

Saddam to free women, children

The Associated Press

Iraq's Saddam Hussein, saying he sympathized with his foreign captives, pledged Tuesday to free the women and children among them.

U.S. pressure on the Iraqi president mounted, nearly four weeks after he set off the Persian-Gulf crisis by taking over his oil-rich neighbor, Kuwait.

President Bush warned that Saddam would pay a high price for occupying Kuwait and "an even stiffer price" for further aggression. "Let no one abroad doubt our national unity or our staying power," Bush told lawmakers.

The Pentagon said Tuesday the American naval flotilla enforcing economic sanctions the move.

Also Tuesday, U.S. officials said an American civilian died of a heart attack in Iraq. The 56-year-old man, who was not identified, was believed to be among Americans rounded up and taken to strategic sites in Iraq for use as human shields against attack.

The number of those "human shields" increased. The State Department said Tuesday nine more Americans were rounded up by Iraqi authorities, bringing the number to 70.

Meanwhile, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said Tuesday that if Saddam withdraws from Kuwait "I will be the first to call for the withdrawal of foreign forces from the region immediately." Mubarak sent Egyptian troops to Saudi Arabia, where tens of thousands of American troops are guarding against any further aggression by the Iraqis.

Saddam's promise to free all the foreign women and children came in a statement from Iraq's Revolutionary Command Council.

The official Iraqi News Agency said the decision was made "to preserve the Arab humanitarian image."

"I'll believe it when I see them home in this state," said Margaret Nuzum of Hutchinson, Kan., whose daughter, son-in-law and two young children are among those trapped. "Until then I'm just praying."

Idaho State Police Cpl. Bob Bingham describes video cameras as 'invaluable' for police work.

Drunk driving suspects will find they're on ISP's candid videotape

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Idaho State Police in the Magic Valley have already begun using donated video cameras to record traffic stops of suspected drunk drivers. "This is a giant step for police work, it really is," said Cpl. Bob Bingham in Twin Falls. "They're invaluable."

The cameras in the Magic Valley are two of 36 donated to the state police by Aetna Insurance Co. through the Ada County chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving. Nationally, the insurance company and MADD have donated more than 800 video cameras to 72 law enforcement agencies as part of an "Eye on DUI" program.

ISP Superintendent Col. Rich

Humphreys told the Associated Press the video cameras will be used to tape suspects stopped for driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, and officers will wear wireless microphones to record conversations with suspects. Each camera, including microphone and accessories, costs $965. Officials said the cameras will be not used when officers spot a suspicious vehicle. The driver's ability to handle his or her car, the officer's approach to the vehicle, interaction with the subject and field sobriety tests all will be taped. Bingham said videotapes of poor driving and unsteady drivers make excellent evidence in court.

"It helps build credibility for the officer," he said. "Now I'll be able to show them exactly what took place out there."

Bingham, who has been using his camera since Aug. 18, said he tells drivers he's taping the interaction even though it's not required by law.

Department of Law Enforcement spokesman Rick Owens said the state police have no policy about informing drivers they are being recorded. The ISP has been audio recording traffic stops for years, Owens said, and Idaho law requires that only one party know a recording is being made.

As for the videotapes, "We really don't plan to tell them beforehand," he said.

That approach is not meant to be "sneaky," but to assure officers' safety, Owens said. "We don't want them to put up a big fight."

Study says market must solve housing crunch in Twin Falls

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Given time, the marketplace will solve the Twin Falls area's "rental" housing shortage, a Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce task force has concluded.

"We want people to know that the solutions to this aren't anywhere near magical," Chamber Executive Director Kent Just said. The Twin Falls chamber and Region IV Development Association Inc. released reports Tuesday characterizing the area's housing situation as critical, a possible impediment to economic development and a responsibility of the private sector.

Two years of economic growth have almost completely filled the Magic Valley's housing stock, which hasn't changed much since the early 1980s. According to a January Idaho Housing Agency report, the Magic Valley had one of the lowest rental rates at $305 and one of the lowest vacancy rates at 3 percent.

That indicates that the competitive nature of the area's housing hadn't bumped up rental rates, which builders say is essential before new construction can compete with existing shelter.

The housing shortage extends to most communities in the Magic Valley because of widespread economic growth, according to Region IV.

In Blaine County, people wanting to build a home must wait 18 months before a builder can start. Blaine County had the second-highest average rent in the state: $374 per month - and no vacancies, according to Region IV.

Terror follows slayings in Florida college town

Knight-Ridder News Service

GAINESVILLE, Fla. - The psychotic string of murders rose to five in this university town Tuesday, spreading terror in its wake.

The bodies of students Tracy Paulus, 23, of Hialeah and Manuel Taboada, 23, of Miami were found Tuesday morning in a ground-floor unit at the Gatorwood Apartments, about a half mile from the University of Florida campus.

The killings come in the wake of the gruesome murders of three young Gainesville-area women over the weekend. The three, all college students, were slaughtered and mutilated in their own apartments.

"It's clear this part of the country has some maniac on the loose," said university President John Lombardi. "We have every reason to believe that all five victims are all connected to one suspect or two suspects," said Gainesville Police Chief Wayland Clifton.

The latest victims were discovered after a friend, concerned that they hadn't been seen lately, asked a maintenance man to open the apartment and check on them.

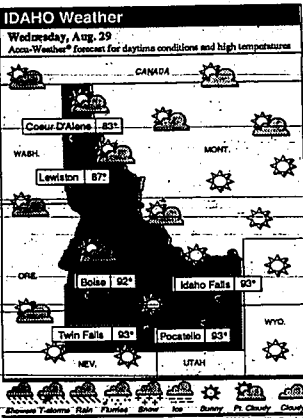

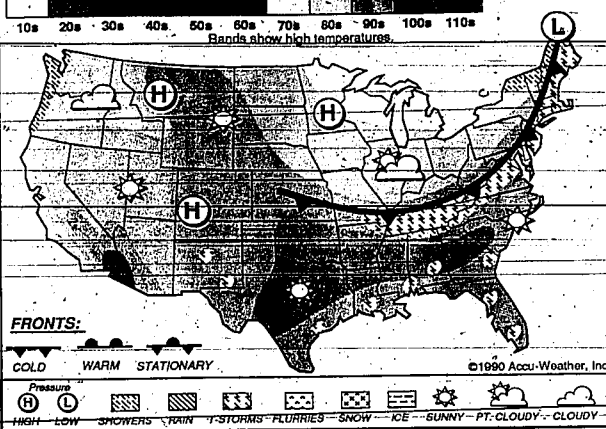

Their apartment was at the rear of the complex, as was the unit at Williams.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says a ridge of high pressure provided another day of warm, sunny and dry weather across the inland northwest on Tuesday. More sunshine and warm temperatures are in store for most of Idaho today.

Only the extreme north will see any significant change with increasing clouds during the afternoon as moisture feeds inland from a Pacific storm off the West Coast.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 92 degrees at Burley and Hagerman. Stanley reported the coldest at 33 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 109 degrees at Needles, Calif. The lowest was 34 at Craig, Colo., and West Yellowstone, Mont.

Thunderstorms hit northern states; heat wave persists

The Associated Press

Thunderstorms developed over the north-central part of the nation for a second day Tuesday, and a heat wave that is forcing some schools to close early continued east of the Rockies.

Thunderstorms developing along a cold front over north-central states produced hail as big as golf balls at Laney, S.D.

The weather system also spun off a tornado southwest of Rockford, Ill., the National Weather Service reported.

Thunderstorms posed the threat of more severe weather from the middle Missouri Valley through the middle Mississippi Valley to New York state and Pennsylvania.

Severe thunderstorms swept through northwestern Pennsylvania early Tuesday, downing power lines and leaving about 11,000 people without electricity. Tree limbs blocked several highways, and police in Oil City said a large tree crashed through the roof of a home. No one was injured.

Showers and thunderstorms developed over much of the Gulf Coast region during the afternoon, producing 95 inch of rain at Brownsville, Texas, during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT.

Unseasonably hot weather continued east of the Rockies, with readings mostly in the 90s from the southern and central Plains to the southern and middle Atlantic Coast. Temperatures were above 100 over parts of central Kansas, northern Oklahoma, north-central Texas, western Tennessee and northern Alabama.

Some eastern Nebraska schools said they'll close early after the rest of the week. In high school football classes planned to rest their players and work out in the morning as a heat wave with temperatures mostly in the 90s entered its sixth day Tuesday.

Public schools in Lincoln, Neb., maintained normal schedules and decided to shut down an hour early for the rest of the week.

Alabama's hot, dry weather prompted state health officials to issue a critical heat alert Tuesday. Farmers worried that their cotton crops could be cut in half and that they would have to buy feed for livestock lacking hay.

In Birmingham, Ala., school officials sent some 42,000 students home about two hours early because of the lack of air-conditioning in classrooms at about 30 schools.

Tulsa, Okla., cooled down to an overnight low of just 82, and St. Louis, Mo., reported a low of 80.

Tornadoes hammer Illinois, kill at least 23

CREST HILL, Ill. (AP) — Tornadoes ripped through several northern Illinois towns Tuesday, killing at least 23 people, blowing residents out of apartment buildings and leveling at least 90 homes and a high school.

Local hospitals said at least 780 people were being treated for injuries.

The tornadoes touched down at least four times just after 3:30 p.m. CDT along a seven-mile southwestern path from the community of Plainfield to Joliet, about 40 miles southwest of Chicago, Illinois State Police said.

Julie Budzinski of the Will County Coroner's office said late Tuesday that at least 19 people were killed.

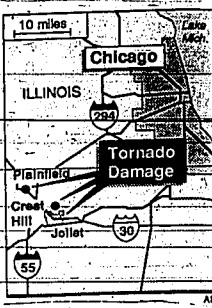

Checkpoint Fire Chief Dave Maris said the bodies of at least seven people were found near an apartment complex in Crest Hill. Maris said three bodies were lying in a corn field next to the complex, and four others were pulled from the collapsed buildings.

"When the storm went through, some of the buildings disintegrated," Maris said. "High winds blew some of the people into the corn field."

"Five people died in Plainfield, said John Watson, ambulance service chief for the Plainfield Fire Department.

At least three people were killed in Joliet, said City Manager John Mezera.

Monday to order 36 Iraqi Embassy staff members out of the United States by Thursday.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said six Americans were arrested in Iraq and three in Kuwait since Monday, bringing the total to 70 — 48 in Iraq and 22 in Kuwait.

The dead American was in Iraqi custody at the time he died, Ms. Tutwiler was unable to identify him but said Iraqi officials have agreed to conduct an autopsy. U.S. officials asked that a competent physician chosen by the embassy be present and that the remains be delivered to U.S. custody as soon as possible.

She said the death "underscores the barbaric nature of Iraqi policy towards foreign nationals in Iraq and Kuwait, and makes a lie of Iraq's claim that they are all well treated and in no danger."

Ms. Tutwiler said Iraqi officials have not responded to U.S. requests concerning 15 Americans in Iraq and Kuwait with special medical needs who the administration believes should be allowed to leave the country immediately.

The dead American was not among the 15, she said.

burg Village Apartments where the first two murders were discovered. The third victim was killed in a secluded apartment off a sandy road.

The Garnerwood Apartments, shaded by pines and closed in Spanish moss, are right outside the city limits, between the other two slaying sites.

Sources close to the investigation said that all five victims were killed and mutilated by a very sharp knife or surgical instrument and one of the young girls died over the weekend was salinated.

"From my 12 years of experience, this is the worst I've ever seen," said Lt. Sadie Darnell of the Gainesville Police Department.

Clifton said that Tuesday's victims had been killed after the other three women died. "It appears that these people were killed after the first groups and the murders went in the chronological order of discovery," he said.

It is one of Florida's most intense manhunt in memory, with more than 800 investigators working the case, including state and federal agents.

Gov. Bob Martinez sent 50 state troopers and Florida Department Law Enforcement agents and two police to Gainesville Tuesday. Among the state investigators were 16 agents skilled in psychological profiles, including some who worked the Ted Bundy killings at Florida State University more than a decade ago.

All vacations have been canceled for the 65 sworn officers on the campus police force, and 13 part-time officers have been called in, said department spokeswoman Angie Tipton.

The show of force did little to soothe fears. With Tuesday's grisly discovery, the undercurrent of fear rose to near-paria levels and many students packed their bags.

"I don't want to get dropped from classes. I don't want to fall behind. But my life is more important," said Michelle Jones, 19, junior from Satellite Beach who said she was going home Tuesday.

"We slept with steak knives last night," said a weeping Stacey Green, 19, junior from Jacksonville who learned of the latest slayings when she rode her bike past the crime scene Tuesday. "I need to call my mom. This is unreal."

A run on concealed weapons permits quickly developed.

The Alachua County Sheriff's Office reported that nearly 50 people had applied for the $144 permits since Monday.

Joe Colucci of Davie drove to Gainesville Monday night to stay with his mother with a friend, a freshman. "If they don't discover the person by the weekend, I'm taking her home," he said.

The university accommodated the sudden exodus by announcing that tests would be suspended.

Iraq puts forth pullout terms

Newspay

WASHINGTON — Iraq has told the White House that it will withdraw from Kuwait and allow foreigners to leave, but in return it wants U.N. sanctions lifted, guaranteed access to the Persian Gulf and sole control of an oil field that disputes Kuwait, sources involved in the secret offer and memoranda detailing its contents say.

Iraq's message was delivered to National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft on Thursday by a former high-ranking U.S. official.

The former official, who spoke on the condition that he not be further identified, acknowledged that he was unsure whether the proposal was a serious offer or merely "floating something."

Officers say the cameras will keep them on good behavior, as well.

"It's going to make an officer a better officer," Bingham said.

Alm Kofoed, president of the Idaho chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said videotaping traffic stops is not a violation of privacy because it occurs on a public road, but not telling the driver about the tape is unfair.

"The secret surveillance stuff is what bothers me. It's more of a 1984: Big Brother police state we're all trying to avoid," Kofoed said.

And often, the Boise attorney said, the tape will help a defendant by showing the driver wasn't driving poorly and didn't appear intoxicated.

But Ada County MADD got involved because videotaping had been proved effective in convicting drunken drivers in other areas.

"We've seen guilty pleas increase dramatically in cases where video evidence is available," Betty Studler, president of Ada County MADD, told the AP. "This will remind potential offenders their chances of evading a DUI charge are slim as well as ease the backlog of current court cases."

"This equipment will increase the conviction rate and without question increase the guilty pleas," the Associated Press quoted Gov. Cecil Andrus as saying.

Housing

continuing to the Housing Agency report cited in Region IV's report.

Fairfield, Utah, with Blaine County commuters, could fill almost any type of rental unit. A builder is trying to develop a mobile home park on an old railroad right of way.

The city of Kimberly has agreed to a subdivision south of town, but construction won't start for two years. The Kimberly School District started advertising in May for rental units for new teachers.

Jerome experienced a shortage of single-family, three-bedroom or more houses after manufacturers Spence Construction and Bridgford Cordage started operation. The city is also experiencing pressure from commuters. Volco Construction plans to build 27 homes in the $65,000 range.

Gooding's housing is getting scarce because of Blaine County commuters. Plans by Ward's poorly and didn't appear intoxicated.

But Ada County MADD got involved because videotaping had been proved effective in convicting drunken drivers in other areas.

"We've seen guilty pleas increase dramatically in cases where video evidence is available," Betty Studler, president of Ada County MADD, told the AP. "This will remind potential offenders their chances of evading a DUI charge are slim as well as ease the backlog of current court cases."

"This equipment will increase the conviction rate and without question increase the guilty pleas," the Associated Press quoted Gov. Cecil Andrus as saying.

Those involved said 65 people died in Idaho last year because of alcohol-related accidents. Studler called it a "staggering" toll and a "tragic, senseless loss."

Andrus said he will push again in the next Legislature for tougher penalties on drunken drivers.

He renewed his call for an automatic 30-day driver's license suspension for anyone convicted of DUI and for creation of a "zero tolerance" standard for those under age 21 who drink and drive, which automatically would cost a young driver his or her license for an alcohol-related violation. He unsuccessfully pushed both proposals in the 1990 Legislature.

The chamber didn't recommend government intervention, and Region IV said the private sector would eventually resolve the problem. That's a sharp contrast to a similar study recently completed by Wood River Valley regional economic task force which recommended a variety of zoning requirements to force builders to construct affordable housing.

"The best way to combat the housing crunch is to create an awareness of the problem throughout the Magic Valley," the Twin Falls chamber concluded.

New rental properties will allow the middle income to upgrade and the low income to rent subsidized housing.

U.S. should open trade with Vietnam

WASHINGTON — It may be time for the United States to open avenues of trade with communist Vietnam and Cambodia as a prelude to United Nations-sponsored elections in Cambodia, Sen. Richard Lugar said Tuesday.

"We ought to sketch conditions for easing restrictions on commerce with Vietnam and Cambodia," the Indiana Republican told reporters. Developmental loans for Vietnam could be a first step, he said. Lugar just returned from a two-week, seven-nation trip to East Asia. In Vietnam, he met with foreign minister Nguyen Co Thach, who sought to highlight market reforms made in his country's economy.

Thach assured him that all Vietnamese forces have been withdrawn from Cambodia, where they had fought to push the feared Khmer Rouge from power, Lugar said.

Bush gets ear pierced - the hard way

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — Someone on a fishing excursion Tuesday with President Bush and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney hooked a big one — the president himself.

Camera crew members in a news boat following close behind said Mulroney appeared to be responsible for the hook that caught Bush's ear, a notion the Canadian prime minister did nothing to dispel.

"It was not a hostile act," Mulroney said. However, first lady Barbara Bush, who said her husband "is fine," disputed that Mulroney was the culprit. She summoned son Jeb, who was also on the boat, and commanded him to tell reporters just who had hooked his father. Jeb just grinned sheepishly. Did Mulroney hook Bush? "That is really not true," he said and walked away.

Bush's press secretary Merlin Fitzwater later confirmed that Jeb was responsible for accidentally piercing his father's right ear lobe.

