Bush taps strategic oil stockpile

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — President Bush, saying there was "no justification" for speculation that has driven up the price of oil and gasoline, said Wednesday he would sell 5 million barrels of crude oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve.

The White House said the Bush decision would send a "signal" to those who would take advantage of the Persian Gulf crisis to profit from skyrocketing oil prices.

Tapping the reserve, a move urged by industry analysts and some members of Congress since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, was aimed at driving down the price of crude on world markets.

The president is turning to the reserve to stabilize the oil market for the first time since it was created in 1975. Oil was briefly pumped from the reserve in 1985 to test the physical and bureaucratic systems for moving it.

The price of crude oil has edged toward $40 a barrel this week, nearly twice the level when Iraq's occupation of Kuwait touched off the current oil crisis.

Bush, in Chicago for a Republican Party fundraiser, said in prepared remarks: "It's especially important that America is economically healthy and militarily strong."

At home and abroad, let-me-caution those who might take advantage of the current crisis in the Persian Gulf, those who might seek profit by subverting the sanctions or, here at home, those speculators who might try to drive up the price of oil.

The President said that even though "the oil market is very tight... there is sufficient oil to meet current needs."

Bush said that oil markets had not taken into account additional production from Saudi Arabia and other sources "not the availability of existing stocks."

Industry experts estimate other production has restored about two-thirds of the 4.8 million daily barrels lost by Iraq's takeover of Kuwait and the world embargo on Iraq.

Cheney sees

Iraqi attack odds rising

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Wednesday the odds are growing that Iraq will launch a military strike in response to U.N. economic sanctions.

Cheney told a conference of business economists that the Bush administration had foreseen that a key danger point in the standoff with Saddam Hussein would arise once the international sanctions began crippling the Iraqi economy.

"We may have seen in the last 48 or 72 hours the beginning commentary from him that would indicate that the sanctions are beginning to bite," Cheney said.

The U.N. Security Council voted to impose an economic embargo against export-dependent Iraq on Aug. 6, four days after the Iraqi army invaded Kuwait. On Tuesday the Security Council extended the embargo to include air shipments.

In a televised address to Americans broadcast Tuesday, Saddam criticized the United States and the United Nations for punishing his economy in response to the occupation of Kuwait. Saddam said U.S. forces deployed in the Persian Gulf area faced the prospect of bigger losses than were suffered in the Vietnam War.

Cheney also said this week that he would destroy the Middle East's oil fields if war broke out.

"We have always operated on the assumption since we started this exercise in early August that there were two moments of danger," Cheney said. He said the first was when the U.S. forces were in Saudi Arabia to stop an Iraqi invasion of the Saudi kingdom.

"The second period was when the sanctions began to bite," Cheney said. "And as I say, we may have seen, with his threats in the last couple of days, that he may resort to military force in response to the sanctions — the first beginning evidence that in fact he's really beginning to feel the pain."

The Pentagon said Tuesday that Iraq is losing about $100 million a day in oil export revenues as a result of the U.N. embargo, which is being enforced by a multinational naval fleet in the Persian Gulf, the Arabian Sea and the Red Sea.

The Pentagon also reported that Iraq has increased its troop strength in Kuwait and southern Iraq to 430,000 soldiers.

Counties look for landfill site but won't say where

By Phil Sahm
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The eight counties of the Magic Valley decided Wednesday to hire a real-estate agent to help them find a regional landfill.

It will not be a typical sale. The counties will not say where two parcels of land that are potential sites of the landfill are located. They do not even want the prospective sellers to know who wants to buy the land.

A real-estate agent will put down cash to serve as a sort of earnest money so preliminary tests can be performed on 15 to 20 feet of soil. If the parcels look promising, more tests will be performed at much deeper levels.

If the land is suitable, the counties can make an offer.

The reason for the secrecy is simple, said Terry Schultz, environmental director of the South-Central Health District. If word gets out that a parcel is being considered for a landfill, the value of the acreage could soar overnight.

Also, neighbors tend to object when they learn they might be living downwind from a landfill, although Schultz said there are no homes in the immediate vicinity of the two sites being considered for the regional dump.

Once the health district finds a site, it will not be able to operate in secrecy for... Please see LANDFILL/A2

Student performance in schools showing no gains

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A 20-year summary of the nation's educational achievements released Wednesday by the Education Department shows student performance is low and not improving.

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos described the report by the National Assessment of Educational Progress — popularly called the Nation's Report Card — as "a compendium of disappointment" and as "a guide for corrective action."

Cavazos stressed that the study revealed significant discrepancies between what researchers indicate is most effective in improving educational performance and what students report about activities in the classroom and at home.

The report includes data from reading, writing, mathematics, science, U.S. history, civics and geography assessments conducted in 1986 and 1988 and trend results by the congressionally mandated project over the last two decades.

Most of the data show that "our present education performance is low and not improving."

Top educators called for radical changes in the way education takes place in America, and less talk and fewer studies from policymakers.

"The report clearly shows the recent retoric from the bully pulpit has had a zero effort on student achievement," said Gordon Caweltt, executive director of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Key findings of the report were:

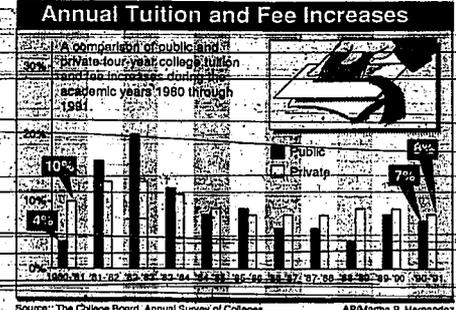

- Students can read at a surface level, getting the gist of material, but do not read analytically or perform well on challenging reading assignments.

At four-year public universities, fixed costs including room and board average $4,970, up 5 percent from last year's $4,715 the previous year.

At two-year private colleges, fixed costs including room and board average $8,484, up 7 percent from $7,912 last year. Tuition and fees at two-year public institutions average $884, up 5 percent from last year's $841. Few such institutions provide room and board.

"That's progress, though not dramatic," said Richard Rosser, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Washington, D.C. "We'd never expect to see the increases fall sharply."

According to the survey, fixed charges at four-

College costs keep on rising

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A year at college will cost an average of 5 percent to 8 percent more this fall, a slight lessening in the decade-long spell of higher education inflation, according to an annual survey released Wednesday.

But some officials fear that encouraging news may end soon, especially at colleges in oil-sensitive northern states, if the overall inflation rate worsens and a recession occurs.

The survey by the College Board also found that Massachusetts Institute of Technology is the nation's priciest college this fall: an estimated $22,945, counting tuition, fees, room and board, books and supplies, transportation, and other expenses.

year private institutions — including tuition, fees and room and board — average $13,544, an 8 percent increase from last year's $12,557. A year-long, such charges rose 9 percent.

At four-year public universities, fixed costs including room and board average $4,970, up 5 percent from $4,715 the previous year.

At two-year private colleges, fixed costs including room and board average $8,484, up 7 percent from $7,912 last year. Tuition and fees at two-year public institutions average $884, up 5 percent from last year's $841. Few such institutions provide room and board.

Census reveals 12.8% of Americans are poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau says 31.5 million Americans, or 12.8 percent of the population, lived in poverty last year.

That was virtually no improvement over 1988, even as median household income was up slightly because of an unexplained bulge in the income of black households.

The poverty rate had previously declined since 1983, when it reached a high of 15.2 percent.

In 1988 it was 13 percent, and the bureau said the slight dip to 12.8 percent in 1989 was not statistically significant.

Daniel H. Weinberg, chief of the Housing and Household Economic Statistics Division of the bureau, declined to speculate on what the figures for 1990 will show when they become available next year.

The report, he said, "does not tell us anything about the current situation."

However, Robert Greenstein, executive director of the Center of Budget and Policy Priorities, a private research group, predicted the poverty rate will go up with the apparent end of the economic recovery of the 1980's.

The report said Americans' median household income rose 1.3 percent in 1989, to $28,910, after adjusting for the rise in consumer prices. The increase followed two years in which median income had been unchanged.

Black household income was up 5 percent to $18,080, but median incomes in white and Hispanic households did not significantly change. Nor did the median income of black families or that of black men.

Weinberg said the bulge for black households, which resulted in the overall increase in median household income, appeared to be the result of gains in income for black professional women living alone or with a roommate.

He had no explanation for this, and said it could be the result of an anomaly in the sampling.

Peru loses $36 million in drug aid

WASHINGTON — Efforts by the United States and Peru to speed up terms for a military aid program to fight drug smuggling have broken down, the State Department said Wednesday.

As a result, Peru must forego $35.9 million in aid, which will be earmarked instead for Bolivia and Colombia, said deputy spokesman Richard Boucher.

FBI head renews sting support

WASHINGTON — FBI Director William S. Sessions on Wednesday reaffirmed his support of the bureau's undercover tactics, including the sting operation which videotaped Washington Mayor Marion Barry smoking crack cocaine.

But Sessions acknowledged that a jury's refusal to convict Barry of the charge arising from that sting may have underscored the "need" to be "very careful" and "look very carefully before you elect to use a particular technique."

Subway shooter Goetz changes story

NEW YORK — In newly sworn testimony, subway gunman Bernhard Goetz drastically contradicts the defense that won him a 1987 acquittal for the attempted murder of four black teenagers, court papers showed Wednesday. "I hope the jurors in that trial wake up screaming in the night when they read this," said attorney William Kunstler, who questioned Goetz for plaintiff Darrell Cabey, 22.

Search for man unifies inner city

MILWAUKEE — For one week the plight of Earl Hutchins, 79, an inner city family patriarch, who disappeared while suffering from Alzheimer's disease, unified residents of a crime-torn neighborhood.

And though the community's search ended tragically — Hutchins' body was found Tuesday in a harbor — neighbors hope their effort may have a lasting effect by forging a new unity in Milwaukee's inner city.

Canadian doctors charge less

BOSTON — Doctors in the United States charge more than twice as much as Canadian physicians for the same work, and this helps explain why this country's health care costs are dramatically higher, a study concludes.

The study found that despite their fatter fees, however, U.S. doctors can only about one-third more than Canadians. The reason: Canadian doctors are busier and make up for their lower fees by seeing more patients.

Bush OKs Saudi weapons sale

WASHINGTON — President Bush has decided to sell $7.5 billion in new weaponry to Saudi Arabia in immediate response to the Persian Gulf crisis, and to ask Congress' consent for another $14 billion next year, sources said.

The package, which was to be submitted formally to Congress late Wednesday, includes M-1A tanks, TOW anti-tank missiles, Bradley fighting vehicles, trucks and armored personnel carriers, said congressional and administration sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity. Items in the package are those which are either in current U.S. stocks, can be delivered quickly, or must be ordered soon to meet Saudi defensive requirements in the standoff with Iraq, the sources said.

NASA locates 83 cape shuttle leaks

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA investigators have identified 83 potential sources of Columbia's dangerous hydrogen leaks, and "exhaustive testing is expected to pinpoint the problem, the space agency said Wednesday.

The list of suspect parts was narrowed to 83 during an analysis of Columbia's engine compartment, said William Lewis, head of NASA's space flight program.

Hydrogen flooded the section during fueling last week, thwarting NASA's fourth attempt to send the shuttle on an astronomy mission.

Marine commander tells men to settle in for a long gulf stay

LANDING ZONE FOSS, Saudi Arabia (AP) — U.S. Marine Commander Gen. Alfred Gray told his men Wednesday to dig in for a long stay in the Saudi desert and to stop asking when they would be going home.

He also reminded them that if they are attacked "the best defense is a good offense."

Gray delivered a 45-minute pep talk to Marines at a combat support detachment not far from the Persian Gulf and the north-south highways the corps is straddling to protect vital Saudi oil installations.

He told the men he hoped to be able to stick to the policy of limiting major deployments to six months. But Gray, known for his bluntness, said the tense standoff and logistical problems might prevent normal rotations and he didn't expect any whittling.

"I don't want to hear about any more questions about how long you're going to be here," he told about 200 Marines gathered around him at the camp, named in honor of Joe Foss, a World War II Marine flying ace who later was governor of South Dakota.

"How long are we going to be here?" he asked rhetorically through a bullhorn. "Well, we're going to be here as long as it takes to get done

Gen. Alfred Gray. There will be no boredom.

There will be no boredom... what has to be done... "There will be no morale problems... because I say there will be morale. There will also be no boredom."

He described the Marines' mission as defensive, but said the U.S. led multinational forces deployed after Iraq invaded Kuwait were gaining more power every day and "have everything we need to do whatever needs to be done."

Gray solemnly reminded his troops that "Marines are always in this part of the world. No. 1. I am not a terrorist." More than 240 Marines were killed by a suicide truck bomber who blew up their barracks in Beirut in October 1983. The Marines were in Lebanon as part of a multinational peacekeeping force.

Gray told the troops there were 13 ships loaded for the gulf region with supplies to sustain their deployment in the northern Saudi desert.

"You and the rest of your warrior friends, you're really on the point. You're the tip of the spear," he said.

For now, Gray said the mission was defense, but he suggested the Marines would quickly go on offense if Iraqi forces attacked.

"We all know the best defense is a good offense," he said. "We have a very, very powerful, flexible and most useful force, afloat and ashore, ready to do whatever needs to be done. We're going to play for keeps and that's required."

He told the men not to underestimate Iraq's large army, which fought an all-out war with the Iranians from 1980 to 1988.

"We face the potential of a pretty good firefight," Gray said.

National Guardsman father to join son in Persian Gulf soon

MILLIKEN, Colo. (AP) — National Guardsman Felipe Cardenas II soon will arrive in the Saudi Arabian desert, and one of his first orders of business will be to find a familiar face — his son.

Felipe's 19-year-old son, Phillip Cardenas III, has been stationed in the desert for three weeks with the Army's 101st Airborne Division. Cardenas, 41, a National Guardsman for 17 years and a Vietnam War veteran, said he learned this week that volunteers from his unit will soon be leaving for the Middle East. The elder Cardenas went to Vietnam at age 18. He now serves as a staff sergeant in the Longmont tank unit of the Army National Guard. His son, an infantryman, has been in the Army a little more than a year. Like his father, he shipped out to face possible combat while still a teenager.

