Saddam offers oil, mends fence

The Associated Press

Saddam Hussein offered free oil to developing nations Monday in a bid to win their support and circumvent a U.N. trade embargo; had he got a boost from a former enemy when Iraq agreed to restore full diplomatic ties.

The White House characterized both developments as signs the Iraqi president is growing desperate and grasping at any straw he can find.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III, briefing NATO ministers on the weekend U.S.-Soviet summit, asked the allies to send ground troops into the Persian Gulf region "even at a symbolic presence to increase pressure on Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. There were no immediate offers.

Baker also announced he would visit

Senate grants troops free mail

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Homesick U.S. troops in the Middle East would be able to send letters to relatives and friends for no charge under a measure approved Monday by the Senate and introduced in the House.

On a voice vote, the Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to a money bill for the Postal Service, Treasury Department and several other agencies that would provide free mail privileges to the 100,000 U.S. servicemen and women now deployed in the Persian Gulf region.

Simply by signing their names on the upper right hand corner of envelopes with their rank and serial number in the left-hand corner, the troops could send letters home with no stamps.

Helms, among several lawmakers who visited with troops in the region over the past two weeks, said a repeated complaint they expressed was being unable to find stamps.

Syria beefed up its contribution to the multinational force facing Iraq, saying it

In other developments Monday:

- Baker told reporters Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and the exiled government of Kuwait would contribute a combined $12 billion to help defray the cost of the U.S. buildup in the Gulf and to assist poorer nations hurt by the U.N. trade embargo on Iraqi goods.
- The official Iraqi News Agency criticized President Bush's motives in meeting with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Helsinki, Finland. It said the summit showed Bush's "evils" tendencies.

Hospital administrator John Bingham, standing, begins the Monday night board meeting.

Despite objections, MVRMC board approves purchase of Doctors Park

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center board of trustees on Monday approved the purchase of the $2.75 million Doctors Park under a few conditions.

The sale will increase the county hospital's already substantial share of the facilities in Twin Falls' health care market.

The hospital board approved the purchase Monday after Administrator John Bingham read a letter from physicians Larry Maxwell and Mark Grefenson, who said the quality of care would be substantially sacrificed if the hospital took over operation of a surgery center they own.

Budget passes — B3

Before the deal is finalized, the hospital must work out the final financial arrangements with The First National Bank of Chicago and sign lease agreements with all the doctors who lease space in Doctors Park.

Doctors Park is a conglomeration of two medical office buildings jointly owned by 10 physicians. The main building is 27,000 square feet and is located one block northeast of the hospital. The second building is at 526 Shop.

The letter from Grefenson and Maxwell said that although they lease the space from Doctors Park for the Magic Valley Surgery Center, they own the business themselves.

The hospital would not own the cancer treatment equipment or the business itself — with the medical accreditation and good-will it represents — by purchasing

Scholastic test scores unchanged from '89

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Average scores on the ACT, the predominant college entrance exam, in 28 states, were unchanged in 1989-90, but minority students continued to improve, the test's publishers reported Monday.

The average national composite score among 817,096 graduating high school students was 20.6, on a scale of 1-36, according to American College Testing, the Iowa City, Iowa-based organization that administers the exam.

Students in 1990 took a new form of the test, called the "Enhanced ACT Assessment," and therefore results were not directly comparable to previous years.

But ACT officials calculated that the scores from last year and the previous school year, which used the older version, were unchanged.

ACT averages have been practically unchanged for the last five years and offer fresh evidence that school reform may have

Housing slump nibbles at Jacklin Seed Co. plans

JEROME — A slumping national economy has already begun slowing down one business in the Magic Valley — Jacklin Seed Co.

Vice President Doyle Jacklin said Monday that a decrease in home building nationwide has prompted the company to slow construction on a lawn-seed cleaning station at the site in time to receive the 1990 harvest. But the harvest is over and the company has only begun site-preparation work on the former cow pasture.

The company now expects its receiving station to be completed by Spring. The said, "It's just the construction that has been slow down... in anticipation of the national economy."

Fewer new homes means fewer new lawns and less demand for turf grass. "We don't want to get into an overproduction situation," Jacklin said.

When the company first announced its interest in Jerome last January, spokesmen said the company would build a receiving station at the site in time to receive the 1990 harvest. But the harvest is over and the company has only begun site-preparation work on the former cow pasture.

The company now expects its receiving cleaning plant will be complete in about 2 1/2 years.

Estimates on the total project's costs have risen to nearly $4.5 million, Jacklin said, up from earlier expectations of about $3.5 million.

The company didn't want to borrow money more quickly than it could pay it back, "it's more a matter of fiscal responsibility," Jacklin said.

The company is slowing placement of new tall fescue contracts with farmers due to decreased demand for that turf-grass, Jacklin said.

1990 crop yields in southern Idaho have not played a role in the slowdown, Jacklin said. Grass farmers dissatisfied with their first year need to keep the perennial crop in the ground and try again next year when the rains have become better established, he said.

Jacklin Seed Co. had hoped to have 15,000 southern Idaho acres contracted by now, but "I'd say we're not quite there yet," Jacklin said. The company eventually wants 30,000 acres in the Snake River Plain from Idaho Falls to Owyhee. One Jacklin also said that the plunging prices of non-specialized bluegrass varieties was not related to the Jerome slowdown, Jacklin said.

Bush, Gorbachev relate well but are not on first-name basis yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidents Bush and Gorbachev may not be on a "George" and "Mikhail" basis, but their relationship seems to be evolving into a comfortable one, especially now that they've ended a summit as allies.

Bush's personal encounters with Gorbachev remain a little on the staid side by Bush's usual standards for palling around with world leaders, associates of the president suggest.

But the two leaders seem to be getting in and getting used to each other. And, by their own accounts, the presidents of the world's two superpowers say they trust each other more and more.

"At each meeting we move forward, we enrich our relationship," Mikhail S. Gorbachev said after the two leaders ended their Sunday summit in Helsinki with a statement of unity condemning Iraq's occupation of Kuwait.

"And I think I should say that we increased our trust," Gorbachev added.

Bush, who voiced skepticism toward the Soviet leader's motives early in his term and whose press spokesman once called Gorbachev a "disruptive cowboy," now says the two have reached a level of "mutual understanding."

"Neither of us, when we talk, try to hide our differences," Bush said at Sunday's concluding news conference with Gorbachev. "Neither of us try to indicate that we look at exactly every problem exactly the same way."

But the very fact that we can talk with that degree of frankness without rancor, I think, enhances mutual understanding," he said.

Later, Bush told reporters aboard Air Force One that Gorbachev "is confident," he projected a certain confidence.

Even in discussing economic problems within the Soviet Union, Gorbachev "felt very open about using it," Bush said.

The informality of last December's shipboard summit at Malta and pitching horseshoes together at Camp David in June helped nurture their developing relationship, the president suggested.

Even so, there's a little hint that the two presidents are developing into fast friends or that they are able to live away their hours in small talk. It's just not that kind of relationship.

In fact, personal relations between the two men remain a bit on the formal side, largely because Gorbachev is inclined to want to get right down to work, say aides who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Don't expect to see Gorbachev out on the golf course or on a tennis court with Bush, or riding the waves in the U.S. president's speedboat.

White House insiders said that, when Bush and Gorbachev meet, there is little banter between the two about family, sports or the myriad other subjects that Bush enjoys discussing with other world leaders.

Gorbachev reportedly showed little interest in visiting Bush's vacation home on the Maine coast during his visit here earlier this year.

They did pitch horseshoes together, but the game was brief — and perhaps partly arranged for the photo, it produced, which for a while Bush hung on the wall of the presidential jet.

When the two greet each other, it's not by first names but as "Mr. President."

Bush's predecessor, Ronald Reagan, started off referring to the Soviet Union as the "evil empire" and wound up with a relationship with Gorbachev that even Bush has hinted was a bit too cozy.

Reagan told the Soviet leader he wanted to be on a "Ron" and "Mikhail" basis.

But it never caught on with Gorbachev, who continued to address Reagan as "Mr. President."

Bush and Gorbachev seem to be growing more comfortable in each other's presence, both on camera and off.

U.S. has enough fuel for winter, DOE says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Department officials cautiously predicted Monday that fuel-oil supplies will be adequate this winter — but only if the weather isn't severe, if refineries avoid operating problems and if Midwest developments don't disrupt oil shipments further.

Several congressmen complained that the assessment was based on "rosy assumptions" and suggested that it provides little comfort to Americans relying on oil to heat homes and factories.

"There now is a very small margin of safety," said Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind., and chairman of the House energy and power subcommittee. The Energy Department "tends to underestimate what can go wrong," he complained.

Kent, head of the administration, told Sharp's subcommittee that the supply of refined petroleum products — gasoline, heating oil and jet fuel — will be tight with refineries producing near their capacities.

But he said U.S. petroleum stocks "appear adequate." The agency estimated that while the worldwide crude oil shortage is expected to still be about 1 million barrels a day during the last three months of the year, "the shortage can be handled" as higher prices dampen demand.

But Kent said significant supply problems could emerge if developments in the Midwest further reduce supplies or if the winter is abnormally cold. Operational problems at refineries, which have been running at higher than normal capacity, and extensive hoarding could cause localized shortages, he suggested.

The agency collects and analyzes world energy data.

Sharp and several other congressmen returned to release oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The president should consider "at least a modest" drawdown of the 590-million barrel reserve "to get confidence up and hopefully force prices down," Sharp said.

The Bush administration has said tapping the reserve is not needed at this time. Energy Department officials said last week the reserves will be used if there are "significant supply interruptions."

Rep. Terry Bruce, D-Ill., said he is "nervous" about the slim margin in refining capacity. "I fear we will run out of heating oil, gasoline and jet fuel," said Bruce.

But Kent said the capacity to refine crude is 300 in the United States and elsewhere "appears to be adequate — and will remain so over the next three to six months."

Dewey Mark, speaking for the National Petroleum Refiners Association, said he wasn't as certain that lost imports of refined products could be made up. "The supply balance is tight."

"As a refinery, when you're operating at 90 percent you're effectively running wide open," he told the subcommittee.

Kent gave "little assessments on the expected supply of various refined crude oil products."

Heating Oil — Current stocks are "well above normal" and rising. Supplies in the Northeast, which relies heavily on oil to heat homes and factories, are 16 percent above last year. The stocks "appear to be adequate barring any unusually cold weather or refinery breakdowns."

Gasoline — Localized supply problems could develop. Inventories are at the lowest level since July 1987 — 3.9 million barrels above the operating inventory, required to prevent shortages. But the stocks, while tight, "should be adequate to see us through the fourth quarter." His assessment did not extend into 1991.

Jet Fuel — Supply is above last year's levels but still tight and problems could develop late in the winter. Demand from the military is 300,000 barrels a day greater than normal because of the Persian Gulf deployment.

Panel considers trial run of cameras in courtrooms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans soon could be getting their first televised glimpse of federal court proceedings.

A five-judge study committee is recommending a three-year, carefully-controlled experiment that would allow cameras and radio equipment to record civil trials in federal courtrooms.

The U.S. Judicial Conference, the policy-making arm of the federal courts, will meet Wednesday to consider the proposal. If the conference agrees, a handful of courtrooms could be open to cameras by July.

The plan envisions a variety of uses for the cameras, including airing the highlights of testimony on the evening news or the full trial on cable-TV.

The cameras also could tape the day's proceedings for a federal court juror who is sick and unable to attend the trial.

And closed-circuit video systems would allow officials to maintain security surveillance of the courtroom.

Until last month, the opposition cameras in court by federal judges appeared unwelcome.

But on the eve of the Judicial Conference's semi-annual meeting, that appears to be changing.

The judicial conference is headed by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist. Rehnquist said last May that he was "by no means averse to the idea" of an experimental program permitting cameras in court. Rehnquist's predecessor, Warren Burger, was "dead set against the idea." "Over my dead body," Burger reportedly said of a proposal to televise Supreme Court proceedings.

- July 21: Doe expels the U.S. military attaché, accuses the head of the U.S. mission of providing support to the rebels and urging government troops to defect.
- July 25: A senior rebel group led by Prince Johnson shoots their way into the capital's center.
- July 26: Government troops kill 90 to 600 people sheltered in a refugee compound in Monrovia.
- Aug. 5: Johnson says he is ordering the arrest of all foreigners in Monrovia in hope of provoking foreign intervention.
- Aug. 6: U.S. Marines rescue 59 Americans from the U.S. Embassy without firing shots or encountering resistance. Rebel leader Taylor calls on civilians and soldiers to mobilize against foreign intervention.
- Aug. 24: A truce begins as a 3,000-member West African task force arrives in Monrovia to try to end the civil war.
- Aug. 31: Nigerian rebels kill 200 foreign civilians from the five nations that make up the task force, the Ghana News Agency says.
- Sept. 8: Prince Johnson's rebel faction captures Doe during a battle in the capital's port. Johnson says he will liberate Liberia until an interim government can be installed and put Doe on trial.

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — President Samuel Doe was reported Monday to have died of a gunshot wound suffered in fighting with rebels who captured him a day earlier.

On Sunday, breakaway rebel leader Prince Johnson named himself president until elections can be held. Shortly after Doe's capture, however, a spokesman named a successor to the former Liberian leader.

And Liberia's main rebel group said Monday it would carry on fighting, dashing hopes for an early end to the 14-month-old civil war that has left more than 5,000 civilians dead.

The National Patriotic Front led by Charles Taylor, on Monday demanded withdrawal of the 3,000-strong West African force in Monrovia to quell the fighting, which has often been tribal.

Although fighters loyal to Johnson control Monrovia, Taylor's 10,000-strong army has overrun most of the rest of Liberia.

In Washington, the State Department said it had been told by reliable sources that Doe had died from a gunshot wound — suffered in a shootout Sunday with rebels loyal to Johnson.

A State Department spokesman who asked not to be identified, said U.S. officials considered the reports confirmation of the Liberian leader's death.

"We have been informed by various sources, including representatives of rebel forces, that President Doe died from a gunshot wound that he suffered in the shootout with Johnson's forces over the weekend," the spokesman said.

Doe took power in a bloody 1980 coup that ousted elitist descendants of freed American slaves who had discriminated against Liberian natives.

Johnson is from the Krahm tribe, one of 14 small tribes in Liberia. Johnson is the son of a Gio, and Taylor is of mixed American-Liberian and native ancestry.

The British Broadcasting Corporation quoted witnesses who visited a Johnson camp near Monrovia as saying Doe's mutilated body was on display there.

The witnesses quoted by the BBC did not say how Doe had died. They said, however, they watched Johnson interrogating Doe about the disappearance of millions of dollars of state funds during his 10-year rule.

Gambian President Sir Dawda Jawara, current chairman of the Economic Community of West African States, said Monday: "Now that Doe has been toppled by Prince Johnson, it might help the peace process in Liberia."

Both Johnson and Taylor had demanded that Doe step down.

But Taylor's spokesman, Tom Woewiy, said from Burkina Faso that Patriotic Front rebels would only lay down their weapons after the West African task force leaves Monrovia.

"The UN mission has failed and a prime example is the capture of Doe by the Prince Johnson group right in their headquarters," Woewiy said.

The civil war began after Taylor crossed into the West African nation of 2.3 million from Ivory Coast.

Moscow gets pizza, American-style

MOSCOW (AP) — The dough is rising, the tomato sauce is simmering and deep pans are being oiled at Pizza Hut's first two Soviet restaurants, which are set to open Tuesday in Moscow.

After three years of negotiations and seven months of construction, 100 young workers are ready to serve up American-style pizza, garlic bread, salad and apple pies for both dollars and rubles.

The opening comes one day after Pizza Hut's first restaurant opened in Beijing. The Beijing restaurant served 200 pizzas to an invitation-only crowd of Chinese and foreigners before running out of dough. By mid-afternoon, it was turning away disappointed people.

Pepsico Inc., which owns Pizza Hut, says the invitation to set up business in Moscow was initiated by the former Soviet ambassador to the United States, Anatoly Dobrynin, who frequently ate with his family at Pizza Hut in Washington, D.C.

The restaurants are technically owned by Moscow Pizza, a $10 million joint venture between Moscow's restaurant department and Pepsico's European branch.

The Soviet workers were selected from more than 3,000 applicants and received weeks of training here and in London in more than just the cooking and serving of pizza.

Andy Rafalci, regional operations director, said they had to learn to smile, not start like many Soviet restaurant workers, and recognize the body language of hungry or impatient customers.

Similar training was given when McDonald's introduced fast food to the Soviet Union eight months ago.

One of the new pizzas is on Gorky Street, a main thoroughfare. It takes 120 people and features a take-out window selling slices of pizza for rubles only.

The bigger of the two restaurants, near a large foreigners compound on Kutuzovskiy Prospekt, will have a take-out service and separate dining rooms for ruble- and dollar-paying customers.

The decor is like any other Pizza Hut, down to the red-and-white-checked tablecloths, red chairs, fake tropical plants and red roof logo.

S. Africa reveals plan for school integration

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government Monday proposed a way for segregated public schools to become integrated private schools if parents favor such a change.

The announcement by Education Minister P. W. Botha gave no indication the government intends to integrate public schools, a demand by leading anti-apartheid groups.

Public schools, which are completely funded by the government, have been segregated by race for decades under apartheid laws. However, many private schools have been integrated in recent years.

Under the government plan, parents would have to vote on whether to integrate the schools beginning next year. To pass, the proposal would require 72 percent approval with at least 80 percent of the parents voting.

If a school chose to integrate, its government funding would be phased down over several years from 100 percent to 45 percent of the amount private schools currently receive.

Germans to sell food and cigarettes to Soviet Union

EAST-BERLIN (AP) — German officials on Monday announced a "spectacular" deal to help troubled East-German farmers supply shortage-plagued Soviets with food and precious cigarettes.

The contract, estimated at $636 million, will allow East Germans to bring their packed storehouses and processing plants of millions of tons in unsold fish, livestock, butter, milk and flour.

East German stores for the past several months have been spurning rhomergroup goods in favor of Western products, and the nation's farm sector has been reeling to the point of collapse. Farmers have been the most restive section of the work-

About 255,000 tons of meat, 60,000 tons of butter, 5,000 tons of fish and more than 1 million eggs are included in the contract, officials said.

Also included in the deal is the sale of 1 billion cigarettes. The Soviet Union has been plagued by unresorted shortages of tobacco.

The contract was announced by government officials and West German Agriculture Minister Ignaz Kiechle, who will be in charge of East Germany's crumbling farm economy after the two nations unify Oct. 3.

Officials said deliveries will begin in the next few days.

Korean court says adultery ban will stand

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The Constitutional Court Monday upheld the country's prohibition of adultery is constitutional, putting an end to heated debate on the legality of extramarital affairs.

Six justices of the court, which rules on the constitutionality of laws, supported the ruling. Three others dissented.

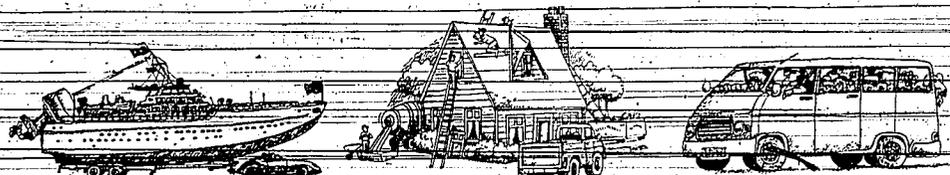

The court was acting on a complaint by a man in the southern city of Pusan, who was convicted of adultery and sentenced to two years in prison.

The court said the law banning adultery does not violate the constitutional clauses governing the right to seek human dignity, value and happiness and guaranteeing equality.

The law prohibiting adultery restricts the right to determine one's own sexual affairs, but such rights are limited in accordance with social ethics and public morality, welfare and interest, the court said.

"It is imperative that adultery remain outlawed to protect the existing marital system and harmonious family life and prevent social harms that might be caused by it," the ruling said.

Persian Gulf Bush sends Baker to Syria to coordinate anti-Iraq efforts

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Monday he would go to Syria to coordinate anti-Iraq efforts with President Hafez Assad, despite major differences that include U.S. listing of Syria as a sponsor of international terrorism.

"We have some points," Baker said, referring to the U.S. efforts to isolate Iraqi President Saddam Hussein with a strict economic boycott and to confront him with an international ground and sea force.

However, the United States considers Assad one of the more radical Arab leaders in the Middle East, and Baker acknowledged, "We continue to have some differences with Syria and we expect to discuss those differences."

In a news conference at NATO headquarters, Baker also reported that Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and the overthrown government of Kuwait would contribute $12 billion to help pay for the U.S. defense of the Persian Gulf and to assist operations, but financially by their adherence to the boycott of Iraq authorized last month by the U.N. Security Council.

Barring unforeseen expenses, the contributions would cover the estimated $6 billion the United States planned to spend in defending Saudi oil fields this year.

