Timetable for range set back

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Richard Cheney has pushed back the timetable for possible expansion of the Air Force's Saylor Creek bombing range in southwestern Idaho, raising questions about the future of the controversial proposal.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said Cheney notified his office Friday that the public comment period for a draft environmental impact statement on the proposed 2.5 million-acre expansion was being extended until Sept. 15.

The comment period on the first phase of the report closed Tuesday, and the Air Force expected to have a final version of the document completed by June.

In addition, Cheney told Symms' office Friday that he was postponing all construction at Idaho's Mountain Home Air Force Base until January, and there was a possibility not all the 94 F-4 fighter jets at California's George Air Force Base will be transferred, as scheduled, to Mountain Home.

The announcement comes as members of Idaho's congressional delegation prepare to meet Wednesday with Air Force Secretary Donald Rice to discuss the Saylor Creek controversy. Cattlemen and environmentalists in Idaho have criticized the proposed expansion as overly ambitious and a threat to the high-desert range.

Symms said based on Cheney's statements, he planned to ask Rice specifically what the Air Force plans to do with the F-4s at George Air Force Base and what impact extending the comment period on the environmental impact statement will have on construction at Mountain Home.

"I'm going to ask him to lay his cards on the table and tell me and the people of Idaho what the Air Force has planned for Mountain Home," the senator said in a news release.

Extra day for talks may net agreement

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The United States and the Soviet Union worked toward a treaty to reduce their long-range nuclear weapons Friday and scheduled an extra day of negotiations in a drive to complete the pact in time for the Washington summit two weeks away.

The participation of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who met for five hours with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, gave new impetus to the discussions. Baker agreed to hold more talks on Saturday with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze. Both men said they had made progress, although a senior U.S. official told reporters shortly before midnight: "I can't tell you we are there yet."

The progress was centered on restricting cruise missiles, one of the most difficult issues. "The gaps are not seen as being unbridgeable," the official told a briefing held under rules granting him anonymity. He also cautioned reporters: "I can't tell you we are going to get there."

Baker met with Gorbachev and Shevardnadze in the Kremlin for five hours. Baker then broke off to see Prime Minister Kazimieras Prunskienis of Lithuania, urging her to suspend the republic's March 11 declaration of independence; said a U.S. official who spoke on condition of anonymity. Baker told Mrs. Prunskienis that both sides would have to compromise to end the impasse over Baltic independence.

The secretary of state then continued with Shevardnadze for another five hours. On Saturday, the secretary of state had planned to have a news conference and fly home. Instead, he scheduled another meeting with Shevardnadze and delayed his departure until at least mid-afternoon.

"If you can close (a deal), obviously you are going to do it," the senior U.S. official said. "If you can't, it's not the end of the world."

Other U.S. officials gave a more upbeat assessment. They said Baker and Shevardnadze had settled most of their differences over limiting the ranges of cruise missiles carried aboard planes and ships.

A settlement on the elusive, nuclear-tipped weapons would clear the biggest obstacle to a treaty cutting the overall arsenals of U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear weapons by 30 percent to 35 percent. Presidents Bush and Gorbachev would announce the agreement in principle at their summit May 31-June 3. But the officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, cautioned that many details still had to be worked out.

Gooding hospital seeking to cut costs, remain open

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

GOODING — Though the Gooding County Hospital is not in prime financial shape, it's a long way from being on its deathbed, says the Hospital Board chairman.

"We're not talking about closing the hospital down," said Joyce Scanlon, chairman of the seven-member board, Friday.

But the Hospital Board will be studying the cost effectiveness of each service and department within the facility. And the board may wind up cutting those that are the least effective.

"We may cut those services that are not being used as much as we're costing too much," Scanlon said. "I know we would like to be a full-service hospital, but it's just not logical."

Gooding County Hospital has had its share of financial ups and downs in recent years.

But it had been doing better recently — it was in $100,000 in the red for fiscal year 1988; a marked improvement from the previous year's operating losses of $130,000.

It seemed the hospital had finally crawled out from under the legacy of debt that led the Gooding County Commission to turn the hospital over to the county in 1984. But the county's taxpayers are maxed out, Scanlon said. And Idaho law prohibits the hospital district from raising taxes any further.

She said the hospital's financial woes can be traced to two problems: low Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement rates and the decentralization of medicine that has attracted patients to bigger facilities in Twin Falls, Jerome and Boise.

"Use it or lose it," Scanlon said. "We have to get the word out that the hospital is fighting hard to keep business because many patients who pay their own medical bills and those in need of expertise are going elsewhere."

But the low Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement rates offered to rural hospitals are probably doing far more damage, Scanlon said.

Jury awards Newcomb $411,000 in suit over failed tax shelter, clears Atkinson

By CRAIG LINCOLN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the wee hours of Friday morning, a 5th District jury announced Friday it was assessing $350,000 in punitive damages against a former Twin Falls lawyer.

But the jury also absolved his former associate of any blame for a failed tax shelter used by dozens of local professionals.

The 12-person jury had been deliberating for nearly 12 hours when it returned its verdict shortly after 3 a.m. The verdict came after a three-week trial in a lawsuit filed by local surgeon and state Senate candidate Russell Newcomb over a failed tax shelter, Professional & Executive Leasing.

"We're very, very pleased with the verdict," Newcomb's attorney, Robert Koontz said.

The 53-year-old Newcomb claimed former Twin Falls tax attorney Thomas G. Walker Jr. and his one-time associate, M. Gary Atkinson, had improperly organized and operated a tax shelter used by dozens of local professionals. After the Internal Revenue Service disqualified the plan, Newcomb had to pay a $297,000 settlement.

The jury awarded Newcomb $88,125 in actual damages, but decided he was responsible for 30 percent of the negligence that caused those damages. The jury also decided to award $350,000 in punitive damages — damages in excess of what Newcomb actually suffered.

Punitive damages are designed to punish certain behavior and prevent others from engaging in similar behavior.

The jury didn't say Newcomb was entirely blameless, however. Since Newcomb was assessed 30 percent of the negligence, he will receive 70 percent, or about $62,000, of the actual-damage award.

That means Newcomb will receive a $411,687 award.

Koontz had urged the jury in his closing arguments, after a three-week trial, to award punitive damages to send "a big message" to the state's lawyers. Koontz called Professional Leasing "a paper corporation" and said Walker "conned his clients into ... staying in this plan."

"To say I'm very disappointed would be a gross understatement," Walker said in a telephone interview from his Boise office Friday. "I think punitives are unwarranted, but that's not for me to say."

The jury also decided that Atkinson wasn't guilty of any negligence. Atkinson joined Walker in 1983, shortly after completing advanced legal training in taxes.

But the pair separated their practices in 1986, and Atkinson shortly after that obtained a second opinion on the plan from Denver law firm. That opinion recommended settling with the IRS because defending the plan was fruitless.

"When your client's been completely exonerated, the only post-trial move is to ask for costs and attorneys' fees," Atkinson's attorney R.B. Kading said. "I'm

Germans step nearer union

BONN; West Germany — The two Germans on Friday signed a historic treaty that will bind them into a single economic entity in less than seven weeks and all but formally end their four-decade separation.

The treaty will also plunge fragile East Germany into the rigors of capitalism starting July 1. Many Germans fear unemployment and price-increases could be the immediate result.

For the first time, the two German governments convened in a single room, witnesses to an event that in many ways will finally end their separation.

"We're all living through here is the birth of a free and united Germany," said Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who has aspirations of becoming reunited Germany's first leader.

"This is a historic hour in the life of the German nation," said the West German leader, addressing members of both his Cabinet and that of East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere.

Nonetheless, formal unification cannot occur until the thorny question of a united Germany's military allegiance is settled. The Soviet Union flatly rejects NATO membership for the united country, while the United States says the German nation should belong to the Western alliance.

Kohl has hinted he hopes full political unification will come in all German elections at the end of the year.

Despite Kohl's jubilation, German enthusiasm over the so-called "state treaty" was not unanimous.

Tunnel beneath border undermines U.S. anti-drug efforts

The Associated Press

DOUGLAS, Ariz. — U.S. Customs agents on Friday uncovered a fortified tunnel under the U.S.-Mexican border and said it had been used to smuggle at least 100 pounds of cocaine into this country.

"It was like something out of a James Bond movie," Customs spokeswoman Judy Turner said.

The tunnel was about the length of a football field and 30 feet underground, authorities said. They said the smuggling operation included a warehouse and elaborate entryways on both sides of the border.

Thomas McDermott, who heads the Customs Service in Arizona, told reporters that U.S. officials and members of the Mexican Judicial Police had arrested four members of the smuggling ring.

Members of the ring were contacted at the Agua Prieta, Mexico, house of businessman Rafael Francisco Camarena and two of Camarena's businesses — Douglas Building Supply and Douglas Redi-Mix Concrete.

The northern end of the tunnel was in a Douglas-Building warehouse built eight months ago about 200 feet north of the fence that divides the two cities.

McDermott said the tunnel began in Camarena's house. The excavation was hidden in the family room beneath a concrete slab on which rested a pool table. He said that when an operator turned a small mechanism shaped like a spigot, an hydraulic lift lowered the pool table, with pool table, about 5 feet into the air.

"It was a tremendously sophisticated operation," McDermott said. "This is the most unique smuggling operation I have ever come across."

The tunnel was 5 feet high, 4 feet wide, well lighted, and lined with supports to prevent cave-ins, authorities said. At various points were compartments where up to 5 tons of drugs could be stashed.

On a tour of the warehouse, reporters were shown the northern entrance: a grate which, when lifted, revealed a 7-foot drop to a gangway about the size of a small bedroom. That led to a 30-foot-deep well down the wall.

Over the well was a pulley and hoist system apparently used to raise drug packages.

The entrance and well were lined with concrete block.

"It was just an exceptionally, professionally engineered tunnel," Ms. Turner said.

"It was something that you and I in the ordinary world would only find in the movies."

McDermott said it probably took several months and $1.5 million to $2 million to build the tunnel.

Federal agents used jackhammers and torches to break into the tunnel Friday morning.

Ms. Turner said Customs had suspected the tunnel's existence and that agents used aerial surveillance to track the shipment of 2,258 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $102 million from Douglas to a spot outside Phoenix on May 11.

Rare cancer linked to Agent Orange now eligible for benefits, VA decides WASHINGTON — (AP) — Vietnam veterans with soft-tissue sarcoma, a rare form of cancer linked to Agent Orange exposure, will become eligible for disability payments, Veterans Secretary Edward J. Derwinski said Friday.

The decision is the second this year by the VA to award compensation for cancers linked to exposure to the dioxin-contaminated herbicide that was sprayed in unindustrial form during the Vietnam War.

On March 29, Derwinski announced payment of compensation to veterans suffering from non-Hodgkin's lymphoma.

Friday's decision was based on the recommendations made the previous day by the VA's Veterans Advisory Committee on Environmental Hazards. The panel of outside scientists and lay people found that there is "at least as likely as not" a significant statistical association between the disease and exposure to the herbicide.

The ruling in March was based on a study by the Centers for Disease Control study of selected cancers. Researchers found a 50 percent increased risk of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma among Vietnam veterans, but the study looked only indirectly at whether Agent Orange was the cause.

VA said that any Vietnam veteran, however, is presumed to have been exposed to Agent Orange.

The CDC study found no such increased risk for soft-tissue sarcoma. But the advisory committee's examination of other scientific literature relating to herbicide and dioxin exposure tilted the balance in favor of compensation.

"I believe this is another step forward in resolving a most difficult and emotional issue," Derwinski said. "We intend to proceed as quickly as possible to award compensation to these veterans who are so deserving of our care and concern."

Veterans have been fighting for years to receive compensation for diseases they say were caused by Agent Orange, a combination of two phenoxy herbicides, one of which was contaminated with the byproduct dioxin. The Environmental Protection Agency has labeled dioxin a probable human carcinogen.

As many as 28 health problems, mostly cancers, can be associated with exposure, according to Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., a special adviser to Derwinski.

VA plans to publish its final compensation regulation for soft-tissue sarcomas in early fall. An estimated 1,100 veterans or their survivors are expected to receive compensation for soft-tissue sarcomas to start with.

Contras discontinue giving up arms — MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Contra guerrillas said they stopped disarming Friday and cited an "atmosphere of uncertainty and social instability" provoked by the Sandinistas, who turned over power last month to Nicaragua's new, U.S.-backed government.

In a communique signed by Contra chief of staff Ismael Salgado, the rebels asked for new talks on disarmament agreements.

The announcement by the Nicaraguan Resistance came as the National Assembly was debating proposals by President Violeta Barrios de Chamorro's government to alter or suspend laws passed by the leftist Sandinista government before it stepped down on April 25.

Her efforts to make similar changes by presidential decree led to a strike by government workers that paralyzed her administration earlier this week.

The estimated 11,000 Contra fighters had agreed to lay down their weapons by June 10 after spending years trying to oust the government of former President Daniel Ortega, with U.S. support.

