Surrounding a scorcher

ANDY ARENZ/The Times-News
A fire that scorched 1,500 acres of sagobrush and grass east of Carey had Bureau of Land Management and Forest Service crews busy Tuesday. But by afternoon the firefighters had the blaze trapped between lava flows and existing roads. At left, a crew from the Sawtooth National Forest searches for hot spots on the perimeter. Below, the fire consumes sagobrush during an afternoon flare-up. For details, see story Page B1.

Souter prepares to face Senate

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter worked with White House officials Tuesday in preparation for tough Senate confirmation questions, declaring his blood was "circulating a little bit better" as the astonishment of his selection began to wear off.
He brushed aside questions about his views on abortion, one of the issues senators are sure to emphasize during the confirmation hearings that are expected to begin in September.
President Bush cautioned the Senate not to accept or reject Souter on the basis of any single issue and predicted "he will be a great justice."
Congressional leaders' comments were mostly muted, as were remarks from interest groups on the left and right. Souter was still an unknown quantity.

Elliott Mineberg of the liberal People for the American Way, said, "He doesn't have much of a track record." Pat McGuigan of the conservative Heritage Foundation said, "Nobody knows anything about him. In terms of Senate confirmation, this is very helpful."
Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration had enlisted Kenneth M. Duberstein, a private lobbyist who was a White House chief of staff in the Reagan administration, "to serve as a private adviser" to steer Souter through the confirmation process.

Souter spent several hours at the White House where he was interviewed by the FBI to update his judicial clearance and told by presidential aides that his life would be picked apart, and everything he had ever written or said closely scrutinized.
One participant, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity, said Souter calmly listened to the advice and indicated there was nothing in his past that he felt uncomfortable with.
One senior administration official said White House counsel C. Boyden Gray questioned Souter Monday morning about whether there was anything in his background that might prove embarrassing, such as the marijuana case that forced Douglas Ginsburg to withdraw as a Reagan administration nominee in 1987. Souter's answers "were all satisfactory," the official said.

Silence on abortion marks hospital service

The Associated Press
CONCORD, N.H. — Supreme court nominee David Souter was affiliated with two New Hampshire hospitals that perform abortions, but officials at both facilities said Tuesday that Souter never discussed the divisive issue.
As with his judicial record, little about Souter's feelings about abortion can be gleaned from his performance as a board member of Concord Hospital or as an overseer to the Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical School, which has an affiliated hospital that performs abortions.

Both hospitals have abortion guidelines: New Hampshire still has a law making some abortions tantamount to a felony.
But those laws, which have not been enforced since the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion, never became an issue while Souter was serving either on the state Superior or Supreme courts.
As a judge, Souter participated in just one known case dealing with abortion, siding with the majority in a 1986 ruling that said physicians have a responsibility to test unborn children for birth defects and in the event defects are detected to counsel the pregnant woman about options — including abortion.

Officials at the two hospitals said they had no recollection of Souter discussing abortion at meetings or in personal conversations.
"Over the course of time that I've been here that issue never came before the board," said Richard Warner, president of Concord Hospital. "He and I never talked about it."
Warner came to the hospital in May

Bailout sends aid for bank

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — The ailing Farm Credit Bank System Financial Assistance Corporation, which was formed in 1987 as Farm Credit Banks nationwide floundered in an agricultural recession, the assistance corporation's board of directors will annually review the bank's business plans.
The bailout is the "cornerstone" of the bank's recovery effort. The bank's management also hopes to merge its two main lending institutions — the Interstate Federal Land Bank and the Interstate Production Credit Association — as well as restructure or foreclose loans that farmers aren't paying.
Most of the federal money — $50 million — is toward reducing the bank's financial liabilities. By selling new, low-interest bonds, the bank hopes to replace as much as $395 million in bonds sold at high interest rates in the mid-1980s, Cook said.
The remaining $40 million will cure the bank's $33-million "negative surplus," Cook said. That will improve the value of stocks held by borrowers, he said.
The Farm Credit System is the nation's largest agricultural lender. Initially funded by the federal government, it is now owned by its borrowers.
The federal money won't directly help any of the farmers involved with the bank. No farm loans will be reduced and interest rates won't fall, Cook said.

Sugar price support cut goes nowhere

The Associated Press
and The Times-News
WASHINGTON — Congress rejected arguments Tuesday that a 2-cent reduction in the government's price support for sugar would save consumers money and help in the war on drugs.
Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., tried to amend the Senate's 1990 Farm Bill sugar program with a plan to reduce the government's guaranteed producer price from 18 cents to 16 cents a pound. His proposal was defeated 51-44.
The House defeated a similar plan 271-150.
Bradley and other opponents of the program say it works against U.S. efforts to encourage cocoa-producing countries to grow alternative crops because it blocks imports. Cocaine is produced from coca plants.
In order to maintain the sugar price, the U.S. government controls supply by putting strict quotas on the amount of sugar imported from foreign producers.
The coca price is below the break-even point, said Bradley. "This is an opportunity for us to begin to wean some of these countries from coca production into other crops, particularly sugar."
Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., said that because of drug interdiction efforts, coca prices are falling drastically.
"An important component is to guarantee that those people have some alternative means of earning a living," he said.

Worn-out gene may bring on Alzheimer's

Knight-Ridder News Service
BAR HARBOR, Maine — Alzheimer's disease may not be a disease at all, according to a Duke University researcher who has extensively studied 293 people in 32 families in which the disorder is prevalent.
Instead, it may be a natural part of the aging process that occurs when a specific gene wears out as people get older, said neurobiologist Dr. Allen Roses.
"Just as people get wrinkles and gray hair at different ages, the rate of Alzheimer's cases increases with age," he said. "But if we live long enough, we will all get Alzheimer's disease," he reported at a genetics conference jointly sponsored by Jackson Laboratory and Johns Hopkins University.

Alzheimer's, which affects an estimated 4 million Americans, is marked by progressive memory loss that is associated with dead and dying brain cells.
Late-onset Alzheimer's usually starts in the 60s and by the age of 90, one out of three people are affected by it. By age 95, one out of two people are affected and at 120 years, 100 percent of the people have it, said Roses.

"Alzheimer's used to be considered rare several decades ago, but now it is thought to be an epidemic," he said. "There hasn't been an increase in defective genes but only an increase in lifespan, which is making Alzheimer's more visible."
Studies of the Alzheimer's families indicate that the gene responsible for brain cell death is located on chromosome 19, he said. A person is born with 23 pairs of chromosomes which contain the genes necessary for growth and development.

"We think that this is a housekeeping gene that is supposed to keep cells tidy and operational but it gets burned out with age," he said.
When the function of the gene declines, debris builds up in brain cells and kills them, leaving the scarred brain tissue that is characteristic of this condition, Roses said.
Earlier reports suggested that the faulty gene may be located on chromosome 21, but Roses said that his research and that of others has failed to support the chromosome 21 connection.

Weather

Weather summary

Moisture invading the Gem State, along with a cooler airmass, set the stage for numerous showers and thunderstorms Tuesday.

Radar indicated widespread showers and thunderstorms over the mountains along the Idaho-Montana border, around Idaho Falls and near Pocatello about mid-afternoon.

Although shower activity was on the decrease elsewhere around the state by 3 p.m., storm clouds were still developing in the southwest and south central sections of the state. Rainfall varied from trace amounts to 10 to 20 inches in most areas, although a reported .30 inch of rain fell in a 30-minute period Tuesday afternoon in Pocatello. Salmon reported .34 and Stanley .30 while Challis had .25 and Grangeville .16 in other reports.

Temperatures were cooler, ranging from the 50s and 60s in the valleys and at higher terrain, to the 70s and 80s around the rest of the state.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 90 degrees at Malad and Hagerman. Stanley reported the coolest at 42 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 110 degrees at Bullhead City, Ariz. The lowest was 34 at Wisdom, Mont.

From Southwest to Northeast, heavy storms bring floods

The Associated Press

Heavy rain fell across much of the nation Tuesday, and torrential storms sent floodwaters through Tucson, Ariz., and parts of Massachusetts.

Sections of Tucson were evacuated. Interstate 17 was closed and many intersections were under as much as a foot of water.

Thunderstorms produced 7.02 inches of rain in less than 6 hours near Middleboro, Mass. Elsewhere in the state, more than 5 inches in less than 4 hours caused extensive flooding at Bridgewater. 4.33 inches at Taunton led 4 feet of water on roads, and 3.05 inches fell at Abington, stranding many vehicles.

No strong thunderstorms or heavy rains were reported this morning in Texas, but earlier rains left Burnt Crossing, south of Juno, under 5 feet of water during the early morning. Crossings near the Vol Verde and Crockett-Sutton county lines in Texas were under as much as 4 and 5 feet of water.

Tuesday afternoon there were showers and thunderstorms over parts of Iowa and Nebraska, and showers stretching from west-central Texas into northwest Louisiana, and from northern New Jersey across eastern New England into central Maine and southeast New York state.

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered through northern Ohio into the mountains of Wyoming, south to Colorado and into New Mexico. Showers also reached from Utah into Montana, Idaho, Washington state and northwest Oregon.

Tropical storm Arthur has formed over the Atlantic Ocean. At 1:30 p.m. EDT the center of the storm was 160 miles east of Trinidad moving west about 10 mph. Highest sustained winds were about 40 mph, but there were stronger gusts.

Low temperature records for the date were broken in Paducah, Ken., at 60, and tied in Pueblo, Colo., at 54.

Low temperature for the lower 48 states Tuesday morning was 43 at Butte, Mont., Truckee, Calif., and Yellowstone National Park, Wyo.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 56 at Hayward, Calif., to 100 at both Needles and Imperial, Calif.

Souter molded self along lines of high court's 'Great Dissenter'

Judge David Souter

WASHINGTON — David Souter drives cars until they rust.

He was an altar boy in his hometown clambroth Episcopal church. He has a sharp Yankee sense of humor, capable of piercing stuffed shirts. He climbs mountains.

He lives alone on the family farm — a "monastic life," says Sen. Warren Rudman, a friend. He is sober, cautious, solidly conservative, erudite. When the White House telephoned Sunday night, Souter was home, researching the law books.

Dissecting the life and thoughts of this 50-year-old New-England teacher became an overnight industry in Washington after President Bush picked him to take the Supreme Court seat of liberal justice William J. Brennan, a dominant figure even in dissent.

At law firms, on Capitol Hill, at the pro- and anti-abortion lobbies, over a thousand lunch tables, on the long-distance phone to anyone in New Hampshire who might know him, Souter was Topic A on Tuesday.

The nominee offered a thin paper trail: His resume lists only one job, a teacher at a new Hampshire judge. He has written no opinions in the scant time since Bush put him on the Boston-based 1st Circuit Court of Appeals.

Still, a verdict was taking shape.

"Central to the right" rather than "central to the left," offered Stanley W. Brown, a prominent Manchester, N.H., lawyer.

"But you aren't going to pick it up in any of his writings," added Brown. "You probably won't in the future. He will follow the case where the case takes him."

Retired New Hampshire lawyer Gordon Tiffany said Souter is capable of shedding political biases when deciding a case.

"I believe whether it's liberal or conservative, it's not the issue in his mind," Tiffany said. "The issue in his mind is what was intended in the Constitution that this democracy should live up to, and those are the ideas he believes in."

"Lawyers call that principle 'stare decisis' — respect for a just precedent. One government official who is familiar with Souter's background — but is unwilling to be quoted by name — said Souter goes by the values and philosophy of the "Great Dissenter," conservative court giant Oliver Wendell Holmes, another stickler for precedent.

The official said he took that to mean that Souter will be reluctant to overturn a previous decision such as Roe vs. Wade, which legalized abortion in 1973.

Souter (it rhymes with "scooter") stepped himself in classical law and literature; he continues a program of reading books that Holmes read.

Acquaintances remark on Souter's humorous side.

Name: David Hackett Souter
Born: Sept. 17, 1939 in Milross, Massachusetts.
Education: Graduated from Harvard University, 1961; Attended Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar from 1961 to 1963. Received law degree from Harvard in 1966.
Religion: Episcopalian
Politics: Republican
Personal: Never married. Lives alone on the family farm near Weare, New Hampshire.
Career: 1966 to 1968-Practiced law in Concord, New Hampshire. 1968-Became an assistant attorney general. 1971-Appointed deputy attorney general. 1976-Appointed attorney general. 1978-Appointed a state Superior Court judge. 1983-Named by Governor John Sununu, now White House chief of staff, to the New Hampshire Supreme Court. 1990-Appointed to the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston on April 30.

One calls him a raconteur. He has "a wicked sense of humor that can skewer the most stuffy shir," says a friend Tom Ruth, who succeeded Souter as state attorney general. Another friend, lawyer John Barto, says he "has a twinkle in his eye."

His is the kind of humor that "helps to make a person balanced," said Tiffany.

Souter served as president of the Board of Concord Hospital. At a retirement party, recalled hospital president Dr. Richard Warner, "he displayed the most fantastic, dry sense of humor that you can imagine."

"For all that, Souter was a notorious hard worker, said Warner.

"I never worked so hard in my life than when he was here," the doctor said. "His method of leadership is to kind of be behind the scenes and make things happen."

Added another friend — and spooled another name, Rudman, R.N.H. — "If he has any faults, I believe it's that he's worked too hard all his life. But that's the way he is."

Even in his 1957 yearbook at Concord High School, "Soutie" was described as "studious and hard-working, but also witty and in constant demand. Classmates called him most literary, most sophisticated — and most likely to succeed."

His yearbook photograph shows a grinning young man with a crew cut and bushy brows. He is wearing a conservative brown suit. He was an altar boy at the century-old Holy Cross Episcopal Church in Weare, N.H.

Now he worships at the St. Andrews Episcopal Church in Hopkinton, N.H. A member of the congregation, Kathy Pepin, said he always helps a woman in a wheelchair.

"Every single Sunday he wheels her out of the church and brings her to her car, always joking and laughing with her at the same time," she said.

Friends say Souter has a parsimonious nature. Despite a net worth of over $600,000, he drove cars until they were rusty with age.

When he goes mountain climbing with his law clerks, said lawyer Jack Middleton, "they come back dragging their tongues."

He lives alone at the Souter family farmhouse in Weare, N.H. He shared the house with his widowed mother, Helen, until she moved into a retirement home.

Mrs. Souter, 82, said she shed a tear when he called from Washington Monday with the news. She said she'd miss his weekly visits.

"Isn't that silly, but being a mother, I'd miss him if he went to Boston," said Mrs. Souter.

Abortion

1975, when Souter was a member of its board. Souter is president of the board from 1978-83.

Warner and others couldn't provide a specific number, but said relatively few abortions are performed at the hospital. The procedure usually is done at area clinics or doctors' offices, said hospital officials.

At Concord Hospital and several area clinics, it's customary not to perform abortions after 17 weeks — seven weeks short of the end of the second trimester, said hospital spokeswoman Beth Fenwester.

One exception is Dartmouth Hitchcock, where officials said there had been rare occasions when abortions have been performed up to the end of the second trimester. Those cases almost exclusively involve potential heart to the pregnant women, officials said.

Written abortion guidelines at Dartmouth Hitchcock acknowledge if and when physicians and other staff over whether abortions should be performed.

Dr. George A. Little, chairman of Dartmouth Hitchcock's child and maternal health department, said it was possible that the facility would refuse to perform an abortion for a woman past 17 weeks who didn't have a medical reason.

Credit

as the Federal Land Bank of Spokane, lost over $250 million during the national farm financial crisis of 1985 and 1986. The bank also operated at a loss during the last two years, Cook said. The bank lost $1.7 million in the first quarter of 1990.

Better economic times for farmers have improved the outlook for the bank, Cook said. The value of farm loans not being repaid has dropped by $35 million since January, but $400 million in non-performing loans remain to be restructured or, as a last resort, foreclosed, Cook said.

The bank is also attempting to merge its two main lenders — the Interstate Production Credit Association and the Interstate Federal Land Bank.

In an earlier consolidation, the Eastern Idaho PCA's farmer-stockholders elected not to join the Interstate PCA when 36 other lenders united in 1985. That left the Magic Valley with two PCAs. The Eastern Idaho PCA serves farmers east of Elmore County, has exclusive right within Farm Credit Services to make short-term operating loans to Magic Valley farmers. The Interstate Federal Land Bank makes long-term loans but the Interstate PCA is technically on the sidelines.

The Interstate PCA and FLB are now separate legal entities with joint management and employees and virtually all property and equipment are jointly owned. The Eastern Idaho PCA has completely separate management and employees.

If the stockholders of Interstate Federal Land Bank and the Interstate Production Credit Association vote for a merger later this year, the new entity would be called the Agricultural Credit Association and could make both short-term and long-term loans, said Dave Stout, credit manager with Farm Credit Services in Twin Falls.

Cook believes that would save money.

The Eastern Idaho PCA was not included in the Farm Credit Bank's financial plan because its stockholders are attempting to secede and join another Farm Credit Bank, Cook said.

The federal bailout was first approved July 3, but was not announced until the Financial Assistance Board approved the bank's plan for using the money Monday.

The bailout actually resembles a loan.

The bank will receive the cash assistance by selling preferred stock to the Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation, formed by the U.S. Treasury and the Agricultural National Assistance Corporation will fund its investment in the bank through the sale of 15-year bonds. The U.S. Treasury will pay the interest on the bonds for the first five years. Treasury and Farm Credit Services will share interest payments during the second five years, and the credit system will assume full responsibility for interest payments during the final five-year period.

At the end of 15 years, the bank will be responsible for repaying the principal and the system will repay all interest paid by the Treasury.

Through the Interstate PCA and FLB, the Farm Credit Bank provides about $2.7 billion in credit to farmers and ranchers in Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Alaska.

The Farm Credit Bank of Spokane will probably be the one to seek assistance under the Farm Credit Act, which expires in 1992, Cook said.

Sugar

In a press release, Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho, said the amendment would have cost Idaho sugar beet producers $18 million.

McClure also reminded the Senate of President Bush's first campaign promise farmers made in Twin Falls during May 1988.

"He made a pledge to Idaho farmers and to the farmers of the United States at that time that he would not sacrifice the sugar industry to unfair trade competition," McClure said.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, charged that Bush is wavering on his promise to farmers.

"Despite campaign promises to the contrary, the administration supported the 2-cent cut in the sugar loan rate," Stallings said in a press release.

The measure would have given a $500 million windfall to big food and soft drink companies who would not pass their savings on to consumers, Stallings said.

But others believe farmers are getting the windfall, particularly in the Midwest where wheat farmers often fight off buy-outs by better-rewarded beet farmers.

Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., called sugar producers "the most pampered farmers in America ... and the most profitable."

Opponents of the program say that the prices, which sometimes are twice as high as the world price, have caused over-production in the United States and led to greater use of chemicals that boost yields but cause pollution, particularly in Florida, where sugar cane grows near the Everglades National Park.

Greenspan still intent on fighting inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan sought to reassure financial markets on Tuesday that the central bank has not quit fighting inflation as part of some deal to support trimming the budget deficit.

Greenspan said the Fed was still intent on achieving "within a few years" its goal of pushing inflationary pressures close to zero.

Private analysts saw Greenspan's comments before a House Banking subcommittee as an attempt to remove doubts in the financial markets that the central bank was wavering in its commitment to fighting inflation.

There had been concerns that the Fed was buckling to heavy pressure from the Bush administration to ease credit conditions during an election year even though inflation is still viewed as a threat.

Last week, Greenspan said the central bank stood ready to cut interest rates once Congress and the administration agree on a credible $50 billion to $60 billion deficit reduction package.

Alan Greenspan Will help trim deficit

...if such a move was needed to keep the economy out of a recession. In his Tuesday testimony,

Greenspan said the actual response of the Fed to any deficit-cutting agreement would depend very much on how financial markets viewed the package.

He predicted that a deficit agreement that was seen as "credible and enforceable" would invoke a "very significant response" toward lower interest rates in financial markets. He said any action on the part of the Fed to accelerate a move to lower interest rates would be taken only "in the context of not inducing inflationary pressures."

Greenspan said a flare-up of inflation would have the effect of offsetting the economic benefits of a lower federal budget deficit.

Greenspan's comments came in response to a series of questions by Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., who is sponsoring legislation that would require the Fed to pursue a goal of achieving "zero inflation."

Neal said he believed "Monday's steep drop in 'the stock market was caused by general worries that the Fed was wavering in its inflation battle.

Greenspan said that the central bank was not backing away from its support of Neal's legislation. He said the Fed has been clamping down on the amount of money it provides to the nation's banking system and because of this the nation's money supply over the past three years has been growing at a slow rate not seen since the 1950s.