Maytag will stop repackaging ovens

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Thousands of people who bought Magic Chef microwave ovens, thinking they were new, would collect $35 each under a proposed settlement of three lawsuits against the manufacturer.

Since January 1987, Maytag Corp.'s Aniston plant repackaged or reconditioned ovens that customers had returned. The company then sold the ovens as new for $80 to $160.

Maytag denied any liability in the settlement proposal filed Monday, but agreed to halt the practice and offer refunds to the 45,000 to 50,000 customers nationwide who bought the ovens: The refunds would be cash payments of $25 and a $10 certificate toward the purchase of a Magic Chef product.

Activists force closure of Statue of Liberty

NEW YORK — Black activists Tuesday pitched tents on Liberty Island, forcing the closing of the Statue of Liberty, to mark the anniversary of Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I Have a Dream" speech.

They also said they want to rename the city for the slain civil rights leader.

Separately, black construction workers drove a honking caravan of trucks and backhoes to City Hall in a demand for more jobs.

The Rev. Al Sharpton, a flamboyant and controversial activist, and Lenora Fulani, who is running for governor on the New Alliance Party ticket, led about 100 people from City Hall down Broadway to Battery Park City, a skyscraper development at the lower tip of Manhattan.

Venus mapping delayed to find bug

PASADENA, Calif. — Magellan's mission to map the rugged surface of Venus is being delayed again so a team of engineers can figure out why the spacecraft keeps losing contact with Earth, a NASA official said Tuesday.

"We're targeting for the last week in September to start mapping," said Tony Spear, Magellan project manager at the space agency's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Spear had said Friday that engineers hoped to fix the problem in time to have Magellan working properly by mid-September. Before Magellan started malfunctioning, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration planned for it to make pictures and maps of Venus on a regular basis starting Sept. 1.

The spaceship remained in a protective "safing mode" Tuesday, Spear said during an interview.

Doctors to assume burden of Medicare paperwork

WASHINGTON (AP) — The burden of Medicare reimbursement paperwork will shift next week from patients to physicians.

Many physicians who don't already submit reimbursement claims for their elderly and disabled patients on Medicare see a clerical nightmare ahead.

But advocates for the elderly see the change as needed relief from confusing and time-consuming paperwork that so confounds some Medicare beneficiaries that they don't file for benefits they are owed.

"The paperwork burden on Medicare beneficiaries has been tremendous," said Horace Deets, executive director of the American Association of Retired Persons. "Now Medicare beneficiaries will receive the benefits to which they are entitled without having to deal with burdensome paperwork."

A Physician Payment Review Commission poll in 1988 found nearly one in 10 Medicare beneficiaries did not file a Medicare claim for at least one bill they paid that year. Most often they said the forms were too complicated.

These unfiled claims amounted to between $90 million and $130 million, the commission estimated.

Most of the estimated $50 million Medicare Part B claims expected to be filed this fiscal year will have been submitted by physicians or medical suppliers, said Barbara Gage.

Quarterly trade gap down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States recorded its smallest quarterly trade deficit in 6 1/2 years in the spring, the government reported Tuesday, but analysts forecast widening deficits in coming months as the Persian Gulf crisis has cut American's foreign oil bill. The Commerce Department said the trade gap from April through June narrowed a sharp 14.1 percent, to $22.6 billion, reflecting a big drop in oil prices and a record level for U.S. exports sales.

America's trade performance has been the one bright spot in a generally lackluster economy this year, and the Bush administration had been counting on further trade gains to keep the country out of a recession.

Since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, many private economists say that an economic slump is imminent as an already weak U.S. economy succumbs to an oil-price shock that sends inflation surging and reverses the trade improvement.

Council OKs major role of U.N. in Cambodia

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The five permanent Security Council members agreed Tuesday on plans for a truce in Cambodia and U.N. administration until a new government is elected.

It would be the United Nations' deepest involvement in any regional conflict, one diplomat said.

The five — the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union — wrapped up two days of private talks on the details of a transitional administration to guide Cambodia to peace and democracy.

"We have gone as far as we can as the five permanent members," said a U.S. diplomat involved in the talks. "Now it is up to the four Cambodian parties."

The diplomat was referring to the Khmer Rouge, its two non-communist guerrilla allies, and the Vietnam-installed government in Cambodia. "The question is, can the four Cambodian factions agree?" the diplomat asked.

The factions are to meet in Indonesia in September.

The agreement of the five permanent Security Council members means that the backers of the warring factions — the United States, Soviet Union and China — have reached accord on a peace plan.

The Khmer Rouge receives its weapons and supplies from China; the Soviets back the current Cambodian government of Prime Minister Hun

Sen; the United States backs the two non-communist guerrilla factions. It would be the most significant U.N. involvement in a regional conflict, even exceeding the world body's role in guiding Namibia to independence from South Africa, the diplomat said. The Namibia settlement cost the United Nations more than $750 million.

The key issues now, the diplomat said, are organizing a cease-fire and elections so that a new government can be established that is not dominated by the Khmer Rouge or the current pro-Vietnam government.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in December 1978 to oust the Khmer Rouge, who presided over the deaths of up to a million Cambodians from starvation and executions during their brutal rule that began in 1975.

The American and other diplomats involved in the talks said the participants approved five documents that will be forwarded to the Cambodian factions.

According to an official statement, the documents cover "transitional arrangements regarding the administration of Cambodia during the pre-election period; military arrangements during the transitional period; elections under United Nations auspices; human rights protection; (and) international guarantees" that Cambodia will be non-aligned, neutral, and democratic.

Expelled Iraqis feverishly packing to leave

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the 36 Iraqi Embassy personnel and their families ordered to leave Kuwait, the Persian Gulf crisis has been reduced to one overwhelming imperative: packing up, and fast.

"It's a hell of a problem now," Ahmad Alkassbi, an Iraqi consultant helping the embassy to leave Kuwait, said Tuesday. "Seventy-two hours. It's just impossible."

On Monday afternoon, a U.S. diplomatic message was delivered to Iraqi Ambassador Mohamed Al-Mashat, advising notice that the 36 must get going from the United States within 72 hours.

The move was in retaliation for a series of Iraqi actions, especially the "illegal order" for the closure of the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait. State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said.

The Iraqis are permitted to remain at the Iraqi Embassy, including Al-Mashat, reflect the number of Americans still working at the U.S. embassies in Iraq and Kuwait.

For the diplomats ordered to tween 200 and 300 boxes of possessions to New York for shipment to Iraq.

Inside the orange-brick Iraqi Embassy near Dupont Circle, about a dozen men were speaking Arabic and gesturing excitedly, shutting in and out of several rooms. In the reception area, a small knot of people watched an Iraqi television broadcast relayed by CNN.

The sparsely furnished room was dominated by two huge portraits of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein — one in military uniform with a beret, the other in a blue suit.

Besides the nightmarish logistics, the abrupt move also is taking an emotional toll on some of the diplomats, said Alkassbi, an Iraqi citizen who lives in Washington and describes himself as a friend of the embassy trying to help out.

"Some of them are sad because they're used to it here," he said.

There were no immediately apparent signs of papers or other effects being moved at the embassy Tuesday afternoon. A request to interview some of the departing diploamts was denied.

Security at the embassy appeared lax. An AP reporter entered the front door, rang the buzzer next to the inner locked door and was let in without identifying herself. A mutual writer in with an express message package from California.

Outside, a guard from the U.S. Secret Service's Uniformed Division stood on the sidewalk in the 90-degree heat, chatting with one of the two District of Columbia policemen also stationed there. A black embassy car with diplomatic license plates was parked in the driveway, its front end pointed toward the street.

"At least it's not as hot as Saudi Arabia," the Secret Service agent joked to a reporter.

About a dozen photographers and television cameramen, some from foreign news agencies and TV networks, had taken up positions on the sidewalk, waiting. They tensed at the slightest movement, snapping to each time someone emerged from the embassy.

Pentagon increases price tag for Desert Shield

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operation Desert Shield will cost an estimated $2.5 billion through the end of September, nearly double the earlier estimate of $1.3 billion, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The sharply higher costs are attributed to the expense of calling up reserve and National Guard forces, increased operations for ships and aircraft and increased fuel costs, said spokesman Pete Williams.

Other factors include increases in the number of C-130 aircraft in the Persian Gulf region and increases in the number of aircraft carrier battle groups deployed there, Williams said.

The cost estimate includes $1.13 billion for the Army, $494 million for the Navy, $556 million for the Air Force, $20 million for defense agencies and $300 million for increased fuel prices.

Reporting on its reserve call up, the Pentagon said that by the end of the month it will have activated 14,129 people in hundreds of Army, Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard units across the country.

The total includes:

- Air Force: 7,386, including 616 from Air Force Reserve units, 386 from the Air National Guard and 6,384 Air Force reservists who weren't formally activated but who volunteered for duty in the Gulf crisis.
- Navy: 2,236 sailors from 127 units will be activated by month's end.
- Army: 4,236 soldiers activated so far, including 242 National Guardsmen from 19 units and 3,694 Army reservists from 34 units.
- Coast Guard: 271 personnel.

The Pentagon said additional expenses include the cost of calling up reservists, up to a total of 48,200. The cost of the call up, the operations of the reserve forces and their subsistence is estimated at $347 million through September, it said.

It pegged at $175 million the cost incurred due to the increased tempo of flying time and air ship use. The Pentagon noted that the number of deployed carrier battle groups in the area of the Arabian peninsula will increase to three from 16.

The Pentagon also said the 51-C-130 transport planes in use in the crisis will more than double, to 112 aircraft, by the end of September.

Deployment of U.S. forces is proving costly, the Pentagon said.

- Eight F-16 Stealth SL-7 ships with crews and equipment: $34 million.
- Sixteen Roll-on Roll-off ships and 20 cargo ships moved out of the ready reserve fleet to active operations: $95 million.
- The use of commercial and government cargo aircraft: $484 million.
- The deploying of two Navy prepositioned ships for aviation logistics support: $9 million.

One-time costs at various military installations to prepare units for deployment: $135 million.

The Pentagon said two hospital ships had been equipped and deployed at a cost of $10 million, and that it has spent $30 million for medical supplies and $85 million for common protective clothing, camouflage uniforms, news and chemical-agent resistant paint.

OPEC stalls so Iraq, Libya can respond

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — OPEC's oil ministers on Tuesday delayed formal endorsement of a plan for production increases to give more time to hear from absent members Iraq and Libya.

Iran, which has refused to back the tentative agreement, made a surprise call for a joint meeting between the cartel and nearly two dozen oil-consuming Western nations, including the United States, to discuss the oil crunch caused by the Persian Gulf crisis.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholanreza Aqazadeh said the talks should cover the current situation in the crude market and consider what would happen in the event of war in the region.

A majority of the group's members tentatively agreed early Tuesday to support higher output, mostly by Saudi Arabia, Venezuela and the United Arab Emirates during the military crisis in the oil-rich Gulf.

Aqazadeh refused to join 10 other ministers in the accord worked out during two days of informal consultations by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

He said Western nations should release crude from their oil stockpiles before asking OPEC to help.

"It is not the responsibility of OPEC only," he said. "For that reason, I cannot support the increase in production."

25 new Saddams born since Karwait invasion

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Some people think one Saddam is enough, but Iraq's news agency says 25 couples in Yemen have named their new babies Saddam since Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent his army into Kuwait.

The state-controlled Iraqi News Agency reported Tuesday that enthusiasm for Saddam Hussein is running high in Yemen, whose government has indicated sympathy for Iraq but maintained a relatively neutral public stance since the Aug. 2 takeover.

Yemeni parents' feelings are based on support for Saddam's "national stand in facing foreign aggression against the Arab nation," the news agency said.

Retired INEL chief to lecture at ISU

POCATELLO — Don Ofé, recently retired as manager of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, will serve as a special lecturer at Idaho State University.

Ofé has adopted a low-key attitude to his new status in academia. "Really, most of what I'll be doing is selected lectures in courses taught by other people," he said. "I'm there to be used in that capacity, and the professors and deans know that's what I'm there for."

At least for this semester, Ofé will be a featured guest lecturer in a number of departments. His first official assignment is a December talk to a basic management class on what managers look for in employees.

Silak becomes Idaho appellate judge

BOISE — Cathy R. Silak has become Idaho's first woman appellate judge, with her colleagues in the legal profession calling it "a brilliant triumph of the Great American Dream."

Silak, 40, on Tuesday was sworn in to a term on the Idaho Court of Appeals. She succeeds Donald Burnett, who resigned to become dean of a law school, the first change in the eight years since the Court of Appeals was created to ease the Supreme Court's workload.

"She is the first; she will not be the last," declared Gov. Cecil Andrus, who earlier this month appointed Silak to the position.

"The promise of equal opportunity to all becomes a reality," the new judge said, shortly after she took the oath of office, donned a judicial robe and took her place on the court beside Chief Justice Jesse Walters and Judge Roger Swanstrom.

Fair attendance shows 5,000 gain

BOISE — Despite rain most of the 10-day run, the 1990 Western Idaho Fair showed an increase of about 5,000 in attendance this year, to nearly 157,000 admissions.

The fair ended Sunday night, with attendance of 6,011.

Boise police cleared in drowning case

BOISE — Boise police have been cleared by the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement of any misconduct in the Aug. 15 drowning of a Pocatello man in a Park Center dredge pond.

Officers "conducted their duties within Boise Police Department guidelines" in trying to arrest Ronald Earl Walker, and in trying to rescue him when he was drowning, state investigators said.

When two police officers realized Walker, a 23-year-old ex-convict, was in danger, they risked their lives to try to save him, according to a report on the state investigation released Monday.

EPA adds FMC, Simplot to Superfund list

POCATELLO — The Environmental Protection Agency has added East Michaud Flats, home of the Pocatello operations of the FMC Corp. and the J.R. Simplot Co., to the national Superfund list of sites contaminated with hazardous waste.

The agency also named Monsanto Corp. in Soda Springs and the Mountain Home Air Force Base outside Mountain Home to the list.

Sen. Symms confident Saddam can be beaten

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Amid indications Iraq President Saddam Hussein is trying to avoid a confrontation with the United States, Idaho Republican Sen. Steve Symms believes the Iraqi leader will eventually succumb to the international economic sanctions against his country.

"If we stay with the embargo, don't flinch, don't get weak, in a very short time Saddam will be forced to withdraw from Kuwait, and once he withdraws from Kuwait he's history," Symms said, Tuesday after landing in Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

"The world is now against Iraq."

Earlier in the day, Symms and another senator met with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak for about 90 minutes in Alexandria, Egypt, on the Middle East crisis.

"His view is that the embargo will work," Symms said.

Symms, who was in Saudi Arabia and Bahrain on Monday, said the buildup of American, European and Egyptian troops in the region has left Saddam with few, if any, options as long as the public backs President Bush in his demand that Iraqi troops withdraw from Kuwait.

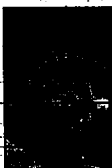

"I can't tell what he's going to do his clock is not wound like ours," Symms said. "He would prove his insanity if he attacked Saudi Arabia at this point with the forces we have brought to bear, but I don't think he's crazy enough to attack at this point because I think it would be certain suicide on his part."

"I think that Saddam Hussein really has very few options," Symms said.

during the Reagan administration made it possible.

At the same time, he shared concerns of Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who was in the group that met with Mubarak, about the lopsided military burden the U.S. is carrying in Saudi Arabia. Nunn said American public support for the actions could be increased if Egypt and other countries increased their military commitment in the region.

Symms said Mubarak was encouraged by U.S. actions and was ready to increase his commitment of Egyptian troops to Saudi Arabia.

Pending school contract falls short on major issue

The contract approved by Twin Falls teachers Monday and scheduled for consideration by the Twin Falls School Board tonight represents important new directions in the district's relations with its professional staff.

If approved by the board, the agreement will give experienced teachers pay increases of between 4.3 and 13 percent, as well as significant improvements in health insurance and other fringe benefits.

It goes a long way toward retaining experienced teachers in the Twin Falls schools instead of sending them to better-paying school systems, both in Idaho and out of state.

But if the proposal has those pluses, it has at least one serious shortcoming: It avoids the issue of merit pay.

By continuing a basic union approach of paying all teachers the same based on seniority, the proposal doesn't differentiate between the good teacher and the bad.

For example, we can think of some math teachers who are well worth the top scale of $30,650; indeed, they're probably worth a lot more in terms of what they do for our children's education.

At the same time, we know some coaches teaching math who can't compute the number of 10-yard segments in a football field. Yet, they'll be paid on the same scale, and will probably earn more when you add in the "extra duty" fringes.

But the board wasn't willing to take on the pay issue this year, or at least wasn't willing to battle the union over it.

The board and the administration want to pass an expensive bond issue this year for a new middle school and various high school improvements, despite already strong doubts in the community over the plan.

Winning that bond vote will not be easy, and without strong teacher support, it will be well-nigh impossible.

The generous new contract is clearly an effort to get the teachers behind the bond issue. That appears to be one reason this contract is tilted toward the upper end of the pay scale, with perks that will most benefit teachers with between five and 15 years in the system, whose community contacts will be crucial in the bond vote.

By contrast, entry-level teachers will receive just $16,200, a $200 or 1.3 percent increase from last year.

That may not be enough to attract the best and brightest graduates of Idaho colleges and "out-of-state" schools—and is something the board needs to examine in another year.

By building in pay incentives to keep experienced teachers, the proposal will help improve education in Twin Falls, provided the experienced teachers the community keeps are those with the highest performance.

Otherwise, we're setting ourselves up for entrenched mediocrity down the road, by in effect, rewarding "deadwood" instead of pruning it. It is a calculated risk.

DISCONCERTING ARAB CUSTOMS: ACTUALLY, YOU HAVE NOTHING TO FEAR. YOU ARE HIS GUEST.

Victorious encounter with a computer

Labor Day is almost here. A time to rest from a year of work, work that is supposed to be easier than it has ever been—because we now live in the computer age.

I am one of those people who is always among the last to try anything new. I mean, I got my first microwave oven last year. The year before that, I learned how to use a Mr. Coffee.

A few months ago, I became determined to learn how to use my home computer. We have had it for five years. Two years ago, I asked for word processing software for Christmas! I thought it would inspire me to learn to use the computer.