The blast occurred at 7 p.m. as a crowd of people left the theater, officers reported. They said it was hidden in a box placed under a nearby bench. 10 of the injured were reported in critical condition.

No one claimed responsibility for the blast, the second in as many weeks to rock this ancient city. Authorities suggested that agents working for the government of neighboring India might be involved.

U.S., NATO agree on plan for cuts — BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States and its NATO allies tentatively agreed Friday on a plan for cuts in tanks, military aircraft and other weapons expected to be covered in an arms accord later this year, an alliance source said.

The plan sets specific figures for five categories of conventional weapons likely to be limited in Europe as part of an East-West agreement under negotiation in Vienna, said the NATO source, who demanded anonymity.

He refused to reveal the numbers set for each country but indicated the largest share of cuts would be borne by the United States.

The final figures will not be settled on until an agreement is reached to slash conventional weapons in an area spanning the Atlantic Ocean to the Ural mountains, deep in the Soviet Union.

Skinheads charged with desecration — PARIS (AP) — Three skinheads, wearing masks to conceal their identities, were charged in court Friday with desecrating about 100 graves at a Roman Catholic cemetery and trying to make it appear Jews committed the crime.

In a new incident, vandals in the Canadian capital of Ottawa knocked over headstones and spray-painted swastikas and Nazi slogans on graves at the area's oldest and largest Jewish cemetery.

Police said the three suspects in France wanted people to believe the vandalism Wednesday night in Nantes was committed in revenge for the gruesome desecration last week at a Jewish cemetery in Carpentras. A corpse there was dug up and impaled on an umbrella handle.

Slogans painted on graves in the Nantes suburb of Saint Herblain included "Carpentras will be avenged" and "Death to Le Pen" — a reference to far-right leader Jean-Marie Le Pen.

Theater bomb kills 10, injures 54 — LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — A powerful bomb hidden near a movie theater in one of the city's most congested districts exploded Friday as a show was letting out, killing 10 people and injuring at least 54, police said.

First Hubble picture due on Sunday — WASHINGTON (AP) — The Hubble Space Telescope is about to send its first picture to Earth. Unless something unexpected interferes, the picture will be sent to the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland Sunday afternoon. NASA said it won't know the exact time until Saturday.

The image won't be much better than a similar view taken with much-less expensive telescopes from Earth. It won't have much scientific value either.

But, it will be the first photograph ever taken above Earth's obscuring atmosphere, by a telescope of this size and complexity. Ground-based telescopes are hampered by airborne particles that absorb and distort incoming starlight.

"We will consider it a total success if the first picture that comes down is as good as a ground-based exposure," Ed Weiler, NASA's program scientist for the telescope, said Friday. "You'll hear a lot of cheering when that happens."

The $1.5 billion telescope, which has a 94.5-inch diameter mirror, was carried to an altitude of 381 miles by the space shuttle Discovery.

But the board knows Gooding County residents want the hospital to stay alive, Scanlon said, or they never would have voted to create the hospital taxing district.

And that makes it even more crucial to find ways to cut back to keep the hospital's doors open, she said.

Meanwhile, an article in the May 1990 edition of Line Rider, the magazine of the Idaho Cattle Association, quoted Deputy Assistant Air Force Secretary Gary Base as saying there was a real possibility expansion plans at Saylor Creek would be abandoned entirely.

The article, based on an April meeting between Vest and Idaho Cattle Association officials, cited budget restrictions and the changing political climate in Europe as possible justification for eliminating the bombing range expansion.

"It is absolutely incredible the changing situation we have from just a few months ago," Vest said. "If an expansion takes place, it may well be further away and it could never happen."

However, Vest emphasized that no final decision had been made and there remains a chance the expansion could proceed as planned. In any event, he said, the future stability of Mountain Home Air Force Base is secure because the Air Force is closing coastal bases in favor of long-term commitments to inland facilities.

"Don't interpret anything I've said to in any way suggest that there is no-called difficulty out any of us contributing to the decline of Mountain Home Air Force Base," Vest said.

Besides the acreage expansion, the Air Force currently prefers an alternative for development of the Saylor Creek range proposes increasing special-use air space over southwestern Idaho, lowering the flight floor to 100 feet and allowing supersonic runs as low as 5,000 feet.

U.S., Philippines agree to new discussion on military bases

Los Angeles Times

MANILA, Philippines — Ending a week of often-inconclusive talks, U.S. and Philippine negotiators agreed Friday to new negotiations on the future of six American military bases in the Philippines, setting the stage for a renewed U.S. military presence in the Western Pacific.

Publicly, the negotiators agreed only to a "discussion" of a "new relationship" between Manila and Washington, including political, economic and military matters. But U.S. officials said privately that the talks will focus primarily on creating a new security agreement, including possible new leases for the giant U.S. bases here.

It's a euphemism," one official said of the "discussion" ahead. "It's a diplomatic term to cover what we got — new negotiations on the bases."

In exchange, the United States offered to increase military, medical and food aid to the Philippines. The arrangement appeared a face-saving maneuver for both sides since much of the assistance is already provided or in the pipeline.

The facilities at issue are the Pentagon's two largest overseas installations, Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station, plus four smaller facilities. Although cuts are now under way, the United States has 14,745 military personnel, 1,355 civilian Department of Defense employees, and 20,268 dependents stationed at or near the bases.

More than 100 anti-U.S. demonstrators were arrested during the week, which began with the shooting death of two Air Force enlisted men outside Clark. In Angeles, near Clark, Lt. Col. Julius Yarets, the regional military commander, said Friday that his troops had arrested three alleged Communist guerrillas, one of whom may be involved in the killing of the two Americans, Airman John H. Raven, 19, of Delta Junction, Alaska, and Airman James C. Green, 20, of Chang, Colo.

Actress Jill Ireland dies of cancer at 54

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Jill Ireland, the British actress whose courageous five-year battle against breast cancer brought hope and inspiration to the ailing and the healthy, died Friday from the disease. She was 54.

Miss Ireland, the wife of her frequent action movie co-star Charles Bronson, died at her home at 11:30 a.m.

Her husband, mother Dorothy, brother John, sons Paul and Valentine McCallum, and daughter Zulieka Bronson were with her, said publicist Lori Jones.

The actress first underwent surgery in 1984 for removal of a cancerous right breast and eight lymph nodes under her arm.

The cancer, after a brief remission, spread to her lungs.

Last April, Miss Ireland began feeling pain in her shoulder and was diagnosed with cancer that had spread to her lungs, hip, femur and thyroid.

In books and frequent lectures about her battle with the disease, Miss Ireland spoke eloquently about self-respect and optimism in the face of devastating illness. She called herself a survivor, not a victim.

"I don't want to die," she said in early 1989. "It's not an OK thing. Not right now. We all die one day but I am not in the mood to do it yet."

Her life was filled with calamity.

Her adopted son, Jason McCallum, a longtime drug abuser, died in November from a lethal drug mixture that had been injected and ingested.

He was to have been married a few days later.

Miss Ireland wrote about fighting the disease in her best-seller "Life Wish."

At the time of her death she was completing "Life Times," profiles of some of her friends.

Encouraging women who had undergone mastectomies, Miss Ireland said, "Think of yourself and be happy, make the most of your life and put yourself first. ... A breast does not make me who I am."

Appearing frail and gaunt, she received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame in April.

"This is really quite a thrill," she said in a hoarse voice.

Sammy Davis Jr. eulogized by friends

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With his own music setting the tone, Sammy Davis Jr. was eulogized Friday as one of Hollywood's greatest entertainers — a song-and-dance man who was without peer in the diversity and depth of his talent.

Davis' version of "I've Got to Be Me" rang through the Hall of Liberty at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in the Hollywood Hills, where 1,200 people — friends and fans alike — filled the seats and hundreds more overflowed outside.

Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Michael Jackson and Bill Cosby were honorary pallbearers.

"How lucky we all were to have Sammy in our lives and how dearly I will miss him," his widow, Altoivise, told the mourners as her voice broke and tears came to her eyes.

Davis died Wednesday after a long struggle against throat cancer. He was 64.

His bronze casket was positioned at the front of the hall, surrounded by flowers, ferns and firs.

The Motown group The Temptations sent one flower arrangement with a ribbon that said, "We love you Sammy."

"He was a constant and enthusiastic presence," Rabbi Allen Frechling told the audience in a non-denominational service.

Davis, whose family was Baptist, converted to Judaism in the 1950s.

"Sammy fought the good fight in his battle with cancer. Finally having exhausted all the energy that was his, he went gently into the good night," Frechling said.

Witnesses attack format of 'infomercials'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers would be better served if program-length television commercials were clearly identified and more closely monitored for substantiation of claims, government officials and researchers said Friday.

"For millions of Americans watching television, it's getting harder and harder to distinguish between commercials and talk shows and news programs," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore.

As a result, consumers were lured last year into spending $450 million on questionable products and services by "infomercials" or advertisements masquerading as objective programming, Wyden said. His comments came as two House Small-Business subcommittees held a second hearing on the programming.

Infomercials are commercials, frequently lasting a half hour, aired most often on broadcast and cable television during nonpeak and early-morning time slots.

They use special report and talk-show program formats and often include live audiences, familiar actors as hosts or former government officials as experts.

"I would expect that it would be considered to be in violation of our standards both in terms of the claims that are made as well as the format that masks the commercial purpose of the program itself," Harold A. Shoup, vice president of the American Association of Advertising Agencies, said of infomercials.

Shoup said no infomercials cited at Friday's hearing were created by members of his group.

"One of the essential questions in terms of consumer protection is whether viewers can identify infomercials as paid advertising," said Rader Hayes, an assistant professor of consumer science at the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

The panels viewed video tapes of infomercials touting a stun gun as "a cousin to the Star Trek phaser," a water cleaning system as an aid to weight reduction, a clinical program to cure male impotency and methods of getting and using government business grants to boost personal income.

Hayes explained that the ads used visual and auditory clues associated with regular television programming that could deceive consumers.

She recommended an internationally recognizable symbol be adopted and required to be visible on the TV screen during the entirety of infomercials.

"It would be immediately evident to viewers ... that they are watching a paid, commercial program," she said.

Controller on AIDS drug loses job

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration removed an air traffic controller from his job at Dulles Airport near Washington for taking an anti-AIDS drug, the controller said Friday.

FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn said the agency could not comment on the case because of privacy laws. But he said the FAA is reevaluating its policy that controllers who take AZT have to be given other jobs on grounds that the drug's side effects could impair their ability to keep track of aircraft.

President Bush in March urged an end to AIDS discrimination in the workplace, calling upon business executives not to lay off or fire people infected with or exposed to the virus. "They can serve many more productive years with no threat to you, your other workers or your companies," Bush said.

Bush to push for Soviet withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush told Hungary's new president Friday that he'll press Mikhail S. Gorbachev at the upcoming superpower summit for the promised withdrawal of Soviet troops from Eastern Europe.

At the same time, Bush promised Arpad Goncz that the United States would maintain a strong military presence in Western Europe as "a guarantee of stability," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Bush met with Goncz, expected to be formally installed by Hungary's parliament next month, before leaving on a four-day trip to Texas and the West Coast.

Head Start preschool program 25

WASHINGTON (AP) — The popular Head Start preschool program celebrated its 25th anniversary Friday with officials saying they were closer than ever to their dreams of obtaining full federal funding.

Head Start "is an American success story for millions of children," said Eugenia Boggus, president of the National Head Start Association, which released a report marking the program's anniversary.

The report called for full funding for the program, with some of the money earmarked for staff training, increased wages, transportation and maintenance of facilities.

Pittsburgh changes holiday activities

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The city is moving its Fourth of July celebrations to July 3 because of higher overtime rates in a new contract to police officers.

The switch will save about $16,000 in police salaries and $4,000 in pay to other city workers, said James Turner, the city's chief administrative officer.

An arbitration panel in February awarded the Fraternal Order of Police a 5 percent salary increase for each of the next two years along with substantial increases in overtime pay differentials.

The contract requires the city to compensate 16 hours of pay to officers called to work on their day off. The former contract mandated only six hours.

Pan Am tries to sell shuttle service

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan Am Corp. on Friday put its Pan Am Shuttle service up for sale in an attempt to raise money for the operation of its biggest subsidiary, Pan American World Airways.

Pan Am has previously indicated it was looking for partners after coming off one of the worst years in its 62-year history.

The decision means that both of the air shuttle services carrying passengers along the heavily traveled Northeast Corridor may be sold.

North notebooks suggest Bush call to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Newly released portions of Oliver North's notebooks suggest then-Vice President Bush may have played a role in pressing Israel to take partial blame for diverting Iran arms-sale profits to the Nicaraguan Contras.

As a private group released 1,200 pages of North's notebooks Friday, a new federal grand jury convened to continue the 3½-year-old criminal investigation of the Iran-Contra affair.

The grand jury will attempt to determine the precise roles of then-President Reagan and Bush, sources familiar with the investigation said.

NORTH

Bush has said he did not know details of the Iran initiative until Dec. 20, 1986, and did not know of North's Contra resupply operation while it was in operation.