Baker said President Bush had directed him to go to Damascus to meet with Assad Thursday night or to talks in Moscow with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze.

"The president felt it was an important time to have a face-to-face dialogue," Baker said.

Syria, in a makeshift alliance with the United States, has sent troops to Saudi Arabia and to the United Arab Emirates to guard their oil fields against an Iraqi attack.

Over the years, the State Department has sharply condemned Syria's domestic human rights record and accused it of sponsoring terrorism against American and Israeli civilians.

Syria is one of the seven countries on the department's terrorism list, making it ineligible for U.S. military equipment, sophisticated technology and U.S. assistance in acquiring international bank loans. After an eight-year lapse Iraq was put back on the list Sept. 1.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III at NATO news conference. that they, along with the overthrown Kuwait monarchy, will contribute a total of $12 billion to the economic and military campaign against Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

While touring the Persian Gulf last week, Baker received commitments of aid — without specific amounts — from King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and President Zayid of the United Arab Emirates. Emir Jabir al Sabah of the displaced Kuwait government offered $6 billion.

Baker said roughly half of the $12 billion would go to offset costs of American efforts in the Gulf, including U.S. forces. The other half would assist poorer nations observing the boycott of Iraq.

After Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2, the Bush administration reached out to both Syria and Iraq to join the campaign against Saddam, relying on their longstanding differences with Baghdad.

Assad and Saddam head rival factions of the Baathist party while Iraq fought an eight-year war with Iraq. As Baker briefed NATO foreign ministers on the summit, Bush and Gorbachev held Sunday in Helsinki, Finland, the Iraqi news agency reported Iraq has agreed to establish diplomatic relations with Iraq.

A U.S. official said Baker had no plans to meet with Iranian representatives, while Baker said he would not go to Tehran.

"The United States has not had good relations with Syria," Baker said. "We would like to see an improvement in those relations."

Pressed why he was going to Damascus, Baker replied: "They are there."

He made no mention of Iraq's reported diplomatic reconciliation with Iran. When asked if the United States would welcome Iranian help, Baker said, "You bet we would."

The United States has no relations with Iran while maintaining ties with Syria. As for NATO participation in the anti-Iraq effort, of the 16 nations in the alliance only the United States, Turkey, Britain and France have troops in the Persian Gulf region.

Ex-hostage says Waite alive, but ill

LONDON (AP) — Terry Waite, the Anglican Church envoy held hostage in Beirut for more than 10 years, has been ill but is alive, according to a hostage, Brian Keenan, said Monday.

"He was in the same apartment as I was being held in," Keenan said in an interview with Britain's Independent Television News.

Waite's cousin, John Waite, said this was the first confirmation in more than three years that Terry was alive. "It is wonderful news," he said.

Keenan, 39, was released last month after 4½ years in captivity. He said he heard the guards calling Waite by his first name. He said he is sure they were talking to Waite, and not Terry Anderson, because he heard Waite speak and recognized his English accent.

"I know Terry Waite is alive. I know he has been ill and the illness I do not think is serious," Keenan said.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie said the news would "put fresh heart" into attempts to free the 13 remaining hostages in Beirut. They include six Americans, among them Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985 and is the longest-held captive.

Waite, 51, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving his west Beirut hotel to negotiate with the Muslim extremist group Islamic Jihad for the release of hostages.

No group has claimed to hold Waite, but he is widely believed held by Islamic Jihad.

Keenan, from Northern Ireland, was interviewed at a retreat in Ireland's County Donegal. Keenan said he believed that during his illness, Waite had a heart attack from the confinement and from poor diet.

Waite, he said, "had been kept for a long time in a room in which there was a small generator to generate electricity because the power situation in Lebanon ... they don't have any."

Non-alcoholic beer sent to troops

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A brewer has found a way around Saudi Arabia's prohibition: It's sending non-alcoholic beer to U.S. troops in the Mideast.

Anheuser-Busch Inc. announced Monday it will donate 22,000 cases of O'Doul's non-alcoholic beer to U.S. military personnel serving in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf.

The shipment will give each soldier a man or woman on duty an alternative to a six-pack.

"The beer is expected to arrive in about two weeks," said Mike Roarty, executive vice president of the brewery. It is being brewed and packaged at the company's plant in Tampa, Fla., before being trucked to Charleston, S.C., for loading aboard a ship.

Army and Air Force supply officials contacted Anheuser-Busch last week to check on the availability of a non-alcoholic beer.

Food aid would help Saddam hang on longer, analysts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allowing humanitarian food aid into Iraq may lead to enough illicit trade with the Persian Gulf nation to help Saddam Hussein hang on longer in Kuwait, U.S. analysts Monday said.

But it also relieves Iraq's critics of the moral dilemma of threatening to accept civilians with starvation in order to put pressure on Saddam, they said.

President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev agreed their summit meeting Sunday in Helsinki, Finland, that a month-old U.N. embargo against Iraq permits food shipments "in humanitarian circumstances," especially to Iraqi children.

A woman from the Amman International Fair Center pleads for food.

The United Nations Security Council must define "humanitarian circumstances," but in the meantime some nations are likely to act on their own, analysts said.

"Countries for one reason or another may use the cover of this humanitarian aid to break the embargo," said Shirren Hunter, a Middle East scholar at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a private research group.

"This is indeed a dilemma" for Bush as he seeks to keep a tight economic noose around Iraq in order to compel Saddam to withdraw his occupying army from Kuwait, she said. Iraq invaded on Aug. 2 and annexed the tiny kingdom six days later.

'Countries for one reason or another may use the cover of this humanitarian aid to break the embargo.'

— Middle East scholar Shirren Hunter

More than a month after the U.N. Security Council voted to ban trade with Iraq, the embargo is still in place. Unconfirmed reports from the Middle East on Monday said some shipments of rice and flour already were flowing into Iraq from Iran.

The two countries, which were at war from 1980-88, announced they were restoring diplomatic relations.

Bush, apparently worried that Sunday's summit announcement would be seen as a weakening of U.S. resolve against Iraq, said, "I hope that nobody around the world interprets this as our view that now there should be wholesale food shipments to Iraq."

Last week China and Iran indicated they might begin sending food and medicine to Iraq. Several other countries, including Tunisia, Yugoslavia, Romania and India, have said they might send emergency food to their citizens trapped in Kuwait.

A Red Cross official said Monday that the Geneva-based relief organization saw no evidence that people in Iraq or Kuwait were starving or being deprived of medicines.

"It is not at a critical stage," said Ann Stingle, a spokeswoman for the American Red Cross in Washington. She said the organization's assessment was based on the firsthand observations of a delegation of the International Committee of the Red Cross, which spent three days in Baghdad last week in an unsuccessful attempt to win Iraqi government approval for a Red Cross relief role.

Mrs. Stingle said the Red Cross will not participate in monitoring deliveries of U.N.-sponsored humanitarian food shipments to Iraq until the government agrees to permit the Red Cross to help all segments of the civilian population there.

We wanted a guy who was going to make a contribution on the field and the clubhouse, and that's exactly what he's done. We didn't want to turn it into a dog and pony show. It's more important that he comes here and plays well, rather than just have a father-and-son on the field so we could attract crowds.

Montana drives 49ers to last-minute win

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — You can rock Joe Montana. You can rock Joe Montana. You can chase him like a cat chase a mouse and toss him around like a rag doll.

But you don't give him the ball with any time left on the clock.

The New Orleans Saints learned that lesson well Monday night. They sacked him six times, chased him all over the Superdome, then watched as he drove the 49ers 60 yards in the final minute and a half to give the 49ers a 13-12 victory in a stumbling but successful start to their quest for a third straight Super Bowl.

"It's like fighting a rattlesnake. Give him enough time and he'll turn around and bite you," said wide receiver Eric Martin of the Saints.

The 49ers, who have seen it before, couldn't have agreed more.

"Give Joe Montana the ball with less than two minutes left and 80 percent of the time he'll win the game for you," San Francisco fullback Tom Rathman said in what might be a summary of the team's half-of-a-century career.

Montana's heroics — aided by his favorite playmates, Roger Craig, Jerry Rice and John Taylor — took place at the sight of one of Montana's greatest triumphs, the 55-10 victory over Denver last January that made the 49ers the first team in league history to win two straight NFL titles.

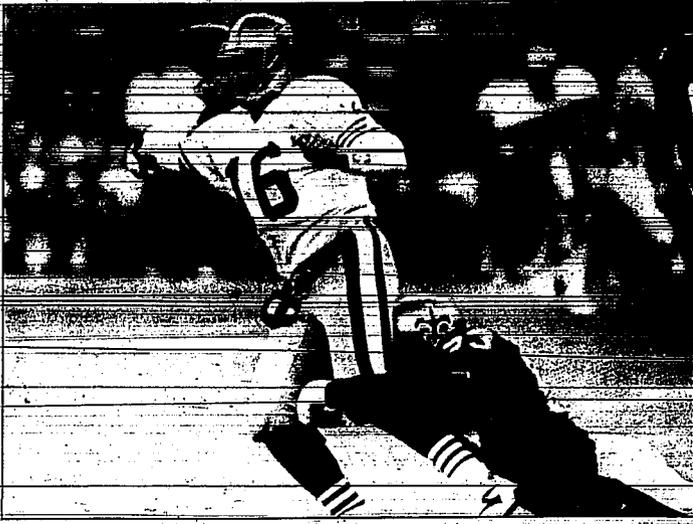

And they came suddenly after New Orleans, which got all its points on Morten Andersen's field goals, the last with 9:18 left, had stopped the 49ers after Chet Brooks recovered a Dalton Hilliard fumble at the Saints' 35. They stopped Roger Craig, forced an illegal procedure penalty and forced Mike Cofer to try a 55-yard field goal, which fell a couple of yards short.

But the Saints, who themselves self-destructed — two John Elway passes were intercepted inside the San Francisco 25 — couldn't move either. The 49ers used their timeouts and on third down, instead of running the ball to keep the clock moving, Foucaud tried to hit Brett Perrillat deep.

The ball went long, the clock stopped and the 49ers and Montana got the ball back at their 19 with 1:30 remaining.

On the first play, Montana hit Taylor for 25 yards, his longest completion of the game. On a third-down play Montana hit Craig for 11 and on the next play Rice for 20.

Then Montana casually threw the ball away to stop the clock. Cofer trotted on to the field and kicked the ball despite the efforts of the Saints' Vaughn Johnson. Through the uprisals he had missed three previous times. There were nine seconds remaining.

"It's disappointing to play as hard as we did and then lose the game," New Orleans coach Jim Mora said.

BYU shakes up AP poll with upset of Miami

The Associated Press

Brigham Young's upset of top-ranked Miami caused a major shakeup in The Associated Press college football poll on Monday, lifting Notre Dame to No. 1, catapulting BYU to No. 5 and plunging Miami to No. 10.

Notre Dame, which opens its season Saturday against Michigan, received 37 first-place votes and 1,451 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Fighting Irish were No. 2 last week.

"It doesn't matter who's ranked number one through the season," Notre Dame linebacker Michael Stonebreaker said. "The only thing that matters is who's ranked number one at the end of the season."

Auburn, which shared the No. 3 spot with Florida State last week, rose to No. 2 after beating Fullerton State 38-17. Florida State remained in third after downing East Carolina 45-24.

Auburn received eight first-place votes and 1,385 points, while Florida State received 11 first-place votes and 1,367 points.

Idaho State moved up one spot to No. 4, while Michigan jumped 11 places to No. 5 — the highest ranking for the Cougars since they won the 1984 national championship. Three voters were so impressed by BYU's 28-21 victory over Miami that they made the Cougars No. 1 on their ballots.

"The guys are really excited," BYU coach LaVell Edwards said. "But like I told them after the game, there's good news and there's bad news. The good news is that we just beat Miami. The bad news is that it's only the second game of the season."

Southern Cal, which had the week off, rose one place to No. 6. Tennessee, also moved up a notch, to No. 7, after trouncing Mississippi State 40-7.

Nebraska got one first-place and moved up two spots to No. 8 following its 60-14 rout of Northern Illinois. Big Eight rival Colorado fell three places to No. 9 after barely beating Stanford 21-17 on Thursday.

Miami dropped to No. 10, its lowest ranking since being "upset" the same "spot" in the AP preseason poll. The Hurricanes haven't been this low in a regular-season poll since the ninth week of the 1985 season, when they were No. 11.

A Rice beating Clemson for the first time in 30 tries, Virginia jumped three places to No. 11. That's the highest ranking for the Cavaliers since they were No. 9 in 1952.

Texas A&M is 12th, followed by Pittsburgh, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Clemson, Ohio State, Houston, Michigan State and Arizona. Ranking out the Top 25 are Illinois, Washington, Texas, Florida and Arizona State. Illinois fell 10 places to No. 21 after losing to Arizona 28-16 and Clemson dropped seven spots to No. 16 after falling to Virginia 20-7.

Oklahoma made the biggest jump besides BYU, climbing from No. 23 to No. 14 following a 34-14 victory over UCLA.

UCLA, Alabama, Penn State and West Virginia were also downgraded.

BOSTON — Dave Parker hit his 21st home run and Robin Yount continued his climb to the all-time hit list as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Boston Red Sox 6-1 for a split of Monday's twin-night doubleheader.

The Red Sox won the opener 5-4 as Luis Rivera keyed a four-run fourth inning with a two-run double and Greg Harris posted a career-high 13th victory. The pair left the Red Sox four games ahead of Toronto in the American League East.

Yount went 1-for-4 in the first game, breaking a tie with Lou Gehrig for 38th place among baseball's all-time hit leaders. He went 2-for-3 in the nightcap for a 2726 career hit total. The pair left the Red Sox four games ahead of Toronto in the American League East.

Mets find right-handed home cooking best

NEW YORK (AP) — As usual, home was sweet for the New York Mets.

Returning from a rocky road trip that dropped them 34 games behind the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates in the NL East, the Mets found a homegoing smooth at Shea Stadium with a 10-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"What a difference it is to be home and facing a right-hander," manager Bud Harrelson said.

Mets have had the right-handers down all season, particularly recently. Their Mets row six left-handers on their latest road trip and are just 22-27 in games started by lefties.

"This time, though, right-hander Jose DeLeon was on the mound and the Mets broke loose as they won their eighth straight at home and improved their Shea Stadium record to 47-22, the best in baseball.

Darryl Strawberry hit his 32nd homer and drove in three runs and Frank Viola won his 18th game as the Mets began the key homestand following a 4-6 road trip.

The Mets play 10 consecutive games at home, including two against the Pirates, while Pittsburgh plays 10 in a row on the road.

Strawberry, the first the Mets need to get hot, contacted for RBI single in the first inning and two-run homer in the fourth.

"You don't want to put that kind of pressure on yourself, to say you're trying to take charge," Strawberry said. "I'm just trying to be selective, not to swing at any bad pitches."

The pitch Strawberry hit was a bad one — for DeLeon.

"I tried to throw a fastball away from a strike, it wound up right over the plate," DeLeon said. "Strawberry finds a way to beat you."

DeLeon was hit by Strawberry by a home run was his fifth in 55 career at-bats against DeLeon.

The Phillies had a chance to go ahead in the eighth when they loaded the bases. But Pirates' reliever Stan Belinda (3-4) stomped the side when he got pinch-hitter Rod Beck on a forecourt at the plate on an attempted squeeze play and retired Darryl Strawberry on a fly ball.

CHICAGO (AP) — Tim Lincecum gave two hits and two RBIs and rookie Chris Nabholz won for the fifth time in his last six starts as the Montreal Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 7-4.

Nabholz (5-0), yet to lose in the majors after seven starts, pitched five innings and gave up four runs on seven hits. He struck out four and walked four before getting relief help from Dale Mahorek, Tim Lincecum got the last out for his 18th save.

Montreal broke a 4-4 tie in the fifth with two runs off loser Bill Long (6-1) on an RBI single by Wallace and RBI triple by Larry Walker.

Cubs reliever Mitch Williams, named as the starter just before game time, lasted only three innings and walked four and struck out one.

Williams replaced Mike Harkey, who developed stiffness in his right shoulder while warming up.

New Year's Day game to stay in Orange Bowl

Knights-Riddler News Service

MIAMI — The Orange Bowl Committee embraced tradition and Miami Monday, spurning a lucrative offer to jump to Joe Robbie Stadium with its New Year's Day bowl game.

Unless the city reneges on its promise to renovate the 53-year-old Orange Bowl, the bowl game will stay in downtown Miami for at least five more years.

The sealed ballot vote late Monday afternoon capped a four-hour closed-door meeting months of lobbying and a sometimes divisive debate about whether the aging Orange Bowl stadium was a fit home for one of college football's premier bowls.

In an effort to close ranks, the Orange Bowl Committee refused to disclose the tally, saying only that a majority voted to stay in the Orange Bowl.

To avoid leaks, just four Orange Bowl Committee members and the managing director, President Arthur Hertz, were present to the exact results.

Of the 115 senior and active members who were eligible to vote, only 88 assembled at the Omni Hotel to make what was probably the most controversial decision in the committee's history.

OBCE President Arthur Hertz said the Orange Bowl triumphed with more than half the members voting for it.

Mountain biking championships set

DURANGO, Colo. — Hometown favorite Ned Overend and Sara Ballantyne of Breckenridge, Colo., will be among nearly 1,000 entrants from 28 countries in the first unified World Mountain Biking Championships.

Five events for men and women — downhill, dual downhill slalom, uphill, cross-country and observed trials — will be held Tuesday through Sunday at Durango and the nearby resort communities of Tamarion and Furgatory for a total of $60,000 in prizes.

Overend, 35, is the most accomplished rider in the 15-year history of mountain bike racing. A four-time national champion, Overend has also claimed three unofficial North American world titles.

The 29-year-old Ballantyne has dominated women's competition for the past three years. She's won three world cross-country titles and three national titles.

Mountain bike competition has been held in the United States since 1983 under the auspices of the National Off-Road Bicycle Association (NORBA). In 1987, the first self-proclaimed World Championship was held in Mammoth Lakes, Calif. But a similarly titled event was also held in Europe.

In February 1989, UCI, the international governing body for races such as the Tour de France, announced the two world events would unify the following year on a rotating country basis. The next three world championships will be held in Italy, Canada and France.

In Durango, junior, senior, veteran and pro-elite athletes will compete in five events. The downhill and cross-country races will be for the world championship.

Cities seeking NL teams to plead cases

NEW YORK — Representatives from the 10 cities seeking National League expansion franchises will make presentations to the NL expansion committee on Sept. 18-19 and Sept. 28 in New York.

Eighteen groups have made bids for the two new teams, which cost $35 million and will begin playing in 1993. The league will select a short list of finalist cities by Dec. 31 and pick the new franchises by Sept. 19, 1991.

Cities that have submitted bids are Buffalo, N.Y.; Charlotte, N.C.; Denver, Miami; Nashville, Tenn.; Orlando, Fla.; Phoenix; Sacramento, Calif.; St. Petersburg, Fla. and Washington.

Griffey Sr., Bucs' Drabek earn honors

NEW YORK — Pittsburgh's Doug Drabek and Seattle's Ken Griffey Sr. were named players of the week in the National and American Leagues on Monday.

Drabek won two games for the NL, leading Pirates allowing two earned runs in 16 2-3 innings for a 1.08 earned-run average. He gave up 11 hits, walked two and struck out nine.

The 41-year-old Griffey, signed recently by the Mariners so that he could play with his son, Ken Jr., went 12-for-19 to lead all AL hitters with a .632 average. He had two doubles and a homer, drove in seven runs and led the league with a .895 slugging percentage and .682 on-base percentage.

Sunday Silence sold to Japanese Farm

NEW YORK — Sunday Silence, who last year won the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and Horse of the Year honors, was sold to Shadai Farm in Japan, the horse's previous owner announced Monday.

Stone Farm owner Arthur Hancock III did not disclose terms of the sale to Zenya Yoshida, who led the bid. Hancock, Charlie Whittingham and Dr. Ernest Giffard.

Yoshida is one of Japan's leading breeders. He currently owns Northern Taste, Japan's leading sire, as well as two other sires ranked in that country's top ten.

In fourteen career starts, Sunday Silence earned $4,968,554 with nine victories: Among the Grade I stakes, he won the Kentucky, Cup Classic and the California.

Candidates should start talking about prison needs

If Idaho political leaders haven't had the state's prisons on their agendas, the Department of Corrections' budget request should be enough to put the topic high on everyone's list.

Idaho's prison population is growing at a madcap pace. We have 2,000 inmates not counting the county jails. By 1995, the department projects as many as 3,260.

That's a 63 percent increase in only five years. The costs will be equally astounding. The department wants a 35 percent budget increase for the next two years.

It wants to hire 179 employees, a 27 percent staff increase that will bring the department's total to 1,011.

