor of the Greek Orthodox Church, "stronger protests will be considered by the heads of churches, probably longer periods of closure."

The settlers moved into the 72-room St. John's Hospice on April 11, touching off angry protests from Palestinian Moslems and Christians and bringing international condemnation.

Gorbachev faces environmental complaints in major Soviet city

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev was besieged with complaints Friday about foul water and air in a city so polluted the children have drawn pictures of smog and written: "I don't want to die!"

After two days of addressing residents' worries about the sagging economy in the Ural Mountains city of Sverdlovsk, Gorbachev traveled to nearby Nizhny Tagil and confronted a new issue: pollution. "Metal is metal, but people, Mikhail Sergeyevich, are not iron," relegated to a minority role in the Soviet Union unless it figures out how to win over voters, Moscow's party chief warned Friday. "If we can't learn to understand and defend the interests of the people, we'll have to go into the opposition," Yuri A. Prokofiev, leader of Moscow's 1.1 million Communists, told a news conference.

"If there are no improvements in people's lives in the near future, then in the next elections they may not vote at all for the Communist Party, and it could end up in the minority," he added.

Prokofiev was speaking from among 36 in a government "black book" listing the most polluted areas of the Russian federation, Pravda reported in September. Other news reports have said smog from the 45-year-old coke-burning furnaces at the steel complex burns children's skin as they walk to school and causes serious lung and heart problems.

Factories in the area, 900 miles east of Moscow, spew out more than 600,000 tons of pollutants annually, about 1.5 tons per resident.

Local children last year sent the complex's managers drawings of "smokestacks, smog enveloping living areas and the handwritten words: 'I don't want to die!'" the newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported.

Huge demonstrations have been reported in Nizhny Tagil and other Soviet cities as residents demand a cleanup of air and water.

They say the pollution was caused by a government policy that emphasized production at all costs, even at the expense of people's health.

The Kremlin chief saw the pollution and its sources first-hand Friday, taking a walking tour of the sprawling metallurgical complex, stopping occasionally to field what a Soviet television correspondent said were thousands of workers' questions.

Soviet TV's nightly newscast "Vremya" showed Gorbachev, wearing a white hard hat with a visor to protect his eyes.

Moscow party chief warns Communists will soon be minority opposition group

MOSCOW (AP) — The ruling Communist Party will soon be relegated to a minority role in the Soviet Union unless it figures out how to win over voters, Moscow's party chief warned Friday.

"If we can't learn to understand and defend the interests of the people, we'll have to go into the opposition," Yuri A. Prokofiev, leader of Moscow's 1.1 million Communists, told a news conference.

"If there are no improvements in people's lives in the near future, then in the next elections they may not vote at all for the Communist Party, and it could end up in the minority," he added.

Prokofiev was speaking from in Moscow elections in March, many Communists were trounced by reformist candidates who blamed the party for the city's many ills.

Prokofiev himself was elected to the Moscow City Council, but the bloc in the council that supports the Communist Party platform numbers only about 90, compared with some 400 in the more radical Democratic Russian group.

In the Soviet Union's first multi-candidate elections, held over the past year, many Communist leaders have been defeated. Officials say they are victims of the party's "crisis of confidence."

Prokofiev acknowledged that 6,000 Muscovites quit the party in the first quarter of this year but said only "a scattered few" were leaving for ideological reasons.

He said most were elderly or token members who were no longer active Communists anyway.

Of those who quit on principle, he said, about half left because they think reforms are proceeding too slowly and the other half because they oppose reform altogether, he said.

Prokofiev predicted the Communist Party would formally split soon, losing a reformist group known as the Democratic Platform.

But he said he had high hopes for this July's Party Congress, which could help both improve the party's image and heal the rift between party officials and rank-and-file Communists.

Soviet troops fire on stone-throwing protesters

MOSCOW (AP) — Troops fired at rock-throwing demonstrators in the disputed southern territory of Nagorno-Karabakh, the official Tass news agency reported Friday. Two civilians and seven soldiers, and police were injured, it said.

Tass said the incident occurred Thursday, night, in incident in Stepanakert, capital of the mainly Armenian enclave located inside Azerbaijan.

The news agency said about 1,000 people gathered outside the military commandant's office to demand the release of two Armenians detained for addressing a rally earlier in the week.

State of emergency regulations in effect in the district forbid mass demonstrations.

The troops had used shields to move the crowd away from the square in front of the commandant's office but were hit by stones before they began shooting, the news agency reported.

Among the injured were five Interior, Ministry troops, two policemen and two civilians, Tass said.

gunshot wound, it said, without elaborating.

Nagorno-Karabakh has been at the center of a territorial dispute between ethnic Armenians who dominate the region's population and Azerbaijanis since February 1988.

Armenians demand that the region be put under control of the Armenian republic, while Azerbaijanis say it should be in their hands.

Violence, strikes and demonstrations have erupted repeatedly.

Afghanistan's ruling party advocating economic, political change

KABUL, Afghanistan (AFP) — Afghanistan's ruling party, which seized power 12 years ago Friday, now advocates political and economic pluralism and is seen here as trying to distance itself from the 1978 Marxist Revolution.

The ruling People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan of President Najibullah has not scheduled any celebrations to mark the 12th anniversary of the "revolution." The event is also overshadowed by festivities ending the Moslem fasting month of Ramadan.

"It is almost as if the government wants to forget the revolution. It appears to be trying to project a different image. It is trying to woo private and foreign investment and is trying hard to get away from the pro-Marxist image," a Kabul-based diplomat said.

The government has announced that there would be no military parades, public meetings or any other ceremonies to mark the anniversary of what is officially termed the "April uprising" and privately brushed aside by officials as the "April non-event."

"There would be no military parades this year because troops would be busy protecting the people," a government spokesman said.

"Our military strength was shown in the defense of the nation in the past year," the spokesman said "returning to battle that renewed in Afghanistan after the Soviet withdrawal last February.

The only function in connection with the occasion was an address by the 44-year-old president to a meeting of top military commanders, party hierarchy and diplomats followed by a dinner given by the Afghan Foreign Ministry.

Najibullah admitted that his party had made "several mistakes" in the past and was proposing political and economic reforms to end his party's monopoly on power.

When machine-gun fire broke the silence of this then-sleepy nation on April 27, 1978, it ushered in a pro-Soviet revolution with promises to end feudalism and the sufferings of impoverished Afghanistan.

"The revolution slogan was food, clothing and shelter for all," remembered a 35-year-old government employee. The man, who did not want to be identified, quickly added: "But instead of food we have bullets in our bellies. For clothes we have shrouds, for shelter we have graves."

More than a million people have died in the war that engulfed the nation during the past 12 years, and even more people have been wounded and maimed for life.

Liberian refugees flee from soldiers

GOSSOPA, Guinea (AP) — Thousands of refugees fleeing the brutality of Liberian soldiers are crossing the border and inundating villages like Gossopa.
Many are filled with tribal hatred and vow to return home for revenge.
"They killed my mother. They killed my sister. They killed my little brother," a 34-year-old businessman said. "Now, I'm joining the rebels and I'm going to kill them, especially those Krahn."
Liberia's president, Samuel K. Doe, is of the Krahn tribe.

Colombia to proceed with election

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Colombia today rejected calls to postpone the presidential election after the assassination of Carlos Pizarro, the third candidate for president to be gunned down since August.
In another development, church officials in Medellin, the home of a major drug cartel, said they had foiled a plan to kill Colombia's Roman Catholic prelate, Cardinal Alfonso Lopez Trujillo.
On Thursday, a 25-year-old man on a suicide mission killed Pizarro, a former leftist guerrilla, on a Colombian jetliner carrying 97 people. Bodyguards killed the assassin, who reportedly was hired by drug traffickers.

Korean strikers face off with police

ULSAN, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of striking workers armed with steel pipes, firebombs, and homemade cannons set up barricades today to keep out 18,000 riot police officers deployed outside the country's largest shipyard.
Management and union officials of Hyundai Heavy Industries Co. said there was little room for compromise at the closed shipyard.
The main dispute involves the union's demand for the release of four labor leaders arrested in earlier protests. The company maintains that judicial matters are out of its domain.
Last year, the government sent in 12,000 police officers, supported by helicopters, to end a bitter 109-day strike at the shipyard. Hyundai said it lost $6 million a day in last year's strike.

6 die in South African black battles

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Six more people were shot or hacked to death in black factional fighting in Natal Province, and the government deployed new troops to halt the conflict, police said today.
Police said the latest victims were killed during the previous 24 hours, including a man and woman who were attacked with knives and set on fire by a mob. A police officer was shot in the back in one attack, police said.
Military officials said a mechanized army battalion was being deployed in Natal to help stop factional fighting. The combat battalion is part of about 2,000 troops deployed in Natal.

