House rejects balanced budget move

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rep. Larry Craig's balanced budget proposal has gone down to defeat by eight votes in the U.S. House of Representatives, but Craig says it signals that Congress is ready for some serious budget reforms.

Craig, R-Idaho, has been battling for eight years for a constitutional amendment that would require Congress to adopt a balanced budget. Tuesday, the House rejected the amendment on a vote of 279-150, with some House members abstaining.

The proposal required 287 votes to pass and go to the Senate, where it also would have required a two-thirds majority. The Senate has its own version of the proposal.

Despite the defeat, Craig took a positive attitude toward the result.

"We came within eight votes of the two-thirds majority we needed," said Craig. "Clearly, the momentum is with those of us who feel the time for Congress to bite the bullet has come."

Ron Twilgar, the Boise Democrat who is running against Craig for the U.S. Senate, said the loss demonstrates Craig's ineffectiveness.

"The defeat of this amendment clearly demonstrates Larry Craig's continuing failure and ineffectiveness as Idaho's 1st District congressman," said Twilgar, in a statement issued in Boise.

"The Congress recognized the bill for what it is — a political charade designed to give politicians such as Mr. Craig an excuse to avoid addressing the tough questions about the budget," Twilgar said.

The measure's chief sponsor was Craig, but it was cosponsored by Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings of Idaho. "I supported the balanced budget amendment because I believe this upward spiral must end," said Stallings, in a statement.

"Immediate action must be taken to return fiscal responsibility to our budgeting process. Americans deserve no less," Stallings said.

The last time the balanced budget proposal came to a vote in Congress was 1982. Please see CRAIG/A2

Fables from Twin Falls lead off Tonight Show

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls schoolteacher's quest for summertime excitement has become a piece of Tonight Show history.

"It was just an adventure that mushroomed," said Sawtooth Elementary School second grade teacher Mariam Reed.

Reed's tale turned into many when comedian Jay Leno — one of Johnny Carson's guest hosts — opened a show last week by reading fables written by Reed's class, including stories of drooping drawers, a pet-eating woman, tricky cookie robbers and a sassy shark.

Reed's saga had a modest beginning: It was a hunch that grew into a reality of Hollywood proportions.

For several years, Reed has indulged herself over the summer months by watching the Tonight Show. It offered her late-night chuckles for which she didn't stay awake during the busy school year.

Reed decided last summer that she wanted a Carson prop as a trophy.

"It would be the talk of the school," she said with a laugh.

Her target prop: A gag poster advertising movies such as a Ronald Reagan flop, "Zero Recall," or a doomed adventure film starring Donald Trump's girlfriend Marla Maples called "The Hunt for Miss October."

She felt certain that the difference between those who received such prizes

Idaho Power proposes dam for Kanaka Rapids

By N. S. Nockenwed
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Co. wants to build a dam at Kanaka Rapids on the Snake River north of Buhl.

"We want a chance to study it to see how viable it is," said Joe Marshall, the company's chief executive officer.

Idaho Power has notified the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, which regulates private hydroelectric projects, that it intends to file for a license to build the dam.

The utility now must file a formal application within 120 days. It has had plans for the site in the past, but they were never developed, and a former permit lapsed.

But Idaho Power is not the only company interested in Kanaka Rapids as a hydropower site.

L.B. Industries of Boise already had filed an application for a preliminary permit with FERC. But its proposal is more modest.

Carl Myers, engineer for L.B. Industries of Boise, said the company proposes to build a wing dam part of the way across the river to divert water down a canal to a small powerhouse.

The project would generate eight to 10 megawatts.

Unlike the Idaho Power proposal, however, the L.B. plan would not back up a reservoir of slack water.

The Idaho Power project would consist of a 50-foot main dam and 36-foot abutment dam reaching about 770 feet across the river. The dam would impound a 90-acre reservoir containing about 830 acre-feet of water.

The powerhouse's single bulb turbine, with a maximum capacity of 8,000 cubic feet second, would generate about 20 megawatts of power.

A bulb turbine is a horizontal turbine-and-generator unit that operates submerged in the flow through the dam. It is generally more efficient in a dam with a low drop in water level, such as the 36-foot drop at Kanaka Rapids.

It is the amount of water and the distance it drops — called head — that determines power potential at a particular site.

It is uncertain how FERC will consider the two competing applications. Ordinarily the one submitted first enjoys a certain advantage, but in this case Idaho Power is applying for a license and L.B. is applying for a preliminary permit.

FERC issues preliminary permits to protect a company or individual from competing applications while studying a potential hydro power site in preparation for a license application.

Idaho Power is just a little further along in the process, said company spokesman Jeff Beaman.

"How many rivers should be reserved for recreation?" Myers asked. Someday when the power goes out, people will complain to the power company why it didn't do something sooner, Myers said.

Idaho Power, noting that new hydro projects normally take seven to 10 years to develop, also has urged the water resources board to look ahead when making its decision on protecting the river.

Governors want water control

The Associated Press

FARGO — Western governors have unanimously endorsed Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus' call for Congress to restore full state authority over water within its borders.

Tuesday's action at the Western Governors' Association annual meeting in eastern North Dakota came in response to the U.S. Supreme Court ruling this spring which gave the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission final authority over stream flows through power dams that it licenses.

"We are united on this critical issue of state control over water resources," Andrus said. "This united position should greatly help bring about the necessary congressional action to correct the Supreme Court decision."

It was the second endorsement of restoring state primacy on water policy this month. Last week, the National Association of Attorneys General, without dissent, backed congressional action to reverse the high court ruling.

The Idaho congressional delegation introduced that legislation shortly after the Supreme Court ruled in a California case. All 49 other states supported California's effort to retain final say on stream flows.

Critics of the court decision maintain that by giving the federal agency authority to set stream flows through hydro dams the agency effectively has control of how much water will be available for use both upstream and downstream of the dams.

The Western Governors' Association said the court ruling upends the traditionally strong, independent state role in managing water resources.

"We all agree the court decision was unfortunate and must be corrected," Andrus said.

Coupon campaign spreads

The Associated Press

CHARLESTON, W.Va. — West Virginians can report suspected drug dealers by filling out a coupon — anonymously, if they prefer — and mailing it to state police under a unique new statewide program.

Civil libertarians said the program would create "a paranoid atmosphere" and put West Virginia on the level of Albania, the hard-line Communist nation, or Nazi Germany.

The program started on a small basis in February when the Williamson Daily News printed similar coupons on its own and invited people to fill them out and mail them to state police.

As a result, police in Williamson and Mingo County have received nearly 700 coupons listing the names, addresses or license plate numbers of suspected drug dealers or users.

Last month, federal, state and local authorities arrested 46 people in Mingo County as a result of the coupon tips. Wally Warden, editor of the Williamson newspaper, said six people have been convicted in local courts and plea agreements are being worked out in federal court for other suspects. No one has been sentenced, he said.

State police announced their own statewide program Monday.

Now, the coupons will be available at state police detachments and will be carried by troopers in their cruisers, Trooper Ric Robinson said. They'll also be passed out at the state fair in August, he said.

Weather summary

Warm conditions continued over Idaho Tuesday as a ridge of high pressure dominated the state. Skies were sunny in the north and central portions, while variable clouds and isolated thundershowers were spreading northward over the extreme south. Widely scattered thundershowers are expected across the south and central regions today, but the north will remain dry. No rainfall was reported in the valleys Tuesday and the winds were mostly 10 to 20 mph. Afternoon temperatures were mainly in the 80s to mid-90s. The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 100 degrees at Riggs. Stanley reported the coldest at 34 degrees. Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 111 degrees at Borrego Springs, Calif. The lowest was 35 at Wisdom, Mont.

Heavy rains bring flood threat to South Texas

Rain showers and thundershowers during the afternoon Tuesday brought a threat of floods in Texas. In south-central Texas and the Rio Grande plains, where rain and thundershowers continued into the afternoon, the threat of further flooding continued. Beeville, Texas, got 10.64 inches of rain in the 24 hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT. Up to 15 inches of rain fell in two days, causing extensive lowland flooding along the Guadalupe, Aransas, Nueces and Mission rivers. Showers and thundershowers extended from Florida north through Virginia and west through the eastern three-fourths

Idahoans set record for lottery ticket purchases

The previous record was $410,985 set March 21 for a jackpot of $18 million. The jackpot was won by Dave Wagner, Dodge City, Kan., who will receive approximately $1.3 million per year after taxes for the next 20 years. This week's Lotto America drawing will be held in Boise. It is scheduled at 8:59 p.m. Wednesday at The Grove in downtown Boise. The jackpot will be for a minimum of $2 million. It's the first time that the Lotto America drawing will have been held outside the Lotto America studios at Des Moines, Iowa.

Rescue crews seek hundreds trapped
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Rescuers worked Tuesday to save hundreds of people trapped by an earthquake that left 234 people dead, but the squads were hampered by a lack of equipment and the training to cope with the disaster.
The U.S. military joined the search for survivors. Japan also sent aid and medical teams.
Filipino reporters who visited areas of major damage said there was little sign of a coordinated, comprehensive government rescue operation.
Most rescuers were private citizens organized by local civic groups and lacked training to deal with the emergency. Reporters also said rescuers lacked heavy equipment such as cranes to lift debris.

Senate pushes action on rights bill
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Tuesday to speed up action on a major civil rights bill as critics complained the legislation was being "rammed down our throats." The bill bogged down in a fight over hiring quotas.
"If we're going to be treated like a bunch of bums on this side of the aisle, there won't be any agreements on anything," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said after the Senate vote.
Civil rights supporters in a hall outside the Senate chamber cheered as lawmakers voted 62-38 to limit debate to 30 hours on the measure designed to combat job discrimination.
Democrats voted 54-1 in favor of limiting debate, while Republicans opposed it 37-8.

Nations settle Polish border question
PARIS (AP) — The seven nations negotiating German unification reached a historic agreement Tuesday, confirming Poland's border with East Germany and clearing the way for one Germany by year's end.
In another important move, West Germany agreed to hold economic assistance talks with Poland later in the summer.

The actions were announced at a news conference after talks involving the two Germanys, Poland, and the four World War II victors — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France.
Terms of the border settlement were not announced. Polish Foreign Minister Krzysztof Skubiszewski said they were confidential, but all the foreign ministers stressed the border would be the line between Poland and East Germany that was drawn at the end of the war.
The border settlement should serve to allay Polish concerns that a merged Germany would revive old claims on territory given to Poland in partial compensation for a larger area taken over by the Soviet Union.

Senate panel approves defense limit
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to limit defense spending next year to $294.9 billion, $8.4 billion less than President Bush wants.
The 24-4 bipartisan vote was only the most recent indication that in light of improving relations with the East, Congress intends to give the Pentagon less than the White House thinks is right.
All 15 voting committee Democrats and nine of its 13 Republican voted for the $294.9 billion figure.
Both Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Appropriations defense subcommittee, and the subcommittee's ranking Republican, Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, complained that the defense figure was too low.
But Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., whose panel also adopted limits on spending for domestic and foreign aid programs, said the deficit was putting pressure on all programs.
The figure the appropriations panel approved is halfway between the defense spending totals that have been approved by two rival Senate committees.

Tonight

and the rest of Carson's sleepy followers was charm — and a willingness to merely ask for them.
She was right. A phone call to NBC studios in Burbank, Calif., netted an autographed picture of Leno. A paper Idaho Centennial placemat fashioned into an envelope brought her prized poster, "Jake and the Batman," featuring a flabby "fatman" dressed in a Batman cape.
One thing led to another. Reed offered to be host to Tonight Show proppan Greg Elliott in a future trip to Sun Valley. When Elliott offered to do the same for Reed, "possibly as a passing conversational gesture," she readily accepted.
A year ago, Reed was dismissed for the summer. Reed — accompanied by long-time friend and Sawtooth secretary Eric Donnelly — drove to Burbank and showed up at the studio last Tuesday.
"They gave us the grand tour," she said.

The two women were awed by the Carson production, which requires 120 workers. They took pictures of each other holding Carson's infamous rubber chicken and sitting at Carson's desk and in the guest seat.
Elliott was warm and generous, Donnelly said.
"He was a young man, about 35," she said. "He looks kind of Hollywood; you know — ponytail, beard, shorts."
The two were given front-row seats for the taping of the Tonight Show. During the show, Leno pulled out a book called "Room Eighty-six Fables" — Reed had given it to Elliott — and started reading the parodies on Aesop's fables which were part of a creative writing class Reed taught. Leno altered a few of the morals of the stories, Donnelly said.
Among the gems were:
• "The Big Pants," by Matthew Covington:
"Once there was a boy that bought new pants at Sears. He did not try them on. The next day he wore the pants to school. They did not fit and they started falling off. The zipper and the button didn't work either. People teased him and he was sad."
"Moral: Don't buy your pants at Sears."
• A picture of a frowning boy with pants down to his knees and polka-dot underwear followed Matthew's fable:
"How the Kid was Tricked," by Travis Coats:
"There was a kid named Jay. He had a cookie. He was walking across a bridge. He looked and there was a man under the bridge. And then there was a man in front of him. The man in back of him pushed him in the water. And then they took his moral: Be Smart. Do not be fooled." "Moral: Be changed to, 'Always hide your cookies.'"

Craig

when it lost by 40 votes, and Craig said Tuesday's narrow defeat represented substantial progress.
He said it means Congress is ready to do something about budget reforms and the deficit.
"We won't reach vote, because a supermajority was needed. It means that any measure of budget reform would pass. It says to the president and the Senate leadership that we will accept nothing short of budget reform in any package that is sent to us," said Craig.
He said he wouldn't give up.
"Not at all. Tomorrow, I will be meeting with the organizations and outside groups supporting the amendment."
"Very likely they will attempt to push it to a vote in the Senate, and if the Senate passes it, the pressure would allow us to force the issue one more time. We certainly are going to look at that option," Craig said.
With 279 votes, he said, "we really did demonstrate a supermajority for major reform."
"It's recorded vote by which to judge those who want to be fiscally responsible and those who have chosen not to be. It's the first clear vote on that issue since 1982. It's a very valuable vote in this election year," said Craig.
"However, said Craig has been using the balanced budget proposals to ledge tough budget questions.
"Mr. Craig will likely try to blame the Democrats for his failure, but he has no one but himself. In order to be successful, Congress, one must be able to work with others, regardless of political affiliation," said Twilegar.
"As long as Larry Craig is considered an extremist by most, he will continue to fail," said Twilegar.

Kanaka

But dams would affect more than recreation.
The stretch of river from Shoshone Falls to the backwaters of the Upper Salmon Falls Dam is good habitat for white sturgeon, which depend on long free-flowing stretches of the river to reproduce, according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.
A dam at Kanaka Rapids would shorten that stretch.
Fish & Game recently planted nearly 200 young sturgeon in that stretch of river, about a fourth of them near Kanaka Rapids, said Chip Corsi, department fisheries biologist.
Any kind of dam or diversion would disrupt fish habitat and affect the flow of the river, and "flows are one the critical problems on the Snake," Corsi said.
Water quality also could be a problem with another dam on the river. Idaho Power's proposed dam would back up water, trapping nutrients and sediments, which nourish the growth of algae.
Though the alternative proposal for a wing dam would have less impact on water quality, it could dry up the natural channel during low-water periods.
"We are going to have to accept the fact that some rivers will remain working rivers," Marshall said.
"We're going to have to make some trade-offs."

Foreign trade deficit up despite May increase in exports by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit widened to $7.73 billion in May as a big jump in imports of oil and foreign cars offset the second-highest level of exports on record, the Commerce Department reported Tuesday.

The May deficit widened to 5.8 percent higher than a revised April trade gap of $7.31 billion, but most economists discounted the report as a small worsening of the deficit.

They pointed out U.S. export sales remained strong and they predicted the trend would continue as economic growth overseas helps prop up a sluggish American market.

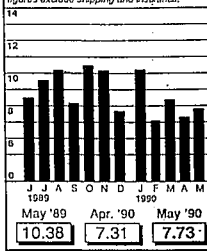

"Thank goodness for trade. It remains the brightest spot in the economy," said Allen Sinai, chief economist of the Boston Co. "The small increase in the trade deficit is not of concern because we believe that strong growth overseas will keep U.S. exports rising."

Many analysts believe export sales are the only thing keeping the country out of a recession. In the first three months of the year, fully half of total economic growth was supplied by the rise in overseas sales.

In a separate report Tuesday, the Federal Reserve said industrial output rose by 0.4 percent in June, helping push the operating rate at the nation's factories, mines and utilities to 83.5 percent of capacity.

the highest level this year. Much of the June increase reflected a possible strike this fall and a threat wave which boosted utility demand. But analysts said a growing portion of U.S. manufacturing output is being shipped to overseas markets.

The Bush administration, which is counting on strong foreign demand to continue propping up the economy, was pleased with the May trade report.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher noted the U.S. trade deficit for the first five months of the year was almost $6 billion less than the same period a year ago.

So far this year, the merchandise trade deficit has been running at an annual rate of $97.68 billion, surprising many analysts who had predicted little change from the 1989 deficit of $109.4 billion.

