Moratorium may be end of Saylor expansion

The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — The Defense Department has slapped an indefinite moratorium on land acquisitions in excess of 1,000 acres or costing more than $1 million, further reducing chances for the controversial expansion of southwestern Idaho's Saylor Creek bombing range.

The moratorium puts the brakes on the department's proposal to increase land it manages now by nearly 20 percent to 29.5 million acres. That plan included expansion of the bombing range at Mountain Home Air Force Base from 100,000 to some 2.6 million acres.

"I would say this is very good news for the state of Idaho," said Kerry Cooke of the Snake River Alliance, which opposed the expansion. "I don't believe the people of Idaho or Congress would accept it. We've proved they own all kinds of land in the West and they don't need another inch."

An odd coalition of ranchers and environmental groups including the Idaho Cattle Association said the Saylor Creek expansion was being placed on hold because of budgetary questions and the re-evaluation of the nation's defense needs in view of the dramatic political changes taking place in Eastern Europe.

Europeans want air embargo on Iraq

The Associated Press

European nations, their anger at Saddam Hussein fueled by raids on their diplomatic compounds in Kuwait, demanded Tuesday that the U.N. trade embargo on Iraq be extended to the air as well as the sea. The decision reflected the growing resolve among European leaders to punish Baghdad. It came a day after the European Community voted to expel Iraqi diplomats and restrict the movements of others.

Squeeze tightens - A5
Council had worked out an agreement on terms of an air embargo and were hoping to get it passed by the full 15 member-council before Monday. Under the embargo, officials said, planes on their way to Iraq would not be forced down but could be challenged. The five permanent members are the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

In other developments Tuesday, the flow of Kuwaiti refugees across the newly opened Saudi border thinned abruptly as news spread that Iraqi troops were seizing young husbands and sons from families as they tried to leave. International pressure on Saddam Hussein was increasing, with countries implementing diplomatic sanctions and alliances slowly shifting in the Middle East. Syria and Iran announced that President Hafez Assad would visit Tehran next week. Assad was expected to try to persuade his Iranian allies to join the West and other Arab nations against Saddam. Moscow and Washington have been trying to sway Iran from a possible alliance with Iraq.

Assad met last week with Secretary of State James A. Baker III in the first major face-to-face contact between Damascus and Washington since President Bush was elected in 1988. Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, emphasized that its renewal of ties with Moscow, another former ally of Baghdad, should send a clear sign to Saddam.

Valve job

When a couple of inches of asphalt is added to the road, someone needs to make sure the water valves are not buried and lost. That is what Bill Moon, left, and Steve Highbarger were doing as they raised the valve lids as a crew repaved Broadway Avenue in Puhl Tuesday. The city's main thoroughfare will be under construction today also as workers finish the job.

Cheney picks Vietnam vet to lead USAF

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney consulted with the White House on Tuesday about his selection of a Vietnam veteran and former Thunderbird pilot to replace the general he fired as Air Force chief of staff.

Cheney's spokesman, Pete Williams, said the secretary had discussed with White House officials his selection of Gen. Merrill A. McPeak to replace Gen. Mike Dugan, fired Monday after revealing to reporters secret U.S. plans that contemplated bombing Iraq and personally targeting President Saddam Hussein.

Williams declined to say how soon President Bush is expected to act on Cheney's recommendation.

White House sources said, however, that the Pentagon had not yet sent over the paperwork to set in motion the presidential review process. The sources, who requested anonymity, said that after the paper arrives, it will take some time for officials there to review the matter before Bush decides whether to nominate McPeak.

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, Cheney sought to reassure his subordinates that they have nothing to fear from talking to reporters.

"It would be a thorough misreading and a total misunderstanding if anyone were to conclude that we're trying to discourage people from talking to the press," Williams said.

The spokesman said he had said as much to commanders and other officials.

Feminist leader labels Souter 'disaster' for rights

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee David H. Souter was praised by friends Tuesday as a strong supporter of civil liberties, but a feminist leader called him "a total disaster for civil rights and women's rights."

The Senate Judiciary Committee, which completed three days of questioning Souter on Monday, turned its attention to about 40 witnesses testifying for and against him. His confirmation as the high court's 105th justice "and if key vote on such divisive issues as abortion, civil rights and church-state relations — seemed certain."

Before Tuesday's hearings began, Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, told reporters her group had begun a major drive to block Souter's confirmation. "We know that man will be a fifth vote to overturn Roe vs. Wade," Ms. Yard said, referring to the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. "Our lives are on the line. Women in this country are going to die. We're talking about your daughters, your granddaughters. He is a disastrous choice, a total disaster for civil rights and women's rights."

During the hearings, Ms. Yard appeared on the verge of tears as she told the senators, all of them men, "None of you will ever face that problem (of an unwanted pregnancy). Not one of you."

Verbal blasts heating up over attendance records

By Michelle Cole Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — They've tried to swat it away, but the 1990 campaign staff has yet to squash a pesky report that finds the congressman has a less than perfect record for showing up for work. Craig, who is running for the Senate seat to be vacated by retiring Republican James McClure, missed about one in four votes taken in the U.S. House of Representatives between January and Aug. 10, according to the Congressional Quarterly Research Service. That means Idaho's 1st District congressman chalked up a 71 percent attendance record for 1990. It's the worst score in the Northwest, and the eighth worst score out of 435 members of Congress last year. It was also the worst score of eight congressmen who are running for the Senate. Because McClure waited until January to announce his resignation, he is not included in the ranking. Craig campaign workers say their candidate had to spend more time in Idaho battling with Idaho Attorney General

'A plague on your houses,' Americans tell both parties

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans are growing increasingly dissatisfied with the two major political parties, associating Republicans with wealth and greed and Democrats with incompetence, according to a survey released Tuesday. Since 1987, there has been a significant upswing in feelings of mistrust of political leaders, disillusionment with politics and feelings of powerlessness, said the Times Mirror survey titled "The People, the Press & Politics 1990." The study said the growing cynicism and economic polarization among all but the wealthiest Americans "threatens to subvert traditional partisan politics or block the effective resolution of social and economic issues."

Another finding was that while "anti-communism is fading as a factor in American politics, anti-Japanese sentiment has soured as economic expectations plummeted. Equally dramatic is the decline in support for Israel. 'Dialing for the Japanese has become more mainstream,' concluded the survey. 'It is no longer primarily concentrated among the kinds of people who have been hit especially hard by Japanese competition.' 'Growing dislike for Israel is evident across all demographic, political and social groups, except among American Jews,' the survey said. But it also said that "it is important to note that the sharp decline in identification with Israel has not been accompanied by a substantial identification with the causes of the Palestinians."

Mormon president enters hospital

SALT LAKE CITY — Ezra Taft Benson, the 91-year-old president of the Mormon Church, was hospitalized Tuesday for an unspecified ailment.

LDS Hospital spokesman Tim Madden said Benson was admitted about 12:30 p.m. for observation and was in fair condition.

Madden declined to detail why Benson, who served as secretary of agriculture in the Eisenhower Administration, was taken to the hospital.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said doctors expected to keep Benson overnight. He had no details on what was ailing the church leader other than to say "he obviously wasn't feeling well."

Benson, who became president of the 7.5 million-member church in 1973, was last hospitalized for four days in June for treatment of a bacterial infection.

Keating jailed after being indicted

LOS ANGELES — Charles H. Keating, the man blamed by the government for the nation's biggest savings and loan collapse, was jailed in lieu of $5 million bail Tuesday after he was indicted on criminal fraud charges.

The federal criminal case filed against Keating, who has become a symbol of the national thrift scandal because of his high pay, lavish personal habits, investments in risky real estate and junk bonds, and alleged use of accounting gimmicks to conceal wrongdoing.

The former chairman of American Continental Corp. and three other executives were charged in a 42-count state indictment with selling securities by false statements or omissions, selling securities without qualifications and lying to the California Department of Corporations.

The government seized control of Lincoln in April 1989.

Regulators estimate the bailout could cost taxpayers as much as $2 billion.

Pentagon trims foreign bases, forces

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon, cutting costs as relations warm with the Soviet Union, said on Tuesday it will and operations or cut back forces at 150 military sites in 10 countries.

The reductions will take place over the next few years at sites ranging from major bases to small installations. They will begin in the new fiscal year which opens Oct. 1.

But Pentagon did not say how much savings it would realize or how many troops would be pulled out of the facilities, many of which U.S. forces have occupied since the end of World War II.

Military operations will be ended at 94 sites in West Germany, 11 in Spain, nine in South Korea, three each in Greece, Italy, England and Australia and one in Japan, said Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams.

The United States will also reduce its forces at 14 sites in West Germany; three in South Korea, two in Spain and at one site each in Italy, Japan, Canada and Bermuda.

While some of the sites involve small or minor facilities, operations will be ended at three major bases, two in West Germany and one in Spain.

They are the Torrejon Air Force Base in Spain, and the Hessian Oldendorf Air Base and the Lindsey Air Base in West Germany.

Budget talks turn to name-calling

Knigh-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Budget negotiations between Congress and the Bush administration degenerated into partisan blame-fixing Tuesday, as leaders on both sides tried nevertheless to keep the stalled talks alive.

"The talks are not collapsed, we're just moving to a different stage," said House Majority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo.

"We still have to get this thing done one way or another," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., senior Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

Others were less sanguine.

Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., the senior House Budget Committee Republican, called the fruitless 10-day session at Andrews Air Force Base "Camp Runfook."