Oh, initial budget requests always get whittled down, despite bureaucrats' perennial insistence that every penny is necessary. But let's leave that question aside for now.

The point is that, no matter how we pursue and pare the department's budget, a prison population that is swelling that rapidly will consume an enormous portion of the state's resources. Sooner or later, taxpayers are going to scream.

What's a little bit disappointing is that so far this year, Idaho political candidates haven't talked much about the prison issue. It's a time they did.

What do our wanna-be governors, attorneys general and legislators propose to do about the miscreants who seem to be clamoring to live at state expense? How will we cope with our increasingly "cramped coolers"? How will we pay for this key element of public safety? One of the central questions ought to be alternatives to prison time.

We have a hunch that, no matter how many prisoners Idaho builds, they will always be full. Judges rarely tolerate an empty cell for long.

Mindful of the public's demand for stiff sentences for a growing range of crimes (drug offenses, sex crimes, child abuse, drunken driving, to name a few), judges quickly will fill every available bed in any new prison.

So the only way to keep prison costs under control is to hold down the number of prisoners, through either crime prevention or corrections alternatives.

Unfortunately, that idea often runs counter to political expediency. Candidates like to be on record in favor of harsh sentences.

The Department of Corrections' budget request reflects a desire to expand non-stunkey options.

Its 1991-92 spending plan calls for improvements in parole and probation supervision and adds two community work centers (one in the Magic Valley).

Even so, it still projects that alarming 63 percent increase in prisoners. Idaho desperately needs innovative leadership on this issue.

It's not a simple issue, and it doesn't lend itself well to slogans. But between now and Nov. 6, few issues will have more importance.

Reunions: Faces the same; hairdos not Driving across town to my high school graduating class '70 was a session. I thought "Just what am I doing here?"

Here I was, back in my hometown of Newton, Kan., 1700 miles from Twin Falls on my way to meet a group of people I hadn't seen in three decades or longer. So perhaps the second thought—"Will anyone here remember me? Or recognize me?"—was natural.

None of the repudiation was helped much when the restaurant put out a sign reading "Class of 1970 park south of building." It sounded almost like second-class treatment. But two minutes into a Friday night round of visiting and snacking, my doubts were dispelled. The first person I encountered I recognized promptly and greeted by name. The next two recognized me and called me by name. Unfortunately, I had to refer to their name tags—once they uncovered them.

From there, on it was a work-out of renewing friendships, catching up on three or four decades of lives spent all over the nation and the world (less time in some cases) for those who had attended more recent reunions), laughing, talking, smiling and mutual enjoyment.

Now, from the vantage point of a few days after the gathering, here are a few observations about the event, some of which are probably applicable to most class reunions: • Faces don't change a great deal in most instances. The same can't be said for hairdos, hairlines or waistlines.

• Often, ties among class members extend beyond high school to junior high and grade school. And some of those produce unexpected recollections. Three people spoke of cookies my mother baked and decorated and sent to the class on holidays or special occasions. And one classmate, Shirley, said, "I would have killed to be in your class in grade school just for those cookies."

• Spouses often come in for their share of attention, but it can be in an unexpected manner. My wife, Pat, and I were separated in the course of a round of conversations. She was at a corner table with one group and I was halfway across the room when someone asked me, "Who's that over at the corner table with . . . ?" I replied she was my wife.

• That word was quickly passed back to one of the original inquirers, who walked over, pointed at both of us and announced to the room in general, "She's Dale's wife," and then added, "She's with him." The puffing died down a minute or so later. . . . Humorous or mildly embarrassing incidents of school days crop up often. But at least no one mentioned (to me, anyhow) the April Fool's morning in Miss Whitford's geometry class when I unintentionally picked up the loaded blackboard eraser intended for her. A blazing match head tends to divert thoughts from demonstrating theorems and angles in a hurry.

• And those who are not present—either because of conflicting events or illness or death—are remembered and asked about. One name seems to bring on another. . . . And as the final gathering on Sunday morning—a brunch featuring "coffee, juice, rolls and memories"—Bobbie, one of the prime movers in organizing the reunion, observed that if the smiles on the faces of those present were any indication, the weekend was a success.

Probably most of those present would concur.

Before the class of 1950 scattered to homes in Kansas, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Georgia, California and other states (I regret to meet again in the summer of 1995).

Am I planning to return? You bet!

Appalled that ABC airs 'Rosey'

I am writing concerning the Saturday morning program aired on Channel 6, Friday. I was appalled at the contents of the cartoons that are played to our children. The worst by far is "Rosey."

In the introduction song, Rosey is popularized by saying "she breaks all the rules and bends the rest." There were many instances where she displayed disrespect to her parents and family. She encouraged deceit and disrespect. This one comes in a "hat" who cannot show respect to her country, fellow citizens or herself. As parents, do you want your children exposed to this? I don't.

9th grade school makes sense

I would like to respond to Mary Cooke's letter in the 9/14 edition of The Times-News. In her letter she disputes the plan developed by the Twin Falls School Board for long-term growth. She specifically insisted that creating a school for ninth grade only is "judicious."

Cook gave many reasons for this, some of which are valid, but most are not. She obviously is not aware that ninth grade is currently in junior high school, not in the high school. For instance, she was astounded at the idea of having an all ninth-grade band, instead of allowing the musicians to mingle with their older, more talented musicians. But that is exactly what we have right now.

To be exact, we have two ninth grade bands, one at O. Lane and one at Stuart.

Cook also seemed to think that ninth-graders would have to compete in sports against mixed grade teams. However, this has never happened in the past. Ninth-graders have always competed against ninth-graders, even when the opponents were in high school (with rare exceptions, such as the football-soph track meet). In addition, advanced ninth-grade students have traditionally been bused to the high school for classes, so making a new school solely for ninth grade is not going to change their situation much at all.

Having ninth-graders in with the high school may be theoretically desirable, but our School Board has studied the situation and concluded that, in the case of Twin Falls, it is not economically feasible or in the best interests of the students.

The School Board is not required to act upon the results of a random poll; if the majority of voters don't like what the School Board does, then the board members will be voted out of office when they come up for reelection. All elected officials take this into account. So, Mary Cooke, get off your high horse and look at the situation with a well-informed eye.

planes for the president goes far beyond the pale.

Four hundred million dollars is enough money to build homes for 10,000 families—this in a country where thousands of families are going homeless. It is enough money to furnish a nice car for 100,000 of the thousands of children now doing without.

What is wrong with those people in Washington? Quite simply they have come to ignore the interests of the people they are supposed to serve. They run the government for their own benefit. What to do? I suggest we vote against all incumbents. Let's do what we can to throw the rascals out.

Let's get Symms out of office

I read with disgust the recent statements in The Times-News by our (as much as I hate to admit it) senator, Steve Symms, concerning what he thinks the United States should do to insure world peace now that the cold war is winding down. This man is just the way to keep us in the Cold War.

The answer to the Soviet problem is to insure that their military does not take over because of their economic ills. Let's do what we should ensure that our military does not take over. That is best done by not spending money building up the military, there's no use. We should divert the funds for S.D.T. to insure our security in the future than going forward with the S.D.T.

And one more thing, let's get Symms out of Washington. He's an embarrassment.

Drunk drivers make choices

After reading the article in your Sept. 4 issue by Mr. Leon Howard, I felt compelled to write my first letter.

Mr. Leon Howard is requesting that the Idaho Court of Appeals overturn Judge Becker's ruling that Mr. Howard's sentence of four to seven years for the death of Heidi Hempleman is a just sentence in which Mr. Howard must have been drinking, because it was unreasonable.

I wonder if Mr. Howard thinks the life sentence he has given Mr. and Mrs. Hempleman due to the loss of their daughter, Heidi Hempleman, is unreasonable.

As a member of the law enforcement community, I am expected to go about life expressing no opinions and making no waves. But as a law enforcement officer, I have seen far too many lives cut short by the most senseless means known to man—drinking and driving.

Some might say and have that Mr. Howard did not intend to kill that night. I say that Mr. Howard, and the hundreds just like him, make that choice every day when they leave a bar, party or their own home after having only a "few drinks" and then get into a 3,000-pound bullet and point it at you and me! The next time you have had a drink and think about driving home, think about Heidi Hempleman. Mr. and Mrs. Hempleman, and the thousands of other victims.

I think about it!

Federal pay delay hurts all

Once again the American public is witnessing the ineptitudes of those who have elected to Congress, both Democrat and Republican. Each day takes us nearer the beginning of the 1991 fiscal year, but congressional action has failed to produce a budget to send to the president.

The possibility looms ever larger that in the Magic Valley alone, more than 1,000 federal government employees will find themselves on "furlough" without pay for the entire month of October, as federal spending is effectively halted. There are those in this area who say that government employees deserve whatever happens to them. But consider this: We are a part of this community, and this is where we spend our money. We spend it at the grocery store, the gas station, the shoe store, the theaters, the department stores, the restaurants. What we don't have, we can't spend, and what we don't spend, the local merchants will not receive.

A month without pay is in effect a loss of over eight percent of our wages. Because a dollar turns over several times in the local economy, that's a lot more than eight percent lost to local business. The ultimate losers are the local business and the local citizens in our community, not just the federal government employees.

Perhaps the question we ought to be asking Congressmen Stallings and Sen. McClure and Symms is not what their stands are on abortion or nuclear weapons or the savings and loan problem, but what are they going to help force a responsible federal budget so that our country doesn't go bankrupt, including our own Magic Valley. Ask them NOW.

Buhl teachers want what's fair

I am president of the Buhl Education Association. On Sept. 6, The Times-News printed a front-page story about the disagreement between the Buhl Board of Education and the BEA regarding what is an appropriate salary.

Many young people in high school and college are deciding right now what profession they will pursue. We want the best and brightest to be attracted to our profession (teaching).

The teachers of Buhl realize that struggling so publicly for a decent salary may appear unseemly to some citizens. So be it. The teachers of Buhl are struggling not just for themselves and their families, but a noble struggle in itself—but for young people as well.

Even though the board has received a generous appropriation from the state Legislature, they are proposing to establish a base salary of only $16,300 and a total cost far below what they could offer. In contrast, the average base salary in the Magic Valley this year is over $17,000.

Buhl teachers are paid over $2,300 below the average salary in Idaho. This is especially distressing when one realizes that Idaho teachers themselves remain some of the lowest paid teachers in the nation. Simply stated, the Board's proposal—if accepted by the BEA—would bring this sensitive to young people to join the teaching profession.

We applaud the sentiment and attitude in the Twin Falls District this year. The sides there came to an amicable settlement which included approximately 12 percent raises for Twin Falls teachers—plus other benefits.

In Buhl, by contrast, a board negotiator instructed us by calling us spoiled for existing on higher salaries.

Frankly, the Buhl teachers will no longer accept such demeaning tactics quietly or a proposal which is far below the fiscal ability of the district to pay.

Seattle-area women return from Kuwait

SEATTLE (AP) — Two Seattle-area women, including one who dressed as a Palestinian to escape Kuwait, returned to the United States Monday with narrow tales of their time in the occupied country.

Rhonda Mased landed at Seattle Tacoma International Airport at 2:15 p.m. with her Jordanian husband and three children.

Holly Van Rossum of Bremerton also arrived early Monday with her two daughters, but left her husband behind in a hideout in Kuwait City.

"It wasn't an easy choice," Mrs. Van Rossum said in a telephone interview Monday. "If we had an opportunity to get the children out we had to do that. My husband said it was easier for him if he knew they were safe."

"Things were starting to get tense. They had started rounding up civilians."

Mrs. Van Rossum, 35, said that since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, she and her two daughters, Cara, 9, and Brianna, 6, moved to three different "safe homes" in Kuwait City and suburban towns to hide from Iraqi soldiers. When she left her husband, Tom, last Thursday, food was limited to canned goods and dried foods.

While the majority of Kuwaiti citizens were not cooperating with the Iraqi soldiers, some Arabs and Kuwaitis were turning over foreigners they knew were hiding out, Mrs. Van Rossum said.

Confined indoors, those in hiding occupied themselves by reading,

Friends and relatives greet Holly Van Rossum and her children—watching, videos, exercising and playing games, Mrs. Van Rossum said. Some were even trying to give up smoking, she said.

Utah National Guard members head for Middle East

FORT CARSON, Colo. (AP) — Eighteen Utah Army National Guard soldiers have left for Fort Bragg, N.C., for warlike training at this post. Eighteen linguists from the Draper-based 142nd Military Intelligence Battalion left nearby Colorado Springs on a regularly scheduled commercial flight at about 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

The Utah troops were called to active duty on Aug. 24 and left Utah Aug. 27-28. They have spent the time getting weapons and chemical intelligence operations. They will transfer to a military training at Fort Bragg, N.C., before proceeding to the Middle East.

"At this point I am leaning toward negotiation," she said. "I think of the people in hiding. If you start shooting, I had to ask myself, 'Did I want hundreds of people to die just so I could be saved?'" she said. "I had to say no."

Tom Van Rossum began working last March as a computer engineer for Kuwait Oil Co. His wife and daughters joined him Aug. 2, just a few hours before Iraqi troops swept into the tiny Persian Gulf emirate.

Mrs. Van Rossum and her daughters were airlifted to Jordan along with 165 other American evacuees last Friday.

Meanwhile, Rhonda Mased, 32, her husband, Zuhair Mased, and children, Jalal, 6, Faisal, 4, and Sheri, 2, flew into Seattle after first touching down in Charleston, S.C., Sunday evening on a plane loaded with evacuees from Kuwait.

"All she could do was shake, the relief was so great," said Rhonda's mother, Elizabeth Cox of Seattle. "They are tired, very traumatized. The children are well, not quite so traumatized."

Upper Snake schools show pupil gains

IDAHO FALLS — Twelve of 17 school districts in the Upper Snake River valley posted enrollment gains this fall, and taxpayers in at least one will pay more as a result.

The largest rises occurred in the Bonneville, Idaho Falls, Madison, Shelley and Teton school districts, while small declines were logged in Arco, Mackay and Ririe.

Idaho Falls School District had the greatest growth. Superintendent Jerry Jacobson said tentative figures show enrollment jumped from 9,745 to 10,194, a increase of 441 students.

Enrollment is so heavy the School Board Monday moved to request an emergency levy available to districts with substantial population growth. District business director Ken Bohow said Idaho rates tax not employed the levy in at least 20 years.

Idaho Falls woman greets ex-hostages

IDAHO FALLS — An Idaho Falls woman is being reunited with her mother and sister-in-law following their return to the United States after five weeks in hiding in Kuwait.

But the father and brother of victim Edson remain in hiding in the capital of the Iraq-occupied nation.

Edson's mother, Lucille Hughes of Albuquerque, and her sister-in-law Marie Latham arrived at the United States Sunday night. They flew from South Carolina to New Mexico on Monday.

The first leg of their return to America from Amman, Jordan, took 21 hours, Edson said.

"She was never so glad to be out of anything in her life," Edson said. "She was crying and asked, 'How is everybody?' ... She said we've got to remember it's not the people over there who hate us; it's this crazy man Saddam Hussein."

Hunters say county officials 'sold out'

IDAHO FALLS — Hunters angry about the closure of a road into the Caribou National Forest say the Bonneville County commissioners "sold out" the public.

The point of contention is a two-mile stretch of Antelope Creek Road that leads to part of Trail Creek Road, about 15 miles southeast of Ririe.

Landowners along the two roads, the main access to about 10,000 acres of the forest, have posted Antelope Creek Road and erected two locked gates.

The Bonneville County commissioners contend Antelope Creek Road is a public road. But they acknowledge the east fork of Antelope Creek Road was formally abandoned as early as the 1940s.

Negotiations have been fruitless and a court battle may be in the offing, said Blake Hall, Bonneville County deputy prosecutor.

Woman sues passengers in wreck

MOSCOW — After settling out of court against a drunk-driving University of Idaho student who killed her son, a mother has sued the passengers and a fraternity.

Last March, Esther Louise McCall settled out of court against Ronald H. Nelson, who swerved into her car north of Pocatello, killing her 3-year-old son and debilitating her with injuries. But the driver was not the only one responsible, she contends.

Her 2nd District lawsuit claims the three passengers in the pickup and the Sigma Nu fraternity contributed to the crash.

"It's important that people understand when they're accomplices to crimes, especially felony crimes, that they're responsible for their actions," she said.

Bannock County police dog flunks out

POCATELLO — The Bannock County Sheriff Department's new police dog has flunked out of school.

Determined to be too passive for a police canine, the German shepherd named Irik has been returned to the kennel at his Utahama training school.

"He is only 15 months old and was just too young to be a police dog," Under Sheriff Lorin Nielsen said. "They hope he will grow up a little and can come back to training."

Nielsen said the school has replaced Irik with a 3-year-old sable German shepherd named Cero. An officer from Bannock County is already training with the new dog, which is reported to be doing well.

State law allows jailing of mentally ill

BOISE — Idaho law allows mentally ill people facing involuntary psychiatric treatment to be placed in jail up to 24 hours who have not been charged with a crime.

Bill Ada County is contemplating a change in the routine practice. County commissioners, Sheriff Vaughn Killeen, Prosecutor Greg Bower and other officials have authorized a general study aimed at helping the county do a more efficient job of dealing with cases involving people who do not necessarily want treatment for their mental illnesses.

County and National Mental Health Institute officials with such a law. National mental health advocates decry the practice, saying it is harmful, even dangerous to mix prisoners and mentally ill people.

Pilots collide, die while watching moose

HEALY, Alaska — Two small planes collided and both pilots were killed, apparently because they were watching a moose on the ground, investigators said Monday.

The bodies of Richard Halstead, 39, and Lawrence Schneider, 52, both of Fairbanks, were recovered Sunday, a day after the crash 13 miles east of the Parks Highway near Denali National Park, said Roger Ellis of the Alaska State Troopers. Schneider had relative hunting-moose near the site, but investigators did not know why Halstead was flying in the area, Ellis said.

Ex-Utah governor treated for cancer

SALT LAKE CITY — Former Utah Gov. Scott M. Matheson has undergone chemotherapy for multiple myeloma, a cancer of the blood-forming system in the bone marrow, his family says.

Matheson, a popular two-term Democrat who stepped down in 1984, attended the University of Utah Health Sciences Center Sept. 4 and was released on Saturday, said his son, Scott M. Matheson Jr.

Matheson, 61, planned to rest and to resume his law practice and public service activities as his condition permits, his son said Monday.

Andrus hits Fairchild on campaign finances

BOISE (AP) — Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus is keeping up his attack on long-shot Republican challenger Roger Fairchild, accusing the former state senator of being "unbelievably two-faced" on the issue of campaign finance reform.

Fairchild

In a statement on Monday, Andrus said Fairchild's repeated call for a ban on campaign contributions from corporations, political action committees and all out-of-state interests and a prohibition against fund-raising during the annual legislative session contradict his own actions in past political campaigns.

"At no time in his political career has my opponent ever advocated or pressed what he is attacking this month-year," said Andrus, who is seeking an unprecedented fourth term.

"In fact, during his career in the Idaho Legislature, my opponent was one of the very largest recipients of money," he said.

Andrus said he has no explanation for which he has no explanation. He reiterated his criticism of Andrus for raising $245,000 of the $610,000 amassed for his re-election bid from out-of-state interests, along with the governor's continuing refusal to disclose his personal finances until state lawmakers legally require that disclosure of all cand-

Andrus said he decided to make campaign finance reform the top issue of his campaign because during his nine years in the state Senate he witnessed first hand how out-of-state and special-interest contributions influence Idaho's political process.

He labeled Andrus' statement "the worst kind of demagoguery imaginable for it places the blame for his own actions and lack of political leadership and integrity at the feet of another," and accused the media of complicity.

But the governor said that during Fairchild's campaign for a fifth state term in 1986, 90 percent of the total business man raised more than $24,000, 85 percent of his contributions over $50 came from corporate, business and political action committee sources.

The report shows Fairchild received substantial contributions from lobbyists and groups with interests in legislation while the 1988 Legislature was still in session.

States blast EPA on toxic waste issue

GAULF SHORES, Ala. (AP) — An alliance of 17 states charged Monday that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has turned them into toxic dumping grounds by refusing to punish states that have hazardous waste management plans.

The alliance represents states that receive more toxic waste than they ship out: were sent a survey about topics to be discussed at the meeting. One of the questions on the eight-page survey asked whether other states would be interested in joining the EPA.

Officials admit INEL plan disclaimer a mistake

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Energy Department admitted Monday it made a mistake when it published its five-year waste cleanup and management plan for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, and the government stands behind all information included in the plan.

"It was just a simple mistake," department spokesman Nick Nichols said Monday. "If not in there in the printing process when it should not have been in there."

Earlier in the day, officials of the Snake River Alliance blasted the government for inclusion of the disclaimer inside the front cover of the plan issued in May.