For May, imports climbed by 2.9 percent to $40.52 billion offsetting a 2.3 percent rise in U.S. exports, which totaled $32.79 billion. The trade deficit is the difference between imports and exports.

The export level, second highest in history after a March figure of $33.3 billion, was bolstered by gains in various areas including automotive parts, capital goods and consumer products.

Close to half of the total import increase came from a 13.2 percent increase in oil shipments during May. America's foreign oil bill totaled $4.32 billion during the month as the volume rose to 8.95 million barrels a day, up from 7.55 million barrels daily in April. The price per barrel dropped by $1 to $15.57 in May.

Senate passes textile import limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate brushed aside veto threats by President Bush and voted Tuesday to restrict the growth of U.S. imports of textiles and apparel to 1 percent a year and freeze imports of shoes at 1989 levels.

By a potentially veto-overriding 68-32 vote, the Senate approved a textile-import bill nearly identical to measures passed by Congress in 1985 and 1988 but successfully vetoed by then-President Reagan.

"They do not want to do anything for the textile industry," Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said of the Bush administration. "If we do nothing, it is safe to predict the demise of the industry is at hand."

apparel has jumped from $4.7 billion to $26.5 billion, making it the second largest component of the nation's trade deficit behind oil.

Over the same time, more than 1,800 textile and apparel plants have closed and employment has dropped by 400,000 to just over 1.9 million jobs — despite an $18 billion modernization effort.

Opponents claimed the bill would cost consumers $25 billion to $27 billion a year in higher prices. "You do not notice it much," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore. "Just 50 cents a shirt here, a dollar, ... two dollars a pair of shoes. But that is up by 250 million consumers in this country. That is a lot of money."

Bush praises Soviet NATO concession

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush called Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on Tuesday and said his consent for a united Germany in NATO was "very, very significant and very important."

Bush also said the United States deserves a lot of credit for helping remove the last major obstacle to German unity.

"I take pride in the way Europe is moving into this new era of freedom," the president said. "It's a goal that we Americans have long worked to achieve."

In a 40-minute telephone call to Gorbachev, Bush assured the Soviet president that NATO poses no threat to Moscow and that the United States is ready to move toward warmer relations, officials said.

Bush also briefed Gorbachev on last week's seven-nation economic summit and the decision not to block any Western nation from providing cash assistance to Moscow, said the officials, who requested anonymity. Bush explained that the United States is willing to provide technical help but not money.

"It was the fourth telephone call to Gorbachev by Bush in his 18 months in office."

Separately, Bush also called West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and congratulated him on his talks with Gorbachev and the dropping of Soviet objections to East Germany joining West Germany under the umbrella of the Western alliance.

Amid a glow of triumph in the West, Bush made a deliberate effort to highlight his own role in promoting German unity.

There was an apparent feeling in the White House that Monday's announcement of a deal between Gorbachev and Kohl failed to give proper credit to other Western leaders. "When good things happen as a result of the combined efforts of the allies, it makes sense to take note of that," one administration official said, speaking privately.

Bush, addressing a gathering of magazine publishers, said the Gorbachev-Kohl statements about a unified Germany were "very, very significant and very important and ... let me reflect on how we got here."

He said, "I remember telling the press last October, before the Berlin Wall came down, that when we said we supported German unity we really meant that and we meant it without qualifications."

"I know the German people have appreciated that stand by the United States."

Doctor, family found after suicide

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A physician used an intravenous solution to kill his ailing wife, two children and himself in a bedroom of their mansion, police said Tuesday.

Dr. Anthony Paul, 49, left a suicide note at his office and at his three-story house in the affluent Chestnut Hill section, police said. The notes referred to financial difficulties and to the medical problems of his wife, Melanie, 47, and daughter, Medhina, 17, said Detective Lt. Thomas Quinn.

"He decided to take the family with him," Quinn said. "He indicated he didn't want to leave his son as a ward of the state."

The bodies were found Tuesday morning in a second-floor bedroom, intravenous solution bags on the wall and individual IV tubes in the arms of each victim, police said.

A copy of the suicide note was discovered Tuesday morning at the Fox Chase Cancer Center, where Paul had worked for 15 years, said spokesman Eric Rosenthal.

It was not known how long the family had been dead but Paul had been at work Monday.

Paul was a gastroenterologist, specializing in cancer treatment, Rosenthal said. He said Mrs. Paul suffered from arthritis and their daughter had a learning disability.

Britain views Germany: Sharp words may reveal identity crisis

By Marcus Elinson
The Associated Press

LONDON — In a memorable episode of the British television series "Family Ties," a bumbling hotel owner goes to absurd lengths "not to mention the war" to his German guests, then proceeds to do just that — over and over.

That episode from the 1970s, which had actor John Cleese goose-stepping and heel-littering in hilarious fashion, is being recalled these days as British commentators wrestle anew with the complexities of Anglo-German relations.

First there was Nicholas Ridley, trade secretary and close confidant of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, sounding off last week about "uppity" Germans trying to take over Europe.

Then came publication Sunday of the summary of a secret seminar hosted by Mrs. Thatcher, in which leading academics put Germany on the psychiatric couch in hilarious fashion, stereotypical traits as bullying, angst and sentimentality.

Ridley resigned, and Mrs. Thatcher's office vowed to find out who leaked the summary to the press. But as most observers agreed, the "two episodes" served to bring a delicate issue into the open.

The issue is the mix-of-suspicion, envy and scholarly fascination that characterizes Britain's attitude to Germany, steeped in memories of World War II.

Today, whatever hostility remains is usually expressed in jokes, about early-rising German holidaymakers grabbing the best beaches, or Basil Fawlty screaming at his staff: "Whatever you do, don't mention the war!"

But lately, things have gotten serious. "Germany is a formidable economic power, and after it reunites, the deutschmark looks certain to dominate the European Community."

Thus, argue supporters of Ridley

Nicholas Ridley
Wary of German policy and Mrs. Thatcher, surely a small island nation like Britain with chronic economic problems has the right to ask what sort of Europe it is going into.

The trouble, as in a Faculty case, is in the presentation.

Ridley expressed a genuine popular concern which is shared by Mrs. Thatcher. But his references to the EC bureaucracy as Hitler, and to Britain "being bossed by a German," were widely criticized.

The seminar was a free-ranging session covering many opinions. According to participants, it only looked controversial when it was boiled down to a 2,000-word summary by Mrs. Thatcher's private secretary for foreign affairs, Charles Powell.

"If Chancellor Kohl himself had sat in on that meeting, he would have agreed with, or at least accepted as fair comment, 90 percent of what was said," Timothy Garton Ash, a German affairs scholar who attended the seminar, wrote in The Independent.

Analysis

Opposition Labor Party lawmakers accused Powell of slanting the summary to match Mrs. Thatcher, and got no straight answer when they asked her whether she repudiated Ridley's remarks.

Some German commentators find the uproar symptomatic of a British identity crisis, rooted in memories of its lost empire and World War II, when it stood alone but united against Hitler.

In The Independent on Sunday, Neal Ascherson noted a German tendency to regard Britain as a twilight world on the fringes of Europe, "a raft being pulled away into the sunset by a mad queen whose shouts grow gradually fainter."

He said that when he lived in Germany 20 years ago, attacks like Ridley's would have provoked "panic-stricken self-questioning about why the 'ugly Germans' were still so ugly. Now they are just laughing at us."

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd was also critical of his nation's tendency "just to draw down the blinds, shut out the real world, swear at the present world and pretend that we can go on just living in the past."

He pointed out that Germany had prospered by working hard, producing manufactured goods, holding down inflation — "all the things we failed to do."

Garton Ash blamed history and geography.

"America," he wrote, "is far enough away, and still big and powerful enough, to be quite relaxed about the re-emergence of Germany as a great power in central Europe. France (let alone Poland) is too small and too relatively weak to be anything but deadly serious about it."

"But Britain is somewhere in between: close enough to be worried and weak enough to be resentful ('Who won the war, anyway?'), yet also far enough away, and still self-confident enough, to be outspoken and outrageous."

Israeli court rejects proposal for housing

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Supreme Court on Tuesday overturned Housing Minister Ariel Sharon's use of emergency regulations to speed up construction of housing for thousands of Soviet immigrants.

Sharon was also dealt another blow as Tourism Minister Gideon Patt opposed a second program under which Soviet Jews would live temporarily in hotels and youth hostels.

The three-judge Supreme Court panel ruled Sharon could have sought approval from the parliament, or Knesset, instead of using emergency powers.

PLO blocks factional fight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas moved in Tuesday to block pro-Iranian fundamentalists' attack on a rival faction in south Lebanon.

Police said 52 people were killed and 167 wounded. A police spokesman said Yasser Arafat's guerrillas intervened after Hezbollah, or Party of God, overran the village of Jarjou Monday night. That stripped the Syrian-backed Shiite Muslim Amal of its main stronghold in Iqlim al-Tuffah, or the Apple Province.

A police spokesman called it the bloodiest battle in six months in the mountainous regions above Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon. Jarjou is 10 miles southeast of Sidon.

The spokesman, who could not be named in line with standing regulations, said that in the final push that ended just before midnight, 40 people were killed and 117 wounded. Twelve people were killed and 50 wounded in clashes earlier in the day.

It was close-quarter combat. The village square is littered with bodies that couldn't be evacuated by the Red Cross because of the savage fighting," the spokesman said.

He said the fatalities included 30 Amal fighters and 10 from Hezbollah.

An estimated 600 PLO fighters entered Iqlim al-Tuffah at 4 a.m. on orders from Arafat.

Their deployment blocked Hezbollah's advance toward Nabatiyah, the main Shiite town in south Lebanon, some five miles south of Jarjou.

Cosmonauts attempt repair

MOSCOW (AP) — Two cosmonauts took a walk in space Tuesday to try to repair a thermal blanket that has partially ripped apart and could interfere with their safe return to Earth, Soviet media reported.

Cosmonauts Anatoly Solovoyev and Alexander Balandin opened the hatch of the Mir space station as the oblong spacecraft entered the shadow of the Earth, Radio Moscow reported.

They moved along the outside of the station to their Soyuz TM-9 capsule, which is docked to the Mir, to inspect and make decisions on whether they could repair the thermal insulation, the radio report said.

In a live report from the Baikonour Space Center, a correspondent for the Soviet TV program "Vremya" displayed some of the tools the cosmonauts would use, including what looked like a large pair of shears and some extra thermal insulation blankets. The space walk was not televised, and there was no immediate word if it was a success.

Part of the thermal blanket has been flapping uselessly for months.

International operation nets drug bust

LONDON (AP) — A police operation involving French, Dutch and British officers has netted Britain's largest haul of amphetamine sulphate, the drug known as "speed," police said Tuesday.

Eleven men were arrested Monday when police and customs officers raided a boat at the mouth of the Thames River, 40 miles east of London, Kent police said.

Police fired a stun grenade but no one was injured in the raid, which recovered 132 pounds of the drug worth up to $18 million, said Kent police Chief Inspector Alan Butterfield.

Groups work to put woman on appeals court

Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's "good old boy" court system should be redefined with the first appointment of a woman to Idaho's second-highest court, a Boise lawyer says.

Susan Graham announced on the steps of the Idaho Supreme Court a joint campaign by the Idaho Women's Network and Idaho Women Lawyers to urge the appointment of a woman to the Idaho Court of Appeals.

"We are convinced that a woman's experience is a unique qualification that has been ignored too long," Graham said. "In Idaho today, women's experience is missing from our high courts."

"All Idahoans suffer as a result," she said. The Judicial Council will interview the 12 applicants, five of whom are women, on July 31 and recommend a short list. The female applicants are Linda Judd, Post Falls; Cathy Silak, Myrna Stahman and Kathryn Sticklen, all of Boise and Darla Williamson, Valley County.

From that list, Gov. Cecil Andrus is expected to make the final decision on the appointment sometime in early August. Donald Burnett resigned from the court effective this month.

The Idaho Women's Network is asking members of its 20-group coalition to write the Idaho Judicial Council and the governor requesting appointment of a woman to the court.

The appeal is expected to reach thousands of women through the Network's member organizations, including the Idaho Education Association, Idaho Nurses Association and Idaho Women Lawyers.

Maria Eschen, representing the Idaho Nurses Association and the Idaho Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers, said the groups look forward to a "feminization of power" with a female appointee.

Last year, Andrus said he wanted to appoint a woman to the Idaho Supreme Court, but the four female applicants did not make it past the council. Members of the Idaho Women's Network turned out to support a high court appointment at that time.

Andrus restated that intent when contacted at the Western Governors' Association meeting Monday in Fargo, N.D.

"I've made it very plain I would like to appoint a woman to a judicial post," he said. But Andrus said he could not predict who he will select until he receives the short list.

If the council strictly interprets the 1985 statute that set up the court, a woman will not make the short list, said Tim Hopkins, president of the Idaho Bar Association.

State OKs medical incinerator

BOISE (AP) — A Pocatello company has won state approval for a permit to construct a medical incinerator near American Falls, which could handle up to 50 tons of waste per day.

The Department of Health and Welfare said Tuesday Enviro Health Inc. proposed using equipment with air pollution controls to meet all state requirements. The company still has to win local approval.

"This is a very strict permit and the design is state of the art," said John Ledger, air quality chief for Health and Welfare. "The pollution controls would meet requirements for 'best available control technology' in California, New York and Florida," he said.

Ledger said the state was required to issue the permit on technical grounds, but local authorities can determine whether the proposed site is zoned. "That's a planning and zoning issue," said Ledger.

Gov. Cecil Andrus has suggested that city officials should consider postponing action until the next Legislature, when the lawmakers may consider issues related to siting incinerators.

Prosecutor tries to end Aryan event

HAYDEN (AP) — If the Kootenai County prosecutor has his way, last weekend's Aryan World Congress will be the final such event held at the Aryan Nations compound at Hayden Lake.

"I am studying the possibility of enjoining the Aryan Nations from attracting violent people to the compound," Prosecutor Bill Douglas said Monday after the latest conference held by the white supremacist group. "This should have been done eight years ago when (the) Rev. Butler first started these meetings."

Wayne Jones, chief of security for the compound, said Aryan Nations leader Rev. Richard Butler responded to the possibility of injunction by asking, "Is it illegal for white men to gather on private property?"

Douglas said the prosecutor's staff was looking at either a permanent injunction or enjoining a particular event when police intelligence sources determine that another conference is planned for the Hayden compound.

"I want him (Butler) and the public and to know we'll use all creative legal means to stop this nuisance, as these idiots are prone to violence," Douglas said.

Douglas said the 75 or so white supremacists — including about a dozen skinheads — were enough to pose a threat.

"They've come like a pack of wild dogs that do injury to people and we don't want any part of them in Kootenai County," he said. "No community deserves this."

Douglas rejected arguments that such congresses and "youth conferences" were protected by the Constitution.

"The First Amendment protects religion, speech and the ability to meet," the prosecutor maintained. "But it doesn't protect drawing dangerous people to the community."

Warden resigns after arrest on peeping charge

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho prison warden has resigned after being arrested for allegedly peeping into bedroom windows near Boise State University.

James Corwin Page, recently promoted to head the state's minimum-security work camp in St. Anthony, was arrested early Sunday morning.

Boise Police officers reported finding Page outside an apartment complex at about 1:30 a.m. Witnesses who live in the apartments told police they saw a man with a ski mask and dark clothing peering into rear windows.

One resident said he called police after seeing the man crouch behind a tree, looking into a neighboring couple's bedroom. The complex provides family housing for Boise State students.

Page, 43, a seven-year Department of Correction employee, was arrested on suspicion of window peeping, a misdemeanor. If convicted, he faces up to six months in jail and a $300 fine. Page was booked into Ada County Jail and later released on $300 bond.

Woman dies after car plunges into canal near Boise

BOISE (AP) — An Ada County woman was killed when her car plunged into a canal as she was driving home from work, authorities said.

Rescue workers pulled the body of Judy Peterson Reynolds, 36, from her car Monday evening, about an hour and a half after it was believed to have plunged into the New York Canal south of the city.

Passersby noticed her car in about six feet of water, submerged and upside-down.

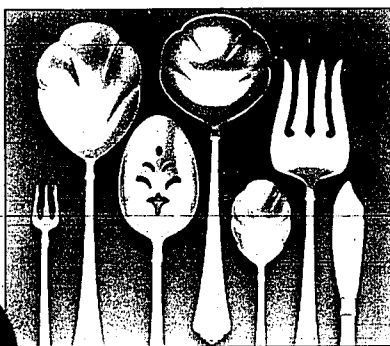

Ada County Sheriff's Department officials said it appeared the car began to veer off the right side of the road about 70 feet before the bridge. There were no tire skid marks.

DOE looks where neighbors are scarce — our backyard

While politicians and business leaders dither about the potential departure of Mountain Home's military sugar daddy, word comes that the federal Energy Department may have even bigger defense-related plans for Idaho.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins is working on a "Complex 21" plan for 21st-century bomb production, consolidating all weapons production in one or two sites.