German defense cut would fund unification

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany on Friday said it would trim its military spending to help pay for unification but said East Germany also will have to cut costs for the merger to succeed.
Rudolf Seiters, Chancellor Helmut Kohl's chief of staff, also said East Germany should not make unreasonable demands in negotiations on merging the countries' economies.
West Germany and East Germany hope to achieve economic unity by July 2. This would be a giant step toward ending the two countries' 41-year division.
Seiters predicted basic agreement, based on proposals by Bonn, as early as next week.
However, Lothar de Maiziere, East Germany's prime minister, said his people would face enormous burdens if all subsidies are immediately eliminated.
"We assume that rent, energy and public services will continue to be subsidized," he told the Berliner Zeitung newspaper of East Berlin before talks with a West German delegation began in the city.
No details of the six hours of talks were released. They are to continue Monday in Bonn.

Guenter Krause, head of the East German delegation, said agreement was reached on "many questions." But he added "there are still open questions."
Seiters told West German lawmakers East Germany will have to hold down public spending for economic unity with West Germany to work.
"I stress once again: West Germany is prepared to financially support East Germany," he said in West Germany. East Germany must carefully weigh what is financially feasible and what is not," Seiters told Parliament.
Seiters called for cost cutting by state and local governments and said unification will be financed without any tax increases — with the help of strong West German economic growth and added borrowing.
He said unity costs will also be paid through federal spending cuts in defense and other areas.
Seiters said "re-orienting the armed forces," for example, will yield savings that can be used toward unification.
He did not elaborate. West Germany is considering reducing its armed forces from 490,000 to 400,000. Regarding monetary union, Bonn proposes exchanging one West German mark for one East German mark for wages, pensions and savings up to $2,300.

Thatcher bucking move toward federated Europe

The Baltimore Sun
LONDON — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is scheduled to head Saturday to a European summit in Dublin, Ireland, to try to halt a Franco-German drive to establish a federal United States of Europe by January, 1993.
West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French President Francois Mitterrand seized the initiative on the eve of the summit by calling for a special inter-governmental conference on political, monetary and defense union.
"They are supported by the host of Saturday's greeting, Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey, but Friday he was seeking to defuse the latest confrontation.
"I am very keen that nobody should be isolated," he told a press conference, in an overt reference to Mrs. Thatcher's vehement anti-federalist position.
He said that he hoped to produce "the greatest possible degree of uniformity and consensus" at Saturday's talks. Any decisions reached at the meeting will require unanimous votes.
Mrs. Thatcher has indicated that Britain will be present, with its veto.

Last log train rolls in Oregon

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (AP) — Oregon's last logging train will carry its final load of timber on Sunday.

Production cutbacks at its sawmill here have prompted Weyerhaeuser Co. to stop shipping logs by rail from Bly to Klamath Falls over its Oregon, California & Eastern Railway Co.

"It's a sad thing to see it go," said Bob Coombes, vice president and general manager of the railroad. "All kinds of people have been contacting us about taking pictures and videos."

The Sycan Woods Railroad, the last of a number of feeder lines, will also be shut down, Coombes said.

From here on out, logs from Weyerhaeuser lands and federal timber sales the company purchases in the Bly area will go over the mountain by truck, Coombes said. Logs have been rolling on the OC&E since 1923, when the line from Klamath Falls to Sprague River was finished. It was extended to Bly in 1930.

The 64 miles of track going over Bly Mountain include the only double-tracked double switchback in the world, Coombes said. The train has to back into the switchbacks to make a tight turn.

"During 1929 to 1936, a number of logging railroads were built as feeder lines into the OC&E," Coombes read from a history of the railroad. "By 1948, all were abandoned except Weyerhaeuser Co.'s 58-mile Sycan Woods Railroad."

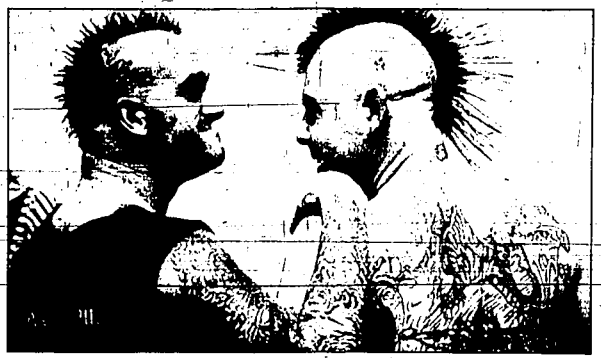

"The Southern Pacific and Great Northern Railroads took over direct control of the OC&E in 1933, alternating management every five years."

"Typical traffic from the 1930s through the 1950s was 8,000 log cars a year," Coombes said.

Weyerhaeuser bought the mill in Bly in 1970 and started a major expansion. With Southern Pacific and Great Northern reluctant to upgrade the line to handle increased traffic, Weyerhaeuser bought the railroad in 1975.

Shippers, largely of ponderosa pine, peaked at more than 35,000 carloads a year in 1978 and 1979, including 4,000 carloads of lumber and chips from the mill. The mill closed in the timber crash of the early 1980s. Last year, shipments from Bly to Klamath Falls were down to 7,000 carloads.

Some of the 16 people working on the OC&E have made plans to launch new careers. Janie Berg, a rear brakeman with 12 years in railroad work, will turn to raising and training horses full-time. Engineer Terry Preston, who has 19 years on the OC&E, has been taking education classes with his wife, Kathy, and plans to move to Texas.

Original Mouseketeer files suit against Disney

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Original Mouseketeer Darlene wants to see Walt Disney Productions in court. Why?

Because she says they cheated her out of royalties from the original "Mickey Mouse Club."

Darlene Gillespie is accusing Disney of taking advantage of her in 1955 when the then 14-year-old Mouseketeer-to-be signed a contract. Her lawsuit contends the entertainment company failed to tell her the true terms of her employment on the popular television show.

Disney spokesman Erwin Okun said the company would have no comment until attorneys had a chance to review the court papers.

The Superior Court suit filed Thursday alleges that Disney falsely promised the young Darlene a "substantial amount of money" from her percentage of the sales of character merchandising, royalties and residuals from record sales.

Disney further "failed to inform her that her actual realized earnings would be divided in such a way that (she) would not earn any more than a few dollars from the sales," the lawsuit says.

In court papers, Gillespie said she only became aware of the gravity of her loss in 1987.

Disney, the lawsuit contends, has earned more than $10 million from Ms. Gillespie's appearances on the show. The suit seeks unspecified punitive, general and compensatory damages.

"Thank you Jesus, thank you Jesus," she shouted into the night air, throwing her arms wide. The first death threat came by telephone. Then the junkies sent an ambulance, to scare her, followed by a bear.

GENSCHER Wins international prize

Reagan visits blinded child for animal chat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Reagan, moved by a newspaper account of a little girl blinded by cancer, visited her at the hospital, chatting with her about dogs, horses and uniforms.

Reagan traveled across town Thursday to Childrens Hospital to comfort and chat with 4-year-old Kati Slemmer, who suffers from a form of eye cancer and a brain tumor.

The cancer has spread and her prognosis is poor. In a recent Los Angeles Times article, officials at Childrens Hospital noted the cheerful, REAGAN Talks about dogs, horses, uniforms energetic and loving spirit of the little girl.

"She's amazing," said nurse Cammie Hancock. "If people could only view the world the way Kati views it... She just radiates love."

When Reagan arrived, he brought a stuffed pooch.

Immediately the little girl asked him if he had a dog.

"Yes," the former president answered. Kati pressed him on the name.

"Rex," Reagan replied. She wanted to know if he had horses.

When Reagan assured her he did, she asked if they were unicorns. The former president laughed.

After visiting with Kati, Reagan visited other children suffering serious illnesses in the hospital.

German leader given award for peace work

OVIEDO, Spain (AP) — West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher was awarded the Prince of Asturias International Cooperation prize Friday for seeking disarmament in Europe.

Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo, the Prince of Asturias Foundation secretary and former Spanish prime minister, said Genscher won the award for "his vital contribution to the building of the European community, for his decisive role in the process of disarmament, for his efforts to create a Pan-European security system and for his tenacious defense of human rights."

Nashville trio signs up to help national parks

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The cowboy music trio Riders in the Sky have signed up to make public service announcements and personal appearances on behalf of the National Park Service.

The Grand Ole Opry group plans to perform concerts in national parks, and to discuss their support of the parks on their public radio series, "Riders Radio Theatre," which airs on 100 stations.

The show, formerly taped in Nashville, has moved to Cincinnati.

The three dress as cowboys and sing songs such as "Cool Water."

Detroit residents crack down on crack dealers

Boston Globe

DETROIT — It was a Sunday night, a few hours after the police had raided the crack house, and the old woman had lost her sense of caution.

"Thank you Jesus, thank you Jesus," she shouted into the night air, throwing her arms wide.

The first death threat came by telephone. Then the junkies sent an ambulance, to scare her, followed by a bear.

But the strategy backfired, and the war was on: The neighborhood's senior-citizens began to fight back. One by one, they crept out from behind locked doors, clutching pots and pans. They gathered in front of the sagging crack house, their fear consumed by fury. And they began to pray and shout.

"Pack up the crack and don't come back!" they screamed. "We want our neighborhood back!"

