Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev speaks to press as Canada's Prime Minister Brian Mulroney looks on

The Associated Press

OTTAWA — Mikhail S. Gorbachev expressed confidence Tuesday on the eve of a superpower summit that he and President Bush will agree on a formula for permitting German unification without upsetting the balance of power in Europe.

The Soviet president's comments came Tuesday evening in the Canadian capital, where he made a stopover en route to Washington for his second summit with Bush.

Asked if he was optimistic about reaching agreement with the United States over Germany and its membership in NATO, Gorbachev replied, "I am sure of that. And tell that to the American people."

Gorbachev's remark to reporters during a walking tour of a downtown Ottawa mall marked a sharp turn from the gloomy assessments of Bush and his senior advisers in recent days and Gorbachev's own warning that U.S. insistence on a new, united Germany retaining West Germany's seat in NATO could stall the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Eastern Europe.

The Soviet Union, which lost more than 20 million people to Nazi forces, has moved from outright opposition to German unification to acceptance of the concept under some formula that would provide assurances a new German giant would never again pose a military threat to its neighbors.

Gorbachev left behind worsening domestic problems — including panic-buying, attempts by the Baltic republics to secede from the Soviet Union and clashes between troops and militants in Armenia — as he arrived Tuesday in Ottawa.

After talks with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, Gorbachev was cheered by thousands as he strolled through a downtown mall.

For Gorbachev, the 29-hour stopover marked his second trip to Canada, which he first visited in 1983, when he was in charge of Soviet agriculture policy and was gaining notice as a rising star in the Communist Party hierarchy.

On this visit, he was not accompanied by Alexander Yakovlev, a former ambassador to Canada who now advises Gorbachev on international affairs and has accompanied Gorbachev on other trips to the West.

Yakovlev's absence was seen as an indication Gorbachev felt compelled to leave at least one member of his inner circle in Moscow to oversee events in the troubled country during his travels.

With plenty of moisture on the ground at the city park in Filer, hunting for worms proves to be a profitable activity Tuesday afternoon. Randy, who didn't want his last name used, described the work as "picking up pennies" as he sent an electrical current into the ground bringing the flea bait to the surface.

House leaders find talking pays

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Special interests paid nearly $600,000 last year for speeches by a half-dozen top leaders in the House.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the tax-writing committee, took in the most with $285,000, according to financial disclosure reports made public Tuesday.

Members of the House accepted millions of dollars for speechmaking in 1989, the reports showed. Many representatives were paid more for talking than the average family earns in a year.

The flow of speaking fees, mostly from special interests, was hardly slowed by the allegations of financial improprieties that led last year to the resignations of Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the majority whip.

Wright's successor, Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., reported he received $32,000 in honoraria. Coelho's successor, Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., claimed $164,938. Foley's successor as majority leader, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., reported $34,500. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., picked up $160,517.

Speaking fees were not the only source of outside income for members of the House, which has dozens of millionaires.

One of the wealthiest, Rep. Amory Houghton, R-N.Y., an heir to the Corning Glass Works fortune, received $127,000 last year for managing family trusts.

Rep. Don Sundquist, R-Tenn.,

Supremacists held in conspiracy case

The Associated Press

BOISE — Two members of a northern Idaho white-supremacist group were ordered to remain in custody after FBI agents testified that an informant who infiltrated the Aryan Nations helped record details of their alleged plot to bomb buildings frequented by gays and minorities in the Seattle area.

U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams heard more than 2 1/2 hours of testimony Tuesday before continuing an order that Robert J. Winslow, 29, of LaCrosse, and Steven E. Nelson, 34, of Hayden Lake, be held without bail.

The order initially was issued by U.S. Magistrate Stephen Ayers in Seattle before the pair was transferred to Idaho. Williams said he was continuing it primarily to ensure public safety, citing the violent nature of their alleged crimes, and not because of any specific risk they would try to escape.

Winslow and Nelson were arrested May 12 in Seattle and indicted by a federal grand jury in Boise six days later on one count each of conspiracy to bomb, knowingly making, receiving or possessing pipe bombs and carrying firearms in relation to a violent crime.

A third man, Procter J. Baker, 57, of Coeur d'Alene, was charged with the same indictment with one count of conspiracy to bomb and one count of knowingly making, receiving or possessing pipe bombs.

Trial for all three is scheduled to begin June 25 in Boise. Procter was arrested May 12 at Coeur d'Alene and remained in custody there Tuesday.

"These defendants conspired to kill, maim and wound people in the Seattle area," Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Howen told Williams. "This is purely and simply domestic terrorism."

Howen argued against a request from attorneys for Winslow and Nelson that they be released but required to wear electronic monitoring devices. He said prosecutors have more than 100 hours of audio and video tape that includes both men making blatant and specific threats of violence against various minority groups.

Some of it was obtained with the help of Rico Renaldo Valentino, a former wrestler who FBI agents testified Tuesday identified as a "confidential informant" who infiltrated the Aryan Nations. Agents said he wore a wire during meetings with the defendants and was driving the van in which Winslow and Nelson were riding when they were arrested. It contained two guns and what investigators identified as the makings of a pipe bomb.

The FBI had not previously acknowledged Valentino's role or confirmed where he was during the Seattle arrests.

"It is a strong case against the defendants," Howen said.

Nelson lives on the Aryan Nations compound at Hayden Lake, where he works as an aide to the Rev. Richard Butler, 72, founder and leader of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian and its political arm, the Aryan Nations. Winslow, who recently was discharged from the Army, if released would have returned to Missouri to live with his father until trial, said his attorney, Lance Churchill of Boise.

The government alleges the three were part of an unsuccessful conspiracy to bomb a gay nightclub, a synagogue and several bars patronized by gays.

Leak stalls launch

The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA scrubbed Columbia's launch Tuesday when an apparent leak in a hydrogen system was detected as workers were pumping a half-million gallons of propellant into the shuttle.

The postponement came about six hours before the scheduled launch at 12:38 a.m. EDT Wednesday (10:38 p.m. MDT Tuesday). No new date was set immediately, and engineers evaluated the problem through the night.

The shuttle holds a $150 million observatory called Astro that will monitor unseen radiation and provide astronomers with unprecedented views of distant stars and galaxies.

NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said Tuesday night that the leak appeared to be in the shuttle's main propulsion system or in the liquid hydrogen system's ground support equipment.

"The vehicle was never in an unsafe position at any time," she said.

None of the seven astronauts were on board at the time.

Malone said a new launch date would be set "as soon as the problem has been identified and corrected."

Engineers continued pumping hydrogen late Tuesday in an attempt to isolate the source of the leaking gas, Malone said.

Stallings, Craig pull in over $31,000

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idaho Reps. Richard Stallings and Larry Craig each supplemented their congressional salaries with thousands of dollars in speaking fees last year, according to financial disclosure forms released Tuesday.

Stallings, a Democrat, garnered $11,800 in the fees — called honoraria — while Craig, a Republican, pulled in $20,450.

The controversial payments, which critics say often are thinly veiled attempts by special interests to influence lawmakers, will be banned as of Jan. 1, 1991 as part of an ethics/pay raise bill passed last November.

Stallings honoraria included $1,000 from the Lockheed Corp., plus transportation to San Jose, Calif. and lodging there. Stallings also got $1,000 for a speech to Rockwell International.

Algae mats point to problems with Snake River

Aquatic plants that feed on pollutants choke portions of the Snake River

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Algae mats on the Snake River are substantial enough that birds build nests on them, and a muskrat was seen Tuesday napping on one near Banbury Hot Springs.

A little downstream, three great blue herons stood on a mat that lay like an island the size of a football field in the middle of the river. Along the bank grebes had built nests on the thick green tangle.

"If this is the way the river is going to look, not very many people will want to be on it," said Kevin Lynott of the state Parks and Recreation Department.

The mass of plant growth, some up to one-half mile long, indicate problems with water quality, water usage and water management in the river.

The state Water Resources Board has recommended most of an 82-mile stretch of the Snake River — from just below Milner Dam to King Hill — for permanent protection from development. A 1988 legislative mandate directs the board to compile a state comprehensive river plan.

The board's recently issued draft Comprehensive River Plan for the Middle Snake River, however, does not recommend protection for the 24-mile stretch from Shoshone Falls to the backwaters of the Upper Salmon Falls Dam, or just about the location of Banbury Hot Springs north of Buhl.

That excluded stretch contains the worst of the aquatic growth.

According to the legislation, however, the criteria for protection are based on outstanding geologic, aesthetic, fish and wildlife and recreation values. Water quality is not a criterion.

Most of the river was recommended for protection for its outstanding recreation values. But the algae mats prevent much recreation in the stretch not recommended for protection, board member Don Kramer said.

"That area isn't fit for recreation," Kramer said Tuesday at a citizens' meeting Tuesday arranged by Julie Randall of Twin Falls and Kathy Sursely of Buhl. But the stretch includes several proposed hydroelectric sites.

More dams would only make the aquatic growth problems worse and would reduce the effect of flushing flows in water years, said Mike McMasters, water quality field supervisor with the state Division of Environmental Quality's Twin Falls office.

Additional dams would slow the river, would increase areas of shallow water that much of the aquatic growth favors and would increase water temperature, all favoring increased plant growth, he said.

The plant growth blocks sunlight into the water, and when it dies it depletes much of the oxygen dissolved in the water.

Naval Academy outlaws harassment

The Baltimore Sun

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—Midshipmen found guilty of physically or mentally abusing first-year students will now face expulsion, U.S. Naval Academy officials said Tuesday as they stiffened penalties in the wake of disclosures of a rash of such incidents.

Rear Adm. Virgil L. Hill Jr., the academy superintendent, issued the set of general orders — including a new program of sensitivity training for midshipmen — after weeks of intense media scrutiny.

It began when a former midshipman, Gwen M. Dreyer, of Encinitas, Calif., reported she was dragged from her dormitory room, handcuffed to a pipe over a men's room urinal and photographed and taunted by other midships. She resigned at the end of this school year.

Reports of her resignation prompted other plebes, as first-year academy students are called, to disclose having incidents. Those reports, combined with concerns about academic standards, have led to a congressional investigation, a review by the General Accounting Office, two internal probes and an inquiry by the Navy's inspector general.

Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett III ordered the review by Rear Adm. Ming E. Chang, the inspector general, after a meeting last week with Adm. Hill, Rear Adm. Joseph W. Pracher, the commandant of midshipmen, and Adm. Carlisle A.H. Frost, the chief of naval operations.

The general order that went into effect Tuesday clears up any "gray areas" that may have existed for midshipmen, explained Lt. Cmdr. Mark Van Dyke, an Academy spokesman.

"We're drawing the line very clearly now," he said. "Yesterday, an upperclassman may have received a punishment less than dismissal for some incidents, depending on the circumstances. But under the admiral's order, if an upperclassman touches a plebe other than for safety reasons or in an athletic contest, he can be subject to dismissal. This is not to say, he added, that what is known at the academy as "indoctrination" of plebes — requiring them, for example, to memorize and recite regulations and facts about the fleet, walk briskly through their dorm or eat on the edges of their chairs — would end. "But in some areas that have been brought into question under the recent allegations, we've made it clear what's appropriate and what's inappropriate," he said.

The indoctrination is a "valid activity designed to create a pressure-packed environment in which midshipmen are forced to produce," Lt. Cmdr. Van Dyke said.

Academy students are called, to disclose having incidents. Those reports, combined with concerns about academic standards, have led to a congressional investigation, a review by the General Accounting Office, two internal probes and an inquiry by the Navy's inspector general.

Family unveils bronze statue of JFK
BOSTON (AP)—John F. Kennedy's relatives Tuesday unveiled a bronze statue of the slain president.

"My brother would have a sense of wry humility, to find himself standing in this hallowed place, at the top of this city on the hill, looking out over the great Common to Boston, and I think that would please him," said U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy Tuesday by unveiling an 8-foot bronze that depicts him striding forward.

The statue, financed by $175,000 in donations from citizens groups and schoolchildren, stands outside Boston's gold-domed Statehouse overlooking Boston Common.

Designed by Concord-based sculptor Isabel Mervin, the statue shows Kennedy in stride, with one hand tucked in his suit pocket.

Remember others, Reed tells crowd
MALDEN, Mass. (AP)—Freed hostage Frank Reed urged a crowd of several thousands to remember those still held captive in the Middle East as he spoke Tuesday at a festive homecoming celebration.

Joined by his wife and other relatives in front of City Hall, Reed called on local well-wishers to "keep them in mind" about those fellows over there who were my mates and those who weren't."

Reed, head of the private Lebanese International School when gunmen abducted him in September 1986, said he was torn between the desire to stay close to home and the urge to publicize the plights of the remaining six American and 10 other Western hostages.

Still, the 57-year-old Reed reveled in a glorious homecoming. He smiled and joked while thanking those who kept hope alive during his 44 months in captivity.

"I'm not sure I deserve all you've given me," Reed said. "I want to say to you ... I love you, Malden."

Trident 2 meets safety standards
WASHINGTON (AP)—The nuclear-tipped Trident 2 missile designed for the Trident submarine meets safety standards, but a study is under way to determine whether there are ways to make them safer, a Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday.

The Trident (missile), in its present design, meets all current safety requirements* of both the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy, Bob Hall told reporters.

He was questioned about a report in the Washington Post that said the design of the W-88 warhead on the Trident D-5 missile, another designation for the Trident 2, concerns experts at the three U.S. nuclear weapons laboratories.

Only one Trident submarine, the USS Tennessee, has been deployed with the D-5 missiles that carry the W-88 warheads.

Armenians mourn 24 clash victims
MOSCOW (AP)—Armenians flew their public's flag and wore black ribbons Tuesday to mourn 24 people killed in clashes between Soviet troops and militants, a local journalist said.

Streets were quiet in the southern republic's capital of Yerevan on Tuesday following two days of clashes between Armenian militants and Soviet troops, said Bela Avitsyan, an editor of the official Armenian news agency Armpress.

Today's weather

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:

Today mostly cloudy with a chance of showers and thunder showers. High near 70. Winds west 15 mph. Tonight and Thursday mostly cloudy with showers likely and a chance of thunder showers. Lows 45 to 50. Highs in the mid-60s.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:

Mostly cloudy today with a good chance of showers and a chance of thunder showers. High in the mid-60s. Tonight and Thursday mostly cloudy with showers likely and a chance of thunder showers. Lows in the 40s. Highs near 60.

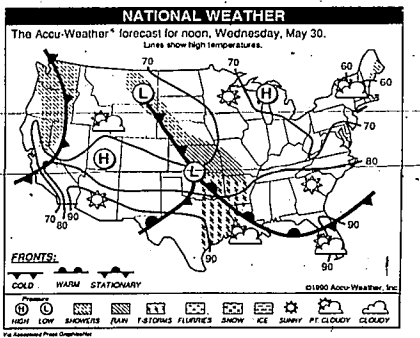

Extended forecast: Southern Idaho — Friday through Sunday, partly cloudy Friday and Sunday with a slight chance of showers or thunder showers. Fair Saturday, Highs in the 60s Friday warming into the 70s by Sunday. Lows in the upper 30s and lower 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:

Utah — Today and tonight partly cloudy. Slight chance of afternoon or early evening thunderstorms. Highs near 70. Lows near 50. Winds south 10-20 mph.

Thursday variable cloudiness with a chance of showers or thunder showers. South winds 10-20 mph shifting to north-west by afternoon. Highs-mid-60s. Probability of measurable rain 20.

Nevada — Slight chance of showers in the west this morning. Overnight lows mid-30s to mid-40s. Mostly cloudy with showers spreading from west to east today. Highs mostly in the 60s. Scattered showers tonight and Thursday. Lows tonight mid-30s to mid-40s. Cooler Thursday with highs mid-50s to mid-60s.

Cloudy skies and heavy rain prevailed early Tuesday, especially in the southwest section of Idaho.

By midafternoon, some improvement had occurred, as the clouds thinned to a brighter sky and the rain tapered off to scattered showers across the Gem State.

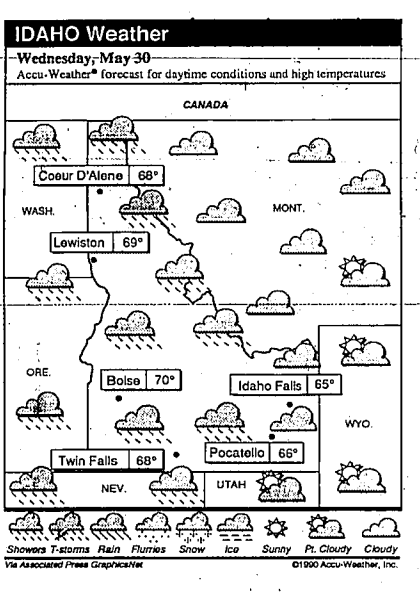

Temperatures around the state at 3 p.m. were on the cool side, mostly 50s to mid 60s. As for the rain, Boise has had 1.87 inches of rain since 6 a.m. Monday, and Grangeville will over an inch.

Backcountry station reports noted rainfall amounts from .75 inch at Dixie to 2.02 inches at Pierce overnight.

A deep low pressure center anchored off the Washington coast, along with an upper trough extending down from the western states over Idaho and into Utah, continues to dominate the weather scene and is expected to keep the Gem State under a showery pattern for the next several days.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 76 degrees at Salmon. Bovill reported the coldest at 33 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 104 degrees at Amarillo, Texas. The lowest was 34 at Hibbing, Minn., and Marquette, Mich.

water, which can result in fish kills, McMinister said.

The problem is worse this year, he said, because of several years of low flows that normally flush much of the algae and the nutrients that support downstream life.

But even with the normal higher flows, the algae growth indicates that too many nutrients are being dumped into the river from municipal sewage plants, agricultural return flows and commercial fish hatcheries, he added.

Carl Nellis, district manager of the state Fish and Game Department in Jerome, said the draft plan is an attempt to avoid federal interference in Idaho water use planning.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which regulates private hydroelectric project, however, is required to consider state comprehensive plans in granting licenses, he said.

"In our estimation it will not be enough to qualify as a comprehensive plan," Nellis said.

The Fish and Game Department also is concerned that the plan doesn't adequately consider sturgeon in that section of the river. The river once supported a significant population, which has been segmented by dams, Nellis said.

These huge fish need free flowing stretches to reproduce effectively, he said.

The department suggests protecting the stretch until complete studies of the river are finished and until a truly comprehensive plan can be developed, Nellis said.

That protection doesn't mean protection in perpetuity, the plan can be reviewed in five years or sooner, he said.

The board, however, still is seeking public comment on its draft plan. Kramer said the board has not had much information on the uses in the unprotected stretch and would look seriously at testimony requesting protection.