Where? Surprise. As likely as not, the Idaho National National Engineering Laboratory.

According to somewhat speculative Washington Post reports, the Idaho site and South Carolina's Savannah River site are the most likely choices.

The reasons are readily apparent. Nuclear weapons sites in populous areas are under increasing pressure from neighboring residents. The citizens are offended by the sites' environmental and social implications.

The Energy Department therefore wants to go where neighbors are scarce — and where environmentalists and peace activists are scarce.

In such a place, the big payroll of a major weapons complex would make it king of the local economic jungle. Any objections would be shouted down.

Is Idaho the kind of gullible place the Energy Department needs for Complex 21? Well, a lot of Idaho politicians and business leaders are doing their best to persuade the Pentagon that it is.

In hopes of forestalling the vague threat of a base closure at Mountain Home, they are pointing Idaho as patriotic, defense-minded and eager for economic growth.

Watkins' discussion of a "nuclear weapons theme park" is all highly preliminary. Complex 21 wouldn't be in operation until 2015 or so — much later, if the government's track record holds. But revelations about the idea's existence should cause Idahoans to start thinking hard about the state's future, if they haven't already.

Idaho has seen that nuclear complexes don't make the best of neighbors. They pay good wages, yes. But they also make nasty radioactive messes and dawdle about cleaning them up.

And they lie to their neighbors. Habitually.

As we have said before, increased ties to the defense establishment are not in Idaho's long-term economic interest. This state's future lies in prudent long-term development of our resource-based economy.

Agriculture. Forestry. Tourism. It doesn't lie in turning our wide-open spaces over to the bomb makers and bomb droppers.

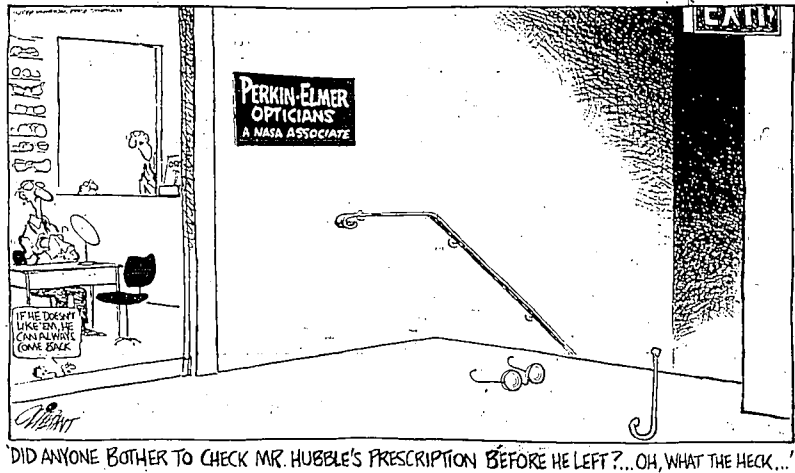

This debate is not about patriotism or national security, as some opportunistic politicians have suggested. No one, except the Soviets, is suggesting unilateral disarmament.

Unless we citizens say no, so-called vital national security activities will never go homeless. The defense establishment will always find room somewhere, preferably in places where buckles insult local residents by appealing to false patriotism.

What they are really saying is that they think we are too ignorant, rural, poor and powerless to say no.

We don't think Idahoans like the idea of being the nuclear waste dump, bomb manufacturing plant or bomb training site for far-away bureaucrats and politicians, who want Westerners to do all the sacrificing.

If these establishments are such a good idea, let those who think so propose them for their own backyards, in suburban Washington, D.C.

Sensitivity prevails in article

It is with great pleasure that I want to express to you the sensitivity that prevailed in your article on the "Tent of Miracles." I know reporting on such a controversial subject can be anything but easy to do, but your reporter is to be commended for an article well done.

The spirit that prevailed within that tent was one that only a true believer in the great God of the universe could truly appreciate. It might only have been a tent in a bean field, but the Spirit of God met us there and signs and wonders followed. God's word says, "Despise not the day of small beginnings."

Amazing Grace Fellowship will be blessed beyond measure in supporting this ministry. Many times people who are not affiliated with a church will go to such a meeting when they would not darken the doors of a denominational church. Another reason for such structures is this: Many churches will not allow the Spirit of God to operate freely from their pulpits. Wayne Guilfiliam is truly a man of God and he is a big enough man to step aside and let the power of God flow when God wants to move among his people.

Jesus said, "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." He has been lifted up — high and exalted — and the miracles done among us will serve their purpose, as the word proclaims, to minister to the unbelievers.

Thank you again to the reporter for a job well done — and I am sure you will never be same for my experience.

Farm problems lie in marketing

As a state legislative candidate, I have received the Farm Bureau AGRA-PAC questionnaire. I will answer by outlining my concerns about the agricultural economy. I am not, however, soliciting the AGRA-PAC contribution.

Marketing, in my opinion, is the part of farming which needs attention — both immediate and long term.

The agriculture producer in Idaho has an immediate problem in marketing. Judge Hagan ruled in the Hawkins bankruptcy that a dealer warehouseman could sell beans without knowledge or permission from the grower and give good title.

The ruling applies to grain as well to beans. The ruling was made to benefit the dealer, not the grower. In the Legislature as state senator, I would like to correct that ruling.

Last week, it was announced in The Times-News that the Simplot Co. had rejected the Potato Growers of Idaho contract. The story went on to note that there was no contract with any major processor.

Anyone who has been around potato contracting is quite aware that no major processor settles a contract until either Ore-Ida or Simplot settles. The potato grower should be given the tools needed to combat the cooperative effort of the processors in bargaining.

My political interest this year is primarily in "commodity marketing." To aid the farm producer, there must be great pressure toward a truly free market. A free market is more than just a slogan. A free market requires the Farm Bureau and other groups to support the farmers when they are faced with major cooperative efforts by dealers and processors, to control and drive down prices or, as in Hawkins, receive unwarranted benefits.

When a decision, such as the Hagan decision, is reached, the farmer must be supported in creating law for the producer. It would be my hope to be able to aid in this process. I would appreciate the support or your members at the ballot box.

Andrus best represents Idaho

One of the critical issues in Idaho and one of the sharp differences between the two candidates for governor centers on the question of nuclear waste storage in Idaho.

I strongly support the tough stand Gov. Cecil Andrus has taken. I have grave concern about the position(s), lack of understanding and the obvious flip-flopping of his opponent.

Andrus shut down, in late 1988 Gov. As soon as Idaho's borders to further shipment of transuranic nuclear waste from the Rocky Flats weapons plant outside of Denver, Colo. For many years, those wastes were routinely shipped to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory for "temporary" storage. The state had been promised for years that the storage would be "temporary" until a permanent repository for the waste was prepared in New Mexico.

Gov. Andrus took his decisive step after the federal government failed to meet its own desire to open the New Mexico facility. Today, the permanent repository is still not open and the borders of our state remain closed to the waste from Colorado.

I believe the governor's national leadership on this issue has broad support in Idaho and particularly in the Magic Valley area, but the current opponent has badly misread the issue. For example, last December Mr. Fairchild in a Boise news conference that if he is elected in November, he would resume taking low-level radioactive waste from Rocky Flats. The Associated Press quoted him as saying the wastes "aren't such a danger."

Now the Republican candidate is backpeddling. He has obviously seen that his earlier position was ridiculous and dangerous. He recently said he had changed his mind and would adopt the same position as the governor.

In reading his comments, I have to conclude that he lacks a basic understanding of the issues. He is out of step with Idaho and the Magic Valley on the nuclear waste issue. I would be deeply concerned if he were the man Idahoans were depending upon to take a tough, decisive stand with the federal government.

Gov. Andrus knows the issues. He has taken the tough stands. He is the man who can best represent Idaho's interests.

It's how you look at plutonium.

There he goes again! The alleged Dr. Peter Rickards continues drooping about the plutonium at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. Which is it, a half a cubic foot or 800 pounds worth? It depends on how you look at it. Two different people looking at a half a glass of water may see two different things. One might say the glass is half empty; the other can hotly contend that it is half full. Both are right. Bob Vesser correctly stated that there is approximately a half a cubic foot of plutonium stored at the INEL, but Pete says, "No, there are 800 pounds.

Wait a minute. Plutonium is more dense than gold (19.3 grams per cubic centimeter) but of plutonium metal is nearly twice as "heavy" as a corresponding volume of lead. Let's see now, one cubic foot is 1.728 cubic inches, which converts to 28,318 cubic centimeters. At 19.8 grams per cubic centimeter multiplied by 28,318 cubic centimeters and converted to pounds makes a grand total of 1,235.8 pounds per cubic foot of plutonium. Eight hundred pounds of plutonium is approximately six-tenths of a cubic foot!

Is the glass half-empty or half-full? A half a cubic foot doesn't sound as impressive as 800 pounds, 19 years of lies and Bae! The radiation from plutonium cannot even penetrate a single piece of paper, not to mention the fact that plutonium is about as toxic as caffeine in coffee.

What we do if the Department of Energy decided to store a whole pound of caffeine at the INEL? Would the Snake Oil Alliance object to this environmental catastrophe? Nope, you can't make thermonuclear war heads from coffee beans. We need an open and honest debate carried on by those who understand nuclear science and not those whose entire nuclear education seems to have come from watching "The Simpsons."

Tourists wouldn't visit park

Very seldom do I hunt the lavas where the new Craters of the Moon National Park will be, but I do have friends who hunt there. They tell me they get antelope, deer and sage hens. Soon, I am told, they hope to be able to get a permit to hunt elk.

In this new park goes through and the National Park Service closes off large areas of that land to hunting like they have everywhere else, then what is going to happen to those hunters?

I'll tell you what is going to happen to those hunters. They are going to move right in on my hunting spots.

We don't need a park out there. Very few tourists are going to want to go out there. It is just going to cost the taxpayers a lot of money and the people of Idaho a lot of grief.

All voices deserve to be heard

Just because the majority of the people believe in something, that does not mean they are right. At one time, the majority believe the earth was flat, but that did not make it flat.

Many times throughout our history, the majority has been wrong and those in the minority were persecuted for teaching otherwise. We have the Bill of Rights to help solve this problem; but even now, there are some who would like to change that part in our Constitution.

One of the biggest stumbling blocks that has caused so much suffering and so many cruel wars has been because the majority of religions have taught man was unable to make peace — thus the peacenmakers, few in numbers, are usually pushed aside.

We still have many communities where it is rather difficult to even have a letter published, unless it is written in favor of the majority.

Being in the minority is no guarantee that one is right, but their voices should also be given an equal chance for they are the ones who will be brought greater knowledge to our world.

People were foolish long ago

Only yesterday, Nick, I was reading a world history book I found in the closet about long ago when people were foolish as chickens.

There once lived a mighty king. It is said he sacrificed hundreds of people a year in return for pledges from the gods of security and safety — a high honor, a title, a burnt offering, a small sacrifice a mother paid for her family's survival. Sure enough, the nation survived.

It was also yesterday I phoned for a video off on 1991. The librarian was rather upset because those old documents hadn't been digitized and she had to hand load it. After a few seconds, the holographic synthesizer finally came on line.

You've heard that history repeats itself! Four hundred years had passed and people were still "sacrificing to the gods in exchange for security and safety."

I watched a place you've probably never heard of called Mountain Home, Idaho. They took a giant chunk of our holy world and consecrated it to the god of fire. They took up a collection and used the proceeds to build a giant altar there. Then they held a kind of instant lottery and when a person's number came up, he was sacrificed on that altar. At the end of these ceremonies, their high priests chanted a few prayers and said, "It is good."

Not everybody was happy, though. In fact, after much protesting, they almost didn't build the new temple at Saylor Creek. But the high priests raised a terrible fuss. The gods would not be satisfied. The city would be doomed. The people were so moved by fear that when the collection plate was passed again, they gave a great offering to the god, Economics.

I know what you're thinking — the more things change, the more they remain the same. Perhaps if they had known the one God, they would also know that he desires mercy, not sacrifice.

Well, Nick, here it is 2031 and folks still live in worlds of fear. We can always hope

Antiques can be found at sales

I just must respond to the article in the paper, "A Garage Sale Reality."

The most-prized antiques I have had have brought many blue ribbons were bought at garage sales.

Also, a pair of wading boots I bought at a garage sale has outlasted two new pairs without leaking. Could be they had better rubber in them.

We also have a lawn mower that I paid $20 for that is still running fine after six years of usage.

I have to admit, there are some things I bought used that were of no use, but they were mostly bought at an auction where I was unable to look over them before I bought them.

Attorney general blasts leadership of NRA

Idaho

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Republican Attorney General Jim Jones is lashing out at the National Rifle Association, maintaining its recent actions are a disservice to the gun owners it claims to represent.

Misrepresenting one candidate's record, withdrawing an endorsement of another and fighting to preserve a concealed weapons law Idaho sheriff's office is too wide open have all tarnished the NRA in Idaho, Jones said.

"None of this helps the NRA, the gun owners or the sportsmen," Jones said. "I think the leadership has gone out of control."

Sounding much like Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus did three years ago when he labeled the NRA the "gun nuts of the world," Jones denied that he was taking shots at the organization because it supported GOP Congressman Larry

Jones

Craig, who defeated Jones this spring for the U.S. Senate nomination.

NRA Executive Vice President Warren Cassidy said on Tuesday that Jones was showing his frustrations by attacking "the nameless, faceless leadership" and trying to present himself as one who is standing up for the sportsmen.

"I'm not going to comment about his name-calling," Cassidy said. "It's nothing more than a natural political defense mechanism."

Jones first post-primary confrontation with the NRA was over the new concealed weapons law, which he said was too vague to be enforceable. But he failed to convince the state Supreme Court to consider voiding the measure.

The kind of problems some law enforcement officials have warned about have surfaced with a similar concealed weapons law in Mississippi.

The attorney general said the NRA, which has opposed the proposed ban on assault weapons, should have supported him in that move. Had the law been voided, Idaho would have been left with no restrictions on carrying concealed weapons, he said, and "That would make them happier than pigs in the mud."

He maintained that if NRA's legal experts were on their toes they would have realized the situation, but "those dopes did not pick that up."

Construction of new lodge set

ISLAND PARK (AP) — Construction on a new main lodge at Mack's Inn Resort should start in early September, almost a year after the landmark was destroyed in what officials believe was an arson fire.

Resort Manager Gloria Bastian said the project should be completed by May, 1991. Bastian said the new building will be constructed atop the existing cinder block foundation.

"They have run several tests and the old foundation and cinder blocks amazingly don't seem to have been hurt by fire," she said.

The large log and cinder block building on the Henry's Fork of the Snake River was destroyed in an early morning fire Oct. 22. The lodge and contents valued at $500,000 were not insured. Fremont County Sheriff's Department officials are still investigating the blaze, but no arrests have been made.

The large rock fireplace in the main lobby will not be salvaged. "The fireplace will have to come down," Bastian said. "We had really hoped to be able to save it but it was badly damaged."

School chief: Prayer is not allowable

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Because the Idaho Supreme Court has ruled against religious instruction in public schools, Jerry Evans, state schools chief, says he seriously doubts that prayers at graduation ceremonies would be found constitutional.

The Idaho Department of Education does not have a policy against school prayer, Evans said. The state's high court in 1964 struck down a state law mandating Bible reading.

"We don't have a policy nor should we when the matter has already been settled by the courts and the Legislature," he said in a telephone interview.

The American Civil Liberties Union has threatened legal action against Madison School District for allowing prayer during graduation ceremonies and before athletic events. Attorney Stephen Pevay of the ACLU's Denver office said the organization is concerned about other instances in which the lines between the Mormon Church and the Rexburg public schools may be blurred.

The Madison School Board plans to prepare a response to the ACLU at its Thursday night meeting.

In Idaho Falls, the Bonneville School District in May halted the practice of allowing prayers to be recited at assemblies in an elementary school after a complaint by a patron with the backing of the ACLU.

The complaints followed a U.S. Supreme Court decision favoring families who alleged religious intrusion in the Rockland School District in southeastern Idaho.

Evans said no school districts had sought guidance from state educators on the school prayer issue. However, he said he would "doubt it very seriously" that the courts would uphold the constitutionality of prayer at graduation exercises.

"No one has asked directly, but I think it is pretty well understood that it goes right straight back to the Constitution," he said. "There is no need to develop a policy that is crystal clear in court decisions and court rulings."

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said he would advise school districts to continue reciting prayers at commencement exercises unless they find a clear constitutional precedent against it. He said he doesn't know if one exists.

"It seems to me to be to be dumb to be saying you can't have prayer in that type of setting," he said. "It just seems to me to be a traditional time to say a prayer as graduates are going out to face the world."

Future of White Bird elementary uncertain

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The tiny elementary school in White Bird may be saved after all.

A month after losing a second funding levy, the school district's board of trustees told White Bird patrons Monday they could keep their school open — but only if they were able to raise $7,000 in the next week.

The school, which serves about 20 students in kindergarten through third grades, would then be allowed to open for fall classes with one teacher for all three grades.

The board had voted to close the school after two override levies failed this past spring.