The goal of the Fed is to provide enough money to the banking system to keep the economy growing while guarding against supplying so much that it results in renewed inflation.

Greenspan said a decision to ease credit slightly two weeks ago should not be viewed as a deviation from the Fed's overall goal of pushing inflation down.

"If we don't fitter away the benefits of the last 2 1/2 to three years, and I can assure you we don't intend to do that, then I see no reason to expect other than the achievement of general price stability over the next several years," Greenspan told Neal.

Senators propose defense conversion bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Laid off defense workers would be guaranteed health benefits and part of their income for a year under an $7 billion bill proposed Tuesday by Connecticut's two senators.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., called his proposal the most comprehensive of several measures already under consideration in Congress this year. The legislation, cosponsored by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., would guarantee laid off workers a basic level of income, help companies shift to non-military production, and provide aid to affected communities.

"The changing nature of foreign threats will dictate some reduction in defense spending," Lieberman said during a news conference. "But we must not embark on wholesale cuts in defense programs that destroy important parts of our economy and jeopardize our national security."

He said defense workers are "veterans of the Cold War" whose efforts helped lead to peace between the superpowers.

The lawmakers said the bill could affect millions nationwide who hold defense industry jobs.

"This thing reaches from the Bath Iron Works in Maine to San Diego and very few places in between are left untouched," Dodd said.

The proposal would use up to 10 percent of the so-called peacetime dividend — money saved through defense spending reductions — in each of the next seven years to pump money into areas affected by defense cuts. In any given year, Lieberman said, that could equal about $1 billion. The program would either expire after seven years or be renewed if it were still needed.

UPS negotiations could force mail changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service may limit the number of packages it accepts to avoid being buried under an avalanche of shipments in case there is a strike at rival United Parcel Service.

"If there is a (work) stoppage next week there is no way (the Postal Service) can absorb the operations of UPS overnight into our system," Deputy Postmaster General Michael S. Coughlin said Tuesday.

Coughlin said United Parcel carries nearly 11 million packages daily, 20 times the volume of packages handled by the Postal Service.

"Our first obligation is to take steps to protect our ability to deliver the 500 million pieces of mail a day that we handle now," Coughlin explained.

If restrictions are imposed, he said, they would affect only volume shippers. Individuals sending four or fewer parcels at one time would have access to the present level of service, he explained.

Alan Caminito of United Parcel said that a vote on a new contract by company employees is in progress, and executives are "optimistic" that it will be ratified. But results are not expected until next week.

UPS and the Postal Service are the major carriers of packages shipped by surface transportation, he said.

In recent years a number of other concerns have entered the business, handling high speed delivery, overnight and second day services.

Those types of service, also offered by UPS and the post office, cost considerably more than ordinary parcel delivery, which does not require arrival by a specific date.

Armand Schneider of Federal Express said his company has a contingency plan to handle increases in volume if necessary.

But that service and other high speed delivery services are more costly than the regular shipment provided by UPS and the Postal Service.

Already the volume of packages being sent by mail has increased and the Postal Service has received numerous queries from companies that send large volumes of parcels out of their concerned over the possibility of a strike at UPS.

If restrictions are imposed, Coughlin explained, they will affect anyone sending five or more parcels at one time.

Those people or organizations will be required to contact the postal service by telephone to make a reservation to bring their parcels to a postal handling center in the region of the intended delivery, he said.

Raising wine tax could hurt state incomes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doubling the tax on wine as a deficit-reduction measure would cost state and local governments 32 cents for every $1 collected by the federal government, an industry group said Tuesday.

"Lower business profits and lost wages would reduce tax collections of state and local governments by an estimated $81 million," the Wine Coalition said.

Doubling taxes on wine and beer is said to be under consideration by congressional leaders and the Bush administration as part of a long-range plan to reduce the budget deficit.

A study commissioned by the industry group concluded that the higher tax would reduce U.S. wine consumption by about 4 percent to 500 million gallons a year, reduce business activity by $1.1 billion and cost workers in wine and related industries $293 million a year in lost wages.

Jurist's record offers little insight on vexing issues he may face

WASHINGTON (AP) — The extensive paper trail of David H. Souter's New Hampshire Supreme Court tenure shows he is a clear, dispassionate writer of legal opinions. But it offers scant insight into his views on the vexing social issues he'd face as a member of the nation's highest court.

President Bush's choice for the Supreme Court spent seven years as a member of the New Hampshire high court — a period in which he wrote nearly 200 opinions and cast votes in hundreds of other cases.

But his views on such issues as abortion, civil rights and church-state relations are largely or completely unknown.

A review of many of his decisions reveals Souter is most assuredly a judicial conservative — a judge who believes in sticking to the case at hand and shies away from making sweeping statements about the law.

He often sides with positions advanced by state government officials, especially in criminal cases. But there have been notable exceptions.

In a 1988 decision, Souter led the state court in declaring unconstitutional a state law that barred a non-profit group from providing legal services to some disabled people.

The New Hampshire Disabilities Rights Center (DRC), authorized by state law to provide such services to the poor, sought permission to represent some disabled clients who were not poor.

"The DRC's request runs counter to the applicable state statutes," Souter said. "Despite this conflict, we hold that enforcement of state law to prohibit the DRC, as a non-profit corporation, from representing non-indigent clients in its advocacy in behalf of disabled people would violate the First and 14th Amendments of the National Constitution."

He added, "Organizations, their members and their staff lawyers may assert a protected First Amendment right of association for non-commercial purposes to advocate the enforcement of legal and constitutional rights of those members, or of others within a definite class whom the organization exists to serve."

In upholding the dismissal of a Somersworth, N.H., police chief, Souter said in a 1988 decision, "The chief's conduct was not a choice but to find that the (chief's) infidelity in finance and ineptitude in administration had rendered him incapable of holding a position demanding honor and integrity of its incumbent."

In a ruling earlier that year, Souter said a bank could not be held contractually liable for failing to discover poor workmanship on a construction project for which it had lented loans to Ross and Virginia Seymour.

"The Seymours' responsibility for workmanship could not escape any reasonable reader of these documents," he said. "The Seymours make a further try at salvaging the contract claim by ... pointing to a loan officer's alleged remark that the bank's inspections would be a 'safeguard and well worth it.' They conveniently forgot, however, that they never asked the trial court for a specific finding that the remark was made."

In a 1988 decision criticized by women's rights groups, Souter ordered a new trial for a man who had been convicted of sexual assault because his lawyers had been prevented from offering evidence of the complaining woman's public behavior with other men.

Souter said such evidence was essential to the man's defense that the woman had consented to having sex with him.

In a 1987 sexual assault case, Souter upheld a prosecutor's closing argument comment that the defendant's lawyer had failed to prove the victim was "promiscuous."

Record clear of controversial rulings an advantage for Souter

By Walter R. Means

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Commending the credentials of his Supreme Court nominee, President Bush said David H. Souter's judicial opinions "reflect a clean intellect," a slip of the tongue he corrected to say "keen."

For the administration, either version would do. One of Souter's advantages is a record apparently clear of pronouncements that could signal his position on the politically charged questions that would come before him as an associate justice on a closely divided court.

That could insulate him against the kind of challenges that have been raised before in Senate confirmation proceedings. "Lack of a paper record on any issue turns out to be an advantage," said Robert H. Bork, who had a voluminous record that worked against him when the Senate rejected his Supreme Court nomination three years ago.

Souter had just begun sitting on the U.S.

Court of Appeals bench in Boston, a position for which Bush chose him earlier this year and the Senate confirmed him a little over two months ago. He had been a New Hampshire judge for 12 years, a justice of the state supreme court since 1983.

Those judicial roles had not put him up against the contentious questions that await the successor to Justice William J. Brennan Jr., whose retirement last Friday silenced a leading liberal voice on the court.

In Souter, Bush chose a judicial conservative, but not an itemized conservative. "We looked at all the decisions that he had rendered, and out of that gained an impression of a person who is a strict constructionist, who is intent upon applying the law," said Attorney General Dick Thornburgh.

Those published decisions do not say how he would apply the law on the high court, where he would face issues that aren't covered in the resume, chief among them the explosive question of abortion rights.

Bush said he didn't know and didn't ask Souter's position on abortion or any other specific point. He said that would have been inappropriate. It also would have been perilous politically — Sen. Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., the minority leader, said Sunday there would be a blood bath in the Senate if Bush chose a nominee publicly committed to overturning the 1973 court ruling that guaranteed a woman's right to an abortion.

At the same time, conservative Republicans would have rebelled against Bush, over the issue of "strict" construction of the Constitution.

So Bush produced a nominee neither side can read clearly.

Abortion foes can judge him by his sponsors — Bush, who advocates reversal of the basic abortion rights decision, and John H. Sununu, the White House chief of staff, an ardent opponent of abortion, and the governor who appointed Souter to the New Hampshire bench.

Abortion rights advocates hardly could have expected the court appointment would go to anyone lined up on their side of the issue. After all, their candidate lost the 1988 presidential election. Uncertainty is the best they could have done, despite the demands of their lenders that the Senate get an abortion rights commitment from any nominee.

Senators in both parties say it would be out of line to demand that a court nominee announce positions on specific issues as part of the confirmation process. That's not to say the abortion question won't be asked, but it certainly won't be answered.

The question is more likely to be raised indirectly, with questions about Souter's philosophy on privacy rights, and on judicial restraint, which could weigh against the outright reversal of the abortion ruling after 17 years.

Bush said he doesn't expect a major confirmation controversy, noting that the Senate unanimously confirmed Souter's nomination to the appeals court last spring. He had been checked out by federal investigators during the Reagan administration as a possible

Supreme Court nominee in 1987. Then came the screening that went with the appeals court appointment.

But prior inquiries and confirmations are no guarantee when the Senate is looking at a Supreme Court choice. Four federal judges have been denied that promotion, from the Nixon administration to the present, for varying reasons.

Bork had been confirmed as an appellate judge; his Supreme Court nomination was rejected by the Democratic Senate in a political battle over his conservative positions, spelled out in writings and speeches that dated back years.

Denied confirmation, Bork left the federal bench, and wrote a book about it.

"A president who wants to avoid a battle like mine, and most presidents would prefer to, is likely to nominate men and women who have not written much, and certainly nothing that could be regarded as controversial by left-leaning senators and groups," he said.

Commission offers immigration ideas

WASHINGTON — Creating jobs in Mexico and other countries is the only long-term way to cut illegal immigration into the United States, a special commission told Congress on Tuesday.

Diego C. Asencio, a former U.S. assistant secretary of State, headed the 12-member Commission for the Study of International Migration and Cooperative Economic Development, established by Congress in 1986.

Asencio told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that, initially, economic development encourages people to leave a country. But he added:

Panel urges wider HUD investigation

WASHINGTON — A House panel urged a special prosecutor Tuesday to widen the investigation of former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce, saying it had evidence Pierce steered lucrative federal grants to his former law firm.

In its most detailed finding, congressional investigators questioned whether Pierce's former law firm, a former top aide and Pierce himself may have violated federal bribery, conspiracy and conflict-of-interest laws during his tenure as secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

The panel said evidence also suggested Pierce, who served throughout the eight-year Reagan administration, may have committed perjury at a panel hearing when he denied involvement in the awarding of key grants.

Judge orders Amoco to pay damages

CHICAGO — A judge Tuesday ordered Amoco Corp. to pay about $155 million for damages from a massive oil spill by the Amoco Cadiz tanker off northern France in 1978.

Amoco officials said they would appeal the order, promising to prolong a case that has dragged through the courts for years.

U.S. District Judge Charles Norgle on Tuesday formally endorsed an order he spelled out in June, based on damage recommendations from former U.S. District Judge Frank McCarr, who was appointed special master for the case after retiring from the bench in January 1988.

Court order temporarily bars logging

UKIAH, Calif. — Environmentalists won a court order temporarily barring Louisiana-Pacific Corp. from logging an old-growth forest that has been a target of "Redwood Summer" protesters.

Seventeen other protesters were arrested Tuesday in protests further north, near Eureka. The order, issued Monday by Mendocino County Superior Court Judge James Luther, appeared to be the first under new state emergency regulations that bar logging that threatens the northern spotted owl.

Court overturns lawsuit filed too late

RICHMOND, Va. — A ruling that a county's voting districts should be redrawn to increase black voting strength was overturned by a federal appeals court panel Tuesday because the lawsuit was filed too late.

The ruling was a setback for the American Civil Liberties Union, which has sought restricting to increase black voter strength in about 18 Virginia localities.

Groups raise concerns over Army plan

HONOLULU (AP) — Pacific island leaders and environmental groups are raising concerns about the Army's plan to store and destroy chemical weapons at Johnston Atoll, 800 miles southwest of here.

"I think it's a very bad decision based on undue haste," Skip Spaulding, an attorney for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund in Hawaii, said Monday. "The Army seems more concerned with carrying out its mission for its commander in chief than thoroughly assessing the consequences."

"The Pacific must not become the dumping ground for the world's chemical agents and munitions," Hawaii Gov. John Waihee said last week.

Iraq threatens Kuwait; U.S. on alert in gulf

Iraqi Troops Reportedly Missing Along Border

KUWAIT (AP) — Iraq accused neighboring Kuwait on Tuesday of conspiring to harm its economy and massed tens of thousands of troops and hundreds of tanks on the border. Informed sources in Kuwait said the Iraqi troop buildup had increased over the last 48 hours to at least 30,000, and that more than 200 Soviet-made tanks were posted along Iraq's 100-mile-long southern border with Kuwait. The area of the troop buildup is rich in oil reserves, and has been a source of contention since Kuwait gained its independence from Britain in 1961. The border demarcation has never been agreed on by Iraq, and a portion of it crosses the Rumayyah oil field. The same sources said Kuwait on Tuesday reinstated its state of alert, declared July 16 and canceled after three days of tension between the two oil-producing countries. Iraq has 17 million residents, including 1 million troops. Kuwait was 1.8 million residents, with 100,000 members of the armed forces. The U.S. Defense Department, meanwhile, announced that U.S. Navy warships and aircraft were holding a "short-notice exercise" in the Persian Gulf with the United Arab Emirates, about 600 miles south of the Kuwait-Iraq dispute. The United States has at least seven warships in the Gulf at any given moment. The State Department announced at the beginning of the crisis that it backs Kuwait's territorial integrity. Iraq has accused Kuwait of being an American puppet and of conspiring with the United States to throttle the economy of Iraq, which has the world's second-largest oil reserves but endured a costly war from 1980-88 with Iran. In Washington, U.S. State Department spokeswoman Margaret D. Tutwiler said both Iraq and Kuwait had strengthened their armed forces. "Iraq and others know there is no place for coercion in a civilized world," she said. "All disputes should be handled through peaceful means." Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak flew to Baghdad and Kuwait on Tuesday to meet with mediate the crises with leaders of those countries. Mubarak said his mission was successful, but Iraq downplayed his efforts. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein claims his country lost $14 billion during the past year because of a world oil glut that has sent crude prices tumbling. He has accused Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates of overproduction.

East German coalition in danger of dissolving

EAST BERLIN (AP) — A political party quit East Germany's coalition government Tuesday and another group threatened to follow suit in a political crisis over how united German elections should be held. The Liberal Party, which controls 21 seats in the 400-member Parliament, said it was leaving the seven-party governing coalition of Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere. Rainer Ortleb, chairman of the Liberal faction in Parliament, said his party's decision was based partly on the party's "scandalous" alliance with the deposed former Communists on the election question. The dispute is over whether December elections for a single German Parliament should be held separately in each nation, or whether the two countries should be treated as a single electorate. Separate elections would give West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl an edge over his main rival, Socialist Democrat Oskar Lafontaine, in the elections of a unified German nation. The left-leaning Social Democrats, the second-biggest party in East Germany, also have threatened to resign from de Maiziere's government.

After a meeting of party leaders, the Social Democrats said they will leave the coalition Friday unless de Maiziere's Christian Democrats meet their demands, according to a statement carried by the East German news agency, ADN. Such a collapse would cause de Maiziere to lose control of the Parliament, where a two-thirds majority is needed to enact unification. However, all major parties are committed to unification. The strife, if not settled, would more likely slow the process than derail it. The fight that began a week has been covered by the press and by Germans appalled that the historic quest for a united Germany has been reduced to political infighting. De Maiziere said the Liberals' decision was purely political and against the interests of East Germany. "The Liberal faction preferred to tell me of their decision to leave the coalition through a news agency, despite my offer of a bridge that was supposed to lead to a solution of the conflict today," he told ADN.

Record heat searing Australia

SYDNEY, Australia — It's mid-winter here, but many Sydney-area residents headed to the beaches Tuesday as record-setting warm weather created near-summer conditions. Downtown workers ate lunch in parks and other people sunbathed as temperatures rose to 79, the highest July reading since the Bureau of Meteorology began keeping records in 1859. Bureau of Meteorology spokesman Steve Symonds said temperatures were expected to fall over the next 24 hours as the warm weather front passed through the country's midsection.

Uganda counterattacks rebels in clash

KAMPALA, Uganda — Government troops killed at least 70 rebels and captured 110 in fighting in eastern Uganda, a newspaper reported Tuesday. The Munno newspaper said troops mounted a counterattack Friday and Saturday after insurgents from the Uganda People's Army killed three soldiers and later attacked army barracks, burning several buildings. The newspaper said the fighting was in the countryside around Kumi, a trading town 300 miles from Uganda's capital, Kampala.

Trolley, tram drivers strike in U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW — Thousands of trolley-bus and tram drivers in the Ukrainian capital of Kiev went on strike Tuesday for higher pay and improved social benefits, the Tass news agency said. In another manifestation of labor unrest, librarians in the birthplace of Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin went on strike Tuesday, the news agency reported.

U.S. experts arrive in Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — U.S. military experts arrived in Cambodia Tuesday to examine the possible remains of missing American servicemen, breaking a long political stalemate over the issue between the two countries. The experts, including two forensic scientists, will try to determine whether the remains include those of 82 servicemen missing from the U.S. involvement in Cambodia.

Police making progress in plane crash

LONDON — Police have made great progress in their investigation of the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, according to an annual report of Scottish police activities released Tuesday. The flight, en route from Frankfurt to New York, blew apart and fell on the village of Lockerbie, Scotland, on Dec. 21, 1988. All 259 people aboard the Boeing 747 were killed, along with 11 others on the ground. "Considerable progress has been made and great credit is due to the investigative skills of the large team of police officers and civilians dedicated to the inquiry," said the report on police activities in 1989 issued by Robert Slim, chief inspector of the Scottish constabulary.

Wet T-shirt brings student detention

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — A student who threw a wet T-shirt at Queen Elizabeth II during her February visit here was sentenced Tuesday to five months of periodic detention. Henearoa Teape, a 27-year-old Maori, told Kaikohe District Court that throwing the black T-shirt at the queen's procession was a symbolic gesture to protest New Zealand's treatment of its indigenous Maori population. The shirt did not hit the queen, but she looked startled as it landed in her car.

At least Supreme Court nominee isn't a Bork

WASHINGTON — David who? Souter, as in neuter. As a man, David, he stood in the television lights, a small, dour man wearing a re-striped tie, heavy five-o'clock shadow, and a grudge-grinder's solemnity.

And that's all anybody — seemingly including the President of the United States — knew about the nominee to the Supreme Court.

If there were such an outfit as Judges Anonymous, David Souter would be a charter member. He's a man with no rap sheet or fingerprints. George Bush's Mystery Guest.

Watching Bush spring Souter on the world, flashing through this observer's brain were the words: "Dan Quayle II." Not since Bush uncrated Quayle as running mate has there been such befuddled astonishment.

But unlike Quayle — not merely because he's a Harvard Phi Beta Kappa and Rhodes Scholar — Bush's Invisible Judge is a smart choice politically.

Bush hates confrontations. David Souter is such a neutral, taciturn cipher, he'll probably slide through the Senate without the damaging fireflight Ronald Reagan lit with prickly Judge Robert Bork.

I suspect that he was the winning sales pitch on Souter: "He's no Bork."

And that's why the Invisible Judge had Washington gaping like a leaky bellows. In the Imperial City, where reporters, lobbyists and senators — especially senators — pride themselves on inside dope, the pall of ignorance was comical.

"A blank slate," shrugged Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, member of the Judiciary Committee.

So predictable I remember nothing about him," said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, of Souter's April appearance before the committee.

"Nothing about him leapt to mind," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

Sen. Joe Biden, D-Del., head of the Judiciary Committee, was speechless, a Guinness record.