"It won't work," my husband said, sighing. "Buying you a skillset never inspired you to learn how to use the stove."

I decided to ignore my spouse's comments on the subject. After all, he is one of those computer whiz types. I figure he could never be "user friendly" to those of us who still say the word "interface" only when we are talking about sewing.

Those computer terms really can be a little scary. Take that term "user friendly," for example. "Writer's Digest" magazine once definied it as the "faint hope that people without doctoral degrees in computer science will be able to use the product."

The magazine also compared the idea of designing a computer that is "user friendly" to a discussion between two hot dog manufacturers, with one telling the other he's honestly improved the product because now you can actually eat it!

Still, I did learn to use the computers at work. (The prospect of life without a paycheck can be convincing.) And young children certainly have little trouble mastering the things. In fact, my daughter was barely 5 years old when she asked me if she would be a software before she would be a junior or senior.

I think part of my fear of computers grew out of the fact that I'm just not mechanically inclined. In general, I am deathly afraid that anything with wires or batteries in it might someday decide to turn on me and blow up my face. Which is probably why I got such great scores on those standardized tests in school—in every area except mechanical ability.

Now I really do feel stupid. "What makes a car start?" with the word, "Daddy?"

Somehow I did manage to make it through college without any mechanical ability. Making it through life may be another story.

I typed an entire article on my home computer last night—and I found out in a word processing program that is very simple to operate. It took me 45 minutes to learn how to use the thing, if you don't count the five years of getting ready to try.

Now I really do feel stupid. And yet, I also feel ready to tackle all sorts of new mechanical challenges in life. Does anyone have a washing machine that needs fixing?

Those who've known war are more likely to avoid it if possible

It was another August and Jack Dowd sure does remember exactly where he was standing straight as a string on the hot square of asphalt called "The Grinder" at Garrison Island, S.C.—when some old gunnery sergeant came running with news that Lyndon Johnson had taken a good whack at the North Vietnamese because they fooled with two of its ships, the Maddox and Turner Joy, in a place called the Gulf of Tonkin during the summer of 1964.

Forget the fact that Johnson had lied and no shots were fired at our boats because reality did not matter then and 12 months later, Dowd was with India Company, 3d Marines, outside Chu Lai, Republic of South Vietnam, under a terrible sun, young kids who thought they were part of some great adventure began getting killed in growing numbers.

Dowd is 45 this morning and glad to be here. Like the rest of us, he watches TV and news about Iraq and a war already underway in the Middle East.

He lives near Philadelphia and teaches school. He has only one hand—the right, the other having been shot off one day at dusk when Dowd was struggling to reach a guy named Sweeney who had been gut shot by an AK-47. Dowd lost a hand. Sweeney lost a life and the dying man's face is still imprinted in the survivor's memory.

"I see him every day," Dowd said over every day, some how, some way. And I'm not embarrassed to tell you I'm scared thinking about what's going to happen over there. Man, I can taste the fear."

In the Pentagon, planners prepare a fight in the desert. A military computer projects a force of 6,000 American troops in order to defeat Iraq's Saddam Hussein, in order to make sure the rest of us can continue to drive fast at $1.29 a gallon.

The mathematics of international politics revolve around the cost of oil per barrel. We are told that one man controlling a large part of the world's oil supply could plunge the globe into recession, tumbling economies and toppling governments.

All of it is understandable and, certainly, one lunatic cannot be allowed to hold world currencies hostage.

But the mathematics of an actual shooting war are a bit different. War is popular for the first week or month our soldiers are engaged in combat. Right now, the lust to kill Saddam Hussein and many thousands of his soldiers is thick throughout the land. Toss a few hundred funerals into the mix, add 120 women to each state's roster of Gold Star Mothers, and popularity wanes.

Our culture is rooted in instant gratification. Quick rewards at bargain basement prices. If the costs are heavy, or the road a bit long, recent history shows we would rather take an early exit. The nation wallows in a tidal pool of huge debt, enormous self-pity and incredible selfishness. Individual accountability and responsibility are strangers in America in 1990.

Our national motto has become "Where's mine?"

So we end up on the verge of dying for oil because we are too lazy to live without it. The lights burn brighter than ever. Big-engine cars burn up freeways. Energy-designed buildings decorate skylines of every big city, like diamonds in the night.

Too hot? No problem, turn up the air conditioning. Too cold? Don't worry, push up the thermostat. Sacrifice and conservation are dusty

...I'm not embarrassed to tell you I'm scared thinking about what's going to happen over there. Man, I can taste the fear.

— Jack Dowd, ex-Marine chapters in a history book of grim memories. A mention of nuclear energy or any alternative source is a signal for a thousand lawsuits that will litigate for decades. Fifty years ago, having endured the Depression, the nation got up off its knees on a nine-count, fought a global war on two fronts and rebuilt our enemies. Fifty years later, we'd concede to Japan or Germany for lack of a consensus. Today, we are a collection of widely divided special interests, each with its own agenda. We are no longer one nation.

Yet we operate abroad under the old assumption that "we" remain the greatest country on earth. Unhappily, we are not the only country on earth. And the oil does not belong to us; we just use it. But the sight of our ships, planes and combat-ready men and women give premature birth to the thought that nothing—no single leader and no nation—can last long under withering fire-power born in the USA.

Reality is that all the wonderful planes and boats as big as small towns are merely pictures. Wars are fought on the ground by infantry, and in a desert where there is no place to run and no place to hide, casualties will be enormous.

The last best hope we have to avoid a large round of military funerals is the fellow on the speed boat up in Kennecott-unport.

Like Jack Dowd and a lot of others, George Bush actually knows what it's like to get shot at, and he can probably still taste the lingering fear of war.

That would, I pray, make him absolute-ly the last guy to ever rush for a gun.

Get tough in the Gulf

First, Saddam Hussein is not a nazi, just diabolically clever and power-mad as was Hitler. Second, morally, we have no business there as an invading nation. Economically, we have no choice. Third, if our Congress learned the hard lesson 25 years ago when the oil cartel caused us and the rest of the world by the threat and developed our own energy supply, giving us independence from the Mideast, the situation today would not have been possible. They chose to let the oil companies of the world call the shots. The world, not the United States alone, must now either capitulate to Hussein or fight.

There is one faction that will win no matter who loses or wins the conflict—the oil companies. Until an alternate energy supply is developed that is not controlled by minority groups with unlimited power, we will still be at their mercy. They need to be controlled!

Third, unless we had the world finish this impending war quickly, decisively and so devastatingly carefully to it, it will happen again. That as a world community, all will together and set up rules to ensure that it will never happen again. If this is not done immediately without equivocation, our world support will erode and we will find ourselves facing a united Arab nation, not Iraq alone. Russia could not defeat

Afghanistan in four years of war, so why would we believe we could defeat the entire Arab world single-handedly?

Further, we should not allow our resolve to be deterred by constant coverage by the media of so-called hostages who went to an area of the world fully aware of the instability and of their possible peril. It was their free choice for profit or pleasure. The soldiers we are now sending for families, too, and their choice was not for profit or pleasure. Their lives and their families are just as precious to them as those who are non-military and there by choice. Staff united and let's get a dirty, rotten job over with and then clean house at home.

In time of national crisis, incumbent office holders, rather than be removed in mid-stream always seem to slide back into the same position and life-style. Voters, let's not let this happen—get mad and vote!

Stolen flowers a gift

Last evening, someone stole a beautiful flowering basket and hanger from the porch of my daughter's home at 163 Ash St. I feel compelled to reach out to this person or possible to a friend of this person and to tell them what these flowers meant to my daughter and son-in-law. This arrangement was a gift to my daughter and son-in-law on the death of their 4-month-old son who died two months ago in a tragic accident at the baby sitter's. Every card, flower arrangement and plant sent from friends was special to them in their time of need. This arrangement helped to brighten up the outside of her home and gave some joy to an otherwise sad and bleak home which would never again hear the happy sounds of a baby growing up.

If you have an any heart at all, please return the hanging flower arrangement in the same manner in which you took it, and in so doing, help my daughter and son-in-law realize that there is some good left in this world.

Don't take buses off the road

Trans IV is one of the most-needed and most-utilized services the city offers. Without this service, many residents at West Magie Care Center would be homeless. Many residents are convalescing and rehabilitating to return to the community. Being physically unable to ride in a personal car because of their condition, car size, width and height, they would not be able to see their physicians, go on outings, family visits, the county fair, etc.

Trans IV buses are equipped to physically transfer the resident and they employ careful, caring drivers to assist.

Elderly patients have fragile skin and bones with the potential for lacerations and breaks caused by unwieldy transfers in and out of cars.

The staff, residents and their family members rely on and truly do appreciate the service of Trans IV when seeing a physician is necessary but not an emergency. The only other alternative would be having to be transported by ambulance. You can imagine how traumatic a trip in an ambulance would be, not to mention the cost.

The cost of Trans IV ($4 round trip) is certainly affordable for the elderly as compared to the cost of an ambulance or even a taxi.

We all hope the City Council will find a way to budget the Trans IV service for the coming year.

Law officers did a great job

I would like to make a public commendation to Deputy Wayne Tousey, Sheriff Jim Muun, the state police and all the officers involved in my six-hour ordeal.

If our intruder had been a criminal, my mother's life and mine would have been saved. Everyone was so professional and efficient. As it was, no one was harmed in any way. Wayne had the patience and expertise to stay in and talk me through six hours of fear and anxiety without a waver of doubt in his voice. It gave me the reassurance to "hang in there." He also had the presence of mind to call my son, Bert Nowak, in a friend which was a great comfort; he was there when I needed him badly after it was all over.

The citizens of Twin Falls County should feel very lucky and grateful for an experienced and caring law enforcement crew. They deserve a gold medal. Thank you all very much.

Stock prices edge higher in cautious trading; Dow up 3.22

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose modestly Tuesday as Wall Street's eye-train on the Middle East and the oil markets; two days of sharp gains.

Analysts said traders were unwilling to make large commitments, and so prices fluctuated in a narrow range throughout the day.

The Dow Jones industrial average edged up 3.22 to 2,614.85 after versing course several times. The slight gain followed a 78.71 point plunge in the average on Monday, a 4.50 point advance Friday.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a margin of about 3 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 837 up, 664 down and 492 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to a relatively light 127.65 million shares, down from 160.15 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled nearly 157.70 million shares.

The market shook off an early wave of profit-taking and then came back locked in a narrow trading range for the rest of the day.

Analysts said the fluctuations and the relative lack of volume showed the market was very cautious, and that traders were reluctant to make major commitments while the situation in the Middle East remains unclear.

Oil prices, which helped spark Monday's big rally, kept the market in check Tuesday.

The near-term price for light, sweet crude rose 97 cents to $27.88 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. A 54-point fall in oil prices on Monday had helped boost stock prices.

The most actively traded issue on the NYSE was General Motors, up 14 to 40 1/2 after the company was chosen, as expected, as a strike target by the United Auto Workers.

Among other blue chip issues, AT&T fell 1 to 32 1/2 and Philip Morris

Former Army official to speak about Gulf

TWIN FALLS - Former Secretary of the Army, Roy Callaway will be in Twin Falls Thursday to speak to an Idaho Senate and House campaign breakfast at the Weston Plaza, 1350 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Callaway, who was Secretary of the Army under President Ford, will talk about the current Middle East situation. Tickets for the fund-raising event are $25 per person. The breakfast begins at 7:30 a.m.

Jerome County assessor leaving for Cactus Pete's

JEROME - John Wurst, Jerome County assessor since 1987, has resigned his position effective Aug. 31.

Wurst said he had several offers and had been selected for a job in the assessor's office in Portland when Cactus Pete's in Jackpot offered him a management position, which he accepted.

"It's a chance I can't afford to pass up especially since my wife, Penny, has been working in the marketing department at Cactus Pete's for three months," Wurst said.

The Jerome County Republican Central Committee will present three names to the County Commissioners, who will select one of the nominees to assume the assessor's responsibilities until January, when a newly-elected assessor will take office, according to Veronica Lierman, county commissioner.

Chad Wright, chairman of the Republican committee said the committee will meet Thursday, but at this point he did not know what they would suggest for the position.

Already on the November ballot for the position are Republican Greg Heinrich and Margaret Steinmetz, running as an independent.

Closure Tuesday among fall changes at Twin Falls pool

TWIN FALLS - With school and fall weather approaching, the city has adjusted general swimming hours at the city pool as follows:

- Wednesday: 1 to 6 p.m.
- Thursday and Friday: 3:30 to 6 p.m.
- Saturday through Monday: 1 to 6 p.m.

The pool will close Tuesday for the rest of the year.

Choosing school architect on tap for Twin Falls board

TWIN FALLS - In preparation for a bond issue election, the School Board will select a financial advisor and an architect at 7 tonight at the district offices, 201 Main Ave. W.

The Twin Falls School Board adopted a resolution earlier in the month calling for a $9 million bond issue election sometime in November.

The district hopes to expand the high school and build a new middle school.

New Wendell PTA to talk about need for high school

WENDELL - The main goal of this year's Parent-Teacher Association in Wendell will be to educate the public on the need for a new high school, member Tony Rost said.

The group will hold its first meeting at the high school library on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Since the Wendell School District is considering a bond issue for a new high school to relieve crowded conditions, concerned citizens are needed to help with publicity of the project, Rost said.

"Wendell could have a bond issue as soon as September (of 1991)," he said. "We need to educate the community that we have a need, and develop a campaign to reach that goal."

Rost, who has been working this summer on a committee to compile information for the bond issue, said everyone in the district who is interested is invited to Thursday's meeting.

Filer school contract talks head to mediation

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

FILER - The Filer School District has called on an independent mediator after teacher contract negotiations stalled, the district's superintendent says.

"The teachers determined that we weren't getting anywhere and asked for a third party to intercede," said Superintendent James Fisher.

Kurdie, a federal wage and labor relations mediator from Ogden, Utah, will act as a mediator when negotiations resume on Sept. 12, Fisher said.

However, Jim Krunich, Filer Education Association president, said he has recently had a positive conversation with private negotiator Jerry Gates of the Seattle area and the two sides may reconvene before Kurdie arrives.

Kurdie will meet with the district negotiators in one room and then talk with teacher negotiators in another to try to iron out their differences, Fisher said.

"He doesn't have any power to enforce this will over anybody," he said.

Kurdie's fees are paid by the federal government, he said.

Fisher said it is not unusual for teachers to begin class before a contract is signed. The Filer School District began classes Thursday.

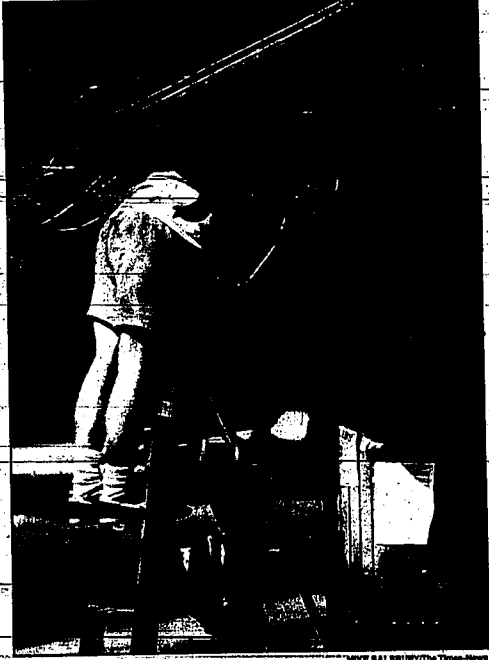

"It isn't that they disagreed over anything in particular except that they couldn't get along," Fisher said of the negotiations.

Krunich said one of the issues was that the district offered 5 percent teacher raises and the teachers requested 12 percent.

But Krunich said teachers and administration were not able to agree on any issue, many of which were not money related.

Teachers wanted to lower student-teacher ratios and create a link with the College of Southern Idaho, where some students could take accelerated classes.

Local man found beaten; police report lead in case

By Anita Dennis

TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls man who was beaten in the head was in critical condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Tuesday afternoon, a nursing supervisor said.

Robert C. Rytting, 23, 536 Second Ave. W., was found lying face down in a parking lot on 400-block Rusten Street on Monday morning and was taken to the hospital, according to a police report. He was unconscious and bloody, and the left side of his face was severely bruised.

"We have an idea what happened and I think we can prove it with time," said Twin Falls police detective Lt. Jim Kistler.

No charges had been filed in Twin Falls County Tuesday in connection with the assault.

Which Rytting was found Monday morning, officers spoke with witnesses who had been at his house and at a nearby house Sunday night.

Rytting went to his house at 11 p.m. Sunday, the police report says. When he departed, two other people also left. One person returned shortly and told the others in the house that Rytting had been hit with a steel pipe, the report says.

The police were called to Rytting's home Sunday night on a report of a disturbance, Kistler said. At that time, officers found blood on the premises but no victim.

Banks credit Gem economy for scarcity of bad loans

By The Times-News
and The Associated Press

BOISE - The good news about bad loans carried by Magic Valley and Idaho banks is that they are relatively rare.

In fact, the state's 22 banks had the second-lowest percentage of poor loans in the nation during the first quarter of this year, a national financial-information service reported Monday.

The low percentage of bad loans and an accompanying 8 percent overall rise in profits by Idaho banks is a reflection of the state's rebound from the economic doldrums of the early and mid-1980s, bankers said.

Only 1 percent of Idaho-based banks' total loans, or $52.4 million, were non-performing loans, said Alex Shubunoff & Co. of Austin, Texas. The D.L. Evans Bank of Burley reported a 65 percent rate and Farmers National Bank of Buhl reported a 95 percent rate.

The Idaho State Bank of Glenns Ferry, under new ownership, reported a 2.78 percent rate. A non-performing loan is one that is more than 90 days overdue or one on which the interest is not being paid.

That compares with an average of 3.11 percent for all the nation's 4,125 banks for the three months that ended March 31.

Interior calls for closer look at dam projects

By N.S. Norkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The federal commission that licenses hydroelectric projects should take a broader look at proposed projects on the Snake River, says the Department of the Interior.