If it says the government does not vouch for the accuracy of the information in the plan and that the plan itself does not necessarily represent the views of the government or any of its agencies.

"If this document doesn't state our government's views or opinions, whose views does it state," Alliance spokeswoman Beatrice Brattford said.

But Nichols said the long-range plan is backed by the government and as it is revised and republished in the coming years, the disclaimer will be deleted. The plan is an early step by the department to get the public involved in its cleanup plans for the eastern Idaho facility.

Brattford contended that while the plan represents an effort by INEL to clean up years of waste at the site, "the information given to the public in the five-year plan is so questionable that citizen evaluation really isn't possible."

"It was the second time the disclaimer has shown up in a major document involving proposed government activities at INEL."

The last time was in 1987 when the disclaimer was included on the draft environmental impact statement for the now-abandoned Special Isotope Separation Project. An updated report, released the next year, did not include the disclaimer, and the government said its initial inclusion was a mistake.

The Energy Department said the disclaimer should not appear on government-written documents.

Judge rules molestation evidence justifies trial

TWIN FALLS - Prosecutors have enough evidence to try in 5th District Court a Twin Falls man charged with sexually molesting a teen-age girl, a judge ruled Friday.

Robert W. Christensen, 39, 441 Madrona St. N., was bound over by 5th District Magistrate Judge Melvin C. Edwards on one count of lewd conduct with a minor under 16.

According to the charging court papers, Christensen, 13-year-old in her home to undress, then he held her on the floor and attempted to have sexual intercourse with her.

The episode occurred in December 1987 and was reported in May 1990, according to a police detective's affidavit. The affidavit was filed against Christensen in July.

A second count of lewd conduct with a 6-year-old was dropped before Friday's hearing, according to a court clerk.

County fair ticket sales ahead of last year, manager reports

FILER - The rodeo at the Twin Falls County Fair ended last week well ahead of last year in general admission ticket sales, Manager Cindy Demoney said.

"We're doing something right," she said. According to unaudited figures, general admission ticket sales totaled $14,905 this year, 33 percent greater than last year's $11,158.

The Fair Board tried this year to reverse several years of losses at the rodeo by closing off back gates that previously allowed people to enter the arena without paying. The board is also considering other ways of saving money, including less costly rodeo contractors. Last year, the rodeo lost $20,000, but brought additional income to the fair itself.

Saturday's general admission total was $5 above last year's - $8,315, compared with $6,247.

County jail bans smoking by prisoners, employees too

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls County Jail inmates who smoke will soon get a message by quitting.

"But it was not concern for prisoners' health that prompted the county to snuff smoking in the jail starting Oct. 1. The reason was more practical," said Commissioner Jim Fraley.

"Smoking has caused a lot of problems with upticks. Burned carpets and tables and dinky ceilings and walls require cleaning and painting - maintenance that can be avoided. Prisoners also have been known to use flaming match heads as weapons on occasion.

The policy applies to jail workers as well. They will have to go outside to smoke, Fraley said.

Current inmates can smoke the cigarettes they have left but cannot buy anymore.

Secretary of State certifies electronic voting system

TWIN FALLS - The Idaho Secretary of State has certified the electronic voting system Twin Falls County wants to use in the upcoming election.

The machines will arrive at the end of September as expected, voters will use them in November, said County Clerk Richard Pence.

"Everything is on schedule," Pence said. The official letter of certification arrived last Friday. Pence had visited Boise in early August when Idaho Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa tested the machines.

The system was used in the recent Florida primary election and worked well, Pence said.

The machines will cost a little less than $50,000 and will replace the lever-operated machines county voters now use. Voters will make a pencil mark next to their candidate's name and take the completed card to a precinct judge.

Getting a new punch-card system would have cost $400,000, Pence said.

The new system is expected to tabulate election results faster and would leave an audit trail should it break down, he said. Twin Falls will be the first county in the state to use the system.

Youth center appeals state revocation of license

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

JEROME - The Southern Idaho Youth Center, which will close its doors at the end of the month, is appealing a state decision to revoke its license.

"We do care about our reputation so that was the reason (for appeal)," said the center's part-owner, John Devine.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare notified the juvenile detention center last month that it would revoke the center's license unless the center challenged the decision within 30 days.

The license is being revoked for several reasons, including high staff turnover, use of padlocks on bedroom doors and lack of a qualified administrator.

David Davis, regional director of Health and Welfare, said the department will notify the center that the license will be revoked as of Sept. 14, but the revocation will be delayed pending a hearing on Devine's appeal.

That hearing has not yet been scheduled, according to a Health and Welfare spokeswoman in Boise.

Davis, who said that if the center closes then the licensing issue is moot, was surprised by the appeal.

"It seems quite contradictory to give notice that they're going to close their doors and at the same time appeal," he said.

Devine said he's closing to help Magic Valley counties receive state grant money to build a new juvenile detention center to replace his.

"My motivation is all gone. Our mind is set. September 30th at midnight this corporation will no longer provide detention services," he said.

The "sensible thing" is for counties to purchase his facility and build a new detention center off the property, which would allow for continued detention service, Devine said.

Despite closing, Devine doesn't want a tainted reputation.

"They're wrong, so we're in disagreement," he said. "Our reputation is important to us."

Six Magic Valley counties are evaluating whether to jointly construct and operate a regional juvenile detention center.

In addition to the problems cited by the Department of Health and Welfare, several detainees escaped from the center in the last 10 months, and the state is investigating allegations of criminal child abuse.

Findings from that investigation have not yet been completed, according to Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan.

DJ's fans mad at Z103 over change

By Julie Ramsdew
Times-News writer

JEROME - Z-103 management apparently rattled listeners' cages last week by switching disc jockeys on the popular "Z Morning Zoo" show.

Logan Tusow, known for his free-wheeling antics on the "Zoo" show, was moved Labor Day from the 100,000-watt Top 40 format Z-103 to KARI, its 1,000-watt AM country music sister station.

He was replaced by Don Craig, a veteran of Idaho Falls radio. Since then, Tusow fans have been howling in protest and businesses have pulled advertising from Z-103.

"He could make you smile when nobody else could," said Jim Thorpe, president of Twin Falls Body & Paint and Idaho Equipment & Salvage, both of Twin Falls. Thorpe pulled his advertising.

Logan has Nutri System Weight Loss Center. "I was disappointed they pulled him off the FM," said Lowell Lytle, president of Canyon Motors Subura, who advertises on Z-103.

"I think people listen to FME more than AM. That means I probably won't spend as much. I haven't for sure made up my mind."

Pete Magee, manager of The Bearing House in Twin Falls, is imitating "Sean Logan" in the Zoo campaign. He says 1,500 bumper stickers with the slogan are being printed up and will be available later this week.

Magee also masterminded an impromptu protest on Z-103.

Heinrich new Jerome assessor

By H.H. Wain
Times-News correspondent

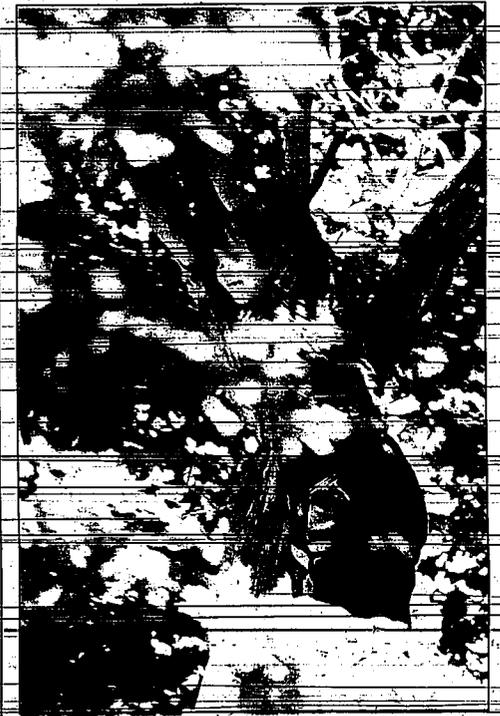

JEROME - The Jerome County commissioners have chosen Greg Heinrich to fill the vacant county assessor position.

Heinrich, 36, was selected from among three candidates nominated by the Jerome Property Assessor's Local Committee to take the assessor's job recently vacated by John Wurst, who resigned to take a management position with Cactus Pops in Jack-Pop.

Heinrich will run as a Republican in the November election for the job. He will fill temporarily starting before the month, Margaret Sisson, who is running as an independent, will oppose Heinrich for the assessor's job.

Few tickets remain for Sagan talk

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - There are billions and billions of stars in the sky, but only a few tickets remain for astronomer Carl Sagan's speech.

The College of Southern Idaho had about 70 of 1,000 tickets left late Monday for Sagan's speech.

Sagan's speech follows the chamber's annual Success Breakfast on Thursday, where the chamber's Ambassadors will award its annual "Person of the Year" award.

Sagan, perhaps best known for the Public Broadcasting System series "Cosmos," has written more than 20 books, including one that won a Pulitzer Prize. Sagan and his research associates have recently focused on the long-term effects of nuclear war. His speech Thursday will be "To Explore Other Worlds, and Safeguard This One: The Connection."

CSI Dean of Continuing Education Jerry Beck breathed a sigh of relief Monday when enough tickets were sold to cover Sagan's $25,000 speaking fee and expenses. Although expenses for the breakfast were more uncertain, Beck estimated that at least 100 tickets needed to be sold to cover the pair of events.

"It's not a fundraiser," Beck said. He set the break-even point as high as he comfortably could to keep ticket costs low - which are $35 for Chamber of Commerce members and $45 for non-members.

In addition to Sagan's speaking fee, CSI must pay for a first-class plane ticket from New York and a charter airplane for the astronomer, Beck said.

The college made about $900 after expenses for last year's success breakfast speaker, former United Nations Ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick, Beck said.

Middle school concept drove panel's choice

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twin Falls School District planners considered a variety of alternatives, including an expanded Twin Falls High School that would have had up to 3,500 students, before opting for a middle school, all-ninth-grade school and a high school addition at its 7 p.m. meeting tonight at district headquarters, 201 Main Ave. W.

The board has already adopted a long-range plan calling for the election on the recommendation of a 20-member committee that met in a three-day conference in August.

The proposal includes plans to send all ninth graders in Twin Falls to Robert Stuart Junior High School.

Members charged with discerning the school district's immediate growth needs did so with a primary goal of making education more personal, members say.

During the conference, the committee mulled options including converting Vern C. O'Leary Junior High School into a second high school, building two middle schools or expanding the high school into a "mega" school with more than double Twin Falls High's present enrollment.

School Board meets tonight

The Twin Falls School Board will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the district offices, 201 Main Ave. W.

"About every option was discussed," said Steve Wills, a committee member and principal of Harrison Elementary School.

But after 20 hours of talk by a group including businessmen, educators, parents and board members, a consensus was reached.

"The process seemed to work," Superintendent Terrell Doehmet said. "The decision that led to most of the other decisions was going to a middle school concept."

The decision goes to a middle school system for grades 6 through 8 - and to abandon the district's longstanding junior high school structure for grades 7 through 9 was an attempt to individualize education, said Davy Simcoe, the district's plant facilities director.

Instead of throwing students from an environment in which they have one teacher into a secondary school with seven or eight different teachers, middle schools provide

Despite rumors, Fairchild says he'll stay in race

"Incredible," some said. "Unprecedented," some whispered. "Not unexpected," others said.

Every political and political junkie at the Twin Falls County Fair Friday night talked about it - including Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings and Republican primary candidate Milton Erhart, who staked out a neutral zone between their respective booths in order to compare notes.

Could it be true that Republican gubernatorial candidate Roger Fairchild is abandoning his underdog bid for Idaho governor?

Fairchild had fired his staff and closed his campaign offices, some said. Others reported high-level talks were going on among GOP power brokers to determine Retiring U.S. Sen. James McClure was asked whether he might have the valley, who would step in at this late date and give Democratic incumbent Gov. Cecil Andrus a run for his campaign contributions.

One Magic Valley Republican legislator said Erhart had been making inquiries about whether he might save the valley, should he become the GOP's Johnny-come-lately candidate.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones was named as a possible replacement. Some said that was logical. Why else would

"It has no basis in fact," said Fairchild during a telephone interview from his campaign campaign offices Monday.

It seems rumors that Fairchild had pulled out - or been asked to step down - have circulated throughout the state.

When reached late Friday night, Idaho GOP Chairman Rummy Ayre said he'd heard such talk but has "no idea where it's coming from."

"If anything, he's shown a lot of grit," Ayre said.

Although just about everybody gives Fairchild little chance of actually becoming governor, the former Senate majority leader said he's poured $100,000 of his own money into his campaign and he's not about to give Andrus the satisfaction to an earlier transition, Danich said. To the district planners, a new middle school made sense financially because building a smaller middle school and adding on to the high school solved overcrowding at all three levels of the district.

At the elementary school level, it would simultaneously solve overcrowding at every school by moving the sixth grades to the middle schools.

The decision to temporarily scrap a plan for a second high school came for several reasons, including:

- A second high school would cost in the neighborhood of $12 million.

- Committee members felt respondents in a recent survey, which favored construction of a second high school, would have been less enthusiastic about the idea if they had known how much it would cost.

- If a second high school were built, ninth graders would have been moved to the high school to resolve junior high overcrowding. At least half of the committee members were concerned that 15-year-old freshmen were not mature enough to be placed with 16-, 17- and 18-year-olds in the same school.

- A second high school would not solve overcrowding in the elementary schools. Besides a new $12 million high school, the district would need to expand Stuart at a cost of about $2 million.

- If the district built a new high school it would probably have an alternative school or a vocational center.

Committee members were concerned that a separate high school could stigmatize vocational students.

A new middle school could be built that matches the advantages of O'Leary, Thornberry said. Simcoe said the district is already building ninth grade students from the two junior high schools to the high school. Moving the entire ninth grade to one school would cut transportation costs.

Beck said one of the biggest factors in favor of the ninth grade school concept was that it was the best use of available facilities. Building a middle school is cheaper than building a new high school and keeping the ninth graders in one school eliminates the need for a new high school.

A high school addition would solve overcrowding for the next decade if the city's population growth projections are accurate. A second high school could still be built by 2000 if merited.

Simcoe said committee members did not view the ninth grade school as the final solution. When enrollment increases to a level that two high schools are needed, the ninth graders could eventually be sent to two high schools.

in support of Tusow during the last day of the season Sunday at Magic Valley Speedway, where 144 "Send Logan Back" hats donated by Custom Embroidery and Argo Cap Company were done by fans. Tusow is also the announcer at the speedway.

On a day ago, Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers on Blue Lakes Boulevard had the message "Bring Back Logan - The Zoo Needs Him" on its marquee.

Assistant manager Andy Mueller said the restaurant sent a petition "with three or four pages of names" to Z-103 management protesting the move.

"Part of it, I brought on myself," Tusow said in an interview Monday. He explained that he recently told station officials that he wanted to move back into advertising sales. He said he suggested the move in year, it would be best for him to continue in the deputy assessor position.

"We did consider Martin for the position, but took his advice," Commissioner Veronica Lierman said. "Heinrich was the GOP central committee's first choice, according to Commission Chairman Carl Montgomery."

"Heinrich is a contract appraiser for the Twin Falls County assessor's office and was a staff appraiser for the Jerome assessor's office in 1985. He is certified by the State Tax Com-

He is expected to take office by the end of the month, according to Montgomery.

Heinrich and his wife, Melva, are Jerome residents. They have two children, Terry Falter, 15, and Falter, 17.

After hearing of the decision, "I walked around in a daze," he said. "I was almost sick to my stomach."

While he is "overwhelmed" by listener support, Tusow said he doesn't think Z-103 management will change its mind.

By the end of the week, he said, "I'm here somewhere, else," he added. "While I'm here, my loyalties remain here."

Meanwhile, Crigg, the new morning man, said the move was a great coming to Z-103. Listener calls have mostly been from people who want Tusow back, he said, but some people are calling to say "We're glad you're here because we didn't like him."

"I hope they'll stay with Z-103," he said. "I hope they'll give me a chance."

Although this was the second race he had lost - Erhart was also defeated in an earlier bid for the Idaho House of Representatives - the well-placed Republican said he had his eye on another Republican primary. ability for one grade would solve the perception among some parents and educators that there is a disparity in the facilities at O'Leary and Stuart.

Stuart is 16 years older than O'Leary and has a capacity of 723 students, while O'Leary can accommodate 975 students. O'Leary was also built in a more efficient and modern multi-building campus format.

Fairchild urges educational excellence

By Anita Dennis Times-News writer

WENDELL — The president of Wendell High School's National Honor Society, Chris German, invited Roger Fairchild to speak at a Monday initiation ceremony to hear his views on education.

But the Republican gubernatorial candidate did not expand on topics such as overcrowded classrooms or whether schools are underfunded. Instead, German and about 60 other students and parents heard Fairchild implore the students to "be the best you can be."

And although Fairchild, who is challenging Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus for Idaho's top executive seat, said he didn't want to discuss politics, he did tell the audience, "As a politician, I hate politics. It's a rotten, dirty business. A lot of disgusting things happen."

Fairchild

Fairchild began his address to the crowd — about one-third of which was under voting age — by saying he did not want to be political and declining to give a "warm fuzzy speech" about the promise of the next generation to lead America. Instead, he quoted filmmaker Woody Allen as saying that 90 percent of life is "just showing up" and that students that American in 1990, with corruption in business, banking and the political system,

He said he had needs people who will give the other 10 percent. "I don't think for any of us just showing up is enough. It'll get you by (but) we're at a time when we need more than just showing up."

MVRMC approves budget that would boost hospital bills 12%

By Kirk Mitchell Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's board of trustees passed a new budget Monday that would increase hospital bills by 12 percent. "We're going on passing large cost increases," said board member Jim Herrett. "We've got to be working tomorrow on next year's cost reduction measures." The board passed a $35.5 million budget that is $5.2 million, or 17 percent above last year's.

case-by-case basis. "Too often, we see it as a big bucket," he said. The biggest difference in this year's budget is one-time salary adjustments that were made so that hospital pay would be comparable with wages paid at other Idaho hospitals. Hospital Administrator John Bingham said, "The hospital hired a consultant, Management Science Associates, to make the comparisons. As a result of its findings, the hospital will pay one-shot increases of up to 15 percent, although some employees will receive no pay boosts under that adjustment. On top of that, hospital employees will receive 3 percent annual increases this year. Employees who work on-call will get 50 cents more an hour than they did last year, or $1.50 an hour. The combined salary increases and wages for new employees will cost the hospital $14.4 million, or $2.8 million more than last year. Included in the budget is a $200,000 physician recruitment fund that will be used to lure needed doctors into town. Hospital staffers project that if eight doctors, from different specialties come to Twin Falls as a result of the recruitment, they will generate $1.3 million in revenue for the hospital next year. The revenue would be greater in subsequent years because some doctors would not come to Twin Falls until late in the year. Interest expenses linked to the purchase of cancer treatment facilities and the purchase of the Doctors Park will be $2.9 million.

EchoHawk blasts Kole for his misunderstanding of anti-trust law

BOISE (AP) — Republican attorney general candidate Pat Kole's call for county prosecutors to pursue gas price-fixing in their areas is both a misunderstanding of anti-trust law and political rhetoric, opponent Larry EchoHawk says. Kole on Saturday said prosecutors have the "legal, professional and moral" duty to prosecute gas price-fixing or other crimes in their counties. He blasted EchoHawk, the Democratic Brannock County prosecutor, for not taking appropriate legal action regarding possibly unfair gasoline pricing in the county.

"Pat is apparently so anxious to attack me that he's willing to take all 44 of us to task for not doing a job we're simply not equipped to do," EchoHawk said, adding the attorney general's office has a consumer protection division specifically to work on such cases. "Anti-trust cases are among the most difficult to pursue," he said. "They are usually multi-jurisdictional, require extensive investigation and involve lengthy and highly-specialized litigation. Attorney General Jones is not doing enough to look into possible collusion on gasoline prices, and for doing a disservice to honest Idaho gasoline dealers. Jones replied he has been very aggressive in that field; while EchoHawk has made no attempt on his home turf."

But EchoHawk said no county prosecutor in Idaho has successfully pursued such cases, which usually cross county lines and are traditionally left to the state and federal government, in cooperation with local law enforcement.