Baghdad says Moscow bribed by U.S.

The Associated Press

Here, at a glance, are the latest developments in the Persian Gulf crisis:

Three Iraqi passenger planes touched down Wednesday in Jordan but Jordan later said it would halt all flights to and from Iraq to comply with a U.N. air embargo. The resolution does not mention passenger planes but says that all planes traveling to and from Iraq should be checked to make sure they are not carrying cargo prohibited by the U.N. trade sanctions.

Baghdad's official news agency accused Moscow, a former ally of being bribed by the United States and gulf sheiks to oppose Iraq. It said the tone of a tough U.N. speech Tuesday by Soviet Foreign Minister

Eduard Shevardnadze "clearly shows the bribe given by American and its allies the oil sheiks."

Iraqi officials announced the new food rationing will begin this week, end, Trade and Finance Minister Mohamed Maadi Saleh said, sugar and tea also will be affected by the new restrictions.

The government already closed fast-food restaurants and many pastry shops because they use large amounts of sugar.

Bakers that are still open make only bread which has been rationed since Sept. 1 in response to the U.N. sanctions.

In Washington, the Defense Department reported new buildups of Iraqi troops and armor in southern Iraq and Kuwait, within striking distance of Saudi Arabian oilfields.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said about 40,000 Iraqi soldiers are in the area, up from 360,000 last week.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said that he sees an increasing likelihood that Saddam Hussein will lash out with military force to try to break the stranglehold of the U.N. economic embargo.

The U.S. aircraft carrier Independence and its 70 attack jets will soon join other warships in the gulf in a show of force, a U.S. military source in the gulf said. It would be the first U.S. carrier in the gulf since 1974.

Representatives of some of the 20 American allies meeting in Washington raised new questions concerning the U.S. campaign to collect the billions needed in the gulf crisis.

Soviets hint at progress on treaty

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union made headway Wednesday on treaties to reduce conventional and long-range nuclear weapons as they strengthened their cooperation on the Persian Gulf crisis.

"On quite a few questions there is progress," said Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze at the conclusion of a four-hour meeting with Secretary of State James A. Baker III. "But in order to carry these through to the end, we'll have to meet again," he said.

Failure to reach agreement on the arms accords could cause postponement of a 34-nation summit meeting in Paris in mid-November, interrupting the easing of East-West tensions in Europe and delay a trip to Moscow in December by President Bush.

Baker and Shevardnadze met for their pivotal talks at a mid-town hotel about a mile from the United Nations, where they voted on Tuesday to impose an embargo on cargo shipments by air to Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

The aim is to force Iraq to withdraw from the oil-rich emirate, which it seized Aug. 2, sending tremors through world oil markets and touching off hoarding and price rises.

An unscheduled meeting presumably will be held later in the week, or possibly next week.

USSR leaders adopt new law for religions

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet legislature formally ended decades of religious repression on Wednesday, passing a law on freedom of conscience at a time when Soviets are flocking to churches in record numbers.

"Our people suffered to get this law," said Mikhail Kulakov, a leader of the Soviet Union's Sunday Adventists, who have been persecuted for evangelical activities.

The law forbids the government from interfering with religious activities, improves the legal status of religious organizations and gives Soviet citizens the right to private religion in homes and in private schools.

The Soviet constitution has long guaranteed freedom of worship, but in the past the Communist Party's ideological opposition to religion as the "opiate of the masses" made that guarantee hollow.

In practice, the government discouraged religious services, closed churches and synagogues, imprisoned religious leaders and preached atheism. "The most important thing for us is not only that the law is passed, but that it begins to work," said Adolph Shayevich, Moscow's chief rabbi.

Peter Reddaway, an expert on Soviet religion at George Washington University in Washington, said in a telephone interview there is reason for optimism: "The law will be respected." He noted that official tolerance for religion has increased since President Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to power in 1985. Gorbachev's mother is a practicing member of the Russian Orthodox Church, and last year he acknowledged he was baptized as a child.

Defense chief says 'nyet' to coup rumors

MOSCOW (AP) — Fear of a military coup spilled from the streets into the Soviet legislature on Wednesday, and rumors reached such a crescendo that the country's defense chief felt obliged to declare "No army should use arms against its own people."

In a 10-minute speech slated for national broadcast later, Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov responded to two weeks of reports in liberal newspapers and accusations by politicians that the military is plotting to overthrow the government.

Such rumors have circulated during President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's 5½-year rule, fueled in part by his supposed alienation of the military brass because of his moves to cut troops and the defense budget and use of soldiers to restore order in restive republics.

Investors not rushing to Germany

WEST BERLIN (AP) — The two German economies, the juggernaut and the wheelchair, have little to do with each other three months after they merged.

It's a big disappointment for those who believed capitalism would bring benefits and progress to the East soon after economic union occurred on July 1.

Instead, there has been little investment in East Germany. Many businesses have failed and there has been a tidal wave of unemployment. East German industrial production in July was a whopping 42 percent below July 1989.

But German economic officials and analysts think things are fine.

The problems were inevitable. "The conditions for further growth in Germany are extraordinarily good," said Peter Pietsch, an economist with Commerzbank, one of West Germany's leading banks.

Pietsch thinks the only problem for the German economy these days is the Persian Gulf crisis, meaning possibly higher oil prices.

The Bundesbank, the West German central bank, said in its monthly report Sept. 18 that there had been continued economic growth in West Germany since July 1.

Depressing effects of the Gulf crisis and slackening demand in export markets were "more than compensated for by the swift expansion of domestic demand" and by increases in imports to satisfy pent-up needs of East German consumers, the report said.

The 16.6 million East Germans have been the key to economic growth in West Germany as the two Germanys approach full unification next Wednesday. The single Germany will be a country of almost 80 million people with an economy almost double the size of France, the next-biggest in Europe.

On July 1, the currency union between the two Germanys let people in the East convert their salaries and much of their savings from non-convertible East German marks into the powerful West German mark.

U.S. flies supplies to Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — U.S. Marines on Wednesday flew emergency food and medical supplies into the capital, where perils of slain President Samuel Doe reportedly were preying on starving people inside his mansion.

A cease-fire between four armies in Monrovia held for the fifth day, although gunshots crackled occasionally.

The Daily Mail newspaper of neighboring Freetown, Sierra Leone, quoted one of Doe's generals as saying two hungry pet lions of the ousted leader were prowling around the presidential residence in Monrovia, eating people weakened by hunger. Many people sought refuge in the mansion during the height of the fighting among rebel factions and Doe's soldiers.

Maj. Chris Otulama, a spokesman for a five-nation West African army sent to enforce a truce in Liberia's 2-month-old civil war, appealed for more international aid to stop people from dying of hunger and disease.

Campaign 'reforms' could backfire

Steven E. Schier

This campaign autumn is justifiably called a "silly season" for two reasons. One is the traditional snafu of posturing, distortion and outright lies by candidates for office.

The second reason, more evident than usual, is the abundance of campaign reform ideas that are just plain dumb.

One would think, from the fevered cries of Common Cause and various members of Congress, that our electoral system had hit new depths of corruption that no sensible citizen could tolerate.

Such gross exaggerations win headlines for lobbyists and lawmakers but ignore the real reasons why steadily fewer people bother to vote.

The simple fact is that citizens are busier and more distracted from politics than at any previous time in the history of the republic.

As two-paycheck marriages become the norm, mom and dad have less time for the children and perhaps none at all for politics.

The same applies, doubly so, to ever-increasing single-parent households.

Of course, Americans in the past worked hard, but for our forebears, politics was often a raucous spectator sport. No more. Why bother with the droning of candidates when limit its ability to reach people through the media? Unless candidates are granted big blocks of time to use as they wish, less spending on television will mean that even fewer voters will learn anything about who is running and why.

Certainly some reforms are needed. Access to money for competing candidates needs to be made more equal, and political consultants need to chastise miscreants in their trade more severely.

But keep the race lively and very much on television, or voters will keep deserting the polls.

The elite interest groups and politicians dominating the debate on campaign reform have forgotten the circumstances of the average voter.

Unless campaigns touch more people where they live - by the television - in an engaging way, our polling booths will gather dust.

Many reformers also claim that too much money is spent in election campaigns. The recently passed Senate campaign reform bill operates on that premise by establishing spending limits.

But why, when electoral politics is already crowded out by distractions, try to make it more boring, though certainly that is what many prim reformers have in mind when they ask for more "serious discussion of the issues?"

Given this situation, proposals to restrict political commercials to a "talking head" format or to ban the notorious 30-second spots would only reinforce voters' indifference.

The solution to electronic politics is not to make it more boring, though certainly that is what many prim reformers have in mind when they ask for more "serious discussion of the issues."

McDevitt should recheck facts on sugar program

In trying to make the U.S. sugar program a campaign issue, GOP congressional hopeful Sean McDevitt demonstrates both his political opportunism and his misunderstanding of the program.

When President Bush changed the sugar program two weeks ago, the move produced - brief but widespread - confusion. Many observers, including Idaho's Sen. Steve Symms, misinterpreted the move as a reduction of the support price for sugar.

The error can be excused, given the complexity of price supports and the heat of the moment.

But why, nearly two weeks later, does McDevitt continue to bludgeon his opponent, Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings, with a supposed lowering of the support price?

McDevitt said this week that Idaho (also) has no representative in Congress fighting for the sugar program. "Now the administration is bowing under and the president has dropped the price of sugar 2 cents," he said in a visit to Twin Falls.

No, no, no. What really happened was that Bush tried to bring the sugar program into compliance with international trade rules, by tearing down barriers to sugar imports and replacing them with a tariff.

The tariff was set at 16 cents per pound. It happens that 16 cents is two cents less than the federal support price on sugar. That coincidence is probably what caused the confusion.

The key point to remember is that a tariff and a support price are entirely different things. A support price is the price the government guarantees to domestic producers. A tariff is essentially a tax that importers must pay; a 16-cent tariff raises imported sugar's cost by 16 cents a pound.

When lawmakers debated the Farm Bill last summer, food manufacturers lobbied hard for a 16-cent support price. But Idaho's congressional delegation managed to retain the 18-cent support price contained in the 1983 Farm Bill.

The House and Senate are now trying to reconcile the two versions of the 1990 Farm Bill, but both versions contain an 18-cent sugar support price.

Sugar farmers' organizations are satisfied with the tariff program. They say that the 16-cent tariff should prevent other sugar-producing nations from selling more than their normal quotas into the United States.

That means sugar quotas should remain tight enough to ensure farmers their 18-cent support price or better. Market prices would have to be lower than 2 cents per pound before U.S. food manufacturers could afford to buy sugar from nations that must pay a 16-cent tariff.

The sugar program really doesn't deserve to be an issue in the Stallings-McDevitt campaign. Whoever represents the 2nd District can be expected to back sugar-been growers, their crop is too important in southern Idaho for a congressman to do otherwise.

And, over the years, Stallings has been a solid spokesman for domestic producers, without being rabidly protectionist.

But no one - not Stallings and not McDevitt - will be able to insulate growers entirely from the changes that are sure to take place in the world marketplace.

Slowly, fitfully, the world is moving to free trade. As the United States takes part in that movement, sugar surely will be an important topic of negotiations.

Trying to make it a partisan issue won't change that. Misstating the facts won't, either.

Illiteracy: America's enemy within

BOSTON - I am sitting outside a crowded courtroom this Monday morning and the howl of the weekend is still heard along the benches and corridors where the law waits to catch up with the lawless.

Next to me, a woman informs anyone who bothers to listen that she has come to demand an exorcism be performed in the second floor apartment of her building. She is looking for a judge with the ultimate connections.

"Devil lives upstairs," the woman is saying. "He surely do."

"What's he look like?" I ask. "You think I peek at the devil," she demands. "You a crazy man or something. The devil, he be invisible. But I know he's there, I can hear him."

Alongside the woman, there is a young guy with hands bigger than the front tires on my car. He is sitting there, calmly, as if he were waiting for a bus. Every few seconds, he looks left and then he looks right.

After 15 minutes, a woman about his age - maybe 17 - comes along. She is carrying a small baby. The baby is wearing a diaper and sweat shirt and is wrapped in a towel, because the first hint of winter is rattling the sidewalk outside.

"So you said you were coming back the other night," the young woman says.

"I got busy," the guy replies with tremendous, almost studied nonchalance.

"You got busy," the girl remarks.

"You got busted," she tells him.

"That, too," he answers.

Although I did not know it at the moment, I was sitting next to one of the great issues of our time, one of the biggest items on any national agenda. Not drugs. Not babies having babies. Not even young guys with nothing but a record behind them.

"Do me a favor," the guy asks the girl carrying the baby. "Go look at that sheet and see what they got me down for."

She walked over to the jury's seating order - the list of arrangements - and glanced through the sheets of paper. She discovered his name and returned to the bench where he sat with the woman looking for an exorcist.

"It says 'drugs,'" she told him. "Possession."

"What else does it say?" he asked.

"That's all," she answered. "Drugs."

Mike Barnicle

"No gun stuff?" he wanted to know.

"I told you, drugs," she insisted.

The guy - the kid, really - could not read. Turns out, he is 17 years old, an 8th-grade student.

His girlfriend is 16 and able to both read and write.

His son is 10 months old, so nobody in power is even thinking of the time when a book will be placed in front of the child. The larger worry right now is a hot breakfast.

Oh, sure, the young man knows big capital letters and he has memorized the letters of his name well enough so he can find it on an arrangement poster. But a word like "possession" - well, there's a stumbling block.

We would probably be amazed to discover the actual number of young people who cannot read and, therefore, cannot write.

Many of them are pushed out of big city school systems so downtown administrators can point to numbers. Education has become volume rather than value.

Naturally, not a lot of public people chat about things like this; illiteracy and hopelessness are too depressing and, maybe, too much of a challenge.

Mike Barnicle is a columnist for the Boston Globe.

Taxes are a hotter priority. You can really get the public foaming at the mouth and rattled at the edges by jamming about how we spend, or waste, our dollars.