Said New Gingrich of Georgia, the House Republican whip: "I think that on everything that was vital, we made some progress. And on anything that was vital, we made no progress."

Democrats said there can be no agreement as long as President Bush insists on a capital gains tax cut that they see as a giveaway to the rich.

Compiled from wire service reports.

President Bush fared as well in this as in other recent surveys, with 76 percent giving him very or mostly favorable ratings and lying to the California Department of Corporations.

The government seized control of Lincoln in April 1989.

Regulators estimate the bailout could cost taxpayers as much as $2 billion.

Princeton Research Associates and compared to the findings of a similar study conducted in 1987.

In the three years since the two studies there was little change in Americans' affiliation with the major parties — the number of people identifying themselves as Republicans increased 3 percentage points, while those calling themselves Democrats declined 4 points.

The survey found 43 percent of the respondents called themselves Democrats, 28 percent Republicans and 39 percent independents.

Beneath this surface stability, however, there are volatile forces at work," said the study. It concluded that "both parties have declined precipitously in the public's estimation."

Even among people who are the strongest supporters of the Democratic Party, the party was viewed as "incapable of governing America successfully."

Record

General Jim Jones in the Republican primary.

Craig's challenger in the general election, Boise Democrat Ron Twigler, isn't about to let his opponent off that easy.

"When you miss every fourth day of work, every fourth day of school, I think people can relate to that," Twigler said during an interview last month.

More recently, the Twigler camp released a television commercial that sharply describes Craig's voting attendance record. The ad asks: "If you were a congressman, would you miss every third day of work and miss every third vote, like Larry Craig?"

Cheap shot, cried the Craig campaign staff. Although Craig's campaign manager said the party election Tuesday that "it's time to get away from mudslinging," the Craig campaign unleashed pointed a counter-attack.

In Larry Craig's 9½-year career as a congressman, he's voted 91 percent of the time. One of the best records in the House," he ad said. "We don't know why Ron Twigler isn't telling the truth about Larry Craig's voting record, but we know this: In Idaho, a man is only as good as his word. And Ron Twigler's word isn't worth a dime."

Now the Twigler camp is copying out Twigler's campaign manager, Richard Callow, said Tuesday that it's just not true that Craig has one of the best voting records in the House.

Citing his own compilation of congressional Quarterly voting summaries, Callow said Craig has a 91 percent attendance record — but 347 out of 435 members of the House had a better record.

Craig between 1983 and 1989.

Even if the party's election year is excluded, Callow said, 270 members of the House still had better attendance records than Idaho's 1st District congressman between 1981 and 1989.

Craig's campaign staff would not respond to questions regarding that ranking Tuesday.

Instead, Henderson accused Twigler of being "hypocritical" on the attendance issue, "since his attendance record as a Boise city councilman was only 82.5 percent."

"If we want to continue playing the numbers game, why don't I try to close the issue now," he said. "Larry's 91 percent is an A — and Twigler's 82.5 percent is a B — both good, but the party was viewed as now we can go onto something more important."

That isn't likely, Callow said it is "dumb" to compare Twigler's record in the City Council with Craig's in Congress. He promised Twigler would talk very soon about what votes Craig missed.

"The very point of our spot is that he's running for the Senate and missing votes," Callow said.

monialists was forged in opposition to the expansion plan, joined by most state political leaders. They opposed not only the amount of land sought by the government but also its plans to allow low-level "supersonic" flights over the expanded range because of the negative impact on livestock, wildlife and recreation in the high desert area of Owyhee and Elmore counties.

"As we reshape our forces and close or realign bases, the department must ensure that we propose the acquisition of land only where there is clearly demonstrated need," Deputy Defense Secretary Donald Atwood said in a memorandum announcing the acquisition ban, on Sept. 13.

No acquisition can be advanced under monarism without Atwood's approval, including those for the National Guard if they involve federal financing. The only exceptions are civil-law projects by the Army Corps of Engineers, renewals of existing withdrawals, leases, permits or other use agreements other than those at bases targeted for closure.

Also exempted, the memorandum said, would be acquisitions "for urgent military requirements or when national balance, application of the moratorium would have an adverse effect on the Department's ability to perform its mission."

Atwood said he and Defense Secretary Richard Cheney want to change fundamentally the way the Department of Defense acquires land in the future.

Gulf oil shock pushes inflation upward; trade deficit worsens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Skyrocketing oil costs pushed prices up as sharp 0.8 percent last month as the Persian Gulf crisis began hitting Americans' wallets, the government said Tuesday.

The seasonally adjusted increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was double the 0.4 percent rise in July and the largest since January, when a severe cold snap pushed prices up 1.1 percent.

In a separate report signalling a slacking economic growth, the Commerce Department reported the sharp increase in the trade deficit since August 1982: Americans imported $9.33 billion more than they exported in July, up 75 percent from June.

Analysts said the trade deterioration was particularly worrisome because it was preceded before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait set oil prices, and thus the value of U.S. imports, spiraling.

"We're looking at the worst of all possible worlds for the economy: worsening inflation and slower growth," said economist David Jones of Aubrey J. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York.

Financial markets turned down in response to the double dose of bad news.

For the first eight months of 1990, prices rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.2 percent, up sharply from the 4.6 percent rise for all of 1989.

"Inflation is now at the worst pace in eight years," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch. "It is the worst since 1982, when the economy was coming out of double-digit inflation."

The department attributed nearly half of the August increase to energy costs up 4.3 percent. Gasoline prices rose 7.6 percent, while fuel oil prices jumped 15.4 percent after six consecutive declines. It was the steepest increase in both categories since January.

Food inflation, however, moderated: Prices, held back by a decline in fruit and vegetable costs, rose 0.3 percent, the smallest since May. Fresh fruit prices tumbled 4 percent, but dairy costs rose 1.3 percent. Prices in other food categories also increased.

Including the volatile food and energy sectors, prices for a seasonally adjusted 65 percent after a 0.6 percent increase in July. That translates into an annual-core inflation rate of more than 6 percent, a persistence to accompany an econo-

They believe more bad news is coming in the next several months. Crude oil prices have continued to rise in September, topping $33 a barrel this month, compared with an average of $20 in July. That will work its way through to the gasoline pump. Also, increases are ahead for chemicals, paint, plastics and other petroleum-based products, said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co.

"The chain of effects of oil inflation is massive through the economy. We calculate that 75 percent to 80 percent of the items in the consumer index ultimately are affected by oil," he said.

Big polluters vow sharp cuts in emissions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine of the biggest chemical polluters have agreed to sharply reduce emissions of toxic pollutants from 40 plants with high health risks, the Environmental Protection Agency announced Tuesday.

EPA Administrator William K. Reilly said the reductions were being made voluntarily after lengthy negotiations with the agency. He said under current laws it would be exceedingly difficult and time-consuming to force similar emission cuts.

The nine corporations are among the major petrochemical companies in the nation. They are BASF, Dow Chemical Co., Exxon Corp., General Electric, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Occidental, Reichhold, Texaco, and Texaco Petrochemical.

The 40 plants are among 182 cited by the EPA last year as posing the greatest health risks as a result of toxic chemical releases into the air.

Age a factor in pilot safety, report says
 WASHINGTON — Pilots over age 60 have twice as many accidents as those in their 50s, but they're still safer than pilots in their 20s or 30s, according to a congressional report.

The Office of Technology Assessment reached no conclusion on whether the Federal Aviation Administration should revise its regulation forcing retirement at age 60 for pilots on major airlines — those which operate planes with more than 30 seats. There is no such requirement for corporate, private or commuter-airline pilots.

Guatemala added to U.S. drug list
 WASHINGTON — A sharp increase in opium production in Guatemala has prompted the State Department to add that country to its list of "drug problem" countries, an administration official said Tuesday.

According to official estimates, the Guatemala acreage devoted to opium is sufficient for a 12-ton yield. Any country with a yield of 5 tons or more is automatically placed on the State Department list.

Paper chain linked to child care bill
 WASHINGTON — A chain of children's paper loops stretched from the White House to the Capitol on Tuesday as supporters of increased federal help for child care demonstrated to demand action on a bill in Congress.

"Time is running out for this legislative session, just as it is running out for a generation of American children," said Gerald W. McEntee, president of a government workers union. "We ask the members of Congress to hear us — to finish their conference and pass the child care bill now."

Minister on trial for false imprisonment
 HONDO, Texas — An Assembly of God pastor and two church members accused of trying to "beat the devil" out of a south Texas man have gone on trial on false imprisonment charges.

The Rev. James Douglas Price, 42, pastor of First Assembly of God Church; and brothers Robert Leo-Nixon Jr., 42, and Alvin Roy Nixon, 31, are accused of false imprisonment in the Jan. 29 incident.

I dies as wall collapses; others trapped
 PHILADELPHIA — A brick wall collapsed Tuesday, killing one person, and trapping an undetermined number of others inside two buildings, police said.

Police Commissioner Willie Williams confirmed the death and the entrapment of others inside a downtown clothing store and a check-cashing agency.

Judge frees woman who kept silent
 NEWPORT, R.I. — A judge reversed himself Tuesday and released a 77-year-old woman from prison, concluding that her eight days behind bars failed to force her to reveal the whereabouts of her daughter and granddaughter.

"I can't imagine what will be more coercive than what the court has done in the past few days," Superior Court Judge Mark A. Pfeiffer said. "I hope somehow you can look into your heart and your conscience and understand what is being done here."