A North notebook entry from Nov. 25, 1986, the day the affair became public, refers to a telephone call to North from National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter and then states, "VP call Peres." Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres.

The entry adds that the "Contra connection" has been "discovered" and that it "wd be best if Israel wd accept that they were aware that some funds were diverted."

It is not known if any phone call between Bush and Peres was made that day or whether the possibility of making a call was brought up with Bush.

But Attorney General Edwin Meese in disclosing the diversion that day, put the responsibility partly on Israel.

Meese said Iran arms sale money went directly from the Israelis into bank accounts held by the Contras.

Meese's statements, which he made after interviewing North and Poindexter, drew immediate complaints from the Israeli government.

Peres called Meese later that day and said Israel had not paid anything into any Contra accounts. Peres "indicated that Israel ... was not going to take the blame for the diversion," the congressional Iran-Contra committee said in its final report in 1987.

North and Poindexter may be called as witnesses before the grand jury at a later time, said sources close to the investigation, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Mary Belcher, a spokesman for the Iran-Contra prosecutor's office, declined to answer any questions.

The North notebook entries were released by the National Security Archive, the private organization that obtained them under court order after suing the government.

The entries show that:

- Shortly after Panamanian Gen. Manuel Noriega's alleged involvement in drug trafficking was exposed in The New York Times, CIA official Duane Clairidge and North on Aug. 24, 1986, discussed a possible meeting sought by Noriega to discuss "cleaning up image." At Sept. 3, 1986, meeting with State Department and CIA officers focusing on Panama, North's notebooks mention "corruption ... drugarms trafficking ... money laundering."

As revealed at North's trial last year, Noriega met North met on Sept. 22, 1986, in London, where the Panamanian leader said he would sabotage Nicaraguan targets.

Tolzin reaches finalist stage at Coeur d'Alene

COEUR D'ALENE - Twin Falls School District Acting Superintendent Keith Tolzin is one of three finalists for superintendent of the Coeur d'Alene School District.

Coeur d'Alene School Board Chairman Irma Anderl said the district will decide by Wednesday who will be the new superintendent.

The board narrowed the list of six semifinalists to three finalists, who were interviewed by a citizen's advisory committee and a staff advisory committee.

"All three candidates are qualified for the job and it's a matter of who of these the board thinks will do the best job," Anderl said.

Accident involving truck leaves bicyclist hospitalized

HANSEN - An 18-year-old Columbian exchange student was in stable condition Friday evening and the driver of a tractor-trailer rig has been cited with failure to use due caution following an accident Thursday on the Hansen Bridge.

Andres Angulo, of Bogota, Colombia, was riding his bicycle north across the bridge when the rig, driven by Shawn Crowley, 23, of Buhl, struck the bike from behind, according to police reports.

Angulo was thrown clear of the accident, but not over the side of the bridge. He was transported to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for cuts and bruises and was still in the hospital Friday evening.

The accident occurred about 4:30 p.m. According to an Idaho State Police report, Angulo angled his bicycle slightly as he went across the center of the bridge's expansion section and was hit.

According to his physician, Angulo, a bicycle racer, was wearing an approved helmet that probably saved his life. The helmet was destroyed, said Dr. John Shuss, and probably absorbed much of the impact.

Crowley will pay a $35 fine for the infraction.

Detectives charge woman with trying to obtain drug

TWIN FALLS - A 37-year-old Kimberly woman has been charged with illegally trying to call in a Valium prescription for herself to a Twin Falls pharmacy.

The woman posed as a local physician's nurse when she phoned in a prescription for a fictitious woman, according to court records.

Arrested and charged with obtaining a controlled substance by deception was Debra Jean Beckley.

Pharmacist Robert Crowley told police he felt there was something suspicious about the call and notified the physician named in the prescription. The physician did not know of such a patient, so Crowley called the police.

Twin Falls police detectives waited for the woman to purchase the Valium and arrested her.

Lasting Legacy project to go to Boise Capitol for display

RUPERT - Nemo Nicholas's Lasting Legacy project, a collection of Idaho sheriff's badges, will travel to Boise on Sunday.

The Minico Senior High School sophomore will present to Gov. Cecil Andrus the lighted oak cabinet with its display of the state of Idaho at the Capitol Rotunda at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

These badges are costly pieces of jewelry, often costing the sheriff $200 or more. Nearly all are gold or silver plated. Each was donated by the current sheriff of the representative county.

Blaine hospital tax district goes to vote again in June

HAILEY - Blaine County property owners south of East Fork Canyon will go to the polls for the second time in less than a year to decide the fate of a hospital taxing district.

After hearing a room full of 50 people Thursday night testify for and against creating a district to help fund the Blaine County Medical Center in Hailey, the county commissioners agreed to move forward with the election on June 17.

Most people said they liked the idea, according to Commissioner Alan Reynolds, but some raised concerns about having only the south county residents pay for the taxing district.

Concerns expressed encompassed the issue over the boundary line, consolidation between the Blaine County Medical Center in Hailey and Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley and whether or not north county residents would be in some way reimbursed for the change of ownership.

An election last October to establish the South Blaine County Medical Center Hospital District failed with a tie vote. Passage of the taxing district would place an annual 4 mill levy on taxpayers.

Sturgeon surgeons

With no lack of concern for the mother, a group of fish experts deliver eggs from a female sturgeon at the College of Southern Idaho Fish Hatchery. Although they collected about 40,000 eggs from the 280-pound Snake River native, the scientists were slightly disappointed, estimating that a sturgeon of that size could carry up to one million eggs. Friday's event was only the second time a sturgeon spawned in captivity in Idaho and was a cooperative effort between CSI, Idaho Fish and Game, University of California at Davis and Clear Springs Trout Company. Eggs taken from the sturgeon, below, were then fertilized. CSI fisheries instructor Terry Patterson said the operation was a success and eggs recovered will provide young sturgeon for release in the river and research. The hatchery has another female sturgeon that is expected to spawn soon, Patterson said.

Jones, Craig sketch sharply defined differences

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The two Republicans vying for their party's nomination for the U.S. Senate are about as compatible as two hungry hounds fighting over one supper dish.

Though they may agree on several key conservative issues, 1st District Congressman Larry Craig and Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones make no bones about their differences.

Craig paints Jones as a political opportunist who holds a "wet finger" to the wind before taking a stand on an issue. In contrast, Craig portrays himself as a seasoned lawmaker who reads "the fine print" before making up his mind.

Jones accuses Craig of ducking the issues that are important to Idahoans all the while he is cozying up to big-money interests. Meanwhile, Jones paints himself as a populist ready to do battle with the corporate monopolies and government bureaucrats.

The two candidates began labeling each other shortly after Sen. James McClure announced his retirement in January and they have continued to do so through the last week before the primary election.

Craig, who has served Idaho's 1st District since 1980, is the front-runner in the north, according to his campaign staff as well as his Jones' own assessment of the race.

But all bets are off in the Magic Valley and eastern Idaho, where Craig said he must at least break even: Jones - who was born in Twin Falls, raised in Idaho and

Abortion debate arrives in school

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A pro-choice advocate says pro-life activists are dragging the abortion issue into the classroom, but a Twin Falls School District administrator says the schools can't be isolated from the debate.

"Abortion is one of the major issues of the day," said Assistant Superintendent Ken Olsen on Thursday. "Should we avoid the issue if part of our job is teaching?"

Olsen's comments came in wake of objections by Twin Falls pro-choice activist Blaine Billman to classroom lectures given by pro-life speakers.

Billman said Idaho Right to Life speakers have given lectures in Magic Valley schools at least four times in the last two years.

"What I'm trying to show is this issue is getting into the classroom," said Billman.

Billman last week protested to Twin Falls School Board members about O'Leary Junior High School teacher Phil Gerrish inviting Right to Life lobbyist Karen Heifer to his class to teach students about reproduction.

In Gerrish's defense, Heifer and pro-life activist Michael Havener told the School Board about other classroom presentations they had made, and Havener said he had lent the controversial anti-abortion film "Silent Screams" to two teachers to show in their classes.

Activist, legislator clash over classroom lecture

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A pro-life lobbyist whose lecture on fetal development in a Twin Falls classroom sparked an outcry by pro-choice activists blames a Twin Falls legislator for the controversy.

"It's just one more attempt on Ron Black's part to divert attention away from pro-life activities," Karen Heifer said.

In the course of an interview in April, Black - a two-term Republican state representative from Twin Falls - asked a Times-News reporter about Heifer's qualifications to give a lecture to a seventh grade science class at O'Leary Junior High School.

O'Leary science teacher Phil Gerrish had asked Heifer, whose daughter was in the class, to lecture based on her 12 years of experience as a pregnancy counselor. After that was reported in the media, pro-choice activist Blaine Billman complained to the Twin Falls School Board about Gerrish inviting a speaker to his class who is so closely tied to the pro-life movement.

Heifer said Black went public about her lecture to undercut pro-life's election activities.

"He had to know that we are working hard to elect a pro-life candidate," she said.

Black said he hadn't intended to stir up trouble when he mentioned the lecture to a reporter.

"I wasn't breaking a story idea," Black said. "I'm not that kind of a vindictive person."

In the last legislative session, Black voted against House Bill 625, a measure that would have outlawed most abortions in Idaho. Pro-life activists are campaigning for his opponent, Wanda Anderson, in Tuesday's Republican primary election.

Black said he is against abortion except in cases of rape, incest and danger to the mother's health and that he opposes abortion.

Jerome teachers agree to 7% raise

By H.R. WEIXEL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Teachers will receive a 7 percent salary increase, under the new contract agreed to Thursday.

Other provisions of the contract are: an additional 20 days accumulated paid sick leave; the district will pay for a 14 percent increase in personnel insurance costs; and pay steps were added for teachers with education beyond a bachelor's and master's degrees.

Terry Gibbons, an industrial arts teacher at the high school who helped negotiate for the teachers, said this was the most productive and best conducted negotiating sessions in 10 years. "We sat with board members and worked out our problems together," just six votes against, said Gibbons said professional negotiators the district used in prior years made negotiations more difficult.

The district made available all the figures and information they requested and that made for smoother sessions, Gibbons said.

The teachers, for example, wanted the $14,500 base salary raised to $16,000, but saw in district figures there wasn't enough money so the base was increased to $15,553, Gibbons said.

Jerome teachers also have a $1,800 fringe benefit package, which they can take in cash - that boosts the base salary to $17,353 - above the state recommended - $16,000 - base, Superintendent Richard Kugler said. The district's health insurance is separate, he said.

Of the 117 teachers who voted on the new contract, just six voted against, said

Woman raped in Cassia County

The Times-News

RUPERT — A 39-year-old Rupert woman was raped Wednesday on the Cassia County road, commonly known as Highway 30, according to a sheriff's office report.

Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said the woman was found walking along the roadway around 6:40 p.m. Wednesday by a passer-by. But she fled and hid in some brush until a sheriff deputy appeared on the scene.

Apparently the woman was driving with a female companion but left the vehicle after a disagreement. The victim was walking along the road when she accepted a ride with three Caucasian men.

The three men then allegedly raped the woman in the vehicle, described simply as an "older" vehicle.

The three men, still at large, are described to all be in their younger 20s, and all about 5-feet, 7-inches tall. Two of the men had blonde hair, the third had brown hair according to the woman's report. And all three had brown eyes.

The incident, which happened near Jackson east of Rupert, is still under investigation, Crystal said. And detectives will be trying to get a better description of the vehicle for possible witnesses.

The victim said the vehicle was parked at the side of the road during the rape and she said two other cars drove by during the incident.

Crystal encouraged anyone who was driving the road and may have seen anything suspicious to call the sheriff's office at 678-2251.

The three men also robbed the woman, taking a watch, her socks and shoes; a red bandana; and her purse.

Library officials celebrate success in fund raising

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — City library officials shook each others' hands in congratulations Friday after announcing the results of a three-week drive to raise $50,000 to pay for part of a planned children's library that is threatened by budget cutbacks.

The Twin Falls Library expansion project hit a low this spring after bids came in higher than anticipated. But library officials pledged to try to raise the difference and keep the entire project intact.

The construction contract was revised with a set of deadlines. If library officials could not raise the money for a project by each deadline, that project would be dropped from the overall library remodeling scheme.

For the children's library, the $46,425 in cash and pledges that pushed that figure over the $50,000 mark were raised in a three weeks to meet the first deadline.

The money raised in this phase of fund-raising will enable contractors to complete the lower level of the addition, reserved for the children's library. Without the donations, only half the level would have been finished, Library Board Member Dennis Voorhees explained.

Library Board Chairman Leon Smith said the floor of the unfinished hall probably would have been completed with the interest expected to accrue on the bonds, the donations will also cover the cost of installing handrails on the stairway to the lower level and pay for remodeling of some walls in the existing building.

Local corporations and businesses as well as private individuals donated the money in the pot, Smith said. But a complete list of donors was not available.

"It was very gratifying," Voorhees said. "Next on the list of things to do will be a 10-month push to get donors and money for furnishings for the new addition."