Days later, they gained a beachhead. Raided again by local police, the junkies fled. But the marchers continued, reclaiming their neighborhood lot by lot. Over the past two years, hundreds of others have fallen in behind them, a swelling battalion of citizens attempting to defend their beleaguered city and to stop its children from dying.

Their tactics are different. Some march with pots and pans. Others develop jobs for those who have nothing. Some confront dealers on their own turf. But all are driven by desperation.

"There comes a time in your life when the fear goes and you have to act," said Dorothy Garner, 60, the founder of We The People Reclaiming Our Streets, or WE-

PROS. The specter is real. With a local unemployment rate of 12 percent, more than twice the national average, the Motor City has seen the drug-dealing industry take over. The many city blocks left abandoned and boarded up as the auto industry declined provided a ready home for the drug trade, which in turn bred a climate of violence.

Although the city's crime rate has declined in recent years, the per capita murder rate here is the second-highest in the nation with 624 homicides last year.

Crewcut wearers celebrate style

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

DULUTH, Minn. — The 20 men who kept running their hands through their hair at the Pickwick restaurant on Thursday night looked like they had just stepped out of a 1950s burlesque show.

They came from far and wide to celebrate the ninth annual international gathering of crew cuts at the Duluth restaurant.

The flattops spend one day at their Pickwick headquarters each year telling tales that only they can relate to. Stories of how they wash and comb their hair with a wet washcloth, how they've been nicked with clippers and had lopsided cuts.

Members brought the official bottlecap out each time a potential member walked into the room. The only membership requirement is that the hair be no longer than the diameter of that bottlecap. Members must have at least 10 hairs within the cap's space.

"We do have strict guidelines, no wimpy hair," said Jerry Brown, one of the group's originators.

AIDS-exposure charges planned for former basketball player

BOISE (AP) — At least six more AIDS-exposure charges are being considered against Kerry Stephen Thomas, the former college basketball player accused of intentionally exposing a woman to the deadly disease.

Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal said Thursday that he expects to file additional counts involving other alleged female victims who came forward after Thomas' arrest Wednesday night.

An investigation was continuing Friday.

Thomas, 25, of Boise, is accused of willfully exposing a woman to the AIDS virus during sexual intercourse last December. If convicted, he faces up to 15 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

The psychiatric technician at Intermountain Hospital in Boise was held Friday at the Ada County Jail in lieu of $1 million bond. Magistrate John Vehlvo has scheduled a preliminary hearing in the case May 11.

In order for Thomas to have exposed an individual to the virus, he must have exchanged body fluids with that person and had prior knowledge of testing positive for human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

HIV testing is confidential in Idaho, but not anonymous. Law enforcement agencies conducting a criminal investigation may request a suspect's HIV test results from the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Thomas, who played basketball at Boise State University and Northwest Nazarene College in Nampa, said in a telephone interview Thursday that he was in shock over the charges against him.

The interview appeared in a copyrighted story in The Idaho Statesman.

"I am innocent. I'm not some horrible monster," Thomas said. "I wouldn't deliberately try to infect someone with the HIV virus. I'm not endangering women. I'm not a psychopath. I don't even sleep around."

He is the second Idahoan to be charged under the two-year-old state law, following George Frank Lewis, a homosexual Boise apartment manager. The exposure charge against Lewis was dropped after he was sentenced to life in prison for child molestation.

The son of a retired U.S. Air Force veteran, Thomas moved to Boise as a seventh-grader. He blossomed into a standout athlete in track and basketball at Borah High School, graduating in 1982 after leading the school's basketball team to a state championship.

He went on to Boise State, where he was a 6-foot-3 reserve guard. He sat out one season with a broken ankle, then returned for the 1984-85 season, earning limited playing time.

He eventually was scratched from the Boise State roster after becoming academically ineligible, and in 1987 played for Northwest Nazarene.

Council moves to wilderness mediation

BOISE (AP) — The firm that helped negotiate the Camp David Accords between Israel and Egypt during the presidency of Jimmy Carter has expressed interest in trying to mediate Idaho's long-running wilderness controversy.

Senate Resources and Environment Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, told the Legislative Council on Friday that Conflict Resolution Inc. based at Harvard University has inquired about the mediation scheme lawmakers set up this year.

He said Northwest Renewable Resources of Seattle, the company that mediated both the water quality and big game depredation disputes for the state, had also expressed interest.

In addition, Noh said another Seattle-based mediation company along with one operating out of the law school at Willamette University in Oregon could be considered as mediators for the talks that the council of legislative leaders took preliminary steps to set up.

The council directed Noh and House Resources and Conservation Chairman Dean Haagenen, R-Coeur d'Alene, to identify the major environmental, sportsmen, agriculture and resource industry groups to be involved in the initial session following the May 22 primary.

The council also voted to invite the current members of the state's congressional delegation and the primary nominees for the two congressional seats and the U.S. Senate seat on the November ballot since the final wilderness decision will be made by Congress.

The council hopes the initial meeting will yield a recommendation on what company should serve as mediator in future talks. Lawmakers hope will produce a consensus resolution on disposition of some 9 million acres of Idaho back country that has been under wilderness review for more than a decade.

Legislature may stop Indian bingo

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Legislature may have to change state laws to prevent Indian tribes in the state from running legalized bingo games on reservations, says Attorney General Jim Jones.

The state has received a letter from the federal Department of the Interior, saying it interprets the state constitution and state laws as allowing Indian bingo games.

Although the state doesn't agree with the interpretation, if it isn't changed, it appears there is little Idaho could do to stop high-stakes bingo games on reservations, he said in an interview Friday.

"We've written them a letter and told them our viewpoint and asked them to re-examine it, reconsider and perhaps revise their opinion," said Jones. "Should that not occur... the only option may be to address the matter by legislation, either in regular or in a special session," he said.

The Idaho Legislature isn't scheduled to meet for more than eight months, so any action this year would have to be in a special session.

At issue is the 1988 constitutional amendment and subsequent state laws authorizing a state lottery. A section of state law allows, in addition to lotteries, "charitable games of chance which are operated by qualified charitable organizations for the purpose of charitable purposes if conducted in conformity with law."

State laws do not allow games of chance other than the state lottery. But the regional office of the Department of the Interior, Portland, said its study indicates that because the Idaho Lottery Commission could authorize bingo games, there is nothing to prevent Indian tribes from conducting them.

Veterans upset for nothing; CSI keeps holiday

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For the College of Southern Idaho even to consider eliminating its Veterans Day observance is a sign of America's ingratitude, said a veterans group leader.

"It is a common occurrence that between was the country forgets its warriors," said Merle Francis, commander of the local Veterans of Foreign Wars.

CSI President Gerald Meyerhoeffer said a faculty committee earlier this month considered ending the practice of closing for Columbus Day and Veterans Day, in order to solve a testing and grading crunch just before Christmas.

"Reviewing our calendar and those of the rest of the state, we found we were the only institution recognizing both Columbus Day and Veterans Day," Meyerhoeffer said in a letter of explanation to area vets group leaders this week.

"It was an option to do what everybody else in higher education in the state was already doing," he said in a phone interview Friday.

Veterans embarked on a letter-writing and phone calling campaign to dissuade the college from eliminating the holiday, after someone anonymously sent them copies of the committee's proposal, said Emmett Olmstead, Veterans of Foreign Wars District 6 commander.

Their efforts were unneeded, however, because the committee had already decided not to "eliminate" either holiday, Meyerhoeffer said.

The committee, instead, decided to solve the problems by having teachers give essay questions on the last day of class, a week earlier, he said.

Teachers had been having difficulty giving and grading the essay tests in a timely manner, Meyerhoeffer said. Some tests were being taken as late as Dec. 22.

"I feel it is important to point out that in our interest to help our students, we did not in any way mean to show a lack of respect for our veterans and their contributions to our country for that misunderstanding, please accept our apologies," Meyerhoeffer said in the letter.

However, he said the events surrounding the proposal have been blown out of proportion.

"I feel much anguish could have been avoided if the person who distributed the communication would have simply checked to see what the problem was and how it was ultimately solved by our faculty and administration," he wrote to veterans.

Francis said he is grateful that the college did not follow the lead of other state colleges.

But he said that for anyone to consider such an option is a symptom of people forgetting the sacrifices that were made to maintain freedom.

Other signs of the country's forgetfulness are not difficult to find, he said.

Drug task force given grant by state panel

TWIN FALLS — A governor's committee has awarded the Magic Valley Drug Task Force a grant for the year beginning in July.

The exact amount of the grant is being withheld until it is formally presented on Tuesday, Kimball Mason, chairman of the Idaho Criminal Justice Council, said.

Twin Falls police and fire chief Paul Du Fresne said the task force requested $225,000, a little more than half of the state's total proposed budget. When the task force knows the amount of the grant, it will revise the budget and allot the money, Du Fresne said.

"It's very exciting news ... but it'll be much more exciting when we find out how many resources we have," he said.