Seven years past the deadline, the Interior Department has called on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for a new, cumulative assessment of the effects of two private hydroelectric projects on the middle reach of the Snake.

The department has sought "late-interpreter" status on behalf of the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on proposals at Star Falls and Auger Falls.

The agencies contend that FERC's environmental impact assessment should include the Snake River from American Falls to Swan Falls. The current environmental impact statement covers only the Star Falls area.

Embattled Forest Service officer says plans are to keep him in area for now

By The Times-News
and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - The U.S. Forest Service will keep Twin Falls District Ranger Donald Oman in place for now, Oman reported Tuesday.

"I've been told there are no immediate plans to move me. We want to get back into a cooperative management approach and we've made contacts with the permittees," Oman said.

The reported threat against Oman and an agreement to transfer him stemmed from disagreements with local ranchers over range management issues in the Twin Falls Ranger District.

Oman contended some ranchers of the Wild Rose Grazing Association near Oakley had violated their federal grazing permits in the South Hills and had made threats against him and his office.

A New York Times story quoted southern Idaho rancher Winslow Whiteley as stating he and other ranchers would cut Oman's throat if they caught him alone. Whiteley has not been available for comment since the story broke Aug. 19 and could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Oman

Even if Whiteley meant what he said, the cattle industry does not condone such actions, the Idaho Cattle Association said.

Racine said the vast majority of Idaho's ranchers loggers and miners know that sharing public lands is a "must" and work with Fish and Game and other departments.

The 19th century-style range war outbreak by a very small minority of grazers abusing the Sawtooth National Forest damages Idaho and its citizens. The New York Times report has spread across the country, creating the impression that Idaho is incapable of cooperatively managing the public lands in our state," Racine said.

"We, the Fish and Game commissioners of Idaho, have a track record of working together with the many users of public land for the benefit of all concerned," the Poentello commissioner said.

Spokenen objected to an inspection by Oman and other federal officers, including two U.S. Forest Service law officers, at a cattle weigh-in last fall in the South Hills. The ICA asked for a full investigation of the incident and to have Oman transferred. But it dropped the effort when the Forest Service assured the association the agency would handle the issue internally.

Oman said the Forest Service did respond to pressure and agreed to move him before he filed a federal "whistle-blower" complaint against the agency.

"An investigation of his complaint released Friday to Oman turned out to be a compromise, he said. It determined the Forest Service would handle the issue internally."

'Tis the season for political picnics, party bashing

A swarm of Twin Falls County Republicans and Democrats descended upon Rock Creek Park last week - not together, though that might have been more fun.

Forget about tadpole hunts and three-legged races. The favorite sport at a political picnic is bashing the other party and just about everybody else.

The Republicans scored more points if only because the GOP faithful turned out in force Thursday. The crowd included candidates for Congress, governor, state Legislature and County Commission. On Saturday night, the Democrats drew more ants than people.

The bashing at both picnics started after dinner.

At the GOP event, gubernatorial candidate Roger Fairchild accused Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus of asking for an annual tax increase and declared it time to retire Hargten promised he'd sing the ode to Robbins the morning after the election.

What was Robbins' campaign manager doing at a recent press conference called by Republican congressional candidate Sean McDevitt?

"I was there tapping," Sherry Kleinschmidt said Tuesday.

It is a campaign manager's responsibility to be aware of what is going on in other campaigns, she added.

For a brief time in 1985, Robbins was himself a candidate for the 2nd District seat. Could he be thinking of making a second bid in 1992 - this time as a Democrat?

Kleinschmidt was noncommittal.

"Any conclusion could be drawn," she said.

For two guys who insist they are too nice to sling mud, the race between McDevitt and Idaho's 2nd District Rep. Richard Stallings is less than friendly.

Earlier this month McDevitt insulted House Speaker Tom Foley - Stallings' friend - and mentor - then last week, Stallings called his young opponent "inattentive," "jobless" and "financially irresponsible."

Jerome County assessor leaving for Cactus Pete's

JEROME — John Wurst, Jerome County assessor since 1987, has resigned his position effective Aug. 31.

Wurst said he had several offers and had been selected for a job in the assessors' office in Portland when Cactus Pete's in Jackpot offered him a management position, which he accepted.

"It's a chance I can't afford to pass up especially since my wife, Penny, has been working in the marketing department at Cactus Pete's for three months," Wurst said.

The Jerome County Republican Central Committee will present three names to the County Commissioners, who will select one of the nominees to assume the assessor's responsibilities until January, when a newly-elected assessor will take office, according to Veronica Lierman, county commissioner.

Chad Wright, chairman of the Republican committee said the committee will meet Thursday, but at this point he did not know who they would suggest for the position.

Already on the November ballot for the position are Republican Greg Heinrich and Margaret Steinmetz, running as an independent.

The district hopes to expand the high school and build a new middle school.

New Wendell PTA to talk about need for high school

WENDELL — The main goal of this year's Parent-Teacher Association in Wendell will be to educate the public on the need for a new high school, member Tony Rost said.

The group will hold its first meeting at the high school library on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Since the Wendell School District is considering a bond issue for a new high school to relieve crowded conditions, concerned citizens are needed to help with publicity of the project, Rost said:

"Wendell could have a bond issue as soon as September (of 1991)," he said. "We need to educate the community that we have a need, and develop a campaign to reach that goal."

Rost, who has been working this summer on a committee to compile information for the bond issue, said everyone in the district who is interested is invited to Thursday's meeting.

Heyburn budget has funds for fire station

By Lynda Boddy
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — The City Council Wednesday approved a $6.5 million budget for the upcoming year. During the regular session, the council approved an appropriation of $6,524,616. A budget hearing was held prior to the council meeting but no one spoke in opposition to the budget.

The city's plan expenditures for law, emergency, fire and protection, transportation, purchasing energy and to cover sewer and water expenses, Mayor Harold Huret said at a previous council meeting.

The budget includes $630,683 in contingency money to be used for emergencies. Huret said. This money is divided between the three broad categories: general, electric and sewer and water. Also included in the year's expenditures is $75,000 for a new fire station.

Revenues will come from taxes: licenses, fines, the sale of electricity and water and other services. Also expected is a $1 million sewer loan or grant.

After discussion at a prior meeting, the council added five additional years to the existing contract with the garbage disposal company of Parks and Sons. The company asked for the addition to cover costs associated with purchasing new garbage cans for residents.

The company presently has two years left on its current contract with the city.

The blue auto garbage carts are available upon a homeowner's request, said City Clerk, Ina Despain. The carts are on wheels and will be picked up and dumped by specially equipped garbage trucks.

Orders may be placed by phoning city offices, she said. There is an additional $3.50 per month charge for the cans. Fifteen cans have been installed so far, Despain said.

Forsgren Associates presented the council with a pre-design proposal for a new $11 million waste water treatment plant.

The plant, to be constructed at the site of the existing plant, is expected to be completed next summer.

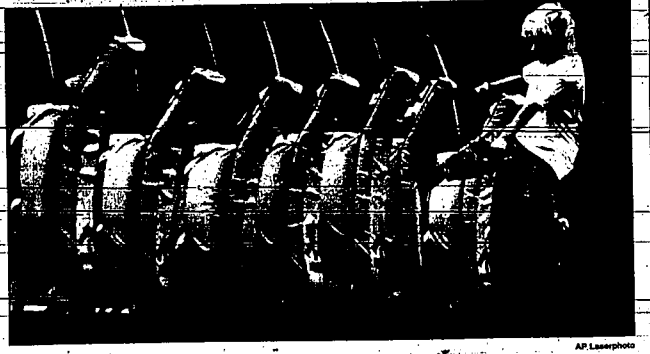

The project consists of a pre-treatment and screening plant and oxidation ditches with an intra-channel clarifier. The ditches are used to remove solids with bacteria. The clarifier then removes the solids from the water.

The city dumps up to 600,000 gallons per day of water into the Snake River, said Dee Hodge, sewer plant superintendent. The present system violates Environmental Protection Agency requirements, Hodge said.

New monitoring requirements for suspended solids and chlorine in the water have forced the city to invest in the new system, he said.

Construction is expected to begin in November and should take six months to complete. The site is located at 15th and R Streets, the site of the present waste water treatment facility.

"We've got to get at this cumulative impact," said Butch Peugh, environmental coordinator with the Idaho office of the BLM. "We're piecemealing this river to death."

The BLM is concerned about cultural and recreational resources, wetlands and waterfowl habitat and the impact of dams and proposed dams on the river, Peugh said.

And in order to be eligible to appeal any decision FERC might make, the agencies have to be registered as interveners.

B&C Energy Inc. has proposed a 36-megawatt project at Star Falls near Caldwell north of Murtaugh, and Cogeneration Inc. has proposed a 44-megawatt project at Auger Falls near Twin Falls.

Fish and Wildlife also expressed concerns about Idaho Power Co.'s proposal for a 17-megawatt project at Kanaka Rapids.

"We feel there is significant potential for cumulative impacts to fish and wildlife and their habitats on the Snake River," said a letter from the agency's Boise field office.

The deadline for intervening passed in 1983 for the Auger Falls project and in 1982 for the Star Falls project.

Prostitution nets sentence of probation

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — After apologizing to a magistrate judge for her actions, a 29-year-old woman was sentenced to one year probation on misdemeanor charges of prostitution, possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of a concealed weapon without a permit.

Terms of Maria Rebecca Davis' probation include attending a court-approved drug and alcohol education school, acquiring a general equivalency diploma and receiving job counseling. Violations would mean Davis faces 53 days in jail and a $200 fine.

"Either you get your act together or you go to jail," 5th District Magistrate Judge Barry Wood said as he handed down the sentence.

Davis, who was arrested early July 19 after she offered a Bliss man sex for money outside a Shoshone bar. In exchange for pleading guilty to the three misdemeanors, Lincoln County Prosecutor Lavon Loynd dropped three felonies against Davis: two counts attempted armed robbery and one count burglary.

"Those charges alleged that Davis fired her .22-caliber Magnum revolver as she tried to take the man's money, car keys and Cadillac.

Wood said he was particularly concerned that a gun was fired during the incident. "Suffice it to say that what happened was completely stupid," Wood said.

"I'm sorry for what I did," Davis said earlier in the hearing.

He was born Sept. 20, 1906, in Ritzville, Wash., the son of Peter and Kathryn Knapp Koch. As a small child he moved with his family to a farm in Sugar City and later moved to the Paul area. He attended schools in Kimbama and married Esther Bill in February 1929 in Rupert. He was employed in farming in Paul and was employed by the Amalgamated Sugar Co.

Koch was a member of the Burley Congregational Church and was the husband of his wife Paul; two daughters, Carol Smith of Burley and Maurine Parsons of Kimberly; three brothers, Fred Koch of Kingmon, Ariz., Paul Koch of Caldwell and Donald Koch of Spokane, Wash.; three sisters, Rachel Schaffer of Paul, Emma Kuhl of Spokane and Pauline Neithorn of Rupert; five grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, four brothers and one sister.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Friday at the Hansen Memorial Chapel, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, with the Rev. Ben Orchard officiating. Burial will be at the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call Thursday afternoon and evening and one hour before the funeral at the mortuary.

Banks

"All of southern Idaho has been pretty strong economically, and most of the companies and businesses in our area have received some benefits from that economic growth," First Security Bank Vice President Curtis H. Eaton said.

The only state with a lower percentage of bad loans was Hawaii, at 0.73 percent, Sheshunoff said. Leading the nation in percentage of non-performing loans were Connecticut and Arizona, with 6.65 percent and 6.63 percent, respectively.

Idaho's banks reported total profits of $22.8 million for the first quarter of this year, a 7.7 percent increase from net income reported for the same period in 1989, Sheshunoff said.

First-quarter profits ranged from one-third of $8.6 million for West One Bank, the state's largest, to a $398,000 loss by Treasure Valley Bank.

D.L. Evans Bank made $65,000 during the period, for an average return on assets of .61 percent. Farmers National extracted a return of 1.66 percent on a $254,000 profit.

But Idaho State Bank lost $296,000 during the first quarter, for a -2.95 percent return.

The negative results were due to the bank's decision to write off loans, President Jim Kevan said, and the bank has been in the black since then.

The bank, with the help of new capital pumped into the bank by new owner Win Lauder of Sun Valley, has diversified its loan portfolio to include more than just agriculture, Kevan said.

"We continue to have support of old customers, and each month we're getting new customers," he said.

Nationally, banks' first-quarter profits fell from $7.3 billion a year ago to $5.8 billion for the first three months of 1990.

The return on average assets for Idaho's banks averaged 1.13 percent, compared with a weaker 0.71 percent national average.

Return on average assets is an indicator of how well a bank is managing its assets.

The rates for Idaho banks ranged from a high of 2.35 percent for Key Bank of Idaho to Idaho State Bank's -2.65 percent.

A rate of 1-percent or higher is considered good performance.

Key Bank President Edmund Keane said the Sheshunoff report overstates his institution's return on average assets because of regulatory accounting procedures. "We're plugging along at a very solid 1.55, 1.50 percent," he said.

Now both are digging in their heels on the scheduling of a debate to be broadcast on Idaho public television.

The Stallings campaign recently issued a press release announcing that the congressman has accepted an invitation to debate Oct. 7.

But the McDevitt camp insists the original invitation extended by the League of Women Voters and the Idaho Press Club was for Oct. 22, and that's the date they accepted.

"We don't want to debate on a Sunday at the beginning of the month," McDevitt said during a visit to Twin Falls Thursday.

McDevitt wants to debate on a weekday and later in the month — when voters are closer to deciding who to favor at the polls.

"Then we may not have one," an annoyed Stallings said Friday.

est Service had agreed to transfer him; but the action was not politically motivated, he said. The agreement was not considered inappropriate, since the catlemen had not followed through on their call for his ouster, Oman said.

"The report came out giving a lot of praise to things we're doing on the district," Oman said. "Some people take exceptions to the methods I've used that, in my mind, were necessary."

New Forest Service guidelines, known as "Change on the Range," require better enforcement of grazing and other public land use regulations, Oman said. The new guidelines were instituted as a result of public comment on public land conditions, he said.

Grazing now is much more tightly controlled than it was years ago when the policy was basically "open gates and let the cattle drift with the weather," he said.

Bus service gets no assurance as council wrestles with budget

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The City Council wanted public comment on the upcoming budget at a hearing Tuesday night but the only private citizen who came to the meeting asked for money.

Trans IV Manager Charlie Chambers for the second time asked the council for $18,000 to help make up for lost federal funds this year. For the second time the council lent a sympathetic ear but did not promise any money. "It is extremely difficult to distribute money for a new service when we have a hard time maintaining current services," Councilman Gale Kleinkopf said.

Chambers' request amounted to asking the city to provide a new service, Kleinkopf said.

Chambers said he did not know what services the bus line would curtail if it does not receive city help. The handicapped and elderly would remain priorities in the service, he said.

Councilman Jim Vickers suggested a survey the city will send soon to residents include the question of whether Trans IV should be funded with city dollars. It would be hard to justify spending the money if citizens do not view it as a priority, Vickers said.

Chambers' request followed City Manager Tom Courtney's comments to the council that this year's budget is strained by limited revenues and increasing demands for services.

Department requests exceeded revenues by $600,000, Courtney said.

The answer is a local option sales tax, Courtney said. A 1 cent local tax could put more than $4 million into city coffers and allow the city to reduce property taxes 20 percent. That would leave $2 million to put toward city services, he said.

Vickers also advised the council to "walk softly" regarding the budget. The budget did not address problems such as solid waste and water quality and the city might have to allocate money toward those areas, he said.

"We should walk softly, especially concerning hiring for long-term positions," Vickers said.

The city's proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year totals $15.9 million, a 7.3 percent increase from last year.

Deadly Wasatch fire caused by man, investigators say

MIDWAY, Utah (AP) — Investigators on Tuesday said a 2,600-acre Wasatch Mountain Fire, which killed two firefighters and destroyed 19 homes, was man-caused.

Firefighters expected to bring the blaze, burning 30 miles east of Salt Lake City in the mountains near this community of 1,200, under full containment by 11 p.m. MDT Tuesday.

John Shive, incident commander of the Interagency Fire Team coordinating efforts to snuff the blaze, projected control by 6 p.m. Wednesday.

The fire, propelled by 60 mph winds, exploded in tinder-dry oak brush and pine trees Sunday afternoon. Shive said an ember from a smaller blaze — ignited by a campfire — apparently drifted over firelines and started the deadly inferno.

Authorities said they had not determined who started the blaze, which caused millions of dollars in damage, destroyed 19 homes and cabins and forced evacuation of more than 300 others.

Two Wasatch County firefighters, Sheriff's Deputy Blake Wright, 39, and county road crew worker Ralph Broadbent, 65, died Sunday night when apparently overcome by smoke as they were building a fire break on a ridge.

Shive said investigators found both men were properly equipped and that a one-man fire shelter had been deployed, but was found empty.

Both men were found near the bulldozer they had been operating.

Effectiveness of pond for INEL questioned

By N.S. Nolkentz
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — During a hearing earlier this year, local podiatrist Peter Rickards proved the value of public comment in the permit process.

Rickards pointed out an error in calculations in a federal Energy Department application to construct a disposal pond for waste water contaminated by radioactivity.

"That error led to the department modifying its permit application, doubling the amount of radioactive material it would be allowed to release into the atmosphere annually from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory pond.

The Energy Department had applied for a permit to release about .156 curies of radioactivity into the air annually. But that figure was based on average releases over a seven-year period.

Government figures show that portions of radioactive material that would evaporate varies from 80 to more than 300 curies per year over a seven-year cycle.

The department then requested an amended permit that would allow it to evaporate slightly more than 324 curies per year. Curies is a measure of radioactivity.

The department has proposed building the evaporation pond at INEL's Test Reactor Area to replace a percolation pond used to dispose of contaminated water.

The water and the radioactivity in the percolation pond soak into the ground and part of it eventually reaches the Snake River Plain Aquifer. Instead, in the evaporation pond, part of the radioactive material — primarily tritium — would evaporate.

But the federal Energy Department sought to complete an environmental assessment of the proposed disposal pond before it is issued a permit to build it, Rickards said at a public meeting Tuesday.