Former President Ronald Reagan explains his presidency to group of Soviet university students.

Reagan tells students at Gorbachev's alma mater that reforms are right

MOSCOW (AP) — Former President Reagan tutored Moscow university students Tuesday on the finer points of capitalism and democracy and said he'd copy Mikhail Gorbachev's economic reforms if he were Soviet leader.

Reagan also sat during a question-and-answer session at Moscow State University that he believes "Germany has rejoined the civilized world" and will not repeat "Nazi atrocities."

Reagan met with about 45 students for an hour in the university's main administration building in the Lenin Hills looking down on central Moscow. Later Tuesday, he met with the board of directors of The Associated Press.

"He's great. He impresses me. He radiates energy," Yuri Amnosov, a 21-year-old history student, said after listening to Reagan.

"He does not seem as old as he is," said another student, Edwin Kobish. "I would think that he was about 60. He just keeps on going."

Despite his hearing aid, the 79-year-old former president had trouble hearing some of the students' questions and had to be helped by U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock.

But he had no trouble lauding Gorbachev, one of the school's best known graduates, and said the two men continue to build on the relationship forged in front of a fireplace at their first summit in Geneva in November 1985.

"Who would have thought that the warmth of that fireplace in Geneva would melt the ice of the Cold War," Reagan said later in a luncheon toast at the U.S. Embassy.

Reagan told the students that if he suddenly became president of the Soviet Union and had to salvage its crumbling economy, he would follow the same course as Gorbachev — to bring about private ownership, to bring about the free economy that has proven so fruitful for our own country.

Gorbachev's economic reform proposals were among the topics the two discussed in the Kremlin on Monday, including the possibility of a Soviet referendum on the decollectivization of farms.

A key to the reform, he said, is a person's right to own land. "Until you've done so, you can't realize the patriotism and the pride that you have when you can stand on a piece of land and say, 'This is mine,'" Reagan told the group.

Reagan said that while he wholeheartedly supported German unification, he understood "the apprehensions of many Soviets who lost millions of people to the Nazis in World War II."

Winnie Mandela faces charges

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said Tuesday it will charge Winnie Mandela with kidnapping and assault, a move that could endanger its peace talks with her husband's African National Congress.

Mrs. Mandela, wife of ANC leader Nelson Mandela, will be charged in the alleged abduction and beatings of four young men at her home in December 1988. One of them, 14-year-old Stompot Seipei, was found dead.

Mrs. Mandela's bodyguard, Jerry Richards, was convicted of murdering Seipei and sentenced to death last month. At his trial, the surviving victims testified that Mrs. Mandela beat them with a whip. She has denied wrongdoing.

The announcement came as Mandela, the country's best known black leader, met with other ANC officials to discuss the police crackdown on black factional fighting in townships around Johannesburg.

Mandela on Monday threatened to suspend the peace talks if the government fails to halt the carnage that has killed nearly 800 blacks since Aug. 12. Most of the fighting has been between Xhosa and other black ANC supporters and the Zulu-based conservative Inkatha movement.

He said new police measures announced Saturday, including reinforcements, roadblocks, weapons searches and mounted machine guns on police vehicles, would be "ineffective" and were a "license to kill" for security forces.

Mandela has staunchly defended his wife and might be encouraged by supporters to break off talks if the government proceeds with the prosecution.

President F.W. de Klerk and Mandela met twice last week and both say they want black-white talks ending apartheid to move forward as quickly as possible. But the township battles, combined with the charges against Mrs. Mandela, make setbacks appear more likely.

Report: Sri Lanka backs terror

LONDON (AP) — A pattern of "widespread murder" by government security forces appears to be continuing in Sri Lanka, Amnesty International said in a report released Wednesday.

In northeastern Sri Lanka, where government forces are battling Tamil separatists, "hundreds of defenseless civilians may have been victims of extra-judicial 'execution or disappearance,'" the report said.

"Indeed, the government appears to condone the summary killing of suspected (Tamil Tiger) members," it added.

As many as 30,000 people are believed to have died in 1988 and 1989 in the south of Sri Lanka, where the government faces Sinhalese rebels, the report said.

"Although reports of extra-judicial executions and 'disappearances' in southern Sri Lanka diminished after March 1990, they did not cease, and intimidation and death threats by government forces continued," the international human rights organization said.

The human rights group said the Janatha Vimukthi Peramuna opposition, Tamil separatists and the Indian peacekeeping force deployed in Sri Lanka between 1987 and 1990 were all guilty of serious human rights abuses.

4 killed as typhoon draws near to Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Heavy rains left four people dead and one missing and nine others injured as Typhoon Flo approached Japan's southern island of Kyushu on Tuesday, police said.

National Police Headquarters said all the casualties were reported on islands and coastal areas in southwestern Japan. Weather forecasters said the "large and powerful" typhoon was packing winds up to 113 mph.

Michio Hisuma of the Central Meteorological Agency said Flo was expected to reach Kyushu sometime Wednesday.

Iraq trying to break the will of Kuwaiti people, officials claim

KHAFJI, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Iraq's erratic opening of the border with Kuwait appeared to be part of a harsh campaign to break the Kuwaiti people's will to resist, Kuwaiti officials, diplomats and refugees said Tuesday.

Over the past week Iraqi authorities have introduced a series of measures that have put the population on edge, they said. They ranged from the trivial — like making men shave — to blowing up houses of suspected resistance members.

"They are trying to break our morale, to make us weak," said Faisal, a 27-year-old computer programmer who fled Kuwait Tuesday. "They want us just to give up."

Faisal was one of about 750 refugees who made it to the Saudi border crossing at Khafji Tuesday, a steep drop from the thousands who arrived the two previous days. On Monday, Iraqi troops started seizing cars under the guise of 48-hour standoffs from cars. That sharply reduced the numbers attempting to leave.

Also, fewer cars were being permitted across the border. Just one vehicle with a sick, elderly man in it was allowed over in a midafternoon.

The family in that car said all others were told to return to Kuwait City and try again Wednesday.

The hapless releases appear designed "to cause general consternation and upset the people," said a Western diplomat observing the border in case any of his nationals made it through.

Saudi police expelled reporters from the border area Tuesday afternoon before conducting a second thorough search of the hundreds of people who arrived over the past three days without a single identity document.

Iraqi troops have confiscated passports, car registrations and all other documents they found.

A team of four dogs trained to sniff explosives and narcotics assisted in the Saudi search.

Kuwaiti government officials questioned the refugees closely to check their accents, family ties and knowledge of Kuwait. Saudi officials have said they want to make sure no infiltrators make it through.

A senior official from the Kuwaiti defense department said Iraq over the past week had intensified its efforts to break any resistance, find all foreigners still hiding in Kuwait, infiltrate the Kuwaiti population with intelligence agents and seize as much private property as possible.

The official, who had just returned from Kuwait, said the campaign stalled resistance plans to leave, car bombs throughout the city.

"We cannot move like in earlier days," he said, noting that checkpoints were put up every 300 yards, sometimes closer in neighborhoods of suspected resistance activity.

Each checkpoint now had at least one Republican Guard, the best-trained Iraqi troops, assigned to it in the past week, he said.

One refugee arrived at the border crossing with a fier released two days ago by the Iraqi authorities. It was directed at both the armed resistance and the civil disobedience campaign. All Kuwaitis in essential services have refused to go to work.

The fier ordered everyone to return to work or face heavy fines. Shops would be opened by force, it said.

Police and military officers are to turn themselves in within a week or face execution. Anyone caught firing a gun will be hanged or shot, it said.

Anyone found keeping a weapon will have his house destroyed on his head," the fier said. And if the authorities confirm shooting from any house the area 360 degrees around it will be leveled.

The defense department official said the past week saw a marked jump in executions, house-to-house searches with the entire neighborhood sealed off and a higher level of overall harassment.

"The situation is misery," said Massoud, a 38-year-old refugee. Like most of those arriving here he appeared somewhat relieved that he would no longer have to run a daily gauntlet of Iraqi soldiers. But he was confused and depressed about whether he made the right decision to flee his country and abandon it to the Iraqis.

"When they invaded, they said they came to protect us," the defense department official said. "Now their mood has changed and they are trying to kill the Kuwaiti people."

Many refugees spoke of executions over the past week. None could be independently confirmed but the details of the stories were similar.

Ennuks Mohammedjadi, 45, said he fled after the corpses of two cousins and a friend were returned to their houses two weeks after they were hauled away, accused of taking part in the resistance.

The crackdown was pushing people to flee because they were terrorized about stepping outside but going crazy from inactivity indoors.

Experts: Democracy not likely in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Persian Gulf crisis culminates with the removal of Saddam Hussein from power, experts on that part of the world say they wouldn't look for democracy to blossom under the Iraqi flag.

Saddam's "most likely" successor would be a Saddam clone.

The nature of any new government in Iraq, no matter what the denouement of the current crisis, is one of the puzzles for those trying to visualize how the crisis might end.

Saddam could lose his showdown with George Bush and hang on. But it is just as likely that he could not survive such a humiliating defeat. In that event, the experts suspect his successor would be someone from his inner military circles, someone much like him.

In Eastern Europe in the winter of 1989 and the spring of 1990, the world saw one democracy after another fall to be replaced by governments responsive to the popular will.

But democracy is alien to Iraq and most of the rest of the Arab world. Egypt is the only Arab country with a semblance of it.