Oh, sure, Bush heaped praise on his Invisible Judge with a trowel: "High intellect" and "scholarly" and "experienced." A half-dozen times, Bush recited the meaningless mantra: "He'll interpret the law, not make law."

How did Bush know? He'd met Souter for

Sandy Grady

45 minutes, read his resume, and listened to John Sununu. Cynics, who called Souter a "Sununu Special," noted the chief of staff's smug, cat-who-ate-the-canary smile.

You can imagine Sununu, who hoisted Souter up the judicial ladder in New Hampshire, lying a spiel on Bush: "Mr. President, have I got the Supreme Court nominee for you? Guy's a bachelor, lives on a farm, takes care of his mother. Never made a speech. Never written a book. No paper trail. And (broad wink) he thinks just like us."

Ah, but what about the "Big A" word? Bush, who swore he didn't grill Souter on abortion, flared with exasperation at reporters: "I didn't use the litmus test approach ... Look, you can stop trying (about Souter's abortion views) because it would be unfair to Judge Souter."

That's why Souter's anonymity makes him a savvy political choice for Bush. He's the Stealth Judge, undetectable on radar.

Bush knew if he picked a right-wing ideologue — a sure vote to tumble Roe vs. Wade — the abortion furor would stall the Senate; hurt Republicans in 1990-92 elections, and sap Bush's popularity.

In truth, Souter is as unpredictable as other rookie Supreme Courters. Remember, like said Justice William Brennan, the liberal hero who just retired, was "one of my greatest mistakes." A man who knows Souter, Georgetown law professor Paul Rothstein, admitted, "He could be a Trojan horse; he (Bush) may not know what's inside him."

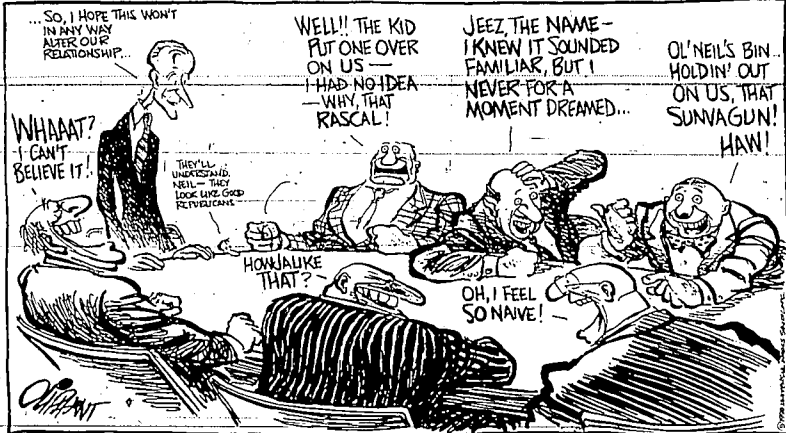

All we really know of Souter is that he's an enigmatic grinner, the Triumph of the Nerds. I like what his ex-law partner, Ron Snow, said: "Dave probably sleeps in a brown suit. A black robe would improve his color pattern."

Souter seems fireproof against an abortion storm. That's clever politics. Sure, he's no William Brennan. But he's no Robert Bork, either.

David Souter's the most mysterious jurist since Judge Crater vanished.

But Bush could have done far worse.

Randolph Ryan

A federal appeals court ruling Friday overturned one of Oliver North's three Iran-contra felony convictions and ordered the trial judge to review his conviction on two other counts. That will be seen by many as another brick in the wall constructed by the Reagan and Bush administrations and their supporters in Congress (and now in the federal courts) to hide the Iran-contra scandal from full public understanding.

The ruling is a setback to special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh, but it is not a fatal blow to his work. It simply heightens the importance of the agenda that Walsh announced in May:

- Pursuing a criminal inquiry into the conduct (such as possible perjury) of mid-level officials such as former Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams.

- Issuing a comprehensive final report that details and puts in proper context all that is known about the conspiracy, including the involvement of former President Reagan and President Bush.

Walsh is planning to continue his investigation. He has called North and former national security adviser John Poindexter to testify before a grand jury about the involvement of others. Whether or not this leads to further indictments, it will help round out the special prosecutor's final report to Congress.

It is fortunate that the prosecution of this case fell to a man as indefatigable as Walsh. "I'm tired of it," he said in April, as he looked past the Poindexter conviction to the remainder of the probe. "But I don't think that's any excuse for quitting." Friday's ruling did not clear North, who has admitted he did what he is accused of doing: destroying classified documents, aiding and abetting the obstruction of justice and accepting an illegal gift. Rather, this was a technical maneuver under which two Reagan appointees to the bench outvoted a Carter appointee and dumped the case back into U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell's lap.

As Walsh did during his investigation, Gesell went to great lengths during the trial to safeguard North's Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. The Reagan appointees say he should have gone further, and now Gesell must review the evidence to see if any of it was tainted by North's testimony before Congress under a grant of immunity.

In an opinion that would make administration supporters happy, Judge David Sentelle ordered Gesell to reopen a full inquiry "with or without" necessary line by line and item by item.

We readily understand how court and counsel might sigh prior to such an undertaking: It could consume substantial amounts of time, personnel and money only to lead to the conclusion that a defendant — perhaps even a guilty defendant — cannot be prosecuted.

Although the ruling casts a shadow on the conviction of the central player in the Iran-contra conspiracy, the special prosecutor's broader role in this case is to dig out the full truth where Congress flinched, and thereby defend the principle of accountability in government.

Walsh long ago shrugged off the necessity to drop the broadest conspiracy charges, which could have provoked a constitutional impasse over classified information, and concentrated on the basics. "It's such a simple thing," Walsh said. "Congress is entitled to the truth ... When Congress takes a matter seriously enough to do a formal investigation, the administration must either tell the truth or refuse to answer. But it is not permitted to lie."

"Executive branch officers may refuse to answer but not lie. If Congress is inquiring regarding an activity over which it has legitimate oversight, it is entitled to honest answers, just the same as a court is."

That may yet spell trouble for Abrams, who has slipped from view, apart from a rare sighting on "Nightline."

Caught in misleading response at a session of the Senate Intelligence Committee in December 1986, Abrams was told by Sen. Thomas Eagleton: "Under oath, my friend, that's perjury ... That's slammer time."

Eagleton's remark may have reflected wishful thinking. But the mere possibility should encourage the special prosecutor to stay the course despite the war of attrition, and maintain a lively public interest in Iran-contra.

China prepares for domination

We all go into the '90s breathing a sigh of relief due to the rapid revolutionary changes taking place in the world today.

The United States and the Soviet Union now have mutual trust and understanding of each other.

Europe is rapidly becoming unified as Russia releases most of its occupied territories there.

The Communist Party has all but practically become a thing of the past, giving way to democracy.

Both the Soviet Union and the United States are making defense cuts, since aggression from either side seems to be highly unlikely.

With this and other goings on happening in the world today, the concept of nuclear war seems all but something to read about in the history books.

But don't bet on it. While all of this is happening (as great as it may be), the quiet giant that is Communist China prepares itself for world domination and a Third World War.

I cannot conceive this true fact that world leaders are so naive as to ignore the fact that this country is as powerful militarily as either the Soviet Union or the United States with over 3 million men in its military and having a nuclear arsenal that is larger than either one of our two countries.

The domination has already begun with the selling of arms to any radical Mideast government that will accept them in hopes of controlling the world's oil supply.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union need to act now so as to head off a catastrophe that surely will happen in the near future if let go unaddressed now.

Tax dollars thrown away

I am a victim. I, like several hundred other investors, put money into the First Idaho Venture Capital Corp., which was masterminded by Ron Twilegar. I was one of a handful of stockholders who attended the yearly board elections and business review meetings. At the final meeting I attended, we were told that a number of investments had gone bad but efforts were being made to put the company back on track.

Look in terms of consequences

I can't let go unchallenged the kind of thinking that Dr. Tunzi uses in his article on basic questions that underlie health issues.

In modern society, important social issues usually are — and ought to be — decided on the basis of their consequences.

Take the question of abortion, for instance. Whether or not we consider a fetus a person is totally irrelevant to the question of whether abortion should be sanctioned by society. Obviously, there are important consequences to prohibiting abortion. And it is these consequences that we should look at in deciding the abortion issue.

Or take the euthanasia issue. Again, there are important consequences to permitting euthanasia and important consequences to prohibiting it. But there are consequences to doing with it. Instead of quibbling over definitions, we should face the issue squarely and either approve or reject euthanasia on the basis of following one or the other course of action.

In my lifetime, I have seen a lot of mischief caused by men postulating the validity of prior principles and acting accordingly. For instance, President Reagan assumed that it would be a good thing if we got the government off the backs of the savings and loan industry. Well, we did, and now we have the worst and most costly scandal in American history. What Reagan should have done was to weigh the consequences of regulating the savings and loan industry against the consequences of deregulating it.

Similarly, Dr. Tunzi should look at important social issues in terms of their consequences.

Stallings' proposal a bad idea

Congressman Stallings' Great Rift National Park on the Big Butte Desert is a poorly thought-out proposal. Not only will the park result in a huge loss of hunting and recreation acreage (about 300,000) but the few economic benefits will be realized by only a handful of business people in Arco and Burley.

If the new park results in a highway across the desert, the existing tourist flow through Poacatello and Blackfoot will be changed to Burley and Arco through the ### National park idea is crazy

I am a good craftsman. I work hard and I work well. I could go somewhere else and make a lot more money than I do here in Idaho.

One of the main reasons I stay in Idaho because of the hunting and fishing. Now Richard Stallings is trying to take a lot of that hunting away from us in the name of the Craters of the Moon National Park.

I am very much opposed to that park. Idaho doesn't need it. Idaho doesn't want it. It is worse than bad; it is crazy!

Now the shoe is on other foot

Not since the 1960s when Twin Falls used the Snake River for its drinking has The Times-News become concerned with the pollution of our river.

At the time, the dams of Idaho State had signs, "Please flush. Twin Falls needs the water" and The Times-News and chamber of commerce, in a joint statement asked state and federal officials to clean up "our river."

Of course, now the shoe is on the other foot. We send our "pollutant" downstream to other communities and the local chamber of commerce has only one concern now — "the local economy."

Condolences to Eaton family

This is to express our personal condolences to the family and wife of Curtis T. Eaton.

It was stated in the article in The Times-News, while people paid their respects, that Curtis T. Eaton's philosophy was to make the "business of banking" a "personalized" business. This was so, because when we needed someone to believe in us and give us a chance to buy our house, Curtis T. Eaton was that person. We showed him his trust in us was worthy. We told him then and we make it public in our love and re-

Young can drag us out of mire

At times when I consider the soft, velvety quality of Enid McCauley's voice, I am amazed that so much wisdom seems to issue forth with her words. She studies our government, the ethics, the humanist crime which is a bit rare. I stand right with her on opposing tax money supporting the arts or anything else that denigrates my God.

No matter what rulings our would-be leaders impose, no matter how much money America spends, no matter how many jails we build, there will never be a turnaround until God's influence is unshooked. God and God's word are being ignored in general to the extent our leaders allowed and promoted the efforts of an atheist in order to prevent God being recognized openly through prayer in school.

Through the Antichrist, this has expanded. The situation, ethics, humanist crime in government officials and business leaders which goes sightly punished, criminals being coddled while the law-abiding are throttled, the allowing of starvation in the United States while we hand over millions to foe and supposed ally — money which we do not have and which will burden our offspring with debt for generations to come — can be blamed for most of the down-sliding of our nation from addition to all other evils.

All the crying about it is wasted until we admit that it is not in man to direct his own footsteps — the proclaimed religious, by the thousands have allowed our children's minds to be diplomatically poisoned; and then when it has reached the stage that real evil is not even recognized as anything but a commonplace thing, parents begin wondering why on earth their children turned out so badly.

Young people, cheer up. You can drag us back out of the mire of the pig sty if you will show courage we let slip. You have a hundred temptations where we had one; you look a lot better than we do and it's up to you to salvage what mess we allowed to pile up.

Pierce to receive sentence in August

CASCADE — Sentencing is scheduled for Aug. 31 for the former executive director of the McCall Chamber of Commerce, who pleaded guilty to charges of stealing chamber funds.

Dennis Pierce, 38, admitted two counts of grand theft by unauthorized control and two counts of forgery. Fourth District Judge George Carey accepted the guilty plea and ordered a pre-sentence investigation before pronouncing sentence.

Pierce originally was accused of 15 counts of grand theft and seven counts of forgery, covering about $8,500. Valley County Prosecutor Clayton Anderson said Pierce was accused of taking the money on 15 occasions between December, 1988, and November, 1989.

Lawsuit against high school settled

COEUR D'ALENE — A lawsuit filed by a Lakeland High School football player over his eligibility has been settled for $1,000, according to public records.

The parents of Jeremy Pascoe asked $6 million in damages, but decided to settle for an amount that won't even cover attorney fees, said Jeremy's mother, Julie Pascoe of Rathdrum.

"We just wanted to get out of it," she said. "Jeremy wanted to get on with his life."

The insurance company, National Union Fire Insurance Co., Pittsburgh, agreed to "buy their peace" rather than run up legal fees defending the district, the five-page release agreement said.

Idaho Power to raise starting fees

BOISE — Starting next month, it's going to cost more to start or re-establish service with Idaho Power Co.

The Public Utilities Commission granted the utility's request to increase fees for starting or re-starting service. The method of calculating interest charges on past-due accounts also was changed.

It will cost $15 to start service, up from $10, during normal business hours, and $22 during evenings, weekends and holidays.

ISU program in Idaho Falls to grow

IDAHO FALLS — The man running Idaho State University's program in Idaho Falls expects the university to continue expanding its educational programs there even though pressure is building to create an independent two-year school in the city.

"I expect the university will continue to promote areas it has in place and look for places to expand, realizing that one element in the community is saying, 'Wait a minute, we want to do this ourselves,'" said Fred Rose.

Rose, dean and resident director of academic programs in Idaho Falls, does not see Idaho State muscling its way into Idaho Falls in the face of serious discussion about creating a community college.

Genesee man joins soil commission

BOISE — Jim Herman, Genesee, has been appointed to the Idaho Soil Conservation Commission.

His appointment was announced by the governor's office on Tuesday. Herman succeeds former state senator Lester Clegg, Lewiston, who resigned. Sid Morfitt, Idaho Falls, was reappointed.

SRA accuses Watkins of dragging feet

IDAHO FALLS — The Snake River Alliance and other anti-nuclear groups have accused Energy Secretary James Watkins of dragging his feet on environmental studies at the nation's troubled nuclear weapons plants.

At the same time, they said, Watkins is pushing ahead with a long-term weapons production plan that will run through the middle of the 21st century.

Compiled from wire service reports.

Court limits some rights to counsel

BOISE (AP) — There is no constitutional right to ask for an attorney when a motorist is stopped by police on suspicion of drunken driving and refuses to take a blood-alcohol test, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

Although the court said it did not agree with precedents laid down by the Idaho Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals said Tuesday it must uphold two Ada County license suspensions.

The decisions in two almost-identical cases were announced, although the Court of Appeals "invited" the Supreme Court to reconsider its stand on the issue.

In separate cases, Lane Paul Triplett and Dennis McNeely both were stopped on suspicion of drunken driving. Court records show that both refused to take a blood-alcohol test, used by police to check the alcohol level in a motorist's blood.

Under Idaho law, both had their licenses suspended for 180 days for refusing the test. The magistrate court action was sustained by 4th District judges and appealed to the Court of Appeals.

The court said in both cases that automatic suspension that follows when a motorist refuses to submit to a blood-alcohol test is a civil matter, not a criminal, and therefore there is no absolute right to counsel.

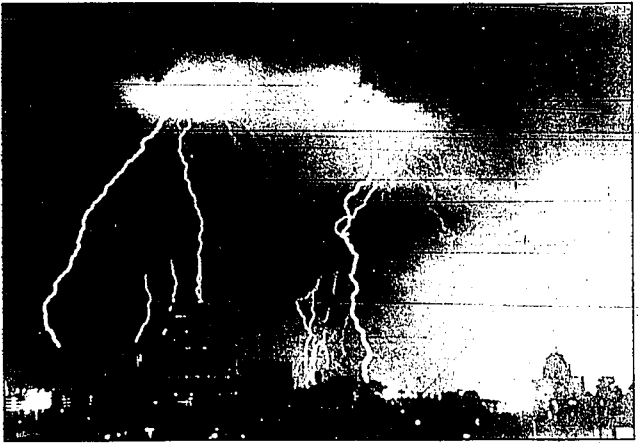

The court said under the "implied consent" law, anyone who accepts the privilege of operating a motor vehicle on state highways has consented in advance to submit to a blood-alcohol test, with no right to consult with an attorney first.

And such tests are civil in nature, the court said. "...testing for the BAC under the implied consent statute is an evidentiary procedure and, as in this case, is conducted before formal criminal charges are initiated by the filing of a complaint," the court said.

The Court of Appeals said it would appear that motorists have a Sixth Amendment right to consult with an attorney when arrested for possible drunken driving and asked to perform a breath test.

"Nevertheless, the Idaho Supreme Court has held otherwise. With all due respect, we believe the civil nature of the penalty for refusing the test does not alter the criminal nature of the proceeding...in which the test is requested and performed," the decision said.

Taken by storm

Phoenix, Ariz., experienced a night of continuous downpour and widespread lightning as captured here during a 6 minute exposure over the downtown early Tuesday morning.

Association gives Idaho schools 'C' in education

HERNDON, Va. (AP) — Idaho's public education system has earned a "C" grade from a national parent-children association, which maintained real improvements will require more home involvement.

"The report card makes it clear that there is room for improvement in educational achievement of Idaho children," said Scott Stapf, executive director of the American Association of Parents & Children.

"But with tight federal and state funding for education, it is equally evident that any meaningful improvement will depend on the increased involvement of parents," Stapf said.

The report card released Tuesday ranked the state's school system in six areas based on performance in the 1988 and 1989 school years.

The state earned a top grade for student scores on national standardized tests, where Idaho ranks ninth nationally. "B" grades were awarded for the state's 75.4 percent high school graduation rate, which ranked 22nd nationally, and the percentage of education funds spent on teacher salaries. Idaho's 43.6 percent of school support spent on salaries ranked 16th nationally, the association said.

But in areas directly affected by financial commitment to education from both the state and local school districts, Idaho received poor to failing grades, despite the state Legislature's recent large cash infusions into education.

"D" grades were issued for average teacher salaries, which ranked 44th nationally, and for average classroom size, which ranked 48th. The state was labeled as failing in the area of expenditures per student — its 1988 average of $2,667 ranking 49th nationally, the association said.

Patrons raise cash to keep school open

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The Grangeville School Board gave White Bird residents one week to raise $7,000 to keep the tiny northern Idaho town's elementary school open.

First thing Monday morning, townspeople took the money to the superintendent's office.

Colin Rhoades, one of the leaders of the White Bird group which supported keeping the school open, said there was no problem coming up with the money. People were "eager to keep our school" and donated generously.

He estimated there will be 19 students in kindergarten through third grades this year at the school.

The money made up the difference in an agreement made last week between the school board and the patrons of White Bird.

The agreement included reducing the teaching staff from two to one teacher and providing volunteer aides from the community.

McClure refunds campaign funds

BOISE (AP) — Retiring U.S. Sen. James McClure has shut down his political organization, making good on his January pledge to return contributions to his abandoned re-election campaign.

But the midyear campaign finance disclosure report filed by the Idaho Republican with the Secretary of State's office showed the 24-year-old congressional veteran with a balance from past campaign fund-raising efforts of nearly $230,000.

At the time he stumped many Idaho Republicans by announcing his retirement on Jan. 5, McClure said he had not decided what to do with the money accumulated previously, but he said he would not convert it to his personal use. Spokesman Ted Neuenschwander said the senator was considering setting up some kind of trust fund but no decision was likely until he finishes his term this year.

While deciding against seeking a fourth term in the Senate, he said he would remain politically active, and his latest campaign report showed a $10,000 contribution to the state Republican Committee in mid-April.

After covering the final costs in shutting down the campaign, the report showed the refund of over $83,000 in contributions — $70,600 to 104 special-interest political action committees, and nearly $13,000 to 30 individuals, most from outside Idaho.

Cain's

MOMENT OF TRUTH SHOW

Rules of the Game:

1) Come to Cain's (both locations) and find our super specials! (Everything six months or older will take huge markdowns until it's gone!) 2) Find a friendly, helpful salesperson who looks hungry! 3) Make your best deal! (Don't be afraid to haggle) and 4) Leave the store before the manager realizes he didn't make any money!