Though $200,000 was originally budgeted for furnishings before it was erased from the project, library officials said they would like to raise a minimum of $100,000.

But the object is not just to raise money, Voorhees said. A list of needed items will be available so people can donate those items instead of dollars. Library officials said they hope to put donors' names on items.

The library is working with the city to try to cover the costs of the curb and gutter work needed and to pay for a $31,403 elevator car. Though the car is on the waiting-to-be-paid-for list, the shaft for the elevator is still in the construction plans.

Dropped from the project were storm windows, a skylight, two flagpoles, capping and fancier finishing work for some of the ceiling.

Completion in preparation of the first phase of the project — building the new parking lot — will begin Monday, Library Director Arlan Call said.

Stallings co-sponsors civilian nuclear energy research bill

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, joined in introducing a bill this week that he hopes will boost civilian nuclear energy research at the Department of Energy's Lawrence Livermore National Engineering Laboratory.

The measure, co-sponsored by Stallings and Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., calls for the Department of Energy to invest nearly a billion dollars over three years to research civilian reactors.

The proposed, high-temperature gas-cooled reactor and the Integral Fast Reactor, an experimental breeder reactor, at the Idaho Falls facility are among a handful of technologies being considered for use as new civilian reactors.

Stallings favors creating a new, diversified agenda for INEL with a diminished emphasis — on nuclear weapons production. Although environmental activists are concerned about the threat posed by waste from civilian and military reactors, they support the concept of a reduced military presence at INEL.

In introducing his bill, Stallings noted that nuclear energy has environmental benefits over fossil fuels. As Congress considers the clear air reauthorization act, problems caused by the burning of coal and oil — such as acid rain and global warming — are demonstrating the need for alternative energy sources, he said during a news conference Thursday.

In addition, Stallings maintains that increased civilian nuclear power at INEL makes good economic sense since the future need for energy is more sure than the future of the nuclear weapons complex. The Special Isotope Separation weapons project planned for INEL met major congressional opposition and was canceled by the Energy Department, demonstrating the unstable nature of weapons projects.

Congressional aides said they doubted Stallings' bill would become law this year but said they hoped its introduction would spur consideration of the nuclear power and alternative energy sources.

The legislation would require the Secretary of the Energy to prepare a 10-year plan for civilian reactor development and would recommend a three-year funding level of more than $300 million annually for research.

Stallings said the bill would provide an "overall strategy" for the DOE's nuclear reactor research program over the next decade. "As we look at the national energy strategy, nuclear energy has got to be considered," he said, acknowledging that the DOE would eventually have to overcome the public aversion to nuclear power.

The bill would require that new reactors provide for significant improvements in safety, waste management and cost-effectiveness over current technology.

The Snake River Alliance, a frequent critic of nuclear weapons programs at INEL, is holding judgement on the possibility of civilian reactors at the facility.

"Problems with nuclear waste go across the board in nuclear power and weapons production," said Kerry Cooke, acting director of the alliance. "We would think that a very conservative approach needs to be taken on nuclear power unless the DOE comes up with a better idea of what to do with the waste."

At present, 20 percent of the nation's energy comes from the 110 U.S. nuclear reactors.

Symms calls for end to 'earnings test'

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idaho Sen. Steve Symms joined dozens of his Republican colleagues this week to advocate the elimination of the controversial Social Security "earnings test" which he said discourages senior citizens from remaining in the workforce.

Symms is co-sponsoring the Senate Older Americans Freedom to Work Act which would remove the limitation on the amount of outside income that Social Security recipients below the age of 70 may earn.

Under current law, seniors between the ages of 65 and 69 lose $1 in Social Security benefits for every $3 they earn over $9,360. Seniors between the ages of 62 and 64 are subject to stricter limits. Once Social Security recipients turn age 70, however, they no longer have to worry about the earnings test.

"I have over 4,000 letters in my office from citizens in my state from age 60 to 70 who deserve and want fairness and the opportunity to help solve the labor shortage in this country," Symms told a gathering of senior citizens, lawmakers and reporters in front of the U.S. Capitol.

The earnings test was adopted during the Great Depression when the federal government wanted to give scarce jobs to young workers and prod older people into retirement with Social Security benefits.

"It was the government's best tool — and many still think it is — to guarantee that benefits actually go to retirees and don't serve as subsidies for the wealthy."

But proponents of legislation to repeal the earnings test call it "a Depression-era fossil" which locks the elderly out of the work place or forces them to cheat on their taxes by taking under-the-table cash payments.

To symbolize the punitive aspects of the earnings test, lawmakers and elderly demonstrators at the rally wore small stick-on label labels with a thick diagonal red line crossing out a rocking chair.

Symms charged that "pure partisan politics" in the House and Senate has blocked the progress of a bill but said proponents will offer it "over and over and over" during debate on the fiscal year 1991 budget this year.

Symms and Idaho Republican Sen. James McClure are among 15 co-sponsors of the earnings test repeal legislation in the Senate. A companion bill on the House, sponsored by Illinois Republican Rep. J. Dennis Hastert, has 22 co-sponsors, a majority of the body.

Abortion

"It's brainwashing," Billman said. "I guess what I want is to keep the politicking and the influence peddling out of the classes."

Hansen High School Principal Barry Eppil said the movie was shown last year in his school's home economics classes.

"We showed both sides of the coin through lessons and presentations," he said.

"It got out of hand so much this year we decided not to show either side," Eppil said.

If the school presents the abortion issue again, the teachers will meet and decide how it will be presented, he said.

"Students can be influenced so you have to be careful and present both sides in an open manner and not from a fanatical view," Eppil said.

Billman said "Silent Scream" is a biased film that misrepresents facts about abortion and has been disputed by several professional medical groups, including the American Medical Association.

But Haverer said the movie was produced under the direction of a doctor who had been the director of an abortion clinic in New York City and after thousands of abortions became a pro-life advocate. He said the film has been shown on national television.

Haverer said he lent the movie to two teachers from different schools because they asked him for it. He said Right to Life has no agenda to go into schools. The movies were shown more than a year ago and he has had no further requests for "Silent Scream" since the abortion issue has become a hot topic in Idaho, he said.

He refused to say who the teachers were who asked for the film.

"I don't want to give Mr. Billman any more ammunition for his personal crusade," he said.

"It's a real hot political issue and I think there are people on both sides who wouldn't hesitate to go into the schools and subtly or overtly teach their views to students," Billman said.

Olsen agreed that the schools should ensure a balanced presentation of controversial issues, but said Haverer was not in a position to go room-to-room to preach her views on abortion.

"The controversy that surrounds the person was not the topic of her discussion," he said.

Olsen said the district does not have a policy to approve every guest speaker who comes into the school.

"We will give some consideration to whether we need a policy to handle controversial issues," he said.

Billman took issue with Haverer's participation in both Gerrish's class and history teacher Curtis Asay's class at O'Leary. He said there was nothing wrong with Haverer sharing her experiences about lobbying with students in Asay's class, as long as she does not use the opportunity to inject her bias.

"She was there primarily to discuss the pro-life issue rather than discussing what it was like being a lobbyist," he said.

Asay declined comment.

Haverer said she was invited into Asay's class in which her daughter is a student after a newspaper article was written about her activities as a legislative lobbyist. The students were learning about lobbying at the time, she said.

She said she discussed how a bill becomes a law and her role as a lobbyist.

"I had nothing to do with abortion," she said.

Haverer said she did mention her stance on abortion, which she said was "unavoidable." Therefore, there was no need to have a pro-choice lobbyist give the other side, she said.

Haverer said the only reason Billman has pressed the issue is because of his link with the local pro-choice movement.

"I'm a parent, Blaine Billman is not," she said. "I shouldn't be refused access to my child's classroom because Blaine Billman says so."

College shooting leaves 1 dead, 1 injured

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — One woman was killed and another wounded Friday when a man began shooting a 44-caliber revolver at a cafeteria where Carroll College employees were on their coffee break, authorities said.

A man was arrested hiding under a tree on the campus about 35 minutes later, County Attorney Mike McLaughlin said.

Stahl, 36, of Helena, and Randall Stahl, 36, of Helena, and Clark County Courthouse for an initial appearance, but it was canceled because "he appeared intoxicated," McGrath said.

He said Stahl will appear in court Monday morning and will be charged with one count of murder and one of attempted murder.

The dead woman was a college secretary, said Russ Ritter, vice president for development at the small Catholic college. The wounded woman was a food service employee of Marriot Foods.

The shootings at Carroll followed Tuesday's shotgun slayings of two students at Montana State University in Bozeman, 80 miles southeast of Helena. There was no apparent connection between the two shootings.

An MSU student was later captured and charged with murdering the two students, who were shot in a campus dormitory.

Stahl was taken to the Lewis and Clark County Courthouse for an initial appearance, but it was canceled because "he appeared intoxicated," McGrath said.

He said Stahl will appear in court Monday morning and will be charged with one count of murder and one of attempted murder.

The dead woman was a college secretary, said Russ Ritter, vice president for development at the small Catholic college. The wounded woman was a food service employee of Marriot Foods.

Black said he wasn't overly concerned about Haverer's classroom lecture because she mentioned her stance on abortion only in passing, but he was concerned about whether Haverer inappropriately talked about her position on abortion and whether she was qualified to lecture the class.

"I don't care whether it's Karen Haverer or someone from pro-choice it's the same thing," said Black, whose son is a student in the class.

Haverer lectured. "I'm concerned about information received by my son."

Black said Haverer's and Gerrish's explanations satisfied him that Haverer's class participation was appropriate.

Has Jones changed his mind about PACs?

"Yes, I guess I was wrestling with that. If best way to put it and then you take it, first you putting yourself in an ethical bind?" Jones said. "I guess I decided if I was going to be bad-mouthing PAC money, I better have clean drawers myself."

In the final days of the campaign, Jones also taken on Craig's proposal for a referendum to amend the constitution to allow the amendment "balanced budget" because he said the proposal does not require revenue projections to be reconciled with actual expenditures.

Craig said Jones must be "desperate" if he is so concerned about PAC money. Jones said he has been endorsed by a cadre of business organizations — including the National Taxpayers' Union; the National Chambers of Commerce and the National Farm Bureau.

Both candidates agree, however, that the best way to solve the state's budget woes is not to raise taxes but to freeze spending.

The following people have been called to serve missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Sister Tammy Michele Egbert, daughter of Kenid F. and Beckie Egbert of Twin Falls, will serve for 18 months in the Germany Munich Mission. She will speak in Sacramento Meeting at 11:30 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls First Ward chapel on Elizabeth Boulevard East and will enter the Mission Tuesday, June 19, at 9:30 a.m. via May 30. Egbert graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1987 and attended Brigham Young University for two semesters. She then worked as a nanny in the Washington, D.C., area for one year and then returned to Twin Falls and attended the College of Southern Idaho. She received her Associates Degree from CSI May 1989.

Elder Clinton G. Sandy, son of Edward and Janet Sandy of Shoshone, will serve for two years in the Texas Corpus Christi Spanish Speaking Mission. He will speak in Sacramento Meeting at 10:20 a.m. Sunday at the Shoshone Ward LDS chapel on Highway 75 and will enter the MTC on June 6. During school, Sandy was active in sports and student government. He graduated from Shoshone High School in 1989, where he served as student body president as a senior. He attended Ricks College in Rexburg for one year, where he served on several committees and was on the honor roll.

Elder Clark A. Baumgartner, son of Ken and Kay Baumgartner of Dyersburg, Tenn., and formerly of Jerome, will serve for two years in the Missouri Independence Mission. He will speak in Sacramento Meeting at 10:20 a.m. Sunday at the Jerome Fourth Ward chapel east of Jerome and will enter the Mission Training Center Wednesday. An open house will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. Sunday at the Kent Gourley residence, 520 E. 16th St., Jerome.

sharing the good news of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. She has written several books, including "Adventures of Bug and Me," "Bug and Nona on the Go," "This is the Day," "Box 44, Monrovia," "Shouting on the Hills," "Unseen Hands," and "In the Bag." For more information, call 734-9115.

FILER - The Filer Mennonite Church at 109 Fifth St. in Filer will host Mike Garde, mission worker in Ireland with the Mennonite Board of Missions and Mennonite Central Committee, at 7 p.m. Sunday, May 27.

Garde calls himself the "first Irish Mennonite" and a witness of the "Irish Mennonite Movement." He has been particularly interested in presenting the Mennonite emphasis on peace, community and discipleship. He and six other North American co-workers are sponsored by the Mennonite Board of Missions and the Mennonite Central Committee. They are based in Dublin and are part of a small fellowship called the Dublin Mennonite Community.

Baptists receive blunt critique from others

By The Associated Press

Southern Baptists, wondering what others think of them, invited representatives of several denominations to offer their assessments — and got a blunt and peppery earful.

It was a rare case of Southern Baptists getting an evaluation from beyond themselves. They've stayed mostly aloof from the ecumenical movement for Christian unity, its interdenominational organizations and dialogues of mutual edification and criticism.