So the best bet is that whatever follows Saddam is likely to be a government similar to the one that exists now — an automatic, one-man rule — says Herman Elits, former U.S. ambassador to Egypt and Saudi Arabia, now a Boston University professor.

It is "presumably someone in the military," agrees Daniel Pipes, director of the Foreign Policy Research Institute in Philadelphia. But, he says, the successor would probably only be a new face behind the same old iron fist.

The next government, like the present one, Pipes says, is likely to be based on power, not principles.

Saddam Hussein doesn't stand for anything," he says, and neither would his successor.

By contrast, Iran, Iraq's neighbor, is a government based on ideology, the Muslim principles of the ayatollahs.

U.S. rebukes Jordan for conference of radicals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Tuesday it expects Jordan will end its continuing purchases of Iraqi oil and also blasted that country for being host to a conference that featured the Arab world's most radical anti-American elements.

According to official estimates, Jordan formerly imported 90 per cent of its oil requirements from Iraq but has reduced that figure to 30 per cent since the United Nations economic embargo against Iraq went into effect six weeks ago.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the administration understands Jordan's unique dependence on Iraq. The administration is hopeful, she added, that with the help of assistance from donor countries, Jordan soon will be in full compliance with the U.S. goal of a "total trade embargo" against Iraq.

Ms. Tutwiler was far more critical of Jordan's decision to be the host for a three-day conference of Arab radicals and guerrillas. The delegates warned that their objective is to strike against the American interests everywhere and by all means."

Pentagon says Iraq's troop strength increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over the last two weeks' Iraqi troop strength in and near Kuwait has risen to 360,000 while some tanks and artillery have been pulled back from the front lines near Saudi Arabia, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The Pentagon's last estimate two weeks ago was that there were 265,000 Iraqi troops and 2,200 tanks in Kuwait and in nearby sections of Iraq.

Spokesman Pete Williams said there are now 360,000 Iraqi troops in those areas together with 2,800 tanks, 1,800 armored vehicles and 1,450 artillery pieces. Although the number of tanks increased overall, there are fewer near the Saudi Arabian border.

In another development, Williams said, a team from the guided missile cruiser USS Biddle stopped and boarded a Soviet cargo ship, the Pyotr Masherov, on Monday, as part of the effort to block trade with Iraq.

He described the boarding in the waters of the northern Red Sea as "routine" and said it was conducted with the permission of the master of the Soviet vessel.

The Soviet ship was permitted to proceed and it entered the Jordanian port of Aqaba, Williams said.

TWIN FALLS — Police say two men who robbed service station attendants at gunpoint Monday night are long gone.

As far as we know, they left the area, said Twin Falls police detective Sgt. Jim Howells. Howells said the two may be from Washington state and he hopes to get a warrant for their arrests in the next week.

Two men produced a small, automatic handgun and demanded money from two clerks at Blue Lakes Pump and Wash at about 9:30 p.m. Monday. They made off with less than $100, Howells said, and sprayed Mace at the clerks before they fled.

The women were not seriously injured and called police within five minutes. No shots were fired, Howells said.

City, county and state law enforcement set up road blocks on highways leading out of town, but the men were not caught, Howells said the robbers stopped and asked someone for directions to Nevada.

Falling pine tree hospitalizes member of firefighting crew

TWIN FALLS — An errant lodgepole pine tree injured a firefighter in the South Hills Tuesday morning.

Joe Miller of Salmon, assigned to the Forest Service's Sawtooth Hotshots, was hit when an old lodgepole fell. Located about 20 feet away from where he was working, the lodgepole struck him a glancing blow.

The tree fell accidentally; it was not one being cut.

Miller was treated on the scene by emergency medical technician Steve Daigh, also a member of the Hotshot crew. The Murrough Quick Response Unit, the Cassia County Sheriff's Office and Marty Jacobs, owner of the nearby Magic Mountain Ski Resort, also assisted in bringing Miller out.

He was taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with a possible skull fracture and possible broken ribs.

A hospital spokeswoman said Miller was in serious but stable condition in the intensive care unit.

The Hotshots, a highly trained firefighting crew stationed at the Twin Falls District Office, was working south of the Diamondfield Jack winter recreation area.

Fire damages restaurant, injures Buhl firefighter

BUHL — A Monday morning fire caused about $3,000 damage to a Buhl restaurant and sent a firefighter to the hospital with second-degree burns.

Firefighter Al Mittelstaedt was treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with second-degree burns, which were caused when hot oil splashed out of a deep fryer onto his legs as he used a fire extinguisher, said Buhl fire Capt. Tom Owens.

Mittelstaedt was the first at the scene of the fryer fire at the Home Place restaurant, Owens said.

The fire was extinguished at about 11:15 a.m., Owens said.

The fire was caused in a deep fryer but impinged on the wall and duct system, he said. It began accidentally but the exact cause was still under investigation Tuesday. Owens estimated damage done by the fire and firefighting efforts at $3,000.

PUC rejects Eden-Hazelton call for toll-free service

TWIN FALLS — Eden-Hazelton area residents' request to have toll-free service extended to include Twin Falls has been denied by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

The commission said US West Communications provides adequate long-distance discount packages. About 62 percent of Eden-Hazelton residents subscribe to long-distance packages, which represent significant bargains over normal rates, the commission said.

The commission also rejected a plan that would have allowed customers in some Magic Valley counties to select other exchanges which they could call toll-free for a monthly fee.

Local folks have decided to petition the PUC to hold another hearing. The petition can be found today from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the high school and Thursday and Friday at the L & L Market in Eden as well as at Valley Quik Stop in Hazelton.

Skywest, Horizon OK space sharing

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Skywest Airlines and Horizon Air have agreed to share space until the terminal at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport is renovated.

Representatives from the two carriers told the Airport Advisory Board on Tuesday that an agreement about baggage and counter space and the baggage belt had been reached. The details have yet to be worked out.

Skywest provides about two-thirds of the airport flights—but is short on terminal space. The airline had been negotiating to share space with Horizon but when it appeared they could not agree Horizon asked the Twin Falls City Council to exchange the two carriers' leases when they expire in October.

This would have allowed Skywest to take Horizon's space, but the council took no action in the hopes that the airlines could reach agreement.

Skywest's Robert Davis told the board Tuesday that Skywest would prefer to lease the baggage space from the airport rather than sublease from Horizon. The board agreed to this.

Horizon representative Lance Horjels told the board Horizon wanted first choice of space when the terminal is remodeled.

Board member Dick Showell said positioning won't matter as much when the terminal is replaced.

Despite delay, city launches effort to obtain housing grant

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls' community development director has obtained an application for part of $220,500 to upgrade low-income rental housing and said he will meet the deadline to apply for the money by Friday.

Ten Idaho cities are eligible to compete for the federal grant money administered through the Idaho Housing Agency. The money goes toward rental units. Landlords must pay for half of the improvements.

Twin Falls was designated as one of the eligible cities, but the application got lost in Community Development Director LaMar Orton's filing cabinet.

"I filed it where I could be sure to retrieve it," he said. Unfortunately, he could not find the application when he looked for it.

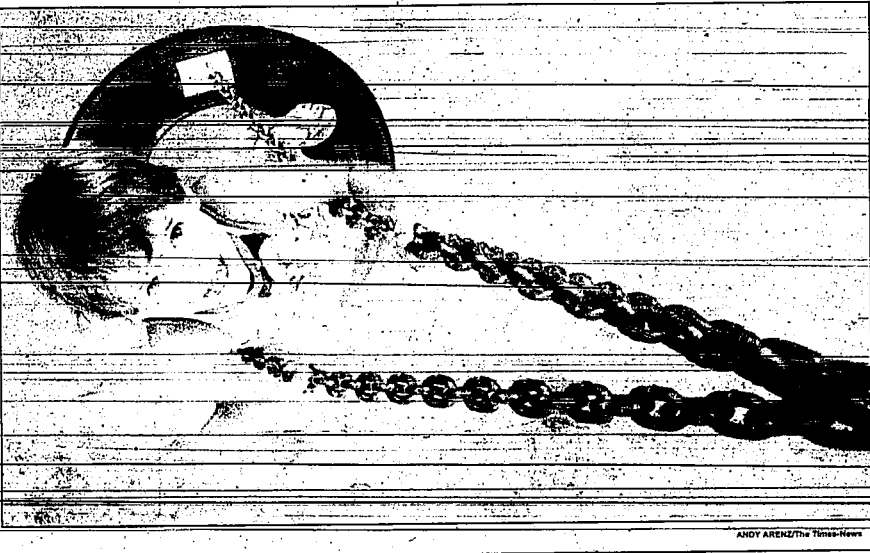

He obtained a copy of the application from the City Community Action Agency and is using 1980 census data to determine where the city can most use the money.

Twin Falls will ask for $100,000, he said. Nampa has asked for $175,000, according to Orton.

The executive director of the Community Action Agency, Betty Wooten, said Orton has a formidable task to complete the application by Friday. But it can be done.

"An awful lot of us have put in a proposal like that at the last minute... and we made it... It's very admirable of him to do that."

If five-year-old Elijah Weber gets tired, it's not likely he wants to rest, but take a spin on a chain swing. Besides going around and around on the Kimberly City Park attraction, Weber found climbing the chains was also a challenge. The Hansen youth spent a recent afternoon in the park with his brother, Jadtlan, while his mother, Tracy, attended a church meeting.