The truth, though, is that we are kidding ourselves in this country as long as we pretend institutional ignorance barely exists, or worse, can be isolated by geography, race or income. The rage and lawlessness born of frustration comes with a big tab. And guess who pays it?

Maybe the folks running for office will step up to the plate and throw an item like public education at us this fall.

Maybe somebody will first whisper, then speak a bit more loudly about the fact that this country has difficulty competing these days.

Weighted down by huge interest payments, suffering under bloated budgets and massive long-term debt, we throw an army of the poor-out-on-to-the-street every single morning and then scratch our heads and express shock about all the drugs, crime and shootings.

After all while, the kid with the huge hands who was unable to read got off the bench and walked into the crowded courtroom. Inside, he would have no difficulty because a clerk would call his name, so his inability to read would remain a secret to everyone for a little bit longer.

Mike Barnicle is a columnist for the Boston Globe.

Limit congressmen to 1 term

Once elected to Congress, the odds of defeat are slim. Our system has created a U.S. "House of Lords."

In the last 10 years as a nation, we have become deeply in debt. The grease-factor and buddy system within the Congress has placed this burden on the American taxpayer. Where to place the blame? Directly upon the Congress? Never did the founding fathers program the Congress to be career positions. Under the present system, 98.0 percent of incumbents have been re-elected. Incumbents have stacked the deck against challengers through partisan politics, perks and political action committees.

Taxpayer-subsidized perks approximate $40,000 a year to each position. On top of that, they increase their office staffs, their travel salaries, office expense accounts and mailing costs. All these taxpayer-financed perks keep lawmakers in a high visibility position back home. The total average cost to the taxpayer for each representative's expenses is $94,569 per year, according to a report in The Washington Times.

Now add donations from PACs and it appears the election has been bought and paid for. PACs are giving money to gain access and influence with members of Congress. Under present law, PACs are acceptable but could best be labeled "non-est gratia."

It is one thing to complain, another to offer solutions. Here are mine:

* Taxpayers should recognize congressional positions are not career positions.

* Taxpayers should recognize that incumbents have placed us deep in debt.

* Never re-elect the incumbent.

* Look to a cross-section of persons seeking these positions.

* Level the playing field, limiting congressional terms and end taxpayer subsidies to the seats themselves.

Can this happen? Yes, if voters take heed and vote the incumbent out of office. Until this happens, sensible government is an illusion and we will remain a Congress of money cart and does buy.

Seniors need us to watch out

Not long ago, this paper printed an article about a puppy that was left in the trash can at the dog pound. Due to this mistreatment, the poor creature had to be destroyed. It broke our hearts.

Shortly before that time, our 87-year-old grandmother, who lived with my sister, came to a point where she needed more care than any of us were able to give. All avenues were checked and rechecked.

Grandma did not need to go to a place like West Magic - she was not in a sufficient state of deterioration to justify that move. It was a family decision that she be placed in a shelter facility, which provides a home-like surrounding with other seniors. On the surface, all was top drawer. Grandma was moved. Then the problems began. Social Security and SSI checks had to be changed to a new address. No problem - wrong. The people at her new home did not fill out the necessary paper work. My sister received daily phone calls from the shelter home demanding more money for our grandma who'd be dumped on the steps of the rest-home.

Suddenly, she became incontinent, lethargic and could not function. Then we discovered that these people had taken her to the bank and withdrawn all of the money in her account! My sister's plan had money in that account. It was also Did I mention that my grandmother is crippled and blind in one eye? Just picture it!

At any rate, we moved her to another shelter home. Since that time three weeks ago, my grandma knows us on sight, does not use a cane and is back to doing her crocheter work. When she left the former shelter home, my sister and I carried her out. What does this tell you?

So, to all of us who were moved and horrified by the cruel treatment to a small dog, please, please open your eyes. It took a near tragedy to open ours. We have a great responsibility to our disabled and infirm seniors.

Please, in the name of all that is decent, give them the same heart-felt thought and consideration that you would give a dog or cat. Give us a watch-dog society. This dog happens in our small community. Please don't sweep this quiet scream under the rug. One day it will be us; one day it will be you.

Water authorities: Fairchild claims untrue Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Republican Gov. Cecil Andrus is continuing his attacks on Gov. Edward R. Roybal's water policies, but a group of water authorities says Fairchild's comments are "ridiculous."

Meanwhile, the former state Senate majority leader, from Fruitland, said Tuesday that Idaho's soon-to-senior U.S. senator, Republican Steve Symms, is as guilty of selling his office to out-of-state interests as the Democratic governor.

Fairchild Andrus

"I'm just as critical of Mr. Symms as I am of Mr. Andrus," said Fairchild, who alleged earlier this month that Andrus had "shamelessly" sold his administration to the highest bidder by accepting $245,000 in out-of-state contributions.

Symms, during his last re-election campaign and the two years after it, accepted more than $1 million from out-of-state special interests.

Fairchild said his "first move" as governor would be to propose legislation for political reforms, including a ban on campaign contributions from out-of-state interests and political action committees and on political fund-raising before and during each year's state legislative session.

"The only legal contribution should be from an Idaho citizen," he said.

But Fairchild was challenged on his proposed reform package by a member of the audience at Idaho State University, who said banning out-of-state and PAC contributions would hurt Idaho Republicans like Symms, who is a big PAC recipient.

Fairchild defended his proposals, arguing that political reforms and corruption are bipartisan.

On water issues, Fairchild issued a news release Tuesday criticizing the Andrus proposal to flush more stored water from the Snake River system downstream each spring to enhance salmon runs. That would threaten Idaho's farmers, recreationists and power generation costs, the Republican claimed.

Ray Rigby of Rexburg, John Rosholt of Twin Falls, Dave Rydahl of St. Anthony, Gene Gray of Fayette, Kenneth Dunn of Boise and J.D. Williams of Boise, described as water authorities, issued a statement disputing Fairchild's claims.

Rigby is a former Democratic state senator and a water lawyer. Rosholt, a Republican, is a water lawyer. Gray is chairman of the Idaho Water Resource Board, Rydahl is on the board and Williams is state auditor and also on the board. Dunn is former director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources.

"The statement responded to a Fairchild statement earlier depicting Andrus as a threat to Idaho water, both because of current actions and statements and also because statements he has made up to 25 years ago.

"We are dismayed that there are being circulated unfounded and untrue claims about Gov. Cecil Andrus' record as a defender of Idaho's water resources.

"We have known the governor for many years and are intimately aware of his record. To suggest that his leadership is a threat to Idaho's control over Idaho water is simply ridiculous. Quite the contrary, he has been and continues to be a defender of our water resources and his record reflects that."

As an example, the group said earlier this year, when Californians started talking about a need for Idaho water, "the governor was the first to take that threat seriously."

"He asked water experts for advice and to help him, and the state defend our water resources. His actions clearly have been in Idaho's best interests." Gov. Andrus "knows the issues and he knows the importance of Idaho's water resources."

After the California stories surfaced, Andrus appointed a six-member panel to assist the state water agencies in fending off any possible threat to state control of water. Rigby, Rosholt and Dunn were named to that panel, along with water lawyers Scott Reed, of Coeur d'Alene, and Sen. Brian Donestey, D-Boise, and Rep. Reed Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, a farmer.

Sen. James McClure said Wednesday DOE approved the funding. "This is the first installment in a long-term agreement by the Department of Energy with the state of Idaho to ensure that public health and safety are top priority at INEL," he said.

Idahoans try to keep air base

WASHINGTON (AP) — A delegation of state, local and national officials carried the message to Washington on Wednesday that Mountain Home Air Force Base is a valuable, cost-efficient operation that should be kept.

Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, Elmore County officials, representatives of the Idaho Department of Commerce and university officials met with congressional leaders seeking pledges of continued support for the base, just outside of Mountain Home.

"The message is that Mountain Home is one of the best cost-effective Air Force bases in America," the governor said in a telephone interview after the meetings.

"They will get more quality response or bang for the buck from bases that have lower electrical energy and natural gas, low employee cost and a better quality of life," Andrus said.

Andrus said a proposed expansion of the base's bombing range was discussed. Air Force officials need a lot of opposition by proposing an increase in the 110,000-acre bombing range to more than two million acres.

"We told them that the first plan they were talking about was not in the cards," the governor said. The Mountain Home Air Force base is being, hopefully until it dies of its own weight."

Elmore County Commissioner John Hiler headed a county delegation that included zoning officials.

Andrus said the Idahoans met with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Deputy Assistant Air Force Secretary Gary Vest and other Air Force officials. The sessions also included Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairmen of the armed services committees. Andrus said Nunn was impressed by the unified support shown for the Mountain Home facility.

He said the Idahoans were advised that Mountain Home Air Force Base was not on any current closure lists.

"We were there to make certain that Mountain Home Air Force base remains a key element of the defense system," said Andrus.

Andrus said a congressional staffer said there are a lot of F-111 squadrons returning to the United States from places such as Europe, which might be assigned to Mountain Home.

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A slide-plagued freeway interchange project that buried a Lake Coeur d'Alene salmon-spawning tributary should be abandoned, engineers say.

Nobody needs the Interstate 90 interchange five miles east of here said Tuesday.

The interchange was added to the freeway construction plans nearly two decades ago to give the U.S. Forest Service access to forest near the lake, said Larry Swift, with the Idaho Department of Transportation.

Idaho Schools increase numbers

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho and Lewis-Clark State College are reporting record enrollments this fall, but they fall short of advances in schools to the south.

Overall enrollment at the state's four-year schools is up 8.1 percent to 23,862 students.

UI's fall enrollment is 10,544, a 5.2 percent jump over last fall's record of 10,019.

More than half of the land-grant school enrollment hike is because of growing off-campus programs, UF Registrar Matt Tein said Tuesday.

For example, the number of students at UI's Idaho Falls Center for Higher Education is up nearly 33 percent over last fall, he said. The number of students taking classes at Moscow has expanded 2,335 percent to 9,097 this fall, he said.

Officials at Idaho said they are particularly pleased about a 109 percent jump to 376 in the number of minority students. That represents about 3.0 percent of the student body.

This fall's enrollment boosts at Idaho and LCSC are dwarfed by the hikes at Idaho State University and Boise State University.

The number attending ISU this fall is 9,139, a 13.9 percent expansion over a year ago, said Jerry Engstrom, management information officer for the state Board of Education.

He said ISU attributes most of its larger population to the enrollment caps imposed at Bricks College at Rexburg and Brigham Young University in Utah. The number of students attending Boise State University this fall is up 7.4 percent to 13,517, Engstrom said Tuesday.

Crime measure sidetracked by Congress

BOISE (AP) — Congressional legislation which Attorney General Jim Jones says could have virtually wiped out death penalty laws has been sidetracked in the House.

The House on Tuesday refused to consider the bill, Jones said in a news release Wednesday. He called the action a victory for law and order.

This so-called crime bill would have made it virtually impossible to carry out a death sentence in Idaho or anywhere in the country, Jones said, because it would have required complicated statistical analysis in each case to make sure there was no racial discrimination.

Tort claim required to sue Idaho agency

BOISE (AP) — No lawsuit can be filed against an Idaho governmental agency unless a tort claim is filed first, no matter how legitimate the lawsuit, the Idaho Supreme Court says.

The court, on Wednesday, upheld a lower court action against a lawsuit filed by Larry Banks against the University of Idaho. The court said because Banks failed to file a tort claim, he is barred from filing a lawsuit. A tort claim is a notice filed with a governmental agency of a claim against the agency.

No one wins big one

BOISE (AP) — No one matched all five numbers drawn last Friday in the Idaho Fantastic 5 lotto game, so the $32,500 grand prize will grow to an estimated $45,000 in the Idaho Lottery Director Wally Hedrick said.

Sixty-one people won $350 for matching four of five numbers and 2,038 matched three numbers to win $5 each from Friday's second weekly drawing.

Goodwill Games will go to Leningrad

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Goodwill Games, which lost $70 million in its first two editions, will go forward in 1994 in the Soviet city of Leningrad, Turner Broadcasting System Inc. decided Wednesday.

The games, which failed to attract a world-class field in many sports this year at Seattle, probably will be televised in part by ABC in 1994, TBS said. ABC would broadcast only on weekend afternoons.

Jack Kelly, the president of the Goodwill Games, said that the ABC deal had not been finalized and that he didn't know how much money the network would pay TBS. He also said it had not been decided whether the 1994 games would be on the TNT cable network or on SuperStation TBS, which broadcast this year's 17-day competition in Seattle. Kelly said — the games probably would be shortened to 16 days.

Ed Turner, the chairman of TBS, would not answer questions following a two-hour meeting of the 15-person board in a New York hotel, leaving the meeting via a side stairway.

Kelly, who organized the 1986 and 1990

Olympic Festivals, said he thought the U.S. city which will host the 1998 games would be chosen as early as 1992.

He also said the choice of Atlanta, the base of TBS, as host city of the 1996 Olympics did not play a role in the decision, but would probably create more U.S. interest.

TBS said the decision of the board to continue the games, first held in Moscow in 1986, was unanimous. The company has estimated that 1990 games lost as much as $44 million.

"It will be very, very difficult to lose $44 million on a future event," Kelly said. "We didn't discuss specific numbers."

Kelly said he was planning to have approximately the same number of events in Leningrad as in Seattle, which had 21 sports.

TBS has been looking for corporate sponsors to underwrite a large part of the costs for future games and Kelly said, "we expect to have Pepsi as a major player in terms of sponsorship the next time around."

Kelly also said the Goodwill Games would talk to FIFA about including some soccer events.

Iraqi forces retaliate for ouster of team

DOHA, Qatar — Iraqi occupation forces retaliated for Kuwait's successful ouster of their team from the Asian Games by vandalizing the offices of the Kuwait Football Federation, a Qatari newspaper reported Wednesday.

The daily Al-Sharq, quoting an unidentified Kuwaiti refugee, said all contents of the Federation were destroyed and all trophies were taken away.

Among the trophies was the 10th Gulf Cup, which Kuwait won in February. The paper said the cup weighed 2.2 pounds and was made of gold.