Regulators OK borrowing to fix dam

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Co. Monday gained approval from state utility regulators to borrow up to $40 million to help repair a failing dam before it spews tons of sediment into the Boise river. The Kiby Dam on the Middle Fork of the Boise at the community of Atlanta is more than 80 years old and could fail with the heavy spring runoff, Norm Young told the Idaho Public Utilities Commission hearing in Boise. Young is water management chief for the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

sources are considering adding rock-filled buttresses to prevent any failure. Following testimony Monday by officials and Atlanta residents, the PUC approved a $40 million loan from the Water Resources loan to build a power diversion at the dam. The loan would only entail the power project, not strengthening the dam. Commission Chairman Joe Miller said the company does not have the revenue to service the debt for repairs. If the Water Resources money is not available, Atlanta Power would contact the PUC about private loan money, the commission said. One alternative to gain the $40 million includes a 10 percent rate loan, which would tack a 5.4-cent surcharge on monthly electrical rates for two years and drop to 3.6 cents for the final eight.

cautioned the Atlanta utility was only "20 people and change." About half of the 40 customers are permanent residents or companies; the rest are seasonal residents. "We're not going to raise the rate with such a rate increase, Atlanta Power rates could be close to those of Con-Edison, the high-priced New York utility. Young said his agency mostly was concerned with the public values of the dam, such as the fisheries. If the repairs also allowed Atlanta Power to continue to generate electricity, Water Resources welcomed them, he said. The silt contains mercury and arsenic from years of mining upstream. Young said the sediment may be 45 feet deep, with only several feet of water on the top to generate power.

Utah Lake at its lowest in 30 years

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Utah Lake has dropped to its lowest level in 30 years, according to representatives of the Board of Canal Presidents. The associated canal companies maintain the Jordan Pumping Station on the north end of Utah Lake and pump water into the Jordan River for irrigation needs in Salt Lake County. Measurements at the pumping station show the lake at that point is 6.10 feet below "normal" level, its lowest point since about 1958, the companies said. The compromise level is the point agreed upon initially in 1885 to avert a war between landowners whose property was being flooded against Salt Lake users who owned the lake water.

Lewiston wins case on appeal

BOISE (AP) — A Lewiston couple cannot contest a city annexation of property containing their environmental shop, because most of their expenses involving the shop were made after the annexation, the Idaho Court of Appeals has ruled. Robert and Elizabeth Bergamo appealed a district court decision upholding the validity of the ordinance by which Lewiston annexed their property.

The appellate court on Monday remanded the case because the district court erred in concluding a municipal entity is not subject to liability, because it is not a "person" under state statutes. The Bergamos bought city annexation of 10 acres of previously unincorporated land where they had started to build a 22-unit mobile home park, and considered an auto repair shop.

Citizens for Choice meeting set tonight

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Citizens for Choice will hold a regular business meeting at 7 p.m. tonight in room 113 of the Desert Building at the College of Southern Idaho. The group's September meeting was postponed one week due to the Twin Falls County Fair.

At the peak of the 1983 flooding, the lake reached 6.2 feet above compromise level at the Jordan station, according to station personnel. Members of the Utah Lake Landowners Association said the lake reached its peak on June 26, 1983, at 5-foot-4 inches above compromise level.

Putting on a happy face easier said than done for some people

DEAR ABBY: I'm not writing for advice. I need a favor. A couple of years ago someone wrote to you complaining because she resented being told by strangers to smile. It was obviously written by a person like me who has a naturally sad face.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

I was born with this face, and although it may look sad, it does not reflect my mood. I can be happy as a lark, yet someone will say, "Hey - cheer up. Smile. You look so sad!" This drives me up the wall!

people would think twice before they ask someone to smile.

When that article appeared in your column, I cut it out and handed it to the first person who told me to smile. She happened to be a good friend of mine. When she read it, she thought it was so great, she asked if she could keep it to put in her scrapbook. So I let her have it. How I wish I had made some copies of it before I gave it away because I am still being ordered to smile.

INSULTED: Don't let it get you down. These are the same people who say, "Gee, you look tired." (Also no compliment.) It may be comforting to know that most serious thinkers scowl and frown unconsciously when they are deeply immersed in thought. And while a smile may be "prettier," folks who go around smiling all the time for no good reason at all are often followed by a non-smiling man with a butterfly net. Have a nice day.

I hope you can find it. I'd love to see it run again. I'm sure there are other people this applies to.

DEAR ABBY: I was so amused when some of your readers mentioned how little it cost for them to be delivered into this world.

—H.K. IN BROOKFIELD, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: I wish people would stop telling me to smile. I can be walking down the street, humming a song to myself, perfectly content with the world, when someone will say, "Why don't you smile?" It makes me feel awful. I think to myself, "Gee, do I look that bad?"

I think I may hold the record. I was born around 4 a.m. on Oct. 22, 1921, in Hartford City, Ind. The delivery was at home. When my father asked the doctor, "How much do I owe you?" the doctor replied, "I drove over here on a flat; if you'll change my tire, we'll call it even."

There must be a lot of other people out there who have had this happen to them. Maybe we just have sad-looking faces, but it sure doesn't make us feel any better. (It's really an insult.)

MARGARET BALLENGER-ROADAMBLE, LA FONTAINE, IND.
DEAR ABBY: Congratulations. I doubt if anyone can top that.

Abbey, you could do all of these big favors if you'd just ask your readers to say, "Have a nice day," or make some other pleasant comment. Anything, even just "Hello," would be better than saying, "Smile."

MARGARET BALLENGER-ROADAMBLE, LA FONTAINE, IND.

Wide swings in oil prices influence market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market closed narrowly mixed Monday after a volatile session influenced by wide swings in oil prices. Trading was light.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 30 points at the close of the day, finished with a 3.96 loss at 2,615.59.

Advancing issues held a narrow edge on declines in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 777 in 739 down and 465 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 119.73 million shares, against 123.80 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 143.89 million shares. Stock prices rose sharply at the opening in buying encouraged by accounts of the weekend meeting between President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet president.

The two heads of state warned that the new measures would be taken against Iraq, which withdrew from Kuwait, which it seized in an Aug. 2 invasion.

The meeting was seen as a victory for Bush in his effort to increase pressure for a settlement of the crisis in the Persian Gulf on favorable terms for the United States.

But world oil prices, after taking a sharp drop at the outset, rebounded in the afternoon on rumors that tensions were mounting again in the Middle East. That spurred off gains in both the stock and bond markets.

Among actively traded blue chips, General Electric rose 1/4 to 61 1/4; Philip Morris 3/4 to 44 1/4; Boeing 1/4 to 47 1/4; American Express 1/4 to 24 1/4; and International Business Machines 1/4 to 105 1/4.

An American Telephone & Telegraph index of 30H and Pequot was down 1/4 to 24 1/4.

Energy stocks posted broad losses. Ingo unaccountably trying to sort out prospects for oil prices. Atlantic Richfield dropped 1/4 to 13 1/4; Mobil 1/4 to 65 1/4; Texaco 1/4 to 63 1/4; Occidental Petroleum 1/4 to 23 1/4; and Chevron 1/4 to 70 1/4.

Precious metals stocks also fell, paralyzing a drop of 910-90 amount, to 530.00 amount, in the price of gold to delivery this month on the Commodity Exchange in

New York. Newmont Gold lost 1/4 to 43 1/4; ASA Ltd. 2 to 47; Homestake Mining 1/4 to 18 1/4; and Hecla Mining 1/4 to 10 1/4.

As measured by Wilshire Associates, index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks on the American Stock Exchange rose 0.34 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slumped 1/8 to 176.70.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 2.08 to 380.57, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.77 at 321.63.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 1/8 to 581.75. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 323.21, down 56.

Nader demands retraction for Forbes magazine article

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer activist Ralph Nader ordered a retraction of a Forbes magazine cover story depicting him as a part of a vast network of organizations financed in part by rich lawyers and other special interest groups.

"It's really reckless stuff," Nader said in a telephone interview. "If they don't retract I will take them to court."

Forbes Editor James W. Michael said the article was carefully researched and "we stand by it."

The Sept. 17 edition of the business weekly said the 56-year-old Nader controlled by varying degrees 29 organizations with combined revenues of $75 million to $80 million. "I said Nader had an 'ambitious' connection with rich plaintiffs' lawyers. I said he had a vast network of organizations financed in part by rich lawyers and other special interest groups."

And "His Web of Interests" and "Nader's Secret Network" were the titles of the articles. Nader has consistently opposed changes in the damage-suit system.

It also said Nader has shown little interest in health problems related to smoking because of donations from tobacco companies, and has said little about the cost to consumers of protectionism because of his ties to organized labor.

LETTERS OF INTENT

The Area IV Agency on Aging is accepting letters of intent from organizations/businesses with a demonstrated history in providing services to senior citizens, which are interested in providing transportation services for the eight county area of south central Idaho. This service is to be provided for the period of September 1, 1991 to December 31, 1991, and may be extended one year. Letters of intent must be submitted on the form provided which may be obtained from the Area IV Agency on Aging, 1000 Washington Street, North, P.O. Box 728, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303. Deadline for submitting letters of intent is September 26, 1990.

PUBLISH: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, September 12, 13, 14, 15, 1990.

IDA, Ernest Snodgrass, Southeast National District, Fairfield Ranger District, Cameo County, Idaho

On August 29, 1990, the land of Stolston Forest, situated on the east side of a road, was surveyed and a section to issue a Road-use permit to Gary Smith, author of the location of approximately one quarter mile of road and road improvements and maintenance on approximately one half mile of road to be used in the Sampson Creek drainage, Section 2, T.1N, R.12E.

The Decision Memo and associated documents are on file in the office of the District Forester, P.O. Box 180, Fairfield, Idaho 83325.

This decision is subject to appeal pursuant to Forest Service Regulations, 36 CFR Part 217. Appeals must be filed within 45 days of the date of publication of this notice. The date of Appeals must meet the requirements of 36 CFR 217.7.

PUBLISH: Tuesday, September 11, 1990.

Eco-hero fights to save earth

Move over Superman! Batman and Spider-Man get a new superhero on the block and he plans to offer kids action-packed adventure and a chance to help save the environment.

He's Captain Planet, the ever-tugging "eco-hero" who saves our Earth, who, with the help of five young people from around the globe called Planeteers, fights a never-ending battle against eco-villains to destroy the world.

Each half hour animated episode of the series set to debut Sunday on national syndication and on WTBS on Sunday, finds the Planeteers on a new quest. In the first episode, "A Hero For Earth," the Planeteers battle a terrible oil spill instigated by a selfish, devious human. In the second, "The Day After Tomorrow," Hoggish Greedly and his sniveling sidekick Rigger. In another show, they travel to the African savannah to stop Looten Plunder, an evil scheming industrialist, from killing endangered elephants for quick profit. Whatever the problem, from garbage dumping to rainforest destruction, the Planeteers are ready. With the aid of rings given to them by Gaia, the spirit of Earth, they each control one special element of nature—Earth, Wind, Water, Fire and Heart.

The Planeteers use their powers to take on environmental disasters created by the eco-villains. "You must have faith in yourselves," Gaia tells their newly recruited Planeteers. "You're fighting for the good of our planet. When the situation becomes critical, they join their powers together to summon Captain Planet. Captain Planet uses the Planeteers' powers together to prevent the eco-villains from looking and polluting the Earth's resources. Once the problem is under control, Captain Planet returns to the Earth, leaving this message for the Planeteers: "Everywhere, Reuse it. Recycle it. Reduce it." Each episode ends with a tag including tips on how people can be a part of the solution.

Doogie's mom finds TV life interesting

Belinda Montgomery.

"Our show has a lot of girl from the home life where we treat him like a real bright kid but we don't treat him like a professional. He can talk to him, and he's still a kid to her. I like that you can talk to the teenager that he really is."

"By throwing Doogie into an adult situation, it's fun to look at how he manages," Montgomery continues. "It shows how it works or doesn't work, for a young teenager. Our show has a lot of grit, passion, comedy, and a good supporting cast... something for everyone. Steven has combined action with some kind of texture in there. He has so many ideas. He's also pretty confident of the people he has around him. To give everybody something to do every week with a number of regulars isn't an easy task. It's tough in coordinating that. This is his baby and his vehicle into showbiz."

Born in Winnipeg, Canada, Montgomery has been an actress since the age of 8, when she debuted on her father's radio show. At 18, she went to Hollywood with a contract from Universal and soon guest starred on the TV series "The Man from Atlantis," "Miami Vice" and "Aaron's Way."

Her other television appearances include "The Rocky Mountain Story" and "Bare Essence." Her film credits include "The Other Side of the Mountain (Paris and All)," and "The Omega Factor."

"You're not as crazed as if you were doing an hour show," says Montgomery of "Doogie's" format. "I'm finding it real enjoyable because I've never done a half-hour before."

THE SPOKEN WORD: "He's just the same as he always was. But now, instead of having sex with a bunch of people, he just has sex with me," order! Moore's analysis of the changes marriage and fatherhood have wrought on her husband, Bruce Willis. Moore's comments appeared in US magazine.

Friday: the anniversary of the birth of Col. Harold Sanders, better known for his Kentucky Fried Chicken fast-food chain. He started out traveling across the country in his car, cooking batches of his chicken for restaurant owners and their employees. If the restaurant was favorable, the two parties would come to an agreement; a nickel to the colonel for each chicken sold. Today, more than 1 billion chicken dinners are served annually in 58 countries.

Monday: about the man: He dropped out of school in the sixth grade and left home at age 12. He entered the restaurant business at 40 after working a string of jobs, from farmhand to insurance salesman to service station operator. He didn't start his fast-food chain until he was 65. Celebs Sleuth says an Ivana replacement is in the making

Knight-Ridder News Service

Q Once and for all — is Donald Trump dating Maria Maples? — A Donald Trump? Again? Assured! Every other week, it seems People's pressed to divulge the latest about the Donald's goings-on. It's gone a bit too far, we admit, and so here are the last words you'll be reading about Trump in this space for the next year. The question: Are Donald and Maria intimates? The answer: Yes. Yes. Yes!

Both parties deny it, but one very reputable sleuth reports that the September-May union is a reality. Donald, not yet divorced from Ivana, was at the American Bookseller's Association convention in Las Vegas recently, promoting his new book, "Surviving at the Top," you see. Random House, his publisher, whipped up a cocktail mixer at the event and promotes the book. When pin-and-ionic time arrived, his editor, Peter Osnos, went up to his hotel suite to get the man of the hour. Osnos knocked at the door, and who answered but Maria Maples — giggling and wearing a very provocative bikini. If that's not evidence of a Ivana replacement in the making, what is?

Q Is Iviva Peaks star Sherry Lynn Fenn aware that she looks like Vivien Leigh? — A "I've heard that," says Sherry, resident wuxon on Twins.

(She's the one who in an early episode, popped a cherry in her mouth and pulled out the stem, which had been tied into a perfect knot that takes to some dandy tongue tricks). She, however, isn't a terrific sold on the comparison. "Let me tell you, it's very flattering to be compared to Vivien Leigh, because she was such a fabulous actress. But those women were tragic. There was such sadness associated with them. And they got put into these boxes... they just wanted them to play the same role over and over. Not me. I just don't see myself that way. So, yes, it's flattering. But not a little higher.

Q Is it true that the Go-Go's are getting back together? — A "That's the word, but it should be noted that the all-gal band plans only a temporary reconciliation. Their spring reunion concert — an environment benefit hosted by Jane Fonda — was such a smash success that they've decided to launch a nationwide tour, the dates of which haven't yet been decided."

The planned reunion is proof positive that time indeed heals ill. After a string of early-'80s hits like "Vacation," the Go-Go's became the biggest girl group since the Supremes.

Drugs, alcohol and infighting, however, took its toll, and the girls parted ways in 1984, shortly after guitarist Jane Wiedlin bailed out.

"Obviously, drugs are completely out of the picture," says

Wiedlin, 32, referring to "the group's" new tour, outlook: "Before we let things like ego and money get in the way of the music and the fun... remember being nasty and bitchy to people. A lot of times when you get popular you kind of make fun of your fans, and the more ardent they are, the more you laugh at them. Now I feel like you really have to cherish them. I also have to keep in my head that no matter how big we become again, it doesn't last forever."

Q Didn't Laura Dern feel a little strange working with her mother, actress Diane Ladd, in the film "Wild at Heart"? — A "Actually, she relished the opportunity. She... and Ladd play movie mother and daughter in the David Lynch-directed film (Ladd spends most of the film trying to keep her away from Nicolas Cage), and they had a good old-time battling-it-out on the set."

"It's always been a desire of mine to work with my parents, so this was a wish come true," raves Dern. "The first day we did a scene together I came down the stairs and my mom pointed that finger at me: 'Don't you dare talk to that boy again!' You know, I've seen that finger for 23 years. And I started laughing; she started laughing, then the whole crew broke up — in that moment they all knew that she and I had been there before."

Dern was shocked and slightly rattled, however, at her mother's performance.

Her mother's behavior is insane, and the actress went all out in the "believability department": "At one point she was supposed to be watching my abortion, in (a) flashback where I'm on the table. David said, 'We've got to do something different, Diane.' And

AP/Las Vegas

Maria Maples answered the door, the source reported.

Mom got a lollipop and started waving it in my face, like, 'Howdy; if you're good you'll get a lollipop.' In the middle of an abortion, your mother offers you a lollipop? She came up with weirder ideas than I would have. Obviously,

'ly, we're lucky we have a good, healthy relationship — my God, can you imagine if that really was our relationship, trying to work with that person? ... It sounds like a cliché, but she's really one of my closest friends."

"Wild at Heart," really as weird as his reputation? — A Glover, 26, concedes he's worried about being misunderstood, but he has a penchant for attracting attention with his quirky behavior.

His act is such a distinctive style that he doesn't want it described in print; for fear of drawing obsessed fans; and on "Late Night With David Letterman," three years ago, he almost knocked out the host's teeth with a "comic" RKO and may republished a century-old book, "Cat Catching," noting pictures of mutilated vermin.

Stallion returns with '90s action

"He was a giant of a horse, glistening black - too big to be pure Arabian. His mane was like a crest, mounting then falling low. His neck was long and slender, and arched to the small, savagely beautiful head." — Walter Farley

The story of a wild, free and mighty stallion and the boy who tames him captured the imagination of millions through the writings of Walter Farley and the film wizardry of Francis Ford Coppola.

"The Adventures of the Black Stallion," a new, original and exclusive series starring Mickey Rooney, brings that story to television for the first time with 26 episodes debuting on The Family Channel.

"The Adventures of the Black Stallion" debuts Saturday. It will air regularly Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays on the Family Channel.

To many youngsters, the 20-year books by Farley about the adventures of a boy named Alex and the Black were the closest they got to the world of horses. Detailed and accurate in their chronicling of that world, the books transcend that ordinary bit and bridle paradigm for an almost mythical treatment of the relationship between a boy and a horse unbroken, unbridled.

"Mickey Rooney will reprise his role as the trainer from 'The in 1989 and this spring toured the country with Donald O'Connor "The Sunshine Boys."

"An 8-year-old Black Arabian stallion named Jamboree Excelsior will carry the third principal role. His trainer is Rex Peterson, who worked on both "Black Stallion" feature films and has enjoyed a long and successful career training horses for the movie industry.

The series follows the Black, the boy and trainer Henry Dalley as they criss-cross the country on the racing circuit, beginning about two years after the Black enters Alter's life.

Shocker: Lassie was Laddie

TV Data

Suppose you found out that for 20 years the star of a popular children's TV series was a female impersonator who couldn't read a single word of the script and considered all outdoors to be one big nice room? Enquaving minds, now you know the truth. But, who'd don't start a petition against Captain Kangaroo. The culprit is Lassie, that lifesaving collie.

"Lassie" (1954-74) began as the egg of a farmboy, Jeff Miller (Tommy Rettig), and the pet collie that lived with him, his mother and grandfather, Lassie, who was actually played by several male dogs, survived various cast overhauls, including stints by Cloris Leachman and June Lockhart as mom.

Near the end of the series run, Lassie had been adopted by forest rangers, and in the final season, she had solitary adventures and bore a litter of puppies.

(Well, maybe not altogether solitary.)

"Lassie" was also transformed into a Saturday morning cartoon in the mid-'70s and was recently revived as a new syndicated series.

Trainer Rudi Weatherwax (his nephew, Ken, was Bugsley on "The Addams Family") employed differently skilled dogs, depending upon the demands of each scene, to create Lassie's astounding feats.

And if revelations about Lassie's gender aren't shocking enough, it might interest you that Tommy Rettig, the young actor who played Lassie's first master, followed his TV career with a series of drug arrests. Although he admitted to using illegal substances, the charges were always dropped, his later marriage counseling service to help drug users balance their habits with a healthy lifestyle!

Arness brothers made many movies but never teamed up

By Bettelou Peterson

Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. I know James Arness and Peter Graves are real-life brothers and both have done a lot of TV and movies. Have they ever starred together? — P.L., Los Alamitos, Calif.

A. The Arness brothers of Minneapolis (Jim's now 67, Peter 65) have always been stubbornly independent. Peter followed Jim to Hollywood in 1930. Big brother Jim, aware of how hard it is to break into movies, tried to persuade him to go back to his radio and band work in the Midwest. Peter wound up making many more movies than Jim, whose time has been primarily in TV ("Gunsmoke"). They have no joint credits.