The task force, which is comprised of law enforcement agencies from seven Magic Valley counties, currently has two full-time officers working with the state narcotics bureau. The grant may fund more full-time drug officers, or may fund a regional prosecutor who would handle strictly drug cases, Du Fresne said.

The grant will be presented at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Governor's Office in Boise.

Denver Broncos to meet local officers on the court

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls police plan to find out if the Denver Broncos are any better at basketball than they are at football.

The football team is coming to town in June to play basketball in a benefit game for the Twin Falls Police Association.

"We're starting to call it the Superbowl of charity basketball and see if that doesn't help us a little bit," police and fire chief Paul Du Fresne said.

The game will be held at 7:30 p.m. on June 2 in the C.S.I. gym.

Tickets are $8. For information, call 733-4600.

Camas County challenges rest of state to fight litter

FAIRFIELD — More than 100 miles of paved roads are free of litter in Camas County, how about your county?

The Camas Civic Organization has challenged the rest of Idaho's counties to make an effort to pick up litter and debris along roads and streets in conjunction with Gov. Cecil Andrus' Idaho is Too Great to Litter campaign that starts Monday. John Shelly, the organization's chairman, said about 75 volunteers picked up about 20 dump-truck loads of garbage last weekend.

The local highway district supplied the litter bags and hauled the trash to the dump, he said.

"We wanted to challenge other counties to get them to start thinking this way too," Shelly said. "We want them to make an effort to make the roads clean and to clean up the environment where they live."

Eden Council votes to paint railroad crossing signals

EDEN — The Eden City Council has voted in favor of painting railroad crossing signals on Idaho and Wilson streets in an effort to remind motorists to stop at crossing.

The crossing currently has stop signs.

Bombing range shut down while rafters were located

MOUNTAIN HOME — The Air Force temporarily closed Saylor Creek Bombing Range Monday to assist Owyhee County Sheriff's officials searching for a group of missing rafters in the Bruneau Canyon.

A civilian pilot flying a Cessna 182 out of Murphy located the party, which included seven people in three boats. Due to low water levels the party, which included two people over the age of 60, was more than 24 hours overdue.

The range was reopened after about 30 minutes.

Rupert Rodeo seeks entries to queen, princess contestants

RUPERT — Applications are being accepted for the Rupert July 4 Rodeo queen and princess contestants.

Contestants for queen must be 17 by Sept. 1 and not over 24.

Junior princess contestants must be between 7 and 11 by Sept. 1 and senior princess candidates must be between 12 and 16 by Sept. 1.

Residents of Minidoka and Cassia counties and surrounding areas are eligible. The deadline is May 29. Further information can be obtained by calling the Rupert Area Chamber of Commerce at 436-4793.

A grand time

Jennifer Fort, 8, and her grandpa Bob Fort put their heads together on a toy airplane project in Jennifer's second grade class at Morningside Elementary School. Friday was the school's grandparent and VIP day and hundreds of guests spent the afternoon experiencing life on the grade school level. Jennifer was in good company with grandparents Bob and Carol Fort and Dorothy Ellis all present.

Democrats choose convention delegates

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Democratic Party held caucuses Tuesday night and selected delegates for the state convention June 22-24 in Caldwell.

Twin Falls County and Gooding County delegates have not yet been announced. Other county selections were:

Cassia County
Delegates are Michael Cranney, Ann Woodhouse, and David Hanson of Oakley; Marie Hanzel of Burley; Jean Thomas of Albion. Alternates are Lyle Morton of Burley; Kay Symes of Albion; Chris Jones of Oakley; Arlene and Dallin Reese of Burley. County Chairwoman Sally Beitia, Committeewoman Ed Elliott, and Committeewoman Betty Morton also will attend.

Waste panel mulls area landfill idea

By JENNIFER KAUFH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The head of Twin Falls County's solid waste advisory committee told the County Commission Friday that a federal crackdown on landfills is inevitable.

Don Siplon said that's why the county should begin negotiations and form partnerships with other counties now for some sort of cooperative or regional solid waste disposal system.

The commissioners agreed. "We aren't sitting on our hands," Commission Chairman Marvin Hempleman said. "We're looking for sites (for a landfill) and we're still in conversation

New license for detention center close

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

JEROME — The juvenile detention center in Jerome remained operating but unlicensed Friday.

The center's administrator said he is waiting to hear from the Department of Health and Welfare to find out what he needs to do to get the license.

"We have done everything they have asked us to do," William Amoureux said. "We've bent over backwards."

The Southern Idaho Youth Center's temporary operating license expired Monday, and Health and Welfare postponed granting a permanent license pending last-minute problems.

The department's regional director, David Davis, initially declined to specify those problems, but Friday he said he needed to check one personnel issue with Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold.

"Basically, everything looks OK," he said. "We are real close."

The center continues to operate. 18 of 25 beds were occupied on Friday, Amoureux said.

"We're operating in good faith," Amoureux said.

The detention center lost its license last August after it failed to meet state requirements, including failing a fire inspection and not meeting staff and administration requirements. It was granted a provisional license in October.

Amoureux said the center has replaced two fire doors, and the sprinkler system has been inspected and approved by the state fire marshal. Screens, lighting and ventilation units have also been replaced in two bathrooms, he said.

And semantic changes have been made in the policy and procedure manual, he said.

Canal water causes well problems

The Times-News

HAZELTON — Two unearched farmstead wells contaminated by water seeping from the Northside Canal will be replaced by the canal company.

Canal water apparently escaped through porous volcanic rock near the Greenwood southeast of Hazelton earlier this month when the company first filed the canal. Manager Ted Diehl said. Owners of the two wells reported that their water had become clouded.

Silt has now apparently clogged the leak, however.

Diehl said the canal company is now drilling new wells for the farmers.

Timber company poll finds strong support for the environment

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Public support for environmental protection "runs both strong and deep among western Montanians," according to a private poll conducted by the timber giant Champion International Corp.

The poll, which was leaked to reporters by an anonymous source this week, suggested that Champion could improve its public image by developing publicized programs that protect wildlife.

"Every individual in this poll is that, whoever is perceived, being interested in taking care of the environment gains an important, perceptual advantage," wrote Christian Polheim, a professor at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine.

Among the findings of the poll:

- More than two-thirds of those surveyed disapproved of the method of timber harvesting known as clear-cutting, in which all the harvestable trees in an area are logged.
- Fifty-three percent said Gov. Stan Stephens has not done enough to protect the environment.
- More than two-thirds of those surveyed said they would be more likely to vote for a candidate who takes a strong environmental stand.
- Sixty-eight percent said tougher environmental laws are needed, existing one should be enforced more forcefully, or both.
- If clear-cutting is not used, about 60 percent said they would approve increased levels of timber harvest from public lands.
- Polheim surveyed 300 people in Missoula, Libby and Great Falls last December. The poll has a reported 5.7 percent margin of error.

In a Feb. 19 letter to company officials, Champion spokesman Tucker Hill of Missoula said the company commissioned the poll to "gauge public attitudes in western Montana regarding timber issues generally and Champion's stature among companies specifically."

Hill said Wednesday that he was "mystified" about how it became public and questioned "its newsworthiness."

"I just don't consider the survey to be public," he said. "We paid for it with private company funds. We have never discussed it in public."

He said he did not find the results of the poll particularly surprising.

"When you look at (the poll) across the board, the public cares very deeply about where they live and how it's treated, and that confirms what we have known," he said.

"As a major landowner in the state, we need to be aware about it and it's important to keep in mind."

Champion and other timber companies in Montana have been embroiled in an increasingly bitter debate over timber harvesting on public and private lands in Montana.

Timber firms say environmental groups are inappropriately blocking timber sales on public lands, while the conservation groups say timber giants like Champion and Plum Creek Timber Co. have created a shortage of timber by overcutting the resource lands.

Champion owns 900,000 acres of timberlands in Montana and employs 1,300 people at its mills and offices in Bonner, Libby and east of Missoula.

The poll also rated the public image of several large corporations in western Montana, including Champion.

It said Champion's public image is "blurred," with 34 percent giving it an approval rating and 30 percent saying it has a negative image.

Washington Corps. of Missoula had the most consistently positive image among the companies mentioned in the survey. Stone Container Corp. of Frenchtown had the worst.

Washington Corps. is a group of heavy machinery and construction firms owned by industrialist Dennis Washington; Stone owns a linerboard mill.

While noting Champion's "ambiguous" position in the public's eye, Polheim said there was "no ambiguity about what a company should do in 1990 in western Montana to express its concern for the environment."

"Concern for the environment runs both strong and deep among western Montanians."

"It continues to emerge as the issue of the 1990s. It cannot be regarded as a fad or as something which only appeals to a small number of elite environmentalists."

Cocaine, cash, cars confiscated in Boise raid

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man was returned to a charge of cocaine possession after leading law enforcement officers on a high-speed chase through southwest Boise neighborhoods.

Ennis A. Yardley, 42, pulled away from his driveway and led Idaho State Police and Department of Transportation Bureau of Narcotics officers on a seven-mile chase Thursday night that ended back at his West Boise home, State Police Sgt. Ralph Powell said.