Copies of the draft are available at the state Water Resources Department office at 220 Shoshone St. E.

The board plans a public hearing on the draft plan at 7 p.m. Monday in Room 108 of the Aspen Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

Written comments may be sent by June 25 to: Frank Sherman, Department of Water Resources, Statehouse, Boise ID 83720.

Under the law, House members are allowed to keep honoraria equivalent to 30 percent of their salaries. Most gave what was left to charity.

Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, traditionally spreads the money among dozens of church-related charities in his hometown of Chicago. Gingrich handed over $29,304 to the Atlanta zoo.

House members have agreed that 1990 will be the last year they will receive honoraria. They will trade in their speaking fees for a higher government salary starting next January.

Senators will allow themselves lower government salaries than House members after this year but will keep their speaking fees.

In addition to their speaking fees listed only by broad category, members of Congress and most other federal officials are required to disclose their assets, not including their homes; their investments, most liabilities and gifts.

The forms require that values be listed only by broad category. For example, a multimillion-dollar holding is reported only as worth more than $250,000.

The disclosure statements of most House members were made public Tuesday, although some lawmakers were granted extensions. Senators' reports will be released Wednesday.

At Tuesday's hearing, Nelson's wife Julie testified that neither he nor Winslow were violent men, and that he had never seen either threaten anyone or wield a gun. Mrs. Nelson, who works as a housekeeper and office assistant at the Aryan Nations compound in return for room and board, said it was her husband who shot the two men in a shotgun and revolver found in the van when the arrests were made in Seattle.

"He's the owner of whatever's in the van," Mrs. Nelson said.

She said Winslow and her husband, who is a musician and singer, had accompanied Valentine to Seattle to record some songs for the Aryan Nations, including the "Aryan March" and the "Panzer March," at a studio operated by another testimony, special agent Richard Wolf of the FBI's Coeur d'Alene office said he photographed Winslow, Baker and Valentine on a forest road north of Hayden Lake when they detonated a pipe bomb under a coffee can.

SCHOOL SURVEY

Briefly

DOE to monitor radiation at INEL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A U.S. Department of Energy helicopter will begin flying over the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory Friday, monitoring radiation at the nuclear research site west of Idaho Falls.

The radiological background survey is scheduled to last about 10 weeks, the agency said in a news release. A red, white and blue helicopter will fly during daylight hours in an east-west pattern of parallel lines at about 200 feet, depending on the weather.

The survey is aimed at providing the levels of naturally occurring and manmade radiation over the INEL. The Department of Energy said it has routinely conducted the aerial studies for about 30 years around sites where nuclear operations are conducted or scheduled.

And while the helicopter is in the air, a contract ground team from EG&G Energy Measurements Inc. in Washington, D.C., will collect soil samples to supplement the aerial-collected data.

EG&G Energy Measurements, which also will provide the flight crew for the helicopter, is a prime private contractor for the Department of Energy's Nevada Operations Office, which manages the aerial measurements program.

Coeur d'Alene fire response time OK

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Coeur d'Alene Fire Department's lengthy response to areas at the city's north end has prompted concern from a woman who said she waited 15 minutes before firefighters arrived at the scene of a burning car.

The incident occurred May 5 at a local theater when the engine of a small car caught fire and Patsy Epling called 911.

With no sign of firefighters seven minutes later, Ms. Epling again called the dispatcher. She was told the fire department had been notified, but did not come from downtown Coeur d'Alene.

Boise clears more serious crimes in '89

BOISE (AP) — Boise police are improving on their record of clearing serious crime cases.

The Boise Police Department reported it cleared 38 percent of all serious crimes reported in 1989, a 36 percent increase compared with the number of serious crimes solved a year earlier.

Crimes categorized as serious are murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, theft, vehicle theft and arson.

"We're trying to work smarter, not just harder," said Boise Police Lt. Larry Jones, who heads the detective division. "Our investigators are better trained, and we're focusing on the criminals who are hurting us the most."

The department solved 23 percent of such crimes in 1988.

Sho-Ban optimistic on bingo future

SORT HALL (AP) — Shoshone-Bannock tribal officials were cautiously optimistic about the future of high-stakes bingo on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation after the first weekend of gaming yielded a modest net loss.

"I think we did fairly good," Arnold Appenay, a member of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribal Gaming Committee, said Tuesday. "We spent a bunch of money, and now we are trying to recoup that so we can make further investments to keep the games going."

Tribal gaming officials estimated the tribes spent some $25,000 in start-up costs, including hiring 40 tribal members for the first weekend of games, ending Monday. Officials said about 750 people paid $25 each to play during the Saturday, Sunday and Monday sessions.

Cash prizes as high as $500 were awarded.

Grace receives grant for fish canning

BOISE (AP) — The southeastern Idaho community of Grace is getting a state Economic Development Block Grant of $100,000 to expand a fish canning operation, providing 10 new jobs.

Gov. Cecil Andrus announced the grant on Tuesday. The city will provide a vacant building and Black Canyon Trout Farm will spend $150,000 of its own money.

The project involves wiring and insulating the city-owned building, installation of a ceiling and a 150-foot extension of a sewer line to connect with the city system.

Ron Twilegar's wealth eclipses Larry Craig

TWILEGAR

Federal financial disclosure statements for calendar year 1989, filed with the secretary of state Tuesday, showed Twilegar, a Boise businessman, with personal holdings of between $574,000 to $644,000. But when combined with holdings allocated to his wife and children, mainly stock and commercial property in Oregon, Twilegar's family wealth runs between $3 million and $4.1 million.

Twilegar reported liabilities against those assets of between $175,000 and $45,000. Craig, who raised some $400,000 for last week's primary while Twilegar generated only about a tenth of that, reported family assets valued between $110,000 and $155,000, primarily a Boise home he rents out. His liabilities totaled between $65,000 and $150,000.

Income beyond his $89,500 congressional salary last year included $20,500 in fees for speeches, 2 1/2 times the amount Craig earned the year before, with another $6,000 to $54,500 in rent and investment earnings. Among the groups who paid Craig to speak were the San Luis & Delta Mendota Water Users Association in California and the Tri-Valley Growers of California.

Twilegar reported personal income of between $80,000 and $220,000, mostly family income that includes earnings from other investments pushing that range to between $166,000 and $344,000.

None of his earnings came from speechmaking, but he did report receiving $50,000 to $100,000 in salary as president of First Idaho Venture Capital Corp., the Small Business Administration-backed company that went into voluntary receivership last fall. Twilegar's primary opponent, Idaho Falls businessman David Steed, repeatedly attacked Twilegar for alleged financial impropriety in handling that failed business.

Under federal financial disclosure laws, candidates and congressional incumbents are not generally required to report actual values of assets or debts or amounts of income but only ranges for each financial residence and the mortgage on it are included.

They are also required to report financial interests of spouses and children, a provision that former Idaho Republican Congressman George Hansen served 13 months in prison for violating.

The man Craig and Twilegar are battling to succeed, retiring three-term Republican Sen. James McClure, reported assets ranging from $131,000 to $345,000, primary 240-acre farm in Lewis County. Income beyond his Senate salary was estimated between $45,000 and $65,000. About $35,000 of that came from speaking fees. The only gift McClure reported receiving last year was an $8,500 honorary membership in Boise's Crane Creek Country Club.

Three-term Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings, who faces a political newcomer in the fall, reported outside income of less than $12,000 and holdings of under $30,000.

ISP says officers, rain cut holiday fatalities

By The Associated Press

Periodic heavy rains throughout Idaho curtailed many outdoor recreational activities over the Memorial Day weekend and they may have slowed down some motorists on the highways.

But police dispatchers across the state say the saturation campaign of officers patrolling the roads, and the use of seat belts, helped Idaho record only one highway fatality over the long holiday weekend.

The state's only recorded fatal during the holiday period — which extended from 6 p.m. Friday until 11:59 p.m. Monday — occurred in the southeastern part of the state.

Thomas Wood, 20, Idaho Falls, was killed Friday night when a vehicle in which he was riding overturned on U.S. 93 near Darlington.

Lisa Rowland, state police dispatcher in the Twin Falls District, said Monday night that officers reported that motorists were driving the same speed, but that the extra complement of officers in the field was helping cut down on excessive speed.

"We had every available officer out on the road this weekend, we think that really helped," she said.

Entertainer's death was murder-suicide caused by tobacco

According to his doctor, superstar Sammy Davis Jr. died after an eight-month battle with throat cancer.

That's not quite right. It was a murder-suicide. Davis was murdered by tobacco companies, which manufacture the cigarettes he smoked at the rate of two packs a day for 40 years. Those companies, their executives and employees killed Davis as surely as if they had handed him a bottle of deadly poison and urged him to drink it.

They sold him one of the most dangerous substances known, certainly the most harmful product ever deliberately marketed for human consumption.

Former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop once said that if a company wanted to introduce a new product today called tobacco, the government would never allow it.

Tobacco smoke contains 43 known carcinogens. Besides cancer, smoking is directly linked to emphysema, bronchitis, heart disease and heart attacks. A new report from the Environmental Protection Agency says 3,800 nonsmokers will die of lung cancer every year by inhaling second-hand smoke from lit cigarettes.

A.U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan estimates a $65 billion a year cost to the nation in unnecessary health care costs and lost business productivity due to tobacco smoking.

Tobacco, Sullivan says, is the most preventable cause of death in the United States, responsible for 15 percent of all fatalities.

As long as tobacco is legal, the war on drugs is a joke. Cocaine kingpins of the Medellín Cartel and America's tobacco kingpins sell poisonous, addictive, mind-altering drugs. For addicts that make no sense whatsoever, society has determined one kind of drug will be legal, the other illegal.

Tobacco killed 360,000 Americans last year. That's more than crack cocaine and heroin, alcohol, fires, accidents, murders, suicides and AIDS put together.

Smoking is a particular hazard for black people like Davis. The National Center for Health Statistics estimates 43 percent of black men smoke, compared to 35 percent of white men; for women, the figures are 33 percent for blacks and 30 percent for whites. The quitting rate is only 25 percent for blacks vs. 36 percent for whites.

The American Cancer Society says blacks die from cancer 25 percent more often than whites. Over the last 30 years, the cancer death rate for blacks went up 50 percent, for whites, 10 percent.

Despite the undue harm their product causes blacks, tobacco com-ppanies are cruelly increasing their efforts to market to blacks. RJR Nabisco reluctantly dropped plans to test-market the Uptown brand in January only after a firestorm of public opposition developed, led by Sullivan's attack on "slick and sinister" advertising that preyed on minorities.

Black leaders in Detroit last year protested the excess numbers of tobacco billboard ads in poor black communities: They said these billboards, often using attractive black models or celebrities, pitch products that promise happiness and fulfillment, but deliver no end of human misery.

Tobacco companies are engaged in a cynical effort to stifle black criticism of their murderous marketing tactics, by donating a half million dollars a year to the United Negro College Fund and buying hundreds of thousands of dollars of ads each year in black publications.

Davis' death was not just a murder. It was a suicide as well. If the tobacco company provided the weapon, Davis pulled the trigger.

No one made him smoke: He eventually licked his other enemies, a long addiction to alcohol and cocaine, but tobacco beat him.

Tobacco is a tough enemy, as anyone who has tried to quit knows. The surgeon general says tobacco is addicting in the same way as cocaine and heroin, causing physiological obsession and dependency. The body demands increasing doses or it produces debilitating withdrawal symptoms.

The details of Davis' addiction and death should be engraved onto the minds of every one of the 55 million smokers in America:

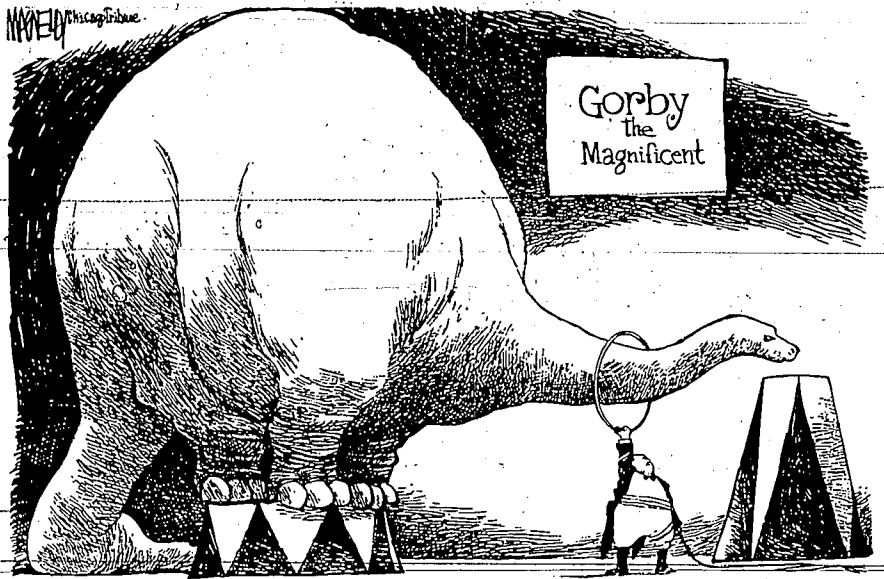

The throat cancer caused by tobacco smoking not only stole his voice and his show business career, but also destroyed his body. Tobacco took away a husband, a father and a source of entertainment for millions of fans.

In the end, the Candy Man, once a beloved, endearing, lively bundle of energy who brought audiences and friends so much joy, left a legacy of sorrow.

Johnny Cool had wasted away to a 60-pound skeleton, curled in the fetal position in bed. The Golden Boy was unable to speak, dance, sing or entertain anymore. Mr. Wonderful was now just another dead celebrity drug addict.

Oh, Sammy, why couldn't you just say no!

Idaho must raise education investment

TURNING

Elizabeth Zinser

Education has a profound impact on Idaho's economy, the quality of community life and the well-being of the individual. The people of Idaho know this, and they care about education.

But what worked in education for the last century is not adequate in the next.

Idaho can and must improve its economic standing and bolster its education and research on a national scale. The pioneering spirit of Idaho will serve us well in charting a course for our second century. But first, we must understand and face squarely current conditions.

More than anything else, lifetime income is determined by education. College graduates earn 48 percent more than people with a high school education during their working life. Education accounts for about 20 percent of the growth in the national income. The impact of research and development adds another 20 to 40 percent to that growth, much of it springing from investments in university research.

A state's rank in education spending closely parallels its per capita income. In the 1970s, Idaho spent 25 percent less than the national average per public school student. That figure dropped to 34 percent below the national average last year. Idaho's average income dropped to 46th nationally in 1986, and is now 24 percent below the national average.

These trends are alarming because educational achievement in reading, writing, math and science is directly related to what is spent on education. For example, education spending explains 89 percent of the difference in mathematics test scores among American 13-year-olds. Moreover, mathematical proficiency of our eighth-graders is far below that in Japan and most Western European nations. Differences in education spending explain the gap. America cannot fully compete in world markets until our young people master these basic skills.

college costs between students and society. Changes alter participation in higher education and affect private and social rates of return, as well as economic growth. Support for student aid increases college participation rates by minorities and low-income groups, thus improving equal opportunity and social mobility.

Sound planning for higher education's development in Idaho involves, further refining the role and mission of each institution. It means building on strengths, consolidating expertise, expanding delivery systems, focusing resources, enhancing cooperation and protecting academic integrity.

The state of Idaho is vast. Distances between cities and towns are great and perspectives diverse. The temptation lurks to pursue a policy of duplication. Yet we are all Idahoans, all one million of us. We can celebrate our differences and make them work for us rather than against us.

William James said, "Differences which make no difference are no difference." People differ in what they need from education and how they learn. Thus, colleges and universities must differ in ways that make a difference. Higher education will respond to the diverse dreams of our students and the various needs Idaho has for them by fostering meaningful differences among our institutions. That is the greatest challenge to our Board of Education and the leadership of our colleges and universities.

The atmosphere of an institution is as vital as the subject matter taught. Both give students a sense of belonging—in time, place and culture. Education also lures students to venture to the borders of these known contexts. They are encouraged to question received truths and established experiences. Work at the edge of history both real firms some traditions and reforms others to improve the community.

Coaxing the students to expand their horizons means guiding them to study non-Western cultures as well as Western traditions. It means international study and foreign languages. And it means learning with and about citizens of our own nation who, in the past, have not fully participated.

Commitment to the community in the larger sense is vital if our colleges and universities are to respond to the social crises of our times. We live in an age of cultural and historical disintegration; education is both the culprit and the solution. If social development is to catch up with the world that modern communications technology has now defined, we must acquire a broader, deeper sense of history and culture. At the same time, we must encourage criticism and creativity at the edges of that knowledge.

How do we do all this when knowledge expands so rapidly? We can no longer educate with the aim of helping students master any given subject. Formal education guides students to a level of knowledge and skill that equips them to learn on their own. As Alvin Toffler wrote in "Future Shock," "Tomorrow's illiterate will not be the person who can't read; it will be the person who has not learned how to learn."

As we step into Idaho's second century of statehood, it's essential that we chart a sound plan and make a bold investment for education. We shall awaken sleeping potential and leap from a step behind for ourselves to a step ahead for our children. The satisfaction and pride will be priceless; the sacrifice painless. It is our season of opportunity through education.

Elizabeth Zinser is the president of the University of Idaho in Moscow. This is the second in a series of Centennial essays by prominent Idahoans. Over the next few weeks, these essays will offer observations on a broad range of topics.

Letters/Superpower summit, Centennial Park draw reader comment

No good comes out of summits

No good has ever come out of a United States-Soviet Union summit meeting. President Bush should not be welcoming Mikhail Gorbachev to America, should not be helping him out of his severe economic difficulties due to Marxist socialism and should not be sweeping 70 years of Soviet barbarism (including 30,000 U.S. POWs who were never returned) under a White House rug. The Soviet Union has shown total disregard for past treaties. The latest pact, an Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty, has already been broken several ways. The Soviets admit expanding their war effort 9 percent per year while the United States disarms with each treaty. Summit meetings invite more betrayals by our State Department, which wants the merger of the United States and the Soviet Union into a one-world government.

What kind of signal does such a gathering send to the oppressed people of Lithuania and other nations still under Kremlin control? At a time when Lithuanians and others are trying to regain their long-sought independence in the face of continuing examples of Soviet tyranny, the leader of the United States should hardly be hosting a party and clinking champagne glasses with the chief Soviet tyrant. At the Malta Summit with Gorbachev last year, President Bush agreed to taxpayer-backed Export-Import Bank loans, American investments in the Soviet Union guaranteed by taxpayers and future most-favored-nation trade and loan status for the Soviet murderers.