Twin Falls man faces charge of manslaughter

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man has been charged with causing the deaths of two people by driving drunk and striking their car head-on Labor Day weekend.

Gustav Bubb, 35, 1240 Fourth Ave. E., appeared Monday before 5th District Magistrate Judge R. Michael Redman on two counts of involuntary vehicular manslaughter and one count of driving without privileges. The judge set Bubb's bail at $20,000 cash for each felony count and $500 for the misdemeanor, according to court records.

Court records say Bubb is charged with driving a 1967 pickup across the center line of U.S. Highway 30 and colliding with an oncoming car head-on, killing Dorothy M. Johnson, 50, and Deputy Sheriff Charles H. Johnson of Twin Falls.

The accident occurred Sunday, Sept. 2, about a mile east of Buhl.

Bubb had a blood-alcohol concentration of more than 1 percent, which is the threshold for illegally driving under the influence, the charges say.

Lt. Win Ellis County Chief Deputy Prosecutor, John L. Schilling said Bubb's blood alcohol concentration was 1.7 percent.

Blaine group chooses 2 from list of jail solutions

By Barbara Newert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Two options have been identified as potential solutions to the Blaine County Jail's inadequacies — build a new facility or add on to the old one. And local folk may get a chance to vote on one or the other in November.

A 16-member study group of Blaine County residents and elected officials has narrowed the field down to two choices from the original list of alternatives.

One option is to expand the jail facility at its present location to envelope several lots across First Street. The expansion would create an additional 25,000-square-foot building, but would leave no room for further expansion.

It would also require Hailey to vacate and close First Street, said Leonard Harlig, study group vice chairman.

A second option is to build a new, modern 24,000-square-foot facility on property outside city limits, immediately west of the Lion's Park past the bridge on Crook Creek Canyon Road.

The approximate cost of the expansion proposal is $4.2 million compared to $4.8 million to build a new facility, Harlig said.

The study group has been working since June to research an adequate site and to find a design and financial package for a new jail.

In August, the present 32-bed jail facility was inspected by a group of state correction officials and rated as "substandard," Harlig said the rating was "so substandard that the usable capacity was reduced to 15 beds." Due to state requirements, the current ability to use 15 beds could be cut in half if the jail were to house women prisoners or people "with contagious" diseases, said Harlig.

"This means that a sizable number of prisoners have to be released to some form of house release or simply let go until beds are available," Harlig said, adding that those options are not very satisfactory solutions.

"I think the critical issue here is whether or not we want to have adequate space for our criminals on the inside, or if we want to have them walking around the streets," Harlig said.

He also pointed out a new jail or a jail upgrade is necessary because of the risk of inmate-killer-inadequate facilities.

Harlig said he favors a new jail because

Burley considers new city hall

By Christopher Clark
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The City Council wants input on plans to either remodel City Hall or build a new one.

The main purpose of Monday's City Council meeting was to collect such public input. But only one person spoke up.

Pam Howard, of Idaho Citizens Network, advised that the new City Hall should be handicapped accessible.

"Though the current was a little larger than normal, we got relatively little input from the community as far as ideas or suggestions were concerned," Mayor Frank Brumley said.

The City Council has been plagued with ongoing controversy about the City Hall's lack of handicapped accessibility.

Currently, members from the City Council are asking for public input.

"This is taxpayers' money, that we are talking about using and the costs will be substantial," the mayor said adamantly.

He went on to say that any and all input concerning a resolution to the problem would be appreciated.

Bids for purchasing gas and equipment were also accepted during the short meeting.

The next City Council meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Monday, Oct. 1, at the Burley City Hall.

Ketchum drafts ordinance on feeding of predators

By David R. Langhorst
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Following a barrage of complaints from Canyon Run residents and Ketchum's animal control officer, City Attorney Ed Lawson is drafting an ordinance prohibiting the feeding of predatory animals and birds.

"I quit feeding crows and magpies back on Aug. 4, and foxes on Aug. 22, before they ever even went to the City Council," Brooks, 75, said in a telephone interview.

On Sept. 4, Brooks' neighbors petitioned the Ketchum City Council to draft an ordinance to stop the feeding, which Animal Control Officer Judy Kildare described as a potential danger to pets and humans.

"This whole thing has been blown all out of proportion," Brooks said.

"The ordinance was not ready for this week's Ketchum City Council meeting but could be introduced when the council meets on Oct. 1."

At Monday night's meeting the council voted to appropriate additional money received from local-option taxes and state highway user's revenue to be used in the current 1989-90 fiscal year.

In other business, the council approved the annexation of the Beaver Springs and Northwood No. 1 subdivisions. A compromise agreement with the homeowners in the annexed areas commits a portion of the subdivision to open space for recreation, permits horses to be kept in the subdivision and allows roads in the subdivision to remain private.

Annexation of the area, located north of Ketchum across Idaho Highway 75 from the Big Wood Golf Course, had been contested for almost a year by the landowners who wanted to remain under the jurisdiction of Blaine County.

Governor slams candidate Andrus wants relief of property tax burden for potential role as spoiler

MOSCOW (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus blasted former district judge Andrew Schwam as an independent candidate for the Idaho Senate, saying he was threatening the traditional Democratic Party hold-in-Latah County seat.

And Democratic candidate Craig Mosman called on Schwam to withdraw from the race during a three-way debate with Republican Gary Scott. It came during the weekend Latah County Fair.

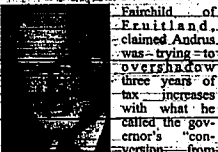

Andrus told Schwam at the fair his entry into the Senate race after the May primary election is likely to fill the election in favor of Scott, former Moscow mayor.

Andrus also told Latah County Commissioner Nancy Johnson that Schwam is "screwing up the race" and a vote for Schwam is a vote for Mosman.

Democrats are in the minority in the Idaho Senate, 23-19, but hope to gain a majority in the November

BOISE (AP) — Making good on his re-election announcement pledge to "reduce the tax burden of the people of Idaho," Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday he will propose using the new state surplus to fund local government revenue tax increases.

Andrus said he would win an unprecedented fourth term in November.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday he will propose using the new state surplus to fund local government revenue tax increases.

Fairchild of Eruitland claimed Andrus was trying to overhedge the state's tax increases with what he called the governor's "conversion" from tax-increaser to tax-cutter just 49 days before election.

He blamed Andrus for signing a personal income tax hike in 1987, and proposing other tax increases in 1987, 1988 and 1989. But the personal income tax hike was pushed by Republican legislative leaders after they rejected the governor's proposal to repeal a $12 million to $15 million annual tax break for big business.

While Fairchild proposed earlier this year using the state surplus to underwrite local government revenue sharing that included property tax relief, Andrus said in his re-election announcement on March 19 that he would propose a tax-cut plan if the state economy remained strong.

Based on revenue estimates from administration economists, state lawmakers will have a one-time windfall of around $45 million to deal with when they begin writing the new state budget in January. That amount would be on top of more than $250 million to finance state operations for the year, that begins in July, 1991.

Despite the fears of a national economic slowdown in the wake of the Middle East confrontation and the oil crisis it has inspired, analysts expect Idaho's resurgent economy to remain comparatively strong through the next two years.

Andrus said that continuing economic strength makes tax relief possible.

"The property tax is for most Idahoans the most onerous tax," the governor said. "It is time to return some of the budget surplus we have made to our citizens. We can make reductions and still continue our commitments to improving education and dealing with Idaho's other priority concerns."

Salmon panel makeup, notions worry Idahoans

BOISE (AP) — Idaho salmon and environmental advocates fear they are being overlooked for a 20-member committee charged with saving the Northwest's beleaguered salmon runs.

ate the panel. It is charged with devising a management plan that would save Snake River chinook and sockeye, and lower Columbia River coho salmon runs.

And while Idaho irrigation interests expect to be named to the committee, they say they are hearing rumblings from Columbia River authorities that Snake River water rights upstream could be subject to change.

Hatfield's idea was to avert endangered-species listings for the salmon stocks and the resulting spotted-owl-like economic backlash that could occur. Last spring, several fish and tribal conservation interests petitioned the National Marine Fisheries Service to list five species of salmon as threatened or endangered.

"A lot of people down there think Idaho is this big pool of water that will solve all the problems for the fish," said Sheri Chapman, a spokesman for Idaho irrigators. "That just ain't so."

The agency is expected to make a final ruling by 1992.

As the Northwest Power Planning Council completes a list of members for the coordinating group this week, salmon advocate Ed Chaney of Eagle blasted the council's selections so far.

The council has selected The Mediation Institute, the same concern hired to mediate a settlement to Idaho's wilderness statement, to arbitrate the salmon board. The panel is charged with resolving threats to the salmon in just five months, by February 1991.

"We have no assurance right now that any public interest organization from Idaho will be at the table," Chaney said. "We shouldn't have to be down there (in Portland) begging to have a seat at the table, but that's exactly what's happening."

Crow said the mediator will help complete the list of participants.

The council's Steve Crow disagreed. "I certainly won't be in a process that excludes anyone, especially Idaho interests," said Crow, director of governmental affairs.

Both Power Council member Jim Goller of Idaho and Andy Brunelle, special natural resources assistant to Gov. Cecil Andrus, say they expect several Idahoans to sit on the panel.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Or., August called on the power council to "take a four-state energy and environmental planning compact — to create voices are heard," said Will Whelan of the Idaho Conservation League. "These are upriver Snake River stocks that spawn mainly in Idaho. We've got a big investment in these fish."