Dodgers earn home-field advantage in 1-game playoff

NEW YORK — The Los Angeles Dodgers won the coin toss Wednesday for the home-field advantage in a one-game playoff should the National League West wind up in a first-place tie.

The Dodgers were represented by executive vice president Fred Claire, the Cincinnati Reds by general manager Bob Quinn. The Reds led the Dodgers by 3½ games going into Thursday night's action.

The playoff game would be played Thursday, Oct. 4.

Kent Hrbek injures himself while 'just messing around'

CHICAGO — Kent Hrbek often refers to himself as "just a big kid," but kidding around finally got the better of him.

Hrbek may miss the final week of the season after spraining his left ankle while running through the Minnesota Twins' clubhouse last Sunday.

Twins manager Tom Kelly tried to cover up the cause of the first baseman's injury, saying Hrbek twisted his ankle during a slide at home plate, but Hrbek said he didn't mind telling the truth.

Hrbek said the Twins' "last-place standing softens the blow."

"I'm glad it didn't happen when we were in contention," he said.

"Of course, the Twins haven't been in contention most of this season and Hrbek's inconsistency has been a major reason.

Twin Falls, Borah prepare for crucial Friday game

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the fifth week of the football season both Twin Falls and Borah have their playoff hopes pretty well defined.

That means when the two collide at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Bruin Stadium, the loser could be in a world of hurt.

From the standpoint of pure numbers, Borah is more vulnerable, the Lions having a 1-3 record and two losses in the playoff pod.

Twin Falls is 3-1, but that one loss is within the pod and although all Class A-1 wins count toward a playoff berth, the Bruins' victories over Mimco and Burley still mean they have the entire length of the Division I pod to go through.

The other problem for Twin Falls is that the Burles game took three defensive backs out of commission.

Along with the two that were injured before the season, that means we are short five defensive backs," says Coach Jon Jund. And anyone who has witnessed Twin Falls' pass defense knows it hasn't been nearly leak proof.

So the battle line is drawn. Twin Falls' injured defense has to hold Borah three-pronged offensive game. Then, with starting running back Terry Thugson out for the week with a knee injury, the Bruins have to take the ball into the Borah end zone.

That's not going to be easy, says Jund who notes, "defensively they are great. They use a multiple front with a lot of stunting and they have perhaps the best linebacker around in (three-year starter) Jason Stoppella."

"But Borah's problem is their offense has been giving up points. Lewiston had two picks (interceptions) and returned them for touchdowns in the third quarter last week. That took Borah out of their ball control offense," he added.

On closer review of that Borah defense, Jund says "they have nine seniors on that unit and they present major problems with their changing front. They are continually checking to the wide-side or into the offense's formation strength. We have to find the running lanes they leave open."

"Their pass coverage is the best — putting heat on the passer," he adds.

On offense the Lions go from 190 to 225 in the front line and they like to run behind Jared Perry, 6-6, 215) and Matt Romberg (6-6, 225). So far they've shown three offenses. The power I, which they like to use because it lets them use that front line size and backfield strength; the option, where spear quarterback Tom Myers is, a very athletic leader and running back Paul Purdy who can scout and likes to bounce outside; and the one-back set — spread and throw," Jund said.

"Their punt and kickoff return games are best. Please see BORAH/B2

Twin Falls-Burley matchup may be gone forever

Catching up on last week:
 First, that Twin Falls-Burley football game that so many people proclaimed the best high school battle they'd ever seen, might also have been the last. The battle between the schools?

Starting next year the on-again, off-again series probably will be socked as the Bobcats plan on being in Class A-2 for all sports starting next fall.

With the football playoffs now considering all Class A-1 games — in or out of playoff pod — it becomes important that the Bruins maintain as close to an A-1 schedule as it can.

This was pointed out a couple of years ago when Twin Falls played one less game than a couple of pod opponents and the "winning percentage" favored the others because of playing more games.

Larry Hovey Sports

"We just feel we have to play Division I A games if we can find them," says Twin Falls Coach Jon Jund. "For the first time, in this effort, both sides had very respectable fan support. It indicates that perhaps the series could have developed into a revenue boost for both sides. But the playoffs are the main thing now."

Burley is not the only change. Because the state allows A-1 schools to declare division I or division II for playoff purposes, the scuttlebutt now is that Bonville and Lewiston will move out of the

Magic Johnson helps team by taking pay cut

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Magic Johnson was credited with another assist Wednesday, only it wasn't on the court.

Johnson voluntarily surrendered part of his salary so the Los Angeles Lakers could acquire guard Terry Teague under the NBA's salary cap limits, General Manager Jerry West revealed Wednesday.

"We didn't have enough money under the cap to pick up Terry's contract without Magic giving up a substantial amount of his own salary," West said.

Under league rules, no team can exceed $11.8 million per year in total player salaries.

Johnson spoke to West about a month ago and offered to relinquish part of his salary to get a first-rate player.

"To make a long story short, we did something concrete and all of a sudden this thing came where we thought we could make a deal and we took him up on his offer," West said.

The amount of money Johnson gave up was not disclosed, but an informed source said it was "a substantial amount — in six figures." The 31-year-old guard reportedly will earn $3.1 million next season.

Teague, a 30-year-old swingman acquired from the Golden State Warriors, has two years remaining on a contract that will pay him a reported $600,000 in 1990-1991.

The trade, which was announced Tuesday, called for the Lakers to give the Warriors their first-round draft choice in 1991 in exchange for Teague, who averaged career bests last season in scoring (16.1) and rebounding (4.5).

He is expected to replace Michael Cooper, the longtime Laker swingman who left the team this summer to play in Italy. In another move related to the salary cap and the acquisition of Teague, the Lakers traded center Mark McNamara to the San Antonio Spurs.

Southeastern Conference spurned again, by Miami

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — For the second time in two weeks a Florida school has spurned the Southeastern Conference, this time Miami saying it may line up with the Big East or ACC, but not with the SEC or Metro

Miami President Edward Foote said Wednesday that his school draws heavily from the East Coast and District of Columbia areas for its students, making the SEC and Metro less attractive than the other two leagues.

Two weeks ago Florida State rejected the SEC and joined the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Arkansas joined the SEC in August, and South Carolina joined on Tuesday, bringing league membership to 12, large enough to break into two divisions and play a championship football game, if university presidents "shibboleth" to take that SEC Commissioner Roy Kramer said by telephone Wednesday that there was never an invitation issued to Miami, and he would not comment on discussions between the conference and the school.

West Virginia has campaigned for an invitation to join the SEC. The Times-Picayune reported Wednesday, but Kramer would not say whether the SEC would stop at 12 or continue seeking expansion.

"We have maintained from Day One a flexible attitude. We will continue to evaluate all of the various types of changes that are taking place across the country and leave our options open as things develop," he said.

Clash in Canyon Conference matches Valley against Declo

By Brad Bowlin Times-News writer

HAZELTON — Valley High School's homecoming will feature the only two undefeated A-3 schools in the state Friday.

The top-ranked Vikings will tackle number two Declo for the Canyon Conference lead.

Both teams have identical 4-0 records with three conference wins. Declo is coming off a 40-6 thrashing of Wendell, and Valley struggled for an 18-12 victory at fourth-ranked Glens Ferry last week.

The week offers two other battles of conference undefeated contenders. In the Sawtooth eight-man league, the Shoshone Indians will be hosting the North Gen. Cowboys. Burley and Buhl square off at the Bobcats' Budge Field in a South Central Idaho duel.

In the last weekend's game, the Vikings outscored opponents 102-0 in three games, racking up lots of yardage on the ground.

The Pilots slowed that running attack by blitzing their strong, quick linebackers.

Although the Hornets don't have the overall team speed or the size at linebacker that Glens Ferry does, Valley coach Rod Malone said keeping defenders out of the backfield is essential.

"We've got to be able to stop the linebackers from blitzing," Malone said.

First-year Declo coach Jeff Peak said stopping the run will be a priority. The Hornets will mix up the defensive sets to confuse the Valley attack, he said.

"We jump around a lot on defense," he said. "We may or may not (blitz) — it depends on the game situation."

Despite having an easy time of it against the Trojans last week, the Declo players were ready for a tough game, Peak said.

Offensively, the Hornets will probably have to throw the ball to get past Valley's tight man, defensive end, the Vikings.

“With a few more in the gallery, it would be very easy to say it was the biggest one.”

Hampden said. "But it takes a couple of years to build galleries."

Rocky Mountain PGA section President Jeff Sweeney said he was sure there would be a turnout by the public.

"I estimate the gallery Saturday and Sunday at very good thousand," he said. "I thought it was six or eight thousand."

And more from the Hamblin family, so Mike Hamblin, Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course Professional, finished 4th and that is the highest any member of a host section has finished in the history of the tournament.

DOE postpones series

of INEL cleanup meets

POCATELLO — The U.S. Department of Energy has postponed a series of public hearings on the health and environmental consequences of cleaning up and modernizing the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The Energy Department has been promising Idaho field hearings since January on "programmatic environmental impact statements" for the INEL's future.

"I agreed to the studies after being threatened with a lawsuit in 1988 by a consortium of groups including the Natural Resources Defense Council and the Snake River Alliance.

But Brad Bugger, an INEL spokesman, said Wednesday that the federal agency had to delay the hearings tentatively scheduled for next month because it had failed to publish a "Notice of Intent" in the Federal Register.

"In order to meet the requirements for notification, we had to delay the hearings," Bugger said.

Opponents contend Energy Secretary James Watkins is promoting plans to turn the INEL into a hub of the government's nuclear weapons production complex even before starting the environmental impact statement process.

CSI slates computer classes in Jerome during October

GOODING — The College of Southern Idaho's Northside Center has scheduled two computer courses that will begin the second week in October.

The classes will be held at Jerome High School. Introduction to computers will meet from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Thursdays, Oct. 11 through Nov. 8, under the instruction of Joe Glick. The fee is $49.

Lotus 1-2-3 Level 1 will meet from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Wednesdays, Oct. 10 through Nov. 7. The fee is $62 and 10 previous computer courses are needed.

State, Twin Falls building permits strong in August

The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — Responding to a jump in commercial building, the value of Idaho's construction permits in August rose 57 percent from the same month a year ago and Twin Falls registered almost $2 million in new permits.

Total building permits climbed from $57 million in August 1989 to $89.6 million a month ago, First Security Corp. officials reported Tuesday.

August's total of $31.7 million for non-residential construction was 68 percent higher than July, and 200 percent above August 1989's figure.

August's nonresidential value was exceeded only by July 1989's $53.8 million and April 1988's $48.2 million. Leading the state were Boise with $21.7 million in commercial construction permits; Idaho Falls, $5.3 million; and Twin Falls, $1.8 million.

It was the third-highest monthly total since Idaho's building boom began three years ago. And it is a sign the state's robust economy has not yielded to a slumping national housing industry, lower consumer spending and higher energy costs.

First Security economist Kelly Matthews said significant gains were seen in all major building segments in August: residential and repair; as well as commercial. Permits issued in August for single-family homes went up 12.9 percent over year-ago levels, and multi-family permits soared 481.3 percent.

August's total value of construction permits was second only to the $92.8 million recorded in May of this year.

"This year we've been very busy, as I think most commercial general contractors have been," said Ray Hoobling, vice president of CM Company Inc. in Boise.

In August, CM received building permits hitting more than $11 million for remodeling and expansion projects in Boise for Security Pacific and First Interstate banks.

Other CM projects just completed or under way include a $2-million research center for Rogers Seed Co. near Nampa and a $1.5-million motel near Boise's airport.

Dairy farmers unhappy with proposed ordinance

By Phil Saban Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An ordinance regulating dairies in Twin Falls County is about as palatable as a foul-smelling waste lagoon at least according to the handful of farmers who spoke at a public hearing Wednesday night.

The grandfather clause, setbacks and questions about definitions in the proposed regulations drew fire from dairy owners and others who spoke at the hearing before the Twin Falls County Commission. The ordinance does not address the real problems — flies and odors, they said.

About 30 people, including some cub scout troop members, attended the hearing at the College of Southern Idaho. Six people there said they raised cattle. The proposal is 18 months in the works, probably is headed back to the Planning and Zoning Commission, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said at the hearing's close.

"The biggest problem I see with the ordinance is the alleged grandfather clause. It is not a grandfather clause. It is a death clause," said Mike Quessnell. Quessnell said his family has owned a dairy south of Twin Falls since the 1940s.

"We hope to continue, but if the proposed ordinance is adopted it will make it impossible for us to do that," he said.

The ordinance proposes that dairy lagoons be set back 1,000 feet from houses and subdivisions and 125 feet from adjoining property. Corals must be at least 400 feet from the nearest home. It also proposes that new dairies cannot locate closer than one-quarter of a mile to a major drainage. Dairies also must design a plan for liquid and solid waste that meets state and federal requirements.

The ordinance also weights animals by their potential effect on the environment. A dairy heifer or slaughter cow is one unit. A pig is one-half of a unit and a sheep or lamb is one-fifth of a unit. Farms of less than 20 acres cannot have more than five animal units per acre.

Existing dairies can get a variance and may be exempted from the ordinance's regulations, but any expansion of those operations — a new waste lagoon, corral or barn, for example — must meet the new regulations. That will prevent those dairies from expanding, Quessnell said.

"As long as I stay there and do not try to improve my property, everything is hunky-dory," he said.

Quessnell said he knows of three long-time dairy farms that would not be able to improve their operations under the ordinance because they are within

5 Jerome residents face charges after drug sting

By Anita Dennis Times-News writer

JEROME — Five Jerome residents have been arrested on drug charges after a just-month sting operation by the Jerome County sheriff.

"It was excellent," Sheriff Larry Gold said. "This deal shut down and I'm already planning the next. We'll never get rid of our drug problem, but I hope to displace it."

The sting operation began in July, when the sheriff's office hired an informant who has worked undercover for law enforcement agencies in Oregon, California and Idaho.

"Frank," as he was known, has no criminal history, doesn't use drugs — verified every two weeks with a urinalysis — and doesn't look like a cop.

"For Frank's protection, Gold declined to reveal the man's identity.

"He was kind of a ratty-looking guy," Gold said. With long hair and a beard, he was "unkempt," the sheriff said.