Missing senior dies of natural causes

CHUBBUCK (AP) — An elderly Pocatello man who disappeared from a supermarket parking lot last week died of natural causes, authorities reported.

The body of Guy Mix, 86, was found in the Arbon Valley area of Power County east of Interstate 86 by a local farmer on Monday, police said.

Mix, who suffered from a number of ailments, had been waiting in the car for his wife last week at a Chubbuck supermarket, but when she came out of the store the car was gone. She told authorities her husband, who had Alzheimer's Disease, had no driver's license or money.

Spud farmers finding this year's crop a dud

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

JEROME — Farmer Doug Lewis steps on a shovel in a neighbor's 200-acre field, and turns over the healthiest potato plant he can find. He searches the soil for spuds.

When he finally finds a tuber, it measures less than an inch in diameter.

"You could dig all day and I doubt you could find much to get excited about in here," he said.

Farmers and consultants who keep their eyes on Idaho's potatoes insist that from St. Anthony to Mountain Home, this year's crop does not look good.

"It's the worst I've seen in maybe 10 years," said Dale Stukenholtz of Stukenholtz Consulting in Twin Falls. "This is a very unusual year."

Ideally, a potato plant should boast 10 to 12 tubers, with several measuring three or more inches.

Idaho spud farmers have planted more land this year than ever — 395,000 acres, according to the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service. But consultants and farmers expect the yields per acre to be off as much as 15 percent due to late frosts, diseases, and foul-ups with agriculture chemicals.

"I think it will be off more than what we over-plant," said Jeff Bragg, of Snake River Potato Resources. He travels weekly to eastern Idaho from Jerome to consult with spud farmers on 8,000 acres.

The consultants generally agree that the Idaho crop is about 14 days behind in development. The villain most often blamed is frost.

"I have a number of fields that got frost three times," said Tim Vargas of Varco Ag Research and Consulting, also in Jerome. He consults for producers farming about 2,000 acres of spuds in the Magic Valley.

Those frosts came after a balmy April, which let farmers get way ahead on planting. But cold weather nipped the plants in the bud and wet weather rotted seed pieces, further slowing the plants' recovery.

Seed pieces that had not sprouted before the cold weather hit also rotted in the ground and in some cases they had to be jump-started with fertilizer after temperatures warmed, Bragg said.

The wet weather also made life easy on the rhizoctonia fungus. In many fields, the disease has wiped out the first set of tubers on the plants, and the second sets are tiny — less than an inch in diameter.

"It's the wrong time of the year to be setting spuds on," Lewis said as he looked at his neighbor's field. In a normal year, the plant rows would be touching each other by now. This year, 12 inches still separate the rows.

The wet weather prevented many farmers from applying herbicide when they were supposed to — before the plants emerged. Those who applied it later injured their crop, leaving giant bare spots in their fields. Those who didn't apply it at all now have weeds towering over their potato vines.

After the wet weather came more freezing nights and warm, windy days. Finally the weather changed and temperatures soared.

But now it's too hot for the potatoes. They prefer daytime temperatures around 85 degrees — not 100. The plants stop growing in high temperatures and farmers are working hard to get enough water on them.

"It's fairly typical every year that this slows down tuber development," Vargas said.

With harvest of early varieties fast approaching, Vargas worries that the crop won't be ready.

"We're going to be hard-pressed to make it," he said.

Farmers generally hope for 400 hundred-pound sacks per acre, but the Magic Valley average is only 300, Stukenholtz said.

Stukenholtz, who consults for producers farming about 50,000 acres across southern Idaho, predicted just a 5-10 percent yield reduction on this year's total crop, but Vargas and Bragg said the loss could be bigger.

"I think we've lost somewhere in the neighborhood of 40 sacks (per acre) that we can't get back," Vargas said. "If we have a long fall, we could probably get some of it back. That's kind of the iffy thing, we just don't know."

Crew battles blaze near Shoshone Ice Caves

SHOSHONE — A crew of 25 Bureau of Land Management firefighters spent Monday night containing and controlling a fire near the Shoshone Ice Caves. A total of 60 to 80 acres burned, Dispatcher Roger Kelley said.

The source of the fire was still under investigation Tuesday afternoon.

The fire was reported at 3:30 p.m. Monday, and seven trucks and 25 firefighters spent the night at the scene, 18 miles north of Shoshone, Kelley said.

At 5 p.m. Tuesday, the fire was under control, Dispatcher Pam Wallace said.

Thieves make off with $481 from fast-food restaurant

TWIN FALLS — A fast-food restaurant on Blue Lakes Boulevard North was burglarized Sunday night.

A total of $481 was taken from the Red Steer Restaurant, according to a police report. An employee reported the theft Monday morning when she arrived at work and discovered the office ransacked, money missing and the drive-up window wide open, the report said.

Police found no signs of forced entry.

North College Road expected to be open for traffic this week

TWIN FALLS — North College Road is expected to be open for traffic by Thursday, the city's economic development director said.

Running one mile between Washington Street and Blue Lakes Boulevard, the road provides additional access to the College of Southern Idaho and opens the whole area development, said the director, Dave McAlindin.

The road is new from CSI's Expo Center to Blue Lakes. From the Expo Center to Washington Street, it has been overlaid, he said.

The road cost $360,000. The city, the college and a local improvement district are each paying one-third of the price. The IID is made up of property owners in the area.

Jerome kindergarten won't be delayed, only shuffled

JEROME — Kindergarten classes will not be delayed until the new kindergarten center is built, as previously predicted, but will begin Aug. 27 with the other classes.

Kindergarteners will attend class at Jefferson and Washington elementary schools, however, until construction of the new $190,000 center is completed, Superintendent Wilbur Brown said.

It had been announced previously that kindergarten classes would not begin until the new center was finished, which is not scheduled to be done until mid-October.

"Our new business manager, Mike Gibson, is looking at a number of options for housing the Kindergarten, but we will start classes on time," Brown said. "I'm a firm believer in early childhood education, so we're going to start on time regardless."

The new four-classroom building will house only 160 kindergarten students. But with more than 200 students enrolled in the district's kindergarten, it will be necessary to have one class at Washington school for students within walking distance of Washington, according to Brown.

Morning and afternoon sessions will be held at both Washington and the new center.

Star gazers invited to guided tour of sky Friday at park

BLISS — Star gazers are invited to the Malad Gorge State Park on Friday evening for a guided tour of the sky.

"We're going to be laying out on blankets, looking up," Park Interpreter Dave Middleton said. "People should bring blankets or lawn chairs, and binoculars, telescopes and star charts if they have them."

At least seven constellations will be identified, including Scorpio, Northern Cross, Hercules, Cassiopeia and the big and little dippers.

"We'll also be looking for planets," Middleton said.

The "tour" will begin at the park's picnic area at 9:30 p.m. and will conclude at about 11 p.m. Park Manager Kevin Lynott will be the guide.

Since there are no lights at the park, those attending may want to bring flashlights, Middleton said.

The Malad Gorge State Park is located off Interstate 84 south of Bliss.

Former Twin Falls attorney chosen for appeals court

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Twin Falls attorney Tom Nelson, a specialist in Idaho water laws and public utility laws, has been nominated by President Bush to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The president, who will be in Boise on Thursday, called Nelson at his Boise office Tuesday to inform him of the nomination. The federal position has been unfilled since the death of J. Blaine Anderson.

"Tom Nelson is one of the foremost authorities on water and natural resource issues," said Sen. James McClure. "Given the sensitivity of those issues, I'm sure the 9th Circuit Court will benefit from the expertise and understanding of water rights and natural resources that Tom will bring to the bench."

Nelson, 53, has practiced law in the Boise the last three years in the firm of Nelson, Rosholt, Robertson, Tolman and Tucker. Prior to that, he practiced law for 22 years in Twin Falls. He was a member of the Twin Falls City Council and president of the Twin Falls Civitan Club.

He's a former deputy attorney general and has served on a number of Idaho Supreme Court rules committees. He was chairman of the Water Rights Committee of the National Water Resources Association from 1987-88.

The nomination first must be approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, then the full Senate.

McClure said he would press to have Nelson confirmed by the full Senate before Congress recesses this year.

Twin Falls woman charged with prostitution

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police arrested a woman on a charge of prostitution Monday night, the second prostitution arrest in the city in 16 months.

Judy Anne Mendoza, 38, 537 Third Ave. E., pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge and was released on her own recognizance by 5th District Magistrate Judge Melvin C. Edwards after a Tuesday court appearance.

Twin Falls Police Detective Ron Robertson said the arrest follows a month-long investigation. He declined to comment on whether other prostitutes work in Twin Falls or if police plan additional arrests.

On Monday, Robertson responded to an advertisement in Sooper Ads and made an appointment for a massage for another officer, according to court papers. Robertson did not disclose the officer's name.

Robertson arranged the meeting for 7 p.m. at a local hotel. Robertson and another detective camped in the next room, listening to the exchange on recording devices.

The woman arrived shortly after 7 and instructed the officer to completely undress and lie in bed, Robertson said. She

Wendell board bans tobacco smoking in '91

By Terrell Williams
Times-news correspondent

WENDELL — Tobacco smoking will not be allowed in Wendell school buildings beginning in 1991, according to a new smoke-free policy adopted by the School Board on Monday.

"The board believes that tobacco smoke in the school and work environments is not conducive to good health," the policy states.

"Recognizing the negative impact on nonsmokers of others smoking, the board declares all public buildings operated by the board, and all spaces within them, to be officially designated smoke-free environments," it reads.

Board Chairman Don Fowler said the smoke-free policy was prompted by suggestions received in a recent community survey.

"People commented about putting a no-smoking policy in the school," he said. "In a large part, our action was a result of concern."

Reservoir dries up; 400 farmers to seek help

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — It's only mid-July and farmers served by the Big Wood Canal Co. are out of water.

"Right now, it looks like we'll be shutting it down tomorrow evening or Thursday morning," Manager Dick Oneida said Tuesday.

That means many of the 400 farmers on the canal will have to apply for emergency assistance from the U.S. Agriculture Department.

The shortened irrigation season is the second in just three years — the water disappeared July 1 in 1988, Oneida said. Before that, the most recent July shutoff was in 1977.

The canal system gets its water from

Magic Reservoir, a lake on the Big Wood River. The river is fed by snowmelt and runoff from the Pioneer and Sawtooth mountains. Last winter's dry conditions left the reservoir at just 18 percent of capacity in March.

Cattle, hay and grain are the major products here and most of the USDA's emergency assistance programs are geared to Diplomat makes plea for understanding of S. African changes

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As a young boy growing up in South Africa, Rafique Gangat suffered the discrimination of apartheid, the 40-year-old white-imposed system of separating the races in his homeland.

Laws that prevented blacks from going to the same beaches and restaurants, or living in the same areas as whites, applied to him as a South African of Indian descent.

Today, Gangat travels the western United States as vice consul for the South African Consulate General in Beverly Hills, Calif. He brings a basic message: Apartheid must collapse. South Africa is moving toward becoming a democratic country with every citizen empowered to vote.

It might seem odd that he would represent the government that has oppressed him, but Gangat does not think so.

"When changes started occurring in South Africa, everyone had to take a stand. I re-evaluated my role and committed to doing something for my country," Gangat, 34, said in an interview Tuesday. "I made a decision to be part of the change."

Those changes started in the early 1980s with the granting of full property rights for blacks, legalization of black and other non-white trade unions, abolition of the prohibi-

E911 committee takes case to area counties

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents can expect to be hearing more about the enhanced 911 emergency telephone system in the next few months. But the campaign will be more like they slow down of a faucet than a bucket of cold water in the face.

The E911 citizens' advisory committee met in the Twin Falls County office building Tuesday night and mapped a strategy for convincing people of the emergency response system's merits. The consensus was to keep the campaign simple.

The effort to educate voters largely will be done with a lot of eyeball-to-eyeball contact, said committee co-chairman Roy Raymond.

The committee hopes civic organizations, schools, churches and county fairs all will be brought into the campaign to help. As many as 20,000 brochures detailing the technology and how it should be printed and could be handed out at county fairs, Radio, TV and newspaper public service announcements will be used.

Many people are confused about E911 and speed dialing, said Stephen Hargen, the committee co-chairman. The campaign should clarify for people that E911 is superior to speed dialing, he said.

Enhanced 911 uses computers to route emergency calls to the proper fire, police or medical agency and automatically tells the dispatcher the address of the caller.

People also should know that E911 uses the latest electronic technology and that the system can be used by the Lifeline System many senior citizens use, Hargen said.

The committee will send representatives to Lincoln, Jerome, Gooding and Twin Falls counties to present private citizens' about E911. Committee members hope those people will in turn tell others about the system. Commissioners in those four counties have agreed to give voters the chance to approve a $11-a-month charge to help finance E911.

"The issue sells itself when people are aware of it," Hargen said after the meeting. "By mid-September it should be a fairly visible issue for most people." Public service announcements probably will start in September, he said.

Committee member Dick Boyd said the campaign should focus on one issue to the voter. "What is it going to cost you?"

For $11 a month a voter can get E911. That should be the bottom line of the campaign, Boyd said.

Smoking

In March, a fire at the high school was started in a desk drawer where a cigarette ashtray was kept. Damage from the blaze was estimated at $100,000.

Fowler said there is no doubt that some of the concern from the patrons was initiated by the fire.

"I think that's kind of obvious," he said.

But the health factor and also the current trend to make public buildings smoke-free are the main reasons for this policy, Fowler said.

Board members agreed that, as an educational organization, the district should provide both effective educational programs and a positive example to students concerning the use of tobacco.

The policy will not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1991. Board members said this will give the staff and members of the public some time to accept and prepare for the new restriction.

Board member Clarence Sparks said he works in a government office building in Twin Falls where smoking was recently banned. A smoker himself, Sparks said the first few days of work were difficult, but in the end, the no-smoking policy has been good for everyone.

In Wendell, Sparks said, "The employees will just have to accept it."

The board also considered banning chewing tobacco at school, but decided to wait and see if it is a problem.

In other business:

The board voted to write an enrollment policy to control the number of students from outside district boundaries that can attend Wendell schools.

Superintendent Larry Manly said that without such a policy, Wendell will be an open-enrollment district.

Board member Elaine Daniels said a closed policy is needed for the elementary school because it is already overcrowded. And High School Principal Doug Skinner said grades eight and 10 also would be impacted if enrollment was not controlled.

de-segregation of suburban train services, among other reforms. In the past 10 months, President Frederik de Klerk has furthered the climate for change by lifting the national state of emergency and releasing from prison the deputy president of the African National Congress, Nelson Mandela.

While these are necessary social and economic changes, the most important reform, a political one, is yet to come — a new constitution, Gangat said. All legitimate factions — the ANC, the government, the opposition parties in the parliament, representatives of South Africa's Indian community and Inkatha, which is headed by the leader of the Zulu tribe, can discuss the constitution. But Gangat would not guess when the job might be completed.

The constitution must ensure everyone has the same rights, Gangat said. "We don't want any domination whatsoever. In the past, the whites have dominated. We don't want it replaced by black domination."

"It is a difficult task to get everyone to the table," he said. The groups might have the same goals, but their means of achieving them differ vastly. The ANC leans toward socialism, while Inkatha wants free enterprise, for example.

South Africa remains a racially divided society. While some of the restrictions of apartheid have been dismantled, black South Africans still cannot vote in elections for the country's parliament and are prohibited from living in many areas of the country.

South Africa's move toward democracy has not come purely because the government is good at heart. Economics and a fast-growing black population have forced changes.

The country saw an economic boom in the late 1970s. As employment grew, laws that restricted mid-

The board decided to hire an engineering firm to take core samples of the high school library's concrete foundation to determine if it is stable. The district is considering a bond issue — perhaps in September — to ask voters for money to build a new high school and use the present high school as a middle school.

Trustee Gray Solomon said the district, before it asks voters to pass a bond, should know the condition of its existing buildings and be prepared to give voters an accurate picture of the building situation.

Manly said he will contact several engineering firms and will accept the lowest estimate to have the work proceed.

Manly said asbestos was removed from the old boiler and the outer walls were found to be seriously bowed and in even worse condition than the inside walls. Last fall, the school's insurance company condemned the boiler because of the dangerous, warped condition of the inside wall. The district passed a $98,000 bond to purchase a new boiler and have asbestos insulation removed.

Manly said the new boiler has been installed and is ready for use. The district may have a salvage company remove the old boiler to give school janitors more storage space.

The board voted to follow the recommendation from an architect's study and dismantle and remove a crumbling brick chimney at the high school before school begins.

Brenda Bunn, Grace Koehler and Joanne Davidson Draper were hired to teach at the elementary school. Scott Simmons was hired as a half-time vocational-agriculture teacher.

Aaron Tybo was hired as a regional avon program director. Tybo will serve and receive pay from all schools in Jerome and Gooding counties, as well as the College of Southern Idaho. Manly said this is a new program that is partially funded by a state grant. He said Tybo will work to improve and coordinate the area's avon classes and related activities.