Slain inmate was warned of danger.
CARSON CITY — Nevada Prison Director Ron Angelone said Tuesday an Elkhart State Prison inmate strangled and stabbed to death in his cell last month had been warned by officials of a rumor that other convicts wanted to attack him.

But Angelone told the Nevada Appeal that the Aug. 20 death of Joseph Beeson, 20, of Orem, Utah, wasn't due to organized gang activity at the maximum-security prison.

Beeson was serving a double life term for the killing of a 23-year-old Las Vegas newsboy working at a convenience store. His companion, Edward Bennett, got the death sentence for the murder of Michelle Moore.

Angelone said guards didn't follow proper procedures and electronically opened the door to Beeson's cell, letting in two inmates who are the chief suspects in the slaying.

USU enrollment causes housing crunch
LOGAN, Utah — Enrollment at Utah State University is expected to far exceed predictions, so school officials have appealed to the community to do all it can to relieve a severe student housing shortage.

Gary Smith, director of housing and residential life at USU, said the school may be forced to turn "a lot of students away" when classes begin Sept. 26 — unless Loganites open up their unused rooms and apartments.

As of Monday, enrollment was running more than 1,200 higher than the same time in 1989, when 13,290 students had enrolled. School officials had estimated an increase of only 400 students.

Trial postponed in mall tax dispute
SANDPOINT — A trial to settle a Bonner Mall property assessment dispute has been postponed.

Mall owner Harry Magnuson, who has not paid property taxes for 1987, 1988 or 1989 on the site near Sandpoint, was scheduled to go to trial Tuesday.

Magnuson refuses to pay mall property tax, saying the county overvalued the property in 1989.

Meanwhile, Liberty Lake Investments Inc. is suing Magnuson, alleging that he hacked Liberty Lake Mall opponents to protect his own mall, University City Shopping Center, in 1987.

"I believe we will have adequate revenue to target that tax relief to substantial reductions in local property taxes," the governor said in a statement. He said he had state budget analysts already drafting the tax-cut plan and details would be available soon.

But his underdog opponent, former Republican state Sen. Roger Johnson, declined to comment on the exchange, but said it is no secret that Andrus strongly supports Mosman and feels that entry of a third party candidate could split the vote to the point where the Republican could win.

Jury says Reedy had too much alcohol

PORT CRANTZ, N.Y. (AP) — A jury found a Detroit lawyer guilty Tuesday of driving with a blood-alcohol content above the legal limit for intoxication in the Christmas Day crash that killed former major-league manager Billy Martin.

William Reedy, 53, was charged with driving while intoxicated, a misdemeanor, and with driving on a license that had been suspended for about two hours before reaching a verdict.

Reedy faces a mandatory fine of between $350 and $500, revocation of his driving privileges in New York state for at least six months and a possible jail sentence of up to a year.

In Reedy's case, the jury felt he was not impaired due to his high tolerance level for alcohol, but it did find that he was legally over the 0.10 percent limit, said Kevin Gwynne, assistant Broome County district attorney.

Miami coach cracks down on showboating

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Coach Dennis Erickson, who last week told his Miami Hurricanes to temper their talk, has now cracked down on showboating.

At least two Hurricanes "crossed the line" of good taste with dancing, prancing and posing after big plays in last Saturday's nationally televised 52-24 victory at California, Erickson said Tuesday.

"I was not proud of it, and I know our team wasn't very proud of it," the coach said during his weekly news conference. "There's a point where it's embarrassing to the program."

Erickson said players guilty of excessive celebrating in the future will be benched for the rest of the game and possibly longer. It was the coach's second edict concerning behavior in as many weeks. Following an opening game loss at Brigham Young, he ordered the Hurricanes to stop making "degrading" comments about opponents.

Erickson declined to spell out guidelines as to what kind of celebrating he would permit.

"We are going to play hard, and we are going to be excited about playing the game, and we are going to jump up and down," he said. "But there's that line that we're not going to cross at the University of Miami. If they do, they're just not going to play."

Celebrating by several Hurricanes drew boos from the California fans and a shower of postgame criticism in Bay Area newspapers and on Miami radio talk shows.

The primary targets were receiver Randall Hill and linebackers Michael Barrow and Jesse Armstead. Hill raised both arms after each of his first six catches. Barrow and Armstead shook their hips in a sack dance.

Yawning and gloating are nothing new at Miami, but the reaction to Saturday's antics was unprecedented.

"Some things were accepted three years ago that aren't accepted now by the public," Erickson said. Even before the crackdown was announced, the "negative" response from fans and the media had convinced the ninth-ranked Hurricanes to tone down their act, Barrow said.

"People my age pretty much understand the dances," Barrow said, "because some of the things we did, you'll see a lot of people doing in nightclubs."

"Mostly the people that disagreed with it were older alumni. I can understand that, because they helped build this school. They don't want it to end up like a nightclub on the football field."

Miami's next game is Sept. 29 at home against Iowa. What will celebrations of big plays look like then?

"A square dance," offensive tackle Mike Sullivan said.

Before the season, Erickson said improving Miami's reputation was one of his goals. And some players say the program's national image is better than before Erickson became coach last season.

"We've come a long way in trying to break the reputation it used to hold," Sullivan said. "Now we've taken a step backward."

Erickson has grown weary of the controversies over Miami's talking and dancing.

"Did we win Saturday?" he asked. "I get confused sometimes around here."

Perfect health leads answers in poll on Seventh Heaven

What would put you in Seventh Heaven? Eating a great meal every day? Being a rock star? Having a billion dollars? The Segram's 7th Heaven Poll asked 1,200 Americans what their idea of Seventh Heaven is, and perfect health was the top answer, followed closely by an ideal marriage, having good children and stress-free living.

The poll was inspired by the company's new cocktail concoction, Segram's 7th Heaven, made by mixing Segram's 7 with orange juice and amaretto. Men and women nationwide were asked to rate a list of options for the definition of Seventh Heaven. Items were rated from 1 (completely disagree) to 10 (total agreement).

The most strongly agreed-with criteria for Seventh Heaven, perfect health, had a response average of 8.87, followed by an ideal marriage at 8.48, having good children at 8.44, a stress-free life at 7.84, and falling in love at a 7.50.

Pillsbury Doughboy offers recipes on 25th anniversary

He may not look it, but the Pillsbury Doughboy is celebrating his 25th birthday this year. In 1965, Poppin Fresh made his first appearance touting the virtues of ready-to-bake biscuits. Since then, he has appeared in 611 commercials that account for more than 270 minutes of air time, playing roles ranging from painter to skateboarder.

Oh, yes, he has been poked 32,500 times.

As part of the celebration, Pillsbury is featuring "Poppin Fresh Recipes" in the October issue of its "Classic Cookbooks" series. The cookbook has 85 recipes for main dishes and sandwiches, breads, snacks and appetizers, sweet rolls and coffee cake, and desserts.

The cookbook is now on sale for $2.50 at newsstands and supermarkets, or you can get it by sending $3.50 (includes postage and handling) to Pillsbury Publications, Department 8020, 1601-N, Fourth St., LeSueur, Minn. 56058.

Dietitian says cooking at home may become thing of the past

By the year 2000, people who cook will be as rare as people who knit their own sweaters, says a spokeswoman for the American Dietetic Association.

Youn Horbiak, a registered dietitian and consultant for corporate health promotion programs, bases her predictions on demographics that include more women in the work force, an aging population, higher household incomes and an increased ethnic population.

In 10 years, 84 percent of women will be working outside their homes. This and other changes will forever change the way we eat, Horbiak predicts.

Americans will limit cooking to weekends.

Trucks equipped with kitchens will deliver evening meals.

More chefs will develop healthy dinners to be sold at grocery stores for a quick retreat at home.

Single-serving, plastic foods will be the popular way to entertain with groups sitting down to dinner, each served eating a different food.

Industry moves to keep modern life tasting good

By Terry Kinney
 The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — From high-tech chicken pot pies to powdered soft drinks, a super-secret world is at work on much of our food.

The flavor industry replaces the savor we destroy, making a TV dinner taste less like cardboard.

"In processing food to get it into the form people want or to make it safe, flavor is processed out," said Bob Pellegrino, general manager at Cincinnati-based Fries & Fries, one of the nation's largest flavor producers.

Grandma went to her garden or market for fresh produce hours before preparing and serving it. But we've come to expect food to wait months in warehouses and on store shelves, before it's popped into a microwave oven to be ready to eat in seconds — and to still taste as good as grandma's.

To a surprising degree, it does, thanks to flavorists who have created an estimated $750 million-a-year industry that helps make the food we eat palatable.

Flavorists usually are chemists who have spent several years learning to identify and duplicate natural flavors. Many say they can discern thousands of flavors, nuances such as the difference between the part of an apple near the skin and the part near the core.

The flavorist's challenge is to restore natural flavors, no matter what modern processing, packaging, storage and cooking have done to them.

America's changing lifestyle means that food processors have to compensate for flavor that used to be provided by animal fats, cream and other high-cholesterol foods that don't fit into our diet-conscious lives.

"There are a few words that are driving our industry — light or low-fat, natural, and convenient," Pellegrino said.

Flavoring agents are pervasive. Dairy products, bakery goods, desserts and beverages of all kinds are laced with flavorings. Just about every package in your pantry lists flavoring as an ingredient.

Because ingredients are listed in descending order by weight, flavoring is just because it comprises less than one-half of 1 percent of the weight of the product — sometimes just a few parts per million.