But that insular tendency to shun voices of others was thrust aside at a session held at a meeting in Nashville, Tenn., of the denomination's Historical Commission and Historical Society. "If you do not find a way of altering your image of fighting and feuding, your biblical message will fall on deaf ears," said the Rev. Robert A. Dalton, Roman Catholicism's longtime observer of Southern Baptists.

He referred to the decade-long conflict between fundamentalists and moderates in the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

Asked to offer views of that church body, Dalton and representatives of the United Methodist Church and the American Baptist Churches had praise for some qualities but barbs for others.

The Rev. J. Richard Peck of the United Methodists deplored the impact on Southern Baptist seminaries of the denomination's long, internecine quarrel over whether the Bible is "inerrant" — without error in all fields.

The result, most mainline denominations would agree, is that Southern Baptists have effectively amputated their academic community's major reason for being — a marketplace for inquiry," Peck said.

"It is a place for education, not indoctrination," he said. The Rev. George D. Younger of East Orange, N.J., the executive minister of American Baptist Churches of New Jersey, said Northern Baptists see the Southern body as having "sat out" the civil rights movement.

He also noted these other images: "ecclesiastical super-organization," "mission imperialism," "theological obscurantism," "social quietism" and "denominational exclusivism."

However, a Southern Baptist church historian, the Rev. G. Thomas Halbrooks, said at a later session that despite impressions to the contrary, the "historic-Baptist stance" favored relationships with other churches.

"Others have often perceived Southern Baptists as being isolationist sectarians who consider themselves

Broadcasters, churches warned to examine mail for explosives

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Federal officials have warned religious broadcasters and churches around the country to screen mail because of last month's explosion of a package addressed to evangelist Pat Robertson.

Cedric W. Lawrence Jr. of the U.S. Postal Inspection Service in Richmond said he sent letters to 185 religious broadcasters and groups, including such figures as the Revs. Billy Graham and Jerry Falwell.

Thomas Love, an FBI agent in Norfolk, said the bureau notified all its offices after the bombing at Robertson's Christian Broadcasting Network headquarters.

"Individually, some of those as having no need for relationships with anyone else," he said. Some actions have upheld that "negative perspective," said Halbrooks, president of the denomination's Historical Society and a professor at Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest, N.C.

He said the 15 million-member denomination has varied roots, some of them such as the "colonial root" and "Eastern root" supporting cooperation with other denominations. On the other hand, he said, a "frontier root" and "Western root" stressed exclusivity as "the only true church" and joined with the provincial "Southern root" in becoming dominant.

"Southern Baptists may look to their Eastern and colonial roots and there find guideposts that can point the way out of the darkness of their provincialism into the brightness of the broader community of the Christian faith," he said.

In the earlier comments from other denominations reported by Baptist Press, Dalton, who for a decade has been the Roman Catholic observer at Southern Baptist conventions, said he admires their zeal and music.

But he said the in-fighting and preoccupation with church membership threaten to obscure larger social issues, while a "lack of ritual" and emphasis on "show rather than substance" may undercut genuine worship.

offices have contacted churches to alert them to the information," Love said.

On April 27, a bomb in small package exploded in the GDM mailroom in Virginia Beach after it was identified as suspicious and a guard attempted to open it. Scott Scheeper, 33, was hit in the leg by several pieces of shrapnel and was hospitalized for several days.

The package was addressed to Robertson, founder and president of CBN and an unsuccessful candidate for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

On Jan. 30, a mail bomb exploded at the church of the Rev. John Osteen in Houston. Osteen's daughter was slightly injured when she opened a shoebox-sized package.

Both packages were mailed from small towns in Bladen County, N.C., investigators said. Postal inspectors have released two similar composite drawings of men suspected of mailing the packages.

Robertson said the bombings could be part of pattern of attacks against evangelical Christians.

Robertson also mentioned an April 17 arson at the offices of gospel singer Sandi Patti in Anderson, Ind.

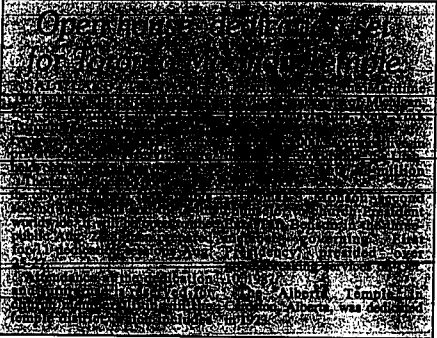

Ms. Patti and a fire department investigator said there were no indications of any connection between the arson and the bombings. The fire caused $650,000 in damage.

"We have not yet identified that organization does exist. Nor can we find any hint of a home base for that organization," said Terry King, the Anderson Fire Department's chief of investigation. "Experts from the East Coast to the West Coast haven't heard of them."

Churches' group eyes reform plan

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The nation's largest ecumenical body, faced with dwindling contributions from member churches, on Tuesday unveiled a reorganization plan designed to cut costs and weaken its governing board.

"We refer to it as a leaner, kinder council," said the Rev. J. Martin Bailey, spokesman for the National Council of Churches.

The council represents 32 Christian denominations with 42 million members. Most major Protestant, Orthodox and Anglican religions sponsor the council to help further education, missionary work and other projects around the world.

The reorganization plan was presented on the first day of the semi-annual meeting of the council's 250-member governing body.

Bailey said President Bush "and his thousand points of light" led to tight finances and forced the reorganization.

Member churches are contributing less to the council because of inflation and the need to fund social programs once backed by the federal government, he said.

Under the plan, the council would combine into four units 11 divisions responsible for subjects ranging from overseas ministry to sacred music.

Bailey said the reorganization would remove most decision-making power from the governing board and give it to smaller boards overseeing the new units.

The governing board, however, still will set policy, elect officers and approve the council's budget, which in 1989 totaled $44.6 million.

Church leaders said the restructuring will make the council more efficient.

"We found that a lot of our costs, too many of them, were going for meetings and other administrative functions," Bailey said.

The council's Stewardship Commission opposes the reorganization for fear it will lose power, said the Rev. E. Wayne Antworth of the Reformed Church of America, the commission's chairman.

Idaho districts scramble for teachers

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A shrinking pool of job applicants has left some eastern Idaho school districts scrambling to find qualified teachers for the 1990-91 school year.
School officials say student enrollment increases, teacher retirements and resignations, and a state mandate to reduce student-teacher ratios to 20-to-1 in kindergarten through third grade are draining the pool of qualified applicants.

Newsman decries open records law

POCATELLO (AP) — A new state open records law aimed at opening a number of government files to media and public scrutiny eventually will be more hindrance than help to reporters, says a veteran Idaho newspaperman.
Ivy Shelleby, publisher of The Idahoonian in Moscow, said the law that takes effect July 1 has a number of exemptions built in that will limit access to information rather than making it easier to obtain.
Unlike most other Idaho journalists who supported the bill's passage in the 1990 Legislature, Shelleby said he would have preferred no change in the existing law, which he called broad enough to leave the issue of access to most public records unclouded.

Prison population expansion OK'ed

COTTONWOOD (AP) — An expansion approved by the state Board of Corrections will allow 70 more prisoners to be housed in the 120-day program at North Idaho Correctional Institute near Cottonwood.
The board Thursday approved the move which will increase capacity by 50 percent and let about 200 more people go through the prison program each year.
Part of the extra space will be created by moving 30 minimum-security prisoners, who are not part of the program, elsewhere in the state.
Living space for 40 prisoners will be made by converting existing buildings at Cottonwood.

Idaho traffic toll runs at 6-year high

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's highway death toll was running at a six-year high through mid-May after a mild winter apparently made motorists complacent, but officials also reported that seat-belt use statewide was continuing to climb.
The Division of Highway Safety said 66 people died on Idaho roads through May 16, 40 percent higher than a year ago when traffic fatalities were held to their lowest level in over a quarter century. The last time the death toll was that high was in 1984.

Army will conduct training at ISU

POCATELLO (AP) — The U.S. Army is marching back to Idaho State University for summer classes and bringing $320,000 with it.
The Sixth Army Command and General Staff College will be held in Pocatello again. The three-year contract with Idaho State to hold the logistics classes totals $1.6 million.
More than 1,800 Army and Army Reserve officers will take the courses. They will use classrooms, housing and other facilities for their training, said Teresa Irish, ISU housing director.

Jones: Craig misled public on wilderness

By The Associated Press

Heading into the final weekend of the 1990 Idaho primary election campaign, there was no lull Friday in blasts between the candidates.

Attorney General Jim Jones, who Thursday night debated his opponent, Rep. Larry Craig, in their battle for the Republican U.S. Senate nomination, claimed Craig "fibbed" about his response to an Idaho Cattle Association survey on wilderness.

Jones said in the debate that Craig's response to the cattle group, indicating he would vote for no more wilderness in Idaho, would effectively keep him from negotiating a settlement to Idaho's long-running controversy.

But at one point, in responding to Jones, Craig noted that the survey Jones was using was "about two years old."

"Larry Craig fibbed and he ought to fess up," Jones said. "He is misleading the Idaho Cattle Association by pledging to vote against the designation of any additional wilderness in Idaho, while telling everyone else he supports a negotiated settlement."

But a Craig spokesman said the congressman's comment was a passing remark during the debate and he was making no attempt to hide or distort his wilderness stand.

The Cattle Association put out a news release Friday about its latest survey of candidates. To the question, "Will you vote against the designation of additional wilderness in Idaho?" it said Craig would answer "yes."

Jeff Malinen, Craig's campaign press secretary, said the candidate does not dispute that he responded to the ICA survey recently, but said it was the same response he made to the cattlemen two years ago.

Craig said during the debate that he would work to win passage of any settlement negotiated in Idaho, but he favored adding the least possible amount of new wilderness. Jones said Friday he will support a negotiated settlement of the issue, but people realistically should expect that some additional wilderness will be included.

Meanwhile, candidates in the other major races also geared up for a final weekend of activity before voters go to the polls on Tuesday.

At the taping of an interview to be televised Sunday in the Boise area, 1st District congressional candidate Jeanne Givens of Coeur d'Alene continued her battle with fellow Democrat Larry LaRocco, a Boise stockbroker.

LaRocco complained that Mrs. Givens was using "negative" advertising by using the fact he drove a Mercedes-Benz car leased in Oregon in an ad promoting her campaign.

She stood by the ad Friday, saying it shows LaRocco is pessimistic about the future of the American economy. Her anti-LaRocco ad was scheduled to run in the Boise area over the weekend after airing in northern Idaho earlier in the week.

But despite the last-minute sniping, Mrs. Givens said Democrats can unite after the primary election to win the congressional seat.

Dick Rush, former state Agriculture Department director, is the third candidate in the Democratic primary, while Smyser is unopposed for the Republican nomination.

In Idaho Falls, Republican attorney general candidate Pat Kole held a news conference to criticize his general election opponent for "playing politics" with the issue of Indian gaming. Kole is unopposed in Tuesday's election, as is Democrat Larry EchoHawk, Bannock County prosecutor.

"Idaho's top law enforcement officer should not play politics with the Indian gaming issue," said Kole.

Pilot checked after jet crash

BOISE (AP) — The pilot of an Idaho Air National Guard jet was released from a hospital Friday after he and his crew chief ejected before their aircraft slammed into the side of a mountain northeast of Boise.

"It happened very suddenly because the air crew did not have time to declare an emergency," Lt. Col. Steven Buss said.

Maj. Gordon Ravenscroft, 41, of Boise, the pilot of the F-4, remained overnight Thursday at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center for observation of neck pains, Buss said. Staff Sgt. Robert Hatten, 30, of Boise, the crew chief, was released after being treated for minor injuries, and Ravenscroft was released Friday morning.

The jet, on a routine training mission, had just completed an in-air refueling exercise late Thursday and was pulling away to take up a lower-level route when the crash occurred, Buss said. The cause of the crash remained under investigation, and a military helicopter was dispatched to secure the crash site about 24 miles northwest of the summit.

A. Just barely. The New York pizzeria opened at 52 1/2 Spring Street in 1885. It sold 10 years later for $200.

There are 2.67 million individuals in California who make more than $961 a week.

Memo to the Mainer: What "Aloha" really means is "love." Not surprising, it is, so many prefer it to "Hello" or "Goodbye."

Q. Those electric catfish of Africa — are they big?

A. Up to four feet long. Maybe 55 pounds. Zapping 350-volts.

Am told cats are the only clawed animals that walk on their paws, not their claws.

UP LATE

It's a fact that President Chester Alan Arthur habitually stayed up until 2 a.m. It's also a fact he took the oath of office, after President James Garfield was assassinated, at 4:15 a.m. But I think the facts are unrelated.

There's also a good, better and best way to climb stairs, evidently. Experts say best is to exhale before you start, inhale during the first two steps, exhale during the next two, and so on.

Hotel tells guests to keep the scoring on the field, out of view

TORONTO (AP) — Guests at Toronto's diamond-side SkyDome Hotel will have to keep their minds on baseball or draw the drapes, the manager says.

A couple making love in one of the rooms overlooking the field in full view of some of the 40,000 Blue Jays fans proved to be a great publicity boon for one of the city's more unusual hotels.