Q. Floyd of "Andy of Mayberry" is always seen sitting or standing behind something. Everyone at an office wants to know why. — J.A.H., Allen Park, Mich.

A. Howard McNear, who played Floyd, suffered a stroke during the original run of "The Andy Griffith Show" ("Andy of Mayberry"), 1960-68.

Q. I'm a fan of "Who did the Donna Reed Show?" When did the series first air and how long did it run? What are the actors and actresses who starred doing now? — J.M., Virginia Beach, Va.

A. The show was on ABC 1959-66. Reed and Carl Betz, who played the parents, both are dead. Shelley Fabares, who was daughter Mary, currently can be seen on "Coach" on ABC. Paul Alan, who was son Jeff, is out of show business.

Q. I've always admired Jimmie Walker's character on "Good Times." Tell me what Walker is doing now. — S., Camille, La.

A. Walker, now 34, does a stand-up act in comedy clubs around the country and produces comedy specials for Showtime. His fast-talking hustler on "Good Times" was not universally admired. Esther Rolle, who played his mother on the series, walked out on the show for a season because she objected to the emphasis on the character, which she felt was not a good role model.

Q. I love that new show on CBS, "Northern Exposure." It's so refreshingly different. I understand it's a summer show. Could it possibly run into the fall? Who does one write to let them know we like the show? — J.M., Portland, Ore.

A. "Exposure" is a limited summer series but it's had good reviews and encouraging ratings.

Jim Arness, known best for "Gunsmoke," is 67 now.

CBS might renew it as a mid-season replacement. The man to write is Jeff Sagansky, president, CBS Entertainment. CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

been recorded. "Beach" will be back; "Duty" won't.

Q. Is the Jester Hairston, who was in "Amecy," the same person who has written many spirituals. — W.M.M., Charlotte, N.C.

A. Hairston, 89, may be better known for his musical work than his acting, although he's been acting since the 1930s, starting with several "Tarzan" movies. He was Leroy on the radio "Amecy 'n' Andy" and Henry Van Porter in the TV western "Harrison's Sunday music at Tufts University and the Juillard School and Afro-American music with Dr. Hall-Johnson.

He did the music for "Green Pastures" both on stage and movies. For 20 years, he was choral director for movie composer Dimitri Tiomkin. He has conducted the Monthon Tabernacle Choir in his own music. He wrote and sang the spiritual "Amecy" for the soundtrack of the 1963 movie "Lilies of the Field."

Q. What is the address of "Twilight Zone"? I am an actor with a production company and we have a film we feel they could use. — N.L.O., Philadelphia.

A. "Twilight" hasn't been in production for years. The original half-hour version with Rod Serling as host ran 1959-65; the revival, with Charles Aidman narrating, was on 1985-87.

Eco-hero fights to save earth

Move over, Superman, Batman and Spiderman, there's a new superhero on the block and he plans to offer kids action-packed adventures and a chance to help save the environment.

He's Captain Planet, the ever-changing eco-hero from within our Earth, who, with the help of five young people from around the globe called Planeteers, fights to never-ending battles against eco-villains to destroy the world.

Each half hour animated episode of the series, set to debut Saturday on national syndication and on WTBS on Sunday, finds the Planeteers on a new quest. In the first episode, "A Hero For Earth," the Planeteers battle a terrible oil spill instigated by a selfish devouring human of pig-like proportions, Hogglash Greedy, and his sniveling sidekick Rigger. In another show, they travel to the African savanna to stop a crooked plunderer, an evil-scheming industrialist, from killing endangered elephants for quick profit.

Whenever the problem, from garbage dumping to rainforest destruction, the Planeteers are ready. With the aid of rangers sent to them by Gaia, the spirit of Earth, they each control one special element of nature - Earth, Wind, Water, Fire and Heart.

The Planeteers use their powers to take on environmental disasters created by the eco-villains. "You must have faith in yourselves," Gaia tells her newly recruited Planeteers. "You're fighting for the good of the whole world. When the situation becomes criti-

Doogie's mom finds TV life interesting

By Wendy Wallace
TV Data

"My manager said, 'I read a script that was insanely wonderful. I think you should have a meeting,'" says Belinda Montgomery, who stars on "Doogie Howser, M.D.," airing Wednesdays on ABC.

"It's a whole new kind of format. There was nothing like it on television, so we were breaking into new territory. And Steven Bochco, the executive producer for the show, had I back to Universal days. So we were aware of each other, but I had never worked with him."

On the series, Montgomery plays Katherine Howser, the mother of Dr. Doogie Howser (Patrick Warburton), a 15-year-old second-year resident at a major hospital. The series returns in the fall.

"For the past couple of years, I have played quite a number of mothers," says Montgomery. "But Katherine is there to teach Doogie. He's a kid, still at home, and I think it's really necessary to keep the professional life separate from the home life where we treat him like a real bright kid but we don't treat him like a professional. She can talk to him, and he's still a kid to her. I like that you can talk to the teenager that he really is."

"By throwing Doogie into an adult situation, it's fun to look at how he manages," Montgomery continues. "It shows how it works for a kid to be a teenager. Our show has a lot of gaff, pathos, comedy and a good supporting cast... something that everyone. Steven has combined action with some kind of texture in there. He has so many ideas. He's also pretty confident of the people he has around him. To give everybody something to do every week with a number of regulars isn't an easy task. It's tough to coordinate that. This is his baby and his vehicle and he loves it."

Born in Winnipeg, Canada, Montgomery has been an actress since the age of 8, when she debuted on her father's radio show. At 18, she went to Hollywood with a contract from Universal and soon guest starred on the TV series: "The Man from Atlantis," "Miami Vice" and "Aopof's Way."

Her other television appearances include "The Rocky Mountain Story" and "Bare Essence." Her film credits include "The Other Side of the Mountain (Parts I and II)" and "The Omega Factor."

"You're not as crazed as if you were doing an hour show," says Montgomery of "Doogie Howser, M.D." "I'm finding it real enjoyable because I've never done a half-hour before."

Harrison Ford learned to use shoulder belts the hard way

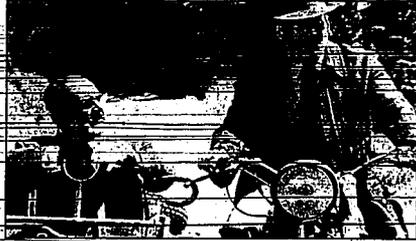

By Ryan Murphy
Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. Is that nasty scar on Harrison Ford's face really wood-grain in the wind?

A. Ford's facial scar — that strip of healed tissue on his face between his chin and lower lip — is real, but mythic. Truth of the wound-of-sorts even occurred in the film Working Girl, when he tried to convince Melanie Lynskey that he got it when "some guy pulled a knife in Detroit." In real life, his explanation is far less glamorous. The scar — a "real guy" touch — used to his advantage in his films — is the result of a safety belt mishap.

"I had one of those old Volvos," says Ford. "They were the first cars to have shoulder belts. And I was driving one morning, and I had forgotten to put on my seat belt. I reached over to take my seat belt off the hook, and my attention went to that. And I hit a high curb, and the car went up on two wheels and smashed into a telephone pole.

"I hit the steering wheel, I think. I crawled out of the car. I remember very vividly, that although my car was in the middle of the road, no one would stop. They would just creep around me at five miles an hour and keep going. I was just standing in the road, bleeding quite profusely. And it irritated me so much that no one would stop that I refused to get out of the car. So I just stayed there until somebody finally stopped, took me to the hospital. The operating doctor, as Ford's face attests, was obviously not a plastic surgeon. "Not a very good job," Ford says.

Q. Whatever become of Aaron and Candy — Spelling's "dream house"? Is it as ugly as everybody says it is?
A. If large and overblown qualify as ugly, then the Spelling's Los Angeles mansion is indeed hideous. Finally, after four years of hellish construction, the super-rich Spellings (he made his moola producing such TV classics as Char- lie's Angels and The Love Boat) will move into their palace this month.

Candy, the queen of Hollywood wives who is noted for her good grooming and creative holiday spirit (she had tons of snow dumped on the front lawn of her cold-house in couples of years before her kids could have a white Christmas), has given all to the house, and thus the delays. She went through numerous plans and designs just to make sure that the house was Candy-perfect, and now it is. Located in the Holy Hills, the mansion is $6,300 square feet, and boasts a walk-in closet (actually, a room) for her clothes that would make Nancy Reagan salivate.

So far is the home that the Sultan of Brunei is said to have offered $36 million for the estate, but the Spellings said no thanks.

Q. Why did Carol Burnett's marriage break up?

A. Burnett's marriage to producer Joe Hamilton (who oversaw her long-running variety hour for 11 years) was for a long time, a wacky happy, if slightly ungal, one. "The kids ... never heard Joe and me raise our voices to each other," Burnett remembers. "Dinner with the kids was at 6:30 on the dot, and nothing unpleasant could be discussed dinner. We were like a TV family."

Gradually, however, the pressure of such a perfect existence got to be too much for both parties. "Joe and I were out from the same club," she says. "He studied his feelings the way I did. We never had arguments, just silences. I would keep grievance lists in my head, and I'm sure he did the same thing. We were on parallel lines. That kills a relationship."

"When Joe and I parted ways in 1982, most of the pain had already taken place — a like a stop ripping away of a very sticky Band-Aid on a hairy spot. For a long time I had been walking on eggshells, feeling dishonest to Joe, to the

Carol Burnett: "We were like a TV family."

"When you can finally be as honest as possible about anything, without being deliberately cruel, it's a wonderful feeling."

After several years of living alone, Burnett says she is slowly coming to grips with herself. She has learned, she says, that keeping feelings bottled up as she did in her marriage is a dangerous thing.

"I'm learning that people don't hate you when you speak your real feelings or say no, when you stop pussy-footing around and make your inside match your mask," she says. "When you really do confront your demons, it's as if you've just come out of the dentist and your teeth are cleaned and he's said, 'I don't have to see you again for a year. You're perfect.'"

Streisand's 'Wholesale' eventually led to big bucks — retail

Q. Please tell me how Barbra Streisand really got her start. Her voice didn't get recognized overnight, did it? — M.S., Philadelphia Barbra Streisand started out with an amateur contract.

A. Streisand worked hard on getting a break-in show business from the time she was a Brooklyn schoolgirl. She won a nightclub amateur contest, then did several modest nightclub stints and appeared with Jack Paar on the "Tonight" show. Her breakthrough came in 1962 in the musical "I Can Get It for Your Wholesale." The show wasn't a hit but Streisand's Miss Marmelstein enchanted the critics and won her a New York Critics Circle Award. She was 20.

Q. I really enjoyed Jeff Daniels in the TV movie "No Place Like Home." Tell me his other movies and some personal statistics. — S.G., Troy, Mich.

On TV, he's done "The Canine Mutiny Court Martial," "A Rumor of War" and the series "Breaking Away." He's married, father to two sons.

Q. I remember Peggy Ann Gardner from 1945 and I know she died recently. What happened in between? How did she die? — N.S. Aurora, Colo.

A. You've confused former child-actress Peggy Ann Garner, now 59 and alive, with movie siren Ava Gardner, 67, who died in January 1990 of pneumonia in London, England, which had been her home for many years. Garner's most famous film was 1945's "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" but she went on to make other movies — in the 50s, then appeared in Broadway plays and on tour. Most recently, she has been a Los Angeles businesswoman.

Q. What happened to the film, "Gavin"? What's his age, his family, his current work? I loved him in "Back Street." — D.K.D., Mullica Hill, N.J.

A. Gavin, 60, was the center of a diplomatic stir when the Reagan administration appointed him ambassador to Mexico in 1981. Mexicans were insulted at first. But he was a former CIA agent and American actually had credentials for the job, including diplomatic experience in Pan American affairs. He returned to California when his tour was done. It is married to actress Constance Tower; last seen in the CBS song "Capitol." They have three daughters.

Peerless lived up to its claims but was soon forgotten

The Peerless (1900-1931) is the forgotten classic.

You could visit a dozen antique car museums and not see a single Peerless in most long rows of shiny cars. What a mistake that public with a flashy car for the attention of both car and star, it could have been a Duesenberg, Packard, or Stutz, but never a Peerless. Some of the big Peerless sights of 1924-1925 are now owned by the Classic Car Club of America as classic cars.

Peerless has been making household appliances and bicycles for years before plunging into the booming automobile business in Cleveland in 1900. Their first cars were little bug-like vehicles, but by 1902 they had progressed to the point where they had a vertical two-cylinder engine, a selective sliding gear transmission, shaft drive to the rear axle, and a push-button layout that became conventional for the industry for the next three quarters of a century.

Several other car builders came to the same conclusion at about the same time, leaping ahead of the backward makers that were still hiding the engine under the seat with a chain connecting the engine to the drive wheels. The 1902 Peerless looked more like our idea of a car; it even had four headlights; two kerosene lamps on the cowl and two acetylene lamps up in front of the windshield.

The Peerless was advertised as "A powerful, elegant, hill climbing touring car, easy to operate and luxurious in finish." You couldn't ask for much more than that, and the Peerless was right. To prove it, the company jumped into racing in a big way.

They hired the famous Barney Oldfield and other professional drivers to run their cars—and the money paid off; the cars won races and set new speed records. After Oldfield proved that the specially prepared racing cars were fast, the company claimed that any stock

Peerless could run at a mile a minute. (I would have wanted to witness a suitable road for the test; those were not freeways in those days.)

Oldfield came close to killing himself several times while driving for Peerless. A Peerless made a non-stop run of 1,000 miles in 1905, and the cars did well in hill climbing contests.

In 1907 Peerless announced a new six-cylinder car and continued to build a four. "All that the

1929 Peerless

Those famous movie stars posed with lots of cars, but never with a Peerless.

Name implies was the Peerless slogan. An electric starter was incorporated in 1913, and in 1915 a V-8 engine of advanced design was added to the line. About that time Peerless also built some heavy trucks.

For several years every Peerless had the V-8 engine until a new lower priced six was added in 1924. For the first time in company history, Peerless bought Continental engines for their six cylinder 1925 models. The company went through several management changes—but it remained in strong financial condition. Export sales were good.

In 1929 the old V-8 engine was replaced by a continental straight eight. For 1930 the cars were radically restyled and they were the smoothest looking cars Peerless ever built. Sales were not good, and as a last ditch effort Peerless built a prototype of a small run minimum car with a 16 cylinder engine. But it was too late; Peerless built its last car in 1931.

Here's just what the doctor ordered for your pesky car trouble

By Bill Gordon
Orlando Sentinel

Q. Can an engine that overheats blow apart if the coolant reservoir tank is full, i.e., winter springs, Florida.

A. The very worst that could happen is that the engine might blow a cylinder head gasket. It also is possible that the cylinder head or block could warp if the engine became extremely overheated. Radiator caps usually pressurize the car's cooling system at between 14 pounds to 18 pounds. If the engine is hot enough to cause the coolant to boil and the system pressure to rise above the radiator cap tolerance, a spring in the cap will release the pressure and cause clouds of steam to come billowing out from under the hood. Most motorists would turn off their engines at this time and seek help. You have to try very hard to see a spring to blow apart by overheating it.

Q. I have a 1984 Nissan 4X4 with a four-cylinder engine. It just doesn't give me the power I need when I put my small camper on the back. I would like to replace the engine with a six-cylinder. Is this possible? If so, which engine should I use? J.B., Titusville, Fla.

A. Your best bet is to trade your Nissan for a sport utility vehicle with a bigger engine. It would cost far too much to replace the four-cylinder engine in your Nissan with a six-cylinder engine. Not only would the new engine be costly, but you'd probably need a different transmission, heavy duty suspension for the bigger engine, a different cooling system and you'd have to alter the vehicle's wiring harness. It would be a colossal nightmare to swap engines.

Q. I have a 1986 Chevrolet Celebrity that seems a bit hard to steer, especially when I start it in the morning. The steering gets a bit easier when it has been on the road awhile. A mechanic told me it would cost $800 to fix the problem and that he couldn't do anything to keep it from getting worse. What can I do? Mrs. L.P., Norton, Ohio

A. If you have been using the wrong fluid in your power-steering system, there's a chance it could have damaged your power steering system.

I would take the car to another mechanic and have him check the pump, make sure the fan belt is tight and check to see if the system has the correct type and the proper amount of fluid. If all these things are in order and the car is still hard to steer you will be in for a major repair. The $800 estimate sounds about right to overhaul the entire system.

Q. I just bought a new Toyota Cressida and I am thinking of installing a bra to protect the front from rocks chipping the paint. I've heard conflicting opinions. Some say that a bra will cause paint discoloration? What do you say? C.N., Fairborn, Ohio

A. Most new car paint jobs come with a clear coat that finishes to protect the paint from the elements. I would not worry about discoloration. It would be a good idea to remove the bra each time you wash the car.

Always try to keep your sultans straight

Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. Why are some rulers in the Arab world called emirs, while others are called kings, and still others are called sultans?

A. Jordan, Morocco and Saudi Arabia are kingdoms. Kuwait, Qatar and Bahrain are emirates, as are the tiny states that make up the United Arab Emirates. The only sultanate left is Oman. Frankly, we'd be sultans if we had the choice. We'd wear insanely baggy silk pants and play with sharp sabers. The title "king" seems more dignified, too stuffy, inhibiting, and you'd probably have to wear a really embarrassing crown.

Fortunately we dug up an experienced Middle East foreign service officer who understood the distinctions. A king is almost the same thing as a sultan, and both have more power than an emir.

There are real kings and fake kings. Fake kings are like the ones in England, who are rubber stamps for the real government, the parliament. Saudi Arabia has a real King. That's why the country is called Saudi Arabia, because it is ruled by the Saud family. King Fahd is picked by the family and has virtually absolute power. He gets to appoint everyone in the government. He's the final court of appeal. He doesn't mess around with democracy. But we Americans still love the guy, because he's got so much oil.

The head-turning quotient in the youth market is high

PONTIAC, Mich. — 1991 model production of one of America's well-known sports cars, the Pontiac Firebird, began in February at General Motors' assembly plant in Van Nuys, Calif.

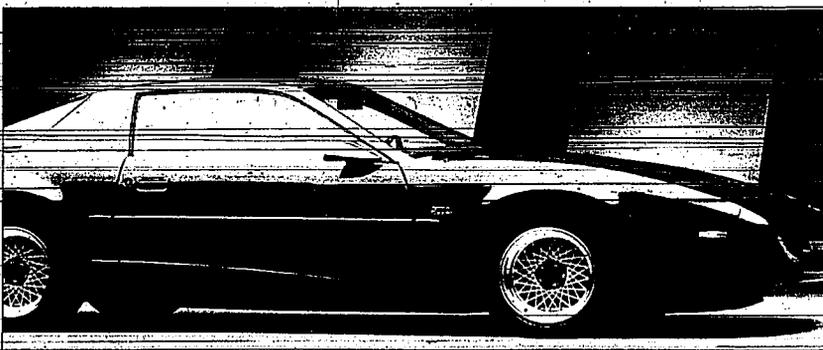

New features include revised front and rear fascias, fog lamps, headlamps, taillamps and spoilers. The car is available in metallic white and dark green-metallic.

"Firebirds have always had a high head-turning quotient," said Pontiac General Manager John G. Middlebrook. "These new Firebirds, along with the new Grand Prix STE sport sedan, should keep Pontiac a key player in the important youth market."

The standard Firebird model accounts for about 75 percent of all Firebird sales.

Formula Firebird accounts for 16 percent of Firebird sales.

The popular Trans Am accounts for 5 percent of Firebird sales.

The 1991 Pontiac Firebird Trans AM GTA is a sports car designed to send you off in high style.

Do you know your clutch?

Old timers may remember the days of the sputtering, jerking and chattering clutch. Although modern clutches seldom need servicing, a "stick shift" driver does need to be sensitive to the feel and operation of his vehicle's clutch with, on a manual transmission vehicle, transmits engine power from the engine to the transmission.

Here are a few clutch-saving tips from the Car Care Council:

- Each time you engage the clutch there is wear produced from friction and, consequently, wear. To minimize slippage, engage it as quickly as possible without causing the car to jerk.
- Do not use your clutch to prevent "drifting" backward when starting on an uphill grade. This increases wear of the clutch mechanism. Instead, use your brake.
- When you come to a stop, keep your right foot on the clutch pedal and your left foot on the clutch pedal to the brake. This saves wear and tear on the throw-out bearing.
- Stay cool if you get stuck.

Be gentle on your vehicle when trying to extricate yourself from ice, snow, mud or sand. Fast wheel spinning or rapid rocking back and forth can overheat the clutch and transmit vibration to the engine.

When a clutch wears usually because of pressure plate or clutch friction disc wear, it may chatter or slip. As the condition gets worse the engine will speed up with little or no power at the wheels.