He said he would like to know, scientifically, if it is better to let radioactivity evaporate into the air or percolate into the ground.

"Maybe it's better to let it decay in the ground," he said. Tritium, a radioactive form of hydrogen, loses half its radioactivity in 12.5 years.

Rickards also criticized the department for not including two forms of radioactive iodine with the figures of radioactive materials that would evaporate.

The department justified the omission by citing the short half-lives of the iodine, Rickards said. Both forms of iodine lose half their radioactivity with seven hours.

Coal-fired plants emit 20 curies per year of mostly uranium, and new regulations would reduce that to 2 curies per year, yet the department proposes to disperse 23 curies of iodine, Rickards said.

The state should hold off issuing the permit until these and other questions are answered, he said.

He also cited the recent release of health records of workers at federal nuclear weapons plants, who have been exposed to low levels of radiation over long periods. Those records may reveal a lot about the effects of chronic exposure to low levels of radiation, he said.

The state, however, has little legal control over the release of radioactivity. If the department invokes federal sovereign immunity there may be little Idaho can do to reduce the amount of radiation released from INEL, Rickards said.

"If the standards are too high, Idaho will have no way to control the evaporation ponds," he said.

The Energy Department, however, must obtain an air pollution permit for the ponds because radiation is considered a hazardous pollutant under air quality regulations, said Dan Pitman, engineer with the state Air Quality Bureau.

Jones may take fish plan ruling to higher court

BOISE (AP) — The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals approved this week of a management plan for Columbia River steelhead and salmon counties to generally agree among the major parties involved without recognizing the real dangers to the wild fish runs, Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones contends.

And Jones said on Tuesday that he will make a decision later this week on whether to press Idaho's objections to the long-range management plan before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"My feeling is they looked and saw all of the parties out there except Idaho and the Sho-Bans agreeing and said, 'Let's go ahead and approve the plan,'" Jones said.

But, he added, "Just because everybody seems to be happy doesn't mean the conservation of the fish has been addressed."

Akridge has cash for baseball expansion

WASHINGTON — Developer John Akridge said Tuesday he had lined up the estimated $100 million needed for a National League expansion franchise, giving the Washington area two groups prepared to bid for a new team.

Akridge told the District of Columbia Baseball Commission he had enough commitments from investors to meet the league's $95 million expansion fee and other start-up costs.

The Washington developer leads a group that wants to return baseball to Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium. The expansion Washington Senators left the stadium after the 1971 season to become the Texas Rangers.

A Northern Virginia group led by Mark Tracz, owner of the Class A Carolina League's Prince William Cannons, said last week it had commitments for $125 million to $150 million and also would apply by the Aug. 31 deadline.

The Virginia group is house the team in the Virginia suburbs, farther away from the first school to negotiate its own television contract with a major network, is taking its act to European television.

Army football coach Young to retire at end of season

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Jim Young, Army football coach for the past seven years, said today he will retire after this season because of personal reasons.

Young, 55, will be replaced next year by Bob Sutton, 39, the associate head coach and defensive coordinator. Sutton, who came to Army in 1983, the same year as Young, never has been a head coach.

Young, who has resurrected the Army football program, has compiled a record of 45-34-1. Overall, including stints at Purdue and Arizona, his record is 114-66-2.

After this season, Young will remain at West Point as a member of the Performance Enhancement Program staff.

Since 1984, when Young installed the wishbone offense, the Cadets have ranked no lower than fifth in rushing offense in the nation. In the first year of the wishbone, they were No. 1 in rushing.

Olson has Vikings looking at playoffs again

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

HAZELTON — Valley lineman Traves Olson doesn't crave the spotlight. He shies away from interviews and wishes his team wasn't a near-unanimous pick to repeat as Canyon Conference champion.

But when you are 6-foot, 4-inches tall, weigh 255 pounds and are built like a truck, it's hard not to get noticed.

Olson was surprised when he won all-state honors at both offensive and defensive tackle last season, but his opponents certainly weren't.

"He's a big kid with good, quick feet," said Gooding head coach Jeff Jeffries. Olson is one of the few Canyon Conference linemen with a legitimate chance to play college football, Jeffries said.

Olson led Valley defense that surrendered only three rushing touchdowns to conference opponents last year. On offense, he opened gaping holes for Viking running backs, who rushed for more than 300 yards per game.

"I like playing defense better," said Olson. "But offense is more important."

Defense allows Olson to be more creative, responding to the ball, rather than following a set offensive play.

"I just like good hits, stopping up the other team's plays," he said.

As good as he was last year, Olson and the rest of the Valley linemen should be better this season after a summer of weightlifting.

Olson spent five nights a week working out at the Body Shoppe in Twin Falls and doing footspeed drills.

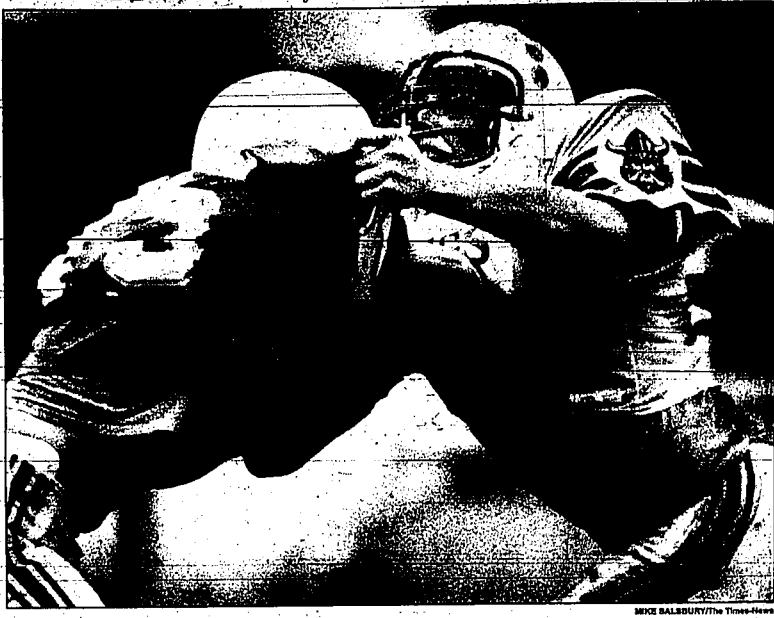

"He's very dedicated," said Viking coach Rod Malone. "Traves is very coachable and he has good footspeed." Malone said.

The Vikings are "very focused" this year and are aiming for a state championship after falling short last season, Olson said.

People are picking Valley to repeat as conference champs, but Olson said he would rather his team was an underdog.

"Being picked number one is by no means a good thing," he said. "You're the team that everyone wants to beat."

Valley manhandled all conference foes before falling to Grangeville, 20-18, in the first round of the state playoffs.

Valley's Traves Olson, right, won all-state honors at both offensive and defensive tackle last season.

"After that loss to Grangeville, I just want to get to state," Olson said. This year, the team will be more prepared to handle pressure situations, he said.

Olson helped the Valley basketball team to the state championship game last year, and that experience will make them more at ease if they make the playoffs again, he said.

"We're very focused. Nobody wants to let down," Olson said.

So focused, in fact, that Olson hasn't spent much time thinking about college yet.

"I hope to go somewhere and play (football)," he said. "Just anyone who'll take me." Of course, if his football talent isn't enough to get him into college, Olson's grades will be. He has a 3.9 grade point average and is interested in an engineering career.

Ninety percent of football is mental, he said. "You have to get ready for a game. If you're dinking around the day of the game, you can't play well."

Preseason favorite Valley aims to repeat last year

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

The Valley Vikings finally wrested the top spot in the Canyon Conference away from two-time champ Olenas Tuesday. The question in 1990 is whether or not the Vikings can stay on top.

Valley's third-year coach Rod Malone thinks they can, and most of his counterparts agree.

The Vikings lost only four starters from last year's squad, but they are likely to be challenged by a very even field, with Glenn's Ferry, Gooding, Kimberly and Declo leading the charge.

"Five teams have a legitimate shot," said Glenn's Ferry

Football Canyon Conference

coach Bill Brock. "An injury here, an injury there, and anything can happen."

Most coaches agree Valley is the preseason favorite, but Wendell, coach Keldi Mitzner picks Kimberly for the Canyon Conference playoff berth.

"I think it will be a much more balanced conference this year," Malone said. "I think Declo's probably the closest."

Valley's the number one pick, certainly," said Kimberly coach Gordon Hogan. "But the conference overall is considerably better balanced." Hogan also picks Declo as the leading challenger.

"Valley still has to get the nod ... but they aren't going to surprise anyone like they did last year," Gooding coach Jeff Jeffries said. "They really lost some key players."

Quarterback David Black and running back/indefender Bernard Mussman will be missed in Valley's lineup this year.

Brochu works to meet deadline to buy Expos

The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Montreal Expos president David Brochu said Tuesday he is optimistic that he can meet owner Charles Bronfman's Friday deadline to make an offer for the team.

Brochu has spent the summer trying to find local buyers for the Expos after Bronfman put the team up for sale in the spring.

Brochu met Sept. 1 as the deadline for Bronfman to make an offer. After that date, he said he'll consider offers from out-of-town buyers with no guarantee the team would remain in Montreal. He's believed to be seeking about $100 million.

Brochu remains optimistic that he'll have an offer ready by the end of the business day of Friday, Brochu said Tuesday.

"But we'll just have to wait and see."

In an effort to encourage local buyers, Brochu announced Monday that the club had signed a five-year, $23-million deal with Labatt's, a major beer company, for broadcast rights to Expos games.

On Tuesday, he announced a similar deal — a four-year agreement worth about $14 million — with Petro Canada. Brochu is continuing efforts to reach similar agreements with a soft-drink company and an auto firm.

"We are trying to show potential investors that the Expos are viable," Brochu said. "The agreements are of major commercial import in that they show investors that there is a future for major league baseball in Montreal."

A prospectus sent to potential investors details the Expos' cumulative losses of about $35 million since they joined the National League in 1969. But it projects profits of slightly more than $3.8 million in 1991, rising to about $5.7 million in 1993.

Brochu indicated at a press conference Tuesday that Canadian investors from outside the province of Quebec may be willing to put up part of the purchase price. He said Monday that he had "firm commitments" from some investors but did not say how much money those commitments represented.

Bronfman reportedly has received an offer of $135 million from a Miami-based group and investors in Buffalo are also reported to have made an offer of about $100 million.

Baseball commissioner Fay Vincent has said he's opposed to moving the team from Montreal.

Pack's holdout quarterback willing to play for minimum

The Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Don Majkowski's attorney said Tuesday the Green Bay Packers' holdout quarterback would be willing to play for the NFL minimum of $80,000 this season if he can become an unrestricted free agent in 1991.

Bob Woolf, Majkowski's Boston-based agent, said contract talks with the Packers were at an absolute impasse.

Woolf said he and agent Randy Vataha talked with Majkowski and the quarterback said he would be willing to play for the minimum — if the Packers continued to negotiate or gave him a chance at unrestricted free agency next February.

Woolf said he would make the proposal to Packers negotiator Tom Bratz on Wednesday.

"What he (Majkowski) would like to do is have us propose that he play for the minimum salary and he could take the chance of having to prove himself again, if they could be negotiating during the year," Woolf said.

"He wants to stay in Green Bay. But at the end of the year, if he's still taking that risk, he wants to be an unrestricted free agent. Then we will know what the fair market value is."

Majkowski is currently a restricted free agent, meaning any team that signs him would have to compensate the Packers with first-round draft choices. Majkowski is among several players who have filed suit against the NFL challenging the current restrictions on free agency.

Earlier in the day, Bratz said there was nothing imminent in the negotiations.

The Packers are offering $1.25 million per season and Majkowski has been seeking in the neighborhood of $1.8 million, down from a request of $2.8 million per season. Majkowski made about $400,000 last season, his third with the Packers.

The Packers say they want Majkowski to have one more big season before he is paid on a par with some of the league's other top quarterbacks.

Woolf said Majkowski already proved he is one of the NFL's best quarterbacks by making the Pro Bowl last season after leading the Packers to a 10-6 record.

The Packers, convinced Majkowski won't be ready for the start of the season, Monday named Anthony Dilweg as their starter for the Sept. 9 season-opener against the Los Angeles Rams.

Majkowski's agents and the Packers were talking about a one or two-year contract, but Woolf said Tuesday the Packers are now interested in a multiyear deal again. Bratz said the sides were still bantering about contract length.

Kaliningrad Kid dismantles top-seeded Edberg at Open

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stefan Edberg, a victim of tennis burnout after a summer fling in the hot spot, succumbed to his U.S. Open Jimmy and the rocketing returns of a young Soviet star.

Alexander Volkov, the Kaliningrad Kid, wielded a bright red racket under a brilliant sun and implacably took apart a surprising slow Edberg, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2, Tuesday in the first opening-round defeat of a top-seeded man here since 1973.

John McEnroe, who flamed out on tennis several years ago and has been struggling to come back ever since, survived pressure and tamed his temper to beat Javier Sanech 7-6 (10-8), 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 in two hours, 42 minutes of high drama on the stadium court.

McEnroe's bizarre countenance — his eyes glowing through a mask of white sun-cream beneath a broad pink bandana — was outdone only by the strange ensemble of neon lime, black and white worn by the Argentine, a 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 winner in the evening Grand Slam.

Agassi, who completed his rakish look with a dangling earring, scraggly beard and white beads around long, black and blond hair, put on a show of power tennis in one of his best efforts since reaching the French final.

about burnout, and fashionably dressed by her, multi-million-dollar sponsors, saved a set-point in the first set and won her Open debut as a pro, 7-5, 7-5, against a very tough 15-year-old, Andre Huber.

Capriati, astonishingly cool and strong for her age, won the first two games at love and took a 4-0 lead before Huber stormed back to win the next five games. But Capriati dug in and Huber yielded, losing a set-point in the 10th game and double-faulting on set point in the 12th.

Capriati, who won the juniors here last year, had similar problems holding a lead in the second set. She jumped ahead 5-2, powering deep groundstrokes against the moon-balls of Huber, but let the lead slip away as Huber tied it 5-3 with a crafty mixture of shots. Again finding trouble, Capriati bore down, laid serve, then broke Huber with another hard forehand that Huber lunged at but could only tap backhand into the net.

Ivan Lendl, aiming to regain the top ranking that Edberg took away Aug. 13, five weeks after winning Wimbledon, easily won his first-round match and said he wasn't totally surprised by Edberg's defeat.

"Of course it's an upset, but when you put about it deeply you can see how it happened," the third-seeded Lendl said after beating Martin Ladavac, 7-5, 6-2, 6-2.

Wildcats topple 1st place Hornets in Canyon Conference opener

The Times-News

FILER — For the first time in at least three years, the Declo Hornets weren't on top of the Canyon Conference volleyball season.

Each year's second-place Filer Wildcats dethroned the Hornets 5-15, 15-11, 16-14 in the league opener.

Heather Garner came off the bench to serve seven winning points in the decision third game, helping the Wildcats overcome a 12-7 deficit. Declo's another block was a 11-12 lead before Chatti Gardner, middle play, helped Filer score the final four points.

Filer also won the preliminary 15-4, 15-1.

Richfield 15, 11, 15 Hansen 9, 15, 9

RICHFIELD — Senior Melinda Ward, the only senior on the squad, provided the leadership and in fact of the play in helping the Richfield Flyers down the Hansen Huskies 15-9, 11-15, 15-9 Tuesday night.

Richfield and Hansen jayvees defeated Gooding State in an earlier pair of preliminaries.

Valley 15, 15 Kimberly 4, 7

HAZELTON — The serving of Jenny Skeen helped the Valley Vikings down arch-rival Kimberly 15-7, 15-7 Tuesday night.

Valley, which travels to Wendell, Thursday, lost the preliminary 15-8, 15-17, 9-15.

Dietrich 8, 17, 15 Camas County 15, 9

FAIRFIELD — Debbie Southwick contributed some major kills coming to the wire Tuesday night to allow defending Northside Conference champion to down Camas County 8-15, 17-15, 15-9.

Shoshone 15, 15 Community School 2, 3

KETCHUM — The Shoshone Indians bowed into the Northside Conference volleyball conference with a 15-2, 15-3 decision over Ketchum/Valley Community Clubhouse Tuesday night.

Christina Sandy and Stormi King each had long serving stints

After winning the first game, the Musers had a chance to complete the upset when they took a 15-14 lead in the second game and had the serve. But Dietrich fought that off and then rallied for the win.

Camas County took the jayvee match 15-0, 15-11.

to point Shoshone to the win. The Indians added a 15-4, 15-3 preliminary win.

G. Ferry 15, 9, 15 Gooding 13, 15, 11

GLENN'S FERRY — The Glenns Ferry Pilots seemed to take control of the net in the third game Tuesday to pull out a 15-13, 9-15, 15-11 Canyon Conference win over the Gooding Senators.

New York breaks past Padres

NEW YORK (AP) — David Cone pitched a five-hitter and set up New York's offense by drawing a 14-pitch walk Tuesday night, leading the Mets past the San Diego Padres 4-0.

Cone (10-7), second-in-the-National League with 179 strikeouts, fanned just five. But he walked only one in his second shutout of the season and fourth complete game in 23 starts as the Mets got within two games of first-place Pittsburgh in the East Division.

Braves 9, Pirates 0
ATLANTA (AP) — Charlie Leibrandt pitched a five-hitter for seven innings and Greg Olson drove in four runs with a double and a homer, carrying Atlanta over Pittsburgh.

Leibrandt (6-8), who lost five of his previous six decisions, did not walk a batter as he dealt handed the Pirates their fourth consecutive loss.

Brewers tackle Blue Jays, 6-2

TORONTO (AP) — Jaime Navarro scattered eight hits in pitching his second straight complete game and Dave Parker had three hits, including two homers and three RBIs, as the Milwaukee Brewers handed the Toronto Blue Jays their fifth straight loss Tuesday night.

B.J. Surhoff broke open a tight game with a two-run double in the sixth inning.

After Kelly Gruber singled in the fourth inning, Navarro (5-5), retired 10 straight batters before John Olerud doubled with one out in the seventh. Pat Borders followed with a bloop single that scored Olerud and cut the Brewers' lead to 4-2.