This set change in motion. While progress slowed in the early 1980s by what Gangat called violence, instigated by the ANC, most hotels and restaurants were opened to non-whites by 1986. Other changes followed. Coupled with an urban black population that will outnumber whites 5-to-1 by the year 2000, apartheid cannot last, he said.

Trade with South Africa is off-limits in many countries; many others, including the United States, have imposed economic sanctions against the country because of its official racial policies. Under pressure from anti-apartheid groups at home, many American companies with investments in South Africa have pulled up stakes and gone home.

Gangat has been in the United States since 1987, but in the fall he will return to South Africa. He enjoyed the visit to Idaho, his first, and said the countryside reminds him of his hometown, Weenen.

Idaho and Weenen have something in common: they both grow potatoes, he said.

"Driving down here (from Boise), I thought I could be driving through familiar territory. I could be at home," he said.

Independent Meat pays penalty for returned checks

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Independent Meat Co. has agreed to pay $2,500 in civil penalties for writing checks that were returned for insufficient funds during last summer's company reorganization.

"We weighed the cost and the time required to litigate through the courts and we settled," company President Pat Florence said Tuesday.

The U.S. Agriculture Department originally sought $3,500 from the company. The government settled for less after the company filed an answer to the complaint, Florence said.

In addition to alleging that checks paid to ranchers were returned for insufficient funds in July 1990, USDA said Independent failed to pay promptly for livestock and that the company used hooks and rollers that were not standardized.

Florence said the company would keep better records in the wake of USDA's allegations, but he declined to discuss the merit of the allegations, citing the company's agreement not to admit or deny the charges.

"What we'll have to do is document more clearly what we're doing," he said. "The burden is on us to demonstrate that we're complying with the regulations."

"According to a USDA press release, the company was ordered to keep records that future all transactions regulated under the Packers and Stockyards Act.

In a March interview, Florence refused all the charges against Independent as outdated "technical violations."

The returned checks were written on a revolving line of operating credit secured by the company's inventories and receivables. Sometime after the checks were written, but before they were cashed, the company's assets shrank, reducing its line of credit, Florence said in March.

During that time, many independent meat workers and pulled back from fresh-meat marketing in four western states.

Florence also said in March that the company occasionally failed to pay promptly for cattle due to circumstances beyond its control, such as government holds on payments due to brand investigations and health examinations.

Under terms of the order, the company agreed to stop issuing non-sufficient funds checks and promised to pay promptly for livestock. The company also agreed to only use standardized hooks and rollers, the USDA press release said.

Rollers are hooks that move on an overhead rail. Carcasses are weighed on either hooks or rollers. Federal rules say they must be of uniform weight so scale operators can subtract the same amount from each weighing to account for the hook.

In March, Florence said some of the hooks USDA judged to be non-standard were too light to even show up on company scales. Nothing was subtracted from weights taken using such hooks, he said.

The Packers and Stockyards Act is intended to assure free and open competition and to prevent unfair and deceptive practices in the marketing of livestock, meat and poultry.

Florence said the slimmed-down company is doing well and no sale of the company is contemplated.

Boy drowns after falling off horse in river

LEWISTON (AP) — A 7-year-old Lewiston boy drowned late Monday afternoon after falling from a horse into the Clearwater River.

The boy and his stepfather appeared to be riding a horse near the edge of the river about 5:30 p.m. when the horse stepped off a dropoff and fell over sideways.

A Nez Perce County Sheriff's Department official said both riders were thrown into deeper water and the stream took them farther out to shore, but was hampered in his rescue attempts by the heavy work clothes and boots he was wearing.

The accident was reported to the sheriff's department by a witness who was across the river. The stepfather was searching for the boy when deputies from the sheriff's department, officers from the Idaho State Police and rescue crews from Lewiston and Clarkston responded to the scene.

The boy was pulled from the water at about 7 p.m. He was taken to St. Joseph Regional Medical Center at Lewiston, where he was pronounced dead.

ward those producers.

Judy Black, Lincoln County executive director of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, said barley and other grains will probably produce adequate crops, but the alfalfa fields won't.

"I suppose that they'll get a second cutting, but it will be a reduced yield," she said of alfalfa growers.

Fifteen people have already applied for a piece of $200,000 made available for building emergency water supplies for livestock. About half the money is gone.

"Most of them were for wells or deepening wells and that uses it up quite fast," she said.

About 40 farmers have applied for emergency livestock feed assistance. To be eligible, farmers must document a potential loss of at least 40 percent due to drought.

Feeding hay and grazing livestock on set-aside lands has not yet been approved for Lincoln County by USDA, Black said.

Black and the Lincoln County commissioners tried to get the county declared a disaster area by USDA earlier this year, but were unsuccessful.

Initially, the company expected water to last only until July 1, but late-rain rains allowed farmers not to irrigate for several days in May and June, stretching water supplies in the reservoir by about two weeks.

John A. Allen

TWIN FALLS — John Alfred Allen, 80, of Everett, Wash., died Monday, July 16, 1990, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center following an illness.

He was born July 29, 1909, in Straudford, Texas, the son of Alfred and Mary Allen. He attended military school and attended Midway Prep College and received a business degree from the University of Texas. In 1929 he moved to Long Beach, Calif., to be with his brother. He later married Gladys L. Sommer on Oct. 2, 1936, in Twin Falls and then returned to Long Beach where he worked in the mail yard during World War II. Following the war, he moved to Amarillo, Texas, where he began working for the Internal Revenue Service. He was later transferred to Dallas, Texas, in 1956 and returned there in 1976. He also worked as an advocate for the IRS and was also an accountant. He then moved to Everett in 1979.

Allen was a member of the Airstream Travel Club known as the "Wally Beam". He was also a member of the Methodist Church and the Republican Party in Everett.

Surviving are his wife of Everett; two daughters, Marilyn Louise Burke of Walnut, Calif., and Caroline Ann Curtis of Everett; one son, John Alfred Allen II of Everett; one sister, Marjorie Ann Blankner of Grange, Texas; seven grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by one brother, two sisters and one granddaughter.

The funeral will be at 10:30 a.m. Thursday at the Christian Center in Twin Falls. Burial will be at 11:30 a.m. Thursday at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Viewing will be from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. today at the Hansen Mortuary.

A private memorial service will be held at a later date at the Methodist Church in Everett. The family suggests memorial contributions be made to World Vision International. Contributions may be left at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E., Twin Falls 83301, or given to funeral chap staff at the funeral.

Simplot will protect City of Rocks stage stops

OKALEY (AP) — A historical stage stop along the California Trail will be protected at the City of Rocks National Reserve near Okaley under an agreement with the J.R. Simplot Co.

Reserve Superintendent Dave Pugh said Monday Simplot has agreed to fence four log structures at the Kelton Road Stage Station, one of many stops for postal workers, miners and stage coach passengers along the California Trail from the late 1850s until 1883.

The National Park Service's pact with Simplot is the first of several planned to protect historical features of the California Trail at City of Rocks, Pugh said.

"The California Trail and Kelton Road were major transportation routes that fostered settlement of the West," Pugh said.

"There are traces of these routes here in the City of Rocks National Reserve, and we want to preserve them — to help our sons and daughters understand their Idaho heritage."

"We are very pleased that the J.R. Simplot Co. has agreed to work with the National Park Service to protect these remnants of our history."

Pugh said the stage stop lies on Simplot's 650-acre tract in the southern portion of the popular 14,000-acre climbing, historical and geological preserve.

Fencing will protect the log buildings from getting damaged by livestock, he said, and the park service will foot the bill.

The Simplot Co. also has agreed to allowing an archaeological study of the property, he said.

The City of Rocks National Reserve carries a special designation because about half of the park is private land, and the state Parks and Recreation Department owns 640 acres in the middle of the preserve.

Many of the rocks on which California Trail settlers inscribed their initials and the trail itself are located on private ground.

To protect those historic features, Pugh said the park service hopes to acquire about half of the 7,000 acres of private land in the park. Of the nine miles of California trail in the park, for example, less than one-half mile lies on public land.

Pugh described the stage station as being "in very bad shape."

The four log cabins were remodelled over the years to serve homesteaders and people who ranched the property in the early 1900s, but they have not been occupied for years.

David Chance of the University of Idaho conducted an archaeological survey of the property last summer, and a more complete archaeological excavation will occur in the summer of 1991, Pugh said.

"Last summer, (Chance) found far more than he ever expected," he said. "He found some pottery that was very, very old — older than anything that's been found in this part of the state."

The park service hopes to install the fence by late summer and post some interpretive signs by next summer, he said.

Burley Council hires firm to compare building, repair costs

By Donna Schorzman
Times-News correspondent

No completion date for the study was set.

The council also considered a request from Charlie Chambers, director of Trans IV bus service, for a $3,600 subsidy to help defray the company's operating expenses in Burley.

Chambers said Trans IV incurred a $7,000 debt in the Minicassin area last year.

The bus service provides transportation for Health and Welfare Department and Vocation Rehabilitation clients, senior citizens and school children. Other area cities are also considering the subsidy to keep the bus service.

The council decided to table the request until they can get further information and have more time to discuss the issue.

The council also voted to allow the owners of a manufactured home to keep their recently moved home in north Burley as long as they improve it to bring it up to the 1986 zoning commission standards by Nov. 1.

Joyce Davis, co-owner, said city officials approved installation of the home in 1986, but the home has been moved only recently.

For more than a year, handicapped citizens have spoken at City Council meetings and protested outside the current two-story City Hall about the building's lack of handicapped access.

Because the building is 70 years old, it also lacks other safety features now required for public buildings, such as adequate emergency exits and a sprinkler system.

Last year the council considered putting an elevator in the building to make it accessible to the handicapped, but it didn't budget enough money for the project and couldn't afford to install the elevator.

Since then, some council members have expressed concern that remodeling the old building might be more expensive than constructing a new one.

Minidoka County teachers snare state grants

By Barbara Ward
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Minidoka County teachers snared two school improvement grants funded by the 1990 Idaho Legislature, according to information given to the Minidoka School Board Monday.

The Legislature developed a $250,000 Experimental Education funding pool during its last session. The funds were available to individual schools and teachers on an open, competitive basis.

The board learned last month that Minidoka teachers had written 12 separate grant proposals for the funds. However, 37 proposals total were submitted, requesting more than $3 million for special projects.

West Minico Junior High teacher Tess Melan earned a $2,000 grant to develop a life skills and adult role model program for students in conjunction with the business community.

And Memorial School teachers Tamara Young, Patricia Boller, and Doris Wright received $4,600 to continue developing an outdoor science program; the grant money will fund the program's aquatic component.

State Fiscal Director Jim Fisher also told the board that the U.S. Energy Department has approved a grant application for energy conservation measures to be taken at Heyburn and Acquia elementary schools.

According to Fisher, the DOE will provide $46,599 of the $89,799 cost to install replacement windows, insulated panels and gymnasium wall insulation at Heyburn Elementary, and to install floor insulation at Acquia.

New Board Member Bill Hepworth, sworn in at the meeting as the new Zone 5 trustee, brought up several concerns for board consideration: the availability of school policy manuals to district patrons and the lack of a policy for having movies in the classroom.

Snapp informed Hepworth that at least three policy manuals are available to the public at each school; each principal and teacher representative has one and one is in the library. Several manuals are also available at the district office.

And the board will consider a policy regarding movies in the classroom at a future meeting. In the meantime, Snapp said that a form is available for patron complaints regarding textbooks, library books, movies and other materials. This form draws the building principal's attention to any problems which may exist, he said.

In other business, the board:

- Presented outgoing trustee Bob Harman with a plaque of appreciation for his six years of service on the board. Board Chairman Russell Holland said that "the ultimate beneficiaries" of Harman's service "have been the students." Hepworth replaces Harman.
- Elected Harold Short as its chairman and David Eliason as vice chairman of the Board for the 1990-1991 school year. The board reappointed Audrey Neiwerth as clerk-treasurer and Roger Ling as school attorney.
- Voted to continue meeting at 7:30 p.m. on the third Monday of each month. During the school year, the board will alternate its regular, monthly meetings between schools, meeting once at each of the district's nine campuses, and the summer meetings will convene at the district office.

Concurred with Snapp's recommendation that Lewis Roberts be named principal at Big Valley Middle School, and Joseph Youren be hired as principal at Pershing Elementary School.

- Declared an emergency situation for filling a district social worker position. This allows the district to hire someone for a year although the applicant may not have state certification. In addition, West Minico has openings for: one teacher for reading, English and science teacher; an English and reading teacher
- Considered writing a new policy to allow bus mechanics to use school facilities to work on personal cars as a fringe benefit. Board members requested that Transportation Director Oliver LaRoque amend the existing policy for future approval.
- Issued contracts to Bill White to teach band at Minico and West Minico and to Scott Spencer to teach English at Minico.
- Considered specifications for both elementary and secondary computer labs which will be put out to bid for the August meeting.
- Declared five school buses as surplus and will put them out to bid for the August meeting.

Fires still burning out of control near South Fork of Salmon River

CASCADE (AP) — Fire bosses dispatched hundreds of firefighters into rugged west-central Idaho backcountry Tuesday as wildfire continued burning out of control within a mile of the South Fork of the Salmon River.

Over 340 firefighters dug in on the southwestern flank of the 450-acre Mormon Creek Fire, trying to reclaim "ever" the limited advantage they had lost the night before.

"We lost all fire lines last night so what progress they're making will be limited," Boise National Forest spokesman Frank Carroll said. "It's hot, dry and thunderstorms coming in, which will be squirrelly winds. If they're wet storms, good. If they're not, that's bad."

Over 200 reinforcements joined the lines Tuesday as the Forest Service made an all-out effort to rein in the fire that erupted Sunday in wind-blown embers left over from a storm last week.

"There's no gray area in here," Carroll said. "This is a black situation. We're doing everything we can to take care of it."

CALDWELL — The 1990 Idaho Open golf championship, presented by the Snake River Chapter of PGA and J.R. Simplot Company, will be held Aug. 3-5 at Caldwell's Purple Sage golf course. Some openings still remain in the both professional and amateur flights. The low Idaho professional will earn an exemption to the $100,000 Ben Hogan Boise Open, underwritten by Albertson's, which will be played at Hillcrest Country Club in Boise this fall. Six Idaho professionals already have qualified for the event through a special qualifying tournament at Elkhorn Resort. Those qualifiers include John Watson, Caldwell; Mike Hamblin, Twin Falls; Ron Ptacek, Boise; Don O'Neil, Idaho Falls; Bob Campbell, Boise; Tim Parson, Elkhorn and John Godwin, Jackson, Wyo.

Cowboys' title hopes still alive after sweep

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Second baseman Jon Kosen was the lone Twin Falls player without a hit as the Cowboys opened a Southern Region "A" American Legion doubleheader against Idaho Falls with an 11-0 shutout Tuesday. But it was Kosen's two-out single in the third inning of the nightcap that provided the go-ahead run as the 'Pokes rallied to sweep the twinbill, 11-4. Twin Falls, which completes its Southern Region regular-season schedule by hosting Minico in a single nine-inning game at Frontier Field on Monday, thus improved to 9-3 while the Russes, who take on league-leading Poacello in a doubleheader tonight in Idaho Falls, slipped to 3-7. If Poacello wins either of those games or if Twin Falls loses to Minico on Monday, the Rebels will claim the regular-season title and the top seed in the regional tournament that begins here July 26.

Third baseman Shane Quessnell's first-inning base hit scored Jeff Ames, staking Twin Falls to a 1-0 lead in the second game, before the Russes managed their first score of the evening. That came about in the second inning when Brandon Spiers walked and romped home on Matt Campbell's triple off Cowboy starter Jason Pearson. Campbell broke the tie on a passed ball before the frame ended and the Russes capitalized on two hits and an errant throw to move out to a 4-1 advantage after their third at-bat. That proved to be all the visitors would get as Matt Horner came on to pitch the last four frames, surrendering only a one-out double to Jeremy Harris in the Idaho Falls seventh while striking out three and walking one. The Cowboys sent 10 batters to the plate. Please see SWEEP/5

West ends South streak in state BCI semifinal

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The West reached out of an 0-3, two-day funk to come within a step of the top as the Idaho Basketball Congress International boys' state tournament reached its peak Tuesday night. The West, composed of players from the Boise area, rode the rebounding and late-inning punch to the 8-and-four quarters Bishop Kelly High School into a 69-66 over previously unbeaten South and earned the right to play the North for the title this morning.

The Magic Valley-based South team and the East will square off in the consolation game at 10 a.m. at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium with the championship to be settled at 11:30. That matchup was set up when the North overcame the East 74-67 in Tuesday's other semifinal. After the finals, the 12 players will be named to the Idaho team by the vote of 14 coaches. The Idaho team will participate in the national final in Phoenix.