Most cars today have no clutch adjustment—other than the linkage (or pedal travel). Excessive wear generally calls for rebranding of the clutch mechanism, including a new pressure plate and throw-out bearing.

If your car acts like it has clutch problems, don't delay; consult a qualified technician to prevent further damage. Don't ignore the signs of clutch trouble.

With normal use the clutch should last the life of the car, concludes the Council. Abuse it, and your car may feel like it's in neutral when you're ready to go.

More for less has a pleasant ring

The Eagle Summit is not going to bow over in any of the important categories, such as ride, roominess, comfort and performance. Cars with base prices of less than $9,000 almost never do.

But this small, attractive front drive sedan does leave a lasting impression because it scores reasonably well in so many categories and does so for such a reasonable amount of money.

It is, for openers, an unpretentious handsome little machine. The car has a very clean, contemporary look with just the right amount of wedge aggression. The interior styling is crisp and uncluttered and probably looks better than it should at these prices. Even the interior of the most inexpensive Summit—which is what I tested—is not cheap-looking.

The Summit also is surprisingly roomy for a car that's only 170 inches long and checks in at a 170-weight 2,271-pounder. You can actually store two adults on the back seat. (Predictably, there is a flip side to that relative roominess: a small 10.3-cubic-foot trunk.)

The base Summit also drives pleasantly. It handles well, and its steering is responsive. The seating is comfortable and supportive, and the instruments and gauges are pleasant for good accessibility. Visibility is good. The car feels solid and has less wind, road and engine noise than most compact cars.

I particularly liked the Summit's powertrain. The 1.5-liter, 81-horsepower engine in this diminutive four-door is not exactly Thunder Road, but it is a smooth, willing, flexible type that's fun to play with. It also is quiet as these four-cylinder sewing-machine motors go.

The size of the engine, coupled with the car's light weight, produces petroleum-consumption notes that have a pleasant ring in these days of Middle East unrest and rising pump prices. The Summit test car, equipped with the standard five-speed manual transaxle, has EPA mileage ratings of 28 city and 34 highway. My result was 29 miles per gallon in a mixture of city and highway use. The car also is nicely assembled. The door, trunk and hood margins on the test car were narrow and even, and the finish was undimmed.

The Summit is built for Chrysler's Eagle Division by Mitsubishi-Mirage sedan, just as the Dodge and Plymouth Colts are assembled at Chrysler and Mitsubishi's joint-venture plant in Normal, Ill.

The intrepid little Summit is available in four forms, each more glorious than the one that went before. The base car I drove, at $8,895; the DL, $9,436; the LX, $10,408; and the ES, $11,257. As its price might suggest, the base model has very little equipment on it, not even power steering.

The somewhat fancier DL model adds tinted glass, a rear-window defroster, intermittent wipers, and remote releases for the fuel door and deck lid.

This is really hitting the road

A question you've heard a million times, and which we get in the mail about every three hours: "Why don't I see you all the time on an island somewhere?" For example, a "concerned citizen" has just sent a letter saying, "If a criminal has a second or third offense, put them on an island. They could murder, rape or whatever to survive to the best of their ability. If they don't make it, they won't be multiplying."

Dear concerned citizen: Go look at a map. Where is this island? You want to be the one to take Bermuda if it will house all our psychopaths? Do you think maybe Manhattan has a few vacancies? The only time this experiment worked was a couple of hundred years ago when the British sent their prisoners to Australia. The result was, eventually, Mel Gibson and Crocodile Dundee.

Into the wind

Wind shots can be tricky. For headwinds, hit a low-trajectory, firm shot. Too much wind will be weak against the wind.

1 Keep a square alignment. Feet, hips and shoulders should be parallel to the target. Spread feet wider than normal and keep the majority of the weight on the left foot. The hands should rest 2 inches ahead of the club face.

2 Drive your legs toward the target. Lead the club face into the ball from the inside of the target line. By minimizing wrist action, produce a three-quarter swing, but make a full-body turn. Leading the club through the ball in this way will produce a good, penetrating shot. The swing is simple and controlled; the arc short, but wide.

Discovery takes you to exotic sites Stay in the Brezhnev suite

A variety of television and radio personalities have joined The Discovery Channel to host a number of its new fall programs, announced Greg Moyce, Senior Vice-President of Discovery's Programming Group.

Joining a family of Discovery personalities are writer/producer Nancy Glass, actress Margot Kidder, news-correspondent Lucky Severson and Smithsonian Institution museum director Roger Kennedy.

Nancy Glass is hosting Discovery's "World Away," a new anthology of one-hour episodes that takes viewers to exotic destinations around the globe and surveys their rich cultural heritage. Ms. Glass is a well-known host, writer and producer of many news and magazine format television shows, including "Inside Edition," a syndicated current affairs program; "Westinghouse Broadcasting's "This Evening," KYW-TV's (Philadelphia); "Evening Magazine," Lifetime cable's "A1600," and PBS's "Sneak Previews." In addition, Ms. Glass has been a news reporter and anchor for television stations in New Margot Kidder, a television and screen actress, perhaps best known for her portrayal of Lois Lane in the movie "Superman," is hosting Discovery's new fall anthology "Best of the BBC." This series brings together some of the most highly acclaimed programming produced by the BBC, including the Emmy award-winning series "America" and the Peabody award-winning "The Making of a Continent."

"Lucky Severson," cross-country correspondent for NBC's "Today Show," is hosting "Invention," an original series produced in partnership with the Smithsonian, that dives into the fascinating world of inventions and inventors, tracing the creative process from conception to final design. Severson, a veteran newscaster, has served as NBC reporter and Washington Bureau Chief for a number of NBC-affiliates.

Joining Severson on the "Invention" project is Roger Kennedy, the program's special correspondent. Kennedy, an author and historian who serves as Director of the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History, offers viewers a personal tour of Smithsonian collections which include many American inventions.

The hosts of other Discovery Channel programs will continue their ongoing projects. David Suzuki, for example, will remain as host for "The Nature of Things," and the group of journalists from the programs "Beyond 2000" and the new series "Beyond Tomorrow" are all being featured on the network this fall.

for a mere $525 per night

MOSCOW (AP) — A hotel suite used by former Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev will be rented out to foreign tourists for $525 a night by an American entrepreneur, Tass reported.

The businessman, Kristianu Tomesku, plans to turn vacation cottages and hotel suites once used by the Communist Party elite into luxury accommodations for foreign tourists in the southern Soviet republic of Moldavia, Tass said. Tomesku will own a network of casinos, restaurants, bars, swimming pools and tennis courts in the Kholerkan and Kodra hotel and cottage complex in the Moldavian capital of Kishinev and his suburbs, the Soviet news agency reported. The digs, which Tass described as "formidable," previously were used as recreation sites by members of the republic's government and high-ranking Communist Party officials.

A room at one of the hotels will cost $80 a night, the report said, while the "Brezhnev Suite," which was used by high-ranking officials, will go for about $350 nightly. "Those foreigners who like exotics and wish to stay in the luxurious suite — in which Leonid Brezhnev was accommodated some time ago — will pay $525 a day for it," the Tass report said.

Remember those warm spots in the cool blue ocean?

Q: Why are there warm spots in the ocean?

A: Warm spots on the surface of the ocean occur when an eddy of warm water has drifted into that region or when there is very little turbulence to mix the cold water from the bottom of the ocean with the warmer surface water, says Terry Joyce, physical oceanographer at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute.

Water in the Gulf Stream, for example, is often warmer than the ocean around it because the winds that control the Gulf Stream often push warm patches of water northward.

Variety of aquatic life at Sea World staggers the mind

Sea World in San Diego is home to a staggering number of marine animals representing the full spectrum of aquatic life from the simplest invertebrates to highly evolved whales and dolphins.

More than 10,000 fish, 200 marine mammals and 1,500 birds are housed in Sea World's California State Park. One of the largest and most widely respected collections of marine life in the world.

Sixteen species of marine mammals are displayed at Sea World—everything from Alaska sea otters rescued from the 1989 oil spill in Prince William Sound to the Comerson's dolphin, Harbor seals, pilot whales, sea lions, walrus and false killer whales also can be seen.

But the cornerstone of Sea World's collection of marine mammals remains the star killer whales of Shamu Stadium. The residents of the five-million-gallon, 6,500-seat stadium increased their number by one in September of 1988 with the birth of killer whale calf Baby Shamu.

Successful breeding programs have bolstered the numbers of several other marine mammal species at Sea World. More than 50 bottlenose dolphin calves and 100 California sea lion pups have been born at Sea World parks.

Today park visitors have the opportunity to see, touch and even feel many of these bottlenose dolphin offspring at the park's Dolphin Pool. Guests also may touch California sea lions and harbor seals at the Pinniped Exhibit and watch sea otters, walrus and Comerson's dolphins in their own displays.

Responsibility for the care of Sea World's marine mammals falls to the park's animal care staff. A state-of-the-art laboratory is available to the animal health technicians, medical technologists, veterinarians and animal care specialists.

Another function of Sea World's animal care staff is administration of the park's long-standing beach animal rescue program. Every year hundreds of ill or orphaned marine mammals strand themselves along the California coast.

Sea World rescues hundreds of California sea lions, harbor seals, elephant seals and, occasionally, dolphins and whales. These animals are treated, and whenever possible, returned to the wild. Although Sea World's inventory of marine mammals is large, it represents only a small portion of the park's marine life collection. Sea World's fish, reptile and invertebrate collections number in the thousands. Specimens hail from virtually every tropical and temperate area of the world.

The Marine Aquarium is home to a wide variety of saltwater fishes and invertebrates. It is one of the few aquariums in the world where living coral is displayed. This aquarium is also home to the storied octopus of the sea's most venomous fish.

Perhaps the most unusual showcase of undersea life at Sea World is the Shark Exhibit. Sponsored by am/pm mini markets, the 100-foot, 400,000-gallon main exhibit contains nine species of sharks, including some of the largest specimens outside the wild. A 12-foot lemon shark and two 12-foot sawfishes are among the display's residents.

Sea World's most popular avian exhibit is the Penguin Encounter. Completed in 1983, this Antarctic habitat is home to more than 300 penguins, representing six different species. The Penguin Encounter is technologically advanced, designed not only for display of these flightless birds, but also for breeding and research. To date, more than 1,000 penguin chicks have hatched at Sea World.

Learn to sew on a button, quick

Tragedies such as run-away buttons and pants that need hems are bound to occur after moving away to school, all without the help of a willing mother with a sewing machine. Here's a how to assemble a first-aid kit of sorts to help out when such crises arise:

SEWING BOX Begin with a small styrofoam container such as a shoe box. In the box, assemble sewing essentials such as scissors, spools of black and white thread plus a spool of invisible thread. This nylon monofilament thread comes in clear and grey and the two colors can be used on virtually anything. If you were disappointed by one of the first invisible threads from a few years ago, you may wish to give the new and improved versions a try.

NOTIONS Fill a small jewelry gift box with straight pins and safety pins in a variety of sizes. Place a few needles in a plastic plastic pharmacy vial. Add Res-Q Tape or other double-face mending tape, a fabric sealant such as Fray-Check and a roll of Stitch Witchery or other fusible web. Toss in a clipping of this column, complete with the following mending ideas.

Dear Student/Young Person Now On Your Own: Good luck! Your saint-like mother has been taking care of your mending for the past 18 years. It's now your turn. To demonstrate your growing maturity, don't mending home or, worse, present said mother with a mountain of mending on Thanksgiving morn-etc.

ing. Mending isn't difficult, but merely unpleasant. Actually, if you can arrange to combine mending with TV music/socializing, it's not hard at all—especially if you learn to handle all four aspects simultaneously. Here are a few mending basics.

HEMS A hand or machine-sewn hem is the first and most obvious solution to a hem problem. It's unlikely, however, that a college freshman who's never threaded a needle, and who probably doesn't have matching thread for the needle anyhow, will do a great job. A workable substitute is a double-face mending tape that is durable enough to withstand several launderings. One such product is Res-Q Tape.

HEM REPAIRS For a hem that needs repairing, simply insert a length of mending tape between the layers of fabric. Peel away the backing, smooth the fabric layers together, and the repair is complete. At some point the repair, however, must be re-taped or actually sewn.

NEW HEMS A new garment, such as a pair of jeans, rarely has complete hems, but it's more work. First, be aware that 100% cotton denim will shrink, shrink, and shrink. In fact, three cycles through the washer/dryer are required to pre-shrink denim. Presuming that you can't wait for these launderings and want to wear your jeans now, cut off excess length so jeans are about four inches too long. Don't just randomly cut, however. Instead, take time to lay out jeans flat with wrinkles smoothed in place.

Use a rule to mark a straight line that's angled slightly lower in the back since properly hemmed pants are about three-eighths inch longer in the back than front. Draw one cutting line on each leg, then cut through both layers of one leg at a time. Apply Fray-Check along the cut edge to prevent future fraying. Compare the unhemmed jeans with a pair of jeans of a length to your liking. Turn up a new hem and secure with straight pins placed close to the hem fold. Turn back hem and generously apply glue stick to the wrong side. Smooth hem in place and your jeans are ready to wear.

It will be necessary to give after laundering. The length of the jeans shrink with each laundering. After a third laundering, jeans are ready for a permanent hem. Turn up and glue hem as before and the hem is ready for machine topsitching next time you go home. Oh, for a permanent hem, pin turned up hem, keeping in mind close to fold. Slip a strip of Stitch Witchery between the fabric layers and fuse.

Keep tree branches in shape for that windy western weather

Sometimes the breezes around these parts get a little frisky.

We had a wind here a couple of weeks ago that got my attention when it snapped a large limb off the neighbor's tree. It reminded me that changing weather is just around the corner, and storm damage is likely in many trees.

You can help prevent a lot of storm damage in your trees if you go outside and get out the dead wood now. Look for black, leafless branches, branches that are attached to the tree at a weak angle, and branches that have been damaged by poor pruning or disease.

Grab the pruners and get out the dead wood now, before it sails through your window. Make sure your final cut is flush with the trunk or larger branch it grew from.

Those that are attached at a weak angle are the hardest to shake out. Often they're at such a sharp angle, you can't get the saw where it needs to go without some difficulty. Unfortunately, those are often the branches that are top-heavy and most likely to break. If it's practically impossible to prune out the poorly attached branch, perhaps thinning out the top growth will help. Make only proper cuts: Never top a tree. Topping causes trees to sprout in a bird's-nest kind of a mess. A sure way to guarantee a top-heavy tree that is dangerous in a wind.

Green Thumbprints

Branches that have been damaged by poor pruning practices and disease are also dangerous. Not only are they more likely to break off in a storm, but they offer disease opportunities to set up shop in the tree.

A clean, proper cut now will heal quickly and cleanly. Look at the branch where it attaches to the trunk or larger branch. The bark is wrinkled at the junction. Cut just where the wrinkles begin on the branch. That releases hormones in the bark that start healing the wound.

A cut that leaves a stump will heal not only and invite pests and disease. There is no opportunity for the tree to close over the cut with bark.

A cut that cuts off the wrinkles, too close to the trunk bark, cuts off the hormones. Healing is slower, sometimes incomplete.

Wind doesn't prune neatly. Uneven tears in the bark must be cleaned up to leave a smooth-edged wound.

Use a sharp knife to reshape the hole into something that resembles a football. If the bark has torn too far down the side of the branch, so much so that nothing is gained by cutting still more bark off, you might be better off to just take off the branch naturally.

Slow-healing wounds heal best.

Don't use pruning paint or a sealant over the wound. Studies have shown that this stuff just seals in bacteria, pests and moisture, making healing more difficult. Better to leave the tree to heal itself naturally.

Cathy Walworth is an avid Twin Falls gardener.

Peer into new window designs

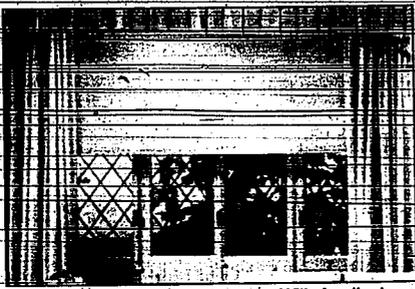

North American Precast Syndicate

Bright new ideas in home decor are keeping homeowners from throwing energy dollars out the window.

In 1989, Americans spent an average of $1,230 per household on home repairs and remodeling, yet many did not take advantage of one of the simplest ways to have a new home at the old address—decorating the windows.

In the past, window decor involved little more than buying shades and selecting the style and color of curtains or drapery. Today, futuristic window treatments, featuring high tech fabrics developed for energy efficiency, durability and style, offer almost unlimited design possibilities.

"Window treatments serve a variety of purposes from energy conservation to reducing the effects of cold, heat, light and shade to enhancing or hiding a view, increasing privacy, even changing the dimensions of a room," says Barbara Schirmeister, color and design consultant for Hunter-Douglas Window Fashions. "Any home decor can be updated using window treatments to bring a touch of color and pattern, giving new life to an old room, decorating experts agree. Window treatments also address design problems. They can change the proportions of spaces, making a room appear taller or wider, masking and mismatching mismatched windows, or by adding color, pattern and texture.

Cats purr ahead by a paw

North American Precast Syndicate

of the Charles Research Group of Overland Park, Kan.

Outstretching man's best friend, cats have purred their way to the top of the pet popularity polls in recent years.

There were 54.6 million pet cats in the United States to 32.4 million dogs, according to information supplied by the American Veterinary Medicine Association. That marks the first time cats outnumbered dogs.

The 1987 cat count was 4.6 percent higher than the last pet population tabulation in 1983.

Why have felines leaped ahead?

A change in American lifestyles may be the answer, according to C. Michael Troutman families, both adults work, less time for pet care. Cats are more in tune with schedules of working would-be pet owners.

Also contributing to a shift toward cats as pets are smaller households, a greater number of single-occupant households and more urban households.

Less time for care does not mean less care, however.

Research shows cat owners use of veterinary services increased from 47 percent in 1983 to 60 percent in 1987.

Dog owners still lead in veterinary service use, at 78 percent.

How's your horse sense?

North American Precast Syndicate

If you're going to look at a horse and you're a first-time buyer, it's a good idea to bring along a knowledgeable horseperson. There's a lot to observe and much to ask before you make a decision.

Temperament should be most important to you—leave health to the experts. Look at the horse's eyes and ears and general manner when it is brought out. Does it look alert? Be sure you look at the animal in a well-lit place, preferably outdoors in the sunlight. Watch the owner saddle up the horse. Does it sound quiet? Does it kick or bite? Do not buy a horse with bad stable manners.

Don't get on the animal right away. Ask the owner to ride the horse first. If you're buying a hunter or jumper or other specially-trained horse, ask the owner to demonstrate.

Remember, this is a major investment and you should be allowed to test the animal thoroughly. Many times a brief trial period (seven to 10 days) can be arranged for the prospective buyer.

Time for some parent-child gardening

News USA

A parent-child gardening project for planting spring bulbs this fall can be an interesting and rewarding family activity because it is both fun and educational.

Gardening with your child is also an economical and convenient family hobby because it is always right there in your backyard.

No piano teachers to hire, no car pools to drive and no uniforms to buy.

Because bulbs are large enough for a child (say, three years and older) to handle easily, this traditional fall gardening activity can become creative fun for an afternoon or a weekend.

There are some things parents will want to organize first, say the experts at the Netherlands Flower Bulb Information Center:

Bulb Check-List
—Look through mail order catalogs and garden centers.
—After checking with a magazine center (to find out which bulbs grow best in your area), let the kids help choose the bulbs to plant.

Select a garden space just for them, remembering that flower bulbs—and growing dahlias. The space should be easily accessible to the children since they'll want to keep checking on the progress of their creations come spring. A site that's visible from inside the house works well (and keeps mud outside).

Prepare the site by digging it out about one foot deep with a shovel so that the soil will be workable. Remove any large rocks.

Very little equipment is Planting bulbs is family fun—needed to plant bulbs, but have what you'll need ready before starting—a trowel (a tool with a pointed scoop for loosening soil and digging holes), a garden hose or watering can and mulch (to use later).

After purchasing the bulbs (old-fashioned children can come along to the store or help choose from mail-order catalogs), the children can do the rest—with just a little help from parents:

—Have children plant bulbs on the dirt in the desired planting arrangement.

—Using the trowel, help children dig holes and plant bulbs according to directions on packages. For example, bulbs such as tulips, daffodils and crocuses should be set about eight inches deep, smaller bulbs, such as crocus and grape hyacinth, about three to five inches deep.

Cover all holes with dirt and water-bed thoroughly. Once the ground freezes, cover entire flower bed with one to two inches of mulch to keep the temperature of the soil consistently cool despite variations in the weather.

That's all there is to it! Once you've finished planting the bulbs, you can forget about them until springtime.

The children will feel a sense of accomplishment, and you will have your bulbs in before the first frost.