All of this adds up to keeping the repressing Soviet government alive. And it completely ignores Gorbachev's role in the slaughter of hundreds of thousands of Afghan civilians, in keeping millions in Soviet gulags, in supporting terrorists worldwide and in supplying arms to revolutionaries in Central America.

What President Bush should do instead is inform Gorbachev that the United States will have nothing to do with any Soviet leader until all vestiges of communist tyranny are removed from the many nations now suffering under it, including the release of all slaves from Soviet gulags.

Why should we spend $300 billion for defense against an enemy we continue keeping alive by our tax money, credits and technology transfers? It makes no sense at all unless world government is the goal, which is the object of internationalists in the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission who control our State Department. Carnival atmosphere appalling people think it is chic to burn the flag of our great nation.

Now there are those who think it is OK to set up a carnival atmosphere on hallowed ground — our cemeteries. Please, Frank Harey, let's keep our sacred places sacred; let's keep the carnivals in the fairgrounds where they belong.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion and their auxiliaries are appalled.

We cannot and will never support what went on at Sunset Memorial Park this last Memorial Day weekend.

High-speed boats pose danger

The idea of the Centennial Park in Twin Falls is probably good. Including boat ramps for high-speed boats is not.

Shoshone Falls and Twin Falls already have facilities for water skiing and so do other areas that are close to the city of Twin Falls.

The area below the bridge should be left as a quiet park, without the bank erosion and racket that go with high-speed boats. Please consider the wildlife and the fact that many people don't want speed boats in this short and narrow stretch of river.

The money for boat docks could be better spent at areas already set up for higher-speed activities. In short, improve or expand existing speedboat areas and leave this last small piece of river in peace.

Park what you want in driveway

In response to Mr. Werry's letter, give me a break!

I beg to differ on your poll idea. I bet your poll would show that the majority of people in Shoshone feel the same as we do. It's a sorry day in the United States of America when anyone tells you what to park in your driveway and what not to. I think you would only find a handful of people who agree with the so-called "ordinance."

By the way, I am the wife of Ken Schelling. I am so tired of being criticized by you (handful of complainers) because my husband is out trying to make a decent living for his three children!

Also, my husband drives long haul (out of state) a good part of the year and I probably only see him (and his truck) maybe once a week, if that. The truck is very rarely in our driveway which, by the way, is far from being a junk yard.

Court to look at government-financed family planning clinics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Tuesday it will decide whether a ban on government-financed family planning clinics counseling patients about abortion violates free-speech and abortion rights. At stake is the future scope of a federal program with a $200 million annual budget. The program funds more than 4,000 clinics serving about 5 million low-income women nationwide.

A federal appeals court in New York upheld the counseling ban, but other federal courts ruled it is unconstitutional. The high court's decision, expected sometime in 1991, should resolve the conflicting rulings.

In other action Tuesday, the court:

- Said it will decide whether states may impose mandatory life sentences without parole for people convicted of possessing large amounts of drugs.
- The court must determine whether such a

Michigan law, the only one of its kind in the nation, amounts to unconstitutionally "cruel and unusual punishment."

- Ruled, 7-2, in a Pennsylvania case that convicted criminals may avoid making restitution to their victims by declaring bankruptcy.
- Ruled, 7-2, in a case from Arizona that Indian tribes may not prosecute any member of another tribe for crimes committed on their reservations.
- Let stand a ruling in an Illinois case that shields public officials from being sued in federal court for placing children in foster homes where they are sexually abused.
- Rejected an appeal by two Ku Klux Klan groups and four men ordered to pay more than $800,000 for organizing a demonstration that turned into a violent attack on civil rights marchers in Georgia three years ago.

The newest abortion controversy tackled by the court involves a family planning program enacted by Congress as Title X of the Public Health Service Act. It pays for creating and operating family planning clinics.

The law forbids clinics to use the federal money to perform abortions, but initial regulations let the clinic staffs tell women about the abortion option.

After those regulations drew fire from anti-abortion groups, the Reagan administration in 1988 barred clinics from using federal money to advise women that abortion is an option or to refer them to abortion clinics.

The newer regulations say federally funded clinics may not "encourage, promote or advocate abortion as a method of family planning" or distribute written materials on abortion.

The regulations also require a family planning clinic that receives federal money to keep physically and financially separate any abortion clinic it might operate without federal money.

If a woman visiting a federally funded family planning clinic asks about abortion, doctors and counselors are barred from saying more than that the program "does not consider abortion an appropriate method of family planning" and to offer help in obtaining prenatal care.

New York state and New York City officials, the directors of two family planning clinics, Planned Parenthood and other organizations challenged the 1988 regulations in federal court the same day they were issued.

The lawsuit contended the regulations go far beyond the restrictions imposed by the 1982 law, and that they unduly interfere with freedom of speech and women's choice to obtain abortions.

U.S. District Judge Louis L. Stanton in New York City upheld the regulations, and the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed by a 2-1 vote Nov. 1.

After stating that the regulations are consistent with the 1982 law, the appeals court ruled that the regulations do not violate any constitutional right of pregnant women or family planning clinic staff members.

"The government has no constitutional obligation to subsidize an activity merely because the activity is constitutionally protected," the appeals court said. "The government may validly choose to favor childbirth over abortion and to implement that choice by funding medical services relating to childbirth but not those relating to abortion."

Derailed train spills jet, diesel fuel

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — A freight train derailed near Fairbanks and spilled more than 100,000 gallons of jet and diesel fuel, state officials said.

The southbound train with more than 50 cars derailed at about 1:30 p.m. Monday, said Arnold Polanchek, vice president of operations for the state-owned Alaska Railroad Corp.

No one was injured in the derailment and the company still was investigating the cause, Polanchek said.

Railroad cleanup crews and state Department of Environmental Conservation officials were on the scene, about 40 miles south of Fairbanks near Dunbar Station, Polanchek said.

Harvard's Bok announces resignation

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Harvard University President Derek C. Bok, who during two tumultuous decades broadened both the reputation and endowment at the nation's oldest university, announced his resignation Tuesday.

BOK

"I haven't yet had time to think about what to do next," Bok said in a statement.

Bok, who became president in 1971, said that "it is time for me to step down and allow a new president to provide fresh energy and continuity of leadership through the next decade."

Peter Costa, a spokesman for the university, said he could not elaborate on Bok's reasons for the resignation, which will take effect at the end of the 1990-91 academic year.

Presbyterians tackle statement of faith

U.S. holiday traffic deaths hit 451

CHICAGO (AP) — California recorded the most traffic deaths during the holiday weekend with 62 of the nation's 451 fatalities.

The National Safety Council had estimated 380 to 480 people would die during the counting period, which began at 6 p.m. local time Friday and ended at midnight Monday.

Texas recorded 29 deaths, Georgia and Missouri had 24 each, and New York recorded 20 fatalities. In Illinois, 18 people died in traffic accidents.

Only Delaware, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia reported no fatalities over the Memorial Day weekend.

Last year, 441 people died and 20,000 were injured over the holiday.

Knight-Ridder News Service

MIAMI — A man, enraged over not being able to take his drink out of a lounge, got revenge with his assault rifle early Monday. From a passing car, he shot more than 30 rounds into the bar, killing a woman and wounding five others.

A steel door of the Magic City Lounge in Miami's Overton neighborhood couldn't save patron Tracy Black—25, from the gunfire. A bullet flew through the heavy door, striking her in the head, said Miami police Sgt. David Rivero. She was killed instantly.

Five others — including two 18-year-olds walking near the bar — were struck in the brief barrage. All five were taken to Jackson Memorial Hospital and expected to live, Rivero said.

Prosecutor to study favoritism in HUD

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department on Tuesday asked the special prosecutor investigating former Housing Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. to study new allegations of favoritism toward politically connected developers.

Criminal defendants gain 'double jeopardy' protection against multiple prosecutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court gave criminal defendants new "double jeopardy" protection against multiple prosecutions Tuesday, barring homicide charges against a drunken driver.

Voiting 5-4 in a case from New York, the justices said someone convicted of a relatively minor offense generally may not be retried on more serious charges stemming from the same alleged conduct.

Three dissenters called the ruling "ridiculous."

Justice William J. Brennan, in his opinion for the court, said, "Drunk driving is a national tragedy. Prosecutors' offices are often overworked and may not always have the time to monitor seemingly minor cases as they wind through the judicial system. But these facts cannot excuse the need for scrupulous adherence to our constitutional principles."

Justice Antonin Scalia, in a scathing dissent, said, "There are many questions here, and the answers to all of them are ridiculous."

The ruling "makes for high comedy but inferior justice," he said. "Rejection of today's opinion is adequately supported by the modest desire to protect our criminal legal system from ridicule."

The court barred a new prosecution of Thomas J. Corbin in an Oct. 3, 1987, accident on Route 55 in LaGrange, N.Y.

Corbin was accused of crossing a double-yellow-line-and-striking-two other vehicles headed in the opposite direction. Brenda Dinago, who was driving one of the other cars, was killed.

Corbin pleaded guilty 24 days later to two misdemeanor charges, drunken driving and driving on the wrong side of the road. He was fined $360 and his driver's license was suspended for six months.

The sentencing judge apparently was unaware that a person had died in the crash. No one from the Dutchess County district attorney's office appeared in court either when Corbin pleaded guilty or when he was sentenced for the traffic violations.

Two days after the January 1988 sentencing, the district attorney's office learned what had happened and won an indictment on various felony criminal charges, including negligent homicide and reckless assault.

The New York State Court of Appeals threw out the indictment and the prosecutors appealed to the Supreme Court.

Groups that favor stricter laws against drunken driving had called the appeals court ruling an outrage and said it tramples on the rights of victims.

Brennan said Tuesday, "The Double Jeopardy Clause bars any subsequent prosecution in which the government, to establish an essential element of an offense charged in that prosecution, will prove conduct that constitutes an offense for which the defendant has already been prosecuted."

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF MAY 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are dynamic, inquisitive, tend to scatter forces, seldom read one book at a time, can love more than one person simultaneously. You are charming, puzzling, possess intellectual curiosity. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. Major adjustment takes place in June.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Say to yourself, "I'm going to be aggressive!" Take initiative, start new project, submit original concepts, formats. You'll get to heart of matters where romance is concerned. Leo involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Special success indicated in dealings with public in general, women in particular. Focus on tradition, family, property, basic values. Cancer native is ready to "show you the way."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): No question about it — show off talents, humor, spread the word. Caution: Keep resolutions concerning diet, nutrition, GHT received which adds to wardrobe. Sagittarius, another Gemini play roles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It is time to renovate, review, revise, remodel. Yes, you'll have the money! Cycle continues high, judgment and intuition are on target. Taurus, Scorpio persons play outstanding roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Read and write, check references, put across ideas no matter how radical. You'll receive credit long overdue. Member of opposite sex says, "I'm in love with your mind!" Virgo figures prominently.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Define meanings, separate facts from illusion. Wish comes true in "romantic setting." Someone is not telling entire truth and will finally confess. Focus on friends, aspirations, powers of persuasion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This can be your power-play day! Emphasis on dedication, investments, will meet dead-end. Love relationship is important. Scenario also features production, promotion, cash dividends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't hang on to cash — get rid of unnecessary burden. Love is closer than might be anticipated. Spread emotional wings. Say, "I no longer will be confined!" Libra figures prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stress independence, originality, willingness to put forth ideas that might be considered controversial. Attention also revolves around investments, money being handled by "abid" person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You'll rise above family disputes. Individual who taught you piety will come to you for advice. Return favor, you'll be repaid twofold. Family member says, "You were denied in past but not now!"

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Individual who you talks about, diet, clothes, body image. Remain neutral, be diplomatic. Tonight you'll be invited to attend social affair which raises money for charity. Keep plans flexible.

What's what

Twist on tongues: Numerous people show their tongues when they talk. Scholars at the University of Pennsylvania dug deeply into that phenomenon in a five-year study. And concluded: "Unconscious display of the tongue is a universal sign of aversion to social encounter."

Q. Who were the "Casket Girls" of New Orleans?
A. Young women sent there by France after 1718. To marry settlers. Each was given a casket full of dowry articles.

HOUSELIGHTS
Wasn't possible to dim houselights during a play performance in Shakespeare's day. Actors saw everybody in the audience, and dealt with noisy antics out there. To dominate an arena of 17th-century hecklers, an actor had to be a powerful flamboyant ham who could generate his own sound and fury. Microphones and cameras changed acting in this century, certainly. But a century earlier, acting was changed by another remarkable innovation — the dimming of the houselights.

What the Aztecs really liked was roast turkey with chocolate gravy.

Say you were to dig a trench 10 feet deep. And 55 feet wide. From New York to California. That would be equivalent to the excavation of the Panama Canal.

Chopped cabbage aged in rice wine — that was the first sauerkraut. Chinese builders of The Great Wall ate it. Tartars took it to Russia. Then sea merchants took it to Germany.

TALL MEN
Q. Texas is one of this country's four States with the tallest men. Name the other three.
A. Oklahoma, Mississippi and Tennessee.

Glasgow gives Prince Charles, Princess Diana wedding present

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — There's nothing fashionable about being this late, but no one seemed offended.

Prince Charles and Princess Diana finally received a wedding gift from Glasgow, nearly nine years after they were married, when they officially opened a hospital named after them.

The royal couple, married on July 21, 1981, spent an hour Tuesday touring the building, which took several years to finance and construct, and chatting to patients.

Abrams raps out 'def' daily weather forecast
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Here's a man who listens to the rhythm of the falling rain, a weatherman who literally "raps up" his daily forecasts.

"Now dudes are wondering what comes here next, so I'll be reading from this text, the word is going to bring no sorrow, 'cause rain that's here is gone tomorrow."

"It's raining. (Thump, thump, thump) It's raining."

"Take this message to the street, tomorrow will not bring any heat; the clouds will leave but it stays cool, so wear a coat, don't be no fool."

That's how Elliot Abrams of Accu-Weather Inc. gave Pennsylvania a taste of "def" weather Tuesday, accepting a dare to give his forecast in rap.

"Somebody put me up to it last week," said Abrams, in charge of lo-

"I only hope I will continue to make people happy," said Miss Fitzgerald, 72, scheduled to give a concert in Paris on Wednesday.

One of her most popular songs is "I Love Paris" and Fitzgerald has long enjoyed immense popularity in France, which boasts countless jazz buffa, radio programs and small jazz clubs.

Reeves memorabilia stolen from center

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Personal memorabilia belonging to Grand Ole Opry star Del Reeves has been stolen from a convention center where he is performing, the singer said Tuesday.

Reeves said the items, stolen last week, included a box of photos and movie posters for two films in which he appeared. The photos reappeared Friday backstage but the posters remain missing, he said.

"The posters were priceless to me," he said. "They can never be replaced."

He said no questions would be asked if the posters are returned. The posters are for the movies "Second Fiddle to a Steel Guitar" and "Las Vegas Hillbillies."

Aileen Getty displays art in Ipson show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Artist Aileen Getty's work isn't likely to be displayed in the huge museum named after grandfather J. Paul Getty. It features such items as "Even Our Flag Fooled Us," portraying the American flag as a "doeful-ling."

"Quite frankly, most of the family's not aware of what I'm doing, so it hasn't become an issue yet, but I imagine there will be a bit of a problem," said Ms. Getty, 30, whose art is featured in a one-person show at Los Angeles' Zero One Gallery.

Czech government gives Mother Teresa key to villa

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Mother Teresa on Tuesday was presented with the keys to a former army villa as a gift of the state, the official CTK news agency reported.

The report did not say what the Prague villa would be used for, but stated it would "be available to those who need help... whether the old and the helpless, sick children or other disadvantaged groups."

Family glad Korean War prisoner finally coming home
Picture in '51 was last glimpse of Utah

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The last time Helen Palmer saw her brother, a prisoner in the Korean War, his face was on the cover of Newsweek magazine.

Ogden, then 27, had been captured in 1951 shortly after going overseas to the Korean battle zone.

His sister, Helen, knew he had been taken prisoner, but that was all.

Then she went into the old Rainbow Market here and "his magazine was on the rack and it just seemed to leap out at me and I said, 'Good grief, there's my brother!'"

The magazine didn't identify him, she said, but she knew her brother. She figured that if they were taking any pictures "he would have gotten himself in it, simply to let us know that he was alive. I think this would have been his thinking."

Saunders died a prisoner and that was the last the family saw, or heard, of him — until Sunday.

The remains of five U.S. servicemen who died in the Korean War were turned over to U.S. authorities Sunday by the North Korean government. Three were unidentified; Saunders was one of the two who were identified.

His family, still living in the Ogden area, is glad he is finally coming home.

Palmer said there was never any doubt in her mind that her brother's remains could be located. "They (U.S. officials) just couldn't get him out," she said.

Saunders' only daughter, Kim

Padelsky, lives in Layton. She said she was just two years old when her father went off to war, and she has no memory of him.

Nevertheless, she is glad he is coming home.

"I think it's wonderful. It's exciting and I'm just hoping it's him for sure and to put it to rest."

She said she does hope to have a memorial service for him when he is finally positively identified and brought back to Utah. She hasn't decided where he will be buried yet, though.

"There's a couple of options I have discovered and I just have to check them out. One is Fort Douglas and one is a new veterans cemetery in Camp Williams. Some of my dad's acquaintances and associates I have talked with say that is a viable option at this point."

Delroy Saunders, his brother, said, "We feel good about it. We're happy to have him back somewhere where we know where he is."

He said his brother served in World War II but stayed in the Army after the war 'so he could study medicine."

Jack Saunders had trouble finding a medical school, so "they told him 'if he'd reactivate his commission and stay two more years in the Army, they'd get him in,'" he said. "And just a very short time later they sent him to Korea, and that was it."

He said he will be glad to have his brother home again, but wishes it could have been sooner.

Dublin man charged in slaying of Mormon missionary

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — An 18-year-old Dublin man has been charged with murdering an American Mormon missionary, police said Tuesday.

Edward Fernonde was in custody and charged with the fatal stabbing of Gale Stanley Critchfield, 20, of Payson, Utah, police said.

Critchfield was attacked while walking home late Sunday in Clonalkin, outside Dublin, after making a series of house-to-house calls. Police said Monday a man with a knife had demanded money.

With the help of a colleague, Critchfield was able to reach his apartment, where a roommate called an ambulance. He died early Monday at a hospital.

However, his Utah family said the incident may have had its roots in an earlier confrontation between Critchfield and a "missionary" companion who was escorting a girl off a bus and a group of Irish youths.

Critchfield was one of 160 workers with the Mormon Missions in Ireland and had been in the mainly Roman Catholic country since March 1989. The 7.3 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has more than 40,000 missionaries worldwide.

Funeral services are tentatively set for 10 a.m. Saturday in the Payson West Stake Center. Burial will be in Wellsville, Utah.