"That means 100 pounds of flavoring makes more than 20,000 pounds of product," Pellegrino said. Liquid flavoring rolls out of his plant in 55-gallon drums and powders in 10,000-pound lots.

The flavor-making industry is secretive and clanish, Pellegrino said. A food company that markets its brand has a proprietary interest in the way its potato pie, pudding or potato chip tastes and doesn't want anybody else to produce that flavor.

Scorching recipes bring Lavender back home

By Joan Bean
 Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Although it's been 15 years since Susan Lavender's last visit to her home town, New Orleans, she hasn't forgotten how to cook Cajun-style.

This distinctive cooking style originated with the Cajun people, who a couple of centuries ago migrated from France to Nova Scotia and then to Louisiana. Lavender says their food is hot.

"Cajun food is different from Mexican food or anything else," she says. "My best description of it as far as homess goes — you can feel it in the back of your eyes."

Lavender says this heat releases all kinds of flavors. To create this taste bud inferno, all of the peppers are used: white, red and red pepper flakes.

Some of her family's recipes call for ingredients that are unavailable here, such as shrimp heads. Ordinarily shrimp heads and shells are cooked to make shrimp stock, so she uses bottled clam juice instead.

"You have to kind of improvise just ever so slightly," she says. "You have to be careful with your substitutions."

Lavender's roots in New Orleans go back three generations, but because her father was in the Air Force, she lived in many places. She had the opportunity to eat a variety of foods — Spanish, Italian, German, but says Cajun is her favorite.

"But, that's because it brings back home to me," she says.

The following are samples of Lavender's Cajun recipes. First let's try an appetizer.

BARBECUED SHRIMP

Serves 4
 The seasoning mix:
 1 teaspoon ground red pepper (cayenne)
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 teaspoon crushed pepper
 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
 1/2 teaspoon rosemary leaves
 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
 1 teaspoon black pepper
 the rest of the ingredients:
 2 dozen shrimp
 1 stick of 5 tablespoons unsalted butter
 1/2 teaspoons minced garlic
 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 1/2 cup clam broth
 1/2 cup beer, at room temperature

In a small bowl combine the seasoning mix ingredients. Combine 1 stick of the butter, the garlic, Worcestershire sauce and seasonings mix in a large skillet over high heat. When the butter is melted, add the shrimp and cook for 2 minutes, shaking the pan in a back and forth motion.

Husband's claim of fidelity in face of disease sparks doubt in wife

DEAR ABBY: I have been happily married for eight years and was intimate with my husband for the year and a half that we were engaged. We have three children, all born by C-section, the youngest being 8 weeks old.

SUSPICIOUS IN ARIZONA
Along: Is he lying to me?

On my last visit to my OB doctor, he diagnosed me as having chlamydia. I have been faithful to my husband for 9 1/2 years, and he also claims to be with me. But for this entire period of time, could it be true that neither of us has shown any symptoms of this disease?

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: My gynecology consultant, Dr. Joseph Milstein, says, "Eighty percent of the cases of chlamydia are asymptomatic (without symptoms), and you could indeed have been carrying the disease for 10 years or more without knowing it."

But, if you were WITHOUT symptoms and your chlamydia was discovered from a routine culture, it is possible that the organism has been there since you and your husband were both single.

which were always getting him in trouble with the police.

What should we say when we're asked, "How many children do you have, and what do they do?"

DEAR UNCERTAIN—Say, "We have three sons. The two older ones are doing quite well, but unfortunately, our youngest son has had a history of mental problems, and he's trying to find himself."

There's no need to confide family secrets to strangers. If you're pressed for details, don't list simply say it's a rather painful subject and you'd rather not talk about it. End of story. No need to elaborate.

ty Fair Board, staff and management, we would like to thank all of the exhibitors, 4-H and FFA members, volunteers, employees and fair and rodeo fans for making the 1990 Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo a success.

Without the support of employees who take vacation to work, exhibitors who operate two business locations during the week, and parents of 4-H and FFA members who leave home for a week, we could not have a show that entertains such a wide variety of fairgoers.

We thank the many local businesses and service groups who contribute equipment, time, services, labor and sponsorships because their support helps pay the bills.

Thank you again to the citizens of southern Idaho for making the 1990 Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo the best ever.

Home/garden

Precautions can help flowers, vegetables survive longer into fall

Summer has continued so long into September that it seems like frost will never come. However, we will soon have frost which will damage or kill tender vegetables and flowers. We usually have one or two frosty nights followed by another spell of warm growing weather.

Young transplants like minic, there are still a lot of green-fruits which you would like to see ripen. Tomatoes, peppers, melons and cucumbers are the most tender vegetables which can be covered to protect from frost. Tender flowers include marigolds, zinnias, nasters, impatiens and begonias. Other common flowers like petunias, Alyssum, shadragon, and pansies will take temperatures into the mid-20s without significant damage.

Since the soil is still quite warm, anything which is still growing in the ground around tender plants will protect them from frost. Even an overhanging roof or shrub will keep heat from radiating away from plants to a clear sky. Plastic or spun-fiber row covers will give protection from a light frost. Blankets or quilts will often give 3 to 7 degrees of frost protection. Plastic buckets work quite well, although leaves touching the outer edge will often be damaged. Covers should be held down with rocks to prevent the wind from blowing them off.

The best way to determine when frost protection is advisable is to watch the evening weather forecast. However, there are weather conditions which indicate possible frost. The most likely time for frost is when weather clears following a rainy or stormy and cloudy period.

Stormy conditions reduce day temperatures. However, the clouds form an insulating barrier and prevent heat from radiating to the sky. The time when the sky clears is the best indication of how severe the frost will be. If it clears in the morning, there is sufficient time to warm the air and soil and only a light frost occurs. If it clears in the late afternoon or evening, there is little warming and a harder frost occurs.

Well-watered plants are less susceptible to frost. The water itself contains some heat which transfers to plants and soil. Sprinkling plants continuously throughout the frost period will give even more protection. Sprinkling must begin before temperatures drop below 32 degrees and continue until after the temperature goes above freezing again and all the ice has been melted. This method is often used on large trees, which cooling is impractical. However, the heavy accumulation of ice often breaks the plants.

Local temperatures are coldest in the lowest areas since cold air falls and warm air rises. The temperature on the side of a hill can be as much as 10 degrees warmer than the bottom of the valley on a clear night when there is no wind to stir up the air.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Researchers searching for the secret behind supreme tastiness of the vine-ripened tomato

By William Booth
The Washington Post

Sing praises to the vine-ripened tomato as the high-point of the eating experience, blurring the goodness of nature, not to mention polygalacturonase, pectin, methylsterase and the master molecule of tomato flavor: (Z)-9-hexenal.

Scientists say that nothing tastes quite like a vine-ripened tomato. And tomato scientists are learning they're right.

Tomatoes are being studied "as never before by a small army of industrial and academic researchers who want to understand in new detail the cascade of events that occur within a tomato during the still-mysterious process of ripening.

In the process, large suites of genes are switched on and off like lights in a pinball machine, activating enzymes that ripen the fruit, change its color and texture and manufacture the sugars and acids and an elusive complex of volatile and short-lived perfumes that give tomatoes their distinctive flavor.

"The tomato is a very interesting system," said Alan Bennett, professor at the University of California at Davis who studies the molecular biology of tomato ripening. "It is also understood that the creation of a better tasting tomato would produce great economic impact."

Indeed, the tomato industry's own scientists admit there is little comparison between a healthy tomato that ripens on the plant under optimal conditions and one that is picked green and hard, and then refrigerated, trucked and gassed with ethylene.

If the ripening process can be understood, however, and if the genes that control the activity can be harnessed, scientists could help commercial growers produce a tomato that tastes like home-grown variety. But much remains to be learned.

But many have long appreciated a fact often overlooked by consumers: A tomato is alive. Even plucked from the plant, cut off from its support system, the tomato remains a living, breathing, metabolizing entity. Ripening is not resting.

Even sitting on the kitchen counter, green and hard as an apple, the tomato's cellular machinery whirs away with purpose. Genes click on and off. Enzymes are activated in a precise order to do their work. Gases are exchanged with the outside world. In fact, the tomato's breathing actually becomes heavier during ripening.

Most commercial growers try to harvest tomatoes when they reach a state known as "mature green," when the seeds are viable and the fruit is capable of ripening without substances supplied through the vine.

Some growers wait until the tomatoes become breakers, just beginning to turn orange-pink. The fruit is picked early because hard tomatoes stand up better to being picked, packing and shipping.

Alas, growers often misjudge. They pick tomatoes before all the fruit has reached "mature green." These tomatoes, though they can be forced to change color and even to soften, are the truly wretched examples lashed by vine-ripening enthusiasts.

A tomato plucked green and hard from the vine at the right time will ripen. Some tomato scientists insist that such a tomato allowed to ripen slowly on its own, without refrigeration, will rival the taste of its vine-ripened counterpart.

"It would be hard to tell the difference," said Allen Stevens, director tomato researcher and director of research for a California's Patented Community a supplier of commercial tomato seed. "The tastes would be similar."

But as Bennett counters, "The operative word is similar. They're not the same."