Yankees 11, Orioles 3
BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore-killer Jesse Barfield and Randy Velarde homered to, back Mike Witt's pitching.

Barfield, who was 4-for-4, singled home the tying run in the second inning and hit a tie-breaking two-run homer in the fourth. It was the 20th of the season for Barfield, who has homered in three straight games and has hit five home runs in 26 at-bats.

Reds 2, Cardinals 1
CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati continued its dominance of St. Louis as Jose Rijo pitched five innings and drove in the go-ahead run with a bunt single.

The first-place Reds, 9-2, against St. Louis this season, have outscored the Cardinals 41-21.

Dodgers 5, Phillies 1
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kirk Gibson's eighth-inning single broke a tie and Hubie Brooks knocked in three runs for Los Angeles against Philadelphia.

With the score tied 1-1, Jose O. Ferman led off the eighth with a walk off Jose DeJesus (4-5). O'Ferman advanced to third on a sacrifice and a groundout before Gibson hit the first pitch into center field for the tie.

Expos 5, Giants 2

MONTREAL (AP) — Rookie Mark Gardner struck out 11 batters and scattered three hits in six innings and Spike Owen had three hits and two RBIs, leading Montreal Expos over San Francisco.

Gardner (7-7), who is 5-2 with a 1.47 earned run average at Olympic Stadium, allowed one run, walked two and matched his career-high in strikeouts set in an 11-0 complete-game victory over Houston on July 5.

Cubs 5, Astros 2
HOUSTON (AP) — Ryne Sandberg's fourth-inning home run made his first "second basemen" in history to have consecutive 30-homer seasons, and Greg Maddux pitched his seventh complete game in the Chicago's victory over Houston.

Sandberg, who also had a sacrifice fly, led off the fourth with a homer over the left field fence, the Cubs' first hit off Bill Guttentag (8-12), who lost his fourth straight game.

Magic Valley Speedway season nearing close

By Brad Bowlin Times-News writer.

TWIN FALLS — Races are heating up as the Magic Valley Speedway heads into its final two weeks of racing action.

The pro and pony stock divisions will wrap up Saturday night with championship trophies and prize money.

The pro division has been tight and only eight points separate the top two contenders. Leo Zimmerman of Mayfield with 760 points leads Eddie McKeown of Jerome with 752. Byron Downard of Bellevue is a distant third with 541 points.

Drivers earn 40 points for first-place in a heat race, 36 for second and 32 for third. Main event points are 50 for first, 45 for second and 40 for third.

Last week's race saw Downard surprise the front-runners in the main event after finishing third in the heat race. Downard was legal disqualified for having an illegal part on his car, said track owner Steve York.

Because the minor infraction had little impact on the race, drivers voted to allow Downard to keep the first-place trophy and prize money, but stripped him of

Meyer says George to start for Colts

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Ron Meyer made official Tuesday what the Indianapolis Colts had long expected: Jeff George will be their starting quarterback this season.

The newspaper report, meanwhile, said running back Eric Dickerson would report for a physical on Wednesday.

George, the first player taken in the draft last spring, will make his debut by starting Sunday night at New Orleans. And assuming he doesn't disgrace himself there, he'll start in Buffalo in the season opener on Sept. 9, Meyer said.

"Jeff has performed sufficiently to be considered the starting quarterback," Meyer said after Tuesday's practice.

But he left one loophole: "A starter is a starter only as long as he performs; a coach is a coach only as long as he performs. So the minute something happens to either, the other becomes a non-starter," Meyer said.

George, who signed a five-year contract that could reach $15 million, played the second half in the Colts' first two preseason games.

He started Monday night and passed for 153 yards and one touchdown before he was lifted for veteran Jack Trudeau in a 17-16 loss to Philadelphia.

In the three games, George has completed 55 percent of his pass-while, said running back Eric Dickerson would report for a physical on Wednesday.

He may not be best, but McEnroe's happy

NEW YORK (AP) — McEnroe succeeded now. An afterthought in the draw of the U.S. Open, trying to feel his way through the malaise that has gripped his game.

McEnroe

And yet, John McEnroe still lights the fires of the fans at the National Tennis Center.

They packed the stadium Tuesday to watch Johnny Mac fight a nearly three-hour battle for survival, barely beating Javier Sanchez. It was a straight-set victory but a close one.

The first two sets went to the breakers with McEnroe fighting off a set point in the first to win 7-6, 7-6. He finished in the third. It was hardly vintage McEnroe but it will have to do for now. Why he generally happy with his game? "I'm generally happy I'm still in the tournament," McEnroe said. "Hardly the kind of fire and brimstone you might have expected from tennis' overtime giant terrible. Times have changed though; and Johnny Mac is the first to admit it. "When you get older, your priorities change," he said. "You want to improve as a person. Winning at any cost isn't as important."

whole being based on whether he wins or loses a match. Can that be the same McEnroe who once routinely raged at line calls, who threw tennis tantrums at the slightest provocation? There were a few complaints in the Sanchez match, but it was almost as if Mac delivered them because they were expected. But he never was moved to rip off his towel, brand bandana and throw it to the court in anger.

Peete wants to renegotiate contract with Lions

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Now that the Detroit Lions have opened the vault for No. 1 draft pick Rodney Ware, second-year quarterback Rod Peete wants a pile of cash as well.

Peete, who is expected to open the season as Detroit's starter, reportedly will make a base salary of $90,000 this year. Ware, who will probably begin third on the depth chart, received a $2 million signing bonus after agreeing to a four-year contract worth $4.6 million.

According to the NFL Players Association, the average salary for a quarterback last season was $638,000.

So did Dixon, one of the NFL's top cornerbacks for a decade with Cleveland and signed by San Francisco as a Plan B free agent last March.

Peete said Tuesday that he wants to renegotiate the remaining season on his two-year contract, which makes him one of the NFL's lowest-paid quarterbacks — backups as well as starters.

Alzado, Dixon shelved from injury, replacement

The Associated Press
Lyle Alzado's dream of a return to the NFL at the age of 41 ended Tuesday. So did the career of Hartford Dixon, a decade veteran.

Denver, Cleveland and the Raiders tried a comeback this year after working in movies and television. But a pulled calf muscle and a knee injury that required arthroscopic surgery kept him from working out and the Raiders announced his retirement.

back job with the 49ers, but Wright had the advantage of having spent his decade with San Francisco and being a favorite of coach, George Seifert.

Canyon

top spot. "I was real impressed with their junior varsity team last year," he said.

A new playoff structure will pit the top three Canyon Conference teams against the top three teams in the Western Idaho Conference (Fruiland, Homedale, New Plymouth, Parma, McCall and Marsling).

The number one Canyon Conference team will play the number three Western Idaho team, the second place Canyon team will play the number three Western Idaho team, and the number three Canyon team will play the number one Western Idaho team.

The Canyon Conference had only one playoff berth last year, which went to Valley, 20-18 losers to Grangeville in the first round.

Valley Vikings
Last year's Vikings were an awe-some bunch, going 9-0 before losing to Grangeville in the state playoffs.

Most of the defense that allowed only three rushing touchdowns in the regular season return, including first-team all-state defensive lineman Travon Olson.

Senior lineman Kody Craner and Jim Rife will join him, and they will be backed up with quality linemen in Brian Hardy and Jesse Simpson.

Three senior defensive backs, Keith Yost, Chuck Springer and Bryce Shindle should make life miserable for opposing receivers.

Things are less stable on the offensive side. The Viking offense will be more versatile this year. In 1989, the Viking offense racked up 435 yards per game, most of it on the ground. Hardy, who rushed for more than a 1,300 yards last year, is back.

"I think we'll have a better passing attack. Chuck (Springer) will do a good job," Malone said.

The leading Viking receiver, Springer will be throwing passes rather than catching them this season. He'll have to fill some big shoes left by David Black, who sparked the fall offense last year.

"David Black really made things happen for Valley," said Gooding coach Jeff Jeffries. "Even when they didn't have anything, he made it happen."

The key this season will be avoiding injuries, Malone said. "We don't have the depth we had last year."

DeLo Hornets
The Hornets lost only one game last season and many key players return this year, making coach Jeff Peak confident about the team's prospects in his first year at the helm.

tailback Bryce Osterhout should provide some offensive punch, but they will have to do behind an inexperienced line. Asher will be throwing to three receivers with varsity experience in Jerod Hitt and Alan Heyward at wide receiver and Kurt Steadman at tight end.

K.C. Wells at center is the only offensive lineman left from last year. Newcomers Ken Bagwell and Kelly Crump will have to step in quickly.

At 200 pounds, Bagwell is the largest Hornet-lineman, and the rest of the team is considerably smaller. "We're probably one of the smaller teams in the conference," Peak said. He plans to offset that with a variety of offensive sets and a balanced attack.

Peak has a pair of his best athletes at linebacker, with Asher joining newcomer Lee Matthews. Matthews is also a strong backup running back. Peak said.

Flitt and Heyward will join Chad Hodge and Kyan Payne at defensive back.

Gooding Senators
If anyone can match up with Valley's size and skill, it is Gooding, who posted a 3-5 mark last year.

The Senators start with a backfield that has started together for three years in quarterback Scott Hockland and running back Rhoder Jackson. Hockland is as good as any signal caller in the conference, Jeffries said.

Rhodes tallied more than 2,000 yards in his sophomore and junior seasons. "He's the best running back in the conference," Jeffries said.

Jason Summers, Chad Olson and Bill Piper comprise the best trio of receivers Gooding has had in several years, he said.

All this adds up to a potent offense if the offensive line can do its job. No problem, Jeffries said.

Center Kelly McClary tipped the scales at 230 pounds last year. Now he's down to 205 and is stronger and quicker, he said. Shon Gerard won all-conference honors at nose-guard as a sophomore last season. He'll play nose-guard and offensive guard this year, Jeffries said.

"He's a treat to watch," the coach said of the 180-pound Guard. "I don't know of anyone we face that can keep up with him."

Paul Wiltze, 225 pounds, will fill the other guard position. Tackles James Robinson, 215 pounds, and Curt Radford, 260 pounds, round out one of the conference's biggest lines.

Many of those lineman will play both ways, bringing good size to the defense. They'll be backed up by Leigh Meyers and Brian Utz at linebacker, a pair of juniors at cornerback in Steve Maxwell and Steve Strickland, and Scot Pavkov at the strong safety position.

Sy Farris and running back Matt Martell to lead the Pilot attack.

Four-year coach Bill Brock also has four experienced wide receivers — Robbie Traudt, Chad Grigg, Ryan Labrum and Chris Williard.

A pair of juniors, Hodge Hamilton and Sergio Puga, will back up Martell in the backfield.

"Last year we played a lot of younger kids, so this year we have a lot of players with varsity experience," Brock said.

The line positions are filled with six returning starters and a slew of promising newcomers to "fill" in should injuries strike.

Martell and Williard bring their quickness to the linebacker positions, where they are joined by returners Jim Solosabal and Sergio Puga.

Turnovers killed the Pilots last year, Brock said. "There were times last season when I think we were some 10-15 yards away from winning so much," he said. "We have to be consistent."

Kimberly Bulldogs
With eight seniors on both sides of the line, 16-year Bulldog coach Gordon Hogan has a lot to look for this year, and looks for his team to improve on last year's 3-6 mark.

Returning quarterback Chris Glenn should wake up a sluggish Kimberly offense, especially with the entire offensive line returning.

The other skill position is the big question marks for Hogan's offense. Senior Justin Hill will do the job at running back and senior Brian Smith is the only returning receiver.

That means a trio of unproven juniors — Chad Hodgins at running back, Brian Thompson at receiver, and Bill Smith at tight end — will have to pick up the offensive slack.

"That could be a problem early," Hogan said, "but the kids are really coming along." Kimberly will try to balance its offense as much as possible this year. Glenn has improved over the summer and should do well.

"Five can catch the ball," he said. The defense looks solid, with an all-senior defensive line and three experienced linebackers. The defensive secondary will be suspect, with these newcomers joining Smith.

The Bulldogs have average size with several players in the 175-200 pound range. "I don't have any real big kids," Hogan said. "The key will be avoiding injuries."

Wendell Trojans
The Trojans will have to rely on the quickness of starting quarterback Travis Ruffing, who will move from running back to run Wendell's veer offense.

Coach Keith Mietzner said his team doesn't have the size or experience to establish a straight-ahead running game or a long passing game. The Wendell linemen average about 150 pounds, so short passes to set up the run will be the name of the game for this year's Trojans.

Last year's Wendell team went 2-7, and graduation left some gaping holes in the offense.

Besides the quarterback spot, Mietzner has three inexperienced runners trying out for the running back position. Defensive back Aron Theberge is trying to move to running back, as is linebacker John Scott Cutler. Chris Chandler is also vying for the spot.

Ruffing and wide receiver George-Whittaker are the only returning skill players. Newcomer James Peterson also play wide receiver.

"Whittaker's probably our best athlete," Mietzner said. "We'll be trying to get him the ball a lot."

The Trojans have 38 players at practice this week, but most of those are on the junior varsity squad. Only 15 players — many who have never played football — are seniors or juniors. As many as eight sophomores will be playing both JV and varsity football this year, Mietzner said.

James Hall and Gregg Morton are two returning linemen. They are joined by linebacker Cutler and defensive backs Whittaker, Ruffing and Theberge as the only players with experience on defense.

Mietzner said his team is excited about the season, but needs to get a win to establish some confidence. That won't be easy when the Trojans open their season against defending state champion Hagerman.

"They're realistic about their size," Mietzner said. "We know we aren't going to go against some of these teams and just knock them over."

Summer's end recipes utilize your harvest

My, oh my, I can remember when I didn't think I'd live this long. Let alone be MARRIED for thirty years.

The summer we were married, we went to nine other weddings. With all the cultural-ups and downs over those years, seven of the couples are still married to the same spouses. Actually one couple couldn't be located and perhaps they still are too. It must have been a lucky summer for brides. I was for me.

This recipe has a fancy title but it uses the freshest stuff out of your garden. It makes a snack or lunch. I guess you could use it as a side dish with something off the grill.

BRUSCHETTA AL POMODORO

(Which means the toasted bread with chopped tomatoes)

1 cup extra virgin olive oil salt and pepper to taste
4 thick slices Italian bread
4 large ripe tomatoes
1 cup minced fresh basil leaves
4 garlic cloves, minced

Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Pour 1/2 cup of the olive oil into a shallow dish. Season with salt and pepper. Dip each side of the bread in the oil to coat well.

Place the bread on a baking sheet and toast until crisp on both sides, about 15 minutes. Peel and seed the tomatoes and chop into small pieces. Sprinkle lightly with salt. Drain the tomatoes in a sieve, then place in a bowl and add 1/2 cup of the basil, garlic and remaining 1/2 cup olive oil.

Spread each slice of toasted bread with the chopped tomato mixture. Arrange on a large plate, garnish with remaining 1/2 cup fresh basil leaves and serve. Usually serves 4.

If you need something a bit different for unexpected guests, try this easy salad that uses lots of leftovers.

PEPPERONI POTATO SALAD

4 cups cold, cooked potatoes, diced
2 1/2 cups cold, cooked summer squash, diced
2 large tomatoes, peeled and cut into chunks
1/2 red onion, diced
1/2 cup sour-cream

salt and fresh ground pepper to taste 1/2 pound pepperoni, sliced thin black olives (could use whole or slices)

Combine all ingredients except for the pepperoni and olives and allow to stand at room temperature for an hour before serving. Garnish with pepperoni and olives.

Here is a handy recipe for this time of year: it's a basic tomato soup but it can be served heated or chilled. The hot recipe serves 6, but if you want to chill it double the ingredients to get the same number of servings.

HOT OR COLD TOMATO SOUP

3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 large onion, sliced very thin
1 tablespoon fresh basil, chopped or 1 teaspoon dried
1 teaspoon fresh thyme or 1/2 teaspoon dried salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

6 - 8 large tomatoes, peeled and cut up
3 cups chicken broth (approximately)
1 teaspoon sugar

Melt the butter with the oil in a large saucepot. Add the onion, basil, thyme, salt and pepper and cook only until onion is transparent. Add the tomatoes and simmer for 30 minutes. Stir in the broth and simmer gently another 30 minutes. Stir frequently and taste for seasonings. Add sugar if necessary to cut the acidity of the tomatoes. Serve hot.

If you are going to chill this soup, blend it to a pure consistency and chill well. Add 1/2 cup light cream and some chopped parsley or basil before serving.

Just when your creative juices have started to run dry, and you can't think of anything else to keep your children constructively busy during summer break... school starts.

But are you really saved by the bell? Now you have to come up with imaginative ways to make and pack nutritious lunchbox foods that your kids will actually eat and enjoy. For imaginative ways to delight your children at lunch or snack time, use cookie cutters to form sandwich bread into charming and surprising shapes. Or live up a tuna sandwich with orange "cartwheels" and chopped apple.

Peanut butter, the old lunchbox staple, finds new life when mixed with granola in a sandwich or combined with cocoa in a snack cake. Good-for-you munchy muffins will disappear before kids even know they're nutritious, and creative pita "pretzels" add a nice crunch and change of pace to lunchbox treats. Who says good foods can't be fun, too?

PACK-A-SNACK CAKE

1 medium orange, unpeeled
1/2 cup margarine or butter, softened
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
1 cup packed brown sugar
2 eggs
1/2 cup milk
1 1/4 cups flour
1/3 cup cocoa
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup peanut butter chips

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line a 13x9x2-inch pan with heavy duty aluminum foil; set aside. Cut orange into large chunks. In food processor or blender, process orange until pureed (yields about 1/2 cup); set aside. In large bowl, with an electric mixer, cream together margarine, peanut butter and sugar. Add pureed orange, eggs and milk; beat well. Combine flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt; add to creamed mixture. Beat until well blended. Spread batter into foil-lined pan. Sprinkle peanut butter chips in rows on top of batter.

Bake 30 to 35 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan on wire rack. Lift foil by ends onto cutting board. Cut cake into squares and pack in sandwich bags.
Makes 24 squares.