Irish police said Fernonde, who is unemployed, made brief court appearances Monday night and Tuesday morning for the formal filing of the murder charge.

Critchfield's family said that the youth loved the Irish people, and had hoped his mission period would allow him to extend his missionary service beyond the customary two-year period.

"His death will bless the Irish people," said Critchfield's father, Gale. "But we don't understand the Lord and all his purposes and plans."

He said his son had always longed to serve a mission and was grateful for his call to Ireland, where he had been the past 15 months.

"How he loved the Irish people, and how grateful he was to be serving there in Ireland. He had indicated to us that he didn't know when he would be released because he was going to ask for an extension of time,"

Gale Critchfield said.

The elder Critchfield said he understood that his son and his companion were accosted and taunted by Irish youths as they escorted a young girl off a bus to her home.

As the missionaries hurried to their apartment after dropping the girl off, the youths again followed them. The two had just unlocked their apartment door when Critchfield turned around and was stabbed, the father said.

Critchfield's father said he had feared for his son's safety in Ireland.

In a recent letter, Critchfield's father said, his son told a friend "that he was frightened to death of this call. But because the Lord had called, he was going to answer the call and go. He just had a feeling that something like this would happen."

Admiral admits sub had trouble

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A Soviet admiral Tuesday confirmed that a nuclear submarine suffered a mishap near Norway in December, but he denied reports that it leaked radiation.

The Soviet youth newspaper Komsomol'skaja Pravda reported in February that a MIKE-class submarine spread radioactive contamination after a reactor or atomic missile accident.

"I can confirm that a nuclear submarine was involved in a mechanical failure situation, but it made it to land under its own power. There was no danger for the crew or for a radiation leak," said Adm. Aleksii Sorokin at a news conference in the Soviet Embassy.

"Our youth newspapers sometimes sensationalize things," said Sorokin, who was in Norway visiting military bases and meeting with government leaders.

He said the accident occurred 345 miles from land, "in an area between the Barents Sea and the Norwegian Sea," but gave no details.

S. African president postpones trip

CAPETOWN, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk said Tuesday he has postponed his visit to the United States next month because of a controversy over the timing of his meeting with President Bush.

Neither the White House nor the South African government had announced a date for the meeting, but it had reportedly been set for June 18.

The African National Congress and others complained a meeting on that date with de Klerk would be a snub to ANC leader Nelson Mandela, who is due to arrive in the United States June 20.

De Klerk and Mandela have said they don't care which one meets with Bush first. But many ANC representatives and some black American leaders have said Bush should not meet with de Klerk at all until South Africa's apartheid system is dismantled. It has been more than 30 years since a South African head of government has visited the United States.

Meanwhile, South African police Tuesday reported a renewed outbreak of violence in the province of Natal.

Taiwan demonstrators battle police

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Rock-throwing demonstrators battled riot police and tossed firebombs at government buildings Tuesday to protest the legislature's approval of a top general as the new premier. At least 40 people were injured.

Hundreds of demonstrators, many wearing headbands that read "Oppose military intervention in politics," fought 11 hours of running battles with an estimated 5,000 police near the Legislative Yuan building.

Ten policemen were among those injured, including two who were seriously burned by firebombs thrown by masked men. Ten rioters were arrested for attacking police with firebombs, rocks and sling shots, police said.

Inside the legislature, which was protected by barbed-wire fencing, lawmakers gave final approval to the appointment of Defense Minister Han Pei-tsun as the next premier by a vote of 186 to 27.

23 die as packed dinghy overturns

BOMBAY, India (AP) — An overcrowded dinghy sailing between two villages capsized and killed 23 people, authorities said Tuesday. The boat was in the Bhima River in the eastern state of Maharashtra when the accident occurred Monday afternoon.

Local authorities said the small craft was carrying 36 people to Takti village when it overturned. Thirteen people swam to shore. Ten were pulled out of the river and another 13 people were missing and believed dead, they said.

Gorbachev rival wins Russian presidency

MOSCOW (AP) — Populist reformer Boris Yeltsin won the presidency of the largest Soviet republic Tuesday, overcoming opposition by Mikhail S. Gorbachev and declaring the start of "Russia's social, economic and spiritual rebirth."

Yeltsin's election, after three hard-fought ballots in the Congress of People's Deputies of the Russian Federation, poses a substantial challenge to Gorbachev and may spur more radical reforms across the country.

Gorbachev, who arrives Wednesday in Washington for a summit, retains the two most powerful jobs in the country: president of the Soviet Union and General Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

But as president of the largest of 15 Soviet republics, Yeltsin will have a highly visible platform from which to wage his campaign for more radical reforms.

Gorbachev told reporters he was "somewhat concerned" by his one-time protégé's victory, but encouraged by Yeltsin's statements that he would try to avoid confrontation with the Soviet leader.

"If, however, he is playing a political game, then we may be in for a difficult time," Gorbachev said in Ottawa, where he stopped en route to Washington. He called the protracted voting process "a kind of faceoff, a kind of confrontation," and said Yeltsin was forced to "adjust his position quite seriously over the past few days, and has adjusted to the better."

Yeltsin and other Soviet officials predicted Yeltsin's election would actually help Gorbachev push more radical reforms.

"It may be a blessing in disguise," Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov told reporters at the United Nations in New York. "Gorbachev has his critics from both the left and the right, and possibly it is better to have the election of a critic from the left."

Yeltsin said: "At first, President Gorbachev will react very unhappily, but then he'll gradually get used to this inevitability."

The strapping, white-haired Yeltsin told reporters that he would seek reconciliation with Gorbachev and avoid confrontation with him, so long as it did not hurt Russia's interests.

Gorbachev had brought Yeltsin to Moscow to head the city's Communist Party, but the two men had a falling out in 1987 after Yeltsin publicly criticized the pace of Kremlin reforms. They have been at odds since then.

After the vote result was announced in the Grand Kremlin Palace, Yeltsin strode to the podium to warm applause and pledged to "spare nothing — health or time — to get out of this crisis and lead Russia to better times."

Arabs won't send memo to superpower summit

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Arab Leaders Tuesday decided against sending a memorandum on the Middle East conflict to the superpower summit after moderates failed to temper criticism of Washington in the draft.

The memorandum, mostly on the influx of Soviet Jews to Israel, had become a focus of discord on how hard a line the Arab League summit should take against the United States.

"There will be no letter," Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz said as he emerged from a closed-door meeting. He refused to elaborate.

The conference was called as a show of Arab unity against what President Saddam Hussein has said is a Western and Israeli campaign against Iraq. It also sought ways to stem the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

Little unity, however, has been apparent so far in the summit: Syria and Lebanon boycotted the meeting, and Morocco, Algeria and Oman sent senior government officials.

In bellicose speeches Monday, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat blasted the United States and Israel.

But moderates, led by Egypt and Saudi Arabia, appeared to have persuaded hard-liners to take a "more balanced and prudent" approach on the summit's second day, sources said.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Arab nations were unable to agree on the wording of a memorandum to be sent to the superpower summit, which begins Thursday in Washington.

Iraq and the PLO drafted an 18-page document, which focused mainly on the emigration issue and called for economic sanctions against countries that facilitate the influx. It urged Western nations, especially the United States, to absorb Soviet emigrants.

Eton marks its 550th

ETON, England (AP) — Old Etonians thronged "eye-distant spires, ye antique towers, that crown the wat'ry glade," and Queen Elizabeth II came for lunch Tuesday to mark the 550th anniversary of Eton College.

The queen praised the school as "second to none," though she sent her three sons to Gordonstoun in Scotland. She told students she had asked the headmaster to give them an extra holiday each October.

Why October? Because the actual 550th anniversary of the foundation of Eton College by King Henry VI falls on Oct. 11.

Eton celebrated Tuesday, a school official explained, because it was the day before the annual June 4 holiday in honor of King George III — which Eton chose to celebrate on May 30.

Eton's calendar, like its modes of speech and dress, is all its own. The school long ago disposed of top hats, flogging, and the humiliating "bum freezer" jackets for its shortest boys, but it remains its own world.

Masters are still "beaks." Classes are "divs," rowers are "wet bobs," cricketers are "dry bobs" and students are either "tugs" (King's Scholars) or "oppidans" (fee-paying students). Students wear long-tailed black coats, white ties and stiff collars in class.

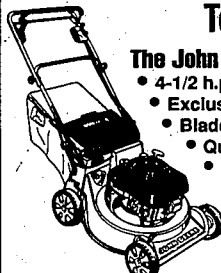

The myth of Eton is that the school, nestled in the shadow of Windsor Castle, inculcates superiority of mind, grace and social status.

Care center disputes poor evaluation

By BRAD BOWLIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A federal government evaluation released last week that gave poor marks to a local nursing home is outdated, say officials at the center, and a recent report is more favorable.

Staff members at the West Magic Care Center at 640 Filer Ave. West were angered by published reports that a U.S. Department of Health and Human Services study said the center failed to meet 10 of 32 performance criteria.

"The staff was really devastated when they read that story," said Joyce Ellis, administrator at West Magic.

The published report was the end result of an annual inspection by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare done in February 1989, Ellis said.

Health and Welfare is under contract with the federal Health Care Finance Administration to certify that nursing homes meet federal guidelines, said Jean Schoonover, chief of the state's Bureau of Welfare Medical Programs in Boise.

Schoonover verified that last week's report is over a year old and that West Magic has since been re-evaluated.

The year-lag time and the subjectivity of the report make it a poor indicator of the quality of care at the center, Ellis said.

"It's a waste of the taxpayers' money," she said.

The state report is sent to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, which compiles its own report based on the state's data, she said.

The final version is intended to be a consumer guide to nursing homes.

"The survey really is invalid," said Susan Wegener, director of nurses at West Magic. "In some ways, it is very subjective. It depends on who's doing the survey."

The state's latest evaluation of West Magic, done in March, is decidedly more favorable than the just-released federal report.

Only six minor deficiencies were listed, including the lack of an amplifier on the center's pay telephone and a patient being given a smaller-than-recommended dose of medication.

With 183 patients, West Magic is the largest facility of its kind in the Magic Valley. The care center was in danger of closing because of repeated poor evaluations three years ago.

The current owner, Western Health Care Corp. of Boise, bought West Magic in August 1987, and has been upgrading the facility ever since, Ellis said.

"There have been big improvements in this facility," she said. "But you don't turn it around overnight."

Even the 1989 survey was not as bad as it

Fatal crash occurs near Sublett on I-84

SUBLETT — A fatal car accident occurred Tuesday on Interstate 84 near here, Idaho State Police reported.

State police were notified of the accident at 5:56 p.m., a dispatcher said.

Further details were unavailable Tuesday evening.

Man receives probation in shooting of woman

TWIN FALLS — A man who pleaded guilty to aggravated assault in the shooting of a Twin Falls woman last summer was sentenced Tuesday to two years' probation by 5th District Judge Daniel B. Meehl.

Dario Vargas, 30, must also spend 120 days in the Twin Falls County jail, with credit for time served, Meehl ruled. If he then violates probation, he faces two to five years in the state penitentiary, Meehl ruled.

Vargas pleaded guilty in April to aggravated assault in the July 3, 1989 shooting of Elizabeth Anne Taylor outside his Second Avenue West home. A .22-caliber bullet pierced Taylor's right arm and lodged in her chest.

Vargas was initially charged with aggravated battery, a charge that carries a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison. Prosecutors at the time said they would seek an enhanced penalty, which would tack an additional 15 years onto the sentence, because a firearm was used.

A November trial ended in a hung jury, and prosecutors refiled the aggravated battery charge weeks later.

The April plea bargain prevented a second trial. In pleading guilty to aggravated assault, Vargas faced a maximum of five years in prison, and the state agreed not to seek an enhanced penalty or press additional charges.

Judge releases Jerome man charged with lewd conduct

Jerry Alan Meyers, 25, 604 West Avenue "B," was arrested on the charge Saturday, Jerome County Undersheriff Mito Alonzo said.

The mother of a 9-year-old Jerome boy called Jerome police on Saturday to report an incident of lewd conduct with their child, Alonzo said. The boy was invited by a man he knew to go to his place of work on Friday, Alonzo said. The sexual touching occurred there, in the county, he said.

A search of the man's residence by officers uncovered male pornographic videos, Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold said.

The boy was treated and released from St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, Alonzo said. The incident is still under investigation, he said.

Tuesday, Meyers appeared before 5th District Magistrate Judge Roger Burdick, according to the court clerk's office.

Burning cigarette caused Burley fire, sheriff reports

BURLEY — A burning cigarette caused the fire that claimed the life of a Burley man Sunday morning, the Cassia County Sheriff's Office reported.

The fire, which also caused $10,000 to $15,000 in property damage, has been ruled accidental but an investigation continues, Lt. Dennis Dexter said.

Michael T. Brennan, 40, was found by firefighters who were called to 1519 Hansen Drive at 5:15 a.m., Lt. Dennis Dexter said.

The fire was almost extinguished when firefighters arrived, Dexter said. It had started several hours earlier by a burning cigarette that fell into the living room couch, he said. The fire had burned downward through the floor before snuffing itself almost completely out, he said.

Brennan was found in a bedroom, Dexter said. An autopsy showed that he died of asphyxiation, he said.

McClure addresses graduates at Kimberly commencement

Sen. Jim McClure addresses the Kimberly graduating class

KIMBERLY — The words were familiar, predictable.

"This is one of the most exciting times in human history," Sen. Jim McClure intoned.

It's a small school, in a small town. But Kimberly High School's 43 red- and black-robed 1990 graduates got their commencement address from a man who has shaken hands with world leaders and spoken before both houses of the U.S. Congress.

"The world is different today than it was last year."

So different that the name of Munich exchange student Anka Draugleates' home country has changed since she was last there. It no longer need be called West Germany.

"It was a struggle to live in human dignity," McClure said of the popular uprising that led to last autumn's fall of the Berlin Wall and the predicted melting of the Germans.

He cited bouquets of flowers and video cameras, parents and friends of the graduates celebrated.

Court decides liability extends to natural hazards

By The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BOISE — A 1989 negligence ruling in a personal injury case applies to hazards caused by natural accumulations of such materials as ice and snow as well as to those created by human, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The court on Tuesday reinstated a personal injury lawsuit filed in Twin Falls County. Deborah Robertson claimed she was injured in a fall on the parking lot of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

In a 4-1 decision, the Supreme Court overturned a summary judgment against the lawsuit by 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl. The majority sent the case back to Meehl's court for further consideration.

"The case was originally decided on a very narrow issue of law," said Kent Taylor, attorney for MVRMC.

In issuing the summary judgment, Meehl determined the hospital had no liability, Taylor said.

"Apparently, the [Idaho Supreme] Court took a different view," he said.

Taylor said he has requested a copy of the ruling, and could not comment further until he has read the decision.

Prior to 1989, Idaho had an "open and obvious danger" rule in state law. It held that a property owner was not liable for injuries suffered by someone who should have been aware of an "open and obvious danger."

In 1989, the court vacated that rule and said property owners have an obligation to protect against hazards.

In Tuesday's decision, the Supreme Court said the 1989 ruling applied retroactively, and thus to Ms. Robertson's case, and applied to natural accumulations as well as negligence relating to human-created hazards.

In this case, court records said, the lawsuit contended that the hospital was negligent in not clearing an accumulation of ice and snow from its parking lot. The case went back to district court for a jury determination of that alleged negligence.

The Supreme Court also overturned a decision by the Idaho Court of Appeals and reinstated a lawsuit filed in Camas County by Lynn Stevenson, who claimed damages after Prairie Power Cooperative Inc.

stopped supplying power to his irrigation system.

The Supreme Court ruled that conditions imposed by the cooperative before delivering power to a customer during the irrigation season must be reasonable. Whether Prairie Power's conditions were reasonable must be resolved by a jury trial, the court said.

And in a Bannock County personal injury lawsuit, the court upheld lower court decisions denying interest on a judgment, won by Leonard Leroy Long against James and Blanche Hendricks because of a 1975 traffic accident. However, the Supreme Court ordered interest paid on a judgment for additional medical expenses incurred by Long.

Departing Jerome official critical of City Council

By HR. WEIXEL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Citing continued conflict with the City Council as part of his decision to leave, Public Works Director Lanny Sloan has resigned after eight years in office.

Those three people (councilmen) are tearing down and nullifying a lot of good work in the city," Sloan said. "I'm afraid with those three in office they are going to impede any progress the city could make."

Sloan has accepted a similar job in Coos Bay, Ore., that he said will be a career advancement. His annual salary will increase from $29,400 to $37,000 with a 5 percent raise in six months.

But he said the pay raise isn't the only reason he is leaving.

"I can't put up with the City Council any longer," he said.

Sloan was part of a personnel turmoil in January. Mayor Gerald Ostler reappointed Sloan as public works director, but the City Council did not confirm the appointment.

After many requests from Jerome businessmen and other citizens, the council reversed its decision and put Sloan back in office.

In officially announcing his resignation, Sloan thanked people for their support.

"I worked with a lot of people that helped me the city a better place," he said.

He cited projects such as the industrial park, expansion of the EE-DA-How plant, two additions at the library, obtaining two federal grants for street improvements and acquiring the contribution of a million dollars water storage system from Spears Manufacturing Company as examples of community cooperation.

City Council President Don Jacobson said he understood why Sloan would want to move up in his career and he wished Sloan well.

And he said the city is advertising to find a replacement.

Mayor Ostler said he was very disappointed in Sloan's decision, though he said he would not want to make it difficult for Sloan to improve his career as he steps into his new job.

"I have the highest regard for Lanny,"

Ostler said. "This is a great loss to Jerome."

Coos Bay City Manager Jim Watson said the city had selected Sloan as public works director from among more than 30 applicants.

He said Sloan will be in charge of some major projects including a $3 million city sewer system upgrade, a $1 million waterfront improvement project and a $100,000 project to improve boat ramps.

Sloan will begin his new position June 4, according to Watson.

"I've lived in Jerome for 20 years and Jerome is home to me," Sloan said in summary.

P&Z puts off decision on store

By BRAD BOWLIN

TWIN FALLS — The Planning and Zoning Commission delayed action Tuesday on a pair of controversial motions by a former city councilman that would allow convenience stores in residential zones.

Rick Carr of Twin Falls and three other investors want to build a convenience store on the southeast corner of the Falls Avenue and Eastland Drive intersection.

The one-acre parcel is currently a residential lot, and neighbors showed up at the meeting to lobby for keeping it that way.

"One hundred and twenty students in an area with a convenience store would not be a good arrangement," said Myron Glatz.