TRUE OR FALSE

Q: The buyers were bribed with gifts if they'd order a bunch of pretty country floral sofas trimmed in oak. The manufacturer said we'd reorder within days -- selling them for $1400 a set!

A: TRUE! They must have been bribed to buy these -- and we haven't sold any in months! Out they go for $999 a set!

TRUE OR FALSE

Q: For eight hours only today, Cain's is giving away FREE all merchandise that's old, scratched, dented, or discontinued down to the bare walls!

A: FALSE! Got your attention, didn't it? Honestly folks, at the prices we're giving this stuff away, it almost seems like it IS free!

TRUE OR FALSE

Q: The computer says to reduce Cain's recliner inventory by one-third!

A: TRUE! The computer also tells us how to do it! Forget profit, just get the job done quickly. That's what we've done, with both Lane and La-Z-Boy!

TRUE OR FALSE

Q: Cain's has never sold this many dining and casual dining sets at this low of a price -- ever!

A: TRUE! (oh yeah!!!) The department has gotten stale, and the boss said to move 'em, because he's tired of looking at this stuff. (Many marked at savings of 50%!)

TRUE OR FALSE

Q: Some of the wall decor at Cain's came over on the Mayflower!

A: FALSE! But the cob webs would make you think so... pictures, mirrors, etc., at give-away prices!

TRUE OR FALSE

Q: The three panelists featured on this week's Cain's television commercial have signed contracts and moved to Hollywood!

A: FALSE! Wrong-o -- They are really contented salespeople vying for notoriety! (But hurry in -- agents might be calling them soon!)

Firefighters corner range fire east of Carey

By N.S. Nokkavind
Times-News writer

expect to have it out sometime today.

"They're having pretty good success," Carlos Mendiola, fire management officer at the Shoshone BLM office, said Tuesday evening. "But they'll be on it through the night and into Wednesday."

SHOSHONE - Firefighters have cornered a 1,500-acre range fire east of Carey and within 15 miles of Craters of the Moon National Monument.

Though it still was burning Tuesday evening, about 55 Bureau of Land Management firefighters have the blaze trapped between existing roads and a lava flow and the 150 firefighters battling that two-day-old 300-acre blaze.

Neither blaze threatened any structures. The National Weather Service recorded as many as 2,000 lightning strikes across the state in a three-hour period during the morning Tuesday. Forecasters said the thunderstorm pattern would continue into Thursday.

The Forest Service reports that lightning strikes set fire to a couple of trees near Anderson Creek and Boardman Pass and set two fires in the hills south of Burley.

On the southern half of the Sawtooth National Forest, a strategic retardant drop from an aerial tanker on Monday stopped a potentially serious blaze just southeast of Independence Lakes dead in its tracks, spokeswoman Barbara Todd said.

Crews were mopping up that site and the 5-acre Connor Ridge Fire to the north near Mount Harrison.

Armed thief takes cash from Maverik store

TWIN FALLS - An armed robber walked off with an undetermined amount of money from the Maverik Country Store on Tuesday afternoon, Twin Falls police Sgt. Jim Milton said.

The man entered the store on Washington Street at 3:35 p.m., lifted his shirt, showed the clerk a gun and told her she wouldn't be hurt if she did what he said.

The clerk gave him what money she had and he walked away with it in a white bag, Milton said. The clerk called police after the robber left.

The clerk was alone in the store with a friend, who did not witness the robbery, and nobody was hurt, Milton said.

The thief was described as white, aged 30 to 35, wearing a green T-shirt, jeans and a baseball cap.

Oklahoma trucker remains critical after I-84 accident

BURLEY - An Oklahoma man remained in critical condition Tuesday, two days after his tractor-trailer rig plunged down an embankment off I-84.

Floyd Lee Roberts Jr., 48, of Kelleysville, Okla., was flown from Minidoka Memorial Hospital to LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City Sunday night when he was in intensive care late Tuesday afternoon, said a hospital spokesperson.

Roberts lost control of his truck at about 2:22 p.m. Sunday, six miles west of Burley. The truck went into the median, taking 50 feet of guardrail with it, said Lorrie Oliver, dispatcher for the Idaho State Police.

The truck continued over a 20-foot embankment, where it crushed through two more guardrails on a county road, Oliver said. Police are continuing their investigation into the accident, and citations are pending, she said.

Sportsmen invited to meet new area F&G commissioner

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls area sportsmen have an opportunity to get acquainted with newly appointed Fish and Game Commissioner Wesley Rose of Jerome, at a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the KMYT community meeting room.

Rose will meet with Wood River sportsmen at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Hailey Gun Club clubhouse in Ohio Gulch and July 31 at the Glenns Ferry senior citizens' center.

Symms invites transportation secretary to town meeting

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Solutions for the nation's crumbling roads, bridges and highways will be addressed during Thursday's Video Town Meeting scheduled by Idaho Sen. Steve Symms.

The Republican senator has invited Samuel K. Skinner, Secretary of Transportation, to join him on the call-in program that airs at 7:30 p.m. Cable customers in the Magic Valley can watch the program on channel 10.

Local delegation makes pitch for high school rodeo finals

SHAWNEE, Okla. - A delegation from Twin Falls County made its pitch Tuesday to host the National High School Finals Rodeo from 1993 through 1995.

The group, whose trip was funded in part by a grant from West One Bank, made its bid to have the rodeo held at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filner.

The Twin Falls group's bid included a video produced to promote the event. Twin Falls will be competing against bids from Pueblo, Colo., and Gillette, Wyo.

If Twin Falls' preliminary bid is accepted, the committee will make its final bid in Denver next January.

The rodeo would bring 1,200 contestants, 1,400 horses and 6,000 support people to the Twin Falls area each July, filling 80 motel rooms and 500 RV spaces.

DOE plans public meeting on INEL environmental cleanup

TWIN FALLS - The federal Energy Department has scheduled a public meeting on environmental cleanup plans at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Officials will present details of the government plan, answer questions and take comment on the plan at 7 p.m. Aug. 6 at the Canyon Springs Inn, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls.

Copies of the plan are available at the INEL office at 1061 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., or by calling 526-1318.

Written comment will be accepted until Sept. 10. They should be mailed to Jerry Lyle, 785 DOE Place, Idaho Falls 83402.

Hailey considers meters to curb heavy water use

By Susan Bailey
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - Heavy water users would pay larger fees each month if the city approves a proposed water meter system. Under the meter system, each household would pay for the amount of water consumed. But before this can happen, Hailey must seek bids from several companies.

During Monday night's City Council meeting, Jim Henry of Sensus Technologies in Boise told the council Sensus Technologies and Rockwell International offer a highly respected water meter system that uses telephone lines to read meters, eliminating the need for on-site meter-readers. According to studies by Sensus Technologies, Henry said, Hailey has excessive water waste, and that means excessive water treatment costs.

Under the meter system, however, the consumption typically drops, he said.

"People cut back if it costs them," Henry said. "Water consumption drops when the bills go from $10 to $50."

He said cities that install water meters, on a national average, reduce their total water use by 30 to 45 percent. However, water conservation is not guaranteed.

City officials are concerned that with continued growth in Hailey, existing water pipes might soon be overtaxed.

The study of water meters is in the preliminary stages. Please see WATER/B2

Mice flourishing in Minidoka, Jerome counties

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

JEROME - The builder of a better mouse trap would find scores of Jerome and Minidoka farmers beating a path to his door this year.

Ditch banks and field margins here are riddled with mouse burrows. The scurrying hordes are annoying farmers and gnawing on grains, potatoes, alfalfa, sugar beets and, occasionally, a little bit of poisoned wheat.

"I don't recollect them ever being any worse than they are this year," said Jerome County Agricultural Agent Bob Ohlenschlen.

The problem is worse this year following a warm fall and winter. Ohlenschlen had no estimate of acres infested by the rodents.

Wheat laced with zinc phosphide is the main control for the mighty mice - but farmers who don't want to Mickey Mouse around need to be licensed by the State of Idaho before they can apply the poison or they need to hire a licensed pesticide applicator.

Even then, the poison may not be used on cropland, Ohlenschlen said. Field margins, which provide excellent mouse habitat, may be treated, however.

Irrigation ditch banks also provide good habitat because weed growth often protects the rodents from predators. Their burrowing weakens ditch banks and creates leaks.

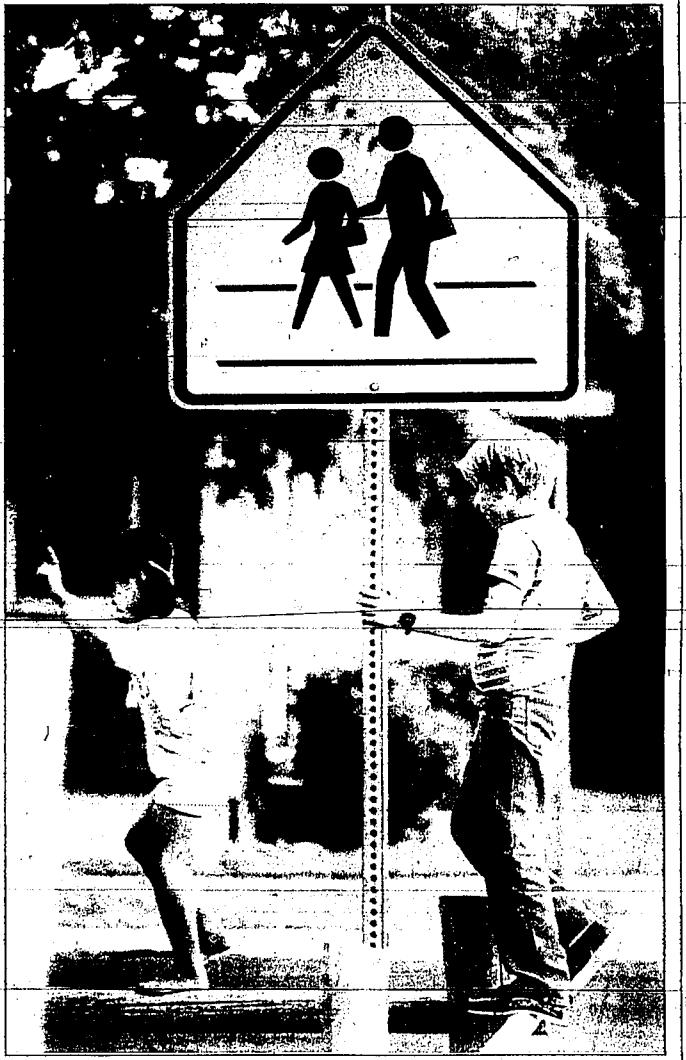

The mice will likely continue to plague farmers even after harvest, when colder temperatures drive them indoors.

Twin Falls County has had fewer problems with mice than its northern neighbors, but a few rural gardeners have complained of the pests, Agriculture Agent Bob Vodranska said.

But in Minidoka County, Agriculture Agent Ivan Hopkins said demand is high for the poison.

"We're having difficulty keeping enough material on hand to supply growers' needs," he said.

Balancing act

Normally, it is a corner where schoolchildren cross Second Avenue West in Twin Falls, but on Monday evening the children, here David Holmquist, 10, and Toukta Phonomany, 7, were more interested crossing fence rails. The two, along with other youngsters, tested their balancing skills on the fence at the Holmquist residence.

4 girls arrested following gang-related vandalism

the report said.

TWIN FALLS - Four Twin Falls girls were arrested Monday evening in connection with gang-related vandalism at Harrison Park.

The girls, two 15-year-olds, a 16-year-old and a 17-year-old, were charged with malicious destruction and were released to their parents, according to a police report.

A patrol officer questioned the girls as they saw them leave the park at about 7:30 p.m. Slogans, such as "OEG," "Cover-girl," "Play-girl," "Home-girl," "Shy-girl," and "Donny-O," were spray-painted in blue and green on an out-building, two picnic tables and a tree.

The girls told police that they had a feud with another gang and were expressing their opinions in spray paint,

Twin Falls police Detective Gene Richie did not know what gang the girls are affiliated with or with whom they are feuding. Detective Ron Robertson, who has been investigating gang-related incidents in the city, was on vacation Tuesday.

Members of three Asian youth gangs - King Cobra Boys of Fresno, Calif., Asian Street Walkers/Warriors of Sacramento, Calif., and Oriental Crip from Salt Lake City - were identified in Twin Falls this spring.

Members of the King Cobra Boys were involved in a spray-painting spree at Shoshone Falls Park and Dierkes Lake in May. A member of the Asian Street Walkers/Warriors was picked up in connection with a drive-by shooting in April and an aggravated assault in which several juveniles reported having their feet shot at.

Man seeks $2.01 million for abusive treatment after arrest

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

Named are 14 city and county officials, including Jerome County Commissioners George Andrus, Carl Montgomery and Veronica Lierman, Sheriff Larry Gold, former police chief Greg Will, Mayor Gerald Ostler and current City Council members Don Jacobson and Rocky Jackson.

JEROME - A disabled man is seeking $2.01 million from Jerome County and the city of Jerome, charging that he was unlawfully arrested and was physically abused in the process.

Fred Heath says he was arrested "without probable cause" on Jan. 29, 1989, according to the suit filed in 5th District Court. The two arresting officers "brutally and maliciously struck, battered and assaulted" him and arrested him "for the sole purpose of intimidating, humiliating, defaming and injuring (him)," the suit says.

Heath spent the night at the Jerome County Jail without medical or mental examination in "dungeon-like solitary confinement" where he was forced to sleep on a solid concrete floor, according to the suit filed by Twin Falls attorneys Joe Stanzak and Jeff Stoker.

Upon release from custody, Heath was treated for a severe elbow fracture, which required surgery, and contusions and abrasions to the wrists and chest, the suit says.

"I've never seen anything come of a suit like this yet," Andrus said Tuesday.

The two Jerome city police officers who made the arrest could not be reached for comment. One, Steve Barrett, has moved to the Reno, Nev., area, Jerome Police Chief George Silver III said. Cpl. Michael Wamboldt could not be reached through the police department.

Tom Junier, who was a jailer at the time but is now a Jerome city police officer, declined to comment. The second jailer who was named, Richard Blumites, is no longer with the sheriff's department and did not return calls to his home.

A Fred Heath, 61, of Eden, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct on Jan. 29, 1989, Jerome County records show. The charge was dismissed a month later.

Businessman seeks expansion of Ketchum mobile home park

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM—More affordable housing may be available during the next year if local businessman Ron Sharp has his way. In a press release to The Times-News Tuesday, Sharp's development team announced it will seek approval from the local zoning commission for an ambitious expansion plan at "The Meadows" mobile home park in Ketchum.

The plan includes the addition of 75 mobile home spaces, day care and playground facilities and a laundry room, as well as self-storage areas and a new manager's office.

The plan was designed by David Clinger, a land planner from Denver, for Kanstar, the group that owns the park.

Clinger's plan also includes expanding the sewer and water treatment plant, and installing a large holding tank for water.

Kanstar officials say the water tank will not only accommodate the new units, but will also allow an automatic irrigation system and fire protection throughout the park.

Kanstar officials said they have met informally with Leonard Harlig, vice chairman of the Blaine County Zoning Commission, and felt he was receptive to the rezoned proposed changes would require.

At this time, the mobile home park exists under a grandfather clause, and is officially zoned for single-family dwellings. Harlig said he feels the expansion plan would help to alleviate the housing shortage in the Ketchum area.

Red Top Meadows Homeowners Association

phone spokesperson Barbara Crawford said in a phone interview Tuesday that the association fully supports the proposed changes and that members feel Sharp has the best interests of the residents in mind.

They really are bending over backwards to accommodate everything," Crawford said.

The Homeowners Association was formed earlier this year to help protest what members claimed were new unfair eviction and upgrade policies for the park.

Members were also concerned that Sharp would close the park and take advantage of the zoning laws to develop single-family homes on the property.

Crawford says this is no longer the case and that Sharp and his management team have acted in "good faith."

Although some of the residents are going to be hard pressed to meet the Sept. 1 deadline to conform to his new standards, Sharp has been more than fair in working with the residents, she said.

She said Sharp gave the association a copy of the revised maintenance standards for negotiation before it was presented to the residents.

But the association sent it back to Sharp without any changes.

Crawford also said the park managers have cooperated with the residents who had to make major changes.

"We are very comfortable with what they are doing," Crawford said. "We have a lot of faith in them that they're doing the right thing."

In one instance, Crawford said, Kanstar helped an older couple who had lived at the park for 30 years pay for $1,700 worth of repairs needed to meet the new standards.

The repairs were financed in part by Kanstar and in part by the Homeowners Association and an anonymous donor.

Crawford said that residents of the park are planning a fund sale Saturday to help raise money to upgrade their units. Park management is allowing residents to hold the sale on park property, Crawford said.

Sharp's press release also stated that The Meadows is considering keeping the RV park open year round to accommodate the increasing amount of construction and other service workers who will stay in the area through the winter.

Sharp said a rent increase has been discussed with the Homeowners Association and will go into effect Dec. 1 as well.

Contractor looks for toxic waste at Twin Falls site

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — A contractor working for the Environmental Protection Agency began digging up city owned property Tuesday in search of possible toxic waste.

"They told me it was all pretty anonymous stuff," said City Manager Tom Courtney. "But the guy who owned the property used to own a salvage yard and they felt they should at least check it out."

Courtney said the EPA was not sure, as of Friday, if the property is indeed owned by the city. But Community Development Director LaMar Orton said Tuesday the property under investigation does belong to the city.

"They told me they were going to have backhoe in today (Tuesday) digging up the ground to see what's under there," Orton said.

The property, located at the intersection of Blake Street and Fourth Avenue West on the edge of Rock Creek Canyon, could have soil contaminated with polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs.

PCBs are a family of industrial compounds that were used in electric transformers and for other purposes until they were banned by the Environmental Protection Agency 15 years ago. PCBs are carcinogens that accumulate in animal tissue.

Mark Masarik, EPA's waste section

chief for Idaho, called the digging a "preliminary site inspection." Although not entirely familiar with the case, he said soil samples will probably be analyzed "to try to characterize what's there."

And then further action will be taken if needed.

No other EPA officials could be reached for comment Tuesday and the contractor could not be identified.

McRoberts replaces Anderson as legislative health committee head

By Michelle Cole
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State Sen. Joyce McRoberts will step in for retiring Sen. Larry Anderson as head of a legislative committee studying health care issues.

The Twin Falls Republican was officially named co-chairman of the five-year study committee last week by Senate President Pat Tem Michael Crapo, R-Idaho Falls.

McRoberts, who has also been offered the chairmanship of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee if she is re-elected, said she believes health care will be "the issue of the 90's."

Oregon lawmakers, for example, are currently grappling with a state health insurance plan and whether that plan should cover high-cost organ transplants.

Idaho lawmakers established their own special study committee last year in order to look at long term health care needs in the state.

The committee compiled a 15-item list of health concerns that include health care access, health costs, preventive care, substance abuse, teen-age pregnancy and AIDS.

"I think my priority would be preventive medicine, not only for health care but mental health too," McRoberts said.

Rural health needs are also among McRoberts' top concerns.

"I'm very conscious of that, being born and raised in Salmon, Idaho," she said. "I don't know if we can afford to keep all small community hospitals open, but we need to look at programs to bring the physicians or nurse practitioners in to give initial health care."

McRoberts was also recently named to the Western States Recycling Coalition, a group consisting of representatives from 13 western states that was formed to study solid waste management and recycling in the region.

Heath says his constitutional rights were violated, including protection against unreasonable search and seizure, denial of due process and subjection to cruel and unusual punishment.

As a result of the incident, Heath says he incurred medical expenses, loss of earnings and emotional suffering including anxiety, depression, humiliation, stigmatization, embarrassment and injury to reputation.

The city was negligent in employing improperly trained officers and for failing to investigate allegations of mistreatment and unlawful arrest, the suit charges.

"The use of excessive and unreasonable force by the defendants was grossly disproportionate to the need presented and was inspired by malicious or sadistic tendencies rather than merely a careless or unwise excess of zeal," the suit says.

Mayor Ostler and council member Jacobson had not heard of the suit Tuesday. Jacobson declined to comment, but Ostler said officers Barrett and Wamboldt have never been abusive or violent.

The county failed to provide Heath with medical attention, failed to employ adequate personnel and was not equipped to identify and respond to the needs of handicapped and disabled persons, the suit says.

Heath is described as "totally disabled, having difficulty walking, hearing, talking, conversing and has major impairment of motor skills."

Grifford could not be reached for comment and Ostler declined to comment except to defend the county jail's conditions.

"I don't feel that's accurate as far as the jail is concerned," she said. "We've been proactive with the Jerome County Jail. We've improved."