The two researchers explain that ripening begins in earnest with "the

RED, VINE-RIPE AND DELICIOUS

1. Many grown tomatoes are not of the highest quality. The "sensational" high points of flavor are located in the "ripening genes" that elevate "garden variety" to a term of honor. Most Americans grow tomatoes that are not of the highest quality. The store-bought kind are the result of gross violations of the tomato's normal biology and chemistry.
2. In leaves, photosynthesis creates the sugar sucrose, which is transported into the cells of the ripening fruit's flesh and converted into starch for storage.
3. Seeds become viable when tomato reaches the "mature green" stage.
4. As the tomato matures, gases pass in and out through the skin. One gas is ethylene, which, when it escapes, activates suites of genes that control the ripening. Tomatoes stored in a paper bag ripen faster because they remain bathed in ethylene.
5. When a tomato ripens, starch is broken down into the sugars fructose and glucose, adding sweetness to the fruit's early acid tartness. Also cells produce enzymes that soften the flesh by breaking down pectin and cellulose. Pigment genes are switched on, producing the orange carotene link and then the red anthocyanins. Other genes produce at least 13 aromatic compounds that bind and interact when the fruit is cut or chewed.

master signal," ethylene gas, whose production is initiated when a certain gene is turned on. This gene, in fact, was isolated and cloned only in the past few months.

Many fruits and vegetables produce ethylene. If you put bananas or tomatoes in brown paper bags, for example, and allow them to sit a day-and-then take a whiff, you can smell the ethylene. Commercial growers speed and synchronize ripening by putting their tomatoes in ethylene gas chambers.

Butterly says the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Laboratory in California explains that the master molecule of flavor, "the chief ingredient that gives the tomato its most distinctive aroma, is not produced in quantity until the tomato is sliced."

"When you smell a whole red tomato it has very little odor. But cut it open and that's when you get the aroma. That's when the enzyme system in the tomato breaks down the fatty acids and releases the volatile compounds," Butterly said. "Apparently, cutting or chewing a tomato disrupts the cells and releases enzymes that break down a certain fatty acid in the tomato, converting it to the aromatic compound known as (Z)-9-hexenal. Within seconds, this chemical is wafting into the air."

Butterly and his colleagues say that the worst thing to do to a tomato is refrigerate it. Even worse is to cut a cold tomato. "If you cut the tomato when it's cold, it's like any chemical reaction," Butterly said. "The cold turns off the enzymes and slows the whole reaction down."

As to why the store-bought variety tastes so lame, botanists tend the reasons vary. Some suspect that the prematurely picked tomato may be cut off from additional sugars and from plant hormones that help initiate ripening. Another problem is that commercial

"There's a high level of trust between the flavor company and the food and beverage company," Pellegrino said. "Service and confidentiality are important. We'd be out of business pretty quickly if we said we were flavoring this or flavoring that."

He refuses to identify any brand that uses his products. But he says, Fries & Fries and a competitor, International Flavors and Fragrances Inc., are among the nation's largest, each handling about 10 percent of the industry's business, or upward of $50 million a year.

Flavorists like to say they can reproduce a flavor from taste the way some musicians play songs by ear. In practice, they usually start by analyzing the chemical content of a food by using a gas chromatograph and listing the ingredients.

Then they recreate flavors in the laboratory, altering them any way they choose by, for example, making a fruit drink taste ripe, sweeter or more tart.

There might be 500 components in any flavor, and it's the distinctive formulation of those components that makes one brand of soft drink taste different from another brand.

"This is very much a self-policed industry, although we work in partnership with the Food and Drug Administration," Pellegrino said.

Flavoring ingredients come from the FDA's "Generally Recognized As Safe" list, and many flavors are created from chemicals that occur naturally to produce the flavor being enhanced, he said.

Ruth Weisheit, supervisor of consumer affairs at the FDA's Cincinnati office, said flavorings are regulated as food additives. "Any new flavorings or new uses of a flavoring agent would require FDA testing to make sure it is safe."

Under the 1938 food labeling act, artificial flavorings can be listed as "flavoring" without identifying individual ingredients, Weisheit said.

"One of the reasonings is that a flavoring agent can contain literally hundreds of ingredients and it would be almost impossible to have a label large enough to list all of them," she said.

"Flavorings are widely used throughout the beverage industry, from soft drinks and powdered mixes to liqueurs such as peach schnapps and apricot brandy.

"A Giger challenge is making flavor additives that stand up to processing, especially microwave cooking, which tends to distort traditional flavors, especially in meat and bakery products.

"When you bake a cake, a lot of the flavor comes from the baking process, and you just don't get that from a microwave," Pellegrino said. There is no char-broiled flavor in a microwaved hamburger, without a flavor assist.

Sometimes, a laboratory-created flavor that's good for one item is bad for another because of the way texture, aroma and flavor are affected by cooking or the preservatives necessary to prolong shelf-life.

"In beverages, you don't want the flavor to linger, but you do want it in low-fat ice cream," Pellegrino said.

Add beer and cook and shake pan 1 minute longer. Remove from heat and serve immediately.
"I serve it with French bread on the side," she says. "You just dip the bread in the sauce, and it's so hot and so good - it's excellent."

Next, let's make some...
BASIC COOKED RICE
Makes 6 cups
2 cups uncooked rice (must be converted rice)
2 1/4 cups basic stock (either chicken or beef)

1 1/2 tablespoons very finely chopped onion
1 1/2 tablespoons very finely chopped green bell peppers
1 1/2 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
A pinch each of white pepper, ground red pepper and black pepper
In a 5 x 9 x 2 1/2 inch foil pan combine all the ingredients. Mix well. Seal pan snugly with aluminum foil. Bake at 350 degrees until rice is tender - about 1 hour 15 minutes. The rice will stay hot for 45 minutes, so this may be fixed ahead.
Serve with seafood gumbo.
"It has a little bit of a bite to it, but not very much," she says. "It's so fluffy when it comes out of the oven that it does not stick together. It's just a delicious rice."

SEAFOOD GUMBO
Serves 4-6
For the seasoning mix, combine in a small bowl:
1 1/2 teaspoons ground red pepper
1 1/2 teaspoons sweet paprika
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 teaspoon black pepper
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1 crumbled bay leaf
Mix and set aside.
Other ingredients:
8 cup oil
2 cups chopped onions
2 cups chopped green pepper
2 cups chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 1/2 teaspoons minced garlic

1 can (16 ounces) tomatoes
3 cups clam broth
2 cups water
1 pound peeled shrimp*
1 1/2 cups crabmeat*
1 dozen oysters*

In a heavy 4-quart pot heat the oil or margarine. Gradually add the flour, stirring constantly. Cook, always stirring, until a medium brown rice is formed. This might take about 15-20 minutes. It should be the color of pecan shells. Add onions, green pepper, parsley, celery and garlic and cook for 10 minutes. Add tomatoes, clam broth, water and seasoning mix. Bring to a boil. Lower heat and simmer for 1 hour. Add shrimp, crab meat and oysters and cook for 3-5 minutes, until shrimp is tender. Or, turn off heat and let set for 7-8 minutes.

Serve over the rice in deep bowls along with a full bodied wine, such as cabernet.
*If some of this seafood is not available, substitute with crab, scallops, halibut, etc.
The gumbo may be prepared early in the day and refrigerated, and in the evening the seafood can be added. Bring it back to a boil and cook 3-5 minutes.
"It's very hot and very spicy," she says. "You can taste all the vegetables in it, and the crab and the shrimp. It's just got a real nice flavor."

The next recipe is not Cajun, but Lavender sets it is southern.
PRALINE CHEESECAKE
1 cup graham cracker crumbs
1/2 tablespoons white sugar
1/2 cup butter, melted
3 (8 ounce) packages cream cheese
1/2 cup white sugar
1 1/2 cups brown sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
3/4 cup caramel topping
1/2 cup chopped pecans
For the crust, combine the crumbs, sugar and butter in a mixing bowl. Blend until creamy. Add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Reserve 1 cup of batter and add caramel topping to it. Spoon half of plain batter over crust. Cover this with caramel batter. Sprinkle with pecans and spread remaining plain batter over pecans. Bake at 450 degrees for 7 minutes. Reduce oven to 325 and continue baking for 30-40 minutes. To prevent the cheesecake from cracking, Lavender sets a pan of boiling water in the oven while the cheesecake is baking. If a knife inserted in the center comes out clean, the cheesecake is done. Cool and chill in refrigerator. Before serving, spread with topping.
The topping:
1 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup white sugar
1/2 cup chopped pecans
Caramel topping
In a small saucepan melt brown sugar and butter. Add water and bring to a boil. Add pecans. Cook for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Spread on waxed paper and cool until it hardens enough to be removed. Brush top of cool cheesecake with caramel topping. Crumble up the cooled pecan topping and garnish with that.
"It's very rich, and you just serve small portions."

THE TEXAS ARMADILLOS "Weren't Lumpy armadillos in the Lone Star state when the Battle of the Alamo was fought in 1836. Race is the Texan who knows that the armadillos were on their way, though. They got us farther than the Rio Grande Valley in the 1840s. And kept on coming."

Q. What's "straw fire love"?
A. An idiom of the French. Early maturation. A quick but bare that leaves nothing but ashes.

Hotanists must like Costa Rica. It has more plant species than all of North America.

IRAQ
Q. On which side did Iraq fight in World War II?
A. Iraqi leaders wanted Iraq to join Adolf Hitler's Axis; but British troops moved quickly to turn them out of the country. Iraq then declared war against the Axis in 1943.

Chicago didn't become popular until the visitors started loading the tobacco with sugar, according to the historical footnotes.