Gold set Frank up with phony furniture-making business in an empty storefront at 154 Main St. W., where Frank also lived. Frank took himself up with people who could buy him marijuana, cocaine, methamphetamine, LSD and prescription drugs. The sheriff waited — and watched.

All summer-long transactions in the store were recorded by a hidden video camera. Microphones transmitted conversations to officers who watched from outside as people entered and left.

The people Frank began to deal with (though he was "really a cool guy," said Jerome County Undersheriff Mito Alonzo.

One of the videotapes, shown to a reporter Wednesday, depicts a bearded, pony-tailed and shirtless Frank discussing the purchase of two auto parts with two men who want to sell the goods.

In the tape, Frank said he will sell the stolen property to someone in Boise, but that he wanted to make a little money him.

Cassia County wants help with Pomerelle road upkeep

By Christopher Clark Times-News correspondent

ALBION — Cassia County and the Burley and Albion highway districts should share the responsibility for maintaining the battered road that leads to Pomerelle Ski Resort and Lake Cleveland, Cassia County officials say.

No one asked during Monday's meeting whether Pomerelle Ski Resort should have to contribute.

Howel Canyon Road connects Lake Cleveland and Pomerelle to Highway 77. According to one study, about 80,000 cars, mostly from Cassia County, traveled the road during a one-year period.

Though located within the boundaries of Cassia County, the well-used gravel road is not the responsibility of the Burley Highway District.

The commissioners agreed that the recreational area is a valuable asset to the county's residences and businesses. But they said the maintenance of the road should be shared among the county, the Burley Highway District, and the Albion Highway District.

"I have a hard time justifying spending county tax dollars where I have not been authorized to spend them," said Commissioner John Adams.

Because the popular recreational area does stimulate a certain amount of business to the local economy, Adams said he believes that maintenance of the road should be shared responsibility.

Federal money used to help maintain the road when it was first built in 1968, but because of cutbacks, that responsibility has fallen to the local government.

Though most of the area is part of the Sawtooth National Forest, the Forest Service is not responsible for maintaining the road.

The commissioners decided to form a committee that will consist of a county commissioner, a Burley Highway District member and an Albion Highway District member to explore possible solutions to resolve the issue.

In other business:

Steve Pearson, on the planning and zoning office reported progress has been made in an ongoing project to survey the south end of the county.

Treasurer Shirley Polvson discussed arrangements for Gail Erickson, who will be replacing her soon. Polvson served as the treasurer for 21 years and 9 months.

City of Burley's Mayor Frank Bauman presented the first place award to the commissioners for the most improved waterway system.

Teachers ask for mediator

By Terrell Williams Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Teachers for the Gooding School District have requested a federal mediator to help work out a contract agreement with the district.

On Tuesday, the district offered a 10.41 percent salary increase for average certified teachers, plus a 19 percent James benefit increase, Superintendent James Cobble said.

"This represents an average teacher salary of $24,338," he said.

Teacher representative Lisa Hollifield said the teachers have come down twice from their original request for a base salary of $17,000, a figure she says is average for the Magic Valley and lower when compared to the rest of the state.

But teachers and district officials have rejected each other's offers.

Cobble said negotiations will resume when a federal mediator can be scheduled.

Hollifield said sometimes it helps negotiations to have an objective third party.

"The job of a mediator is to try to get both sides to come together in an agreement, and that's what we hope will happen," she said.

Rotary collects $85,000 toward Centennial Park

By Phil Saban Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Rotary Club has collected more than $85,000 toward paying for 7.6 acres to give Twin Falls County for Centennial Park.

The county could have title to the land by next spring.

A Rotary Club committee began a drive last year to collect $110,000 to buy the land and a monument for the park, which will be located along the Snake River. The land cost $92,000.

The drive will be a community-wide project, said Mike Brock at a Rotary lunch Wednesday.

Brock named a number of Rotary members who helped raise money for the project. He also said the club will sell 300 prints of an artist's conception of the park

Hearing slated Oct. 17

Twin Falls County will hold a public hearing Oct. 17 regarding the plan to open the Snake River to motorboats from the Perrine Bridge to Pillar Falls.

The hearing will concern motorboats, horse power, noise abatement and wake control, said Twin Falls County Parks Director Darrell Heider. The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho, probably at the Shields Building, Heider said.

To raise more money

The Rotary secured a $62,000 loan from West One Bank to go toward the land. About $50,000 in principal has been paid toward the note, said Mitty McClellan, whom Brock called the project's banker and accountant.

The committee made a $29,000 down payment on the acreage and owes just $11,687 in principal on the note, McClellan said.

Almost $71,000 of the $85,000 collected has come from direct donations, he said. McClellan read a list of 24 local businesses and individuals who have contributed more than $1,000 toward buying the land.

Twin Falls County Parks and Recreation Director Darrell Heider called the park a "dream of 13 years" that he hopes to be the kind of place whose trails people want to hike and river people would want to boat.

"It is going to be a great park," he said. "Those just a critical seven acres" in a county, that does not have much money to spend on parks, planning, Heider said. The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has given the county $15,000 to help improve the access road to the park, he said.

The county has accepted a state waterways grant to build a boat ramp, parking spaces and restroom facilities along the Snake River by the park.

In accepting the grant the county cannot limit the types of boats allowed in the river along the park, something that upsets some canoeists.

Canoeists say motorboats will ruin the canoeing and the solitude of the river from the Perrine Bridge to Pillar Falls.

Probably the only way to regulate boats along the river there would be to put in a speed limit, Heider said.

The sheriff would have to enforce it.

Blaine Airport Commission gives Hailey fire protection contract

By Barbara Newert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - In a 6-3 vote, the Blaine County Airport Commission agreed to allow the city of Hailey to provide fire and rescue coverage during off-hours, weekends and holidays for all incoming and outgoing flights at Friedman Memorial Airport.

The airport's maintenance staff has been working overtime to provide emergency coverage for Horizon Air flights since Tipton pulled its firefighting crews from the airport Sept. 17 after the airport commission failed to reach an agreement with the city.

Hailey contract calls for the hiring of two full-time, professional firefighters to work in conjunction with the two airport-maintenance staff personnel who are trained to handle on-site emergencies.

Hailey crews will provide on-site response from 4 to 11 p.m. Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. on weekends and will cover holidays.

Salaries and benefits will cost $54,479, and will be billed to the airport commission.

Hailey encouraged the commission to discuss raising airport landing fees to spread the cost of emergency coverage to all airport users.

The commissioners said they will discuss the idea at their next meeting Oct. 2, even though landing fees were doubled earlier this year.

Hailey's proposal is "the ultimate in fire protection," not simply what the Federal Aviation Administration requires, said Hailey City Administrator Daryl James.

The FAA requires emergency response be available within three minutes for all airports with a passenger facility for 30 or more passengers.

Horizon Air uses 19-passenger Metroliners during spring and fall and Skywest's planes carry only 30 passengers maximum.

This makes it technically unnecessary to provide such emergency coverage during the fall and spring months, but Hailey officials felt it was critical to consider the safety factor of all airport users, not just those passengers who ride on large airplanes, James said.

The commission considered a proposal from Airport Manager Randy Petrovick to hire two additional employees who could be trained for emergency response.

The time spent manning the fire engines would account for only 25 percent of their time, Petrovick said. The remainder of the time could be spent filling maintenance duties or possibly acting as the assistance airport manager, he said.

However, this proposal could not be implemented soon, and the new personnel could not receive adequate training until next spring, Petrovick said. For the interim, he suggested handling over the emergency responsibility to Horizon Air personnel.

The other proposal for emergency coverage came from Horizon Air verbal form only.

Horizon official Kent Henninger said the airline would be willing to train its employees for emergency coverage, but said that was not Horizon's primary business. He said he had no strong feelings one way or the other, but said Horizon would be willing to train its personnel if that's what the commission decided.

Commissioner Alan Reynolds voted against Hailey's offer to supply the coverage. During the discussion, Reynolds said he is concerned about Hailey's lack of responsibility in the past regarding the fire protection issue.

The commissioners voted 6-3 in support of Hailey assuming emergency protection, with Reynolds, Sue Orb and Joe Humphrey voting against the motion.

Hailey will hire two full-time firefighters this week to begin site coverage Monday.

Legislator wants new field burning controls Wood River Valley residents meet tonight

COBUR D'ALENE (AP) - Post Falls legislator Hide Kollogg is calling for a new approach to managing the fire burning that chokes her region each year.

Idaho and Washington county commissioners should meet with local legislators to redesign the smoke-management plan and reduce the haze hovering over the area each burn season, the Republican lawmaker suggested Tuesday.

The purpose of the session is to address the problems and availability of day care and other issues involving child care in Idaho, according to Carolyn Roberts, spokeswoman for the group, including the lack of supervision and licensing of day care centers by the state.

The public is invited to the session, to be held in the Wood River High auditorium at 7 p.m.

Panel members will include Pat Kempthorne, wife of Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne, and Hailey Mayor Keith Roark.

NEITHER TIPTON NOR STIARY WORE HELMETS.

Police arrived within two minutes of the 10:26 p.m. accident. Patrol Officer Steve Benkula kept Stary's heart beating until she reached Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Mildon said. "He did an excellent job," he said.

Stary was pronounced dead at 12:58 a.m.

Tipton was also taken to the hospital and tested for this blood alcohol content. The results were not available Wednesday.

The accident is still under investigation, Mildon said. Tipton was in fair condition at the hospital on Wednesday afternoon, a spokeswoman said.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office and Idaho State Police assisted city officers at the scene.

At the intersection, Tipton braked, skidded about 50 feet, tipped to the right then to the left and the motorcycle lifted from the road for about 8 feet, the report says.

Stary was thrown from the bike and landed in the dirt median. Tipton stayed on the bike as it landed one-quarter mile of new subdivisions, Quessell said. The farms have been there a lot longer than the houses, he said.

He also questioned receiving dairies to take the city land and "fill the area of impact. Excellent dairy land is found within the impact zone, he said.

Lagoon setbacks won't help if the system is designed poorly, Quessell said. Flies and odors from lagoons can be eliminated with a properly designed system.

"You have rules here, people cannot abide by," he said. "It isn't fair and probably isn't legal."

Dave Roper, who raises hogs south of Kimberly, said the weight-of-crime suits would force him to buy more land.

"I'm going to need a lot more ground under these regulations," Roper said. Hog farming is risky enough without the added burden of these regulations, he said.

"A controlled setback designed a lagoon will not pose problems," he said. "The problem isn't in setbacks. It is in what is leaving the (farm) property," said Ervin Wilkins, who owns only two acres and also raises a few hogs in the Kimberly-Hansen area. "If we aren't careful, Twin Falls County is going to become a sweren," he said.

He also questioned how farmers to the ordinance would be granted. He said some people might have a better chance than others at obtaining a variance under the "good old boy zoning in this county."

The final speaker, Roger Johnson of Buhl, also wondered if the ordinance could be fairly enforced. He urged the commission to reply to it.

"Do something simpler. You've got an awful lot of words here trying to address something really pretty simple."

Blaine County halts building along streams to study setbacks

By Barbara Newert
Times-News Correspondent

HAILEY—The Blaine County Commission has issued a 120-day building moratorium on new construction along Blaine County rivers and streams.

The moratorium began Tuesday and prohibits building permits for new construction less than 100 feet from streams, but will allow remodeling projects on existing homes.

The riparian setback should not, however, be construed as a public greenbelt, said Commissioner Alan Reynolds.

Two weeks ago, a recommendation from the Planning and Zoning Commission drew much fire and heated discussion from real estate agents and riverfront property owners, and the commissioners tabled the ordinance until Tuesday.

The commissioners have put that ordinance on hold for the time being.

Again Tuesday, in an overflowed meeting room, many homeowners said they felt angered at the commissioners' attempt to "take away" their property rights by restricting usage on their riverfront lots.

"You're endeavoring to paint everybody who has water on their property with the same brush as everyone who's trying to destroy it," said Ralph Girton.

He said the ordinance has polarized the community and threatened to take the matter to court as an unconstitutional seizure of property.

Commissioner Reynolds said the moratorium will stop the deluge of inquiries at the county planning office from people trying to find ways to circumvent the proposed ordinance.

The commission plans to act immediately to institute a "quick and dirty study" of the best way to come up with suitable setbacks, Reynolds said.

The study group will be comprised of professionals such as hydrologists, biologists and land planners, plus one or two representatives from the private sector.

The group will have 30 days to come up with a way to identify a set of criteria that can be used for all streams and rivers in the county.

These streams would be identified by type, and each type would have a specific set of criteria to establish different setbacks, Reynolds said.

Commissioner Tom Blanchard said he still feels a 100-foot minimum setback is acceptable, but said he agrees with the investigation.

However, Blanchard called for the moratorium because he didn't "want this to serve as an opening for people to scramble in and get their projects" authorized before the ordinance went into effect.

Due to high levels of development in Blaine County in the past two years, the county experienced some "blatant" encroachments on the river that were very destructive to the river environment, Reynolds said.

The Big Wood River is one of the most manipulated streams in the county, Reynolds said. He explained that 30 percent of its banks have been riprapped and eight to 10 miles have rock drop structures in place to stop erosion.

The commission hopes to come to a solution and enact an ordinance before the 120-day moratorium is lifted. Additional public hearings will be held prior to passage of an amended ordinance.

Twin Falls County due $485,000 in lieu of taxes

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS—Twin Falls County will receive $485,027 from the federal payment in lieu of taxes program this year, according to Sen. Jim McClure and Steve Symms.

Symms and McClure said Idaho's 44 counties will receive $7.3 million from the program, which reimburses counties for tax money lost because of federal land ownership in the 30 states. The program will return $102.7 million to all states this year, according to the release.

County Clerk Richard Pence said he had not yet been notified of this year's payment, but said he had penciled about $460,000 from the payment into next year's budget.

The county generally receives between $451,000 and $460,000 annually from the program, he said.

The money will go into the county operating budget to be used for a number of purposes.

Twin Falls ranked third among Idaho counties in the amount of money received this year. Elmore county received the most—$591,000.

and Cassia was second with $547,463.