Two ball-handling mistakes and the lack of defensive rebounding finally overcame the shooting edge the South had displayed in taking the round-robin round 3-0. The first ball-handling mistake was not keeping it with Malad guard Justin Jones enough in the late third and fourth quarters. The second was not keeping it away from Potter, who canned 14 of his 20 points in the fourth period and all but two of those as a direct result of offensive rebounding. The South never came close to repeating the dominating 30-point thumping it pinned on the West in the first round Monday. In a very slow start, the West led 10-7 at the end of the first quarter and increased that to 28-19 by intermission. But Jones took over in the third quarter, sparking a quick comeback with nine points. That rally finally culminated when Jerome's Brett Walter turned a steal into a

Kade Wilson, left, of the South team passes the ball away from the West's Vaughn Blair. Buhl's Kade Wilson traded follow shots. But Potter then reeled off three field goals and a free throw while Greg Lords of Capital. Please see BCI/5

Colts' QB Chandler threatens camp boycott

The Associated Press

Quarterback Chris Chandler, already rattled by the Indianapolis Colts' pre-draft trade to get rookie Jeff George, says the team will withhold a $50,000 bonus because his offseason workout program wasn't done in "good faith." Chandler wants to renegotiate his contract and has threatened to boycott the start of training camp on Thursday. Chandler said it was Coach Ron Meyer who told him the money might be withheld but said he thought the decision may have come from higher up in Colts management. His contract calls for the bonus if he works out regularly in the offseason. The quarterback said Meyer indicated he didn't work out in "good faith." Sources at the Colts' complex said team officials were upset by what they perceived as Chandler's bad attitude after the George trade.

"All I know is, I was there all 16 weeks," Chandler said. "I lived in Indy from February to July. I was there fulfilling what it said in the contract." Broncos He's tired of having sand kicked in his face at the Super Bowl, so John Elway has reported to camp looking like a linebacker. The Denver quarterback, who in the past has played at around 200 pounds, reported in at 213 pounds after spending the offseason lifting weights. He recently bench-pressed 285 pounds. "I think he's easily the strongest quarterback in the league," strength coach Al Miller said. The Broncos are coming off a 55-10 defeat to San Francisco, the third time in four years they've been blown out in the Super Bowl. "We've won the AFC championship Please see CAMP/5

Games, athletes to begin 17 days of trying to break even

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Jackie Joyner-Kersey tries to break the world heptathlon record, Javier Sotomayor tries to break the 8-foot high-jump barrier again, and the Goodwill Games try to break even. Against the backdrop of sweeping political change in Eastern Europe and a less curious sports world, the question has become: Can the Goodwill Games survive past 1990? "It's an interesting question," Pete Cava of The Athletics Congress said. "The answer? It's hard to say." With the 17-day games scheduled to begin Friday, organizers need to sell more tickets quickly to avoid losing money, and TBS cable network, owned by Goodwill Games innovator Ted Turner, expects to lose as much as $13 million on telecasts. "We've had a lot of hurdles, and a lot of skepticism, and a lot of mountains to overcome," Seattle Organization Committee president Bob Walsh said. Despite world-class fields that included athletes from the Soviet Union and Cuba, as well as the United States, events such as men's basketball and boxing were not sold out in advance. As of midweek, only slightly more than 700,000 of 1.1 million tickets were sold. That represented about $11 million in sales. Organizers say they need to sell $17 million to break even on the $65 million games. TBS knew it would lose money, it just didn't know how much. First, it estimated $10 million, then $13 million. That's probably acceptable, though. TBS lost $35 million at the first Goodwill Games in 1986 in Moscow. "It's kind of an international Olympic Festival," Cava said, "and it took that meet about five times around before it really took off." The Goodwill Games were born after two straight boycotted Olympics — 1980 in Moscow and 1984 in Los Angeles. Not since 1976 in Montreal had East met West in an all-out sports extravaganza ... until 1988 in Seoul, that is. So much for curiosity.

Injury forces 'The Boz' from team

The Associated Press

KIRKLAND, Wash. — Brash Brian Bosworth's once-promising football career looks over after just 24 NFL games. The man known as "The Boz" was supposed to be a modern-day Dick Butkus for the Seattle Seahawks. Instead, he was a major liability because of injuries. Bosworth, a middle linebacker who signed a 10-year, $11 million contract after he was taken as the first selection in the 1987 supplemental draft, was waived Tuesday by the Seahawks. He failed a physical examination because of a right shoulder injury, the club said. Team doctor Pierce Scranton had examined Bosworth on Monday. Bosworth, 25, a two-time All-America at Oklahoma, is not expected to be given a chance with another NFL team because of those ailing shoulders. There has been a lot of confusion about the details of Bosworth's contract, which was worked out by former Seahawks general manager Mike McCormack and Bosworth's New York-based agent, Gary Richard.

Brian Bosworth Played only 24 NFL games. It was reported this week that Bosworth could collect $7.3 million tax free with $9.8 million remaining on his contract. The report said documents showed that in 1987, the year Bosworth signed his contract, $75,000 of his $300,000 salary for the year was deducted so the Seahawks could act as the agent in buying an insurance policy that guaranteed his $8.5 million in base salaries through 1996. A source said Bosworth paid taxes on the $75,000. Because his money was used to buy the policy, he can collect any resulting payments as distributions free from income taxes, the source said. IRS Publication 17 states that disability payments from insurance for which an employer paid are taxable, while payments from jointly purchased insurance are subject to tax only on the proceeds from the employer's payments. Since the Seahawks used only Bosworth's money to purchase the insurance, payments to replace as much as $7.3 million in salary would be exempt from taxes. Bosworth would still have to pay taxes on a $2.5 million signing bonus that was deferred, and on $65,000 he would get this year in industry compensation under the NFL collective bargaining agreement. Bosworth's insurance policy was with Lloyd's of London. His contract continues to escalate from $600,000 this year to $700,000 next year and $1.4 million in 1996.

King vs. Douglas dispute ends in split decision

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Heavyweight champion James "Buster" Douglas can't get Don King out of his hair. A settlement Tuesday of their acrimonious lawsuit gives Douglas the go-ahead for his first title defense — against Evander Holyfield in Las Vegas on Oct. 25 — but allows King to remain as the champion's promoter in future fights. The split decision means Douglas' first fight since his Feb. 10 knockout of Mike Tyson will be at The Mirage, which was a co-defendant in the federal lawsuit brought by King. But Holyfield's promoters said Tuesday they want the fight held on its original date, Sept. 21, and only a court order will change their minds. Either way, King will be shut out of that fight, The flamboyant promoter will then be back in business — albeit without any friends in the Douglas camp — for the current champion's subsequent fights. Douglas had hoped to oust King completely. The settlement was announced at U.S. District Court in Manhattan, where the suit was in its third week of trial.

Mets move within 1 game of Pittsburgh in National League East

HOUSTON (AP) — Dwight Gooden won his seventh straight start and Kevin McLeay went 4-for-4 as the New York Mets beat the Houston Astros 6-2 Tuesday night. The victory moved the Mets within one game of the frontrunning Pittsburgh Pirates in National League East.

Gooden (10-5), who hasn't lost since June 2, gave up seven hits, struck out 10 and walked three over 7 2/3 innings. John Franco finished for his 19th save.

The Mets had 16 hits, including two doubles and a homer by Howard Johnson. New York has won 20 of its last 26 games and 10 of its last 15 on the road.

Giants 6, Pirates 3

San Francisco Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 Tuesday night. Robinson (6-1), traded to the Giants by Pittsburgh in August 1987, was facing the Pirates for the first time since going 0-3 with an 8.20 ERA against them last season. He struck out four and walked one.

Reds 6, Expos 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Scott Scudder struck out a career-high nine in an unexpected start Tuesday night, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Scudder (2-2) got a last-minute call when left-hander Danny Jackson couldn't get his shoulder loose in the bullpen before the game. Scudder allowed eight hits over 6 1/3 innings, including solo homers by Dave Martinez and Andres Galarraga.

Braves 14, Phillies 10

ATLANTA (AP) — Jim Presley hit two of Atlanta's four homers as the Braves outslugged the Philadelphia Phillies 14-10 Tuesday night to break a three-game losing streak. Presley hit a solo homer in the first inning and a three-run shot in the fourth, his 14th of the season. Ron Gant and Francisco Cabrera each hit two-run homers for the Braves.

Both teams had 15 hits.

Cardinals 3, Dodgers 0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bryn Smith won his first game in six weeks and Pedro Guerrero had two doubles and two RBIs as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-0 Tuesday night. Fernando Valenzuela, facing the Cardinals for the first time since throwing a no-hitter against them on June 29, gave up six hits in six innings. Five of the hits were doubles.

Guerrero doubled off Valenzuela (7-8) to lead off the second, and had a two-run double in the fourth.

Cubs 7, Padres 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Shawn Boskie allowed six hits in 5 2/3 innings and capped a six-run, fifth inning with a two-run double Tuesday to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 7-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

It was the third straight win for the Cubs and the 15th loss for the Padres in their last 18 games.

White Sox win on Oakland in AL West

DETROIT (AP) — The Chicago White Sox have learned winning doesn't always come easy. Dan Pasqua's two-run homer capped a three-run sixth inning rally as the White Sox beat the Detroit Tigers 7-3 Tuesday night.

Perez gave up leadoff singles to Lou Whitaker and Tony Phillips. Alan Trammell scored Whitaker with a double and Perez walked Cecil Fielder to load the bases. Larry Sheets hit into a double play to score a run and Dave Bergman followed with a run-scoring triple.

Then, the White Sox started to chip away.

Indians 4, Athletics 2

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Cory Snyder doubled to lead off the seventh inning and scored on Jerry Browne's sacrifice fly to break a 2-2 tie and send the Cleveland Indians on to a 4-2 win over the Oakland Athletics Tuesday.

Cleveland starter Greg Swindell (5-5), won for the first time in eight road starts this year, walking one and striking out five in 6 2/3 innings. The Indians are now 8-0 in Swindell's last eight starts and he is 3-0 with five no-decisions since June 6.

Doug Jones pitched the last two innings for his 26th save. The Indians broke a 23-inning scoreless streak with two unearned runs in the first off Mike Moore (8-8), whose three-game winning streak ended.

Boston 1, Minnesota 0

BOSTON (AP) — Minnesota became the first team in major league history to pull off two triple plays in one game, but it wasn't enough to overcome eight shutout innings by Tom Bolton as the Boston Red Sox beat the Twins 1-0 Tuesday night.

The victory was Boston's second in 10 games and the first by a starter in 12 games and kept the Red Sox in a first-place tie with Toronto atop the American League East. The Jays played a night game in Seattle.

Bolton (3-0) allowed five hits, struck out six and walked four. He left after walking the leadoff batter in the ninth and Jeff Reardon finished for his 16th save.

Angels 8, Brewers 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Dante Bichette's three-run homer capped a four-run fifth inning as the California Angels beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-1 Tuesday night.

Winner Kirk McCaskill (7-6) allowed four hits and survived three errors in seven innings. Willie Fraser finished, allowing two hits.

Orioles 5, Rangers 3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pete Harnisch retired 22 consecutive batters after a shaky start to earn his first victory in nearly a month as the Baltimore Orioles handed the Texas Rangers their third straight loss, 5-3, Tuesday night.

Harnisch (8-5) allowed three runs, four hits and struck out eight in 8 2/3 innings. After a single by Rafael Palmeiro in the first inning, Harnisch did not allow another base runner until Gary Matthews had off the ninth with a single. Julio Franco doubled with two out in the ninth and Greg Olson relieved and gave up a two-run single to Palmeiro before getting the final out for his 20th save.

Royals 10, Yankees 7

NEW YORK (AP) — Bo Jackson hit three homers and drove in seven runs as the Royals left the Yankees in a night game in the sixth inning after injuring his left shoulder while diving for a fly ball as the Kansas City Royals beat the New York Yankees 10-7.

Jackson hit two-run homers in the first and third innings off Andy Hawkins (1-8) and hit a three-run shot off Hawkins in the fifth. The third home run gave Jackson 19 for the season and 100 for his career.

American narrows Tour de France gap

LUZ ARDIDEN, France — The yellow jersey of the leader seems to be all that separates American Greg LeMond from a second consecutive victory in the Tour de France.

And that seems to be just a matter of time — five seconds to be exact. Up and down the hills of Tuesday's mountainous 16th stage, LeMond pulled into second place and within easy striking distance of overall leader Claudio Chiappucci of Italy and established himself as the clear favorite with five stages left in the three-week race. LeMond finished second in Tuesday's 133.9-mile leg from Blagnac to Luz Ardiden, six seconds behind Spain's Miguel Indurain.

Championship entry deadline nears

TWIN FALLS — Entries will close Saturday for the Idaho State Closed Tennis Championships, the state championships of Idaho tennis, which will be held here next week.

The July 27-29 tournament, which is open only to Idaho residents, will include competition in U.S. Tennis Association ratings 3.0 through open in singles, doubles and mixed doubles for both men and women.

The tournament will be sponsored by Jensen Jewelers. Entry forms are available at Jensen's or at most Twin Falls sporting goods stores. Further information can be obtained by phoning Bruce Graf at 734-8122 or Andy Crane at 734-6497.

Garrison to run at Rocky Mountain

BILLINGS, Mont. — Recent Jerome High School graduate Charlotte Garrison has signed a letter of attend to attend Rocky Mountain College and compete in track.

Garrison, who was hampered by injuries in her senior year, still placed sixth in the state Class A-2 200-meter dash and sixth the 800. During her junior year, Garrison was the 400-meter A-2 state champion and was a member of the 1,600-meter state championship relay team.

Her best 800 time is 2 minutes, 22 seconds, while her best 400 time is 57.9.

Garrison intends to major in equestrian studies at Rocky Mountain.

Goose Creek 10-k slated for Saturday

OAKLEY — The annual Goose Creek Runoff will be held here Saturday. The 10-kilometer race will start a mile past the spillway of the Oakley Dam and follow a course down to the Oakley City Park where many of the activities of the town's Pioneer Days celebration will be in progress.

There will also be a one-mile children's race beginning at about 9 a.m. for kids under 12. Check-in time is 8:30 a.m.

The 10K race will begin at 7:30 a.m., with check-in at the city park at 6:30 a.m. and the bus leaving for Oakley Dam at 7.

Entry fee is $10 per runner, with T-shirts for all runners and other prizes donated by local businesses for the winners.

There will be six different age groups in the 10K race. Further information can be obtained by phoning Janis Hardy at 862-3609.

Senior at Twin Falls High wins honors

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. — Incoming Twin Falls High School senior Matt Fuller took three firsts and many records in The Athletics Congress regional Junior Olympics here last weekend.

Fuller had a time of 14.2 seconds in the 110-meter high hurdles, a 10.84 in the 100-meter dash and 22.7 in the 200.

Also qualifying for nationals, slated July 24-30 at Lincoln, Neb., were his sister Amy Fuller and brother Michael. Amy won the 100- and 200-meter dashes and the long jump while Michael was third in the triple jump.

Mathews among hall of fame inductees

BOISE — Burley coaching veteran Bob Mathews and three other well-known Idaho names will be inducted into the Idaho High School Activities Association's Hall of Fame at a special banquet Aug. 7 at the Red Lion Riverside in Boise.

Joining Mathews in the state's highest honor will be Dwight Church of Lewiston, Leon Green of the University of Idaho and Ellis Williams, Snake River.

Two Magic Valley men, Jerry Diehl of Jerome and Julius Domowitz of Castleford, will receive the Fourth District distinguished service awards.

Tickets for the event are available by advance sale only at $17.50 per person.

Russett starter Kirk Scoresby, who issued 10 walks before moving to the outfield with two gone in the fourth inning, then balked Ames in with the tying run. Quessnell, who had walked, went to second base.

Scoresby nearly escaped the inning with a tie after back-to-back groundouts, but walked Jim Horner before allowing Kersen's hit up the middle. Jim Hyde contributed a one-bagger before a throwing error upped the Twin Falls margin to 7-4.

In addition to his timely triple, Ames reached base four times and scored on each while Quessnell, who also doubled in the fifth-inning run, paced the attack.

The Cowboys feasted on the offerings of Idaho Falls sophomore Speirs for 11 hits, including four doubles, in the abbreviated opener.

In all, eight Twin Falls batters had at least one hit again, led by Quessnell who knocked in three runs but also and scored as many times on two hits, and Danny Molynoux, who drove in two with a pair of doubles.

Riley Boyd picked up his ninth victory against three losses in that outing, allowing the Russetts only one single in each of the first three innings.

when it reduced the deficit to 89-85 but the East controlled things the rest of the way.

For the South the story line again was tie shooting because the North seemed to have the best of it on the boards and getting the ball inside.

The North led narrowly until the second half started. Then suddenly, the South got a hot hand and pulled away quickly.

In the first six minutes it stretched ahead by 17 points, but the North chopped to within 16 by the rest period. The lead stayed at double-digits but in the closing minutes the South wouldn't stop putting up the outside jumpers and three-pointers and by now had cooled off.

That allowed the North to reduce the deficit to 74-66 with 1 minute, 43 seconds remaining before Cook was able to get his charges to start wasting clock. The major difference in the game saw the South hit 18 of 25 free throws while the North made the only two it attempted.

Summer drinks should be frosty

When it gets hot, I can't even think. For some reason my brain shuts off in hot, hot weather. I used to think it was the humidity, but that's the only thing I know lately and my brain synapses still aren't sending any crackling messages.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Luckily, I know it's bound to happen at least once a summer so I did some pre-wetting research to help you survive. A sense of style can get us through these doggy days until the air is cool enough to think again.