But hotel manager Ray Thompson says he runs a respectable place.

"We are now going to post some simple rules and regulations in the rooms," Thompson said Friday. "The rule will be an acknowledgment by the guest that the room in effect becomes part of the stadium, just as if it were a seat down below."

The SkyDome Hotel is part of the domed baseball stadium complex. It has 248 rooms, 70 of which face the ballpark. Rooms range in price from $169 to $467. "That includes tickets to the game — if they want to watch the game," Thompson said.

On Tuesday, a woman wrapped in a towel and a naked man watched the Blue Jays play the Seattle Mariners from the window of their hotel room.

Soon, thousands of fans were watching them.

As the game wore on, the couple apparently wearied of being spectators and opted for a more participatory sport — giving new meaning to the seventh inning stretch.

The lights were off in the hotel room, but the banks of ballpark lights revealed all.

Thompson, for one, doesn't believe the off-field activity was an accident.

"I believe the people, for their own particular reason, wanted to perform in front of 40,000 people," he said.

"Asked if he was angry, Thompson said no.

"I wish they'd come back so I could thank them. It certainly has created a lot of interest in the hotel, and in that room. Many people want to rent the same room. It has triggered a tremendous response from people interested in this hotel and its uniqueness."

Nonetheless, stern measures must be taken to prevent further such public displays, he said. As soon as they can be printed up, documents will be presented to each new guest for signature.

"We are going to have people sign a statement that they will conduct themselves in a proper fashion," he said. Failure to do so could result in expulsion or even criminal charges. "It's just common sense behavior. We can be a traditional hotel, but the fact that people are sitting below you in the stands means we can't have people doing things they shouldn't be doing, and in the public eye."

Baseball is, after all, family entertainment.

"What if it had been Cop Day?" Blue Jays President Paul Beeston was quoted as saying, obviously with tongue firmly implanted in cheek.

Thompson said there have been some "sniff" people who think it's evil and awful, but "most people definitely have been looking at it from a humorous point of view."

Pope turns 70 amid deluge of cards, calls, but little fanfare

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II turned 70 Friday but the Vatican marked the day with little fanfare and no public birthday party.

The Vatican was "overwhelmed" by messages and telephone calls pouring in from well-wishing world leaders too numerous to identify, papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro said.

No public celebration was planned as Navarro said he knew of no private celebration plans.

The Rome newspaper Il Messaggero published a front-page article written by Lech Walesa, the leader of the Solidarity labor movement in the pope's native Poland, who praised the pope for helping to transform Europe.

"Today a Europe of free nations has become a reality and I think that many people in Europe will thank God for giving the world John Paul II," it said.

JOHN PAUL II

John Paul held his usual audiences Friday and delivered several speeches.

The Vatican daily newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, marked the birthday with the headline "Best Wishes, Holy Father" and articles and photos on his 1 1/2 years as head of the Roman Catholic Church.

The globe-trotting John Paul returned Monday from an eight-day, 10-city tour of Mexico and leaves next Friday on a three-day pilgrimage to Malta, which will be his 48th foreign tour.

McCartney concert sets attendance record

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Beatle Paul McCartney garnered a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records for the largest paid attendance at a public event, his publicist said Friday.

McCartney and his band performed for a crowd of 184,000 at the Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil on April 21.

He broke the record of 175,000 set by Frank Sinatra at the stadium on Jan. 26, 1980.

The Guinness Book acknowledged the record early this month, said Mika El-Baz, McCartney's New York publicist.

Break-in suspect flees, convicted in absentia

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A man found rummaging through belongings in the hotel room of "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson flew the coop but was convicted of burglary in absentia.

Henry Rosenbaum, 36, was last seen Tuesday afternoon following testimony from Johnson describing how he detained the trespasser until authorities arrived.

Rosenbaum proclaimed his innocence to reporters in a courthouse hallway following Johnson's testimony. He said he was paid by a national tabloid publication to break into the room at the Hotel Bel-Air in January 1989.

Superior Court Judge Robert T. Altman issued a warrant for Rosenbaum's arrest and ordered forfeiture of his $50,000 bail.

Johnson testified he surprised Rosenbaum in the room. He said he saw Rosenbaum going through the purse of actress Melanie Griffith, Johnson's wife.

Rosenbaum said he was a fan, but Johnson told him to "shut up." He ordered him to lie on the floor and to put his hands behind his back. Johnson held the trespasser until a hotel security guard arrived.

Rosenbaum fled to New Mexico before the trial and was returned to California by authorities.

CNN anchorman defends career change

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Cable News Network anchorman Catherine Crier told a gathering of lawyers that courtroom competition and unnecessary lawsuits drove her from her post as a Texas district judge.

"We have moved into an arena where competition is the thing, and outdoing the other fellow may have surpassed the notion of serving clients, of seeking justice," Crier told members of the Grand Rapids Bar Association on Wednesday.

Ms. Crier, 35, said she decided to accept CNN's offer in October 1988 in part because she was frustrated by unnecessary litigation, including the case of a woman who sued her obstetrician because she suffered pain during childbirth.

"It hurt," she said. Well, I'm very sorry it hurt, but it dragged the doctor into court for several years in the process," Ms. Crier said.

In 1984, Crier became the youngest woman to be elected as a state district judge in Texas.

Iranian businessman wins World Series of Poker

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An Iranian accountant now living in England came back from the brink of disaster twice Thursday to outlast a Reno, Nev., poker player and win the $835,000 first prize in the World Series of Poker.

Mansour Matloubi used an anti-climatic pair of aces in the final hand to top a pair of fours held by Hans "Tuna" Lund and win the final Texas Hold'Em event in the competition that crowns the world's poker champion.

The final hand win capped a remarkable comeback that saw Matloubi, playing in his first championship game, twice draw the card he needed to stay in the game on the final draw after he had each time put all his chips into the pot.

"I was dead," Matloubi said, "but when the chips went in every time I had the best hand."

Lund had appeared to have the edge after 192 of the players who put in $10,000 apiece to enter the event had lost their chips and only he and Matloubi were left to go head-to-head.

Matloubi trailed by about $300,000 in chips, but the turning point came when he put all his chips in and he and Lund were suddenly playing one hand for a $1.6 million pot.

With only one of the five "flop" cards left to be turned over, Lund appeared to be on his way to the title with a pair of aces to Matloubi's pair of 10s.

But the last card was a 10, and Matloubi was not only still in the game, he held a commanding lead that he used to whittle Lund down until the final pair won the marathon contest.

"I never thought I would win it," said the 37-year-old champion. "I came here basically with the intention of only playing in the cash games, not this game."

Matloubi, who left Iran in 1972, was an accountant in Wales before love for poker prompted him to turn into a professional player about three years ago.

It was his first time in the poker series, and only his second trip to Las Vegas.

Lund, 39, received $334,000 for finishing second.

Matloubi entered Thursday's final round with $403,000 in chips, the most among nine players making it to the final cut in the annual poker classic at Binion's Horseshoe in downtown Las Vegas.

Convicted thief breaks into prison

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A convicted thief broke into a prison office the day after he was released from the jail, court officials said Friday.

Gondai Madekufamba, 26, pleaded guilty in the Harare magistrate's court to stealing items worth about $2,000 from the storeroom. He was sentenced to a five-year term.

Officials said he completed a sentence at Chikurubi prison for theft on March 30, but returned the next day and burglarized an office where the storeroom keys were kept.

E. Germans fear economic, other problems following unification

POTSDAM, East Germany (AP) — East German worker Alfons Domke is already worried his month-old daughter will one day be tempted by illegal drugs like those plaguing the West. And he fears unification might cost his wife's job.

Hotel executive Gabriele Gaertner says she worries that 40 percent of East Germany's workers will lose their jobs as the coming merger with West Germany forces a widespread economic shakeout.

Talks with ordinary East Germans reveal growing fears among a people who for 40 years lived a nearly cocoon-like existence that some West Germans scornfully call "the sleep of Sleeping Beauty."

It's a long way from last fall's scenes of East Germans clamoring for freedom and a chance to follow Western ways.

"Things are just going 'too quickly,'" said Ms. Gaertner, public relations manager at one of East Germany's most successful hotels.

"Before, people said they needed to travel or have a car, but that's not so important now. Now, existence is what's important."

Increasingly, there are nationwide signs of those concerns.

For more than a week, East German teachers, railroad workers, farmers and textile workers have held sporadic strikes to demand job protection as the nations are unified.

East German voters March 18 gave the conservatives the upper hand in this country of 16.6 million people, after hearing West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's stump speeches and promises of prosperity.

Now, East Germans are learning that prosperity won't come easily, and there have been estimates that hundreds of thousands will be out of work and living on unemployment benefits for several years.

Ms. Gaertner, an executive at the elegant Schloss Cecilienhof Hotel in Potsdam just outside Berlin, said one of her neighbors got caught in a double squeeze related to unification: He will lose his job at an outmoded business on July 1, and West German has shown up to reclaim the property where he lives.

The 37-year-old woman bristles at West German suggestions that their East German cousins are lazy and unwilling to put in the long hours needed to rebuild their country.

"Some of the things you hear from the West Germans at the reception desk on the weekends just aren't that nice," she said.

Ms. Gaertner said she fears 40 percent layoffs in many sectors, particularly in the creaking and antiquated factories in the south. She said that could lead to dissatisfaction and possibly unrest.

A department chief in one of East Germany's government ministries agrees, despite West German promises of investments and new jobs.

"Yes, with 25 percent unemployment, I fear there could be a lot of unrest," said the government worker, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He told The Associated Press that whole businesses likely will start to go under within weeks after East Germany adopts the West German currency on July 2.

Domke works 12 hours a day as a parking lot attendant in Potsdam. His dream is to open a private taxi business that one day will expand into a bus company.

"This is a time of great uncertainty, because no one knows what's really coming. But it's also a time of great joy now that we can travel freely to the West," the 24-year-old father said in between collecting money from drivers.

But he, too, has worries.

Domke said illegal drugs are already coming in from West Berlin, and he fears they could become a scourge by the time his baby, Nancy, grows up.

His wife, Nicole, who is about to turn 21, is enjoying a government-guaranteed paid year off after Nancy's birth.

But she is afraid the shop where she worked as a hairdresser won't need her when she returns in August.

U.S. shows confidence in Lithuania

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States gave the breakthrough republic of Lithuania a new vote of confidence Friday, but President Mikhail S. Gorbachev stuck to strict conditions for Baltic independence.

The U.S. support came in a hastily scheduled meeting between Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimieras Prunskiene. Mrs. Prunskiene said she was happy with the meeting.

"I became convinced again that the U.S. as well as other governments support the restoration of independence and the path we are taking," she told reporters at Spaso House, the U.S. ambassador's residence where she met with Baker.

Bronislovas Kuznickas, deputy chairman of Lithuania's legislature, said Baker promised to press for Lithuanian membership in the United Nations. But U.S. officials in Moscow and the United States said they were unaware of the offer.

In the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, thousands of anti-independence demonstrators demanded that the secessionist government resign and that Soviet rule be restored.

Supporters of independence gathered around the Lithuanian Parliament building to block any attempt by pro-Soviet forces to occupy it, said Eduardas Potashnikas, an editor at Lithuanian television.

"Military helicopters dropped leaflets saying, 'Down with the Government of Separatists! Long Live Soviet Lithuania.'" Elsewhere in Vilnius, soldiers reportedly shot a youth trying to enter a military compound.

In Lithuania's neighboring Baltic republics, Latvia's Communist Party chief warned there might be "serious confrontation." And Russian-speaking workers in Estonia decided to strike Monday to protest the independence campaign, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported. Three days earlier, independence activists tried to seize the Parliament building in Riga, Latvia, and briefly took over part of the government headquarters in Tallinn.

S. Koreans rally to mark 10th anniversary of bloody uprising

KWANGJU, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of anti-government demonstrators raged through downtown streets Friday, burning tires and hurling rocks at police on the 10th anniversary of the nation's bloodiest uprising.

"Down with Roh Tae-woo!" the crowd screamed, waving red, yellow and blue banners. "Yankee go home!" they shouted in an outpouring of rage against President Roh and the U.S. military forces stationed in South Korea.

Nationwide, about 70,000 police were deployed in a show of force to prevent violence, officials said in Seoul, about 12,000 riot police guarded government offices, public buildings and foreign legations.

The violence erupted after some 100,000 people rallied downtown to mark the May 18, 1980, pro-democracy uprising — in this provincial city, which seared the psyche of Koreans more than any incident since the 1950 Korean War.

Kwangju police reported arrests and injuries Friday but gave no details.

One man with blood over his face was rushed to a hospital in an ambulance.

A three-hour nighttime rally began peacefully. People demanded the ouster of the Roh government and the 43,000 American troops in South Korea under a mutual defense out police and took control of the city for 10 days before being crushed by tank-led paratroopers.

By official count, about 200 people were killed and more than 1,700 others injured or wounded. Kwangju citizens claim the death toll was much higher.

Anti-U.S. sentiment is also strong among Kwangju citizens because many believe Washington condoned the ruthless crushing of the revolt.