The payments are made according to how much federal land is located in a county.

National forests, parks and wildlife refuges, land used for federal water projects, some military installations and Bureau of Land Management acreage are considered in determining a county's payment.

About 52 percent of Twin Falls County acreage is under federal control, Pence said.

Anti-litter drive sets prizes for children

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS—Idaho students recycle while earning cash, computers and possibly a car in a statewide contest.

The contest is sponsored by the Idaho "Is Too Great To Litter" Campaign. Schools will be divided into eight categories depending on enrollment size.

Prizes will be awarded to those schools collecting the most pounds of recyclable material per student. Elementary schools can win a computer for first place or playground equipment from second through fifth place.

Individual students from an elementary school can win a $30 gift certificate or $100 savings bond for collecting the most recyclable materials.

Junior high and high schools that collect the most recyclable material per student can win audio visual equipment for first and second place.

The junior-high student who collects the most material wins a computer. The high school student collecting the most material wins a 1991 Subaru Justy.

As an extra incentive, students can accumulate points to receive free drinks, fries and Big Maos from McC

Donald's. A limited number of T-shirts saying Idaho Is Too Great To Litter will be available for students who accumulate 150 points.

Funds generated from recycling will be returned to the schools.

Two schools will begin collecting goods Friday: the Agape Christian School will be accepting recyclables from 8:30 to 9 a.m. and Jefferson Elementary—in Jerome—will accept items all day.

On Saturday, you can drop off recyclables at the Agape Christian School in Twin Falls and Washington Elementary in Jerome between 8 a.m. and noon.

House panel passes Fort Hall water rights bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Legislation ratifying the Fort Hall Indian Water Rights Settlement has moved a step closer to approval by the House of Representatives.

The House Interior Committee on Wednesday approved the legislation, sponsored by Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho. An amendment changes the original proposal to provide $22 million over 20 years to develop and manage reservation water systems. The bill approved Wednesday provides the money in three years and becomes a binding contract to ensure the tribes will receive the money.

"These amendments retain the basic terms of the agreement, but improve the implementation process," said Stallings.

"All of the affected parties have worked hard to reach an equitable and fair settlement," said Stallings.

Astrological Forecasts

IF SEPTEMBER 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY - You did "right" thing in making break, taking independent action. During October you'll know it for sure, you'll be more financially secure and a "different" kind of love will be part of scenario. You are dynamic, creative, impulsive, romantic and must constantly take care to prevent injuries to head and ears. Aries, Libra, next play important roles in your life. People are drawn to you with their problems.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finally you are able to declare: "I have found security and I did it on my own!" Focus on home, family, financial opportunities. Cancer, Capricorn persons play significant roles. Follow through!

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Lines of communication reach you. Many "alligations" "your in" and you are on top of popularity. Accept on "wanting" appearance weight, body image. Charm, humor prove outstanding. Gemini represented.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Money that had been "held up" - quit! Into your hands. Check source material, be aware of details, check legal rights. Material will be revised and this favors your efforts. Check Taurus messages.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Dialogue with former opponent. Strong reliance can be formed if false pride is pushed aside. Emphasis on legality, partnership, marriage. You'll be working with your hands.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23): Significant domestic adjustment occurs tonight. Be gracious, obtaining hot-but-fact-to-principles. Keep promise made to one who served you well in recent weeks. Taurus, Libra person play roles.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar aspect "coincides" with physical attraction, creativity, change of scene. "Secret" revealed, is startling at first, but ultimately proves beneficial. Pisces and another. Virgo figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Older man, possibly employer or father. Offers to "take charge." For your own security, however, make this statement, "I will go it alone!" Accent on durable goods, property, auto-impulse.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Long-range prospects will be defined. Visiting relative impacts data previously missing. Short trip may be necessary. Caps in story are filled. You'll be rid of losing proposition. Libra involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stress independence, creativity, style, willingness to get to heart of matters. New year upcoming in information-revelation. Last article featured by tonight. Leo, Aquarius persons dominate scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): It might be as if you had your personal "wish list" well. Means requests are fulfilled, you're astonished as circumstances turn suddenly in your favor. Woman relative explains. "You did it!"

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Questions, and answers in information-revelation. Withheld is made available. Focus on humor, charm, versatility, intellectual curiosity. Secret meeting follows: excitement, glamour, be receptive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain hints from Capricorn message. Accent on friends, hope, wishes, luck in matters of speculation. You're on more solid emotional-financial ground. Red tape removed, funding becomes available.

Burning-home fires makes woman see red

DEAR ABBY: At all three weddings I've attended this summer, the pastor (one Catholic and two Lutherans) described the wife's role as the homemaker and mother. While my husband was described as the provider, and head of the house.

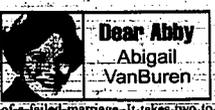

I recently divorced after 30 years of marriage, and although I know better, I still feel that I failed because of what was instilled in me since childhood. She is the woman's role to keep the home fires burning.

Abby, I wish that today's pastors would stop preaching theories that are programmed for failure. The submissive wife may spend 30 years trying to fulfill this impossible goal. And the assertive wife may be inclined to distance herself from the church.

HAD MY WAY

P.S. I can't guarantee that I won't stand and scream in church if I hear this sermon one more time!

DEAR HAD: No woman—or man—need feel like a "failure" because of a failed marriage. It takes two to make a marriage work, but only one to lose it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had an affair with his secretary. She wanted him to leave me. When I told him I was aware of what was going on between them, he said it was over, and he loved me—not her. I asked him to get rid of her. He said he would do it—but it's been three months, and she's still in his office.

Am I wrong to want him to get a new secretary? I feel hurt that he hasn't made good his promise yet. This bothers me because every time I call my husband, she's the one I have to talk to first. What should I do? Should I believe him when he says it's all over between them?

UNTRUSTING AND UNHAPPY

DEAR UNTRUSTING: Your signature speaks volumes. You and your husband should get a marriage counselor and try to get your marriage back on track. (If he refuses to go, go without him.) You are not wrong for asking him to get rid of her.

Whether the affair is over or not, his secretary should not be in his office. The temptation for both of them might be too much to resist, so absolutely insist that she be replaced.

Of course, if they want to get together, they will find a way, but why make it easy for them?

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've never seen in your column, and I'd appreciate a comment really because it's been preying on my mind.

I have gone to the same hairdresser for years—I'll call her Marietta. Anyway, while Marietta was on vacation, I went to another shop closer to my home and happened to get a hairdresser who does a better job and charges less.

I suppose most hairdressers are used to having customers switch to someone else, but Marietta was more like a friend. I don't want to lie, and I hate to hurt her feelings, but I feel guilty ducking her. I'm turning to you because you seem to have all the answers.

SWITCHED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR SWITCHED: Don't lie, and stop ducking Marietta. Either call her or go to see her and tell her honestly that you have found a hairdresser closer to home who does an excellent job and charges less.

And don't feel guilty.

You are entitled to patronize whomever you wish for your own reasons.

Discover BSU set for Oct. 6

BOISE—High school juniors and seniors are invited to attend a barbecue and homecoming football game, plus explore Boise State University programs Oct. 6 at Discover BSU.

The day begins at 10:30 a.m. in the Student Union Building with registration and a special mini-fair at which prospective students can get acquainted with many of the campus programs, including the Studies-Around-program and the National Student Exchange.

The rest of the day will include introductions to the academic and vocational-technical programs of the student's choice; campus tours and a barbecue. BSU's Homecoming game with the University of Montana will bring the program to a close.

In addition to these activities, participants will receive a Discover BSU T-shirt. Cost is $10 and participants should register by Friday. Late registrants are welcome, but because of the number of people expected for the game, football tickets cannot be guaranteed after Friday. For more information, call BSU admissions at (208) 385-1401 or toll free in Idaho at 800-632-6586.

Reformed yuppie counters with stamp

By Sheila Anne Feeney
New York Daily News

True to the tenets of recovering yuppiedom, Bridget Ragan had come to the end of her environmental consumption into one of environmental piety.

She and her husband, Marc Jalbert, used only reusable cloth napkins and cleaning rags. They sold their car and moved to the corner of Auburn Main, so they could walk everywhere. They recycled industriously. When Ragan did workshops with corporate communication clients, she incorporated a segment on socially responsible business.

Yet, reminders of their former ways continued to flood the mailbox. Lengthy applications for credit cards they didn't want. Offers of convention space they couldn't use. IBM and DOS-based software that had to be placed in their "junkintosh household."

It galled Ragan to think her property taxes paid for the disposal of the unsolicited junk mail she had to ditch at her curb.

She switched "Return to sender" on the bulk mailings, but each piece bomberanged back to her doorstep. After a little research, Ragan discovered that only first-class mail is returned to the sender at the recipient's request—and 1.5 million trees a year are felled for third-class bulk mail that cannot be returned without postage affixed by its unwilling recipient.

However, she learned that addressees can "refuse" bulk mail, which the Postal Service then discards. (There go those tax dollars again.)

Ragan got into her own stamp act. She designed and produced a rubber stamp that reads "Refused: No junk mail/Save a tree," pounding it on each unwanted third-class mailing and putting it back in the mail.

Friends began asking for a stamp, themselves, and Bridgemark Co.'s "Stamp Out Junk-Mail" stamp was born. The rubber stamp is packaged in a guerrilla kit on how to eliminate junk mail. It includes a general-voicing-the-belief that those who send out unsolicited bulk mail should pay for its return when rejected.

Ragan is distressed not so much by the existence of direct marketing, but by those who use a shot gun instead of a rifle to hit their target audience.

"They'll figure out who wants to get it if they have to pay to get it back," figures Ragan, who recently patronized a seminar advertised by mail on combining financial independence with working-for-good causes.

Very few people exercise their opportunity to refuse junk mail, according to Michael West, spokesperson for the U.S. Postal Service. In fact, while many complain about unsought mailings, Postal Service surveys indicate that people described 75 percent of their junk mail "useful, enjoyable or interesting" and termed only 5 percent of it objectionable.

"The more affluent families are those who throw on it. They get buried by it," noted West. Even if people refuse junk mail, the post office has to dump it. "If the object is to save trees, the answer to me is recycling," said West. (The post office recycles sporadically.)

"Why should we have to use (local taxes) to dump it?" Jalbert asked in response. "It should go back to the source—and they should have to do their homework a little more carefully."

The Bridgemark packet carries the address of the Direct Marketing Association (11 W. 42nd St., P.O. Box 3861, N.Y., N.Y. 10163-3861), which will remove your name from the lists of catalogues, national retailers, magazine publishers, financial services and non-profit organizations on request.

Chef Dalzell, spokesperson for the DMA, defends the mail marketers. "Direct mail is the life-blood for environmental groups. They depend on this to raise awareness and solicit funds."

But the freedom to create junk mail carries with it the responsibility to dispose of it," contended Ragan, whose $5.95 stamp is sold at Urban Outfitter stores.

Sturgeon fishing harmful

What is happening with the Idaho Fish and Game Department's efforts to regulate sturgeon to the free-flowing sections of Snake River between Shoshone Falls and C.J. Strike Reservoir isn't sounding real pretty.

Larry Hovey Fishing

In fact, it might be time for the department to take a very careful look at putting its sturgeon catch-and-release regulations on the back burner for a while.

Right now, it appears there is a sturgeon fever upon the land and the price the resource is paying may not be worth it.

Sturgeon are, of course, the largest fish in Idaho's boundaries. It has been a long while since any harvest has been allowed legally. The population has been reduced to certain sections of the river that offer adequate habitat for spawning, rearing and feeding.

The dams and slak water have made it impossible for Mother Nature to replenish the supply naturally. Sturgeon coming up out of the Columbia River-Pacific Ocean estuary.

It becomes a good news, bad news situation.

The good news was that the department, CSI and area commercial fish-growers had combined on a project that actually produced young sturgeon. Just last week this was duplicated in northern Idaho.

Council to review river policy

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Northwest Power Planning Council has launched a review of water management in the Columbia River system with emphasis on the Snake River to determine the impact of current policies on already depleted salmon and steelhead runs.

Bob Saxvik, one of the two council members from Idaho, said the study will be used to determine what changes need to be made to improve circumstances for the fish runs while still accommodating irrigation, recreation, navigation, flood control and power generation.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that our rivers are finite resources with a number of competing demands placed on them," Saxvik said. "If we want to be responsible stewards of the water resource, we've got to make some careful decisions about balancing."

If the study finds the need for changing the policy, the council could amend its fish and wildlife program to accommodate modifications. Pending with the federal government to have some of the runs declared threatened or endangered.

But Attorney General Jim Jones, who has fought to assure the state its share of the anadromous fish runs, warned fishermen on Friday to protest demands placed on restoration efforts before they begin.

Just one of every 10 young fish survives the trip from its spawning beds downstream to the ocean, Jones said, primarily because of the federal dams on the Columbia and lower Snake rivers that have allowed reduced flows needed to flush the fish to the sea.

"People should not look to Idaho to furnish water from upstream storage to remedy damage caused by downstream dams, inadequate fish passage and overharvesting of wild fish stocks," Jones said.

Changes in the management of the rivers, he maintained, would significantly affect the state's economy.

Faceoff

Despite favorable hunting conditions, elk are a depredation problem.

Elk hunt outlook promising

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

JEROME — Last year's elk hunting in Magic Valley and throughout Idaho was an all-time harvest high and, when the 1990 season begins Wednesday, there's every reason to believe that can be nearly duplicated.

The one major problems hunters apparently will have is the continued hot, dry weather that, combined with the lack of moisture for several months, will make sneaking quietly through the woods a major challenge for hunters.

The other problem with heat is the threat of spoilage after harvest. Hunters are urged to take immediate and proper steps to cool down the meat.

All of Region 4's elk rifle hunts are controlled and all have limitations on antlered and antlerless permits. The only "any elk" hunt in the area began yesterday when 20 permit holders started hunting the Picabo Hills herd.

That is a small herd that perhaps has been increased due to the Thermo Creek fire of last month. The department needs some harvest of those Picabo Hills elk because of some landowner depredation complaints last winter.

"Our forecast is good to excellent" not only in Region 4 but throughout the state, said Regional Wildlife Manager Craig Kvale Wednesday.