One writer I've enjoyed is Alexandra Stoddard. She's written two books about living a beautiful life. The basis for these books is to make the most of life's little moments. Enjoy them by setting your own standard of style.

OK, it's hot and you want something cool and delicious. Why not make it a treat for all the senses? Have chilled wine glasses or tall mugs in your freezer. Set a decorative tray and set in a cool special spot...maybe in a car with the air-conditioner on high?

Have fresh fruit in decorative slices to garnish your drink. I like sipping summer drinks through a straw — especially out of an oversized wine snifter. Alexandria suggests a silver one, but the supermarket ones are all I can find and they make it special.

Here are some cool, non-alcoholic drinks you can make. You'll need a blender. Have your glasses chilled. You could add rum or wine if you wish.

FRUIT PUNCH SLUSH

- 6 ripe bananas
 - 1 6-ounce can frozen lemonade (thawed but undiluted)
 - 1 12-ounce can frozen orange juice (thawed but undiluted)
 - 1 46-ounce can/bottle pineapple juice, chilled if possible
 - 3 cups cold water
 - 2 cups sugar
 - 2 2-liter bottles lemon-lime carbonated beverage (like Sprite or 7-up)
- Garnish with orange slices
- Combine the banana and fruit juice concentrates in blender. Blend until smooth. Now combine this mixture with the pineapple juice, water and sugar. Now you can pour this into plastic freezer containers (your choice of size). Freeze.

When ready to serve, thaw slightly until mushy and add the carbonated beverage. Serve in a special glass and garnish with orange slices.

All together this will make 24 8-ounce servings. You could freeze the slush in containers just big enough for one or two servings at a time.

GINGER SYRUP FOR HOMEMADE GINGERALE

- 6 ounces fresh ginger root
 - 2 cups water
 - 1/4 cup sugar
- Peel and chop (finely) the ginger. You should have about a cup. Bring the ginger and water to a boil in a non-reactive saucepan (use enamel or stainless steel, don't use aluminum). Simmer for 5 hours. Set aside for 12 to 24 hours. Cover with a cloth.
- Strain through a sieve lined with 2 layers of cheesecloth. Squeeze the pulp in the cloth to get all flavors. Discard pulp.
- Return juices to saucepan, add sugar and bring to a boil over moderate heat, stirring constantly. Boil gently for 5 minutes, skimming off any froth. Cool, strain and put into a capped bottle. To use, mix about 1 tablespoon of syrup to 6 ounces of cold soda water.
- A teaspoon or so also perks up a jar of iced tea or fruit punch.
- This keeps in refrigerator for about 3 months.

SANGRIA A LA GRAPEFRUIT

- (6 servings)
- 3 cups chilled grapefruit juice
- 1/4 cups chilled white grape juice
- 1 orange, sliced
- 1 apple, peeled and sliced
- 1/4 cups melon (honeydew preferred) chunks
- 1/4 cups chilled club soda

Famous chefs help celebrate peanut butter's 100th birthday

Take a peek behind the scenes at some of America's finest restaurants. You'll find celebrated chefs at work, slicing, simmering and stirring up fabulous culinary creations. Then look closer and discover the basis of their fame.

Today's chefs are cooking their way into the hearts of America step by step, using a sound recipe for success. Begin with only the best ingredients of the season. Add one pound of culinary skills and another pound of food know-how to preserve the natural flavors and nutrients. Pepper with individual style and creativity. Blend in freshness, sprinkle with herbs from the garden and sparkle with spice. Bake or bubble with experience and dedication. Arrange on your best china with artful simplicity and splash with unexpected imagination. Then sit back and enjoy the compliments.

The first step to such successes? Ask any chef...it's the mixing of a good recipe with America's freshest and most popular ingredients. In honor of peanut butter's 100th anniversary this year, chefs shared their favorite peanut butter recipe.

With the freshest of ingredients, the right equipment and these great recipes, you will soon be cooking just like some of America's most famous chefs.

SINCLAIRS AT THE JUPITER BEACH HILTON

The Jupiter Beach Hilton is nestled on its own private oceanfront in Palm Beach County, Fla. Inside, Sinclairs serves kabobs skewered with beef, shrimp, or chicken, plus a variety of garden-fresh vegetables. Chef Gayna Alves often marinates and bastes them with this peanut sauce.

PEANUT SAUCE WITH BEEF SATÉ CHICKEN YAKATORI OR SHRIMP AND PEPPERS

- 2 cups creamy peanut butter
 - 1/4 to 2 cups chicken broth
 - 2 tablespoons honey
 - 2 tablespoons light soy sauce
 - 2 tablespoons lime juice or to taste
 - 1 tablespoon chili oil or 1 tablespoon peanut oil and 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
 - 2 tablespoons minced garlic (6 medium cloves)
 - 1 tablespoon minced fresh gingerroot or 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
 - 2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro or parsley
 - freshly-ground black pepper, to taste
- Whisk together all ingredients except black pepper in a 2.3 quart tight sealing plastic bowl. Add pepper to taste. Sauce should be just thick enough to lightly coat kabobs. Cover and refrigerate until ready to use. If sauce thickens, add additional chicken broth. Keeps up to 3 weeks in the refrigerator.
- Makes about 1 quart of sauce.

No-cook diet keeps you cool in the summer

By Pat Dailey
Chicago Tribune

No cooking in the '90s — it could be a rallying cry for those who flock to the freezer for their meals, picking up buns for breakfast, fudge brownies for dessert and everything else in between. But this time, it's not.

Instead, it's the no-cook diet, a clever way to beat the summer heat when the mercury soars.

Make no mistake, you're not about to read about a reducing plan, nor a five-days-to-a-beautiful-body system. This is strictly a ploy to keep the kitchen agreeably cool this summer.

Though it hasn't been documented by any official study, just about anyone will tell you that there is a definite inverse correlation between the temperature and the interest level in cooking. Heat and cooking don't always go together. Sometimes they just downright clash. Even the most steadfast cooks feel an inkling of rebellion at the thought of walking into the kitchen and turning on the stove when the temperature hovers around the 95-degree mark.

Just how does one cook without cooking?

Of course, no-cook cooking is a kind of oxymoron, a contradiction in terms. Cooking, most often is thought of as the process of adding heat to food, whether it be by the grill, the microwave oven or the stove. But meals can be prepared, assembled, put together, all without the seasonally annoying addition of heat.

The no-cook diet isn't a primer in the consumption of raw foods, nor a treatise on the glories of sushi or steak tartare. Instead, it is a clever look at ways to sidestep the stove and still have some great tasting fresh meals that are prepared at home.

The ground rules (which are arbitrary to some extent): No cooking by mechanical forces. The stove won't be turned on.

Try these recipes to keep from overheating

Pat Dailey
Chicago Tribune

The following recipes, developed by Pat Dailey in the Chicago Tribune test kitchen, will help keep the heat out of your kitchen without sacrificing the flavor of good food.

ORANGE PAPAYA SOUP

- Preparation time: 10 minutes
- Yield: 2 1/2 cups
- 1 large ripe papaya
- 2/3 cup fresh orange juice
- 1/4 cup each: buttermilk, sour cream

- Finely grated rind of 1/2 lime
 - Juice of 1 lime
 - 1 tablespoon each: honey, sweet white wine
- Fresh cilantro sprigs and additional sour cream for garnish

1. Peel papaya and remove seeds. Cut into chunks and puree in a food processor or blender. Add orange juice, buttermilk, sour cream, lime rind and juice, honey and wine and mix until smooth. Soup can be served immediately or refrigerated overnight. Serve with sprig of cilantro and small dollop of sour cream.

SANTA FE SALAD

- Preparation time: 20 minutes
- Yield: 4 to 6 servings
- Dressing:
 - 1 jalapeno or serrano pepper, minced
 - 6 tablespoons sherry vinegar
 - 2 tablespoons alfalfa
 - 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
 - 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt or more to taste
 - Freshly ground pepper
- Salad:
 - 1 medium Vidalia, Maui, Walla Walla or Texas Sweet onion
 - 1 medium zucchini

- 1 small red pepper
 - 1 celery stalk
 - 1 can (15 or 16 ounces) black beans, rinsed, drained
 - 1/2 cup sweet corn kernels
 - 3 ounces Monterey Jack cheese, diced
 - 1 cup cilantro leaves
 - 1 ripe avocado
- Red leaf lettuce for serving
1. For the dressing, combine all ingredients and mix well.
 2. For the salad, dice the onion, zucchini, red pepper and celery into pieces that are roughly the size of the beans and corn.

Fish-oil benefits are unproven, FDA tells industry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration has told about 60 manufacturers of fish oil capsules to stop claiming that their products can help lower cholesterol and the chance of heart attacks, an agency spokesman said.

"After consulting experts at the National Institutes of Health, the agency sent letters to the companies telling them "that although there have been some studies that fish oil at some level might be useful for cholesterol lowering, for these amounts (in typical capsule use) there wasn't sufficient evidence for them to make these claims," said FDA spokesman Bill Grigg.

The action arose out of an earlier FDA warning to stop claiming that the capsules were good for arthritis and other disorders. Through their trade associations the companies agreed, but argued that the cardiovascular benefits were well-enough established to justify the claim.

It was that argument that the agency has now rejected, Grigg said.

Several studies in recent years have suggested that fish oils containing a component called omega-3, such as those from mackerel and herring, can lower blood pressure and cholesterol, reduce damage from inflammatory processes such as arthritis and lower the chances of other problems such as diabetes and heart attacks.

Already, the FDA and others agree that "there are studies that show fish diets may be helpful," Grigg said.

"We said it's quite conceivable" that further research might justify an assertion that the capsules provide health benefits, Grigg said.

But such results are several months "if not more" down the road, he added.

It is the assertion of a health benefit that makes the fish oil capsules qualify as

Firefighters appreciate help with street dance

Well, the dust has settled as another chapter in the Castleford Fire Department history book has come to a close. It is a good feeling for everyone involved to be a part of such a beneficial event as was the annual Castleford Fire Department Street

Dance. So, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many people for their generosity with everything from ticket printing to equipment items and everything in between. If not for the outstanding support of these community-minded people, it would not have been possible to purchase the radio communication equipment that we now own as of July 1. All too often, I have overlooked people on my side who have been real supporters of the department, like Harold De Boer, Donna De Boer, Brenda Thomson and Greg Gandiaga, Shawn Crowley, Denny Reese, the rest of the firemen and the Castleford City Council. Thank you all.

Grandparents' gifts to grandson aren't very grand, says mother

DEAR ABBY: Well, it happened again. Our son's birthday has come and gone without any acknowledgment from the grandparents on my husband's side. (My parents always remember.)

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

How do I deal with the pain it causes Junior when these grandparents forget his birthday? It's not as though they didn't know it was coming. Last Christmas, I gave each member of my husband's family a large calendar with all the family members' birthdays and anniversaries circled. And just this last Sunday, my husband's parents stopped by for a visit, and I reminded them that Wednesday would be Junior's birthday. When they said they remembered, we felt relieved that our calendar had worked.

DEAR MOM: Had you not primed Junior to feel that he had a gift coming, he wouldn't feel the pain of disappointment. And if you want to protect Junior from the pain of disappointment, you would be wise to place less emphasis on gift-giving, which is apparently very important to YOU.

I suspect that your having given marked calendars to family members to "help them remember" special occasions might have been more resented than appreciated. Now would be an ideal time to teach Junior that nobody "owes" anybody a gift — so he should not expect one.

DEAR ABBY: My hand is shaking so much I can hardly write this. Last night I had a dream that was so real I thought it had actually happened. I had the wildest, most heavenly lovemaking session with a fellow I had a secret longing for in high school.

Abby, I'm 35 years old, happily married and the mother of three great kids, and I never even dated this guy who appeared in my dream. I haven't even seen him since high school and have no idea where he is.

What is wrong with me? I love my husband very much. He's the only man I have ever slept with, and it never even entered my mind to have sex with anyone else. Am I losing my mind? Why would I dream of anything so bizarre? It all seemed so natural and right in my dream. I didn't feel a bit guilty until I woke up. I probably should confess this to my priest, but I'm too embarrassed. Please help me.

— ALL SHOOK UP

DEAR SHOOK: Don't feel guilty. You are not responsible for your dreams, only your actions. Thoughts of this long-forgotten high school crush have been deeply buried in your subconscious, and for some unknown reason were awakened. You've nothing to confess. Don't give it another thought.

CONFIDENTIAL TO NEEDS TO KNOW IN SHERMAN OAKS: I would be in no hurry to marry a man who absolutely refuses to take a blood test. Instead of trying to find out where couples can marry without a blood test, find out why he's so opposed to taking one.

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet. Send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Valley happenings

Habitat for Humanity meets

TWIN FALLS — Habitat for Humanity will meet at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Valley Christian/Our Savior Lutheran shared church facility, 1708 Heyburn Ave. E. Anyone interested in helping the working poor with new buildings and repairs is invited. Habitat for Humanity is an international, non-profit organization given a high profile by former President Jimmy Carter, who donates two to four weeks each summer to work with the group's projects.

QRU plans 2-day yard sale

HAZELTON — Valley Quick Response will hold a yard sale Friday and Saturday at Hazelton Memorial Park. The sale will start at 8 a.m. and end about 8 p.m. each day. Proceeds will help the unit purchase an ambulance. Anyone wanting to donate items to the sale should contact any Quick Response member or call Shirley Schutte at 825-5044 or Joey McCaslin at 829-5781.

Foster-parent course offered

WENDELL — A Foster Parent pre-service training course for people interested in becoming foster parents is slated from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on July 21 and July 28 at the United Methodist Church, East Main Street. For more information, call Pharis Stanger at 734-3901 or E.I. Williams at 837-6124.

The Times-News welcomes news of community events. Send material to The Times-News Valley Happenings, PO Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303-0548. Please submit news at least a week in advance and include a phone number where you can be reached.

Vietnam memorial dedication planned

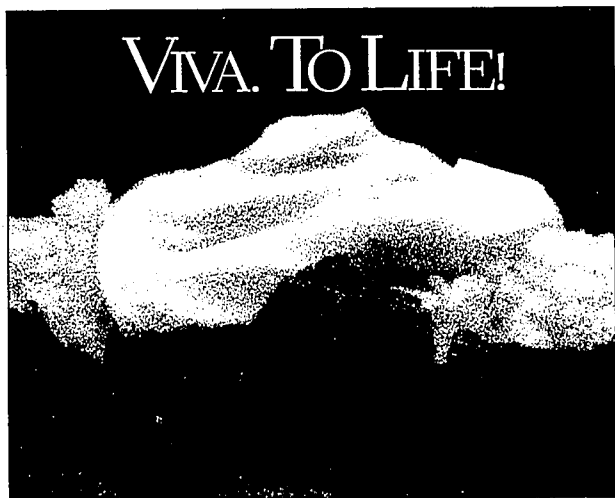

IDAHO FALLS — An Idaho State Vietnam Veterans Memorial will be dedicated next month in Idaho Falls, and information on the 243 people listed on the monument is still being sought for a future book.

Nancy Shamel of Freedom Bird Inc., coordinators of the book, says the committee would like a brief biography and photos of each of the people honored on the monument. Those listed lost their lives in the war or are prisoners of war or missing in action.

Families who haven't yet sent information should mail it to Freedom Bird, P.O. Box 50354, Idaho Falls, ID 83405. Anyone with questions should call Shamel at 529-9408 or Gary George at 529-2151. The monument will be dedicated Aug. 4, with an open reception at 2 p.m. and dedication at 3 p.m. at Freeman Park.

Add some life to the foods you love with VIVA Lite Lowfat Sour Cream without adding a lot of calories. Each one-ounce serving has only 40 calories — a third less than ordinary sour cream — and 50% less fat! We've taken all that out, and we've still left you wonderful VIVA taste.

So now you can cut down on the guilt and the calories while you enjoy VIVA Sour Cream on a baked potato or in your favorite recipe. Use it in that fantastic dip you used to make. Now you can make lower-calorie versions of all of them!

While you're thinking about cutting calories, cut out this coupon. You'll save 15 cents off the price of a 16-ounce container of VIVA Lite Lowfat Sour Cream. It's the sour cream that's full of life.

Drinks

ice cubes
Combine all the fruit and juices then add the club soda and ice cubes. Serve in icy wine glasses out of a frosty pitcher for optimal results.

MELON SLUSH

(3 servings)
2 cups melon cubes (any kind and/or combination)
1 cup chilled milk
6 tablespoons frozen concentrated orange juice (thawed but undiluted)

2 cups crushed ice
refresh with melon balls and orange slices
Combine all ingredients (except garnish) in a blender and whisk until slushy and smooth (about 30 seconds). Pour into serving glasses and serve immediately.

1 1/2 to 2 tablespoons honey club soda crushed ice
fresh berries for garnish
In electric blender, combine the grapefruit juice, strawberries and honey and blend. Strain this slush over ice in 2 tall glasses. Add club soda to fill and stir.