Elapsed time sets man free in rape case

By KATHI SCHRADER
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The How man accused of raping a 62-year-old Lincoln County woman 3 1/2 years ago was set free Tuesday after a determination hearing in Lincoln County Magistrate Court.

Judge Barry Wood ruled that the prosecution failed to prove that Robert A. Amerzon was out of the state long enough to extend the three-year statute of limitations in the case.

Amerzon was charged with rape, robbery and two counts of forcible sexual entry with a foreign object in connection with an incident in December of 1986.

According to Idaho law, a person cannot legally be tried in such a case after three years have passed. But if it can be proven the suspect was not in the state during part of the three years, that time may be subtracted from the statute of limitations.

"I found that all the crimes were committed," Wood said. "And I found that the guy did it, based on the fingerprint evidence ... but the state failed to prove where he was, so I dismissed the case."

Environmental group warns of possible explosion at WIPP site

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A buildup of gases from materials stored underground at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant could cause an explosion at the radioactive-waste facility, a Natural Resources Defense Council spokesman said Tuesday.

James Werner of the N.R.D.C., a national environmental organization, called for an independent investigation of the safety of WIPP, including the risk of an underground explosion from untreated wastes.

WIPP is intended to be a permanent repository for mixed fissionable and radioactive wastes from 10 U.S. Department of Energy sites. DOE plans to place a limited amount of waste underground in ancient salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad for five years as an experiment.

Werner spoke in a briefing before the Environmental Protection Agency, which proposes to grant DOE a variance from meeting hazardous waste treatment requirements at WIPP.

Dozens of WIPP opponents asked EPA officials not to grant the variance. They accused the agency of acting too hastily on the matter and treating DOE with too much deference.

One WIPP protester was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

Werner released copies of an EPA memorandum in which a staff engineer said the low-level waste stored at WIPP would likely contain acetone and various alcohols widely used as clean-up solvents.

"If these solvents are present ... the possibility of accumulation of flammable gases in the waste storage rooms ... is significant," according to the Aug. 23, 1989 document.

"Such an explosion could kill hundreds of workers and destroy the $700 million repository," Werner told EPA officials.

The memorandum also indicated that DOE has systematically underestimated the concentration of hazardous chemicals in the waste intended for WIPP, and that the hazardous vapors from WIPP could exceed EPA health standards, Werner said.

A spokesman for the EPA said the agency had a consultant study the issue after it received the memorandum.

Based on the consultant's findings, "We didn't think there was a serious gas buildup explosion threat for the reason of the lack of information about the concentration of hazardous chemicals in the waste intended for WIPP, and that the hazardous vapors from WIPP could exceed EPA health standards, Werner said.

One reason EPA proposes to allow DOE to store waste at WIPP for five years is to determine how much gas is generated in underground storage, Hale said. Gas buildups will be monitored during the period.

"Based on our review, we don't think it's a dangerous thing," Hale said.

Concerned Citizens for Nuclear Safety, a Santa Fe-based organization opposed to WIPP, accused DOE of pressuring EPA to issue the variance requested.

CCNS spokeswoman Michele Merola said DOE's petition is "being rushed through the EPA at top speed."

"In the case of WIPP, EPA would allow a variance for DOE to bury the waste in the salt beds without even knowing exactly what's in the waste," Merola said.

Merola said. Because the waste from U.S. nuclear weapons production that would be stored at WIPP includes hazardous wastes such as solvents and toxic metals, DOE must treat the waste to meet EPA standards or obtain from the EPA a variance based on a demonstration that the hazardous wastes will not migrate from the site.

Opponents contend the conditional variance EPA proposes to issue to WIPP is contrary to the intent of the law. They said they would go to court if EPA makes a final decision to issue the variance, and warned of civil disobedience if waste is shipped to WIPP.

"All materials to be employed (in WIPP) will be compatible to ensure that reactions or byproducts do not threaten human health, the environment, or the integrity of the repository," DOE spokesman James Bickel told EPA officials at the hearing.

A WIPP opponent who identified himself as Richard Deyo was arrested at the hearing and charged with disorderly conduct, a violation of a city ordinance, police said.

Deyo, a scheduled speaker, spoke about the dangers of nuclear proliferation. During his speech he jumped onto the stage where officials sat, grabbed a small metal device that was being used to time speakers, and heaved it into the audience. He resumed his speech, but then shoved the speakers' podium, knocking it to the floor.

Deyo sat quietly for about 15 minutes before being dragged out of the auditorium by private security guards who called city police.

Pevar said he was concerned that Goodworth had not responded to the ACLU's letter and Ms. Swacina was willing to file suit if school prayer is not stopped.

"I don't know what he is waiting for," Pevar said. "It's been three weeks."

Hahn said he did not respond sooner because he was not given the ACLU letter until Friday.

"I can assure you that the district desires to be in conformance with the law and will take whatever steps are necessary to make sure that the district does comply with the law," he wrote to the ACLU Friday.

Pevar represented 16-year-old Joey Long, her mother and another family in a religious intrusion case against Rockland School District. An out-of-court settlement was reached last week.

"I am looking forward to the opportunity and the challenge of working for the continued betterment of Idaho State University and I am committed to the mission of student affairs which is the education of the total person," she said.

As a tenured officer, her salary will be $66,000 a year, and they didn't do it.

"The state does have the right to file a lawsuit and American could eventually stand trial under state law. I don't believe Mr. DeHaan, agreed with Wood's finding.

"I think the judge is correct on the law," he said.

"My client steadfastly maintains his innocence," DeHaan added. "It's the state's burden to carry the proof and they didn't do it."

Blue Lakes Boulevard and still have it as a convenience store," he said. "I don't drive across town to go to RC's Quick Stop," he said.

One local resident said it was clear that property values would decline with a convenience store on the corner.

John Gallian and his wife recently sold the house on the southwest corner of Falls and Eastland.

Gallian said potential buyers stopped looking at the house after Carr sent out a notice of his plans. The house was eventually sold to an out-of-town buyer for several thousand dollars less than the original price, he said.

But commercial growth in Twin Falls is inevitable and the city's major commercial corridor is already too crowded, Carr said.

"You can't have any convenience store in Twin Falls be on this street," he said.

"If the commission votes in favor of the amendment, the City Council would have to conduct a public hearing before voting on the matter."

Police: Klan mailing came from UI

MOSCOW (AP) — Moscow police say University of Idaho postal services were used to mail Ku Klux Klan propaganda to at least one other university.

A pamphlet entitled "The Illegal Immigration Problem," evidently prepared by the Ku Klux Klan, was sent to the forestry department at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville using a U.I. envelope and postage meter, said John Roys, UI liaison for the Moscow Police.

"It is someone's idea of a joke, it sticks out as a very unusual thing. The pamphlet contains photographs of robed KKK members burning crosses, and urges whites to join groups to 'protect the rights of the white majority.' It was returned to the office of UI President Elisabeth Zinser office by the Knoxville recipient, Roys said. Mrs. Zinser turned the pamphlet over to police, he said.

The pamphlet is about 10 years old, and says, "We cannot stand idly by and see the hand of our white forefathers ... the pamphlet looked like it had been sent by White People of the World Unit!"

The original envelope was marked with an official UI logo and was sent through the UI mail, Roys said. All appearances, the pamphlet looked like it had been sent by the university, Roys said.

Carol Grupp, UI director of human resources and risk management, said the misuse of the university's mailing system and reputation is of more concern than what message was sent.

The school would pursue any misuse of mailing privileges, no matter what kind of material was mailed, Ms. Grupp said. She knows of no other such cases of inappropriate mailing in the past.

Roys said he is investigating the incident as a theft, and is still trying to determine if the Tennessee pamphlet was the only one sent.

Mailroom records might give a lead to which department was the source of the pamphlet, Roys said.

"Right now, it's a needle in a haystack, but we're removing a lot of hay trying to illuminate it," he said.

Bonneville school prayer under fire

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A complaint from a parent has prompted the Bonneville School District's attorney to recommend that it discontinue prayer at school activities.

Fred Hahn said it appears a claim by Angela Swacina that a prayer was recited prior to a Falls Valley Elementary School assembly at Bonneville High School April 25 was accurate. He said the district will terminate the practice if it is illegal or inappropriate.

"To the best of my knowledge, there was an incident in which a prayer was recited at an elementary school prior to commencement of an activity," Hahn said Tuesday. "I did spend some time further researching the matter and it is going to be my recommendation that they no longer engage in that practice."

Idaho State names dean of students

POCATELLO (AP) — Dr. Janet C. Anderson has been named Idaho State University dean of students, after review of a field of 68 applicants received nationwide.

Richard L. Bowen, ISU president, said Mrs. Anderson's selection is subject to final approval by the Idaho State Board of Education.

She has served as acting dean since July, 1989, when Jay Jensen retired after a 33-year career at ISU.

Ms. Anderson, originally from Milwaukee, had served as head of the Counseling and Testing Center and has been affiliated with ISU since 1967.

She holds an Ed.D. in counselor education from the University of Wyoming, with an emphasis in counseling.

Twin Falls school officials look for advice

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As Twin Falls students spill out of schoolhouses into portable trailers, officials are looking to the public to help resolve the Twin Falls School District's growing pains.

"We're at a crossroads," said Doyt Simcoe, the district's plant facilities director. "We need to make some decisions that will have long-lasting effects on this district."

Simcoe is a member of the district's long-range planning committee that is conducting a survey of district patrons to determine what they feel about issues like overcrowding and curriculum development.

"We wanted to get a feedback from the community because they eventually have to pay for it," he said.

Simcoe said the committee will use the results in making its long-range growth plans.

The survey will be included in the Times-News Thursday edition. People can also obtain a copy at any of the district's schools, at West One Bank offices and at the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce building.

Simcoe said the district has been forced to use six portable trailers, with two classrooms in each, to handle the state's new smaller class size requirements and to deal with the district's influx of new students.

Two factors affect the rising student population: The rising Idaho birth rate and a population increase of 2 percent a year, which is being fueled by a healthy local economy.

Simcoe said the district had 487 sixth grade students and 564 first grade students at the end of last year.

With a 2 percent yearly population increase, the district's student population of 6,600 will increase by 120 a year, or roughly the population of one elementary school every five years, he said.

When the district built Perrine Elementary School in 1984, it left room for growth. That gap, however, has been filled, Simcoe said.

The survey gives some possible solutions for overcrowding, along with a short explanation of what the solutions would mean in practical terms as follows:

- Year-round school: Year-round schools would reduce overcrowding by rotating classes. For instance, one-fourth of the children would be out of school all the time on vacation. Students would go to school for 60 days and be off for 20 days. This would make it unnecessary to building a new elementary school.

- Limit elementary schools to kindergarten to fifth grade: Under this proposal, sixth grade students would go to a middle school. This option would free up one to three classes in each elementary school, making a new elementary school unnecessary. Keeping elementary schools up to sixth grade would require building a new elementary school immediately.

- Implement middle school concept: Students in grades six to eight would go to the middle school instead of the current junior high structure, which includes grades seven through nine. The district's 500 ninth grade students would go to the Twin Falls High School. The system separates children into more logical age groups.

- Build a second high school: The school could be an alternative-vocational school providing specialized curriculum at flexible hours for non-traditional students. If the district went to the middle school concept by sending 500 junior high school students to the high school it could have 3,000 students in 10 years. Even with the current system, the high school would have 2,200 students in 10 years.

The survey asks whether patrons would prefer a second high school, a second high school with an alternative school emphasis or keeping the one-high school plan by building on. If building a new facility is the answer, the district needs to start looking for land, Simcoe said.

The survey also asks how well the school district is performing in teaching specific subjects.

It asks whether the district is adequately communicating with parents and asks teachers to rate the effectiveness of each communicative tool, including parent-teacher conferences, principal newsletters and staff phone calls.

The survey asks patrons to measure how effective the district's grading systems are.

Crash near hot springs hospitalizes woman

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

THREE CREEK — A Twin Falls woman was in serious but stable condition at a Utah hospital Tuesday, a spokesman said, with injuries from a Sunday motor vehicle accident near Murphy Hot Springs.

Francis Williams, whose age was unavailable from police, was flown first to Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello, then on to the University of Utah Hospital, a Bannock hospital spokesman said.

The accident occurred between 3:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. Sunday, Idaho State Police Cpl. Fred Rice said. Williams and her husband, Norm, were camping near the hot springs; and she was riding a 4-wheel motorcycle alone, 1½ miles downstream on Jarbidge Canyon Road, Rice said.

Williams crashed and was thrown into rocks by the side of the road, Rice said. She was not wearing a helmet, Rice said.

A witness summoned the help of a couple trained in emergency response who live near the scene. They called the Twin Falls Sheriff's Office, which in turn called state police, Rice said.

The emergency response volunteers carried Williams out of the canyon on a back board tied to a pickup, Rice said. She had "little sensation" from her neck down at that time, he said.

The incident is still under investigation, Rice said.

YFCA breaks ground for indoor courts

By BRAD BOWLIN
Times-News writer

A steady rain didn't dampen enthusiasm for the YFCA's latest project Tuesday, when administrators and supporters broke ground for two indoor tennis courts.

"They, it's raining, but that's the whole reason we're building the tennis courts," said John Bonnett, president of the YFCA.

Gordon Faving of Twin Falls will begin excavation today, and the courts should be completed by mid-September, said Jerry Staley of Starr Corporation, which is in charge of construction.

Groundwork could get off to a slow start because of the recent rain, Staley said.

The courts will actually be about six feet underground, said John Eschenburg, the Y's general director. This will reduce heating and cooling costs as well as making it easier to build the courts to U.S. Lawn Tennis Association specifications, he said.

Eschenburg said the courts should be open by mid-October.

Once the doors open, Eschenburg predicts the courts will remain busy throughout the year.

"Tennis is really on an upswing in this area," he said. "And we will promote it, with clinics and tournaments."

The YFCA board members didn't want to build an outdoor swimming pool that would compete with the city pool, nor did they want to build racquetball courts that would compete with Twin Falls' two athletic clubs.

Indoor tennis courts were the obvious choice, since the nearest similar facility is in Halley, Eschenburg said.

Money for the $250,000 project will be raised through donations and memberships, Eschenburg said.

$50,000 already has been raised in donations, with the remainder being loaned to the YFCA by Farmer's National Bank.

A court fee of $10 per 1½ hours plus annual memberships, which cost $350 for families or $230 for individuals, will pay for the loan and maintenance, Eschenburg said.

Those rates are competitive with the courts in Halley, he said.

Bids also are being taken for an outdoor recreation center, and construction could begin in July, Eschenburg said. $20,000 of the $25,000 needed has been raised for that project, he said.

Kamiah woman receives diploma at 35

KAMIAH (AP) — It was a long time coming, but high school graduation Sunday was sweet for Susan Stewart.

She got her degree at age 35, thus fulfilling a promise she had made to her husband years ago.

"Nineteen years ago, when Charlie put an engagement ring on my finger, he made me promise to get my diploma," she said.

So at the age of 35, after dropping out of high school in 1971, Stewart donned the traditional cap and gown that most teen-agers wear each spring and finally became an alumna of Kamiah High School.

Mrs. Stewart, the mother of a freshman daughter and a 7th-grade son, attended classes throughout the school year, rising each morning to go to school with her children, studying into the evening and otherwise participating at the same level as her "peers," several of whom are children of her 1971 classmates.

Most of the delayed high school experience, Mrs. Stewart said, was wonderful.

But there was also disappointment that stemmed from continued conflict between her and a number of friends. An anonymous, typewritten letter she received some two weeks ago is an indication.

"I read, 'Graduation night is our night, not yours. If you don't want embarrassment, think twice.'"

Mrs. Stewart confides that she thought, if only briefly, about heeding the threat and not attending commencement. "It made me real angry. First I was mad, then I was hurt and embarrassed. I'm doing it anyway. Who are they to say I can't do this?"

Kamiah High School Principal William Lamunyan confirmed that Mrs. Stewart began having troubles about halfway through the school year. "I'm surprised it didn't happen earlier. For awhile, everything was upbeat and positive," Lamunyan said. "But I'm sure Sue has some real negative days in her memory here this year."

In fact, Lamunyan and Mrs. Stewart last February asked the Lewiston Morning Tribune to delay printing a story until after graduation. The situation at that time, both said, could only be made worse by publicity.

"Here a couple of weeks ago, it was really hard and I just about quit," Stewart said during a February interview with the Tribune.

"There were several conversations and things said in the classes that hurt my feelings," she said.

Then she found a message in her locker. It read: "To the Low Life of Kamiah, from the Senior Class of Kamiah 1990."

"At this point, I really don't know what to think because I've never done anything to hurt them," Stewart said during that February interview.

Now, three months later, she attributes her continued problems to a handful of seniors, several of whom are the sons and daughters of her 1971 classmates.

"They're just little kids," she said. She said most of this year's class have been at least receptive and a number of seniors have become good friends, not just supporters.

Lamunyan also said he is disappointed with the conflict and credits Stewart for rising above the situation. "As I told Sue, I don't like to deal with that maturity level," Lamunyan said.

Some of the animosity, Lamunyan said, also spilled into the adult community. "I've heard people make comments about why is she 'doing it' and they didn't like it," he said.

In retrospect, Lamunyan said the biggest mistake was when Mrs. Stewart was selected "Student of the Month" last fall. That, he said, apparently triggered jealousy among some of the seniors; as well as parents. "It was a real mistake on our (school officials) part. With Sue's best interest in mind, we shouldn't have done it," Lamunyan said.

School board approval was necessary before Stewart could return to high school. She said a lot of people were shocked at the request.

"We never heard that question asked in 18 years," said Lamunyan.

But Mrs. Stewart said, in addition to that long-ago promise to her husband, she had a personal interest in completing something she should have never quit.

"I got in a hurry with life and I just felt I walked away from something important," she said.

Brackett tells Lujan: No more wilderness

BOISE (AP) — The secretary of the federal agency which manages millions of acres of public lands in Idaho was advised Tuesday that a major user of that land doesn't want any more wilderness in the state.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan came to Idaho to campaign for state Sen. Skip Smyser, R-Parma, who is running for the state's 1st District congressional seat. He made no immediate commitments about wilderness, but said his agency is required by federal law to make recommendations about roadless areas.

About the first thing Lujan heard when he stepped off a private airplane flight was a statement from Bert Brackett, Three Creek, president of the Idaho Cattle Association.

"Because multiple use management is working, Idaho cattlemen want you to know that we oppose any additional lock-up of Idaho lands as wilderness or as national parks that restrict additional multiple use," Brackett said at a news conference for Lujan.

Brackett said in Idaho, a state where most of the land is federally owned, private pasture is scarce. He said 88 percent of all cattle spend at least part of the year grazing on public lands.

Brackett said Idaho cattlemen support what he termed Lujan's "common sense" enforcement of the Endangered Species Act.