"Based on our counts we had very little winter mortality because of a relatively mild winter," he continued. "It appears our herds are at about the same level as last year so we expect hunting to be good."

The department is proceeding with its controversial season opener in Units 43 and 44. Camas County livestockmen have asked for a return to a previous practice of starting the southern portion of the hunt later in the month to allow ranchers to leave their livestock on public range the next several days.

But department biologists say the staggered openings provide de facto elk sanctuaries. They note pressure on the elk in the Boise River South Fork drainage simply pushes the animals into the closed south Soldier Mountain unit.

The northern unit is closed when the southern unit opens, allowing the elk to again retreat to safety.

The department had frozen a major winter feeding bill for the elk during harsh winters, operating two major feed sites on the prairie.

The department wants the elk numbers reduced to reduce private land depredation and cut that feeding expense.

Fly tackle trade show a dazzling mix

Joe Wolf moved among the crowd like a lanky predator, fiercely concentrated in purpose.

Gary Berger, restless and energetic, roamed the aisles.

A flotilla of English merchants were encoined in the snug harbor of trade they had made in a little fraternity.

The French came, the Argentines, the Welsh, Australians, a United Nations of the fishing fraternity. The countries of the world came to mix with the great anglers and companies of America. All of this simply trade merchandise, information and maybe a little fraternity.

In only its third year, the Fly Tackle Dealer trade show was a rousing commercial success. Superlatives flowed from dealers. Some small town fly merchants were in awe at the displays of merchandise in booths manned by the famous names of fishing.

I talked to people from many states. There were tackle buyers, retail merchants from Japan and Europe who were thrilled to death by the sight of fly lines introduced by Cortland Line company.

Would you believe a double taper size one line?

You can't get smaller or lighter than that. How about a weight forward two floating line or a size four line in density three sink rate?

This may sound a little arcane but it is exciting because it demonstrates the energy, thought and resources going into fly fishing.

And these are only examples. New growers of feathers cropped up everywhere and old name producers like Spencer's from Montana demonstrated the continually improving product that results

Warren Scoth Fishing

Warren Scoth Fishing

The North American Fly Tackle Trade Association reinvented itself in this show, taking new purpose and renewed energy in serving its public.

In no place had such a concentration of merchandise and information about fly fishing been put together.

The Walton Powell Rod Company, an old line bamboo rod manufacturer had licensed a British technique and is actually recreating the handcut tapers of his best bamboo rods in a hexagonal graphite blank. Rod builders are no longer locked into the mandrel formed tubes, a technology derived from fiberglass.

New fly reels from Abel, Laimson, STH, Orvis, Hardy and others attempt to match the plethora of fly lines introduced by Cortland Line company.

Kootenai sturgeon hatch successfully

The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Eggs taken from a Kootenai River sturgeon in July have hatched, providing a potential boon to biologists trying to explain the decline of the big fish.

The hatch means sturgeon, which can live to be more than 100 years old, can still produce viable eggs and may indicate that pollution is affecting the fish, biologists said Monday.

"If the eggs hadn't hatched, there'd be no hope that the sturgeon could breed viable young," said regional fisheries biologist Melo Matolic.

The next step is to determine whether they are "good, healthy little fish," Matolic said.

The state Department of Fish and Game is midway through a four-year study to determine why no sturgeon under 15 years of age have been found in the northern Idaho stretch of the river, which is blocked by dams in Montana and British Columbia.

Biologists collected 50,000 eggs from a female in July and sent them to a hatchery in Twin Falls. Of the sturgeon fry that hatched, about 350 are still alive, Matolic said.

Because 10 percent to 50 percent of the fry were deformed, biologists suspect that pollution is killing the fish before they mature, biologist Kim Apperson said.

In comparison, 5 percent of fry spawned from Snake River sturgeon were deformed, Apperson said.

Suspected pollutants include pesticides, polychlorinated biphenyls and heavy metals, especially copper, Matolic said. Laboratory tests of unhatched eggs and deformed fry showed the presence of metals and PCBs, but biologists don't know what levels sturgeon can tolerate, he said.

Sturgeon draw growing interest as sport fish.

Council makes draft fish plans available

BOISE — A draft salmon and steelhead plan for the Columbia River Basin, which summarizes each of the subbasin plans is available from the Northwest Power Planning Council.

The plan summarizes key information from the 31 subbasin plans, identifying management conflicts, fish passage and riparian issues.

To receive a copy or learn how to provide comment, anglers should contact the council at 1-800-222-3355 or Sharon Kiefer, Idaho Department of Fish and Game, 334-3791.

Fish and Game photo contest deadline changed to Oct. 17

BOISE — Photographers looking for cash prizes and publication have an extra two weeks to enter the Department of Fish and Game's Idaho-Wildlife Photo Contest.

The deadline for the event has been changed to Oct. 17, according to editor Diane Rosnyne.

Winners will be published in the winter 1991 issue of Idaho Wildlife, due out in January.

Winners also will receive cash prizes for $150 for frog cover, $100 for grand prize, $50 first place, $35 second place, $20 third place and $10 honorarium mention.

Rules allow anyone to enter up to 10 photographs but all must have been taken in Idaho. Subjects are limited to living, unaged wildlife or wild flora, scenes or people hunter or fishing.

For ease of judging, 35mm slides are preferred but large-format transparencies or unmounted 5 by 7 prints of larger are acceptable.

All black and white photographs will be judged as one category.

Contest rules and entry form are available in the Summer and Fall issues of Idaho Wildlife magazine. Single copies are on sale for $1.90 at all department offices and Payless Drug sporting goods departments.

Nordic association ready to clear South Hills trails

TWIN FALLS — The High Desert Nordic Association will hold its annual trail clearing project Saturday.

Members are asked to meet at 10 a.m. at Magic Mountain. A meal is planned at 5 p.m.

Park Service says it would help shoot straying Yellowstone bison

Statia News Service
WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Faced with what they term a "desperate situation," U.S. Park Service officials said they would be willing to help the state of Montana shoot bison that stray out of Yellowstone National Park.

Such cooperation would mark the first time Yellowstone rangers have participated in shooting animals other than nuisance bears since a public outcry over an elk culling program in 1968, according to park officials. "I think what we want to stress is this is a preliminary plan of action," said park service director James Ridenour, after emerging from a two-hour meeting with Montana state officials that took place behind closed doors. "We are reinforcing and strengthening our commitment in working with the state and looking to long-term solutions," Ridenour said. "In the short-term, if bison come out of the park, we have agreed to work with state officials, at the request of the state, in harvesting female bison." Earlier, park officials reacted with surprise to a strongly worded letter from Montana Gov. Stan Stephens that called on park service rangers to "take-the-load" in culling bison cows. But Thursday, they said they were more offended by the tone of his letter than with its content.

Instead, they said the new agreement marks an attempt by the park service to help the state officials, who have been feeling from public criticism since 469 bison were slaughtered in a state hunt two winters ago. Stephens and other state officials are concerned that the bison will infect private cattle herds with brucellosis, a potentially fatal disease which the state spent $30 million to eradicate.

Under the plan, which still has to be ratified by Gov. Stephens and reviewed by park service lawyers for environmental compliance, park rangers would assist state wardens in shooting cows, which are the most infectious animals. Bulls would be eliminated in state hunts and the calves would be captured by state wardens, castrated, and either killed if they were infected or sold off in public auctions. The bison meat would be given to charity.

Environmentalists reacted with distress over what they said was a violation of the park service's commitment to natural management and a return to a turn-of-the-century policy that advocated the control or elimination of certain animals.

"The question is who put pressure on the park service," said Terry Martin, Rocky Mountain representative of the National Parks and Conservation Association. "If the state created a public relations crisis for itself by slaughtering bison on the boundary, it should take care of that problem."

This fits in the face of the biological opinion of what to do about bison, which has been in effect to establish some winter range.

"This just looks like another free-for-all shooting: only with the park rangers taking part in it," echoed Mary Carr, spokeswoman for the Greater Yellowstone Coalition. Carr also suggested that the state might be overreacting. She said there was no documented case in which bison infected cattle in the wild and that elk and other animals also carried the disease.

Park service officials countered that they are still looking at long-term solutions to the threat caused by bison moving out of the park. Options could include trying to work out agreements with ranchers that would allow bison to graze on public lands in winter, a brucellosis vaccination, or the reintroduction of a natural predator—the Northern Rocky Mountain grey wolf. But any long-term management plan will require another two years of public input and environmental studies required by federal law. "It's a desperate situation," said Jack Morehead, park service associate director of operations. "But we want to be good neighbors and we feel it is the right thing to do."

Park officials also stressed that under the new agreement, they would not be taking the lead in shooting cows as Stephens had demanded. "We would be acting at the state's request," said Yellowstone Superintendent Bob Barber. "It's a joint, hand-in-hand operation."

Sturgeon

Idaho. A couple of years ago the department planted a number of these fish as yearlings in the Snake River. This year the remainder of that hatch, now about 24 inches long and nine pounds in weight, were released.

It was considered a bright day for white sturgeon in Idaho and for Idaho fishermen.

Now for the bad news. Catch and release sturgeon fishing has been spurred by the success. We now have a number of individuals who spend more time catching and releasing sturgeon than Wallace Jim and his friends spend on Salmon Falls Reservoir.

Some have become so expert at attracting sturgeon to the line, you would consider it a very tall fish story. If you heard some of the daily landings and releases that have occurred in the past two weeks.

On such expert fishermen the attention of the Times-News which called the fishermen to see if he had a picture of an 8-footer he'd landed and released recently.

Yes, he did, the fishermen said and then added the wouldn't allow his name, the fish's picture or the location of the fishing to be released because it undoubtedly would cause an avalanche of fishermen into the area.

It was not, the angler said, because he feared the competition. He said the thrill was such everyone should probably enjoy it at least once. But his complaint was lodged against the anglers who didn't know how to catch sturgeon and would do more damage to the resource than nature and man could correct.

He was particularly adamant about protecting those young department planters, noting a number of people go after them in the wrong way—leaving the young fish for dead.

He said the major culprit was use of large chunks of lead and sinkers. He said he'd personally seen this practice too many times.

The smaller sturgeon is hooked. The sinker becomes hung up on something on the river bottom. The angler breaks off the line, and the young sturgeon is doomed to die at the end of this unintended tether.

"I've seen them break off and I've pulled in the results," the angler said, noting he uses very heavy gear and simply catches the fish and hangs up a blob of line and sinkers.

Two often, he reports, a planted 24-inch sturgeon, very dead, comes in on the other end of the tangle. But Region 4 fishermen's manager Chip Corsi says the department already has a project under way that is designed to educate sturgeon chasers.

He said the problems are statewide, as much trouble in Hell's Canyon and up north as in Magic Valley.

And he reports the education will be aimed at the very problems the public has decrised. These suggestion pamphlets will be mailed out to sturgeon permit holders when they become available later this year.

First, there will be the suggestion that sturgeon anglers attach their weights with a lighter line than the one attached to the hooks. Then if sinker hangup strikes, only the sinker and its lesser line will be left on the river bottom.

Second, the department wants to emphasize that stainless steel hooks are not the preferred method.

"A stainless steel hook that breaks off and is left in a fish will last for a very long time. The regular steel hook will rust away in a relatively short while," Corsi said. The department wants sturgeon fishermen to police themselves on stainless steel hooks. But if they don't, regulations will prohibit their use.

He said the other problems are less than those two but added "if the fishermen would simply use their sporting instincts over their harvest instincts, those problems would disappear immediately."

He said conservation officers in the state have heard rumors of some illegal harvest but that generally the sturgeon anglers have a pretty good reputation on that score. Only that "incidental" loss is marring the program right now.

Larry Hovey is a sportswriter for the Times-News.

Tackle

From years of effort to breed better birds.

Small tools—gadgets—were everywhere and contributed to the fun.

The simply brown nail knitter from Boise made the show for another Idaho product, Dick All's blood knot tool.

Dick, an Idaho tradition with over 30 years, mixed with the John Batleys and Maggie Merrimans.

Other Idaho people like the Wolvertons with their grey catenars were there.

It is impossible to identify all the new products. Fly tiers should be in heaven with new fishers, flosses and tinsels.

Griffin Tools, an American manufacturer from Montana, showed hair slackers that adjusted according to the hair being used and their ceramic bobbins were admired by all for its toughness, smoothness and clean design.

Not all of the product was high trade and expensive. Many companies are aware of the danger of pricing their product beyond the average angler.

Some famous companies are reinventing themselves—taking hard looks at marketing position so they can better serve people.

Clothing—stylish and traditional—continues to be big news.

Tarpwear by Simms followed by Columbia has created a new army of competitors.

Fabrics, styles and general design are moving forward.

Trouf fishing is still the dominant interest of the fly fishing industry but salt water fly fishing and warm water angling continue to surge, expanding the interest and opportunity of manufacturers as well as fishermen.

The consumer was well served in this trade show.

Such companies donate time, money and expertise to better fishing conditions.

A strong industry is as necessary to your good fishing as a good legislature.

From this year's perspective, at least, the industry is up to the challenge.

improve fish passage conditions, citing modifications the Corps of Engineers could make in flood control policies and the Bonneville Power Administration could make in power generation.

There may be some significant costs associated with changing operation of the power system, but costs may well be significantly greater and the burden more unevenly distributed if Chinook runs are determined to be endangered," he said.

"We need to be vigilant and make sure that upstream solutions are not looked at as the exclusive remedy for downstream causes," Jones said.

The power council is currently putting together a 20-member negotiating committee to find ways of restoring anadromous fish runs in the Northwest where the endangered species designation can be avoided.

Consumer spending strong despite oil prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending rose 0.5 percent in August, the government said Wednesday in a report indicating personal consumption remained reasonably strong despite the Persian Gulf oil-price shock.

"I thought consumption would take more of a hit from the energy shock, but it didn't," said Michael K. Evans of Evans Economics Inc. in Washington.

The Commerce Department said spending totaled $3.69 trillion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, up $16.7 billion from a month earlier. It was the smallest advance since last May, when spending was unchanged from April.