After the initial nighttime rally, about 7,000 people marched along downtown streets, shouting anti-government and anti-U.S. slogans.

When blocked by units of riot police near a district head office of Roh's ruling party, protests turned violent.

Protesters broke sidewalks into fist-sized rocks and threw them at riot police, who responded with bursts of tear gas.

Onlookers, gagged by the choking tear gas, rushed for cover.

Demonstrators piled dozens of tires on several intersections and set them ablaze. Belching smoke billowed over much of the city center.

Elsewhere in the city, groups of protesters ranging from 500 to 2,000 clashed with riot police, hurling rocks.

Some protesters broke telephone booths and tipped apart street signs. No firebombs were used.

Cosmonauts stranded until repairs made

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two cosmonauts aboard the Soviet space station Mir have no reliable way to return to Earth in an emergency because their space ferry has been damaged, an industry magazine reports.

The cosmonauts are waiting for a ladder to be brought aboard an unmanned resupply craft before venturing into open space to repair the Soyuz ferry docked to the Mir's nose. Aviation Week and Space Technology says in its May 21 issue.

Damage to the Soyuz was disclosed by the Soviets soon after its launch Feb. 11.

A ground controller asked about the protective blanket on the ship having "become dislodged," according to a transcript of a ground-to-space conversation with cosmonauts Anatoli Soloviyev and Aleksandr Balandyn, who are aboard the Mir.

"This is a situation which generally requires attention, of course," one of the cosmonauts replied. "But it probably is not all that serious."

Asked whether a spacewalk might be required, the cosmonaut replied: "We are prepared for that work. Therefore, there is nothing too special about that either."

The Soviets use small Soyuz capsules to transport cosmonauts to and from the space station. Sometimes the crews will ride their own Soyuz back to Earth, at other times a crew that has been aboard the Mir will travel in a Soyuz brought by other cosmonauts.

The space station has several docking ports.

Aviation Week interviewed cosmonaut Alexander A. Serebrow, who recently returned from the Mir, where he photographed the damaged Soyuz TM-9 vehicle from his own TM-8 spacecraft.

Anti-Communist protesters defy Romanian ban

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Hundreds of anti-Communist demonstrators defied a ban on political rallies Friday and vowed to remain in central Bucharest until Romania has a government untainted by links to Nicolae Ceausescu.

"Our round-the-clock protest will continue until we get our liberty back, until democracy is restored in our country!" protest leader Dumitru Dinca shouted to demonstrators in downtown University Square, Bucharest's main transit artery.

They have occupied the square since April 22, demanding that interim president Ion Iliescu and other former Communists quit politics. Iliescu, who became interim president after the overthrow and execution of Ceausescu in December, is heavily favored in Sunday's presidential election.

Iliescu had said the protesters should be "cleaned out" of the square after the campaign officially closed Thursday. Campaigning and political rallies are banned the last two days of the campaign.

But Premier Petre Roman announced that the government — which is under intense international scrutiny over Sunday's elections — had decided to tolerate the demonstrators' "violation of the law" for the time being.

13th hole not bad

LUCKY (AP) — Unlucky hole No. 13 at the Deerwood Club was a lucky one for Lee Trevino at the Doug Sanders Kingswood Celebrity Classic Friday. The 397-yard par-4 has more than its share of hazards. There's a water hazard as you approach the green, which is on a dogleg left, and a stand of pine trees in the middle of the fairway. "That 13 is a monster, and there were some pretty big stones on the green. It's all most forces you to hit driver or you will have a long iron coming in," said Trevino, who shot a 5-under-par 67 to lead the field.

Sandberg ends error-free streak against Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's record streak of 123 games without an error ended Friday night with a wild throw against the Houston Astros. Sandberg, the Chicago Cubs' Gold Glove second baseman, fielded a deflected ground ball by Eric Anthony in the fourth inning, but threw wide of first baseman Mark Grace. Sandberg successfully handled 592 consecutive chances without an error since his last miscue, last June 20 against Pittsburgh. Sandberg's streak set a major league record for infielders, excluding first basemen.

Declo girls leading A-3 teams while Buhl's Victor sets new mark in mile

By JEFF HOSKISSON Times-News writer
BOISE — Declo's girls got a jump start on the Magic Valley's first Class A-3 prep track and field championship since 1981 here Friday.

Junior Thais Kidd and sophomore Rena Miller won the triple jump and 1,600-meter run, respectively, and Kidd finished third in the long jump to give the Homets a first-day lead at the Idaho High School Track and Field Championships.

Declo ended the first day of the two-day meet with 24 points compared with 18 points for runner-up Parma and 16 for District 4 rival Filer.

Carey, the runner-up to Declo in the District 4 meet last week, kept its title hopes alive by advancing all of its runners into today's finals.

Kidd defended her state A-3 triple jump title by edging archrival Brandy Morrison of Filer by 2 inches.

"It's pretty nice," said Kidd, who won Friday with a 35-foot leap. "There was a lot of pressure being expected to win."

Miller led from start to finish in easily winning the A-3 1,600 in 5 minutes, 27.43 seconds.

"I can't believe it," she said. "The first thing I'm going to do is call my dad."

The rest of the A-3 running events as well as the discus, shot put and high jump will be settled today, starting at 12:25 p.m. in Bronco Stadium.

The only other Magic Valley winner Friday was a record-breaker. Buhl High School senior Eric Victor took the A-2 boys' 1,600-meter title by a convincing 6 seconds.

Victor, the Magic Valley's top prep distance runner, led from the start in covering the mile in 4:25.97, a new A-2 record.

"It felt pretty good," he said. "I had stomach jitters when the race first started, but got over them in the next half mile."

Jerome's hopes of reprising its A-2 boys' title faded Friday when the Tigers dropped 28 points behind passcetting Middleton in the team standings.

For the rest of the valley's athletes, it was a case of being oh-so-close.

Twenty-three District 4 athletes collected places, but Kidd, Miller and Victor were the only winners.

Two of the most surprising finishes of the day were turned in by Brett Groves of Twin Falls and J.D. Osterhout of Declo.

Groves jumped 42-7/8 — 3 feet farther than he has ever jumped before — to place fourth in the A-1 triple jump while Osterhout leaped 6-4 to collect third place in the A-3 high jump.

In addition to Kidd, Miller, Morrison and Osterhout, five other A-3 athletes collected medals Friday. Debbie Southwick of Dietrich tied for fifth in the high jump at 5-0, Julie Thompson of Hagerman rounded-out a Magic-Valley sweep in the girls' triple jump with a third-place finish

Eagles beat TVCC, force showdown for Region 18 title

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

ONTARIO, Ore. — Sophomore Paul Murphy started the day in the doghouse but ended it in the penthouse, keeping the College of Southern Idaho's baseball team alive in the Region 18 junior college baseball tournament.

Murphy had four innings of shutout relief with a two-run homer that capped a four-run rally in the bottom of the eighth and took CSI past previously unbeaten

Treasure Valley 7-5 Friday. The victory forced the tournament into an extra session, which is slated for 11 a.m. today with the winner advancing to the Northwest-District-finals-Monday-and-Tuesday in Helper, Utah, against Region 9 champion Trinidad Community College of Trinidad, Colo.

Early in the day, CSI stayed alive in a loss-out contest by overwhelming Dixie 8-6. When Friday morning's game started, Murphy — along with a couple of other CSI sophomores who had displaced coach

Jim Walker in CSI's 6-3 loss to TVCC on Thursday — was on the bench.

"I deserved it, the way I was playing," said Murphy, a right-handed shortstop and third-baseman who had pitched only briefly since his senior year at Pocatello's Highland High School. He became the central point in the game's sixth inning when he came on in relief of Mark Keeble, the fourth CSI pitcher. He gave up a two-run homer to Mike Goddard as the Eagles slipped behind 5-2.

The Eagles got one run back on a Jonas

Hamlin single in the sixth.

In the bottom of the eighth facing Jerome's Jim Bos, Hamlin hit a two-run homer that drove in Stacy Ayers ahead of him — and tied the game. After Bos retired Don Slattery, Sean Hicks singled and Murphy followed with his towering home run to center field that doubtlessly would not have made it out of the park had not a fair breeze been blowing out.

"The wind definitely had to help," Murphy said.

Steinbrenner tried to woo Winfield back

TORONTO (AP) — During a two-hour meeting in New York on Monday, Yankees owner George Steinbrenner promised to make Dave Winfield a regular if the outfielder returned to the team.

"Yeah," Winfield said Friday, when asked specifically about Steinbrenner's promise.

"All that stuff is documented extremely well. Other than that, I don't want to comment on it."

The Angels may lodge a grievance with the commissioner's office, charging that Steinbrenner grossly interfered with their attempt to sign the outfielder.

Winfield was traded by the Yankees last weekend to California but he refused to report, citing his right as a 10-year player — including at least five with the same club — to veto the deal.

The Angels claim that Steinbrenner improved Winfield's bargaining position. He signed a three-year, $9.1-million contract with the Angels and reported Thursday.

"If California feels that's their right, fine," Winfield said. "I has something to do with me, because it happened around me."

"But it won't make a difference about me being in California, I'm happy here. People have greeted me very well in the first 24 hours. I look forward to a long relationship. So that's between the clubs and perhaps the commissioner."

Unbridled must avoid Preakness speed trap

By ANDREW BEYER The Washington Post

BALTIMORE — On the day before the 115th Preakness Stakes, trainers and jockeys were preoccupied more by the nature of the Pimlico track than they were by the horses who would run over it.

This racing surface has a longstanding reputation for favoring front-runners, and Friday's Daily Racing Form had proclaimed, "The Pimlico strip has never been faster or more biased toward speed."

This factor buoyed the hopes of the challengers who are trying to upset Unbridled, the Kentucky Derby winner who will be the solid favorite here Saturday.

And speed was on the mind of Unbridled's trainer, Carl Nafziger.

"I'd like to see Mister Frisky or Summer Squall lope up there on the front end by themselves, we don't entice him," he said. "That's the nightmare — not a worry. If I see Mister Frisky bouncing along out there ... on the lead, I'm going to say, 'Well, come on, let's get second.'"

Les Barrern, the trainer of Mister Frisky — who finished 19 lengths behind Unbridled at Churchill Downs — was thinking along similar lines. "The difference is going to be the track," said the man whose colt, Affirmed, led all the way to win in 1978. "The track is going to be fast here and this track is known for speed horses. (Mister Frisky) is going to be very, very tough to beat because the horses that come from behind have got a lot to do to get to the front."

Although the premise that the Pimlico track favors speed is accepted as gospel, there is little evidence to support it — either in the races here lately or in the recent history of the Preakness.

"We're very aware of the track's reputation," said John Passero, who has been the track superintendent for the past three years, "and we try to ensure that it's even."

Of the distance races run at Pimlico this month, 90 percent have been won by horses rallying from the rear half of the

Bruins beat Meridian, play for state crown

By RON GATES Times-News writer

BOISE — Forced to come from behind in both halves of a double-header sweep of Meridian during the regular season, Twin Falls High School found a little relief in Friday's second round of the Idaho Class A-1 Invitational Baseball Tournament.

The Bruins, who hit a meager .154 against Meridian in their opening-round game Thursday, banged out seven hits — three for extra bases — and scored in each of the first four innings en route to a 6-2 win that propelled them into tonight's state championship game.

The 27-2 Bruins will face defending state champion Capital, a 7-6 winner over Coeur d'Alene in Friday night's other semifinal, for the state championship at 8 p.m. tonight in Memorial Stadium.

The Eagles, who lost to Twin Falls in April, will take a 23-6 record into the finale.

"We're going to try to win our first, one, then be loose as a goose in the second game," Meridian coach Mo Brooks said just prior to a 13-2 first-round pasting of Skyline on Thursday. "It's not a true single elimination, but it is. You're out of the running if you lose in the first two."

It didn't work out quite the way Brooks had planned.

Twin Falls' Torrey Bollinger doubled, moved to third on and error, then staked the Bruins to a one-run lead on a first-inning passed ball.

John Horner got aboard on an error with one away in the Bruins' second and Riley Boyd, Jason Carrio and Steve Bartholomew singled in succession, adding two more.

"The Warriors got one run back in their next at bat, but shortstop Matt Rasmussen negated that with his fourth home run of the season with two gone in the third inning.

3 CSI athletes move into NJCAA track finals

The Times-News

ODESSA, Texas — The College of Southern Idaho advanced three athletes into today's finals at the National Junior Athletic Association outdoor track and field championships.

Freshman Scott Lupo cleared 15 feet, 11 inches in the pole vault Friday to secure a place in today's finals, scheduled to 6 p.m. CDT.

Stallworth got into the semifinals with a mark of 47.89, but failed to place with a time Friday of 49.06.

Earlier in the week, freshman Will Dozier qualified for the triple jump finals. He'll compete at 2 p.m. CDT today.

A number of their teammates didn't fare as well Thursday and Friday. The Eagles' 4x100-meter relay team turned a time of 4:09 seconds and finished 11th, while Jeff Morris finished 10th in the men's hammer throw with a toss of 143-6.