PITA PRETZELS

2 (5-inch) pita breads, split
3 tablespoons margarine or butter, softened
2 teaspoons grated Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon garlic spread concentrate
1/2 teaspoon oregano leaves

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line a cookie sheet with heavy duty aluminum foil; set aside. Combine margarine with Parmesan cheese, garlic spread concentrate and oregano leaves. On a cutting board, spread rough side of each pita round with flavored margarine. Cut each round into eight (1 1/4-inch wide) strips. Using a pancake turner, transfer strips to foil-lined cookie sheet. Bake 7 to 9 minutes or until pretzels are lightly browned on edges. Cool. Pretzels will become crispier while cooling. Pack in sandwich bags.
Makes 4 snack-size servings.

NEPTUNE PITA POCKETS

2 cans (6 1/2 ounces each) water-packed tuna, drained
1 small red apple, cored and chopped
1/2 cup light mayonnaise lettuce leaves
3 (6-inch) pita breads, cut in half

2 oranges, peeled; cut in "half-cartwheel" slices*
In medium bowl, combine tuna, apple and mayonnaise; set aside. Arrange lettuce, 1/2 cup tuna mixture and orange "half-cartwheel" slices in each pita bread half. Place each sandwich half in a sandwich bag.

Makes 6 sandwiches.
*For orange "cartwheels", cut a thin slice from both ends of peeled oranges. Then slice the fruit crosswise into the desired thickness. Cut cartwheels in half for half-cartwheel slices.

CRAZY CUTOUT SANDWICHES

1 cup granola-type natural cereal
1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
1 teaspoon fresh grated orange peel
1 orange, peeled, cut in bite-size pieces, drained*
1 to 2 tablespoons honey

1/2 cup whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon baking powder

12 slices wheat bread
In medium bowl, combine cereal, peanut butter, orange peel and pieces; add enough honey to make a spreadable consistency. To make cutout sandwiches, use large, fine-chopped cookie cutters to cut shapes from bread slices before making sandwiches. For each sandwich, spread filling between 2 bread cutouts. Place each sandwich in a sandwich bag.

Makes 2 cups filling.

*For bite-size orange pieces, cut each peeled orange in half lengthwise and with a shallow "V" shape cut, remove the white center, core. Place the halves cut-side down; cut lengthwise and crosswise.

 Freeze bread for easier cutting.

Clockwise from top: Crazy Cutout Sandwiches, Crunchy Munchy Muffins, Pack-a-Snack Cake, Neptune Pita Pockets, and Orange Cartwheels.

1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
grated peel and juice of 1 orange (1/3 cup juice)
1/3 cup honey
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 cup shredded carrots
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
1/2 cup raisins

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Place eight paper or foil bake cups in muffin pan; set aside. In large bowl, combine flour, cinnamon, baking powder, baking-soda and salt. In small bowl, beat eggs, orange peel, juice, honey and oil until well blended. Stirring just until dry ingredients are moistened, add egg mixture to flour mixture. Stir in carrots, walnuts and raisins. Spoon batter into cake cups, filling to top. Bake 20 to 25 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Cool in pan on wire rack. Pack in sandwich bags.
Makes 8 muffins.

CRUNCHY MUNCHY MUFFINS

1/2 cup whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon baking powder

Food chains have slowly but surely gone healthy

By Bea Lewis
Newspy

Nearly a decade ago, when health experts were railing against the "high-fat" offerings of fast-food eateries, nutritionist Marjorie Marks-Katz outlined what the chains could do to make things better.

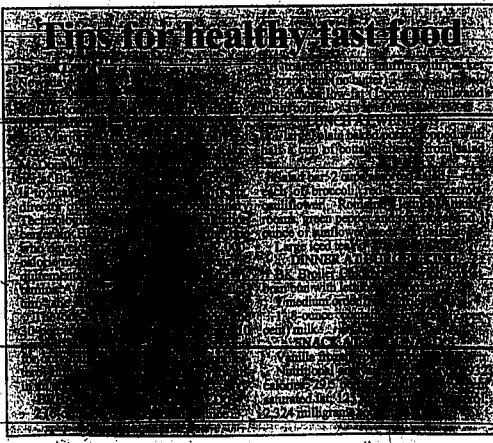

Offer baked potatoes.
Add dark green vegetables.
Provide whole-wheat buns.
Offer low-fat milk.
Serve ice water.

Serve unsweetened fruit juices.
And offer frozen, low-fat yogurt.

Over the years, as they continued to be challenged, fast-food chains started to change until, finally, nine years later, they have made every change Katz advocated. And they have even gone one better by switching to 100-percent vegetable oil for frying foods.

"There's no doubt fast foods are cleaning up their act," said a nutritionist for the Washington-based consumer-advocacy group Center for Science in the Public Interest. It may have taken years, but "they deserve credit for these changes. On the other hand, most people eating at fast-food restaurants still wind up choosing the foods that are still way too fatty, way too salty," said Jayne Hurley, associate nutritionist at the center.

Fat-Brantley, an attorney from New York's Broome borough, knows about that. Each time she goes to eat fast food, she resolves to have a salad. But the minute she walks in the front door, "just one whiff of those fries cooking and I forget the salad. Fries win, hands down," she said.

Eric Johnson, a New York City bus driver who was having low-fat milk with his pancakes and sausages at McDonald's, applauds the changes. But he struggles between wanting the high-fat foods he grew up with and knowing there are healthier foods being offered. "We're set in our ways—kids today will have a better shot at avoiding heart trouble. They're learning to choose the good foods at a young age," he said.

often than not, Lapidus will happily choose a salad at McDonald's, particularly when he refuels after a ball game. But, he admits, "I still love the Big Macs and Egg McMuffins."

Salads with calorie-reduced dressings are only one of the healthier choices, along with low-fat milk and orange juice. Wendy's does a big business in baked potatoes. For low-fat snacking, McDonald's has introduced a low-fat frozen yogurt or low-fat milk shake. For breakfast, a fat-free apple-cinnamon muffin or whole-grain cereal are new options. Burger King has a grilled-chicken sandwich on an oat-bran muffin (sales are 1 million a day), and, in the fall, so will Wendy's.

In addition, most major fast-food chains now post nutrition information at their outlets and have booklets on hand; some offer toll-free nutrition hot lines.

As Americans reduce fat in their diets, competitors gear up to jump on the bandwagon. Pizza Hut is test-marketing a line of light pizzas with one-third less fat, fewer calories and less cholesterol than the regular pies. Earlier this summer, Hardee's introduced "The Lean 11," a hamburger that, according to the company, has 18 percent fat per sandwich, or about 30 grams less fat than Hardee's other quarter-pounders.

The biggest change came last month, when, after years of foot-dragging, three of the nation's largest fast-food chains—Wendy's, McDonald's and Burger King—promised to stop using beef-tallow and vegetable-oil blends and start using 100-percent vegetable oil to fry their potatoes. Letters of thanks

KMVP's support for MS fund-raiser appreciated

As a person who suffers from multiple sclerosis, I would like to thank Al Fogelstein and KMVP for the extensive amount of air time provided for this fund-raiser and all the individuals, companies and organizations who called in pledges.

It is heart-rending to see the support of so many people in the Magic Valley who care for the plight of those who suffer from MS.

Good for the use of the run kit, to McDonald's for the water stops and to Gem State Trophies for their assistance with the trophies.

Additional thanks go to CSI for allowing us to use their facilities, to the Jack and Donna Stanley family for their expertise at the finish line and to all of the volunteers who helped us to complete this race.

Concerts in the park have been a delight for years

Thanks! The park concerts are really appreciated.

There are many thanks to be spread around. First, to Director Ted Hagley, Guest Conductor Bruce Whitehead and the devoted members of the Twin Falls City Band and to Park Superintendent Cheryl Browning and his crew for the beauty of the park.

What a pleasure to spend a few hours each week listening to the band and visiting with friends - to forget for a little while the turn of what is going on in the world around us.

In all the years we have enjoyed the concerts and the park - 25-plus - we believe there were more people in attendance this year than ever before.

So, to the city council, thank you for supporting the City Band! It has become a great tradition and we certainly don't want to lose it!

We had perfect attendance - all 10 concerts.

The Basic Idea Behind Meadow Gold Premium Frozen Yogurt Pops.

Our intention was simple: to put the great taste of our strawberry, chocolate or peach frozen yogurt on a stick. This way you can have a delicious frozen treat with the taste of ice cream, but with less fat. And instead of putting one giant stick in the bottom of a half gallon carton, we made single serving bars with just 45 calories each. And of course, there's a stick in each bar. But we won't stick it to you. And to prove it, here's a coupon.

Woman in rug business is called on the carpet by curious friends

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her past letters.)

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in the carpet business. We do beautiful work and our prices are right. When so-called "friends" show us carpet they have installed in their homes, which they bought some- where else, and they ask us what we think of it, what should we say? (They even have the nerve to tell us how much they paid for it.)

Nine times out of 10 it is a poor job of installation, and they paid too much. I always tell them the truth. My husband says that I should never knock the competition, regardless; otherwise it will sound like sour grapes.

These same people never even let us give them an estimate! I say why should we consider their feelings if they don't consider ours? What do you think?

—CARPET PEOPLE

DEAR PEOPLE: I think your husband is right. And the same goes for people in the jewelry business, furniture business, fur business and every other kind of business.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 53-year-old man who is very much in love with a 22-year-old girl. I know you think I'm crazy, but this girl really loves me. She even broke up with a young, good-looking man just for me. She worked for me for a short time, but we didn't want any talk around the place, so I had her quit.

My problem is my wife. She won't give me a divorce. Our children are grown, and I offered my wife a very good settlement, which she refused.

Abby, my girlfriend is the sweetest, most unspoiled girl in the world. She is just the opposite of my wife. She appreciates every little thing I've given her, like a small, inexpensive car, some clothes and taking care of her mother's hospital bill. I would gladly give up my last dime to be free to marry this girl. How can I get my wife to give up?

DEAR ISLANDER
DEAR ISLANDER: Make her a better offer. She might surprise you. But don't give up your last dime for your freedom because that "sweet, unspoiled girl" might also surprise you and disappear when she discovers you're broke.

DEAR ABBY: I think it was very considerate of that hairy husband to shave his chest for his wife. My husband is as hairy as an ape and refuses to do anything about it. We sleep spoon-fashion with me in front, and sometimes I just go crazy when his big hairy chest heaves up and down and tickles my shoulders and back — in rhythm yet! I know just how that lady must have felt.

—TICKLED PINK

DEAR ABBY: A while back you had a letter from a woman who made her husband shave his chest. She must be screwy. And any man who would let his wife talk him into it, must be screwy, too.

I have a very hairy chest, which I wouldn't shave for any amount of money. I sleep only in pajama bottoms, and my wife says she'd rather feel my hairy chest against her cheek than the collar of a mink coat.

—HAIRY AND HAPPY

Washington St. widening helps safety, public image

A special thanks to the directors of the Twin Falls Highway District for listening and responding to the requests from the airport board, city council, county commissioners, airport businesses and employees and local pilots regarding the widening and resurfacing of the two miles which extends Washington Street South from the water facility to the airport. And, our thanks to Highway Supervisor Clyde Burney and the road crew for getting the job done in a most timely manner.
Not only have you made traveling to and from the airport more safe, you have completed just one more step in creating a good public image for those visiting "The United States of America's best city."

Program offers educational pen pals

Knight-Ridder News Service.
Kids' pen pal letters usually come packed with letters, cartoons and goofy pet pictures.
Fine for the funny bone, but not much for the mind.

Suppose you could link your favorite youngster with a pen pal who would explain the physics of ice cream or the mysteries of solar power. Science-By-Mail, a nationwide program offered through Boston's Museum of Science, does just that.

Three times a year, children receive packets asking them to explore the chemistry of a decomposed banana or some other science challenge. Their solutions — in the form of writing, drawings, models, videos or cassette tapes — are forwarded to volunteer scientist pen pals. The scientists then write back to the children, often in great detail, discussing the solutions.

If they wish, kids can correspond with their scientist pals up to 10 times as they piece together their answers.

To sign up, children must be in grades four through nine. They may enroll alone, with their families or with a pen pal. A one-year membership — individual, family or group — is $40, but some scholarships are available. Applications for this year are due by Oct. 15; packets will be sent in November, January and March.

Physicians, engineers and scientists in a variety of fields are needed as volunteers. They'll need to devote about 20-30 hours during the year writing to children.

To volunteer as a pen pal or to enroll children in the program, write to Science-By-Mail, Museum of Science, Science Park, Boston, Mass. 02114-1099, or call 800-729-3300.

Easy peach treats give kids a chance to help

Now is the perfect time to get children involved in preparing simple and refreshing recipes, especially desserts.

Before trying a new recipe, children should become familiar with kitchen cleanliness and safety. A grown-up helper should pre-measure all ingredients, slice the peaches and operate all electrical equipment while the children mix the ingredients together.

To put the kitchen tips into action, try tasty and cool Peachy Pops. They're a naturally sweet frozen dessert that's not only easy to prepare but is a refreshing favorite for kids.

Put a little fizz into their lives with Peachy Chocolate Soda. Chocolate ice milk, seltzer water and fresh peaches are an unique combination that's fun to make and will tantalize the entire family's taste buds.

Cool off with a refreshing Peach Milk Shake that's flavorful and nutritious. Cold milk, instant vanilla pudding, plain low-fat yogurt and mouth-watering peaches — that's all you need to whip up a piece of summer's perfection.

Join your children in the kitchen. Create a wide variety of peachy desserts and snacks that are fun to prepare and taste great.

Flavorful fast, easy pizza salad

The Baltimore Evening Sun

Here's a great warm weather dish that's long on flavor.

PIZZA SALAD

1 jar (6-ounces) marinated artichoke hearts
2 bunches romaine lettuce
2 tablespoons vinegar
1/4 teaspoon oregano, crushed
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 small clove garlic, crushed
1 green, red or yellow pepper, cut in strips
8 ounces Mozzarella cheese, cut in

1/4-inch cubes
6 slices salami, folded in quarters
2 small tomatoes, cut into quarters
Drain artichoke hearts; reserving marinade. Remove outer leaves of lettuce; reserve. Tear remaining lettuce into bite-size pieces; chill. For dressing, combine marinade, vinegar, oregano, salt and garlic; set aside to blend flavors. To serve, line large salad bowl with romaine leaves. Fill with torn greens. Arrange remaining ingredients over the top. Dress immediately. Makes four servings.

Light pasta dish uses wine, clams

Seattle Times

CAPELLINI WITH WHITE-WINE CLAM SAUCE

2 (6.5-ounce) cans chopped clams
2 medium shallots, peeled and minced
2 medium cloves garlic, peeled and minced
1/2 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon olive oil
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
6 ounces capellini pasta
1/4 cup finely chopped parsley
4 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
2 teaspoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

San cheese
1. Bring a large pan of water to a boil for the pasta. Drain the clams, reserving the liquid; measure 1 cup. Combine the clam broth, the shallots, garlic and white wine in a saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and simmer 3 minutes.
2. Add the olive oil, pepper, salt and Tabasco; simmer 2 minutes, until slightly thickened. Stir in the clams and keep the sauce warm.
3. Add the pasta to the boiling water and time 3 minutes, or until tender. Drain the pasta and put back into the hot pan. Add the sauce, the parsley, lemon juice and Parmesan. Stir well to coat the pasta and serve immediately.

Barbaresco 1 of Italy's best, most popular red wines

By Bob Houston
Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. While visiting Italy this summer, my husband and I particularly enjoyed a red wine called Barbaresco. Could you please give me some information about this wine? Is it named after a grape? What are some of the better Barbarescos available in this country? —T.H.

A. Barbaresco, one of Italy's best and most popular red wines, is named after the village of Barbaresco in the Piedmont region of northwestern Italy. Produced from the nebbiolo grape, the wine is rich and powerful, requiring some bottle-aging — about 5 to 6 years — before it's at its peak of taste.

Some of the better Barbarescos sold in this country include those from Castello di Neive, manduca, Duca di Asti, Marchesi di Gresy, Pio Cesare, Renato Ratti, Gaja, and Bruno Giacosa. A perfect complement to Italian pasta as well as roast meat and poultry, the price of Barbaresco can range from $10 to $50 a bottle, depending on producer and vintage age.

Q. While you've written often about Spanish red wines, I read very little about white wines from that country. Are there any that you can recommend? —P.T.

A. The best whites from Spain come from the Penedes region near Barcelona, where the Torres winery, in particular, has had great success with white wine grapes including chardonnay. Torres produces three styles of Vina Sol priced from $6 to $12 a bottle. Any of these, especially the Gran Vina Sol, should satisfy a variety of appetites for white wine.

In Spain's most famous wine district, Rioja, wine-makers have traditionally had their best success with red wines. However, there are a few white Riojas that are worthy of consideration. The best by far is Marques de Murrieta, a luscious white with excellent fruit and body. Generally the wine retails for $10 to $12 a bottle. I've also tasted some very old white Marques de Murrieta from the early 20th Century, and they were still rich in flavor and remarkably well-preserved.

Healthy

Arby's made the switch a year ago; Jack-in-the-Box has just announced it will change, too.

The fast-food, which should be in all the fast-food restaurants by year's end, reduces saturated fat and eliminates cholesterol in the fries. A good idea, because high blood cholesterol caused by a high-fat diet, particularly saturated fat, is a major risk for heart disease, America's No. 1 killer. However, the total fat won't change — a large order of McDonald's fries still contains 400 calories and almost 22 grams of total fat or about one third of the total fat recommended for someone who consumes about 1,800 calories a day.

To help you toward more nutritious eating in fast-food restaurants, the Center for Science in the Public Interest offers some suggestions.

• McDonald's: Save 32-42 grams of fat by selecting the Lite Vinaigrette dressing over the regular kinds. For breakfast, consume 30 percent fewer calories and 70 percent less fat with two bowls of Wheaties and low-fat milk instead of a sausage McMuffin. Swap two of the fat-free apple-ban muffins for one of the Danish pastries and save anywhere from 16 to 22 grams of fat. Scrape off the tartar sauce from the Fish-O-Filet and save two-thirds of the fat and one-third of the calories.