Whether or not jailers are trained to work with disabled inmates is "a matter that's going to be looked into," Andrus said.

In other business, the City Council:

- Appointed four new members to the Planning and Zoning Commission. Under a city ordinance, any zoning member who misses three consecutive meetings is eliminated from the commission. The council appointed Jan Hayes to replace Alvin Josephy, Kathy Lovell to replace Larry Sowersby, Gordon Steinbis will fill the position vacated by Bill Bentz and Brad Siemer will replace Ted Uhrig.
- Proposed a 7 percent across the board pay raise for city employees in preliminary discussions of the 1990-1991 budget. The city is also considering adding optical and dental plans to the employee insurance package at a cost increase of $19 per month per person.

Jerome kindergarten center awaits extension of East 10th Street

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Jerome's new kindergarten center will be built, but not before the street that will sit in front of it is finished.

And that, according to Jerome City Zoning Officer Larry Johns, is the responsibility of the Jerome School District.

According to Jerome's subdivision ordinance, putting in the street and gutters is the responsibility of the district, Johns said. The city will be responsible for maintenance after the street is finished.

At a meeting Monday, the Jerome Planning and Zoning Commission heard the request by School Board member Ben Neff to rezone the 20-acre site and to extend East 10th Street to the school site.

Neighbors didn't object to the kindergarten center, but were concerned about increased traffic when East 10th Street is extended, Neff reported.

Plans are to extend the street to the kindergarten center, but not to the 1-mile road east of Jerome, Neff said. When a new elementary school is built on the property, it might be necessary to extend East 10th farther, he said.

The P&Z Commission will recommend that the City Council rezone the property from agricultural use to neighborhood services, according to Johns. The city has zoning responsibility for the 20 acres since it is in Jerome's impact zone, although the property is located outside the city limits, he said.

Wilbur Brown, Jerome superintendent of schools, said he would work with city officials on the street extension.

Bids for the $190,000 kindergarten center that will be adequate for 160 students will be opened Aug. 9 according to Kent Krohn, representing Leatham & Krohn Architects of Boise. The kindergarten center could be completed as early as mid-October, according to Brown.

The board is considering placing mobile classrooms at Washington and Jefferson elementary schools, and holding classes in churches and school gymnasiums and lunchrooms to allow enough space for kindergarten students until the new center is completed, according to Mike Gibson, the district's business manager. Teachers and principals are willing to make adjustments to assure kindergarten classes start on time, Brown said.

At its meeting Monday night, the School Board:

- Reviewed the year-end financial report presented by Gibson.
- "School District No. 261 ended the year remarkably close to expectations," Gibson said. "Richard Kugler, former superintendent, did a good job in budgeting and spending."
- Income was $37,000 more than budgeted and expense $215,260 less than planned, which allows the district to start the new year in a positive cash position, Gibson said.
- Unanimously approved a 10-cent increase in school lunch costs. With the 10-cent raise, elementary school lunches will cost $1 and junior high and high school lunches $1.10. Breakfasts will be increased to 50 cents, a 5-cent raise.
- The 1989-90 food service program had a $6,718 loss which prompted the board to increase the student rates.
- Heard a report from Barbara Draper, the district's food service director, that federally provided commodities will be reduced this year. Dairy products including butter, as well as beef, turkey and some wheat products will be eliminated or drastically cut, Draper said.
- "We used to plan our menus around the commodities, but we can't do that anymore," Draper reported. Putting out bids for other food products has reduced costs, she said.
- Accepted a low bid of $79,621 from Modern Roofing Company of Boise to re-roof the junior high school building.
- Decided to have a local contractor make other improvements in the junior high building at an estimated cost of $8,000.

- Heard a report by Brown that the district had received approval of four requests for experimental projects submitted by local teachers. The approved funds totaled $10,810.
- There were 377 grant requests submitted to the state by Idaho educators for $3,615,999, however, only $250,000 was available. "Jerome did very well to get as much as we did," Brown said.
- Unanimously approved increasing mileage reimbursement to 23 cents a mile, a 1-cent increase.
- Accepted the resignation of Julie McKay, Washington school secretary, and hired Patricia Rose as an elementary school teacher.
- Set up a new item on the monthly board meeting agenda that will allow a 15-20 minute period for public input and comments.

Utahns celebrate Mormon pioneers' arrival

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utahns celebrated the state's Pioneer Day holiday Tuesday with parades, fireworks, picnics and barbecues, commemorating the arrival of Mormon settlers in the Salt Lake Valley 143 years ago.

A total of 18 parades, including color and pageantry to communities throughout the state, but the unrivaled flagship of Pioneer Day processions was the Days of '47 Parade in the capital city.

Tens of thousands of people, many of whom camped overnight on city streets to insure choice vantage points, lined Salt Lake City's Main Street to watch 150 entrants strut their holiday stuff.

As Utah remembered its heritage, state and local governments shut down for the day. Many Utahns headed for mountains, lakes and other popular recreation spots.

The Utah Highway Patrol called in troopers on overtime and put its aircraft into the air to monitor speeding motorists and drunk drivers, while firefighters were on standby for what usually is one of their busiest days of the year.

For the hundreds of runners participating in the premiere sports event of the holiday, the Denver News 55, Radio Marathon, the holiday began early. The 26-mile, 385-yard race got under way at 5:15 a.m.

Gordon Hyde clocked 2:29:02 to win the men's division, while Laurie Hutchinson was the women's winner with a time of 3:02:53. The companion 10-K race was won by Jon Sinclair, for the men, and Kelly Cutler, for the women. They had times of 28:16 and 31:27, respectively.

A new city ordinance kept parade fans from starting their sidewalk campout until 8 p.m. Monday, and ended the practice of reserving space for looters. Nonetheless, the downtown parade route was jammed with spectators when a motorcycle unit began the procession about 9 a.m.

Parade entries included politicians eager to see and be seen this election year, members of the Utah Jazz professional basketball team, business and civic groups, horses, antique cars, beauty queens and 25 bands from as far away as Canada.

The parade ended at Liberty Park, where the festivities continued with the annual Neighbor Fair — an all-day gala of music, dancing, food and fireworks expected to draw thousands.

Those honored as modern-day "pioneers" included showman Eugene Jelesnik, cited for his entertainment contributions and encouragement of performing talent at any age, and 95-year-old Eva Mae Bursler Isaacs of Logan, honored for her hundreds of hours of service to the needy.

The remaining three include Floyd Seeger, Ogdon, honored for 40 years of medical service and the introduction of a medical clinic at the rescue mission in Ogdon; Utah Jazz forward Thurl Bailey, recognized for his leadership in drug prevention and education of Utah's youth; and Bart Anderson, St. George, honored for his devotion to the history of Utah and volunteer time promoting the state.

"It takes a certain mettle to be a pioneer. The pioneers, who founded Utah and the Salt Lake Valley had a certain drive and determination that allowed them to settle this area," said Jack Erdmann, co-chairman of the Days of '47 Parade.

"But there are pioneers in the East bloc, in medicine and space pioneers. We want to honor pioneers in all fields of life and in all times of history," he said.

Also present in the parade were President Thomas S. Monson and his wife, Francis, who represented the Mormon Church's First Presidency. Gov. Norm Bangert donned a cowboy hat and Western wear for the event. A special honorary guest was Alma G. Farnsworth, wife of television inventor Philo T. Farnsworth.

In Days of '47 Parade judging, a float entered by the Salt Lake Granite Stake of the Mormon Church won first in Division 1 of the historical category. The "Miracle of the Gulls" float, which depicted the legendary salvation of pioneer crops by seagulls, also was the parade's Sweepstakes winner.

The Taylorsville West Stake took the title in Division II of the same category. Entitled "Asian Contributions to Utah's Industry and Commerce," the float displayed a garden scene, complete with fountains, geraniums and a flag.

KTVX television's "For Kids Sake Float" float, a multi-colored smiling clown, won honors in the Business category. West High School was first in the Civic competition, and Murray City won the Civic-Government category.

Lightning spawns new spot fires in backcountry

The Associated Press

Lightning pounded south-central Idaho again Tuesday, spawning dozens of new spot fires in the tinder-dry backcountry.

The Tuesday storm threw hundreds of strikes along the Payette River north of Boise, and dispatchers scrambled to send in small smokescraper and helicopter teams to catch them before they exploded out of control.

"We haven't had time to count how many we've got yet," said John Russell, dispatcher for the Boise National Forest. "I haven't stopped to count the pins on the map."

The same storm ignited about 10 fires on state lands around Dry Buck Ridge between the communities of Gardena and Banks on the Payette River. One had reached about 30 acres by Tuesday night.

"We just trying to ferry in all the people we've got," said Don Stockton, an area supervisor for the State Department of Lands. "We've got a rash of fires."

The National Weather Service recorded as many as 2,000 lightning strikes across the state in a three-hour period during the morning, and forecasters said the weather pattern bearing the thunderstorms would persist into Thursday.

"We had a hot storm go through about four o'clock ... and there were 50 to 75 hard ground strikes," Payette National Forest spokeswoman Patty Jacobsen said. "They're getting heliack crews on them as quickly as possible."

Payette Forest crews contended with about 13 small fires Tuesday, of which half were controlled to the point that firefighters were retrieved for possibly more starts ahead.

Grocers striking union workers intimidating shoppers

PORTLAND (AP) — A spokesman for Portland-area grocers alleged Tuesday that striking union workers were intimidating shoppers outside supermarkets.

Members of the United Food and Commercial Workers Local 555 went on strike Saturday against 116 supermarkets in a five-county area. The union is at odds with the grocers over provisions for health benefits in a new contract.

After pickets were set up at Kienow's markets, more than 5,000 clerks, meat cutters, and deli and bakery workers were locked out of their jobs at other stores, including big chains such as Fred Meyer and Albertson's.

However, pickets so far have limited to Kienow's, Thriftway and Safeway.

Steve Erdmann of Food Employers Inc., which is representing the grocers, said business was down some at those stores because of the strike. He but declined to say how much.

Rick Sawyer, a spokesman for Local 555 of the United Food and Commercial Workers, maintained some stores have been "devastated" by the strike.

Erdmann said grocers, who have vowed to stick together through the strike, will do what's necessary to limit the intimidating behavior of pickets.

"We're looking into that and we're going to put a stop to that if the pickets don't clean up their act," he said.

Erdmann said pickets were blocking store driveways with their cars and directing profane language and gestures toward customers.

Because of the strike, stores have limited their hours to 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Managers and replacement workers are running the grocers. Some stores also have closed their fresh meat and fish departments because of the higher fish levels those jobs demand, Erdmann said. Deliveries were slowed by Teamsters who declined to drive trucks through picket lines, but Erdmann said store workers were unloading products.

"It's just a little bit of a hassle," he said.

Erdmann said employees were ready for a long strike.

The workers, whose previous three-year contracts expired July 14, went on strike Saturday. The union claims the strike affects about 6,000 employees. Grocers estimate 5,360 employees are off the job.

Ranger stations placed on historic list

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Two Nez Percé National Forest ranger stations, one of them built nearly 70 years ago, have been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

The register is a list of protected and significant historic sites. The two stations went onto the list last month, officials say.

They are the Moose Creek Ranger Station, located in the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness, and the Fern Ranger Station, located on the Selway River.

Grange diagnosed with Parkinson's disease

LAKE WALES, Fla. — Harold "Red" Grange, football's legendary Galloping Ghost, has been diagnosed as having Parkinson's disease but should be home from an extended-care facility in a few weeks, his wife said.

"He won't be going dancing," said Muggs Grange, his wife of more than 49 years, "but he's going to outlive all of us."

The 87-year-old Grange, one of the 17 charter members in the Pro Football Hall of Fame, went in for a checkup last month. Lake Wales Hospital and was hospitalized briefly, Mrs. Grange said Monday.

Grange was the rage of the 1920s when he made the number "1777" famous during a fabulous career as a running back at the University of Illinois and later in the NFL with the Chicago Bears.

NCAA postpones hearing into Missouri charges

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The NCAA, at the request of attorneys for Coach Norm Stewart, has postponed its hearing into allegations against the Missouri basketball program, the school announced Monday.

Missouri was scheduled to appear before the Committee on Infractions Aug. 11 in Colorado Springs. The next Infractions Committee hearing will be Sept. 28-30 in Kansas City.

"The schedule was changed as a result of a request from lawyers representing Coach Norm Stewart and assistant coach Bob Sundvold, who asked for an extension of the date for submission of their responses to the NCAA's letter of inquiry," Chancellor Haskell Monroe said in a statement. "The new due date for submission has now been set at Aug. 24."

David Berni, NCAA director of enforcement, said it was not certain Missouri would be heard at the September meeting.

U.S. all wet at Goodwill; Soviets rule court

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Basketball was another bust for the United States at the Goodwill Games, where America's pride rode high on the "waves" of swimmers Matt Biondi and Summer Sanders.

It's been a wet and wild Goodwill Games for the United States. In the pool, it reigns supreme. On the basketball court, it was just another mortifying night against the Soviets.

The American men lost 92-85 in the first meeting of the two teams since the Soviets won at the Seoul Olympics in 1988 en route to the gold medal.

"How can we be embarrassed when we played our best?" U.S. coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "These are 20-year-old kids trying to do their best, and you can't put the weight of a whole country on them. They're playing against me."

Biondi won two more gold medals, giving him four for the games, and Sanders won her third. Dave Wharton also won a U.S. swimming gold as American muscle continued to assert itself in the water.

This was the day that the showdown of Seattle moved off the sidelines, where Lenzy Burrell proved the day before that he was the fastest man in the world — at least for now — as he beat Carl Lewis in the 100 meters.

While the United States sought domination in some sports, it sought only a foothold in others. In team handball, the old sport that looks like basketball with soccer-style goals, the U.S. men reached the medals round for the first time in any major international meet with a 23-22 victory over Japan.

Basketball

These were different players, the coaches are different, and it certainly wasn't an Olympics, but there was a lot riding on this game. The Americans hadn't lost to the Soviets in a major international tournament in 16 years when they were beaten in Seoul.

Now, make it two in a row for the Soviets, although this was in the round-robin part of the tournament and the two teams could meet again.

Valeri Tikhonenko, the only man on either team who was in Seoul, had 30 points. The United States now must beat Italy Wednesday night to have any chance of advancing to the medal round.

The Soviets displayed the United States defensively, and they used their muscle to take the Americans out of sync offensively. Alonzo Mourning had 20 points and 14 rebounds for the United States.

Swimming

Biondi, who won five gold medals at the Seoul Olympics in 1988, claimed his third and fourth of these games in the men's 100-meter freestyle and 400-meter medley relay.

He already had won gold medals in the 50-meter freestyle and the 400 freestyle relay.

His time in the 100 was 49.02 seconds, well off his world mark of 48.42. Biondi holds the eight fastest times ever in this event.

"I came to the Goodwill Games thinking I was going to swim some special things, and none of them ever really materialized," he said after the 100.

It materialized a little later in the evening. Biondi swam the freestyle anchor of the medley relay. He started out 4-5 meters behind the Soviets, but won at the finish in 3:40.97. The Soviets had 3:41.26.

Wharton, who won a gold medal in the 400 individual medley in a rare dead heat two days ago, won his second race in another near dead heat. He beat U.S. teammate Ron Kamnagby by .09 seconds in the 200 individual medley.

Sanders, meanwhile, capped what became a U.S. women's rout in the pool with an easy victory in the 200-meter butterfly, giving the 17-year-old Californian three gold medals. U.S. women won 9 of 13 individual swimming medals.

"It might sink in when I get back home," Sanders said.

Her time was 2:09.46, making her the fifth fastest swimmer ever in the event.

Track and Field

Michael Johnson, the fastest man in the world this year at 200 meters, led all the way in his first major international meet. He finished in 20.55 running into a strong headwind.

Dan O'Brien, runner-up in the nationals, took a 218-point lead after four events of the decathlon.

The rapidly improving O'Brien, coming off his career best of a wind-aided 5,483 points, built his advantage in the 100 meters (10.99), long jump (25 feet, 11 1/2 inches), shot put (49-9) and high jump (6-9 1/2).

Nadezhda Ryashkina of the Soviet Union broke the world record in the women's 10-kilometer walk by 29 seconds. Ryashkina, 23, was timed in 41 minutes, 56.2 seconds, erasing the mark of 42:25.2 set by Kerry Saxby of Australia last May 26.

U.S.A.'s Kenny Anderson is guarded by U.S.S.R.'s Oleg Moleshchanko in the 1st half of the U.S.A. vs. U.S.S.R. basketball game at the Goodwill Games.

Veteran Shue joins 76ers as new GM

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Gene Shue, the fourth-winning coach in NBA history and a former coach of the 76ers, was named the Philadelphia team's general manager Tuesday.

Shue's teams won 784 games in his 23 seasons as an NBA head coach. He, Bill Fitch, Don Nelson and Cotton Fitzsimmons are the only coaches in league history named coach of the year twice.

"I think we're very fortunate to have a man like Gene available for this job," said owner Harold Katz. "After meeting all the candidates, I felt Gene was the best experience and his know-how made him perfect for the job."

Shue succeeds John Nash, who resigned at the end of last season and is now general manager of the Washington Bullets.

In six years at Washington, Shue won four division titles and coached the playoffs five times. He became coach of the Sixers following the 1972-73 season.

He took over a team which the previous year compiled a 9-73 record, the worst in NBA history.

But four seasons later, 1976-77, he coached the Sixers to a 50 victories and into the NBA Finals. He was replaced as coach by Billy Cunningham after six games of his fifth season in Philadelphia.

Shue then went to San Diego, where he took a team that was 27-55 the season before to the Buffalo Braves, to a 43-39 record. He was runner-up for coach of the year that year.

Deal to lure Raiders back to Oakland gains OK

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Alameda County supervisors approved the latest deal to lure the Los Angeles Raiders football team back to Oakland, but board members conceded public perception could hurt chances of success for the $127 million proposal.

The board also on Tuesday approved a new lease agreement with the Oakland Athletics baseball team.

"This is a good deal for the Raiders and the community, and it's also a good deal for the A's because they will reap the advantages of an improved stadium at no cost to the team," Board Chairman Don Perata said after the 4-1 vote on the proposal.

Poky favored at district 'B' Legion tourney

By Brad Breland

Times-News writer

SIOSHONE — Nobody except Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Buñ has won the Southern Region "B" American Legion baseball championship since the Carter Administration, and the odds are pretty good that string will continue this weekend.

The Rebels, Reds and Indians are seeded

1-2-3 in the regional tournament that begins here today.

Last year, the Rebels — who won seven regional titles in the 1980s — finished third in the district, but went on to win the American Legion "B" state tournament. Once again this year, Pocatello comes into the tourney as the favorite to win it all.

The tournament begins this morning with fourth-seeded Jerome (8-6 in conference, 18-8 overall) facing fifth-seeded Twin Falls (6-8; 16-24) at 10:30. Defending district champion Buñ (10-4, 20-20) plays No. 6 seed Malad (2-12; 3-21) at 1:30 p.m. The first round of games concludes at 4:30 p.m. with Idaho Falls (11-3, 20-10) playing No. 7 Shoshone (0-14, 4-28). Pocatello (13-1, 22-5), will play the win-

Nolan Ryan goes after 300th victory

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Nolan Ryan has a bad back, a bad Achilles tendon and a bad bullpen. The baseball gods, however, gave him an ideal opponent for career victory No. 300 — the Yankees.

Ryan hasn't lost to New York in 13 years and is 3-0 against them as a member of the Texas Rangers.

The 1990 Yankees have the worst record in baseball and are the lowest scoring team in the American League. Ryan has already beaten them twice this season.

"It'll be fun. We faced Seaver when he got 300, and we'll try to keep (Ryan) from doing it," the Yankees' Don Mattingly said. "He'll get it, but hopefully not against us."

Seaver was the only pitcher to find the Yankees accommodating for No. 300; Gaylord Perry got his against them, too.

Box seats are being scalped for as high as $175 for Wednesday night's game at Arlington Stadium, in which Ryan will bid to become the 20th pitcher in major-league history to reach 300 victories.

Ryan

that he passed the street he was supposed to turn on.

History indicates to win the 300th game you have to go all the way. Only Early Wynn and Steve Carlton pitched to the distance. Wynn lasted five innings and Carlton pitched eight.

Don Sutton was the last to win 300, in 1986.

Ryan said Tuesday he hopes he can pitch a complete game.

"I want it to be my best personal performance, but I don't want to try to do more than I can," he said.