FRESH BERRY FREEZE

(2 servings)
1 cup grapefruit juice
1/2 cup fresh (or frozen) strawberries

Enjoy!

Nancy Joy Jones welcomes comments on recipes. Her address is 10201 S. Rupert, Idaho 83350.

Recipes

Combine in a large bowl with the beans, corn, cheese and cilantro. Just before serving, peel and dice the avocado and add to the salad along with the dressing. Mix gently and adjust the seasoning. Serve on lettuce leaves.

GAZPACHO

Preparation time: 15 minutes
Yield: About 10 cups
1 large cucumber
2 large tomatoes
1 each: small green and red pepper
1 large Vidalia, Maui, Walla Walla or Texas Sweet onion
2 medium celery stalks
1/3 cup fresh basil leaves, julienned
4 cups tomato juice
1/2 cup balsamic vinegar

2 tablespoons each: fresh lemon juice, olive oil
1 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1. Split the cucumber in half lengthwise and remove the seeds. Core the tomatoes, cut in half crosswise and squeeze gently to remove the seeds. Dice the cucumber, tomatoes, red and green pepper, onion finely. Combine in a bowl with the remaining ingredients and mix well. Refrigerate at least 30 minutes before serving.

1/2 cup whipping cream

1. Peel the kiwi and pineapple and cut into 1/2-inch cubes. Arrange in a single layer on a baking sheet lined with waxed paper. Place in freezer until solid.

2. Combine frozen fruits and sugar in a food processor. Process continuously until mixture is completely smooth and fluffy, about 2 minutes, stopping as necessary to scrape down the sides of the processor. With processor running, add egg white through feed tube and mix 1/2 cup plain nonfat yogurt until combined. Serve immediately. Sherbet can be frozen though it will not have the same smooth consistency. To restore the texture if it has been frozen, soften slightly and return it to the food processor.

Peanuts

BEEF SATÉ:
Beef tenderloin, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
assorted fresh vegetables such as: cherry tomatoes, 1/2-inch slices zucchini or yellow squash, blanched; whole mushrooms, blanched; unpeeled red-skinned potatoes, par-boiled; scallions (green onions), use thick white part and little of green; snow peas, blanched

CHICKEN YAKATORI:

boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into thin 4x1-inch strips brussel sprouts, blanched 3 minutes whole canned water chestnuts, drained

SHRIMP AND PEPPERS:

jumbo fresh shrimp, shelled and deveined, leaving tails on red, green and yellow bell peppers, sliced, seeded, cut into 2-inch squares and blanched 1 to 2 minutes small white onions, peeled and blanched 3 minutes

Skewer beef, chicken or shrimp alternately with vegetables on metal or bamboo skewers. Place skewers in a 14x10x4-inch tight sealing plastic food container; cover with peanut sauce. Marinate covered in refrigerator at least 30 minutes, turning 1 or 2 times. Grill skewers, preferably on closed grill, 4 to 5 inches from medium-hot coals, or broil. Baste occasionally with extra peanut sauce and turn frequently until the desired doneness is reached. Approximate grilling time for Beef Saté is 15 to 18 minutes; Chicken Yakitori, 10 to 12 minutes; Shrimp and Peppers, 8 to 10 minutes.

ELIZABETH ON 37th

Savannah, Ga. Elizabeth Terry's specialty is Southern creations with a fresh new flair. Based on her research of generations of old Georgian recipes, her restaurant is a turn-of-the-century mansion is often considered one of the best on the Georgia Coast. Here, one of her latest creations: a light but creamy peanut dressing for fresh fruit salads.

1/2 cup creamy peanut butter, preferably fresh ground
1/2 cup apple cider or apple juice
3 tablespoons honey
1/2 cup plain nonfat yogurt
Place peanut butter and apple cider in bowl of food processor or electric blender; process 1 to 2 minutes until blended. Add honey and yogurt and continue processing 1 minute more, or just until combined. To store, cover and refrigerate in a 1.6-pint tight sealing plastic food container. Keeps up to 1 week in refrigerator. Serve dressing over your favorite fresh fruits of the season. Sprinkle with unsalted peanuts and garnish with mint leaves and raspberries, if desired.
Makes about 1 1/2 cups dressing.

THE COMMISSARY RESTAURANT

Philadelphia, Pa. The Commissary is the heart of Philadelphia lies The Commissary. It's not one eating establishment, but a complex of many: a gourmet cafeteria, a USA Cafe, a restaurant featuring South-west cuisine with a taste of Louisiana, plus The Market - a convenience store. Chef Steven Poses' creation of these Peanut Butter Oatmeal Cookies has grown into a daily favorite. Over 50,000 are mixed, dropped, baked and sold a year.

PEANUT BUTTER OATMEAL COOKIES

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda

1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 cup unsalted butter, softened
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup packed light brown sugar
2 large eggs
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups old-fashioned uncooked oatmeal (not instant)
2 cups peanuts, preferably unsalted
2 cups dark raisins, optional

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly grease cookie sheets. In a medium-size bowl, mix the flour with the baking soda, salt and cinnamon. In a large mixing bowl, beat the butter, peanut butter and both sugars until creamy, using a wooden spoon or an electric mixer. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Blend in milk and vanilla. Stir in the flour-cinnamon mixture until blended. Fold in the oatmeal and peanuts, plus raisins if desired. Drop by rounded teaspoonfuls 1 1/2-inches apart onto cookie sheets. Bake 10 to 12 minutes until lightly browned. Let stand 2 minutes on cookie sheets, then remove to wire racks.

Makes about 8 dozen 2-inch cookies.

CHOCOLATE-LOVERS' PEANUT OATMEAL COOKIES

Fold in one 12-ounce semi-sweet chocolate morsels with the oatmeal and peanuts. Omit the raisins.

drugs. The manufacturers can continue selling their capsules as foods without health claims if they can convince the agency that the products have been used as foods in the past and are "generally recognized as safe," the spokesman said.

This might be easily done for some, because "for cod-liver oil and some of the others, there is a good record," Grigg said. Cod-liver oil forced down the throats of millions of protesting young children for decades because of its vitamin D content, is not one of the oils high in omega-3.

not even to boil water for iced tea. Pretend it doesn't work. The microwave oven won't be called into action. For these purposes, you may as well store crackers and cookies in it. The barbecue grill won't be started up. And we won't be pulling out our copy of "Manifold Destiny," last summer's guide to cooking under the hood of a car — we just can't see the point of driving to Paducah to cook a couple of fish filets.

As for marketing, there'll be no cheating here either. The carry-out counter and salad bar at the grocery store make it pretty easy for the most interested anti-cook cooks to avoid the kitchen altogether.

We won't succumb to that call, however. Whatever the supermarket can make can be made better at home, though fully cooked smoked meats such as salami, salami or two, or smoked salmon (or any smoked fish for that matter) as well as cooked shrimp. But bottled condiments are well within reason. After all, who makes their own ketchup, even in the cooler days of autumn? And canned goods are used with no more or less frequency than usual.

ers. For an unexpected tang, try soaking a few black peppercorns in vodka for several days then grinding the pepper into the soup.

The sprightly tang of buttermilk makes it a great base for fruit soups. More indulgent types turn to sour cream for an ineluctably rich rendition. The near-lack sweetness of sauternes wine goes well with peaches or apricots. Fresh mint is a nice counterpoint to just about any fruit soup.

No-cook main courses are dominated by salads, near-perfect summer meals which are light and refreshing. Myriad salads fit the no-cook requirements. Other than the occasional addition of a hard-cooked egg or real bacon bits, most green salads never have required a stove. But for the most part, they aren't considered as substantive main courses either. Those looking to make a meal of a green salad certainly can add a few select, no-cook ingredients. Additional fresh vegetables add bulk as well as texture and interest. All manner of cheese, from cubes of Cheddar to creamy crumbles of goat cheese boost the nutrities. For an unexpected tang, try soaking a few black peppercorns in vodka for several days then grinding the pepper into the soup.

Not cooking but eating well — at home — is a laudable goal for summer and one easily attained via the no-cook diet. While it won't necessarily cause any excess pounds to disappear, it will make summer easier to swallow.

tional status. Bits of ham or smoked meat go well and achieve the same goal.

• And what about desserts? Ice cream comes to mind first, homemade for the purists, store-bought for the rest of the world. There will be no homemade chocolate sauces to gild it, no caramel to drip over them. But wait! Pureed fruit sauces are a dazzling option. Raspberries, blackberries and strawberries are especially good. They can be sweetened with confectioners' sugar as needed and enlivened with a discreet dash of liqueur if one is so inclined.

• Those same fruits plus a generous dash of sugar can be made into fresh fruit ices. While many frozen fruit desserts are made with a simple syrup of sugar and water boiled together, superfine sugar and a food processor serve just as well.

Not cooking but eating well — at home — is a laudable goal for summer and one easily attained via the no-cook diet. While it won't necessarily cause any excess pounds to disappear, it will make summer easier to swallow.

Search targets comedic couple look-alikes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hundreds of aspiring Lucys waited idly in a line outside the Los Angeles Convention Center Monday to catch a television movie about the duo's early career.

Some women dyed their hair red. A few men wore white suits. Most every faux Lucy wore a 1950s-style dress and heels. Several looked just like the zany comedian. Others bore little of a resemblance to Carol Burnett.

And one couple danced the rumba while waiting for their names to be called.

"I'd like to play her, but it's so hard to fill her shoes," said Diana Lynn Pfennig, who drove from her make-over salon in San Jose to perform Lucy's famous drunken sales pitch for the alcohol-laced Vita Meta Vegam nutritional supplement.

AP Laserphoto
Kymberly Tucker and Mary Carter wait to audition for Lucy role.

In addition to false eyelashes and the heavy makeup she'd been wearing since 2 a.m., Pfennig brought a stage prop: a bottle of multivitamin liquid extract from which she drank during her two-minute monologue. "This stuff tastes awful," she said after her performance, wiping her mouth.

The CBS movie will cover the late Lucille Ball's and Desi Arnaz's lives from when they met in 1940, while making the movie "Too Many Girls," to 1951, the year when the "I Love Lucy" premiered. It will be broadcast in February.

A woman named Taboo Castle ("I was born there") dyed her hair red and drove 300 miles for a stab at the lead role.

"It's just a rinse so I can wash it right out," she said, fingering her temporarily red hair. For her shot at stardom, Castle performed a song from the musical "A Chorus Line" as Lucy might have interpreted it.

"I feel like I'm really her," said Castle, who came from San Martin, Calif., to audition for the role.

A woman named Taboo Castle ("I was born there") dyed her hair red and drove 300 miles for a stab at the lead role.

Castle also planned a trip to Disneyland as part of her Southern California visit.

Her performance, while unusual, was scarcely the most offbeat. One desirous Desi delivered a stream-of-consciousness monologue. Ricky Ricardo as scripted by someone like Hunter S. Thompson. But wasn't one the early auditions, there among a Passo. The first Lucy in line arrived at 3 a.m. after finishing her shift as a waitress at a late-night Los Angeles rib joint.

"What are my chances? Not great," said Randy Aguirre, an engineer who missed a staff meeting to audition for the part of the Cuban band leader. "There are like tons of people here."

Aguirre — who recently costarred in the movie "Ghetto Blaster," playing a gang member who burns a cat, raps and studies acting.

Like many of the hopeful thespians pursuing a slim chance to be in "Lucy and Desi: Before the Laughter," Aguirre was at the CBS Television City studio as much for the Hollywood happening as he was looking for a big break.

"My name's Rick. So why not play Ricky?" said Rick Brady.

"I spent about a week rehearsing, and then you forget your lines when you get here," said Sheila Barbour, a professional photographer and resume hand that pictures taken by an instant camera. On her resume, Vikky Seavers listed a performance on "St. Louis Illustrated."

Tony Rael, who was born in Havana and came to the United States when he was 2, was one of the few performers the producers wanted to see again. He sang the show's theme song for his tryout. "I love Desi Arnaz," Rael said. "He's a hero to the Hispanic people."

Producer Larry Thompson, who will have auditions in Miami on Wednesday and in New York on Friday, said the movie will be a "loving-but honest portrayal" of the relationship between Lucy and Desi.

He deflected criticism from daughter Lucie Arnaz, who said, "I believe that the climate is wrong to try and tell the parents' story accurately no matter who tells it."

CBS Entertainment President Jeff Sagansky said: "We're not going to desecrate all the wonderful things Lucy and Desi did for CBS."

Hepburn, neighbors fight property tax bills

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Meryl Streep, Paul McCartney and many of her neighbors are suing the town of Old Saybrook because of property tax bills.

Hepburn and 45 neighbors in the Old Saybrook borough of Fenwick claim in a lawsuit against the town that the town unfairly assessed their properties. The lawsuit was filed Monday in Middletown Superior Court.

According to the suit, Hepburn owns three building lots in Fenwick, totaling about 2.5 acres, including wetlands, assessed at $1.17 million and a house originally assessed at $373,100.

Hepburn appealed her tax bills to the Board of Tax Review in February and her house assessment was lowered to $282,000, but the board notified her in May that it would not reassess her land, the suit said.

White Sox's Lyons forgets 14,770 fans, drops pants

DETROIT (AP) — Steve Lyons says he just "dropped" where he was when he dropped his pants at Tiger Stadium and bent over to brush away some dirt.

The 14,770 fans roared at the sight of Lyons wearing nothing but a white athletic supporter under a pair of white longhairs.

Lyons, known as "Psycho" to his Chicago White Sox teammates, slid into first base for a single in the fifth inning of Monday night's game.

A brief argument ensued among Detroit pitcher Dan Petry, who thought Lyons was hitting Jim Evans and White Sox manager Jeff Torborg.

"I could feel dirt running all down my legs," Lyons said. "After they started arguing, I just kind of forgot where I was. My belt buckle had already come open from the slide. I just yanked it and pulled my pants down.

"When I got back to the bench, girls were waving money at me," he said.

The incident spawned a new malapropism from Tiger Manager Sparky Anderson.

"I think he's a chauvinist," Anderson said several times, until someone told him the word was "exhibitionist."

Rose injures knee during family game of stickball

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose will probably be on crutches when he appears at his sentencing on tax charges Thursday in U.S. District Court, his publicist said.

The former Cincinnati Reds manager tore cartilage in his right knee Sunday while playing stickball with children at a family reunion in Indiana, his publicist, Barbara Pintzka, said Monday.

Rose would undergo arthroscopic surgery Friday, she said.

Rose, who played for the Reds from 1961-78 and from 1984 to 1986, had a relatively injury-free career but underwent surgery on his left knee in 1986.

Homeless to benefit from all-star basketball game

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Piston Isiah Thomas says a celebrity basketball game will benefit the homeless, and his wife might end up cooking for some homeless children as part of the bargain.

Besides Thomas, Los Angeles Lakers star Magic Johnson and Pistons Joe Dumars, Jimmie Johnson, Dennis Rodman, John Salley and Mark Aguirre are set to play in the Summer Classic All-Star Game at the Palace Aug. 10. Comedian Billy Crystal is also scheduled to attend, said Thomas.

"Ba-ba-lou."

In the audition room, where a producer and a casting director smiled cheerfully through some painfully amateurish readings, one truth seemed evident: The more the performers looked like Lucy and Desi, the worse their acting.

A few Lucy simulations came from as far away as Dallas and El Detroit Health Care for the Homeless Project and Comic Relief, which raises money for the homeless, will benefit from the game, which is expected to bring in about $300,000.

After a news conference Monday to announce the game, a homeless youth from Detroit Health Care asked Thomas: "Do you live in a mansion?"

"Why don't you come over and see," answered Thomas, who invited the boy and five other children from the shelter to his suburban home soon for pizza.

"Forget pizza," one boy told Thomas. "I want your wife to cook."

Chicago firefighters offer instruction for film stars

CHICAGO (AP) — Robert DeNiro and Kurt Russell are getting a crash course on firefighting and arson investigation from the Chicago Fire Department.

Instructors from the department's Fire Academy are giving up to three hours of training each night to the cast of "Backdraft," a movie about an conflict between two brothers, both firefighters, and life in an urban fire department, Chief Stanley Span said Tuesday.

The film stars DeNiro and Russell.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

'Dese to have things done quickly prevents their being done thoroughly.' - Confucius.

South's only chance to develop today's ninth trick lay with the spade suit. Does that mean there was only one way to play the suit?

West's unfortunate fourth-bid hand rode up to South's A-K, giving him a free finesse and bringing his total to eight top tricks. Obviously the spade suit was the key to a ninth trick. How should South attack that suit?

Today's declarer waded no time. He led a spade to dummy's ace and a spade back to his queen, losing to West's king. Back came a diamond, and South used his last club by playing a third round of spades. After they split 3-3, he would have had nine tricks. When they didn't, all he had was eight.

A more careful play for two spade tricks endures the game, not only when spades are 3-3 but when the king is with East. It also alters to today's layout.

To trick two, South should lead a spade and duck it completely. East wins and shifts to clubs. South winning. Next a spade to dummy's ace feels West's king, and South emerges with a super nine tricks.