• Burger King: Leave off the sauce from the BK broiler; save 90 calories. Hold the mayo on the Whopper and save 150 calories and grams of fat, or the amount you would get in a cup of ice cream. Forget the biscuit — it has 17 fat grams.

• Wendy's: You can eat 2 junior hamburgers and still get fewer calories and less fat than you'd get in one Big Classic. And avoid Cheddar Chips, Pasta Salad, potato salad, and Cole Slaw. Together, they will give you salad 110 more calories and twice as much fat as a single hamburger.

• Kentucky Fried Chicken: Go for the original recipe chicken instead of extra crispy, the latter has 45 percent more fat. You could remove the skin; but second best would be to eat the center breast meat, less fatty than the meat on the thighs and wings. You could eat 3 servings of mashed potatoes with gravy and still get fewer calories than you would get by eating one order of French fries.

Since school has started for many of you, here's a hearty all-in-one meal.

DEEP DISH MEXICAN PIZZA

2 1/2 cups biscuit mix
1/4 cup yellow cornmeal
1/2 cup water
1 pound lean ground beef or turkey
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 4-ounce can chopped milk green chilies, drained
1 tablespoon instant beef or chick flavored bouillon or 3 cubes of bouillon
1 teaspoon chili powder
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
1 16-ounce can refried beans
1 1/2 cups shredded cheese (mild cheddar or monterey jack) chopped tomato
Shredded lettuce
Sliced pitted olives

Preheat your oven to 425 degrees. In a medium bowl, combine biscuit mix, cornmeal and water and mix well. With floured hands, pat dough on bottom and up sides of greased jellyroll (15 by 10-inch) pan. Bake 10 minutes. Remove from oven and set aside.
In a large frying pan, brown the meat with the onion and stir in the tomato sauce, chilies, bouillon, chili powder and cumin. Cook and stir until bouillon dissolves.
Add refried beans over baked crust; spoon meat mixture evenly over beans and sprinkle cheese over all. Bake for 10 minutes. Garnish with tomato, lettuce and olives. Serves 8 to 10.
Enjoy!

To get the jump on spring, plant bulbs now

Some of the earliest spring flowers are produced from bulbs. September and October are the best months to plant spring blooming bulbs such as tulips, daffodils, crocuses and hyacinths. Winter chilling in order to withstand even our coldest winters.

Allen Wilson Gardening

Although often planted in November and December in milder climates, earlier planting is best in the Magic Valley because our soil freezes sooner. The May-flowering and Emperor tulips are some of the best adapted to our climate. Many other unusual kinds such as narconily-flowered, double and bicolor can also be grown. In addition to the larger Dutch crocus, even dwarfier and earlier blooming snow only of larger garden stores and nurseries or in special mail order catalogs. Several bulbs which are handy in milder climates are not readily winter hardy in the Magic Valley. They are sometimes offered for sale in chain stores and mail order catalogs. These include ranunculus, anemone and Dutch iris. Bearded iris is well adapted and can be grown here. However, the rhizomes should be planted before the end of September. Many perennial flowers can be planted or divided and transplanted in September also. Perennials which bloom in September should be divided in spring rather than fall. You can also dig and move spring flowering bulbs as well as plant new ones. Most bulbs become too crowded after three or four years and benefit if they are moved. Bulbs look prettiest if planted in clusters rather than single-file rows. Check the height so that shorter ones are placed in front. When planting, leave about twice as much space between bulbs as the diameter. Planting depths vary widely. However, the larger bulbs are generally planted the deepest. Bulb planting charts are available from most stores where bulbs are sold.

Start with bedroom which sets day's tone

the bed with a remote control device on the night table?

Next, choose a color scheme, taking into consideration the personalities of the inhabitants, the light in the room and the size of the space. Any color can work here. Many people, for example, feel that red is too invigorating for a bedroom, but others like that extra boost of energy. When selecting fabric and carpeting, be aware that blues fade a lot. Red and coral will fade in a sunny room and white turns yellow over time. Whatever the color, silk is a fragile fabric that won't hold up well in a sunny space. To get a feeling of the flow of fabrics and colors, paste swatches on the floor plan, studying the way they relate to one another. Consider upholstery, as well. Choose stain-resistant fabrics, for example, if there are children or puppies about. Make the room as luxurious as possible, so it becomes a refuge from the outside world. Fill it with memories of special times and little touches that lend a sense of well-being — say, a water pitcher on the night table or a little refrigerator if you like to snack in the middle of the night.

Q. What special considerations should be kept in mind when furnishing a master bedroom?
A. Most people design the public rooms of a home, such as the living room, first, saving the more private master bedroom for last. I feel that the bedroom is the most important room and should be done first. Your surroundings in the morning set the tone for the day. If you wake up in a beautiful space, it puts you in a happy frame of mind, better able to cope with the day's problems.

When choosing furniture like the room, first determine your needs. Do you pay bills here and need a desk? Do you eat in the bedroom or play backgammon and need a table? Do you want a chair for reading and relaxing?
Once you know what you need, work out a floor plan and establish a mood for the space. Do you want a romantic room with a four-poster bed or do you prefer a more practical look? Should work areas be hidden behind a pretty screen or out in the open? Should the TV go into a cabinet or stand free at the foot of

Underlayment important for many floorings

Q. We want to install vinyl sheet flooring on a wood floor with tongue-and-groove boards. The room is over an unheated crawlspace, and we would also like to help insulate it. Should we install an underlayment, and will it be affected by expansion and contraction? — R. Langhugh

Do-it-yourself Gene Austin

A. While underlayment is sometimes not necessary when vinyl flooring is installed over very smooth surface such as existing vinyl, it should definitely be used this time. Without underlayment, the vinyl would probably telegraph or reveal defects in the underlying boards, such as cracks, low spots and ridges. The flooring dealer may recommend a specific type of underlayment, but generally if the wood floor is fairly smooth and the boards no more than about 3/4 inches wide, either one-quarter-inch hardboard or one-quarter-inch plywood can be used. If the floor boards are wider or uneven, three-eighths-inch plywood would be better. Underlayments are generally sold in 4-by-8-foot or 4-by-4-foot sheets.

have an insulating effect, especially by sealing out drafts and moisture. Basic installation instructions can be provided by the dealer, but here are a couple of general tips: Acclimate the underlayment by storing it in the room for several days before installation. Special underlayment nails, which have ringed shanks to improve their grip, should be used. The underlayment must be nailed not only at the edges but also throughout the body of the sheets on four-inch to six-inch centers. In tight spaces, usually one-3/2-inch to one-eighth inch, should be left between panels and a gap of about one-quarter inch left at walls. The correct gap and nailing spaces for various underlayments may be specified on the panels or can be provided by the dealer. Joins of panels should be staggered to help avoid long gaps. Acclimating the panels and proper spacing will help eliminate expansion-contraction problems.

Q. When my new house was built, the floor was finished and carpeted. On several occasions, water entered the basement and soaked the carpet, which we had to remove, dry out and re-carpet. Is there a floor tile I can install in place of the carpet that will not be affected by the water? — R. Ruszcak

A. No manufacturer I know of recommends installing floor tiles on a basement that gets wet, since the tiles may come loose, curl and crack. The best bet is to correct the cause of the seepage before installing a different flooring. Start by checking the rain-gutter system for clogs or other defects. Overflowing or leaking gutters and poor drainage around the house are frequently responsible for wet basements and are relatively easy to fix. Minor seepage through walls can also sometimes be cured by treating the insides of the walls with a special sealer or paint, such as Drylok or Thoroseal.

A. Dark-colored surfaces absorb some heat, and light-colored surfaces reflect some, so roof color does make a difference. However, the ultimate effect on the home depends on many other factors. If attic insulation and ventilation are adequate, the effect on living comfort and fuel consumption should be small. I suggest asking the builder or roofing contractor to check the roof and attic in a year or two to determine whether additional ventilation or other measures are needed.

Q. My concrete patio is partially covered with mildew. It is unsightly and slippery when wet. How can I get rid of the mildew? — M. Hansley

A. Scrub the patio with a strong solution of chlorine bleach, which should kill the mildew and eliminate the stain. Keep in mind that the bleach can harm any plants near the patio and should not be splashed on fabrics or other surfaces that are not colorfast. Rinse the patio thoroughly after the scrubbing, which will probably have to be repeated periodically.

Q. Our house has a full basement that is fully finished and carpeted. On several occasions, water entered the basement and soaked the carpet, reuse water from the two preferred sources — the washing machine or shower.

Readers' questions and comments are welcome and should be sent to Gene Austin, Knight-Ridder News Service, Box 8263, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101. Questions cannot be answered personally.

Advances such as "turbulent path" emitters ingeniously help keep systems from clogging, as the new, more efficient filters. And many new systems are pressure-compensated so the same amount of water comes out at the far end of the system as at the end near the spigot, which makes hillside installations much easier.

From "3Q percent to 70 percent" the answer given by Joseph Hugg, chairman of the Agricultural Engineering Department at California Polytechnic State University in Pomona and an authority on drip irrigation.

Janet Hartin, with the University of California Cooperative Extension, in San Bernardino, goes so far as to say, "The efficiency of an irrigation system is more important than what you plant."

And there are the new mini-sprinklers or micro-sprinklers that apply water almost as slowly as a true drip system, so it can all soak in and very little is lost to the atmosphere.

They are also extremely easy to install or modify—once installed, and a whole lot easier to figure out, although they are not as thrifty as true drip systems. They are ideally suited for areas of ground cover.

Then there is "gray water" and its reuse in the landscape, which some consider the solution-to-sewage problems as well as water problems. Drought-plagued Santa Barbara County, California, has made it legal to use; other Californians are technically breaking the law if they use water from the two preferred sources — the washing machine or shower.

IF AUGUST 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Current cycle highlights marital status, possible business enterprise, sense of direction, great understanding of motivation. You are skillful at character analysis, psychology and are drawn to the man arts, including astrology. Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius - persons play important roles in your life. Vitality makes comeback in September, decision is reached concerning marital status, addition to family.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Missing parts come together - you get complete story as result of surprise visit. Focus on entertainment, philosophy, versatility, humor. Travel arrangement will be clarified. Sagittarius involv.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some said you could not overcome block or obstacle. These persons concede defeat. Money that had been withheld will be released. Scorpio and another Taurus figure prominently; reward forthcoming.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You'll exclaim, "This is going to be one of my best Wednesdays!" Focus on discovery, variety, flirtation, sex appeal. Question concerning marital status surges to forefront. Virgo plays title role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spotlight on basic issues, including removal of safety hazards. Attention revolves around home, family, serious discussion related to budget. Tonight favors relaxation, music and romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): More pleasure received from anticipation than actuality. Scenario features elements of glamour, intrigue and some deception. Focus on style, creativity, possible emotional outburst. Pieces involved.

Falling in love
 The average American woman falls in love six times in her life. Or so researchers now report. Without contradicting the claim, our Love and War man notes definitions of love, vary greatly. It's the unhappy women who tend to count the times they've been in love, he says. The happier women usually don't know. And don't care.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stress independence, freedom, willingness to make fresh start. New love could be on horizon. You'll get both about basic values, money, income potential. Check prices, Leo figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You know what you want to do but are reluctant due to "family situation." Break free, imprint style, take initiative. Puzzle, pieces will come together. Cancer, Capricorn persons play roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Diversity, check wardrobe, locate missing legal document. Someone deliberately picked hiding place, very dark, and could be closed. Answers are found behind scenes. Be discreet. Relationship at stake.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Focus on prestige, career, participation in school or community project. Plans subject to change, format will be revised. You'll encounter passionate individual, dedicated and stubborn.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Individual who issued order has change of heart. You are affected because travel itinerary is revamped. Promotion that had been delayed will come to pass within five days. Gemini plays role.

Soldiers in Saudi desert battle heat, boredom, not Iraqis

Los Angeles Times

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Cpl. Christopher C. and P. Norman M. H. combated the heat of the Saudi desert as they waited for the rations box in front of the truck to turn into a swimming pool.

"You know, The way it does in the beer commercial. The one where the egg woman walks out holding two frothy beer bottles, and somebody says, 'Where did that come from?'"

"In fact, they'd be happy if the pizza would just get there. We ordered Domino's three weeks ago," Norman joked. "It ain't got here yet."

But as the mercury crawls past 113 degrees, the only hint of water is a distant mirage hovering over across the miles of scrub and hot sand, out past a line of high-voltage electrical lines and a gray ribbon of road they've traveled for long hours starting from the desert floor. That's the road the Iraqi tanks would come speeding down from the north. That's the road where the missile goes.

hours until lunch—a lukewarm, vacuum-packed, mass-produced, field-issue tray of beef stew and assorted bland accompaniments known as an MRE — "meal, ready-to-eat." They're carefully calculated at 3,600 calories per serving. The water in the canteens is the temperature of hot tea.

nam War, comfort is where you find it. A patch of shade near the radiator grill of a truck. A stolen splash of water rubbed furtively across the face. A foxhole in the sand with a spread-out bedroll.

Supporting the troops in the field has become a round-the-clock proposition for several central logistics centers responsible for dispensing the more than 1 billion pounds of ammunition, weapons, food, uniforms and other supplies being shipped and airlifted into Saudi Arabia, for a troop force that soon could reach 100,000.

U.S. military logistics experts in Saudi Arabia only last weekend went on a new work schedule that is merely punishing instead of debilitating. They now work 20 hours and get four hours off, before it was 36 hours on and four off.

Their goal is to build a 30-day supply of food, ammunition, and any other material the troops in the field will need, according to Maj. Gen. William G. Pagonis, who is overseeing the supply operation as commanding general of the army's central support command.

Camped in tent cities, prefabricated housing and occasional temporary buildings across the desert, simple things — things like breakfast and showers, laundry and toilet paper — have become major undertakings for the first wave of American soldiers setting down on Saudi soil.

The initial field kitchen designed to feed 250 soldiers from the 1st Tactical Fighter Wing was actually serving more than 1,000 by the time the second and finally a third opened up. Army personnel on the Air Force base have been shepherded into the enlisted men's club, quickly dubbed "Mission Inn." A few divisions contracted with local Hardie's fast-food branches to supply thousands of burgers and fries for daily lunch. For soldiers on exercises in the field, sometimes for three days at a stretch, it's MRE.

Water has been an even more formidable obstacle. In the scorching desert heat, each soldier must drink anywhere from 4 to 6 gallons a day depending on how long he is out in the sun. Each also consumes up to 14 more gallons daily — shaving, brushing teeth, showering, cooking. In places where there is no potable water, canteens filled out of the faucet do the trick. Otherwise, it is bottled water. "Water buffalo" storage tanks pulled on trailers out to the troops.

In the most remote locations, reverse-osmosis water purification units trucked in with the troops can take brackish well water, salt water, stagnant water, even muddy water and make it drinkable — at a rate of up to 3,000 gallons an hour. One canteen at a desert mess hall one day, a question about how the soldiers' water tasted elicited a host of responses, of which only one was printable: "It tastes like pool water," said a corporal from Virginia.

At many camps, troops are now limited to three-minute showers, three times a week, and no running water while shaving.

The 82nd Airborne Division, the first unit into Saudi Arabia, at first set up camp in tents and used Saudi military bathroom facilities, where the showers do double duty as toilets. Breakfast in fact was fruit bread, water and perhaps an orange. Lunch and dinner were provided by Saudis under contract with the U.S. military, and cases of "Saddam's Revenge" became almost as frequent as heat exhaustion complaints.

"You can get enough to eat. It's just that some of the guys are scared to eat some of it," a 21-year-old private said.

LEGAL NOTICE

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF TWIN FALLS, IDAHO.

Case No. CV 9002298-1

NOTICE OF HEARING

IN THE MATTER OF KEVIN EUGENE JONES

KEVIN EUGENE JONES, Petitioner

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus, filed May 8, 1990, at Water, Washington County, Idaho, now residing at Buhi, Twin Falls County, Idaho, has been filed in the above entitled court. The reason for the change in name being that he has been using the name of his stepfather since the age of eight years. The name of petitioner is Ronald Eugene Jones, who last known place of residence was in Newport, Oregon. Said Petition will be heard on the 19th day of September, 1990, at the hour of 1:30 p.m., as soon thereafter as counsel can be had. Objections must be filed by any person who, in such objections, show to the court a good reason against such a change of name.

WITNESS my hand and seal of District Court on this 16th day of August, 1990.

Paul T. Smith
Attorney for Petitioner
P.O. Box 225
Twin Falls, ID 83303-0225

PUBLISH: Wednesday, August 22 and 29 and September 5 and 12, 1990.

LEGAL NOTICE

actions and of the principal issues involved. Under this proposed rule, the waiver requirements in the existing rule are expanded to include any emergency, "endanger the health or life of the public." Provisions are also amended to include any emergency caused by fire, flood or earthquake would invoke the waiver requirement to have a "special permit" for an overnight movement. Identical approval for the overnight movement can be obtained from the Centralized Special Permit Office in Boise or through a Port of Entry in the emergency movement is completed, formal application for a special permit must be submitted to the Centralized Special Permit Office in Boise. The fact that proper documentation of the movement is made and appropriate fees are collected.

The section of the rule affecting emergency movements is: 7.6.(b). (Note: non-substantive changes, such as adding the word "and" to affected sections, are not shown.)

PUBLIC HEARING SCHEDULE: Rules making changes will be held at the following times: 1. Signed, written requests for a hearing or submission of comments are due on or before September 12, 1990, from twenty-five (25) or more interested persons. 2. Port of Entry of PROVISIONAL PROPOSAL presenting a petition with signatures of not less than twenty-five (25) members of the organization, or from a government subdivision or agency. Hearing will be held on Friday, August 24, 1990, at the Idaho Transportation Board involves the regular adoption of a rule governing special permits for an overnight movement of a vehicle on Idaho highways.

AUTHORITY: In compliance with Section 20-1-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, notice is hereby given that the Idaho Transportation Board has undertaken regular rule-making procedures. The Idaho Transportation Board is authorized pursuant to Sections 40-312 and 40-314, Idaho Code, to make DESCRIPTIVE SUMMARY: The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the regular