Officers seized 12 ounces of cocaine and $45,000 in cash, Powell said.

Bureau of Narcotics officers were waiting for Yardley with a drug investigation search warrant when Yardley pulled up to his driveway about 8 p.m.

Powell said the car nearly struck two officers on foot and reached speeds of 85 mph during the chase, which lasted about 10 minutes.

Besides the 1981 Corvette Stingray that Yardley was driving, officers seized three other cars, and Powell said an investigation was continuing.

Canyon County returning to normal following evacuation caused by fire

MELBA (AP) — Things began returning to normal Friday in Melba after about 300 area residents were forced to evacuate by a fire in a vacant potato cellar that ignited 30 bags of a deadly insecticide.

The smoldering 25-pound bags of granular parathion were about 300 yards from Canyon County residents early Thursday, Idaho State Police allowed residents to return to their homes Thursday afternoon.

said Steve Shenk, an emergency medical technician with the Melba Quick Response Unit. "A couple people have called with flu symptoms."

Shenk said parathion's effects on humans could be slightly delayed for 24 to 48 hours after inhaling the smoke. Many rural evacuees said the dense plume burned their eyes as they drove to Melba early Thursday.

The danger forced the closure of local schools Thursday, and dairy farmers had to leave their cows unattended because of the lingering smoke.

located in "no man's land" — outside nearby fire protection districts, fire officials said.

"People who don't belong to a fire protection district have no fire protection," Farmer said. "So we couldn't cross the line."

A Canyon County deputy sheriff was the first to respond to the blaze around midnight. He discovered the labeled parathion bags in a corner of the 250-foot-long timber-straw-and-dirt cellar, and apparently tried to douse the fire with a fire extinguisher, to no avail.

Authorities continued investigating the fire's cause. Melba Rural Fire Department Chief Rick Farmer said he was not sure, but the fire may have been ignited by a burned-out bearing in a grinding mill.

Firefighters left the blaze burn itself out, fearing that water would cause the insecticide to spread. But officials said the fire could have been doused earlier, but no equipment was dispatched to the area because it was located outside a protection district.

No injuries were reported, but authorities said rural Melba-area residents could develop flu-like symptoms in the next 24 to 48 hours from inhaling the smoke.

"We're kind of worried about the effects popping up 24 hours later,"

State Agriculture Department officials said healthy livestock should survive the toxic fumes. Officials tested milk from dairies and grass from pasture in the area Thursday afternoon to document the level of contamination, if any.

Residents were warned to keep children inside for 48 hours to avoid contamination.

"A few drops of liquid on the skin would be fatal," said Cpl. Randy Holloway, Idaho State Police hazardous materials specialist.

A Canyon County dispatcher received a report on the fire at 11:36 p.m. Wednesday. The structure, owned by Desert Lodge Farms, was

Timber company poll finds strong support for the environment

MISSOULA Mont. (AP) — Public support for environmental protection "runs both strong and deep among western Montanans," according to a private poll commissioned by timber giant Champion International Corp.

The poll, which was leaked to reporters, was an anonymous source this week, suggested that Champion could improve its public image by developing publicized programs that protect wildlife.

"Every indication in this poll is that whoever is perceived as being interested in taking care of the environment gains an important perceptual advantage," wrote Christian Potholm, a professor at Bowdoin College in Brunswick, Maine.

Among the findings of the poll: —More than two-thirds of those surveyed disapproved of the method of timber harvesting known as clear-cutting, in which all the harvestable trees in an area are logged.

—Fifty-three percent said Gov. Stan Stephens has not done enough to protect the environment.

—More than two-thirds of those surveyed said they would be more likely to vote for a candidate who takes a strong environmental stand.

—Sixty-eight percent said tougher environmental laws are needed, existing ones should be enforced more forcefully, if both.

—If clear-cutting is not used, about 60 percent said they would approve increased levels of timber harvests from public lands.

Potholm surveyed 300 people in Missoula, Libby and Great Falls last December. The poll has a reported 5.7 percent margin of error.

In a Feb. 19 letter to company officials, Champion spokesman Tucker Hill of Missoula said the company commissioned the poll to "gauge public attitudes in western Montana regarding timber issues generally and Champion's stature among companies specifically."

Hill said Wednesday that he was "mystified" about how it became public and questioned its newsworthiness.

"I just don't consider the survey to be public," he said. "We paid for it with private company funds. We have never discussed it in public."

He said he did not find the results of the poll particularly surprising.

"When you look at (the poll) across the board, the public cares very deeply about where they live and how it is treated, and that confirms what we have known," he said.

"As a major landowner in the state, we need to be aware about it and it's important to keep on mind."

Champion and other timber companies in Montana have been embroiled in an increasingly bitter debate over timber harvesting on public and private lands in Montana.

Timber firms say environmental groups are inappropriately blocking timber sales on public lands, while the conservation groups say timber giants like Champion and Plum Creek Timber Co. have created a shortage of timber by overcutting their private lands.

Champion owns 900,000 acres of timberlands in Montana and employs 1,300 people at its mills and offices in Bonner, Libby and east of Missoula.

The poll also rated the public image of several large corporations in western Montana, including Champion.

It said Champion's public image is "blurred," with 34 percent giving it an approval rating and 30 percent saying it has a negative image.

Washington Corps. of Missoula had the most consistently positive image among the companies mentioned in the survey; Stone Container Corp. of Freepethown had the worst.

Washington Corps. is a group of heavy machinery and construction firms owned by industrialist Dennis Washington; Stone owns a linerboard mill.

While noting Champion's "ambiguous" position in the public's eye, Potholm said there was "no ambiguity about what a company should do in 1990 in western Montana to express its concern for the environment."

"Concern for the environment runs both strong and deep among western Montanans."

"It continues to emerge as the issue of the 1990s. It cannot be regarded as a fad or as something which only appeals to a small number of elite environmentalists."

Washington Corps. is a group of

Cocaine, cash, cars confiscated in Boise raid

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man was arrested on a charge of cocaine possession after leading police officers through a maze of high-speed chase through southwest Boise neighborhoods.

Ennis A. Yardley, 42, pulled away from his driveway and led Idaho State Police and Idaho Department of Law Enforcement Bureau of Narcotic officers on a seven-mile chase Thursday night that ended here at this west Boise home, State Police Sgt. Ralph Powell said.

Officers seized 12 ounces of cocaine and $45,000 in cash, Powell said.

Bureau of Narcotics officers were waiting for Yardley with a drug investigation search warrant when Yardley pulled up to his driveway about 8 p.m.

Powell said the car nearly struck two officers on foot and reached speeds of 85 mph during the chase, which lasted about 10 minutes.

Besides the 1981 Corvete Stingray that Yardley was driving, Powell said an investigation was continuing.

Canyon County returning to normal following evacuation caused by fire

MELBA (AP) — Things began returning to normal Friday in Melba after about 300 area residents were forced to evacuate by a fire in a vacant potato cellar that ignited 30 bags of a deadly insecticide.

The smoldering 23-pound bags of granular parathion sent toxic smoke over about 30 square miles of Canyon County countryside early Thursday. Idaho State Police allowed residents to return to their homes Thursday afternoon.

Authorities continued investigating the fire's cause. Melba Rural Fire Department Chief Rick Farmer said he was not sure, but the fire may have been ignited by a burned-out bearing in a ceiling fan.

Firefighters let the blaze burn itself out, fearing that water would make the insecticide to spread. But officials said the fire could have been doused earlier, but no equipment was dispatched to the area because it was located outside a fire protection district.

No injuries were reported, but authorities said rural Melba-area residents could develop flu-like symptoms in the next 24 to 48 hours from inhaling the smoke.

"We're kind of worried about the effects popping up 24 hours later,"

said Steve Shenk, an emergency medical technician with the Melba Quick Response Unit. "A couple people have called with flu symptoms."

Shenk said parathion's effects on humans could be slightly delayed for 24 to 48 hours after inhaling the smoke. Many rural evacuees said the dense smoke burned their eyes as they drove to Melba early Thursday.

The danger forced the closure of local schools Thursday, and dairy farmers had to leave their cows unattended because of the lingering smoke. Many rural evacuees said the dense smoke burned their eyes as they drove to Melba early Thursday.

A Canyon County dispatcher received a report on the fire at 11:36 p.m. Wednesday. The structure, owned by Desert Lodge Farms, was located in "no man's land" — outside nearby fire protection districts, fire officials said.

"People who don't belong to a fire protection district have no fire protection," Farmer said. "So we couldn't cross the line."

A Canyon County deputy sheriff was the first to respond to the blaze around midnight. He discovered the labeled parathion bags in a corner of the 250-foot-long timber-straw-and-cellar, and apparently tried to douse the fire with a fire extinguisher, to no avail.

State Police dispatchers notified Holloway of the hazard and the Melba Rural Fire Department was called to the scene.

Authorities may have to bill the landowner for not only the fire-suppression costs, but also for the hazardous soil-removal project that began Thursday, Holloway said.