But Lujan said his agency is required by federal laws to study roadless public lands and make recommendations on what should become wilderness. The Bureau of Land Management, a part of the Interior Department, will be making recommendations the same as the Forest Service has made, he said.

Lujan said wilderness recommendations are made on a state-by-state basis. "I'm sure there will be additional wilderness" for Idaho, he said.

Lujan planned to attend two fundraising events for Smyser, who is running against Boise Democrat Larry LaRooco for the congressional seat being vacated by Rep. Larry Craig in a bid for the U.S. Senate.

Wednesday, Lujan planned a tour of the Boise Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates federal firefighting efforts, and was to be briefed on the upcoming fire season.

Memorial Day weekend filled with baseball brawls, falls, squalls

There once was an umpire whose vision
Was cause for abuse and derision
He remarked in surprise,
"Why pick on my eyes?"
It's my heart that dictates my decisions —Ogden Nash.

By The Associated Press

Things must be getting out of control. Why even a mild-mannered school teacher got kicked out of a baseball game.

The long Memorial Day weekend was filled with brawls, falls and squalls. And most of the managerial fustep centered on a difference of opinion with their friends the umpires.

Sometimes it even got a little personal.

Frank Robinson's problems with the umpires surfaced again Monday when he was ejected by Drew Coble during the eighth inning of Baltimore's 6-4 loss to Minnesota.

Robinson protested to Coble, the home plate umpire, that Twins manager Tom Kelly had left the mound after a visit and then returned before going back to the dugout.

Coble had a different interpretation, which angered Robinson after the game.

"He (Coble) is a no-good human being," Robinson said. "He doesn't like me and I don't like him. He's a liar... I'll probably get a nice, big fine and maybe a suspension. I'm sure their (umpires') report will be favorable to their side."

Coble chose not to reply, but said he would discuss Robinson's comments with American League president Bobby Brown.

Milwaukee manager Tom Trebelhorn, a former substitute teacher during his off-seasons, was ejected in the sixth inning by home plate umpire Joe Brinkman for arguing balls and strikes in Monday night's game against Seattle. Trebelhorn was a little more diplomatic than Robinson, though.

"I asked him if the pitches were high and he said 'yes,'" Trebelhorn said. "I told him I didn't think so. It's frustrating; it's just frustrating."

In Chicago on Monday afternoon, Cubs manager Don Zimmer was a little more vocal in his objection over a reversed call. By the time Zimmer was finished arguing, he almost needed a resuscitator.

In the third inning with a man on, Ryne Sandberg hit a high fly down the left-field line which third-base umpire Bill Hohn called fair.

Before Sandberg could circle the bases, Giants manager Roger Craig hopped out of the dugout and argued Hohn's call for about five minutes.

"He (Hohn) said, 'He hit it a ton and it was fair. It went around the pole.' I said, 'No, it didn't.'"

"I figured I got one shot. I asked him to get the other opinion," said Craig, whose objection prompted a huddle by umpires Randy Marsh, Harry Wendelstedt, Joe West and Hohn. The call was reversed.

"From my point it was foul," said Wendelstedt, the crew chief, who was working at first base. "From my angle, the ball never got to the pole."

"Roger was asking (Hohn) to get help from his partners. Hohn indicated doubt. The other three of us could see it was foul."

Zimmer argued for 10 minutes with all four umpires before West ejected him. Zimmer tossed his cap in disgust and while walking back to the dugout, flung the hat into the crowd behind the Cubs dugout.

"This is the most I've ever been upset in 42 years," an exasperated Zimmer said. "I hate to argue when it's a guessing game."

"He (Hohn) showed me nothing by asking for help. Hohn called it fair because he thought it was fair. How could they make a call from first or second? That's ridiculous!

There's no way you can tell from there."

Zimmer called Wendelstedt a "liar," and accused all the ump's of covering up for each other.

"Our job is to make the right call and I know in my heart the ball was foul," Wendelstedt said.

Zimmer was more concerned about Wendelstedt's eyes.

Before play resumed, Cubs coach Joe Altobelli also was ejected from the game by Hohn for arguing.

"The ball was fair. I came on slow and watched it five times on slow-motion replay," Zimmer said. "The ball was fair."

While Zimmer and the ump's were feuding at Wrigley Field, the Pirates and Dodgers were fussin' in Pittsburgh.

The two teams nearly traded punches after Bob Walk hit Hubie Brooks with a pitch during the Dodgers' five-run fifth. Leading off the Pirates' half of the inning, Don Slaught was backed off the plate by Tim Belcher.

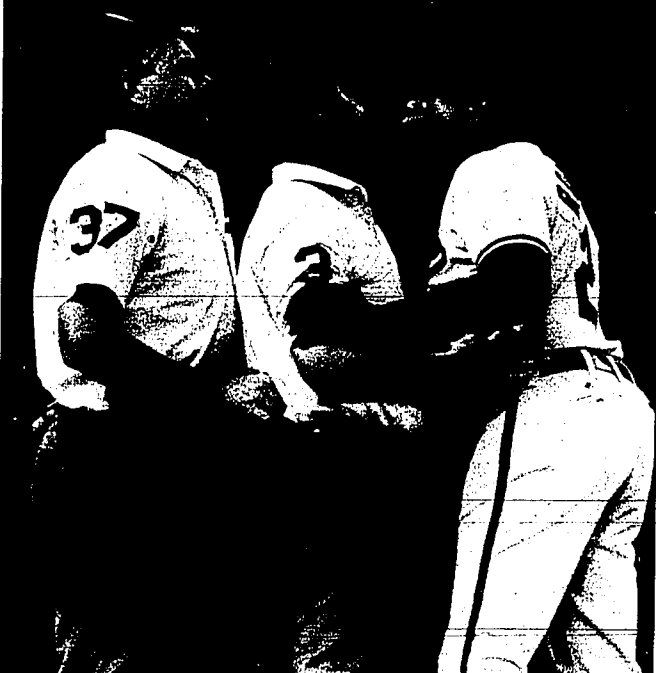

No punches were thrown, but both Bobby Bonilla and Manager Jim Leyland, who screamed obscenities at Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda, had to be restrained.

Because both benches had been warned after the first incident, Leyland and Randy Kramer were automatically ejected when the Pirates' reliever nearly hit Belcher in the sixth.

"The Dodgers pitch better inside than any team in baseball... and I don't have the right to take that away from them," Leyland said. "We have the right to pitch inside, too."

On Sunday, the Padres and Mets brawled after San Diego reliever Greg Harris hit Kevin Elster with a pitch.

Elster, who was ejected, was angry because plate umpire Fred Brocklander didn't warn Harris.

Baltimore Orioles manager Frank Robinson is restrained by second base umpire Jim Evans (3) after he was ejected by home plate umpire Drew Coble (37) in the 8th Inning

Chukars knock out Carolinans

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Coles' solo home run in the bottom of the eighth inning snapped a tie and lifted Treasure Valley, Ore., to an 8-7 victory over Louisburg, N.C., Tuesday in the National Junior College World Series.

The loss eliminated Louisburg, 42-11, from the tournament.

Treasure Valley, 48-15, took a quick 5-0 lead in the first on a home run by Boe Simmons and RBI singles by Ryan Seidter, Shawn Barrett and Kosman, who drove in two runs. The rally chased starter Shane Lay.

Louisburg came back with a two-run homer by Derek Adams in the second and made it 6-5 in the third with a four-run outburst featuring run-scoring doubles by Kelly Hill and Lay, who had moved to the designated hitter's spot.

Treasure Valley pulled ahead 7-5 in the sixth when Brady Swallow singled in a run. Louisburg countered in the top of the seventh on Turner Williams' sacrifice fly.

Kosman's game-winning homer in the bottom of the seventh came with two outs. James Bos, who relieved Chukar starter Ken Ricess in the seventh, shut Louisburg down in the final two innings to earn the victory.

Lewis might not compete in 1990 Goodwill Games

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Carl Lewis, long billed as one of the star athletes in the Goodwill Games, indicated Tuesday that he probably would not be competing in the July event at Seattle.

Lewis, winner of six Olympic gold medals, the world record-holder in the 100-meter dash and unbeaten in 62 consecutive long jump competitions, said Tuesday the decision on whether he competes would be up to The Athletics Congress.

TAC, the national governing body for track and field, adopted a rule in December disqualifying any athlete not competing in the national championships from the Goodwill Games.

Lewis said that his plans for this year did not call for him to compete in an open event during the national championships, June 14-16 at Cerritos, Calif. His first competition, he said, would be in a 400-meter relay June 23 at Minneapolis.

"I'm not in top-top condition, because I took a lot of time off (from training) at the end of last year," Lewis said on the eve of the NCAA Championships.

Reusable grocery bags pushed by companies

By the Los Angeles Times

Several U.S. companies are hoping that increased environmental awareness will prompt American shoppers to take a hint from their European counterparts and switch to cloth or vinyl reusable grocery bags.

The sacks are being marketed by as many as 10 different companies in a rainbow of colors, fabrics, and can be emblazoned with any corporate logo.

The average consumer uses and disposes of about 500 paper or plastic grocery bags annually, according to industry estimates.

And as many as 34 billion such bags are distributed by supermarkets each year.

Manufacturers of the cloth bags hope to persuade the public that, although the totes are costly, the money spent on them can be considered an investment in the environment.

Proponents claim that the cloth sacks hold two to three times as much as paper or plastic grocery bags.

Several such products were on display at a recent food industry gathering.

Certainly, the most interesting product name comes from Low Technologies Inc., which markets the Neither Bag, which is made from 100 percent cotton and has two cloth handles.

The St. Petersburg, Fla.-based firm's slogan: "Paper or plastic? Just say... Neither!"

Priority Earth Co., of Los Angeles, also offers a reusable canvas bag under the name of "Groce-Tote."

One of the more ambitious sales efforts is being launched by Create-A-Bag of Chicago. The company is marketing its duck canvas bags under the trademark "Re-Use. Part of the Solution" logo. The sacks are offered in seven colors and can carry a logo.

Food fight over labeling bill expected to heat up in D.C.

By The Washington Post

The ongoing food fight on Capitol Hill is likely to heat up after the recent approval of a food labeling bill by a House committee.

A Senate committee passed a similar bill in April; so floor votes in both houses are expected in the next few months.

The fight is coming from the food industry, which vehemently opposes both bills because they do not include federal precedence over state labeling laws when it comes to food safety.

Congressional crafters and consumer groups believe that nutrition and food safety are two separate issues.

The food industry believes all food-labeling laws should be lumped together. It fears that other states may follow the lead of California's Proposition 65, a law enacted in 1986 that says foods known to cause birth defects or cancer must be labeled as such.

So far, the food industry has been able to stall its enforcement through litigation.

Watch out for flying mashed potatoes.

Codlike Hoki could be next bad fish from Down Under

By The Washington Post

It sounds hokey, but hoki may be the next bad fish from Down Under. Hoki, a white fish similar to cod, is beginning to be exported from New Zealand and may be showing up at U.S. fish counters soon.

Orange roughy, also from New Zealand, has been a smash hit, so another success story from the South Pacific doesn't seem unlikely.

Chemical confusion caused by agriculture, official says

By the Los Angeles Times

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. — Agriculture has failed to educate the public about the need for farm chemicals, a top health official told a food safety conference here.

Douglas Okamura, chief of pesticide enforcement for California's Department of Food and Agriculture, also conceded that government regulators share some of the blame for the public's confusion in the controversy over use of these compounds.

"The public doesn't trust the government nor what we have to say any more," Okamura told about 100 people who attended the recent gathering sponsored by California Polytechnic State University.

One reason Okamura gave for the lack of credibility: His agency must satisfy such diverse sectors, including the public, the media, politicians and the food industry.

"We are getting jerked in every direction possible and it is difficult to do our job properly," he said.

Okamura's comments were echoed by a number of speakers who decried consumers' failure to understand the need to control damaging insects, mold and weeds on farms.

"People don't know whom to listen to or believe," said Arthur Crainmill, a toxicologist from the University of California, Davis. "Everyone (with a vested interest in pesticide issues) has stepped forward and said, 'trust me.' People in the middle are left out of these things."

An environmental activist who also addressed the group said that the public is not confused, but is reacting to real health threats posed by some of the farm chemicals being used today.

Sophisticated salads as a side, main dish

Salads today can be sophisticated and delicious, whether served as a side dish or a one-dish meal. With just a few ingredients, you can make a salad creation that's colorful and good for you.

A garden fresh salad served in a mustard-flavored pastry puff looks complicated but is surprisingly easy. Top it off with a flavorful artichoke dressing for a meal with a creative twist. For a hearty dish, combine salmon, asparagus and tomatoes with a fresh dill dressing; then spoon into pasta shells. Or arrange endive, watercress, roasted peppers and prosciutto on individual salad plates, top with a Dijon vinaigrette and wait for the compliments.

SALMON DIJON SALAD IN SHELLS

- 1 (6½-ounce) can salmon, drained and flaked
- 12 fresh asparagus spears, chopped and cooked
- ½ cup cherry tomatoes, quartered
- 1/3 cup chopped red onion
- 1/3 cup mayonnaise
- ¼ cup Dijon mustard
- ¼ cup red wine vinegar
- 1 tablespoon fresh dill weed, chopped
- 12 jumbo pasta shells, cooked
- cutly leaf lettuce
- tomato rose, for garnish

In small bowl, combine salmon, asparagus, cherry tomatoes and onion. Whisk mayonnaise, mustard and vinegar until smooth; stir in dill. Reserve ½ cup dill dressing; stir remaining dressing into salmon mixture. Chill until serving time.

To serve, line each pasta shell with a lettuce leaf. Spoon about ¼ cup salmon mixture into each shell. Serve on lettuce with reserved dressing, garnished as desired.

ENDIVE & WATERCRESS SALAD WITH DIJON VINAIGRETTE

- ½ cup olive oil
- ½ cup red wine vinegar
- 3 tablespoons Dijon mustard
- ¼ teaspoon Italian seasoning
- 2 bunches Belgian endive
- 1 bunch watercress

In small bowl, blend oil, vinegar, mustard and Italian seasoning; chill until serving time. On 6 individual salad plates, arrange endive, watercress, roasted peppers and prosciutto rolls. Serve with prepared dressing.

SALAD NICOISE EN CROUTE DIJON

- 1 (4-ounce) jar roasted peppers, drained and cut into strips
- 12 slices prosciutto or boiled ham, halved and rolled
- In small bowl, blend oil, vinegar, mustard and Italian seasoning; chill until serving time. On 6 individual salad plates, arrange endive, watercress, roasted peppers and prosciutto rolls. Serve with prepared dressing.
- Makes 6 servings.

Clockwise from top: Endive and Watercress Salad with Dijon Vinaigrette, Salmon Dijon Salad in Shells and Salad Nicoise en Croute Dijon

- 1 (4-ounce) jar roasted peppers, drained and cut into strips
- 12 slices prosciutto or boiled ham, halved and rolled

In small bowl, blend oil, vinegar, mustard and Italian seasoning; chill until serving time. On 6 individual salad plates, arrange endive, watercress, roasted peppers and prosciutto rolls. Serve with prepared dressing.

SALAD NICOISE EN CROUTE DIJON

- 2/3 cup water

In a saucepan, over medium-high heat,

- ½ cup Dijon mustard
- ¼ cup margarine
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 4 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 (14-ounce) can artichoke hearts, drained and chopped
- 1/3 cup dairy sour cream
- 3 tablespoons white or red wine vinegar
- 2 cups tom mixed salad greens
- 1 ½ cups cooked green beans (about ½ pound)
- 1 cup julienne carrot sticks
- 3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- 1 (6½-ounce) can tuna, drained and flaked

In a saucepan, over medium-high heat,

heat water, ½ cup mustard and margarine to a boil. Add flour, stirring until mixture forms a ball; remove from heat. Beat in 4 eggs until blended. Spread mixture on bottom and up sides of 9-inch springform pan. Bake at 400 degrees F. for 40 minutes or until puffed and golden brown. Cool 5 minutes. Run knife around sides of pan to loosen crust; remove side of pan.

In electric blender, combine ½ cup artichokes, sour cream, remaining mustard and vinegar. Just before serving, line pastry puff with salad greens. Stir remaining artichokes into half the artichoke dressing; spread over lettuce. Top with green beans, carrots, egg slices and tuna. Cut into wedges and serve with remaining dressing.

Makes 6 servings.

Make no bones about it, your body needs calcium

By CHARLYNE VARKONYI
The Baltimore Sun

Just when we were getting used to counting calories like we count calories, along comes a pair of studies to make us question whether stuffing ourselves with milk and cheese is really worth all the hassle.

In April, a 20-year study at the University of Michigan School of Public Health reported that consuming more calcium in the diet does not appear to prevent bones from thinning.

In early May, a Chinese study concluded that dairy calcium is not needed to prevent osteoporosis, a deterioration of the bones due to the excessive loss of bone tissue. The Chinese, who get all of their calcium from vegetables and consume half the calcium we do, rarely get osteoporosis, according to the study.

The publication of these two studies has sent medical doctors and dietitians into a tailspin, fearing that Americans will stop counting their milligrams of calcium and doom themselves to an old age living with dowager's humps and bone fractures.

An estimated 24 million Americans, including as many as half of all menopausal women, have osteoporosis. And, as the baby boom generation ages, the number of victims is expected to double by the year 2020.

Sandra Raymond, executive director of the National Osteoporosis Foundation, says that the foundation is continuing to recommend a diet high in calcium to prevent osteoporosis despite the latest studies. The foundation is a nonprofit health agency dedicated to the prevention of osteoporosis.

"Already there are people who are saying, 'I am going to stop calcium because it doesn't help,'" says Dr. Andrew Klipper, a Baltimore physician who treats patients with osteoporosis.

"Patients have heard about the Michigan study and are confused. The bottom line is you need adequate calcium throughout life. This is only one study."

Straughn right at home with cooking in camper

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Camper cuisine doesn't have to be just fast and filling. It can be so good your taste buds will never know they're away from home.

The meaty Shirlee Straughn prepares in the 12½-foot camper on a pickup she and her husband, Ken, travel with, are satisfying and delicious. She says this is not hard to accomplish, because most motor homes and campers nowadays have refrigerators, stoves and ovens. So, the cook has all the "conveniences of home."

"The ovens are, of course, nothing like we have at home, but they serve the purpose," she says. "You can just do anything in them."

Straughn says they do not eat any differently while camping than at home; the meals are just less elaborate. She says she is there to enjoy herself - and to eat well.

"So I usually make a simple type of pot roast or baked chicken, or something that can be cooked during the day while I'm out fishing," she says. "And when I come home I have the meat cooked and the salad, and I can sit back with the rest of the crowd and have a cocktail, too."