National League could expand by next March

The Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Prospective ownership groups from 10 communities have submitted requests for baseball expansion questionnaires, and the National League could award two new teams as soon as next March, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

Douglas Danforth, chairman of the league expansion committee, told the St. Petersburg Times that multiple timetable released last month said franchises will be announced by Sept. 30, 1991, that a decision could be made sooner if the process unfolds smoothly.

"We do not want to tarry on this," Danforth told the newspaper. "Once we sift through and decide on the two, we want to go public with it and allow the new owners to get on with things."

Tampa Bay and nine other communities were represented in the requests for expansion questionnaires, Danforth said. The others are Buffalo, N.Y.; Denver; Miami;

Nashville, Tenn.; Orlando; Phoenix, Ariz.; Sacramento, Calif.; Vancouver, B.C.; and Washington, D.C.

Danforth said the presence of three potential Tampa Bay ownership groups would not hurt the area's chances and was, in fact, a positive.

"I don't think (it would hurt). Obviously it makes our job a little more difficult. But it certainly indicates to us that there is very strong interest, and I think that's a plus," Danforth said.

Deal to lure Raiders back to Oakland gains OK

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Alameda County supervisors approved the latest deal to lure the Los Angeles Raiders football team back to Oakland, but board members conceded public perception could hurt chances of success for the $127 million proposal.

The board also on Tuesday approved a new lease agreement with the Oakland Athletics baseball team.

"This is a good deal for the Raiders and the community, and it's also a good deal for the A's because they will reap the advantages of an improved stadium at no cost to the team," Board Chairman Don Perata said after the 4-1 vote on the proposal.

But Supervisor Ed Campbell, who had expressed concern over the previous failed deal, said public perception about the lure-the-Raiders plan is "that we're dealing with a tough organization ... and 'How can we possibly get a deal with (Raiders owner) Al Davis?'"

"Everybody thinks we're going to get trounced again," he added.

However, Campbell said there are benefits in the new 1000-page deal for the county and the city, which have been trying to bring back the club that left the San Francisco Bay Area 12 years ago.

"Guarantees (for ticket sales) have been removed and public money is not jeopardized," he said.

The proposed deal also has benefits for local government leaders, according to the San Jose Mercury News. The newspaper reported that East Bay officials set aside 100 prime football seats for themselves as part of the deal, although they already have four $50,000 sky boxes at their disposal. The seats are worth $60,000-$70,000 each annually.

Under the previous deal, which the Raiders had accepted before local residents objected, the team was offered more than $600 million in ticket guarantees, which put the city's general operating fund at risk.

According to the latest deal, Oakland and Alameda County would sell $127 million in bonds to raise money to loan the Raiders for renovating the Oakland Coliseum and for relocation and related costs.

HBO drops Foreman from Sept. 22 Tyson-Stewart doubleheader

NEW YORK — The Rev. George Foreman is at it again, preaching to the choir in the final, high-profile heavyweight on Earth while at the same time pleading with cable TV networks to allow him to fight a chorus of little angels.

As a result, Foreman is out of a Sept. 22 HBO date originally planned as part of the doubleheader with Mike Tyson-Alex Stewart rounder. The official reason is that HBO and Foreman could not agree on an opponent. But insiders say the real reason is that with Evander Holyfield talking about making his first defense against Evander Holyfield beats heavyweight champ Buster Douglas in October, the 41-year-old Foreman is not taking any chances.

"Nobody went away mad, we just couldn't reach an agreement," HBO president Bob Greenwell said. "We wanted to do an HBO fight, and we were willing to pay HBO dollars." Problem was, Foreman was not willing to fight an "HBO opponent." Foreman shared a bill with Tyson against Mike Tyson-Alex Stewart in two rounds before Tyson started Henry Tillman in one. For Hell Night II, Foreman wanted to fight Francesco Damiani, who has the HBO-guy heavyweight title, but resistance from HBO and later, WBC president Jose Sulaiman, caused Foreman to back off.

Instead, HBO wanted Foreman to meet someone such as Tim Wither- spoon, Michael Dokes or Bonescrush Smith. For its $1 million, HBO was even willing to allow Foreman to fight Renato Snipes, Tyrrell Bizon or British heavyweight Gary Mason. The first Foreman con- sidered was, however, was so laugh- ably that Oklahoma punching bag Wimpy Halstead was the most im- pressive.

"The Foreman people will say they didn't reject anyone," Green- way said. "But they have an answer for every opponent you name." Tuesday, the Foreman camp tried to sell HBO on Alex Garcia, a 28-year-old California journeyman with a 16-1 record. Predictably, HBO said no thanks. "I will go with Tyson-Stewart only. Now, Foreman and Co. are peddling a Garcia fight to either Showtime or NBC."

"I want to fight all the name guys. There's no avoiding anyone," Fore- man said yesterday during a confer- ence call to hype Tuesday's fight against Canadian heavyweight Ken Lakusta in Edmonton on USA Net- work. Foreman will pocket $250,000 plus a percentage of the gate for fighting the 18-16 Lakusta.

But Foreman may have been closer to the truth when asked if he would consider fighting former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, he said, "I certainly would. Jerry Quarry, too. I'm even thinking about fighting Pee Wee Herman."

He probably is, but not on HBO Sept. 22.

Brewers beat Red Sox in 10th inning, 6-5

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mike Felder singled in the winning run in the 10th inning Tuesday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

Darryl Hamilton opened the 10th with a single off Jerry Reed (2-2) and moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Greg Brock before scoring on Felder's single to center.

The loss was the Red Sox' fourth straight and 15th in their last 20. Dan Plesac (2-3) was the winner despite giving Wade Boggs' game-tying two-run triple in the ninth.

Plesac hit Kevin Romine with a pitch and gave up a two-out single to Tim Lincecum. Boggs hit a liner down the left field line that grazed the top of the wall and was just over the leaping reach of Hamilton. The ball bounced off as Hamilton hurt his elbow and Romine and Naehring scored.

Milwaukee took a 3-1 lead in the second on Billy Spiers' bases-loaded double following a key Red Sox error.

Greg Vaughn singled and Rob Deer walked with two out. Red Sox first baseman Carlos Quintana then muffed B.J. Surhoff's bounce, load- ing the bases.

Spiers followed with a double into the right field corner, clearing the Second baseman Jody Reed's throw to the plate appeared to have Surhoff, but catcher John Marzano bobbled the ball and then lost it when Surhoff ran into him. That made it 3-1.

Boston scored once in the first, even though the Red Sox collected four out of Milwaukee starter Bill Krueger.

Reed and Naehring singled and Boggs' double-play grounder produced the run. Quintana and Mike Greenwell singled and Tom Brunansky walked intentionally to load the bases after a Krueger wild pitch but Marzano flied out.

A walk and singles by Quintana and Greenwell cut Milwaukee's lead to 3-2 in the third.

Milwaukee added its fourth run in the sixth on Robin Yount's triple and a single by Greg Vaughn.

Boston made it 4-3 in the seventh on a walk, groundout and Boggs' RBI single off reliever Jaime Navar- ro.

But the Brewers used another Red Sox error to score again in the sev- enth. Four of the five runs allowed by starter Greg Harris in 6 2-3 in- nings were unearned.

Spiers singled and after two field- er's choices, Gary Sheffield extend- ed his hitting streak to 12 games with another single. Rob Murphy re- placed Harris and got Dave Parker to hit a high foul pop, but Boggs missed it. Given a second chance, Parker delivered an RBI single.

Royals 5, Blue Jays 3

TORONTO (AP) — Hot-hitting George Brett's two-run homer in the 13th inning lifted the Kansas City Royals to a 5-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Tuesday night.

Brett's second singled was one out off loser Duane Ward (1-6) before Brett followed with his fifth homer of the year, over the center field wall. Earlier, Brett extended his hitting streak to 14 games, and he's 25-for-58 (.431) in that span.

Steve Fung (8-4) pitched the last three innings, allowing one hit, for the win.

Toronto took a 2-0 lead into the ninth, but Mike MacFarlane's two- out, two-run homer keyed a three- run rally for the Royals.

Eisenreich tripled and Brett fol- lowed with a single off Tom Henke, only his second blown save in 21 opportunities this year. MacFarlane hit his second homer of the season, giving the Royals a 3-2 lead.

But Toronto forced extra-innings when Tony Fernandez tripled and scored on a single in the ninth off Royals reliever Jeff Montgomery.

Tigers 8, Orioles 2

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's Jeff Robinson lost a leadoff homer in the eighth, but wound up with an 8-2 victory over Baltimore Tuesday night behind a four-homer barrage.

Robinson held his no-hit spell un- til Devereaux blasted one of his pitches off the facing of the second base fence in the eighth. In the ninth, his fifth of the season, Brady Ander- son promptly followed with another homer, his first, for all the Orioles' runs off the big right-hander.

Mariners 8, Twins 2

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — No. 9 hitter Omar Vizquel knocked in a career-high five runs with a three- run homer and a two-run double, and Matt Young pitched a six-hitter for eight innings as the Seattle Mariners beat the Twins 8-2.

Vizquel broke open a scoreless game in the fifth with his second home run of the season. Vizquel, whose previous career-high RBI game was two, capped a five-run Seattle sixth with a double.

Red Sox catcher John Marzano bobbles the ball just before Brewers B.J. Surhoff runs into him and scores on a 2-run double hit by Bill Spiers in the second inning Tuesday.

Change in game means no more big winners

The Associated Press

These are the big numbers in baseball, the really big ones that define its history, heroes and Hall of Fame.

There's 500 home runs. Babe Ruth became the first of 14 players to hit that many and someday Jose Canseco, Mark McGwire, Darryl Strawberry and Darryl Strawberry Jr. might, too.

There's 3,000 hits, and the 15 batters to get there. George Brett and Robin Yount are up soon, Wade Boggs and Tony Gwynn are on deck and Anthony Keith Gwynn II could be in the future.

There's 300 victories, and the 19 pitchers to win so many. Nolan Ryan will be next, possibly on Wednesday night, and Bert Blyleven needs just 21 more.

But after Ryan and Blyleven, who else? In this era, what pitcher will be able to find the formula that equals 20 victories for 15 years?

"Once they do it, that's all you're ever going to have," Phil Niekro says. "You're not going to see any more."

Of the 19 major leaguers to win 300 games, 12 did it exclusively in this century. Of that dozen, five of them — Niekro, Steve Carlton, Tom Seaver, Gaylord Perry and Don Sutton — got No. 300 in the 1980s.

What a sudden end it would be if Ryan and Blyleven became the last of the big winners. But not surprising.

"The game has changed so much, especially for pitchers," Niekro says. "There are no more 300- inning pitchers. There aren't so many 20-game winners. It's just different now."

In every way, it adds up to under 300 wins. Here's why: When complete games were common, that starting pitcher got all of the decisions. Now, in an age of specialization, middle relievers and stoppers get their share.

Ryan, for example, between 1972 and 1977 made 223 starts and got a win or loss in 205 (92 percent), while pitching 125 complete games. In the past five years, he got decisions in 115 of 164 starts (70 percent) with just 15 complete games.

It used to be that pitchers never got injured, or at least — for better or worse — never said they were hurt. Now, the disabled list is dotted with pitchers.

Mets rally from 4-run deficit to top Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mackey Sasser hit a pair of two-run homers as the New York Mets rallied to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 7-4 Tuesday night.

The Mets rallied 4-0 when Howard Johnson walked to open the seventh and Sasser followed with a homer off starter Pat Combs.

New York scored four more runs in the eighth to take a lead. Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds singled with one out off reliever Dennis Cook, who was then replaced by Roger McDowell.

Johnson doubled on McDowell's first pitch to score Strawberry and McReynolds, and the game was tied in the ninth. Sasser followed with his fifth homer of the season, giving him the first multi-homer game in his three-year major league career.

Muchow (3-4) took the loss. Julio Machado (3-1) pitched a perfect seventh for the victory, and John Franco finished for his 22nd save.

The Phillies took a 4-0 lead on solo homers by Darren Daulton and Len Dykstra and a two-run shot by Carmelo Martinez.

Braves 9, Astros 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Rookie Dave Justice hit a three-run homer as Atlanta won the first game of a doubleheader.

It was Houston's 22nd loss in its last 24 road games.

—Winner: E. Jarline Leibrandt (4-3)

National League

Added seven hits, walked one and struck out eight in eight innings.

Jim Deshaies (4-9) lost for the seventh time in his last eight decisions. He gave up four runs on six hits for five innings.

The Braves broke the game open with a five-run seventh inning off reliever Juan Agosto.

Lonnie Smith singled and went to third on Jeff Blausner's double before Ron Gant hit a two-run double. After Dale Murphy was walked intentionally, Justice hit his seventh homer to make it 9-2.

Pirates 5, Expos 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Doug Drabek won his fourth straight start and Barry Bonds celebrated his 26th birthday with three hits and three stolen bases.

Drabek (12-4) gave up six hits, struck out four and walked one in 7 1-3 innings. Stan Belinda pitched a perfect ninth for his fifth save.

The Expos capitalized on a pair of infield hits and a throwing error by second baseman Jose Lind to take a 2-0 lead in the third. But the Pirates hit in the fourth when Sid Bream hit a two-run homer off loser Kevin Gross (8-7).

Runs-scoring singles by Jay Bell and Bonds gave Pittsburgh a 4-2 lead in the fifth. The Expos made it

Cardinals 9, Cubs 4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Vince Coleman went 4-for-4, scored four runs and stole four bases, including home, as the St. Louis Cardinals ended the Chicago Cubs' eight-game winning streak with a 9-4 victory Tuesday night.

Coleman homered, tripled and had two singles as the Cardinals stopped the Cubs' longest winning streak since 1978.

He stole home with Willie McGee batting and two outs in the eighth, beating pitcher Mike Bielecki's throw to the plate. It was the eighth time in Coleman's career that he stole four bases in a game.

McGee had two singles to extend his hitting streak to 17 games and raise his average to .332. He is bat- ting .429 during the streak (30-for-70) with 11 RBIs.

The Cubs scored two runs in the second, one on an RBI single by Wilson and another on a wild pitch by Magrane, his 10th of the season.

Coleman hit his fifth homer of the season to give the Cardinals a 5-3 lead in the bottom of the inning.

Dunston singled and later scored on Luis Salazar's groundout in the third to cut the Cardinals' lead to 5-4.

But the Cardinals scored one run each in the fourth, sixth, seventh and eighth innings to clinch the victory.

Pocatello

ner of the Twin Falls-Jerome game at 7:30 p.m.

Wood River, which finished fifth in the eight-team conference, was not allowed to participate this year because it did not submit its entry forms in time.

The tournament continues with four games on Thursday and Friday with two games scheduled for Satur- day. The consolation round will con- clude at 11 a.m., while the champi- onship game is slated for 2 p.m.

The top two teams will advance to the state tournament next week in Boise. The Twin Falls squad will go to state regardless of how it fin- ishes because it hosted the state tournament a year ago.

The Rumm'n Rebels won not only the best record in the field, but also have one of the most potent offenses and defenses in the tourney.

Three of Pocatello's players are hitting over .575 and pose a threat to any opposing pitcher. Casey Burk, Adam Cordova and Curtis Hall are the top hitters with Eddie McDou- gill also swinging a good bat.

Despite the record and the impres- sive statistics, first-year Rebel Coach Dean Swafflow doesn't want history to repeat itself.

"We've kept that in mind about the team that won a lot of games last year and we know teams play the best ball at tourney time," he said. "We open up with the Twin Falls and Jerome winner and both teams have played good ball against us. The kids have their heads where they need to be right now."

The only loss the Rebels suffered this season came at the hands of the Inland Empire last year in Butte. Pocatello won the rematch in Pocatello earlier this month.

"There's no question that Pocatello is the favorite going in," said first-year Bull Coach Tom Schabot. "In the tournament, you can't look past anybody. We've had pretty good success against Malad, but we need to take each game at a time."

The Indians, led by Chad Schabot, with a .673 batting average and a 5-1 record on the mound, will try to play the spoiler in the tournament.

Idaho Falls will play chief con- tender. The Reds lost a pair of games to Pocatello and split its league contests with Bull.

Jerome may be the darkhorse of the tournament. Jerome Coach Mar- ty Schabot has been sitting at 14-2 at one point this year, but the Reds have lost six out of their last 20 games. Jerome will need to get big games from Bruce Carlson, Ben Skoug, Matt Clark and Jeff Pedrow to get past the favorites.

Strength in oil stock helps lift Dow Jones industrials 17.82 points

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market steadied Tuesday with the help of a rally in oil issues ignited by speculation about higher petroleum prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks ended with a gain of 17.82 points at 2,922.52. Most of the increase reflected movements in the blue-chip oil stocks Chevron, Exxon and Texaco.

The blue chip average had seen a loss of 1.82 points on Monday and losses all morning until futures-related call programs pushed it to a double-digit decline in early afternoon. Renewed buying — particularly in the oil patch — sparked a recovery.

Advancing and declining issues ended almost even in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 753 up, 755 down and 509 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 181.92 million shares, down from 209.03 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 216.73 million shares.

Oil stocks were the star performers. Analysts said a meeting this week of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could pave the way for higher oil prices. OPEC ministers began gathering in Geneva, Switzerland, Tuesday to plot strategy to cope with a world oil glut.

Exxon soared 2 1/2 to 50 in heavy trading of more than 2.4 million shares. Chevron climbed 1 1/4 to a 52-week high of 78 1/2 and Texaco jumped 2 1/4 to a 52-week high of 62 1/2.

Elsewhere in the oil patch, Amoco advanced 1 1/4 to 54 1/4, Atlantic Richfield added 1 1/4 to 15 1/2, Mobil moved 2 higher to a 52-week high of 67 and Kerr-McGee gained 1 1/4 to 49.

Stocks of companies serving the oil industry also benefited from the buying spree. Baker Hughes rose 3/4 to 29 1/4, Halliburton surged 2 1/4 to 53 1/4 and Schlumberger rose 1 1/4 to 64 1/4. All three set new 52-week highs.

Market watchers attributed Tuesday's generally erratic trading pattern to nervousness after Monday's steep slide. The volatility also reflected trading reacting to fresh news from the corporate front.

The parade of poor earnings reports continued Tuesday as Dow Chemical posted a 50 percent plunge in its second-quarter profit. The stock tumbled 5 1/2 to 52 1/4 and led the Big Board's list of active issues on turnover of more than 3.44 million shares.

The Student Loan Marketing Association, Sallie Mae, ended down 1 1/4 at 48 1/4. The stock has suffered in the wake of news that the Higher Education Assistance Foundation, a major student loan guarantor, is in financial trouble. Sallie Mae is among the foundation's largest creditors.

One of the day's biggest losers was Reuters Holdings, which is traded in the over-the-counter market. Reuters' American Depository Shares tumbled 1 1/2 to 56 1/4.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market edged up $805 million, or 0.02 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 0.23 to 194.45.

Standard & Poor's industrial index increased 0.91 to 421.70, and S&P's 500-stock composite index finished at 355.79, up 0.48.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market fell 2.08 to 442.56. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 355.51, 0.59 higher.

A taste of the Caribbean

Food facts

Elderly may benefit from more red meat

While many Americans are eating less red meat to lower cholesterol and fat levels, University of Florida researchers are studying whether the elderly should be eating more red meat.

Judy Perkin, associate professor and director of Clinical and Community Diets at the College of Health Related Professions, is studying the possibility that older Americans may need more protein and zinc in their diets. Since red meat is thought to be a primary source of these nutrients, Perkin will investigate how much red meat 400 elderly Floridians are eating, then correlate consumption with blood levels of protein and zinc.

Perkin said it used to be thought that older people needed less protein because they had less lean body tissue, but recent studies have called that into question. The research team wants to study how zinc, an important nutrient that helps heal tissue, fits into an older person's diet.

Coleman announces recall of hoses for smoker-cookers

Recall news: Coleman has recalled hoses for 30,000 smoker-cookers because of possible fire hazards. The Associated Press reports. The hoses that connect to the propane gas tanks of the company's "Cookin' Machines" may loosen from the valve connection after repeated use, the Consumer Product Safety Commission said. The commission said there have been at least five reported incidents of loosened hoses causing fire damage.

The hoses being recalled were installed on cookers made by Coleman between November 1987 and March 1989. Consumers should discontinue use of the cookers immediately and contact Coleman at 1-800-835-3278 for instructions on free replacement of the hoses.

Financial problems force closing of Cook's magazine

Magazine closing: The July/August issue of Cook's magazine is the last one. Both the magazine and its parent company, Pennington Publishing Inc., ceased operation for financial reasons at the end of June, according to Cook's magazine offices. The magazine's New York and Connecticut offices will remain open for a period of time to close things down. Subscribers will be receiving letters explaining the situation and offering a subscription to Gourmet magazine.