"It's really a can of worms right now," he said. "The (environmental) cleanup will run into the tens of thousands of dollars. And no one knows who's going to pay for the fire-suppression costs."

Holloway said he had to make numerous phone calls early Thursday to find out the proper fire-suppression strategy.

with other counties."

Siplon told the commissioners to get used to the idea of having a major landfill in their county since most of the Magic Valley's trash is generated here.

He recommended the commissioners implement a comprehensive education program to go hand in hand with the move toward a regional or cooperative garbage plant.

The education program should address issues such as conservation and recycling and should include information about products that contribute to waste, refuse-derived fuels and technologies that could be employed to deal with the waste and dangers to groundwater, he said.

Siplon said the county should seek aid from the College of Southern Idaho, the local public health department and other entities to educate people.

Again, the commissioners agreed. "I think we're 100 percent behind the education idea," Commissioner North Bliss said.

Southern Central District Health Department environmental health officials earlier this week presented a proposed regional solid waste disposal plan to the commissioners of the Magic Valley's eight counties.

"But the commission did not make a decision on the plan and agreed to meet again next month after the proposed federal landfill regulations called Subtitle D, are decided upon or closer to their final form.

Siplon said the health department's plan is viable and could work even if only two and counties joined Twin Falls County in trying to meet the stricter landfill regulations expected soon from the federal government.

This could be done by the county on its own, Siplon said, but that wouldn't be the best interest of the people.

Siplon said University of Michigan solid waste experts told him that counties like Twin Falls should not wait for the Subtitle D rules to be enacted before looking for alternatives and should not embark on landfill projects by themselves.

Siplon suggested that a study be in Twin Falls County similar to one done in Michigan. That study rated land, square kilometer-by-square kilometer, to see which parcels of land would be the best site for a landfill.

The rating would take into account many variables, such as proximity to major population centers, depth of soil, air quality, geological features and more.

The commissioners accepted the advisory committee's recommendations and said they planned to move forward toward some sort of cooperative plan for dealing with solid waste.

Civil rights agency probes Idaho treatment of mental patients

BOISE (AP) — Prison is the wrong place for Idaho to house mental patients who have committed no crimes, according to a complaint being investigated by a federal civil-rights agency.

The complaint is the first major challenge to Idaho's decades-old practice of housing "dangerously-mentally ill" patients in a prison mental unit.

The Office For Civil Rights, a division of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, launched its investigation after Co-Ad, a non-profit advocacy organization for the disabled, filed the complaint against the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

At issue is whether Health and Welfare discriminates against mentally ill people by placing them in the prison, where standards of care may be lower than in the state's two mental hospitals.

"These individuals may remain in jail without getting any appropriate services for their mental conditions," Carmen Rockwell, regional director of the Office For Civil Rights, said Thursday in a telephone interview from Seattle.

A decision is expected by the end of the year. If Health and Human Services finds Health and Welfare at fault, it could withhold millions of dollars in federal grant money.

The prison system recently has come under fire as a "dumping ground" for mentally ill inmates, some of whom are accused of no crimes.

The criticism came from Dr. E. Fuller Torrey, co-author of a 1988 report that ranked Idaho's public mental health system 46th out of 50 states.

However, Michael DeAngelo, deputy attorney general for Health and Welfare, defended the practice.

"Most other states are larger and have more facilities than the state of Idaho," he said.

Under state law, patients who are deemed dangerous or violent can be incarcerated at the prison's mental health unit even though they have not been convicted, or even accused, of a crime.

Health and Human Services, which controls the federal purse strings of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, has determined it has jurisdiction in the matter.

Bur Health and Welfare officials said that might not be the case. Although the non-criminal mental patients are in Health and Welfare custody, courts make the final decision to admit them to the prison unit, DeAngelo said.

Health and Welfare officials received no copy of the complaint, just a notice briefly explaining the allegations and a request for information.

Brent Marchbanks, director of Co-Ad, was unavailable for comment.

Plane crash cause sought

CEDAR CITY, Utah (AP) — Federal investigators sought the cause of plane crash that claimed the lives of four Florida residents.

Bodies of the three men and a woman were removed from the crash site two miles east of here Thursday and were taken to the state medical examiner's office in Salt Lake City.

Iron County Sheriff's Deputy Don Murdock said the identities were being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The twin-engine Piper Navajo was en route from Denver to Reno when it disappeared off radar screens Wednesday night about 10:19 p.m.

The pilot was over Milford, about 40 miles north of Cedar City, when he radioed that he had a "fuel problem," and was turning back to Cedar City to refuel, said Seattle Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mitch Barker and Civil Air Patrol Lt. Col. Jerry Wellman.

No emergency was declared, they said.

"The pilot was cleared to visual flight rules approach at Cedar City airport at 8:13 p.m.," Barker said.

"He stated he had the airport in sight ... There was no further contact until they located the wreckage."

The weather was clear and visibility good to 30 nautical miles, he said.

Barker said there was a fuel truck waiting at the airport and the driver told officials he heard the plane fly overhead.

U of I installs condom machine

MOSCOW (AP) — University of Idaho officials have quietly installed a vending machine in the basement of the Wallace Complex on the Moscow campus this week, offering condoms and other health-care products.

The installation comes almost three months after the school announced plans to install a condom vending machine on a trial basis.

Donald Chinn, director of the university's health center, said

Thursday that it took longer than expected to get the machine in place because no single distributor carries the health products offered in the machine.

But to the south, Lewis-Clark State College President Lee Vickers has a different problem.

About 30 students staged a protest against Vickers' policies Thursday at the school's administration building, and his refusal to install condom vending machines.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"A successful man cannot realize how hard an unsuccessful man finds life."

— Edgar Watson Howe.

For the average player, executing an endplay against one opponent is an exhilarating experience. Imagine how satisfying it is to plan an endplay that will work on either opponent.

Today's hand was played at a recent tournament by Marly Arndt of Houston. Not all pairs reached the aggressive, three, no-trump, contract, none made as many tricks as Marly did.

The spade lead was ducked in dummy, and East's 10 was won by the ace. The two high diamonds were cashed and a diamond was conceded, declarer unblocking the club in dummy. East returned a heart, and Marly's jack won the trick. The club 10 was led to dummy's king, and declarer cashed his two diamonds, discarding Marly's last heart.

Marly then led his club deuce, inserting dummy's eight to hold the trick while East discarded. (West would have saved a trick had he won his ace and led a spade.)

The position was now clear. West was known to have the A-J of clubs and two unknown cards; East had the A-Q of hearts and two unknown cards. Ergo, Marly cashed the spade king and exited with the jack, not caring where the queen was.

Whoever won the trick would have to concede Marly's 10th winner to dummy's club queen or to Marly's heart king, and the well-played hand brought home a top score.

Jazz roll past Suns minus Kevin Johnson

By VERN ANDERSON
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — For one game, at least, the Utah Jazz found out how valuable Kevin Johnson is to the Phoenix Suns.

With Johnson limited to nine minutes of playing time because of the flu, Phoenix won a 113-96 victory over the Suns Friday night in the opener of an NBA best-of-5 playoff series.

"It's too bad Kevin couldn't play," Utah coach Jerry Sloan said. "They depend on him a lot. I'm sure he'll be ready for Sunday."

"We were more successful with the half-court trap than if Kevin had been out there," Sloan — whose ball-hawks forced 19 Phoenix turnovers.

Fitzsimmons wasn't about to use Johnson's absence as an excuse, saying Utah's aggressive play made the difference. Johnson, he said, probably should have stayed in the hotel.

"He wanted to try and play and that's what he tried to do, and he couldn't," Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said.

Fitzsimmons said Johnson twice took himself out of the game in the first half, but it was the coach who removed him for good before halftime.

Utah forward Karl Malone, held to 21 points, 10 under his season average, ignited a 9-0 third-quarter run that carried the Jazz to a 72-58 lead with less than four minutes remaining.

After Utah took its largest lead at 103-87 late in the game, Phoenix rallied to within seven behind Mike McGee's two 3-pointers, but failed to score in the final 2:04.

Reserve Dan Majerle scored 23 points for Phoenix, making up somewhat for the loss of Johnson, but John Stockton had 16 points and 17 assists for Utah.

Johnson, averaging 22.5 points and 11.4 assists, didn't take a shot in the first 134 minutes. A badly missed jumper was his only attempt, and he sat out the entire second half.

"We missed Kevin, but we've got a lot of guys on this team that can really go," Majerle said. "We're not going to use excuses. They came to play and we didn't. We were not in sync all night."

Sunday is another day and, we'll be ready," he said.

Phoenix, the fifth seed in the Western Conference, won three of four games between the two teams during the regular season as Johnson averaged 33 points.

Malone, the NBA's second-leading scorer, was shadowed in the first half by Kurt Rambis and scored just four points.

The Jazz led 58-47 at halftime and 72-58 after the Malone-led 9-0 run that produced a 14-point lead in the third quarter.

Jazz forward Thurl Bailey scored 12 of his 16 points in the first half and was one of six Utah players who scored in double figures. Bob Hansen also finished with 16.