If the Straughns have neighbors where they are camped, they might invite them over for a drink and some hors d'ouevres. "That way you get acquainted," she says. "It's a fun life."

A few times, she fixes pork chops, steak and the catch of the day for dinner, and sometimes they cook outdoors on their portable grill. But, when they are going to have an oven-cooked dinner, she gets everything ready for it right after breakfast.

When she prepares chicken and rice she lets it marinate in the refrigerator, and puts it into the oven later in the day. She cooks pot roast on low heat for several hours while she and Ken fish, hike or read.

When they are going to be gone for several days, she takes along frozen meat, because it lasts longer, and helps keep everything else cool. She also takes along fresh fruits and vegetables and packaged goods.

Convenience foods are lightweight, space saving, quick-to-fix and good. And, they're versatile, she says. Cinnamon muffins, for instance, can be covered with berries, and topped with whipped cream for a tasty dessert.

Packaged crescent roll dough can be turned into more than just rolls. She says you can slice a hot dog, put in some cheese, roll it up in the dough and bake at 375 degrees for 11 to 13 minutes, or until golden brown. Or, for a nice dessert, use packaged crescent roll dough to make...

BASY APPLE STRUDELL
3 tablespoons margarine or butter
1/3 cup dry bread crumbs
2 cups finely chopped apples
¼ cup raisins (optional)
1/3 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 (8 ounce) can Pillsbury refrigerated crescent dinner rolls

1 egg, beaten (use just the white)
Powdered sugar

In a small saucepan, melt margarine. Add crumbs. Simmer 1 - 2 minutes or until crumbs are golden brown, stirring constantly. In a large bowl, combine apples, raisins, sugar, cinnamon, lemon juice and vanilla, and toss lightly. Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly grease a 15 x 10 inch (or smaller) jellyroll pan.

On waxed paper, unroll dough into 2 large rectangles. Overlap long sides of rectangle 1 inch. Press perforations and edges to seal. Press or roll to 13 x 9 inch rectangle. Spread crumb mixture over

Letters of thanks

Thanks for raising funds for playground equipment

We wish to thank all those who helped to raise funds for playground equipment by supporting our recent pancake breakfast.

We wish to thank The Times-News, and KMYT and KKKV television stations for advertising they provided.

Thanks, also, to the many staff members and church friends who gave us their time to prepare and serve the meal. Your efforts are appreciated.

Obesity has been longtime load to bear

DEAR ABBY: So "Slim and Satisfied" thinks no one would tell an obese person, "Gee, you're fat! Why don't you go on a diet?" Well, it's happened to me dozens of times. Total strangers have stopped me on the street and said, "You have such a pretty face, have you ever read — (Weight Watchers, Optifast, Nutri-System, Overeaters Anonymous, TOPS, Diet Center, Jenny Craig, hypnosis, or that wonderful doctor who does stomach-stapling surgery)?"

I've had people come up to me in restaurants and say, "Do you really think you should be eating that?" (The "that" could be anything from a salad to dessert; they don't think a fat person should be eating anything, period.)

Hairdressers and makeup specialists have told me that it's pointless to bother about my hair or makeup, weighing as much as I do. And buying clothes is a nightmare. I either order mine by mail or have them made by a seamstress. If I enter a clothing store to buy a gift for someone, a salesperson is sure to approach me and say, "Sorry, we don't carry your size here."

I broke my arm in a car accident two years ago, and while waiting in the emergency room, a doctor appeared and said, "Boy, you really should lose some weight!" As if my weight had caused my broken arm! Most physicians believe that all fat people are lazy, weak-willed and undisciplined, rather than people who could be suffering from a genetic or metabolic problem.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I am 36 years old, and have been on more diets than I can count. A pediatrician put me on Metacal when I was 8; another doctor gave me a 600-calorie-per-day diet when I was 11; still another put me in the hospital for a medically supervised fast when I was 13.

For the past year, I've been working with a great counselor who understands obesity: She has helped me more than all the diet doctors and weight-loss groups combined. I am learning to understand the connection between eating and hunger, which was lost in all those years of bingeing and dieting.

I know I'll never be thin because I'm genetically programmed to be fat — but I hope to find my natural weight through a program of learning to eat from hunger.

I hate exercising, but I do it every day, because I know it's important (for both fat and thin people) for health reasons.

Abby, you've done a terrific job in educating the public about obesity and discrimination against fat people. You have helped fat people stop hating themselves and to understand that they have a physical problem — not a lack of willpower. I know this is too long for your column and you'll have to trim it, but please try to print some of it: I speak for so many people.

— LOOKING BEYOND LOOKS

DEAR LOOKING: I haven't trimmed a word, because every word you've written is essential to your message. Please write again when your mission has been accomplished — as I know it will be. I want to print your success story as an inspiration to others who are also "Looking Beyond Looks."

"How to Write Letters for All Occasions" provides sample letters of congratulations, thank-yous, condolences, resumes and business letters — even how to write a love letter. It also includes how to properly address the clergy, government officials, dignitaries, widows and others. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Too many different types cause limitations in recycling plastics

By SUE ELLYN SCALETTA
Knight-Ridder News Service

Trying to do the green thing with plastics makes you feel you need a chemical engineering degree.

There are too many kinds to start with, and they all have funny names like HDPE and PET, which stand for things like high density polyethylene or polyethylene terephthalate.

And while lots of them say they're recyclable, you can load up a bunch of it and take it to the recycling center only to learn that particular species is actually being recycled only in one factory thousands of miles away — or on a test basis somewhere equally far away.

The truth is that so far, plastics recycling in most places is pretty much limited to PET and HDPE — pop bottles, milk bottles and the like. Check with the recyclers in your community to learn what you can recycle.

How do you tell what kind of plastic your load is?

First check the container for a little triangular symbol with a number inside and letters under it. More and more plastic are being designed to carry this identifying mark.

Here's what the numbers mean.

- 1. PET or polyethylene Terephthalate: Includes pop and juice bottles and the thick plastic boil in pouches and processed meat packages.

2. HDPE or high-density polyethylene: Includes dairy and juice bottles and those containing laundry products, lotions and oils.

3. V or Polyvinyl chloride: Food wraps, vegetable oil bottles, blister packaging.

4. LDP: or low-density polyethylene: Shrink wrap and bag films, garbage bags.

5. PP or polypropyl: Margarine and yogurt containers, bottle caps.

6. PS or polystyrene: Fast-food trays, beverage cups and plates, egg cartons.

7. Other: Multi-resin containers. Here are some tips for singling out recyclable plastics and preparing them for recycling provided by a North Dakota recycler.

HDPE containers are never clear like glass. It is either colored or opaque — the milky white of dairy bottles — with a dull finish.

HDPE will float in water.

Opaque HDPE containers include dairy, water and juice bottles. Colored ones include most bottles containing such things as dishwashing liquid, fabric softener, laundry detergent, skin and baby lotions.

PET bottles are mostly pop and juice containers. It may be clear.

For recycling, empty and rinse all containers and remove the caps.

Some other plastics are being recycled and the industry is working to expand the practice.

But, you say, you've heard about how polystyrene can now be recycled.

(For-the-record, polystyrene is what you drink coffee or get your hamburger in — not Styrofoam. Styrofoam is brand name for insulation and construction materials. The material is polystyrene, but the company does not make food or beverage containers.)

Polystyrene is being recycled in some communities and by some fast-food outlets. Check with your local recycler or fast-food restaurants.

Designer checks give consumers chance to make fashion statement

By LARRY HACKETT
New York Daily News

If this were a just world, A.J. Unick might be able to take his place alongside Timothy Leary, Mary Quant and all those other cultural visionaries of the 1960s.

"It was just something timely to do at the time," the tanky printing company owner said recently, with the modesty of a man resigned to history's cruel memory. California, after all, was just bursting with new ideas in those heady days, so it's easy to see how the significance of Unick's decision to put flowers on personal checks his company printed may have been overlooked.

Not anymore. That bold stroke, called "the psychedelic checks," is now known as the birth of the designer check, a market that captures more than half of the 140 million checks accounts in the U.S.

"It gives the consumer an opportunity to make a fashion statement as well as a transaction," says Stu Alexander, spokesman for the check-printing titan Deluxe Corp., the largest in the nation. His company offers 55 scenic or "corporate image" checks, which they print for bank customers.

Think about that, next time somebody tries to tell you what a lasting impression the Beatles had on the cultural landscape.

Not content to rest on his contributions, Unick was in town recently to tout his new mail-order check company, Checks in the Mail, which for the last two years has been trying to convince customers to abandon the checks they buy at banks and order his checks at a fraction of the cost. (The first 200 checks cost $4.95).

"We can offer lots of cutting-edge stuff, very, very modern," says Uni-

ack. This year's hottest number, called Neon, sports a sort of shadowed, hi-tech script often found on the menus of brightly colored restaurants.

At his press conference, Unick was accompanied by the company's new spokeswoman, Dr. Joyce Brothers. Among her insights, the psychologist noted that the checking account is often the battleground over "the neurotic need for power within a marriage" and that a man may drink heavily and take a mistress if his wife gets hold of his checkbook.

Brothers, however, demurred from trying to link someone's personality to the sort of check pattern they might select. "That's a dangerous thing to do," she said, calling such research "more in the line of mythology than science."

Maybe, but Unick revealed the Santa Fe pattern was especially popular in the Southwest, and that cat lovers have long been asking for a cat design. He also said that, despite recent gains, the standard blue safety check remains the most popular in the Northeast.

He couldn't explain why.

Food

Light eating shrimp, tomato salad recipe

By the Seattle Times

The following light eating recipe was developed by CeCe Sullivan, home economist on the staff of The Seattle Times. Approximate preparation time 20 minutes.

SHRIMP AND TOMATO SALAD WITH SUN-DRIED TOMATO VINAIGRETTE
(4 servings)
3 tablespoons rice vinegar
1 teaspoon country-Dijon mustard
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon dried basil, crushed

¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
4 sun-dried tomatoes
¾ pound small cooked shrimp
3 medium plum tomatoes, seeded and cut into small cubes
½ cup frozen corn, defrosted and patted dry
1 medium green onion, finely chopped
4 large butter lettuce leaves, washed and patted dry
1. Whisk together the vinegar and mustard until blended. Slowly whisk in the oil, add the basil and pepper.

Or blend the dressing in a food processor until emulsified. Pat the excess oil out of the sun-dried tomatoes and chop finely. Stir into the dressing and set aside.
2. Stir together the shrimp, tomatoes, corn and green onion. Add the dressing and stir to blend. Refrigerate until ready to use.
3. Spoon onto the lettuce leaves and serve.

dough to within ¼-inch of edge. Starting on the 13-inch side of the rectangle, spoon apple mixture over 1/3 of the dough to within 1 inch of the edges. Starting with the apple side, roll up jellyroll fashion. Place seam side down on prepared pan. Remove waxed paper, tuck under ends, brush with egg and bake at 350 degrees for 25 - 30 minutes or until deep golden brown. Sprinkle with powdered sugar. Cool 5 - 10 minutes. Carefully remove from pan using spatulas. Serve with whipped cream, if desired.
At home, whenever Straughn fixes lasagna, she makes a smaller dish, too, and freezes it. The frozen lasagna is handy to take along on a camping trip for the first night's meal. It thaws along the way, and can be popped into the oven for an effortless meal.
She does the same when she prepares spaghetti sauce. She makes a huge potfull, and freezes some to take on the road. This, too, can thaw along the way. "When I get there, I can just throw some spaghetti in a pot and put the sauce over it, and toss a salad, and dinner's ready - and it's no work."
After they've settled into camp, she might make a...

by flour and rub it in. Put into a dutch oven and brown on both sides. Pour off fat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, thyme and basil leaves. Add soup and wine. Cover with foil and cook slowly in a 250 degree oven for 2½ hours. Cut onions into sixths, chunk the carrots and cut potatoes in half. Add vegetables to the pot roast and sprinkle a little salt on them. Continue cooking for another hour or so, until done.
Serve with a tossed salad, bread and a light dessert.
She says a nice dessert can be made by pouring a pudding (from a package) into a "purchased" ready-made cookie pie crust. Then chill it, and squirt little dollops of canned whipped cream around edges.
Straughn says people who camp in tents often cook with a dutch oven. "You just dig a hole and put some charcoal on the bottom, and get them going real good," she says. "Then place the dutch oven in the hole, put the lid on, put charcoals on top and bury it - and it makes a wonderful meal."
Here's Straughn's recipe for...

CHICKEN RICE AND EASY
Serves 4 - 6
1 whole frying chicken, cut up, or 1½ - 2 pounds chicken breasts

Cooking spray
1/3 cup dry wine
About ¼ cup chicken broth (or water)
About ½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups quick cooking rice
1 can cream of mushroom soup
4 - 6 onions (about 10) fresh mushrooms, sliced (optional)
2 tablespoons fine bread crumbs
2 tablespoons melted butter
Coat a 9 x 13" pan with cooking spray. Combine wine and chicken broth (or water), salt and rice. Put into pan. Place chicken on top of that. Combine soup and mushrooms and mix together. Spread over chicken. Combine bread crumbs and melted butter, and sprinkle over top. Cover with foil and bake about 1 hour in a 400 degree oven.
She often serves a fresh fruit salad with this meal.
FRESH FRUIT SALAD
Chop:
1 orange
1 apple
2 rings of canned pineapple
½ of an 8-ounce container of peach yogurt
Mix fruit together. Just before serving, mix in the yogurt.
"It's wonderful," she says.

Calcium

don, MD, says that these new studies provide no solid reason to forget calcium awareness in the diet.
She recommends complying with the new Recommended Dietary Allowances for calcium set by the National Academy of Sciences last fall. The calcium requirements were raised from 800 to 1,200 milligrams a day for males and females between the ages of 11 and 25. The RDA remains at 800 milligrams for older adults.
The National Institutes of Health recommends 1,000 mg. of calcium for men and women, 1,500 mg. a day for women after menopause who are not on estrogen and 1,000 mg. a day for those on estrogen. The National Institutes of Health gives no recommendations for calcium for birth to age 18.
Unfortunately, no matter which recommendation we use, most of us don't consume enough calcium to keep our bones healthy. Typically, Americans consume only 450 to 500 milligrams of calcium a day, according to national surveys of dietary intake.
Young women, who often opt for fat or low-fat and low-calorie diets, may be getting only 300 milligrams of calcium a day. And those years from 18 to 25 are crucial for development of bone mass, according to the experts. We reach top bone mass by age 30. After that, the damage is done. We can maintain the mass we have, but we can't build any more.
"But how do we increase the calcium in our diet without increasing the size of our waistlines? Here are some suggestions from Buchanan and other sources, including the National Osteoporosis Foundation:
Learn to drink skim milk. Skim milk has more calcium and fewer calories than whole milk. An 8-ounce glass of skim milk contains 302 mg. of calcium and 85 calories compared to 291 mg. of calcium and 150 calories in whole milk.
Look for low-fat cheeses. Some of the newer ones actually taste quite good. Read the label and select a cheese with 5 grams of fat or less per ounce.

Those who cannot digest the lactose in milk without suffering gastric discomfort should drink calcium-fortified orange juice or milk fermented by bacteria sold under the name acidophilus milk. Lactaid, a product that can be added to regular milk to make it easier-to-digest, is another good option.
Some of the best sources of calcium include collards (357 mg. per cup and only 65 calories) and sardines (372 mg. of calcium in 3 ounces and 175 calories).
To enhance the absorption of calcium, the diet should not contain too much protein (not more than 30 percent of total calories), or too much caffeine.
Vitamin D also helps absorption of calcium, but avoid high-potency supplements because excessive vitamin D can cause bone density loss. Make sure to get at least 400 International Units of vitamin D daily through egg yolks, saltwater fish, liver and vitamin-D fortified milk.
A minimum of at least three hours a week of physical exercise helps absorption of calcium.
Try to get as much of your calcium as you can through food, but if you need to take a calcium supplement, make sure it is bio-available. To test, drop a tablet in a glass of vinegar. Wait a half hour and see if it has dissolved. If so, it will dissolve in your body in sufficient time.
Buchanan also warns you can get too much of a good thing and she suggests not trying to overload with calcium-fortified products unless you are lactose intolerant. The recommended upper limit for calcium consumption is 2,500 mg. a day. Higher levels may induce constipation and kidney stones, she says.
"I think people have to realize that dietary calcium is only one of the factors in preventing osteoporosis," Buchanan says. "You should also exercise, stop smoking and avoid excessive alcohol."

The following recipes to help increase the calcium in your diet come from "Preventing Osteoporosis" by Kenneth Cooper, M.D. (Bantam, 1989):
CHEESE CAULIFLOWER CHOWDER
¾ cup chopped onion
1½ cup water
1 package (10 - 1½ ounces) frozen cauliflower
1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms
2 teaspoons instant chicken bouillon granules
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup skim milk
4 teaspoons cornstarch
8 ounces low-fat cheese, cut into small pieces
2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
In saucepan, cook onion in water until tender. Add cauliflower, undrained mushrooms, bouillon and mustard. Bring to a boil; reduce heat; cover and simmer the vegetable mixture about 8 minutes or until the cauliflower is tender.
Combine milk and cornstarch. Stir into hot vegetable mixture. Cook and stir over medium heat until thick and bubbly. Stir in cheese and pimiento. Heat through, stirring to melt cheese. Each serving contains 192 calories; 459 mg. calcium and 11 mg. cholesterol.
Makes four servings.
FRUIT A LA YOGURT
1 banana
1 orange
½ cup strawberries
1 cup plain, low-fat yogurt
1 tablespoon honey
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
Cut fruit into bite-size pieces. Combine fruit and place in 2 fruit cups. Set aside. In a small bowl, combine yogurt, honey and orange peel until well blended. Divide mixture in half and spoon on top of fruit. Each serving contains 208 calories, 250 mg. calcium and 7 mg. cholesterol.
Makes two servings.

POT ROAST
Serves 4
3 - 4 pound chuck roast
Flour
Salt and pepper, to taste
¼ teaspoon, or less, thyme
¼ teaspoon, or less, basil leaves
1 can Campbell's french onion soup
¼ cup red wine - or any wine
3 medium onions
1 pound carrots
8 small potatoes
Trim fat from roast. Sprinkle tight-

It's easy to incorporate eggs into a hot and hearty sandwich with seasonal ingredients.

Simply follow our French rolls or baguettes and toast them in the oven. Fill them with cooked asparagus tips and hard-cooked egg slices accented with sliced mushrooms and bright pimiento. To bind the ingredients, use low-fat cottage cheese whipped smooth in the blender with a small amount of mayonnaise. Heat the mixture and spoon it into the toasted rolls for a knife-and-fork sandwich.