Cookies, cereal, fish, rice, coffee achieve big gains

What's hot: Cereal, rice, fish products, cookies and coffees are the "in" items right now, according to the Nutrition Health & Fitness Information Bureau. The latest research of the Marketing Intelligence Service shows the high growth in new packaged products that marked the '80s slowed to 1.5 percent last year. But breakfast cereal introductions increased 48 percent, cookies climbed 21 percent, fish products were up 51 percent, rice and rice dishes had a 20 percent gain, and new coffees increased 46 percent.

'Kids for Healthy Hearts News' is of, by, for kids

It's called "Kids for Healthy Hearts News," and it's a newsletter written by 10 children, all 11 to 17 years old, featuring articles on nutrition and overall health. Using puzzles, quizzes, simple tips and recipes, the newsletter tries to educate youths on issues such as the importance of cutting fat and increasing complex carbohydrates in the diet. Also included are tips for parents on how to help their kids stay healthy, from packing low-fat lunches to experimenting with meatless meals one night a week. The creators of the newsletter say that children in this country are not as fit as they should be. According to a 1989 study, during the last decade cardiovascular fitness levels have declined, children over age 11 have become heavier, but not taller, and the percentage of children who can meet minimum fitness standards fell from 43 to 32 percent.

The newsletter is sponsored by Kellogg's Company under the scientific direction of the American Heart Foundation. Subscriptions are free by writing to "Kids for Healthy Hearts," P.O. Box 3449, Battle Creek, Mich. 49016.

Island cooking has distinctive flavors

The distinctive Caribbean culture, as reflected in its native cuisine, has long been regarded as enticing, mysterious and somewhat magical. As bewitching as a warm ocean breeze, Caribbean fare combines a distinctive blend of the islands' abundant natural resources — refreshing fruits and exotic seasonings.

Yet, bringing the tastes of the Caribbean islands home for your next party or casual backyard dinner can be simple. Just combine modern preparation methods with the key elements of island cuisine.

A new warm-weather cooking technique, "micro-grilling," provides an ideal way to quickly prepare authentic Caribbean fare. The meal is partially cooked in the microwave to seal in natural juices, then finished on the grill to provide a distinctive smoky taste. To prepare your "micro-grill" meal, take advantage of a variety of time-saving ingredients that lend themselves perfectly to Caribbean cuisine.

Chicken, perfect for the microwave and grill, is a popular Caribbean cooking staple.

The succulent fruits used in Caribbean cooking are as close as your kitchen pantry — fruits such as a pineapple. Pineapple is a traditional ingredient used in tropical and Caribbean cooking. Its tangy, sweet character blends perfectly with the traditional island seasonings of thyme, red, pepper, garlic and chutney, and its bright flavor and juicy texture enliven any dessert.

Recreating the warmth and charm of the Caribbean cultures is simple when old world traditions are combined with modern convenience. These quick, easy recipes use time-saving ingredients and contemporary cooking methods to make it easy to introduce your family and friends to the exotic tastes of the islands.

MICRO-GRILL CARIBBEAN CHICKEN

- 1 whole chicken cut up*
- 1 can (20 oz.) pineapple slices
- 2 medium green bell peppers, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 2 medium red bell peppers, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1 medium onion, quartered
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
- 1 teaspoon ground allspice
- ½ teaspoon crushed red pepper

Heat grill or broiler. Place chicken in single layer in a 3-quart oblong baking dish (13"x9"x2"). Drain pineapple, reserve juice. In food processor place pineapple juice, half of the peppers (set aside remaining), onion and seasonings. Cover; process

Reducing animal fat: Fast-food chains lighten up

By Carol Ziegler
The Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — The millionaire campaigning to lower the American's cholesterol levels to reduce the risk of heart attacks said his fight against fast-food fat isn't finished despite a victory on the french-fry front.

Phil Sokolof, president and chief financial officer of the National Heart Savers Association, said he was pleased that McDonald's Corp. and Wendy's joined Burger

King and several other fast-food chains in switching to all-vegetable oils for cooking french fries.

McDonald's officials said the company's announcement Monday to switch to cottonseed and corn oil had nothing to do with Sokolof's anti-fat campaign against the fast-food restaurants.

But Sokolof said his ads criticizing McDonald's and other restaurants for cooking foods in beef tallow or a vegetable-beef combination oil rather than using what he called heart-healthy oils, speeded up the process. Sokolof, who claims to have spent more than $2.5 million in the ad campaign, said the fat issue has been forced in front of food company executives by the public, not by him.

"The American public as consumers have the power to move mountains," he said.

Wendy's International spokeswoman Denny Lynch said from Columbus, Ohio, that converting to corn oil will cost more, but she wouldn't say how much.

"It would be safe to say that each chain will spend millions more" each year, he said.

He said equipment will not need to be changed, but there will be changes in training employees, such as how often the oil should be changed and cooking time.

McDonald's spokeswoman Terry Caputo said the company will use the same supplier to buy the new french fry oil.

"Cost wasn't a factor at all," she said of the switch. The biggest consideration was

Dining in the great outdoors can be a gourmet experience

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Hot dogs, pork and beans, potato chips and burnt marshmallows — time-honored tent camping fare. But with a little planning, it's not all that difficult to enjoy a wider selection of good food in the great outdoors.

Greg Edson, outfitter of Middle Fork Rapid Transit — a whitewater rafting company — and managing partner of 4 Ways Travel, fixes delicious meals on a regular basis for his river-mulching guests. People who float the Middle Fork of the Salmon River with him on any of the six-day trips he makes a dozen times a year experience what he calls "gourmet camping at its best."

But it is not necessary to run a river in order to cook this way. So here are some of Edson's tips and recipes for dining "out."

When planning ahead for a family camping trip, he says he would look first at how many nights he would be out. Then he would begin with the dinner entrees and work his way down from there, deciding what his family would like to have with them. Next, he'd plan the breakfasts, lunches and snacks.

He says he'd think about whether or not there would be access to fresh drinking water, and if not, take along an adequate supply. He says he would also take a 2½ - 3 gallon water cooler filled with Kool Aid, Wylers or lemonade, so there would be some sort of cold drink that comes out of a spigot. This can be made before leaving home.

Most people, he says, put together a camp box, which includes things like silverware, spatulas, paper towels, Handy wipes, two plastic dishwashing basins, dish soap, sponge, rubber gloves and a pot for boiling water for dishwashing. There should also be a cast-iron Dutch oven (12-inch for a family of four or five), skillets and perhaps a griddle.

A collapsible fire grate is handy. It can be opened up and put over the fire between two rocks for barbecuing steaks or frying fish. Edson always takes along a little chlorine bleach and puts a capful in the rinse water when washing dishes.

He says a lot of people who go car camping not only carry a box for their cooking gear, but also one for dry packaged foods, such as pancake mix, aluminum foil, cereals, chips, extra paper towels, paper or plastic plates. He also takes along one or two coolers with ice for perishables. A handy item for camping, whether really roughing it or not, he says, is a small butane stove. There are also 3 x 3 inch fire pans, available in sporting goods stores, to build a fire in so it is not on the ground.

A lot of campgrounds have already established fire pit areas where a Dutch oven can be set. Please see OUTDOORS/C7.

Keep your dog cool - and alive - in summer

DEAR ABBY: Since you have such a vast audience of readers, probably other readers have run into this type of situation and need information like this:

Several days ago, I left my dog in the car, the windows partially open, while I ran an errand. I was gone just a few minutes. It was a warm day. When I returned, the enclosed message was on my windshield.

I am so thankful it was there! I saved my dog from possible brain damage or death. I immediately immersed him in cold water, as suggested on the card, until his temperature was lowered, and then I took him to the veterinarian. He said I was lucky, and my dog would be OK. I found out that dogs do not sweat and they are susceptible to heat exhaustion, brain damage and death during hot weather. Can you imagine how much suffering a dog goes through in this situation? They always need plenty of cool water and shade. All animals need and deserve this.

AN ADMIRING READER FROM NORTH PLATTE, NEB.

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

P.S. I am enclosing a "Your Dog May Be Dying" card - identical to the one that was put on my car. They can be purchased from the Animal Protection Institute, P.O. Box 22505, Sacramento, Calif. 95822. They are only $2 over 100 cents, and if a person adds "Please Rush," they will be sent immediately. They are placed behind the windshield wiper.

The card on my windshield read:

"We understand you meant to be kind in taking your dog with you today, but you could be risking his life.

"On a hot summer day, the inside of a car heats very quickly. On an 85-degree day, for example, the temperature inside your car - with the windows slightly opened - will reach 102 degrees in 10 minutes. In 30 minutes it will go up to 120 degrees.

On warmer days it will go even higher.

"A dog's normal body temperature is 101.5 to 102.2 degrees Fahrenheit. A dog can withstand a body temperature of 107 to 108 degrees Fahrenheit for only a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage - or even death. The closed car interferes with the dog's normal cooling process, that is, evaporation through panting.

"If your dog is overcome by heat exhaustion, you can give immediate first aid by immersing him or her in cold water until body temperature is lowered."

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago, my mother gave me her old china. Since she's divorced and now remarried, she didn't want those dishes around. Last month, she remarked that a friend of hers expressed a desire to buy her old china, so where does that leave me? If her friend wants to buy those dishes, do I get the proceeds?

I also have a freezer my sister "gave" me. I'd like to sell it and buy a more economical model, but I think if she knew I was selling it, she'd probably want it back.

Abby, we are very close, but I'm not sure how to handle such things. Please help me out.

— NOT SURE

DEAR NOT SURE: When your mother gave you the dishes, they became your property and were no longer hers to sell to anyone at any price. If for any reason you chose to sell them, the money would be 100 percent yours.

As for the freezer your sister gave you: Again, when someone gives you something, it's yours to do whatever you wish with it. Sell it, trade it or give it away.

When you receive a gift, all you owe the giver is a "thank you."

People are eating them up! For Abby's favorite recipes, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus cash or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Hagerman city, police grateful for assistance

The city of Hagerman, along with the Hagerman Police Department, would like to express their gratitude to the following agencies for their dedicated assistance during the Hagerman Baseball Tournaments on July 7 and 8.

Thanks to Sgt. Steve Jones for allowing troopers Kent Oliver and Gaylen Edwards to assist us in keeping these tournaments peaceful and enjoyable and to Sheriff Robert Aja and his deputies, Steve Lawrason and Kurt Kaneaster, for their valuable assistance. A special thanks to Deputy Kaneaster, as he worked many of the hours on his personal off time.

The assistance offered by these people was a valuable asset to making these tournaments an enjoyable and safe experience for all who attended.

AUDREY HOFFMAN, Police Commissioner
Hagerman

Support for bicycle races appreciated by organizer

To all those who contributed to the success of the 1990 Clear Springs Trout-Magic Valley Road Race, I wish to express my deep appreciation. For the second year in a row, the support given to this race by the people of the Magic Valley was tremendous.

This stage of the 1990 Ore-Ida Women's Challenge - Centennial Tour of Idaho could not have happened without the collective efforts of everyone involved - numerous individuals who gave freely of their time and efforts; the media; race marshalls, civic groups, organizations, and businesses which helped to support and publicize the race; city, county, and state law enforcement personnel; and, of course, all of the spectators who came out to cheer the women along Highway 30 and at the finish line.

Thank you again for the support. It is greatly appreciated.

PAULA EDMONDS-HOLLIFIELD
Local Coordinator, Clear Springs Trout-Magic Valley Road Race

Dutch-oven cooking makes a comeback, inspires summer festival

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Dutch-oven cooking traditionally has meant stews, roasts or sourdough biscuits. At least that's how the pioneers used the cast-iron pots they hauled across the prairie.

But some of their descendants in Utah, the Dutch-oven capital of the world, would scoff at such elementary fare. Why not whip up some cream puffs or a lemon meringue pie?

All it takes is a little fire, but don't forget the ice.

"You can cook breakfast in a Dutch oven—cakes, vegetables, roasts," anything," said Dick Michaud, organizer of the World Championship Dutch Oven Cook Off. "You name it and you can cook it."

Every summer for the past six years, chefs from all over the West have congregated in northern Utah on the campus of Utah State University to compete in a four-day celebration of the Dutch oven. This year it's Aug. 1-4.

In past years, winning entries included exotic main dishes, vegetables, raised breads and desserts, all cooked in weighty pots that have changed little since Dutch peddlers sold them door-to-door in Colonial America.

Dick Michaud cooks chicken wings.

The competition, part of the Festival of the American West, draws long lines of spectators who turn into tasters after the judges have made their way through the entries concocted by 15 pairs of cooks working under strict time constraints.

Since the art hinges on the cook's ability to control the heat of coals on top of the lid and beneath the pot, there have been a few perilous moments — when delectability was snatched from the brink of disaster — that have passed into Dutch-oven lore.

For example, one chef attempting a lemon meringue pie discovered with time running out that the pie wasn't setting up on the too-warm bottom and the meringue wasn't browning on the too-cool top.

"He put the bottom of the pot in ice and put coals on the lid. It worked and he won the contest," Michaud said.

The 63-year-old retired college administrator first got hooked on Dutch-oven cooking as a scout leader in California nearly 30 years ago.

"We would make the boys a cobbler at the end of the day and they would just lap it up," he said.

Later, Michaud approached organizers of the festival and suggested making the cook-off part of the program.

"I could see the Dutch oven has played an important part in much of the history of America," he said. "On the East Coast they were used in the open hearth and as settlers moved across the country, they took the ovens with them."

Bob Kellerman, whose Lodge Manufacturing Co. in Pittsburg, Tenn., is one of the nation's largest manufacturers of cast-iron products, said the company sells more Dutch ovens in the Beehive State than any other.

"I don't know for sure how many are sold there in a year, but I can assure you that Utah is our top market," Kellerman said. "You might even consider cult cooking."

Michaud proudly displays a personal collection of more than a dozen pots and is a walking compendium of Dutch-oven lore. He points out that while the appliances are portrayed in paintings of domestic life in the New England of the 1700s, they also are frequently mentioned in the diaries of mountain men and trappers.

'Dutch oven cooks are different (from chili cooks) because they are much more family oriented.'

— Dick Michaud, organizer of the World Championship Dutch Oven Cook Off

"Virtually everyone on the fringe of civilization cooked in them," he said.

Michaud believes that interest in the pots is reviving because outdoor cooking with a Dutch oven offers more versatility than a barbecue grill. Devotees generally use 22-inch-high metal tables that hold charcoal briquets. Less frequently, the pots are buried in the ground.

pots creates a pressure cooker-like atmosphere that makes meats especially tender and vegetables succulent.

The uninitiated are tempted to compare the Dutch oven cook off to its better-known cousin, the chili cook off, but Michaud said the iron-pot crowd is much different.

"Chili cook offs are a good excuse for a party. You know, chili and beer," he said. "But Dutch oven cooks are different because they are much more family-oriented."

For Michaud, it is good "bonding time." "When you cook with a Dutch oven the whole family gets involved, peeling potatoes and starting the fire. And when you finally get to eat, you end up with a family event that has lasted four or five hours," he said.

Michaud and other enthusiasts founded the International Dutch Oven Society a few years ago. It has grown to 300 members and 20 new annual cook offs were launched just this year. Michaud speaks of a Dutch-oven renaissance.

"Every little town has a summer celebration," he said, "and we want to see a cook off become part of every one."

BARBECUED BEEF RIBS

If you think you can't have barbecued ribs on your diet, think again. This is a low-calorie, low-cholesterol, low-fat version.

 1/2 cup peach preserves
 1/2 cup water
 juice of 1 lemon
 1 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar
 1 tablespoon vinegar
 1/2 teaspoon paprika
 freshly ground black pepper

2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce

Place the ribs on a rack in a shallow baking pan and roast in a 450-degree oven for 30 minutes.

In a small saucepan, combine all other ingredients and cook over medium heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Set sauce aside.

Remove the ribs and rack from pan and pour off the fat. Reduce oven heat to 350 degrees. Return ribs to the pan, and pour the sauce over them. Bake uncovered, basting occasionally, until ribs are tender, about 1 hour.

Yield: 4 servings.

Meal Tip: The leaner the meat, the higher the protein content. Choose lean cuts of meat, trim all the fat you can see, and throw away the fat that cooks out of the meat.

Nutritional analysis per serving: Calories = 233; protein = 21.3 g; total fat = 6.6 g; saturated fat = 2.5 g; polyunsaturated fat = 3 g; monounsaturated fat = 2.5 g; cholesterol = 64 mg.; carbohydrates = 21.8 g; calcium = 17.6 mg.; potassium = 260 mg.; and sodium = 172 mg.

GINGER ALE SHERBET

The special blending of juices and ginger ale create an iced treat you'll want to eat often throughout the summer. It's low-salt, no cholesterol and has only a trace of fat.

1/2 cup water
 1 1/2 cups sugar
 4 egg whites, stiffly beaten
 1 cup orange juice
 1/2 cup lemon juice
 1/2 cup pineapple juice
 3 cups ginger ale

In a saucepan, heat the water and 1 cup of the sugar to the boiling point and cook until the syrup reaches the soft-ball stage — 234 to 238 degrees.

Beat the egg whites until stiff. Continue beating while gradually adding 1/2 cup of the sugar. Slowly pour the hot syrup into the egg whites, beating constantly until mixture has cooled. Then gradually beat in the ginger ale and fruit juices.

Place in the freezer until partially frozen, then remove and whip quickly. Pour into freezing trays, cover and return to the freezer. The texture should resemble that of an Italian ice.

Yield: 8 servings.

Cooking Tip: Raw eggs separate more easily when they are cold, but to get maximum volume from egg whites, beat them when they are at room temperature.

Nutritional analysis per serving: Calories = 203; protein = 2 g; total fat = 0.1 g; saturated fat = 0.2 g; polyunsaturated fat = 0.1 g; monounsaturated fat = trace; cholesterol = 0 mg.; carbohydrates = 50.3 g; calcium = 11.3 mg.; potassium = 12.1 mg.; and sodium = 36 mg.

Poached snapper meal is a snap

The following light eating recipe was developed by CeCe Sullivan, home economist on the staff of the Seattle Times.

OVEN-POACHED SNAPPER WITH SPICY TOMATO SAUCE

(4 servings; approximate preparation time 20 minutes)

- TOMATO SAUCE:
- 8 medium plum tomatoes
  - 2 medium cloves garlic, peeled and minced
  - 1 medium shallot, peeled and minced
  - 1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
  - 1/2 teaspoon red chili flakes
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt

- SNAPPER:
- 1 1/3 pounds red snapper or rockfish fillets
  - 1/4 cup dry white wine
  - 1 medium olive garlic, peeled and minced
  - 1 medium shallot, peeled and minced
  - 1/2 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
  - 1/2 teaspoon red chili flakes
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

1. To prepare the tomato sauce: Core the tomatoes, cut in half and remove the seeds. Chop the tomatoes coarsely and put into a medium saucepan. Add the garlic, shallot, rosemary, chili flakes and salt. Bring just to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer 10 minutes.

2. Transfer the sauce to a food processor and puree. Put back in the saucepan and hold over medium-low heat.

3. To prepare the fish: Place the snapper in a baking pan. Pour the wine over the fish and sprinkle with the garlic, shallot, rosemary, chili flakes, salt and pepper. Press a piece of parchment paper onto the fish and bake in a preheated 450-degree oven for 12 minutes per inch of thickness. Test the fish for doneness.

4. Remove the fish with a spatula to a paper towel-lined plate to remove excess liquid. Put onto plates and spoon the tomato sauce over the fish.

Spices give carrot salad a flavorful twist

The following quick and easy recipe was developed by CeCe Sullivan, home economist on the staff of the Seattle Times.

SPICED CARROT SALAD

(10 servings; approximate preparation time 20 minutes)

- 1 1/2 pounds carrots, trimmed and peeled
- 1 large zucchini, ends trimmed

- 1/3 cup golden raisins
- 1/4 cup minced fresh mint
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

1. Cut the carrots into large chunks and grate using the grating disk of a food processor. Grate the zucchini in the same way. Squeeze some of the excess moisture out of the vegetables with paper towels.

2. Combine the vegetables with the raisins and mint. Whisk together the lemon juice, olive oil, honey, cumin, cayenne and salt. Pour over the salad and serve immediately or refrigerate for a couple of hours until ready to serve.

making sure the company didn't change the taste, she said.

Both companies said they worked for months to develop an oil that would fry potatoes with the same taste as before.

Sokolof, 67, formed the private foundation National Heart Saver's Association after he suffered a heart attack.