Phoenix's leading scorer, Tom Chambers, missed Johnson's passing and scored 19 points, eight under his average. Jeff Hornacek scored 20 points for the Suns.

Rookie guard Greg Grant played most of the second half in Johnson's place.

Doug Collins likes the nine-day Los Angeles Lakers to win the NBA title. He thinks they'll beat Philadelphia if the 76ers get past the Bulls. If not, he thinks the Lakers will beat the Detroit Pistons.

"Philadelphia can beat Detroit; I don't think Chicago can," Collins said.

A Bulls-Sixers series could be "one of the better ones in the playoffs."

Collins is getting ahead of the schedule, of course, but his hectic itinerary as Turner Network analyst forces him to think ahead.

He would rather look forward than backward anyway. That's what he has tried to do since July 6, when he was fired as coach of the Bulls.

Despite his low Chicago profile this season — he said he attended only two Bulls games in the Stadium — Collins rarely has an opinion he keeps to himself.

T.F. boys finish surprising second at SIC track meet

By JEFF HOSKISSON

NAMPAL — The Centennial Patriots breezed to both the girls' and boys' team titles at the Southern Idaho Conference track and field championships here Friday.

The Patriots' boys' easily outdistanced runner-up Twin Falls 148-69, while the girls knocked off Boise 145 1/5 to 83. The Bruins girls ended up seventh with 26 points.

Twin Falls is not a member of the Boise-based SIC, but competes with the SIC member schools in all sports.

"We had our kids come to the top," said Centennial coach Gary Gorrill. "We have a lot of depth as well as some strong individuals."

The depth was evidenced in the team scores were led by four-event winner Jeremy Golden and three-event winner Bryce Alexander.

Golden, who triple-jumped a state-best 39-feet, 2 1/2 inches on Thursday, took the long jump at 16-3/4, the 400-meter dash at 1 minutes, 1.2 seconds and ran on the Patriots' winning 4x200-meter relay team.

Alexander claimed a sprint double, winning the 100 and 200 in 10.8 and 22.5, respectively, turning back defending state champion Chris Campbell of Capital in the 100. Alexander ran on Centennial's winning 4x100 relay team.

Canyon powers square off on Valley's track

The Times-News

HAZELTON — If weather permits, the next major meeting of the powers-that-be in Canyon Conference track will be held here this morning on Valley High School's hard-surfaced track.

The Monte Andrus Memorial meet, the Magic Valley's oldest continuous small-school track meet, will begin at 10 a.m.

Three-time defending District 4 Class A-3 champion Declo's girls will join their nemesis, Filer, on the Valley track. The Pilots have won two of their three meetings with the Wildcats this season, but the two teams have split their encounters on all-weather surfaces.

In the absence of four-time defending district A-3 boys' champion Glens Falls, the home-standing Vikings will be favored in their division.

With the exception of Glens Falls, all of the Canyon Conference schools are scheduled to take part, along with Aberdeen and Oakley.

Hershiser goes under knife; injury more serious than expected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Orel Hershiser, one of baseball's best pitchers since the mid-1980s, underwent extensive surgery on his right shoulder Friday and will be sidelined for the rest of the season.

Dr. Frank Jobe, who performed the surgery, said the injury was more serious than previously thought, but that Hershiser should be able to return by the start of next season.

Jobe said it was determined through arthroscopic surgery that Hershiser's shoulder required reconstruction of the anterior capsule and tightening of ligaments.

"Initially, there were certain things on the MRI (magnetic resonance imaging) study that were obvious and that's what led us to do the surgery," Jobe said at a press conference at Dodger Stadium prior to the Cubs-Dodgers game Friday night.

"We did the arthroscopy exam and we were able to see what the inside of the joint looks like. Then we found more damage than was present on the MRI, so that made the decision almost mandatory to reconstruct it and clean out the joint."

The surgery lasted 3 1/2 hours and Hershiser is expected to remain hospitalized for two days, said Mike Williams, the Dodgers' director of publicity.

"The articulating surfaces of his joint are still good," Jobe said.

The doctor described the damage as such:

"The anterior labrum was torn and rolled up on itself so that it formed sort of a window shade in the front of the joint. There was also some damage to the rim of the humeral head, the ball.

"The main problem is in this condition that the basic case is instability. The head slips a little bit and it rubs the rotator cuff against the roof of the shoulder and the rotator cuffs gets what we call in-substance tears. It's not a through-and-through tear, but it's as though you pounded with a hammer.

Although rehabilitation will begin immediately, the right-hander won't be able to throw a ball for at least four months, Jobe said.

"There's a level to what the human body will tolerate as far as competitive trauma," Jobe said. "Each person is different. He's doing extremely well. He's probably the ideal patient. He realized the problem, understood what was wrong and the reality that he had to get it done."

Jobe said he has been doing the procedure for about four or five years and has performed it on some Dodgers minor leaguers.

Dodgers' physical therapist Pat Srenear, who was present during the operation, said Hershiser's first real complaint of stiffness occurred in spring training after his first

Koch leads rain-soaked USF&G Classic tourney

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Gary Koch shot a 67 Friday to take a one-stroke lead over Mark O'Meara after two rounds of the rain-delayed USF&G Classic.

Koch delayed play for two hours and forced suspensions of the second round with 23 golfers still on the courses; they were scheduled to finish their rounds on Saturday before the start of the third round.

Koch, who finished Thursday's first round a stroke off the lead at 70, parred his first three holes Friday, then made the first of his five birdies on the par-4 13th hole, his fourth of the day.

He was at 7-under-par 137 after two rounds.

O'Meara, one of four tied at 69 after Thursday's first round, shot another 69 on Friday, overcoming a miserable front nine with a 30 on the back side.

"I was determined to get it back after going three-over over on the front," wanted to go three-under on the back, and I was fortunate enough to go six-under," he said.

First-day leaders Brian Temnyson and Steve Elkington shot 70s Friday and were tied with Corey Pavin at 139. Pavin shot a 67 on Friday.

Fred Funk, one of the four first-day leaders, was among those still on the course when play was suspended because of darkness. He was 4-under after 14 holes.

Curt Byrum shot a 66, the best round of the tournament, and was in a six-way tie at 142. He completed his round during the morning, when the weather was at its worst.

He said he may have made a mistake by rushing to beat the weather, taking a bogey on No. 8 with one hole to go.

"I started raining when we were on the eighth green. I didn't want to wait around. It could rain for a day or more,"

LA Lakers rocket past Houston in NBA playoffs

By KEN PETERS
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — James Worthy scored 34 points, including eight as the Lakers took command early in the fourth quarter, and the Los Angeles Lakers opened the NBA playoffs with a 101-89 victory over the Houston Rockets Friday night.

The victory in the first game of the best-of-5 series was a milestone for Lakers coach Pat Riley. With 99 career playoff victories, Riley tied former Boston coach Red Auerbach as the all-time winningest playoff coach in the NBA.

The Lakers trailed 35-22 early in the second quarter, but after leading 69-67 to begin the final period, they reeled off a 12-1 spur to go up by 13 just 2:44 into the quarter.

Worthy, who made 17-of-his 22 shots during the game, led the charge with four baskets, including a steal and solo fast break that made it 81-66 with 9:16 to play.

Sagging back on Akcem Olajuwon's defense, the Lakers almost completely neutralized the Houston center, limiting him to 13 points.

Olajuwon also played the second-half with three fresh stitches above the eye. He left the game with 3:06 remaining in the first half after he was hurt in a collision with Worthy under the Houston basket.

Magic Johnson added 21 points for the Lakers and also had 14 assists.

Chris Thorpe led Houston with 21 points and Vernon Maxwell had 20.

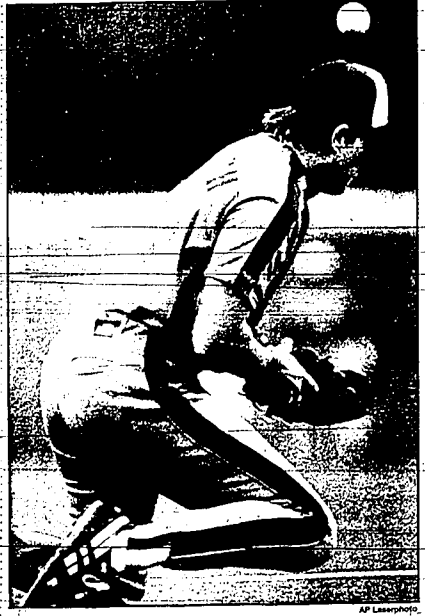

Los Angeles took its first lead since the opening seconds of the game on a jumper by Green; that made it 59-57 midway through the third quarter.

The Lakers trailed 43-35 when Olajuwon left the game to have his cut tended in the Houston locker room.

Los Angeles, then went on an 8-0 streak to tie the game at 43-43 with 35 seconds left. The Rockets countered with three quick baskets to lead 49-43 at halftime.

The Lakers were fortunate to be that close, since they made a staggering 16 turnovers in the first-half, to four for Houston.