For a well rounded menu, serve the sandwich with fruit, a glass of milk or other favorite beverage and, if you like, bar cookies for dessert.

SPRING DELIGHT SANDWICHES

4 servings

- 4 uncut French rolls or baguettes, about 6 x 13 inches
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen asparagus tips
- 1 jar (2.5 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1 jar (2 oz.) sliced pimientos, drained
- 1 cup (8 oz.) low-fat 1 percent cottage cheese
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Slice off tops of rolls at about 1/4 inches from bottom crust. Using fingers or fork, pull or scrape out insides of bottom pieces, leaving about 1/2-inch wall all around. Reserve crumbs for another use. Place rolls and tops cut-side up on baking sheet or in baking pan. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven until lightly toasted, about 10 minutes.

A knife and fork sandwich with hard-cooked egg slices, asparagus tips and a creamy dressing

Meanwhile, in medium saucepan, cook asparagus according to package directions. Drain. Return to saucepan. Stir in mushrooms and pimientos. Place cottage cheese, mayonnaise and salt in blender container. Cover and blend at medium speed until smooth. Stir into vegetables. Cover and cook over low heat, stirring occasionally, until heated through. Gently stir in eggs. Spoon into toasted rolls. Serve filled rolls with toasted tops alongside.

*To hard cook, place eggs in single layer in saucepan. Add enough tap water to cover at least 1 inch above eggs. Cover and quickly bring just to boiling. Turn off heat. If necessary, remove pan from burner to prevent further boiling. Let eggs stand, covered, in the hot water about 15 to 17 minutes for large eggs. (Adjust time up or down by about 3 minutes for each size larger or smaller.) Immediately run cold water over eggs or place them in ice water until completely cooled. To remove shell, crackle it by tapping gently all over. Roll egg between hands to loosen shell, then peel, starting at large end. Hold egg under running cold water or dip in bowl of water to help ease off the shell.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. — It looks like cauliflower dyed green.

It has a pleasing taste, sweeter than cauliflower, milder than broccoli.

"It's called Broccoflower. It's a cross between cauliflower and broccoli and is America's newest vegetable," Joseph Montecalvo said.

Montecalvo recently completed several weeks of nutritional tests on the plant. He heads up the food science and nutrition department of California Polytechnic State University here.

"It has more Vitamin C than oranges," Montecalvo said. "And it's high in folic acid, which is important to the maintenance of red blood cells carrying oxygen through the human body."

Montecalvo conducted the nutritional profile at the request of Rick Antle, president of Tanimura and Antle Co., headquartered in Salinas, Calif. The produce company has 20,000 acres in lettuce, broccoli and cauliflower in Salinas, California's San Joaquin Valley, Yuma, Ariz., and Obregon, Mexico.

Antle, 33, a fourth-generation California grower and 1979 Cal Poly graduate, is a member of the school's crop science advisory board.

In October 1988, Antle sent a few cases of Broccoflower to his customers on a trial basis. Now his company is shipping 20,000 to 25,000 boxes a week (12 to 16 heads to a box) throughout the United States and Canada. Broccoflower sells for about the same price as cauliflower.

"We are a major grower of both cauliflower and broccoli. Wild crosses occur between the two crops. About 10 years ago we began breeding the two vegetables on an experimental basis," Antle recalled.

He said that he didn't do much with it. Then, on a trip to Europe three years ago he discovered seeds for a cauliflower-broccoli

"I bought some of the seed, planted it in Salinas, fiked what I saw and then bought as much of the seed as was available from the Holland seed company. I learned that the plant was grown commercially on a small scale in Europe, but in all my travels I had never seen it in this country," Antle said.

"The seed was expensive—$1,500-a-pound. "But I knew I was onto something. Growers are always looking for a new crop," he said.

Antle called the vegetable Broccoflower and has taken out a trademark application on the name. He sells the product to his regular customers, who are located for the most part along the Eastern Seaboard.

"It has really caught on. The demand far exceeds the supply so far—last year we were growing Broccoflower on 300 acres. This year we are increasing the acreage considerably," Antle noted. He said many other growers are now doing test trials on the crop.

"Broccoflower is the talk of the vegetable commodity industry. There is an obvious niche for it in the market. And everybody's trying to get on the bandwagon. We feel fortunate because we've got a head start," he added.

Some 60,000 Broccoflower plants donated to Cal Poly's crop science department were planted on the San Luis Obispo campus April 21 by James Greil, professor at the school's crop science department, and four agriculture students.

"The plantings are part of Cal Poly's enterprise program underwritten by the Cal Poly Foundation. Students involved will earn 67 percent of the profits from the crop toward their education, with 33 percent of the profits returned to the foundation," Greil said.

Both the grower and the students benefit as students will be doing continuous research on the new crop under Greil's direction.

Gadgets that can make life easier in your kitchen

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times

When you've worked hard all your life and contributed to society, why should it have to be a chore to open a can? When you're trying to eat right, why should you have to deal with technology from the Stone Age?

In short, if we can put a man on the moon, why can't we get the good glasses down out of the cupboard?

No reason. Not any more, with these gadgets around.

Reach-It ($9.95): Very handy. Giant light-weighted tongs with substantial rubberized gripping tips.

Russell Hobbs Automatic Electric Teakettle ($78): For years, this supremely practical doodad was only available in England, and only for English electrical current. It boils water much faster than a stove-top kettle, or a microwave oven. The cordless version, unlike an ordinary electric heater, can be removed from its heating base for freedom of movement. And it's extraordinarily safe. The heating element automatically shuts off when the water reaches the boiling point, and if you happen to turn it on, an empty special sensor turns it right back off. A new model, the Cordless Electrical Teakettle ($76) is the most convenient unit because of its light weight and its locking lid.

Sunbeam Timer ($11.95): At 8 inches across, this must be the world's largest and easiest to read kitchen timer. It's big enough to hang on the wall.

Large Type Cookbook, by Jean Hewitt ($5.98): Contains more than 300 recipes from the New York Times in extra large type.

Mini Whip-Stirrer ($8.95): A handy beater for small portions, such as omelets and diet drinks.

Weatherizer Jar Vise ($4.95): This device mounts conveniently under the counter with either screws or adhesive. Slip any size jar (from 1- to 4-inch cap diameter) into the V-shaped blades and simply twist to the left to free the cap.

Nompro Battery-Operated Sifter ($13.80): Make it easy on your hand with an electrified plastic sifter.

Zeroll Ice Cream Scoop ($20): This sleek, charcoal-gray scoop stays non-stick due to a permanent defrosting fluid in the handle, activated by the warmth of your touch. It's all one piece and made of metal but needs a little special care. Dishwashers and heating more than 140 degrees are no-no's.

Metro Marketing Battery-Operated Salad Spinner ($10.95): Push the button and there go the greens, spinning themselves dry. Not as bulky as other spinners, this black and white beauty includes a transparent serving-storage bowl.

Electric Crumber ($8.95): Clean up that tablecloth between courses. You have your pride.

extra-sharp German steel blades.

Krupps Mini Pro ($35): Small food processors are perfect for daily tasks such as chopping onions and mincing garlic, nuts or herbs, where the small quantities tend to get lost in a full-size machine. They are also useful for pureeing foods for soft or liquid diet preparation.

Pill Timer ($15): This clever little case barely larger than a business card, reminds you to take vitamins or medications on time and then resets itself after the alarm to repeat the cycle. The 20-second double beep is discreet and meant for your ears only.

Acme Juicerator ($225): Beyond orange juice, there's tomato, celery, apple and carrot juices, which can be extracted in this juice extractor, one of the most powerful machines around. But on days when you want that refreshing O.J., (or lemonade or grapefruit juice) this model is equipped with a special juicer attachment.

Moha Universal Slicer ($30): Highly recommended by the Frugal Gourmet, this gadget hasn't really been replaced by any electric machine. You simply stroke the food over the sharp West German blade, and out come thick slices, thin slices, or julienne shreds, depending on which blade you're using. A sliding guard protects your fingers as you work.

Joyce Chen Unlimited Scissors ($14.99): Julia Child uses these tiny shears for cutting chicken bones. Their extra hard chrome molybdenum blades can also handle shrubby and flower stems, even rubber, plastic or thin metal. The comfortable flex handles are designed for right or left handed use.

Joyce Chen Peking Pan Plus for 2 with Clencote ($26): The health advantages of stir-fry cooking are well known; the non-stick Clencote coating on this pan makes it possible to stir-fry in even less oil than usual. This 9½-inch pan has not only the depth and long handle of a wok but the convenient flat bottom of a saute pan.

Zyiss Can Opener ($17.95): A manual can-opener usable even by arthritis sufferers. Once the handles are pressed together, no more pressure is needed to open any size tin.

Late spring, early summer isn't too late to prune trees, shrubs

Several practices can improve the beauty and health of trees and shrubs this spring.

Allen Wilson Intermountain gardening

It is not too late to prune. Late spring and early summer is a very good time to prune. It is the best time to prune flowering shrubs and trees because you will not cut off any flower buds.

Often a few simple pruning cuts can make a big difference in appearance. If a few branches on a tree or shrub have become extra long, it is all right to shorten them to make the plant more symmetrical. Plants should be pruned just above a node where a leaf is attached to avoid leaving a dead stub.

Some flowering shrubs like Forsythia can be improved by shortening several of the tallest branches. This will help overcome the sometimes straggly appearance. If a lilac bush is becoming too tall and is rather thin at the base, remove two or three of the largest branches right at the ground level. This will stimulate new growth at the base.

When pruning spreading junipers, do not use hedge shears. If a few of the longest branches are shortened each year plants will not become overgrown. Prune back inside the plant so that pruning cuts are hidden.

If you have not fertilized trees and shrubs yet this spring, now would be a good time to do so. I have found that lawn fertilizer is very effective for trees and shrubs. It is high in nitrogen, which is the main element needed by trees and shrubs. Use it at about the same rate as for the lawn. Or if grass is growing underneath trees, double the amount of fertilizer out to the edge of the branches.

Young trees and shrubs will grow about twice as fast if grass and weeds are not allowed to grow underneath. Normally a three-foot diameter circle is adequate for a young tree. This could be expanded to four or five feet as the tree grows.

There are several easier ways to prevent grass and weed growth besides hoeing or pulling. Black landscape fabric or weed barrier can be purchased at most nurseries. It prevents light from reaching germinating weeds. It is porous so that air and water can pass through to the roots. It is usually covered with a mulch such as bark chunks to keep sunlight from breaking down the fabric. Even mulch alone without landscape fabric will eliminate about 80 to 90 percent of the weeds.

Existing weeds and grass can be killed by spraying with a weed killer such as glyphosate (sold as Roundup, Kleenup and other brand names). You must be careful to avoid getting weed killer on any leaves or green bark of trees and shrubs because it can also damage them. I sometimes use a piece of cardboard as a shield so that I can spray close to shrubs without damaging them.

Another excellent weed-killer for trees and shrubs is Casaron. The granules scattered under and around woody plants will kill small weeds and prevent new weed growth. Do not use it in flower beds, because it will also kill them.

I have a leaflet on pruning shrubs and trees with illustrations for different kinds of plants. For a copy send $1 and a self-addressed envelope with two stamps to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 343, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for pruning guide.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Trouble can arise using vinyl tiles

Q. Several months ago I installed a vinyl-tile floor in my kitchen over an existing tile floor. The new tiles in front of my refrigerator and heating vent curled up at the edges. I tried several remedies, including replacing two tiles and pressing corners down with a pile of books, but the curling continues. Any ideas? — M. Solomon.

A. I assume these are adhesive vinyl tiles, which work well over some floor surfaces. However, the adhesion of vinyl flooring materials can be affected by moisture and contaminants on the original surface, such as dust and wax. The refrigerator might be a source of moisture that is seeping under the tiles and loosening them. Check for an overflowing drip pan or other leaking.

Just clearing up a moisture problem won't prevent tiles from curling; the underlying floor has to be dried thoroughly before tiles will adhere well. That usually means removing any loose or suspect tiles and letting the floor dry out.

If some partially loose tiles resist removal, warm them with a gun-type hair dryer or electric iron at low heat. To prevent sticking, use a towel between the iron and vinyl. A warmed tile generally can be pried or scraped off. Drying can sometimes be speeded by blowing a fan over the damp area or going over it with a hair dryer or heat gun at low setting.

I suggest installing new tiles instead of trying to re-install tiles that have curled or loosened, because their adhesive is likely to be dried out and less effective. It pays, of course, to keep a small stock of extra tiles for such emergencies. Just before installing the new tiles, vacuum the surface to be covered to remove any dust that might interfere with adhesion. The temperature in the room during installation should be at least 70 degrees.

If moisture can be ruled out as a cause of loose tiles, I'd suspect a waxy or dirty surface underneath. Remove the adhesive tiles and scrub the underlying surface with an ammoniated detergent. Sponge with clear water and let dry thoroughly, then vacuum and install new tiles.

Q. I want to floor the space above my garage for storage use. The joists are 2-by-8s on 16-inch centers. What is the thinnest plywood I can safely use for the floor? — F. Philbin.

A. Any surfaces that are to support walking or heavy loads should be floored with plywood at least 1/2-inch thick and preferably 3/4-inch thick. Full 4-by-8-foot sheets of plywood of the needed thickness are heavy and awkward to handle, so it's usually easier if you saw them into more convenient sizes.

If there is no great concern about the appearance of the floor, sheathing-grade plywood is strong and economical.

Fortunately, these joists are of a relatively good size and should support extra weight if the wall-to-wall span is not too long. In some attics converted to storage, the joists need to be beefed up by spiking new joists to the originals.

Make sure the ladder, folding stair or other access to the attic is also sturdy, since it must support the heavy loads on their way to and from storage.

Business

Is the 'credit crunch' real or imagined?

NEW YORK—Well, is there or is there not a credit crunch?

The Federal Reserve, which should know, says more than half the banks it surveyed recently say they have tightened lending standards for small- and medium-size businesses.

But the National Federation of Independent Business, which insists it should know because it claims as members more than 500,000 independent businesses, finds no evidence of credit tightening nationally.

In contrast, Sindinger & Co., which claims to have firsthand information on the basis of about 1,000 telephone interviews each week throughout the year, says a "credit crunch recession" is under way.

Gail Foster, chief economist of the Conference Board, which keeps tabs on business and economic matters, disagrees. "There is no evidence of a credit crisis, managed or otherwise, brewing in the financial system," she says.

In that case, what should you make of an informal survey of 60 business people at a meeting of SBNBE, the Small Business Association of New England? Asked if a credit crunch existed, eight replied no, four were unsure, 48 said yes.

Or this statement by Martin Perlman, president of the National Association of Home Builders: "The results of the survey, (1,142 builders) are clear. Builders are being indiscriminately cut off from the credit markets. Production is dropping. People are losing their jobs and businesses."

Even the Fed, which attempts to regulate the flow of credit to the economy, has shown uncertainty. Its chairman, Alan Greenspan, told Congress earlier this month that no crunch existed. But then the survey results were released.

What accounts for the sharp disagreements? Some, perhaps, result from the usual problems in comparing surveys, such as differences in questions asked, who was asked, nuances involved in responses, geography, timing and the like.

And there's the problem of terminology. There are at least three ways in which a credit crunch can exist:

- When the Federal Reserve clamps down on the supply of credit.
When lenders become fearful and make their policies more restrictive.
When households and businesses reach their credit limits, either because they have borrowed to the limit or because an economic downturn, or fears of one, force them to halt their borrowing. Who was asked?
The Fed asked the banks. Sindinger asked heads of households. The NFBF findings were from responses by 2,377 members; some of those members are very small companies, others have sales in nine figures.
The SBNBE survey was of individuals involved with small companies. The Conference Board opinion relates to much larger companies, which Foster says can finance with commercial paper rather than bank loans.
And, of course, the NABSB survey was limited to builders, and it is no secret that lenders are wary of real estate development loans, their recent experience having been a rather scorching one.

Geography clearly played a role in the SBNBE response. Not only were all those involved from New England, but most were from Massachusetts, where an economic boom, now cooled, perhaps has promoted unrealistically high expectations.

The NFBF survey, conducted in April, found unusually weak loan demand by its members, perhaps suggesting self-imposed rather than lender-imposed restraint. Its businesses traditionally are not big borrowers.

"Businesses with proven track records are unlikely to have problems getting financing," says William Dunkelberg, the NFBF's economist. The "track record" qualification, of course, excludes newer and marginal businesses.

In a special report from the NFBF Foundation, Dunkelberg and economist William Dennis... provide a description of the situation that might be the most obtainable.

Their data, they say, show no proof of a national credit crunch, nor that one might be coming, but they add:

"That does not imply individual small-business owners are without troubles, but that certain parts of the country are not experiencing more difficulties than others..."

Neither, they say, does it mean that "credit conditions are not somewhat more troublesome today than two or three months ago."

But for now, they conclude, what is called a credit crunch is not a fire, though it is thick. The smoke is thick enough to warrant a watchful eye."

Northern Idaho tourism booming

KELLOGG (AP) — The summer tourist season is barely under way, but northern Idaho tourism industry officials say it could be one of the most profitable ever.

has depended on rather large projects," Gardner said. "I would like to see some diversification, in rural areas, to spread the people out and prevent congestion in our resort areas."

Richard Gardner, an economist for the Department of Commerce's division of financial management, said the northern Idaho tourism industry now needs to embark on smaller projects to keep the momentum going.

Ferguson, executive director of Sandpoint Unlimited, a group representing about 90 small businesses, said the Schweitzer project has garnered the interest of several companies. A Seattle-based medical and health products distributor plans to open an office in Sandpoint this year, she said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"He declares himself guilty who justifies himself before accusation." - Thomas Fuller... West lost no time in admitting that his opening lead had blown a trick... "Was it not a lead that most would make?" he asked... He said nothing about the later defense... Dummy's heart jack won the first trick, and West had misgivings about his opening lead... The club queen was led to West's king (East playing the deuce), and it was now or never for the still-suffering West... Recovering enough to realize that South had only two clubs, West shifted to a low spade. If he could dodge dummy's spade ace, there would be no entry to dummy's clubs... Good intentions but bad execution... Dummy played low and East's king won. Back came a spade, but South alertly played his jack to preserve dummy's entry... The clubs were then established, and South emerged with 10 winners... West's attack on spades was an excellent idea, but he should not have led a low spade... Instead he should have led the queen... If dummy's clubs, West persists with another spade to isolate dummy's clubs... And if declarer wins West's spade queen in dummy to try diamonds, South finds more bad news in that suit... It is not a crime to make an errant opening lead... It is a crime to miss an opportunity to make amends...