Best of all—is the big colorful payoff—come spring—

Self

This is the sort of fellow who worships the feet she walks on

Q. I'm 32 years old and have a strong fetish for women's shoes and feet. I always notice a woman's feet first. If I even see a woman playing footsie with another man in a restaurant, I become aroused. I know these feelings are unusual, but just how unusual are they? Are there books that mention this type of fetish? I've never told the woman I date how I feel about their feet. I wasn't sure how to bring it up — or even if I should. If you appreciate any help you can give me in handling this.

A. First, you are right not to bring it up. Most women do not understand fetishes and would find your interest in their feet and shoes at least a little strange. But if you are a little more than just a fan, think "There is a book, "Shoe Fetishes," which may not be easy to locate. Your bookseller can, however, order it for you. As a therapist, I would only be concerned if you had to look at shoes and feet to be aroused. In that case, see a therapist so you can learn other ways.

But if this is not the case, enjoy! Why don't you learn the technique of giving a good-foot massage? Women will love the attention.

Q. I am 33 years old and my wife is 28. We have been married for seven years. During the last year she has lost interest in our sex life. I tried everything in the beginning, but nothing worked. I don't know what to do. She insists we go to bed at separate times now. What do you think about that? Is there anything I can do to make her feel interested in sex again? We are both in good physical condition. I could understand her turning off to me if I'd gotten fat or sloppy in my hygiene habits. Why doesn't she want to go to bed at the same time?

Ask Dr. Ruth

A. I think she wants separate bedtimes so she won't feel pressured about sex. Either she's asleep when you get in bed or she doesn't come to bed until you're asleep. Either way, she doesn't have to worry about you wanting a sexual encounter.

Q. I have a problem, only this symptom. You must take her to a marital therapist. Something must be bothering her about your marriage. Is she angry, sad, disappointed? Perhaps she hasn't expressed those feelings in words and she's acting out. If she's mad at you, they are expressed in the form of sexual rejection.

"Anything you try to do to make her feel more sexual will only add to the tension between you. Before she can feel sexual again, she must have what she needs to feel better about her feelings of desire. Good luck to both of you. Please let me know how this works out."

Q. My husband and I are both 40 and have been married more than 10 years. We have two children in excellent health and good shape. He was recently promoted to a new position with more responsibility. Suddenly he has no desire for sex. He says that woman at a sexually dressed woman does not turn him on anymore. If I ask for sex, he gets annoyed. But he still reads girly magazines. I'm confused. Can he really have lost interest in sex if he still reads those magazines?

A. I'm worried I wouldn't worry if he had told you, "My mind is so much on the new job I can't think about sex." But he doesn't say that. I wonder if something is going on at the office. Does his new position put him in contact with a new woman? You have a right to ask these questions of him. And you deserve an explanation for his sudden loss of interest in making love to you.

His annoyance is also a troubling factor. Why should he be annoyed with you for desiring him sexually? Even if he doesn't want sex, he should not find his wife's interest in him an annoyance. Insist that he sit down and talk to you about this situation. Do not attack him. Ask questions. If he says "I don't know" if the answers don't help you resolve this, see a counselor. Good luck!

School-year resolutions are in

By John Rosemond
Knight-Ridder News Service

With a new school year upon us, it might be wise for parents of school-age children to make some resolutions, as in promises to themselves to change certain behaviors; avoid certain pitfalls, break-old habits, and so on.

Resolved, I'm going to stay out of the homework business. After all, my child's homework is not my responsibility in the first place. He's going to do his homework in his room. If he asks for help, I'll help, unless he's just looking for a shortcut. That is, otherwise, I'm going to do my homework, let him do his, and let his teacher do her job.

Resolved, I'm not going to drive my child back to school if he forgets his assignments. I'm going to allow him the benefit of learning things the hard way.

Resolved, I'm going to concentrate on teaching my child the three R's of respect, responsibility, and resourcefulness and let the teacher teach the three R's of reading,riting, and rithmetic. She does her job, I do mine.

Resolved, I'm going to remember that trying to prevent my child from "failing" only makes it inevitable that someday he will fail. I'm going to remember that when something is about to happen sooner or later, the sooner it happens, the better.

Resolved, I'm not going to expect my child to excel, or even be good, at everything. If, for example, he's an excellent reader, but not so fast at math, so be it. The more I accept his weaknesses along with his strengths, the more accepting he will be of himself.

Resolved, I'm not going to fall into the trap of feeling that a problem, weakness, or failing on my child's part is a reflection of my own. I'm going to keep straight that it is he, and me is me.

Gridiron experts ready for action

"Inside the NFL," pay-cable TV's longest running sports series kicks off its 14th season on the HBO service this fall with 21 weekly editions of in-depth gridiron action and analysis.

Hosted live in the studio by football greats Len Dawson, Nick Buoniconti and Chris Collinsworth, the first show of the only series with highlights of every NFL game debuts Wednesday, with other new editions debuting on subsequent Wednesdays at the same time.

From early season contests to Super Bowl XXV, each edition of "Inside the NFL" will feature exclusive clips, as well as on location features and interviews, expert commentary, analysis and predictions, and special studio guests.

Throughout the year, the show will be ready to go on the road at short notice, frequently originating from cities with NFL teams.

Now in their second decade together as co-hosts, Pro Football Hall of Fame member and former Kansas City Chiefs' quarterback Dawson and former Miami Dolphins' linebacker Buoniconti will be joined for the first time this season by the former Cincinnati Bengals' wide receiver Collinsworth.

It's kickoff time, at least for some of us

By Tony Kornheiser
The Washington Post

Welcome back. Have a nice summer? Good. Incredibly, isn't it, how the lawns are still so green. By now mine usually looks like Mr. Potato Head. So are you ready for back to work, or back to school?

Are you ready as head-in-scholding Hank Williams Jr. keeps screeching, for some FOOOOTBALL? Unfortunately, not all our rowdy friends are here.

Eric Dickerson, for example. He'll miss at least the first six weeks of the season — at a cost of $634,000 — as he and the Colts "muddle over" which doctor he'll agree to see. Weeks ago, Dickerson flunked his physical because of a hamstring injury. He says the hamstring is fine now, but every time the Colts make an appointment for him to visit the team physician, he cancels; he insists on a doctor of his own choosing.

Dickerson, who until recently could not name a doctor other than Julius Erving, is willing to be examined by Cliff Huxtable or Vinnie Greenblatt. — Knowing Dickerson well, the Colts assumed he was stalling. 1) to avoid training camp and 2) to get himself retrained. They suspended him.

I don't know the extent of the Colts' examination, but I'd rather balance a bowling ball on my nose than see my doctor put on the rubber glove and hear him say the magic words "Bend over."

We can all sympathize with someone who's reluctant to go through that.

On the other hand, $634,000 seems a bit steep for canceling an appointment.

Who's the Colts' doctor, Schweitzer? Consider what a chesshead Dickerson must be if the Colts, who traded 37 players to get him, are willing to play without him. What's amazing is that no one in the NFL seems to want him. Granted, he fumbles a lot, and Dan Carnegie once took a swing at him, but Dickerson is going to become the league's ALL-TIME leading rusher — if someone will just hand him the ball.

Nobody needs a runner like that?

Everybody's flush? I must have missed the announcements when Atlanta coaxed O.J. out of retirement, and Joe Bugel put Walter Payton in the Phoenix backfield.

A Settling of Accounts

They set out to pay Wilmire back for the horses he had provided

By Bill White

"Hand me that kettle, would ya?" Clifton asked his young sidekick, Art Gibson. Several months had elapsed since an almost fatal stampede—the result of which Clifton had acquired a broken leg and Art had almost lost a close encounter with a rattlesnake of questionable heritage. The cattle that survived the stampede had been rounded up and driven the remaining 500 miles to market, but there the problem stood.

Big Buck Claimore, the gentleman buyer from Back East, wanted to wait three days to see how many of the herd died from the trip. So everybody had several days to sit around and wait. Clifton and Art weren't too happy with that.

Art handed him the kettle. The lanky cowboy took a swig and promptly spit it out. "What's in that stuff?" "Coffee. I made it just the way Langley had showed me."

Art didn't know anyone who was better at a rope with cattle than his tall friend... One of them said Clifton was so good with a rope that he could cut baking powder out of a biscuit without breaking the crust.

"An' how's that?" "Put two pounds of coffee in a one-gallon kettle and boil it for two hours."

"Did you check it to see if it was done?" "Sure did. I took a horseshoe, just like our cook said, and threw it in and did it sink?" "No," Art said with a proud expression on his face. "It stayed right on top!" "Well," Clifton said, shaking his head. "I guess I'm wrong. It must be cup." "Pour me another. Maybe I had something in the bottom of my cup." "Hand him the pot in a jerky motion.

"That snake bite still botherin' your arm?" "Some. But it'll heal OK." "Yeah," Clifton said, looking at the bite. "I woulda put a small amount of gunpowder on it to cauterize the bite. That woulda healed it up better."

Art just shrugged like it didn't matter none and looked out at the approaching cloud formations.

Clifton downed the cup of coffee and looked across the campfire at his young sidekick. "You got any plans for the next couple of days?"

"Not much. Why you ask?" "Well, since we got the time, I thought I'd take a ride over to the Big Falls and pay Wilmire back for the horses he provided us."

Art thought about the stampede that took their horses over the edge to the canyon floor. "Cept for the one lone old giant Russian Elm, they'd have met the same fate, too."

"Sure, why not. But that's quite a journey. I think we can make it there and back in three days? We might get another downpour and it'd get us stuck somewhere."

Clifton looked over at his young friend and grinned. "This kid hadn't seen nothin'. That weren't much of a rain. Now, when you can see the cow chips floating, then you know you've had a rain! We got plenty of time."

So with that, Clifton and Art took off for the Great Falls, following a meandering snake-like river that weaved and wandered through the sagebrush and mesquite bushes.

About three hours toward the Great Falls, the two ran across a group of folks holding a baptism in the shallow part of the river. Ten or 15 people were gathered around a bank and a preacher and his new convert were down in the water.

As they looked down at the folks at the river, Clifton said in a low tone, just barely audible above the wind. "You know who that is?"

"No. It's the Rev. Gitchard. Everybody knows him."

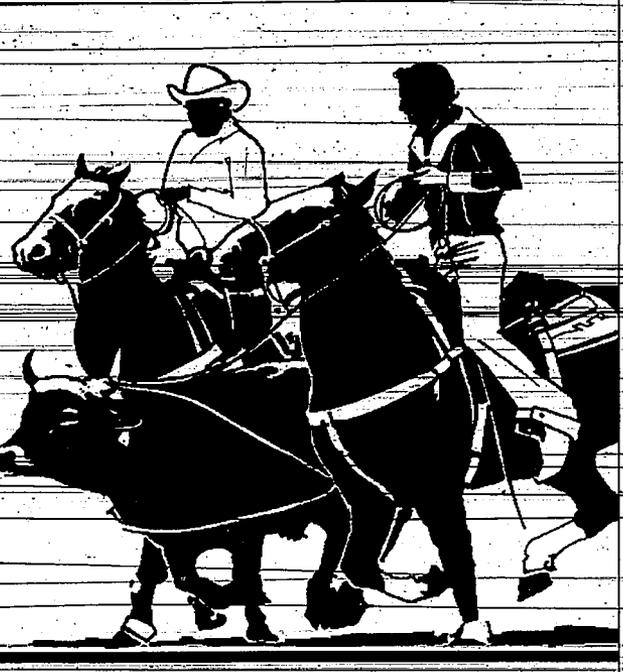

"No. I mean the feller he's baptizing."

"No. I don't."

"Well, partner, no offense, but sometimes I don't think you know much from this here country," Clifton said, raising his gun and taking careful aim.

Art looked on in amazement as Clifton continued speaking. "That's a Doug Devamey—the biggest, the ugliest, the meanest, the liames. He's cheated more folks than the sky has stars." Clifton shook his head, then slowly lowered his gun and put it back in his holster. "Well, I thought I'd do Doug a favor, but I don't want risk hitting the preacher."

"By shooting him? If one of us had got enough to shoot him for he'd died off, he might go to heaven free of sin. But I'll tell you now, he'll be going back to his old ways before the sun dries him out. He's always had a sticky rope. He was never good at nothing else. I don't think he could cut a lame steer from the shade of a tree. So he turned to being a cow thief. One of these days, it's gonna get him a reprieve with the Judge. Come on, let's get on."

Art just smiled at his older friend. Clifton knew what he was talking about. Art didn't know anyone who was better at a rope with cattle than his tall friend. He'd heard some of the old Hank miners talking about him the other day. One of them said Clifton was so good with a rope that he could cut baking powder out of a biscuit without breaking the crust.

They made pretty good time that evening, camping at a protected spot beside the river. They both caught some trout and Art leaned back against a tree stump and Clifton prepared their evening meal. He rolled the fish in some mud and the heat of the fire quickly dried out the mud and hardened them. Placing them near some coals, he too leaned against a stump and looked at the burning coals. Art broke the silence. "Why'd you do that?"

Clifton glanced over at the flaming embers. "That'll cook the fish real good; and when they're done, you just peel off the mud and that takes the skin off too. Saves a lot of bother," Clifton added as he started to whittle on a small dried tree root he'd found. "When do you think we'll get to Wilmire's ranch?"

Clifton felt the wind pick up and he pulled his hat down over his head.

"Sometime tomorrow noon."

"That don't give us much time to get back."

"It'll be enough," Clifton replied as he forked one of the fish with a trimmed branch.

It was the next day, noon, just like Clifton said, that they reached the gate of Wilmire's ranch.

Clifton saw some markings on a fence post by the gate. He threw down his hat and came the closest he'd ever come to kissing

"What's the matter," Art asked. "Don't you see it?" "Art looked at the fence post and frowned. I see some letters on there. G-T-T. That's what you mean."

"Yes. It means Gone To Texas. Well, maybe some of his kin are still here and we can leave the money with them."

The two cowboys slowly rode into the ranch and up to the front door.

"That's plumb for 'nough," a loud voice sputtered from behind a chair on the porch. A young lady emerged, pointing a little Smith & Weston .22 right at Clifton. She had a tiny alligator leather holster attached to her waist. "I didn't," Clifton said, taking off his hat. "You don't want to shoot that thing 'cause I might get angry if I ever found out about it."

She put the gun back in her holster and stared fiercely at Clifton and Art.

Clifton glanced over at the flaming embers. That'll cook the fish real good; and when they're done, you just peel off the mud and that takes the skin off too. Saves a lot of bother, Clifton added as he started to whittle on a small dried tree root he'd found.

"What you all want?"

"My name's Clifton and this is my partner, Art. I came to pay Wire for these horses he provided us," Clifton said, taking out a wad of bills. "Well, be ain't there. Now gill!"

Clifton looked around the ranch grounds. Heavy winds had left their mark. "Where is Wilmore?"

The young lady looked down at the ground. "Well, one day, she locked up at Clifton."

"I ain't seen him for two days, ever since that big windstorm that cut through these parts."

"It didn't take Clifton long to talk her into telling what direction he went, and 15 minutes later, he and Art were following an old creek bed road."

"The way this wind's been," Art said as she stared at the large piles of sand leaning against fence posts. "I don't think we're going to have much luck finding him."

Clifton knew better. They'd find him. Folks said he had a nose-oo-keen he could track a bear in running water.

Two hours later, Clifton was so sure they were right: The blowing sand had stirred things up so much they were hard to find any landmarks to go by. They were about to leave when Clifton stopped, sniffed the air and added, "Something ain't right. You hear anything?"

"Just the wind," Art replied. "Help me . . ."

"There! I heard it again." The two cowboys rushed over to a large barren sand pile. Just barely visible through the top of the sand was a hat. The two cowboys quickly and carefully dug the sand away, revealing first the hat and then the head of their missing friend, Wilmore.

He spluttered, spitting out some sand and looked sternly at his two partners.

"Well, don't just stand there," he muttered. "Git a shovel, I'm horseshack."

"It seems the sand was slightly deeper than the two had reckoned, and it was nearing sundown before they had him out and they were back at the ranch."

"I can offer you two boys a job if you want. I need a lot of post-holes dug around this place," the old timer said as Clifton paid the money he owed him for the two horses. Clifton and Art looked around the spread. Both knew the life of a ranch hand would leave them restless. Clifton looked the old timer in the eye.

"We'd take the job if you can figure out a way we can do it on horseback."

The old timer smiled. He knew. "Someday, maybe," Clifton would get tired of it all and hitch up with Emma. Art was still young. He had quite a few years ahead of him 'fore he'd even be thinking of that.

"You two are welcome to stay the night."

"No, we're going to try to get a few hours in 'fore sundown," Clifton said, thanking him and saddling up.

Clifton and Art only got about two hours back toward camp when "darkness caught 'em with them." They saw around a campfire listening to the wind, and Art remembered the tale Clifton had started to tell him back when they were trapped by rain in a cave.

"Hey, you never did tell me that story about the Inks and Mags."

"Inks and Mags?" Clifton thought a moment. "Oh, yes, I remember. I'll have to tell you about them little folks sometime, but I got a better tale for you now."

Art leaned back against a mound of dirt as Clifton began.

"You never did hear the one about Red-Eye Joe. Well, folks also mean he made Darren look like a school marm from Buck East. The fellow was raised on six shoats 'til he got big enough to eat ground up shoatguts."

Art could see it was going to be the ghinnies, or some strands of barbed wire sticking up through the brush. He fumbled in his pocket to see if his old-reading book was there. It was. His teacher had said barbed wire was going to change the way they worked the ranches, wouldn't come too soon.

He leaned back and listened to Clifton's story as the wind cut through the sagebrush and played tag with the tumbleweeds.

New book claims private Carson is far from public Carson

By Clarence Petersen
Chicago Tribune

"KING OF THE NIGHT," by Laurence Leamer (St. Martin's, $5.95). As compelling a celebrity biography as I've ever read, it affirms that the television camera is entirely unable to perform its often-celebrated role as a lie detector, an unmasker of the people who stand or sit before it.

The private Johnny Carson, we learn in this thoroughly researched book, has virtually nothing in common with the Johnny Carson we see on TV.

The TV Johnny Carson was so relentlessly combed by the real Johnny Carson that it no longer matters to the public and probably never will.

This is the story of an utterly lonely, frightened man who, for all of his wives, mistresses and flings, appears to have had one close friend—his lawyer—Herb Bushkin. Carson has dismissed one people one after another, even employees who have worked for him many years.

His three sons appear as well and essentially fatherless, as lost as victims of their father's fame. Carson has a man who is his house and who cannot himself be trusted—his mother, whose approval he sought in vain all his life, is dead; forever unreachable. Carson's is a sad life, and this is a saddening book.

THE GREAT ART HOAX, by Jonathon Browling (Green-University Popular Press, $16.95; hardcover $34.95).

This book began when the author, in the manner of so many of us, stood before a painting, entitled "Grayed Yellow Vertical Rectangle" which described what in that was a blank off-white canvas, though complete with an accompanying description by an expert that concludes: "It indicates the encounter of dark edge of the frame and light field while adding an almost imperceptible tension; and it deters the white center from recoiling into space and becoming a window." What made this blank canvas art?

In 164 pages, "How" concludes that much "modern art" is bunkum, high comedy and low insanity.

He reaches that conclusion over a long and winding path, beginning with art forgeries, where that makes a convincing case that about half of all art is forged and that there are no real experts.

ROULETTE 66: THE HIGHWAY AND ITS PEOPLE, photographic essay by Quinta Scott; text by Suzanne Crose Kelly (University of Oklahoma Press, $17.95). The book starts with the joyous lyrics of Bobby Troup's 1946 pop song with its memorable recommendation: "Get your kicks on Route Six."

by Six—and if you remember that time and that great highway from Chicago to Los Angeles, as I do, you will be doubly-rewarded by following the trip with Scott and Kelly. They spent seven years doing it, interviewing and photographing the people who still live along what's left of the road and collecting their reminiscences and photographs of roadside attractions.

THE WORLD BEYOND THE MIND—SCIENCE FICTION AND THE QUEST FOR CONSCIOUSNESS, by Alexei and Cory Lantshin (Tarcher/St. Martin's, $16.95). A critical history of science fiction from its earliest days, before the term science fiction was even conceived, through the golden Age of John Campbell's Astounding magazine, where most of the great modern science-fiction writers found their voice, where the youngest of them, Isaac Asimov, discovered his talent as a brilliant, rebellious college student with much to learn and much to say about human possibility.

The Panshin's 614-page story, rich in anecdote, thoroughly researched, digested and made accessible, even with the dropping of the first atom bomb, an event that like nothing before it, made a frightening—an astounding reality of the science fiction that anticipated it, of the implications of a man-made technology that off-mat proved unable to control. The Panshins have thus produced a book of importance beyond the genre itself.