Expos' Tim Wallach misplays the ball at Cincinnati

Viola & Company hold Astros to 2 hits

HOUSTON (AP) — Frank Viola had more problems with his back than he did with the Houston Astros hitters Friday night. Viola (4-0) yielded only two bunt hits, helping the New York Mets to a 1-0 victory over Houston, but had to leave after five innings when his back stiffened. All told, the Mets limited the Astros to three hits, all by Eric Yelding.

Viola retired 14 of the 16 batters he faced. John Franco pitched the last 12 1/3 innings for his sixth save. "I didn't even know I had a muscle back there," Viola said, gasping his lower back. "I haven't missed a start in 12 years and I'm not about to start now."

The Mets bullpen extended its scoreless string to seven games with Franco finishing for his sixth save. "It was just some discomfort, and with our bullpen there's no use in taking a chance," Viola said. "It got progressively worse but it's nothing at all. I'll be ready to go Wednesday night."

Mark Carreon hit the first pitch from Mark Portugal (1-3) over the left-field fence for the game's only run in the fourth inning. "It was a fast ball in and I guessed right," Carreon said. "I was trying to get a good read and I was setting on fast ball. When you're in a groove you see the ball and react. You don't have to guess. I'm getting there."

Portugal went eight innings and had his best outing of the season. But it wasn't enough. "I was knowing going against a pitcher like Viola you can't give up too many runs," Portugal said. "Unfortunately, one was too much."

Viola, who struck out five in his first career appearance against Houston, was replaced by Wally Whitehurst to start the sixth.

Cincinnati 3, Montreal 2
CINCINNATI (AP) — Chris Sabo singled off reliever Tim Burke with the bases loaded and two out at the bottom of the ninth inning Friday night, giving the surging Cincinnati Reds a 3-2 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Drew Hall (1-2) walked the bases loaded. Hall walked leadoff batter Mariano — Duncan, — intentionally walked Joe Oliver with two outs, then walked pinch-hitter Luis Quiñones to bring up Sabo, 0-for-4 at that point.

Sabo hit the second pinch runner Burko through the hole at shortstop to give the Reds their 11th victory in 13 games.

Montreal tied the game in the eighth on a two-run single by rookie Marquis Grissom.

Philadelphia 7, Atlanta 1
ATLANTA (AP) — Carmelo Martinez hit a grand slam in the eighth inning, leading the Philadelphia Phillies to their fifth victory in six games, 7-1 Friday night over the hapless Atlanta Braves.

Martinez reached reliever Rick Lueken for his first homer of the season and the third grand slam of his career after the Phillies loaded the bases against reliever Mike Stanton (0-3). Lenny Dykstra started the winning rally when he was hit by a pitch. Tom Herr, who had a homer among his three hits and two RBIs, and Von Hayes followed with singles to load the bases for Martinez.

Dennis Coak (3-0), lifted for a pinch-hitter to start the inning, allowed four hits, two walks and struck out two in seven innings.

Hershiser allowed six hits and five runs, all earned, walked four and struck out three Wednesday night. The walks were the first allowed by Hershiser this season.

Oakland loses for the 1st time on the road

BOSTON (AP) — Ellis Burks, dropped from the middle of the batting order to the No. 7 spot, picked a good time for his first game-winning hit of the season.

Gripped in a 3-for-28 slump and batting under .200, Burks capped a three-run ninth inning with a two-run, two-out single Friday night, lifting the Red Sox to a 7-6 victory over Oakland. It was the Athletics' first loss in nine road games this season.

"I just tried to hit the ball, and I did," Burks said after his looping liner just over the outstretched glove of second baseman Mike Bordick.

"I got a good pitch on 2-1 and I kind of jammed me a little bit, but I got just enough on it to get it over the guy's head," Burks said. "Hopefully, this will get things rolling for me."

"You guys have plenty to write about tonight," Boston left fielder Mike Greenwell said after going 3-for-5 with his first two homers of the season.

"That's my quota for the year," quipped Joey Reed, who hit his second homer within 24 hours, then started the rally in the ninth with a walk.

"That was a grueling game," Oakland manager Tony LaRussa said. "We did a lot of things right and just enough things wrong."

The A's, helped by home runs from Mark McGwire and Ron Hassey, took a 4-0 lead into the ninth, but relievers Mike Norris and Gene Nelson (1-1) were unable to hold the Red Sox.

Reed began the rally with a walk and took second on a single by Greenwell. Nelson replaced Norris and Dwight Evans forced Greenwell at second, with Reed going to third. Tony Pena lined a single to right for his fourth hit, scoring Reed and sending pinch-runner Randy Kutcher to second. Bill Buckner grounded back to the mound to advance the runners and Burks followed with his soft single to center, scoring Kutcher and Pena.

Jeff Reardon, the fourth Boston pitcher, was the winner in his first decision with the Red Sox. He retired Oakland in order, striking out two in the ninth.

Oakland starter Scott Sanderson allowed eight hits and four walks before needing help from Norris with two outs in the sixth.

Dennis Lamp, who replaced rookie Dana Kiecker in the fifth, gave up Hassey's go-ahead homer in the sixth as the A's took a 5-4 lead.

Milwaukee 9, Detroit 6

DETROIT (AP) — Milwaukee hit five doubles and got three RBIs from Greg Brock in a 9-6 victory over the Detroit Tigers Friday night for the Brewers' eighth win in their last nine games.

Jack Morris (2-2), who is 0-6 in his last seven starts against Milwaukee, was tagged for seven runs on 10 hits in 5 1/3 innings.

Bill Krueger (1-0), the second of three Milwaukee pitchers, worked three innings to get his first victory and Chuck Crim got his second save.

The Brewers overcame a 6-2 deficit with a five-run rally in the sixth inning that featured three dou-

Cleveland 7, Minnesota 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Joey Belle, Carlos Baerga and Candy Maldonado each hit two-run homers Friday night, leading the Cleveland Indians past the Minnesota Twins 7-2.

Cleveland starter Bub Black took a shutout into the ninth inning, but Fred Manrique and Kirby Puckett led off with solo-home runs. Manrique had three of the six hits allowed in "eight-plus" innings by Black. Cecilio Gantun got the last three outs.

Belle's first home run of the season put the Indians ahead 2-0 in the second, and Cleveland made it 6-0 in the fifth on Baerga's first career home run and Maldonado's fourth.

Seattle 4, Baltimore 3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave Valle hit two-run homer and Erik Hanson swung three hits in eight innings as the Seattle Mariners beat the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 Friday night for their third straight victory.

Two of the three hits off Hanson (2-0) were infield singles. Mike Schuler earned his fourth save and his 52nd career, to tie the Seattle record held by Bill Caudill.

Schuler gave up a two-out homer to Randy Milligan to make it 4-3.

Jeff Ballard (0-3) started the first three straight hits for Seattle's first run. Valle's homer in the fifth, his third, made it 3-0.

New York 5, California 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Pinch-hitter Scot Sanders' infield grounder scored Roberto Kelly from third base with the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning to give the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over the California Angels on Friday night.

Kelly opened the inning with a single off reliever Willie Fraser (0-1) and went to third on Fred Carone's single. Sanders batted for Mike Blowers and hit a chopper to short with Donnie Hill's only play being to first base as Kelly scored.

Lee Guetterman (1-1) pitched two innings of one-hit relief for the victory and Dave Righetti got the last three outs for his fourth save.

Claudell Washington and Devon White tied the score 4-4 in the span of four pitches off Yankees starter Tim Learny by opening the seventh inning with solo home runs.

Chicago 6, Toronto 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Greg Hibbard allowed one run and two hits in eight innings Friday night as the Chicago White Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-1.

Ivan Calderon drove in three runs for the White Sox with a sacrifice fly and two-run homer.

Hibbard, making his 26th major-league start, didn't give up a hit until the fifth when Glenallen Hill led off with a single. Hill scored on a two-out single by Junior Felix. Hibbard finished with five strikeouts and two walks. Rookie Scott Radzinsky got the final three outs.

Bulls roar past Bucks in NBA series opener

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 38 points and Scottie Pippen had a triple-double Friday night, and the Chicago Bulls used a 13-2 fourth-quarter run to defeat Milwaukee 111-97 in the opener of their first-round playoff series.

Although the Bulls grabbed the lead for good midway through the second quarter, the Bucks trailed only 83-80 early in the fourth period before Chicago took control.

Jordan converted a three-point play to start the decisive 13-2 run, and Ed Nealy and Stacy King added three points each as the Bulls pulled away to a 96-82 advantage with 6:31 left.

Allen Iverson finished with 17 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds for Chicago, and Horace Grant scored 19 points for the Bulls. Ricky Pierce led the Bulls with 28 points and Alvin Robertson scored 22.

There were eight lead changes and four ties in the first quarter, with the Bulls holding the biggest margin at 15-10. The period ended with Milwaukee holding a 27-26 advantage.

There were seven more lead changes early in the second quarter before Grant broke a 36-36 tie to put the Bulls ahead 39-36.