The foundation's targets have been snacks made with tropical oils and fast-food restaurants, though he acknowledges Americans would have to lower the amount of meat and dairy products they consume to lower cholesterol levels.

Americans will continue to eat meat and dairy products and continue to go to fast-food restaurants, he said.

"Fast-food restaurants are not diet emporiums. People are still going to eat there," he said. "Now they can make healthier choices."

The beef tallow industry will be hurt by the oil-vegetable oil decision, said Rich Parker of the American Meat Institute. But he said he doesn't know how much of an effect there would be.

U.S. Department of Commerce figures showed that 1.2 billion pounds of beef tallow was produced in the United States last year, but Parker said he did not know how much of that went into cooking oil or shortening.

Beef tallow also is used in paint, as a lubricant, in some plastics and some cosmetics, said Roger Mandigo, an animal science professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Sokolof said he would continue to run ads for as long as it takes to improve the public perception of cholesterol levels, though he said he is pleased with the "tremendous" results from the ads so far.

He took out a full-page ad in Tuesday's Washington Post urging Congress to pass a food-labeling bill requiring nutritional information on food labels and establishing definitions for terms such as "lite" and "high in fiber."

Take along a good pair of long-handled pliers for removing the lid, and a collapsible shovel to lift hot coals.

Edson says wonderful things can be made in a Dutch oven - corn bread, chicken pot pie, biscuits, desserts and omelets. Here's a good, simple recipe for...

DUTCH OVEN POTATOES

Serves 4 - 8

Put first six ingredients into a Dutch oven:

- 5 (5 pound) bag potatoes, washed and sliced

- 3 tomatoes, sliced or chopped
  - 2 chopped green peppers
  - 2 chopped red peppers (optional)
  - 1/2 pound bacon from breakfast (optional)
  - Garlic salt and pepper, to taste
  - 1 can beer or 12 ounces water
  - Cheese, grated or thinly sliced, any kind - cheddar and Monterey Jack or Edson's favorite: Swiss and mozzarella.
- Get a good fire going or use charcoal briquets (the easiest way) or hot coals. Then lay aluminum foil on the ground or use an aluminum pizza pan. Take some of the coals out of the fire - about six, and spread on the aluminum foil or pan around where the Dutch oven will be set, putting 2 or 3 coals in the middle. Set the Dutch oven directly on top of the coals. Put 6 or 8 coals on top. If coals are not fully hot yet, add more than that for good heat.

Good steaks can be cooked outdoors in a Dutch oven, using any favorite household recipe. Just brown the meat in it, pour off grease and add whatever you'd like: potatoes, onions, carrots, celery. Then build some sort of stock. Add water and desired flavor, such as Schilling brown gravy mix or Heinz 57 sauce.

If there will not be enough fresh water to work with, it's best to prepare the vegetables at home. Heat evenly with coals on bottom and top, and cook for about one-half hour. In the last 10 minutes or so put all the heat on top.

A nice accompaniment to a camping-out entrance is an...

EASY BEAN CASSEROLE

Serves 4

2 (8 1/2 ounce) cans French-cut green beans

- 1 can mushroom soup
  - Salt and pepper, to taste
  - 1 onion chopped (optional)
  - 2 (approximately 4 ounce) cans French-fried onion rings
- Drain all the juice except one-half of one can from green beans. Put beans in a pot, add soup, salt, pepper and onion, and heat through. Spread onion rings over top. Do not stir them or they will get mushy.
- He says steak or fish make a nice entrée for an outdoor meal. They are quicker and easier to fix than chicken. If you have a fire grate and charcoal or a good bed of coals, simply cook steaks as you would on a barbecue grill. To cook fish on a fire grate, first put aluminum foil over it, and spray with Pam. Fry it with butter and onions, or whatever you'd like. A nice way to fix trout fillets is to first put them in a bowl, and marinate in Italian dressing for about one-half hour. Do not overmarinate, or they may get soggy. When ready to cook, simply lay the foil down, spray on some cooking spray and put fish skin side down first. Once they start to cook, turn them over and finish frying them. If there is enough heat this will take about 10 minutes.

For breakfast there is always the standard bacon and eggs. Fresh fruit is nice, and for the kids have some cold cereal or oatmeal. For an easy blueberry pancake, Edson mixes half a 3 1/2 pound bag of whole wheat Krusteaz pancake mix with water, to desired consistency - mildly thick and lumpy - or whatever you desire - and adds 1 (8 1/2 ounce) can drained

PEACH COOLER

4 (8 1/2 ounce) cans sliced peaches

- Sugar
  - Bisqueque Cinnamon (Add as you stir the batter just to where you can see it in the swirls)
- Drain 2 of the cans of peaches. Put peaches and remaining syrup into a 12-inch Dutch oven. Place on fire grate and when you have a good swirl (not roaring) fire going, add a little sugar until it starts to thicken up. Pull Dutch oven off fire and add dumplings, made by mixing 1 small box Bisqueque, cinnamon and enough water to make a consistency whereby you can take a spoonful of batter and turn it over and a dumpling will pop out. Drop batter by spoonfuls, starting around edges and then filling in middle.

Remove from fire grate and put on coals on foil or pizza pan, and put some coals on top. Keep adding heat until dumplings begin to turn brown. Check frequently, once transferred onto coals after 10 - 15 minutes of cooking. Test for doneness as you would a cake, with a toothpick, pine needle or a stick.

Spoon out and serve on plates or bowls. If desired, top with Dream Whip.

Edson says a person can pre-mix a lot of items, such as pot pies, some desserts and stews. "The mix is already there, and when you go camping all you have to do is transfer that mix into the Dutch oven, and away you go," he says.

until finely chopped. Pour over chicken in baking dish. Cook loosely with waxed paper. Microwave on HIGH 15 to 20 minutes (approximately 5 minutes per pound). Place chicken on grill or on rack of broiler pan 4 inches from source of heat. Grill or broil 10 to 15 minutes or until chicken is browned and turning frequently. Meanwhile add reserved pineapple slices and peppers to baking dish. Cover loosely with waxed paper. Microwave on HIGH 10 minutes or until sauce boils. Return chicken to baking dish. Spoon some sauce on top.

CALYPSO PINEAPPLE CHICKEN

- 1 can (20 oz.) pineapple slices
- 2 pkgs. (about 1 lb. each) boneless skinless chicken breasts
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 thick slices peeled ginger root
- 2 teaspoons minced serrano chilies, seeded (optional)
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped cilantro

Drain pineapple, reserve 1/2 cup pineapple juice. In a 2-quart oblong baking dish combine pineapple juice, honey, orange juice, soy sauce, cornstarch, garlic, ginger root, chilies and peppers until smooth. Microwave on HIGH 3 minutes or until thickened, stirring once. Arrange 5 pineapple slices in same baking dish. Place chicken on top. Generously spoon sauce over chicken. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Microwave on HIGH 4 minutes - Turn dish - Place remaining pineapple slices on top of chicken. Re-cover, microwave on HIGH 6 minutes. Sprinkle with cilantro. Microwave on HIGH 2 minutes longer or until chicken is tender. Makes 6 servings.

SKILLET CHICKEN & TROPICAL FRUIT

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 pkg. (about 1 lb.) boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into thin strips
- 6 green onions, cut into 1-inch pieces
- 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1/2 cup Pine-Orange Guava Juice*
- 1/2 cup sherry
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 3 cups assorted sliced or cut-up fruit such as papaya, kiwi, oranges, star fruit or strawberries

- 1/4 cup flaked coconut, toasted (optional)

In 10-inch non-stick skillet heat oil over medium heat. Add chicken and green onions, cook 10 minutes or until chicken is browned. Add curry and pepper, cook 1 minute longer. Stir in chicken broth and fruit juice. Cook over low heat 10 minutes or until chicken is tender. Stir together sherry and cornstarch until smooth. Add to skillet. Bring to a heat; boil 1 minute. Add fruit and cook until heated through. Sprinkle with coconut.

Makes 4 servings.

*Or use 1/2 cup orange juice

CARIBBEAN CHICKEN SALAD

- 1 can (8 oz.) pineapple slices
- 1 pkg. (2 pieces) fully cooked roasted boneless chicken breast
- 1/2 cup crisp salad greens
- 1/2 cup assorted sliced or cut up fruit such as papaya, kiwi, grapes and melon
- 1/2 lb. asparagus or green beans, steamed
- 1/2 cup vanilla yogurt
- 2 to 3 tablespoons chopped chutney
- 3 tablespoons pineapple juice
- 1 teaspoon ground lemon peel
- Garnish: edible flower (optional)

Drain pineapple, reserve juice for dressing. Slice each chicken breast diagonally into 1/2-inch slices. Arrange sliced chicken and 2 pineapple slices on each of 2 salad plates lined with crisp salad greens. Arrange fruit and asparagus on same plates. For dressing, combine remaining ingredients, except garnish. Serve with dressing. Garnish if desired. Makes 2 servings.

PINEAPPLE LIME MOUSSE

- 1 can (20 oz.) crushed pineapple
- 1 pkg. (.3 oz.) sugar-free lime gelatin
- 1 carton (.8 oz.) whipped topping, thawed
- 3 tablespoons rum or 1 teaspoon rum extract
- 1 teaspoon grated lime peel
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 teaspoon coconut extract (optional)

Garnish: lime slices, mint sprig

Drain pineapple well, set aside; reserve all juice (about 1 cup). Add 1/2 cup water to the reserved juice; heat until boiling. Remove from heat. Stir in gelatin until dissolved. Add one-half of the pineapple; reserve remaining for garnish. Chill until slightly thickened. Stir in whipped topping, rum, lime peel, ginger and coconut extract. Turn into 1-quart bowl or 8 individual serving bowls. Chill 4 hours or until firm. Garnish with remaining pineapple, lime slices and mint. Makes 8 servings.

College horticulture students maintain Demonstration Garden

Allen Wilson Gardening

The garden is open free of charge during daylight hours seven days a week. It is located on the south side of the Ricks College campus. The closest exit off-highway-20 is the Rexburg south exit.

The garden is changed and improved each year by the Landscape Horticulture students as part of their course work. This year's project is the development of an amphitheater with some new planting areas for native plants. It includes a heavily developed retaining wall system. The project is under the direction of instructors Byron John and Mel Dewsnup.

Those who have not visited the garden recently will notice a waterfall near the main entry which was installed by last year's landscape class. Some other beds have also been re-landscaped with a newly developed dry stream.

One of the main features of the garden is the extensive use of flower beds. The front area includes a mass planting with all of the All-America award-winning flowers for the past five years.

Six new 1991 winners which will be available for the first time next year are also included. These include two new pansies, a new "freckled" geranium and three new vinca.

Over 100 new flower varieties are included in comparison beds. This is part of the continuing variety testing program to determine which are best adapted to the Intermountain area.

Another popular part of the garden is the test area for new vegetable varieties. Over 100 new vegetable varieties are included. They are grown in short rows just like a home gardener would plant them. Grass walkways surround both the vegetables and flowers so they can be easily observed up close.

The cantaloupes and watermelons are doing particularly well this year because of a new green plastic mulching material. The green color shades out the weeds, but allows the infra-red heat rays to increase the soil temperature underneath higher than black plastic.

Several new varieties have been added to the strawberry test area. It will be another year before meaningful yield data will reveal whether the new varieties are better than the best of the old ones.

A picnic area is located next to the parking lot. This area, which will accommodate about 70 people under the structure, can be reserved for group use by calling the College scheduling office.

If you are traveling this summer, you may want to visit other public gardens. The Idaho Botanical Garden is located on Old Penitentiary Road in Boise. There are also Arboretums and Botanical Gardens in most larger cities including Salt Lake, Denver, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Blond wood finish makes restaining difficult but not impossible

Q. We have a bedroom set with a blond finish. It's the type popular years ago. We'd like to give it a dark wood finish, but not paint it. Any suggestions? —M.H.

A. Blond finishes are usually achieved by bleaching the wood and filling the pores with a light-tone, paint-like coating. Most of the filler coat is wiped off to keep the wood grain visible. The surface is then given a protective coating such as varnish.

It is difficult to completely remove a finish of this type because filler material sticks in the pores. Even after stripping, the nature of the finish makes it difficult to restain uniformly with a penetrating stain.

One approach is to try a varnish stain, which combines a stain and protective coating and can be used directly over some existing finishes. Among well-known varnish-stains are Minwax's Polyshades and UGL-ZAR Plus. Dark tones such as walnut and mahogany are available. Varnish-stains can also be used on bare wood, such as unfinished furniture.

Varnish-stains can be used over existing varnish, but most are not compatible with the lacquer finishes used on some furniture. Lacquer can be detected by applying a little lacquer thinner to an inconspicuous spot; if the finish softens, it is lacquer. To use varnish-stain, remove the lacquer coat with a paint stripper.

If an existing finish is in poor condition, a preliminary undercoat or base coat can be applied over the old finish first to provide a smooth, uniformly colored surface for applying varnish-stain. The base coat has a natural-buff color that resembles bare wood.

Another approach is to use a special heavy-bodied stain to cover and conceal the existing finish. One that works very well is Carver-Tripp Wood Stain, sold at many home centers. A separate protective coat, usually a varnish, is used over the stain.

A third approach is wood-graining, which uses a heavy-bodied stain such as Carver-Tripp over a buff base coat like that sometimes used with varnish-stain. The stain is given a wood-grain effect by tooling it while still wet with a dry paint brush or soft cloth. The supplies needed are often sold in kit form.

It's important to test any of these finishes on a practice surface, inconspicuous area or small piece of furniture to gauge the results. Also read directions carefully.

Q. One of the main drain pipes in our basement shows signs of deterioration. There are some rust spots and a pinhole or two. How can I fix this? —E.S.

A. A temporary repair can be made by cleaning the deteriorated area of the pipe and wrapping with a material such as Fiberglass, an aluminum-coated asphalt tape sold at some home centers, and hardware stores. Plumber's Goop, a caulk-type sealant, will also temporarily seal the pinholes. However, you should definitely plan to have the section of pipe replaced before the deterioration gets much worse.

Q. My fireplace is 20 years old. A quarter-inch bolt that holds the damper handle is loose and I consider it dangerous, since the damper might close while a fire is burning. I called in two fireplace builders and got estimates of $650 and $800. The contractors recommended tearing the fireplace apart and virtually rebuilding it. This fireplace cost only $1,250 when new. Don't you think there is a better way to fix the loose bolt? —D.N.

A. If a loose bolt is the only problem, it would certainly seem to be a case of contractor overkill. However, the high estimates also raise the suspicion that the fireplace has a more basic and serious problem. I suggest getting several more estimates, and asking each contractor to explain fully why the recommended work needs to be done.

If one contractor gives a bid much lower than other, it is not usually wise to accept it, because the work might be shoddy or inferior materials might be used. In general, it's best to consider price only one criterion for selecting a contractor. A good record and adequate experience are equally important.

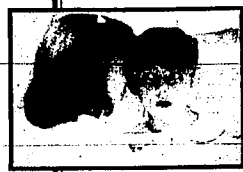

Q. I plan to install some plastic wall tiles. How can I cut them without cracking and breaking them? —H.K.

A. I don't recommend installing plastic tiles. Ceramic tiles are almost as easy to install and are much superior to plastic in appearance and durability. However, you should be able to cut the plastic tiles with any fine-toothed saw, such as a hacksaw, coping saw or miter saw.

Ironing tips can help you save time, protect clothes

By Betsy Lammerting
Knight-Ridder News Service

I remember my Mom spending entire afternoons ironing, but who has time these days? Not me! I'm an iron-ass-1-go kinda gal. Just minutes before I walk out the door, I'm pressing my outfit for the day.

More than 14 million irons are sold in the United States each year, according to appliance manufacturer Black & Decker. Here are some tips from the company to help you get out wrinkles:

- Proper steaming is the key to successful ironing.
- For delicate fabrics, simply steam by holding the iron just above the fabric. The steam should seep down into the material.
- To avoid a shine on garments, iron on the wrong side of the fabric.
- For heavier fabrics such as wool that never should be pressed completely dry, the spray setting or surge-of-steam feature can be used to dampen fabrics.

- Dump fabrics are easier to iron and less likely to scorch.
- For sharp, professional-looking pleats, steam, then press.
- When ironing a big batch of clothes, separate them by fabric type. Start by ironing delicate fabrics — such as rayon, silk and blends — which use a lower temperature setting, then move on to wool, cotton and linen, which require a hotter iron.

Supreme Court nominee appears to be classical conservative

By Ethan Bronner
Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter appears to be a classically conservative legal analyst who favors an unaggressive role for courts and deference to legislatures as opposed to the expansive view of judicial rights championed by retiring Justice William J. Brennan Jr.

David H. Souter
Likely to be reliable conservative

Souter's opinions during his years as a judge and his more public comments on judicial matters off the bench show a belief in textual literalism and legislative responsibility likely to translate into a reliable vote with the Supreme Court's conservative wing.

Franklin Pierce Law Center in New Hampshire, who has argued many cases before Souter, said in the Concord Monitor yesterday Souter's critics "would say that he takes an overly narrow view of the role of the Constitution in defining the rights that people have vis a vis the gov-

Although Souter's view of the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision is not known, and President Bush said he did not ask the judge questions on specific cases, his approach to law and the Constitution leave little doubt that Roe would be the kind of case with which he would disagree. Roe is widely viewed as an example of expansive constitutional analysis because it enshrined abortion as a constitutional right under the privacy doctrine when the Constitution mentions neither privacy nor abortion. Moreover, it takes away from states the power to regulate or ban the procedure.

For liberal constitutional analysts, the words of the Constitution are more of a starting point and one of the central purposes of the doctrine is to keep state power at bay. For conservatives like Souter, the text generally limits judges, and when rights are not spelled out, they are left to legislatures.

In a 1976 interview, Souter said: "The more we allow language to be debased, the more free-swinging we are in our interpretation of legal language, the greater risk we run of having the public-perceive our actions as arbitrary and personal, not grounded in the constitutional process."

Last year, an assistant attorney general in New Hampshire argued that if one read a certain statute literally, it would produce the absurd result of a windfall for one party involved in the case.

Souter turned the state down in argument, saying, "If the result of applying this rule is what the state has described in this instance as a windfall to the petitioners, it is no exorbitant price for insuring that the executive and judicial branches concede the legislature's power to act within its constitutional purview, and for affirming the legislature's responsibility for the consequences of what it plainly provides."

It is because of such attitudes that Bush can expect to be pleased with Souter's decisions on the high court without having to quiz him on specific issues such as abortion, affirming the state's relations between church and state.

Such questions have historically been viewed as improper and, in truth, they are unnecessary.

Terry Eastland, an assistant attorney general under President Reagan, said that during his five years at the Justice Department he knew of no instance in which a candidate for a judgeship was asked about Roe v. Wade or any other Supreme Court case.

"The kinds of questions we asked were: 'How do you see a judge's role? What is your approach to judicial analysis?' In that context a candidate might bring up Roe v. Wade or another case."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"It is human nature to stand in the middle of a thing."

Today's East failed the test at his moment of decision. Look over the play to see if you can do better at trick one.

South won his heart ace and led a low trump to dummy's eight and East's seven. Where do you go from there?

At the table, East saw only the weak diamonds in dummy. Cashing the diamond ace and leading another trump, East was misled if he held the king. However, East chose to lead low — a play that would win three tricks if West held K-x and, most probably, even Q-x.

South took his diamond queen and led another trump, and the game came to a halt. West led his last diamond to East's ace, but a third round produced no ruff — West had no third trump.

What did East miss? Consider the play in the trump suit. Would South have played as he did had he held the trump ace? Not likely. Therefore, West must have the trump ace. And instead of trying for an elusive ruff with partner's trump ace, it's better to use that ace to get your own ruff.

East should cash his diamond ace at trick three and then lead his single heart. West will win with West's trump ace, there is no doubt concerning the whereabouts of the setting trick, and the timely club setting

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds:	Q 4 2	5 4 3 7	A 10 9 2	5
North holds: <th>A 3</th> <th>K 7</th> <th>K 6</th> <th>K 3</th>	A 3	K 7	K 6	K 3
West: <th>A 3</th> <th>J 10 9 6</th> <th>K 8 4 3 2</th> <th>5</th>	A 3	J 10 9 6	K 8 4 3 2	5
East: <th>J 8 4 2</th> <th>5</th> <th>A 10 9 2</th> <th>5</th>	J 8 4 2	5	A 10 9 2	5

ANSWER: Pass. This was a bare minimum response, and nothing has developed to promote South's value and a minimum by passing one spade.