Stallworth got into the semifinals with a mark of 47.89, but failed to place with a time Friday of 49.06.

Stallworth also ran a personal best 21.5 in the 200, but that wasn't enough to get him into the finals.

Freshman Shannon Cato made the semifinals in the 400-meter hurdles with a time of 1:06.28, while wound up out of the money with a 1:07.27 in the semifinals.

The CSI men's 4x400-meter relay team wound up 11th in 3:16.05.

Brewers' Wegman blanks A's in duel of the AL division leaders

Cleveland Indians runner Brook Jacoby, right, opens Seattle Mariners' second baseman Harold Reynolds, allowing two runs to score.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Bill Wegman pitched his second career shutout, Dave Parker hit a pair of run-scoring doubles against his former team and B. Suhrhoff had a bases-loaded single as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Oakland Athletics 5-0 Friday night in a meeting of American League division leaders.

Wegman (2-0), who has 0-5 lifetime against the Athletics, limited Oakland to six hits, in his second start. He began the season in the minors recovering from 1989 shoulder surgery. Wegman walked three and struck out four.

The A's have lost five of their last six games.

Kansas City 4 New York 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Bret Saberhagen pitched a two-hitter for his second victory of the season and led the Kansas City Royals to a 4-1 victory over the New York Yankees 4-1 Friday night.

Baltimore 13 Texas 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles tied an American League record with eight consecutive wins as they softly won in a seven-run first inning against Texas pitcher Bobby Witt and crushed the Rangers 13-1 Friday night.

Witt (1-5) threw 44 pitches in the first inning but remained in the game until the fifth, when he walked David Segui with the bases loaded to force in the eighth Oriole run.

Minnesota 6 Boston 0

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Tim Lincecum and veteran John Candelaria and Terry Leach combined on a nine-hitter, and Gary Gaetti drove in two runs with a homer and sacrificed fly as the Minnesota Twins blanked the Boston Red Sox 6-0 Friday night.

In his first major-league start, Drummond allowed five hits, all singles, and struck out six, but lost a chance for his initial victory when he was replaced by Candelaria with two outs in the fifth.

Candelaria (4-1) retired Mike Greenwell on a fly ball and earned the victory as the Twins padded a 1-0 lead with three runs in the sixth and two more in the seventh.

O'Neill's home run in 9th lifts Reds to 1-0 win over Cardinals

CINCINNATI (AP) — After 8 2/3 innings of superb, scoreless pitching, Cincinnati's Paul O'Neill and St. Louis reliever Ken Dayley tied against their long-running personal duel.

O'Neill won in dramatic style, lining a fastball over the left-field fence with two outs in the ninth inning to give the Reds a 1-0 victory Friday night.

"It was the pitch I wanted to throw and it was where I wanted it," said Dayley (1-1). "I wanted to throw him a fastball up and away. I thought he wouldn't get around on it. I had gotten him on that pitch in the past."

O'Neill, who earlier had gone to the opposite field for a double off starter Greg Mathews, again went the opposite way for his fourth home run of the season. He ended a streak of 17 scoreless innings by the Reds. "I haven't had much success against him," O'Neill said. "A tough lefty is really tough on left-handers, and he usually does get that pitch by me."

Norm Charlton (3-0) dominated the Cardinals the final two innings, striking out Willie McGee, Terry Pendleton and Pedro Guerrero in the ninth.

Dayley struck out the first two batters he faced before O'Neill homered.

Cincinnati starter Ron Robinson shut out the Cardinals on four hits for seven innings. Greg Mathews blanked the Reds on four hits in eight innings in his best performance since missing all of last season because of elbow surgery.

"Mathews pitched well," and so did Dayley," St. Louis manager Whitey

Herzog said. "We just don't score runs — nine runs in six games with the Reds."

Cincinnati is 5-1 against the Cardinals.

"I don't have any real philosophy about hitting Dayley. I was just trying to make contact," O'Neill said. "I know that he throws hard. I was just looking for the ball."

The victory was the 11th in the past 14 games for the Reds.

The Cardinals had a lone base runner every inning but the ninth, eight double plays prior to Friday night, and Peter Flawn, who made two errors, turned four against St. Louis.

"That double plays statistic is really a misleading statistic," Herzog said. "It doesn't matter how many you turn, it's how many you miss that you should have turned."

Pittsburgh 9 Atlanta 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Bobby Bonilla hit Pittsburgh's first grand slam since 1987 and Bob Walk won his first game in a row as the Pirates beat the Atlanta Braves 9-3 Friday night.

Wally Backman homered, had four hits and drove in two runs as the Pirates ended a three-game losing streak. Bonilla also tripled and drove in three of Pittsburgh's 15 hits.

Walk (4-3) shut out Atlanta on five hits in 6 2/3 innings. He left with the bases loaded and Scott Ruskin retired pinch-hitter Ron Gant on a grounder to end the third inning.

Chicago 7 Houston 0

HOUSTON (AP) — Andre Dawson drove in three runs and rookie Mike Harkey pitched eight strong innings Friday night as the Chicago Cubs, despite a rare error by second baseman Ryne Sandberg, beat the Houston Astros 7-0.

Sandberg's record streak of 123 games without an error ended with a wild throw on Eric Anthony's grounder in the fourth inning.

He had handed 582 chances last week to a mistake since an error late in the fifth after Sandberg walked and Grace singled.

Chicago sent the Astros to their 10th loss in 12 games.

Harkey (4-1) gave up six hits, walked three and struck out four. He never pitched a complete game in the majors, and Mitch Williams worked the ninth. Bill Gullickson (2-3) gave up five runs on six hits in 1 1/3 innings.

Dawson and Dwight Smith hit RBI singles in the first inning. The Cubs made it 5-0 in the second on run-scoring singles by Sandberg and Shawn Dunston and a sacrifice fly by Mark Grace.

Dawson hit a two-run double in the fifth after Sandberg walked and Grace singled.

Welty brings home Big Sky high jump title

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Twin Falls' Amber Welty of Idaho State won her second Big Sky Conference women's high jump title, but defending champion Northern Arizona took a commanding lead in the team competition Friday after the first day of the women's Big Sky Conference Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

After five events, the Lady Jacks had 41 points, then came Idaho — with 28½, Boise State with 21 and Weber State with 19.

"We have the 1988 NCAA outdoor high jump champion, leaped 5-foot-11½ Friday to win the league title and qualify for a return trip to the NCAA nationals," Kristi Klennert of Northern Arizona won the 10,000-meter run in a time of 36 minutes, 19 feet 7/8 inches, and Weber State's Shauna Turner in the shot put with a 47-1/4 effort.

Northern Arizona got a second place finish from high jumper Debbie Orr and then second and third place efforts in the long jump from Heather Korol and Rachel Lane to take the early team lead.

"In the men's division, Kamy Keshmiri of Nevada set a new meet record in the discus.

The sophomore from Reno, Nev., had a toss of 208-8 to break the old mark of 200-7 set in 1984 by Montana State's Lance Deak.

Keshmiri's effort also was the best discus throw ever by a Big Sky athlete.

of 33-on and Best Brown of Richfield collected a sixth-place finish in the 1,600.

The boys also got placings from David Miller of Oakley and Forrest Andersen of Murghaus. Miller got two medals, finishing third in the pole vault and fifth in the long jump.

In addition to Victor, Money and Riemann, A-2 placers from the Magic Valley included Liz Gilbert, Bob Williams, Paul Lloyd and Richard Moreno of Jerome and Heather Hulce of Buhl.

Gilbert and Williams each picked up fifth-place finishes in the long jump, while Lloyd and Moreno ended up 4-5 in the 1,600.

Riemann and Money both fell victim to the state's top athlete, Eric Brewington of Middleton. Leading going into the fifth throw in the discus, Riemann watched Brewington overtake him with a throw of 145-10. Unable to respond, Riemann finished second with a toss of 144-2.

Money's experience was similar. On Brewington's first attempt in the triple jump, he spanned 47-10 for a new all-time state best. Money had to settle for 46-2.

Hulce rounded things out in the A-2 by tying for second in the high jump at 5-2.

In the A-1 finals that were settled Friday, Twin Falls' Chelsey Mueller finished second in the long jump with a leap of 17-4 and her teammate Bob Moulson was third in the discus with a toss of 150-6.

Burley's Gretchen Cook threw the shot 35-4, collected fourth place, while Twin Falls' Scott Edwards finished fifth in the long jump with a leap of 21-3/8.

In all, the Magic Valley will send 35 athletes into Saturday's running events, which get under way at 10 a.m. at the Idaho High School and Field Championships at Boise State University.

"At this point, Walker decided to try Brian Avram on the mound. But Avram was the first TVC pitcher in the top of the ninth and threw the next pitch over Cody Johnson's head. That was enough for Walker. He brought Murphy back from shortstop, moved Avram to first and put Humm at shortstop.

"Murphy was an unknown quantity to us," said TVCC coach Rick Baumann, whose bullpen could have wrapped up the regional title by beating CSI Friday. "We hadn't seen him before. In fact, I didn't know he ever pitched for them."

Both coaches felt that today's title game is going to be an offensive shootout unless someone can fluff an effective pitcher.

"We have some rested arms, but we're pretty deep into our staff now and I don't know how they will hold up against a lineup like CSI's," Baumann said.

"We'll take a look at sophomore right-hander Traver (Hunter)," said Walker. "If he can't make it, we'll look at the staff."

It was a bitter loss for Baumann, who has taken a virtually resourceless program to within a step of the regional championship.

"We were right where we wanted to be," he said of that 5-3 leading edge into the bottom of the eighth. "We had our guy on the mound, but he just happened to hang a slider to Hamann and that tied it up. Then he apparently made a little mistake to Murphy and that homer killed us."

Despite the victory, Walker was still upset with his team's inability to execute offensively. "Oh five straight occasions after getting the leadoff batter on base, CSI batters failed to advance the runners.

"When all you do is wait for the homer, you can wind up just waiting 'til next year," Walker said.

In Friday's opener, CSI jumped ahead 5-1 after 2½ innings, but then saw Dixie collect nine hits — six of them on two-strike pitches — to take the lead at 6-5 after four innings.

At that point, Rupert's Eric Miller became CSI's third pitcher and he slammed the door the rest of the way, picking up the victory. In fact, he pitched the first 2 1/3 innings of the second game.

Meanwhile, CSI went ahead with two runs in the top of the sixth on RBI singles from Ayers and Brenden Peach. Slattery's solo home run in the top of the ninth provided a little cushion.

Market settles after Thursday's rise

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market settled for a mixed showing Friday, running into resistance after a rise to a record high.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 11.80 to 2,819.91, reducing its gain for the week to 18.33 points.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines in an intraday trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 742 up, 725 down and 534 unchanged.

Analysts said traders seemed reluctant to chase after the rally that has carried stock prices sharply higher than they had expected.

Much of the impetus for that advance came from an abrupt downturn in interest rates as fears of resurgent inflation eased. Now, brokers say, investors seem inclined to wait for evidence that interest rates will rise.

Rates rose in the credit markets Friday. Prices of long-term government bonds dropped about 35 for each $1,000 in face value, increasing their yields to the 8.70 percent-8.75 percent range.

Yields of rates assume their decline from Treasury bond yields of slightly above 9 percent at their peak a few weeks ago, some brokers expect whether stocks will continue to rise.

They say the same sluggish economic climate that has allowed for a lowering of inflationary expectations and interest rates also has raised new questions about prospects for corporate profits.

Leaders among the blue chips included General Motors, down 1/4 at 47 1/2; Philip Morris, down 1/4 at 43 1/2; Eastman Kodak, down 1/4 at 40; International Business Machines, down 1/4 at 115 1/4; and DuPont, down 1/4 at 40 1/4.

On the plus side, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 1/4 to 43 1/4 as the most active NYSE issue; General Electric edged up 1/4 to 68 1/4, and McDonald's added 1/4 to 32 1/4.

Allegedly Unicom climbed 1/2 to 47 1/2. The company declared a 3-for-2 stock split and increased its quarterly dividend from 30 cents a share to 40 cents.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Do not reveal your thoughts to anyone, lest you drive away your good luck."
— Apocrypha.

If you play today's game without larcinous intent, you will certainly lose two trumps, a diamond and a club. What offers the best shot at pulling the wool over West's eyes?

In a typical game, West leads the club Jack, dummy and East cover, and South wins the ace. South cashes the spade ace and then leads a diamond toward dummy. Afraid to permit two discards on dummy's spades, West rises with his ace and leads a club. East now has an easy walk with his two trump tricks, and the game goes one down.

As South muddles the water as well as he can, First he ducks his club ace and wins the continuation. Next he leads a low diamond toward dummy, and West sees no need to rush in — why prevent South from taking a losing finesse?

Dummy's diamond nine wins, and South springs the trap. He cashes his spade ace, ruffs a club to reach dummy and discards two diamonds on the high spades. Then, after ruffing his last club, he surrenders the trump tricks and sheepishly claims his 10 winners.