The department also said personal incomes rose 0.3 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.68 trillion, a $13 billion increase over July. It was the smallest increase since a 0.2 percent gain in April.

But the department revised the spending increases upward from 0.5 percent to 0.6 percent in July and from 1.0 percent to 1.2 percent in July.

Consumer spending is considered a barometer of economic health because it accounts for about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity. Many analysts have expressed concern since it advanced just 0.2 percent at an annual rate in the second quarter, as measured by the gross national product.

Inflation, as measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, rose 0.8 percent in August.

The department said the savings rate last month was 4.3 percent, the lowest since a 4.0 percent rate in September 1989. The rate was 4.5 percent in July and 4.6 percent in June.

Americans' disposable income — income after taxes — increased 0.2 percent, down from a 0.5 percent gain in July. When adjusted for inflation, it fell 0.3 percent.

Big-ticket orders decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — non-defense capital goods orders, which often are a barometer of manufacturers' plans to expand and modernize, declined 1.2 percent in August, according to a government report Wednesday that analysts said indicated cutbacks in business investment plans because of Middle East uncertainties.

The Commerce Department reported that orders for "durable goods" — "big-ticket" items expected to last more than three years — totaled a seasonally adjusted $127 billion in July, up 2.7 percent from June.

Analysts pointed to a 11.2 percent drop, to $35.4 billion, in business plans to expand and modernize. Consumer spending represents about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity. The report also said personal incomes grew 0.3 percent in August.

Defense orders, which often are volatile, jumped 12.4 percent to $8.4 billion after a 5.6 percent decline in July.

Both electrical machinery and transportation categories posted gains while non-electrical machinery and primary metals orders fell.

Despite high oil prices, cruise prices down

If rising gasoline prices and increasing airline fares as well, for instance, reconsider your vacation plans, you may want to think about taking a cruise.

Although most people assume that because oil prices are going up, cruise prices must be, too, actually the opposite is true. Cruise prices are going down.

Sylvia Porter
Finances

The fall is off-season, and most cruise lines are offering incentives during what is traditionally the lowest time of the year. This translates into some incredible values for consumers," says Bob Dickinson, senior vice president of sales and marketing for Miami-based Carnival Cruise Lines.

For instance, Carnival is offering passengers asaving $600 per person on four-day Caribbean cruises and $300 for its three- and four-day cruises to the Bahamas for most cabin categories. When you consider that the savings are applied to lower off-season cruise fares, that brings the cost of a seven-day cruise to as low as $795 per person and a four-day cruise to $445. (Depending on accommodations, prices can be somewhat higher.) For Caribbean cruises, these prices include round-trip air fare to Florida or San Juan from most cities east of the Rockies.

Similar savings are available on other cruise lines as well. For instance, the Holland-America Line offers sailings ranging from seven and 10 days to the Caribbean to 10-day Panama Canal transits.

Many of Holland America's fall incentives come in the form of "value added bonuses," says Kirk Lanterman, president. At no extra charge, passengers can choose from a seven-night Florida Drive Yourself package (a $650 value), a Disney three-night add-on, a free round-trip flight to any of 160 destinations on USAir or a $200-per-couple on-board ship credit. Holland America's seven-day Caribbean cruises, including round-trip air, begin at $1,149 per person, while 10-day cruises begin at $1,619.

And just to put passengers' minds at ease, such lines as Carnival and Holland America have instituted price guarantees to protect fully deposited passengers from any possible fare increases caused by fuel or air fare hikes. But cruise experts are not anticipating the need for fare increases or fuel surcharges during the fall.

"The reality is that fuel is a relatively minor expense, representing approximately 15 percent of the cost of a cruise ticket. Nevertheless, most people do not realize that, so the guarantee provides peace of mind—and that's important," says Carnival's Dickinson.

If you're convinced that the pace is right, but you're not sure that a cruise is for you, you should consider a short cruise. Short cruises are the fastest growing segment of today's cruise market, according to Cruise Lines International Association (CLIA), the industry trade association.

CLIA reports that more than 82 percent of the 3.3 million Americans who took cruise vacations in 1989 sailed for seven days or less, with an increasing number on three- and four-day trips.

"The major reason for the growing popularity of short cruises is they're the best way for first-time cruisers to sample shipboard life," says James Gordon, president of CLIA.

Short cruises are especially popular during the fall when some three-day cruises are available for less than $400. They are offered on a wide variety of ships and on virtually all seven seas. There even are "cruises to nowhere" that offer a shipboard atmosphere of a gala party at sea.

Just who are the people taking shorter cruises? Contrary to common misconceptions, cruises cater to a diverse mix—not just wealthy older people. Today, the average first-time cruiser is near 40, but the fastest growing category of passengers is in the under-35 age group.

The shorter cruises actually stimulate return passengers looking for longer voyages. CLIA reports that approximately 90 percent of first-time cruisers sail again, many of them opting for cruises of longer duration second time around.

Although the cruises are short, passengers still experience the activities for which cruise ships are noted—dining and entertainment, parties, first-run movies, casinos, shopping, saunas, sports and just plain relaxation.

Whether you decide on a long or short cruise, check with your travel agent to determine which cruise line will best fit you, what services the fare covers, and what restrictions may apply.

Dream car designer races against long odds

By Nancy Rivera Brooks
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The Vector is Jerry Wiegert's dream car. It is his fighter plane without wings, his Rolex with wheels.

Fans of the Vector—the term is defined in promotional literature as "a quantity with form, velocity and direction in space"—see one of the fastest, safest street cars ever designed.

Skeptical look at the sleek, dark prototype for the $250,000 Vector and see a 12-year-old automobile that has logged more than 300,000 miles and three crashes. They see 14 years of hype and the specters of failed car makers John DeLorean, Malcolm Bricklin and Preston Tucker.

And yet the Vector W8 TwinTurbo, which has been a glint in Wiegert's eye since 1971, may be about to rev into reality.

A single production version of the wedge-shaped super car is ready for delivery to the first buyer, a Saudi Arabian prince who plans to pick up the car in Switzerland, soon. A second vehicle has been built and a third nears completion. Wiegert says that his Los Angeles company, Vector Automotive, has 17 firm orders in hand and several more pending.

Vector Automotive, which went public in late 1988, recently announced plans for another stock offering and a reverse stock split only one day after raising $3 million on the conversion of warrants to common stock.

"Great things are going on," Wiegert said. "We're a hot company in a hot market at the night time."

Could be. But the skeptical and the cynical abound where the Vector is concerned. Can Wiegert deliver the car he promises? Can he deliver enough cars to make a profit? And will investors ever see any kind of return on their money?

"This year is going to be the make-or-break-it year for him," said John Rettie, editor of the California Report, an automobile newsletter published by the J.D. Power & Associates consulting company in Los Angeles. "I honestly think he has a very good chance, but it's one of those things I wouldn't lay money on either way."

The Vector is low and wide and loaded with features—a pilot's seat, a dashboard more reminiscent of a cockpit than anything carbound.

The clutch-free car can have either an automatic or a manual transmission at the driver's constant whim with the push of a button. Video display gauges track all sorts of functions. Doors slice up like those on the Lamborghini Countach, with which the Vector is to compete. Options include a rear-mounted television camera and dash-mounted monitor to give a more complete view out back.

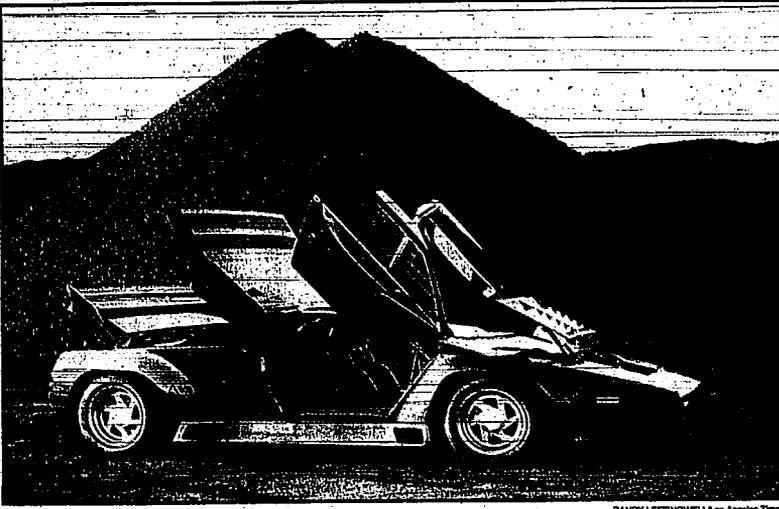

Wiegert says the car is built to be reliable, unlike most exotic cars, and that its aluminum V8 engine (600-plus horsepower) will be easy to repair.

Safety features include a steel roll-over air bags, braided steel fuel lines and high-impact fuel tank. The body is made of a high-tech composite material.

It's a combination of aerospace and Southern California hot-rod technology all rolled into one car," said John Dinkel, editor-in-chief of Road & Track magazine, who has followed the Vector saga for years.

Dinkel said he was extremely skeptical when he visited Vector Automotive earlier this year and test-drove the prototype. "But I was extremely impressed with the car," Dinkel said, and he gave the Vector a favorable review in the magazine's March issue.

In the rarefied world of exotic super cars—where the Ferrari Testarossa and F-40, the Lamborghini Countach and the Porsche 959 are household names—the $250,000 base price of the Vector is only mid-range. In this small market segment, most of the

After logging more than 300,000 miles, the 12-year-old Vector W8 TwinTurbo may be about to rev into reality. Randy Leffingwell/Los Angeles Times

These are people who buy houses in Beverly Hills for $5 million and in Santa Barbara for $4 million and who have private jets and a yacht in Monte Carlo harbor," Rettie said. "People pay money for a 'spot in line' to buy an exotic car from the likes of Ferrari or Porsche, he said, "and they make money by reselling their spot in line."

It has been a long road for Gerald A. Wiegert, a 43-year-old Detroit native whose taste in his youth was for go-cars and then muscle cars.

Wiegert, an alumnus of the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena, Calif., played with his concept of the perfect car for five years before he produced a mock-up in 1976 at a Los Angeles auto show. A drivable prototype was completed two years later.

Lots of oohing, aahing and favorable publicity followed. The first orders for what was called the Vector 'W2' were placed and deliveries were expected soon. The car that Wiegert claimed could do more than 200 miles an hour and could race from 0 to 60 in about four seconds. But that was nearly 10 years ago.

Wiegert said he found that raising money for a start-up company wasn't easy. Particularly if the company wasn't a technology venture. Especially when the spectacular flamboyant car makers Tucker (1948), Bristol (1932) and DeLorean (1982) were still smoking in investors' minds.

"Jerry elected to tough it out and he would sell consulting services or do whatever he had to do to move on to the next step," said Barry Rosenberg, a Los Angeles real estate consultant who has known Wiegert for 15 years and is Vector Automotive's only outside director.

Wiegert kept running out of money, and work would stall until new investors could be found. In early 1987, the venture's bank unexpectedly called $85,000 in loans and froze Wiegert's personal funds after a Wiegert contends—bank officials read an unfavorable article in AutoWeek magazine that noted, among other things, Wiegert has little more to show for his efforts than a building, some T-shirts and the prototype. (Wiegert lost a libel suit against AutoWeek and the article's author, and he is appealing last January's ruling.)

Jerry Wiegert has spent 14 years trying to bring the Vector to market. Randy Leffingwell/Los Angeles Times

Then Wiegert's check for an American Express payment bounced, his card privileges were suspended, a public stock offering was postponed and, finally, Vector Car, a limited partnership, went out of business. Vector Automotive was formed late in 1987 and bought the assets of Vector Car in a stock swap.

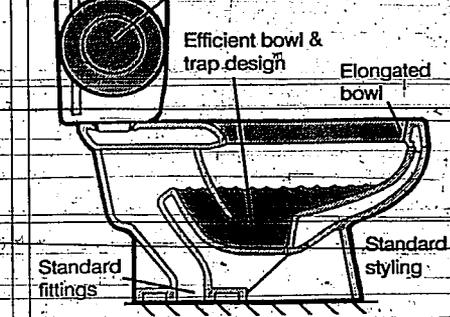

"Things geared up in late 1988 when Vector successfully completed its initial public offering, selling 60 million units of a stock and warrant combination at 10 cents each. Wiegert hopes to raise at least $10 million in his upcoming offering, which will be followed, if shareholders approve, by a reverse stock split in which every 100 shares will be exchanged for one new share in a plan to boost the price of Vector's over-the-counter stock. Wiegert is described by friends, employees and longtime Wiegert-watchers as a free spirit, tenacious, hard-headed, a tireless flag waver (a drawing of the U.S. flag spaces "with many Vector posters for space on Wiegert's office walls") and embittered by his years of entrepreneurial turmoil. The author of a recent, largely upbeat article in Automobile magazine even called him a "weirdo" in editorial comments at the front of the publication.

"I think, frankly, it is an inhuman price that he has paid," said Steven D. Lewer, a vice president in Shearson Lehman, Please see DUMLEY/E2

Ultra-low-flow toilet can pay back price over its life

Low-flow toilet is effective and cuts water bills.

Q. We still have the old original-toilet in our house. Should we expect to save much money on our water bills by installing a low ultra-low-flow toilet? What types are available and do they flush adequately? B.R.

A. A new ultra-low-flow toilet can pay back its entire price many times with lower water bills over its life. Using less water keeps future water rates lower because fewer new treatment plants are needed. Excessive water usage is one of the greatest threats to the environment. The most common ultra-low-flow toilets use about 1.5 gallons per flush (gpf). If your house was built before 1980, it probably has a 5.5-gpf toilet. In the early 1980s, 3.5 gpf became the standard. For a family of four, switching from a 5.5-gpf to a 1.5-gpf toilet saves about 24,000 gallons of water per year—a 70% savings.

Two common types of ultra-low-flow toilets are the gravity type and the flushometer tank type. The gravity type works like your standard toilet, but has a special bowl and trap design. This provides adequate flushing action with less water. Since it uses less water, it is quieter and takes only 45 seconds to refill. Both types look like standard toilets. Flushometer tanks use a special cylindrical chamber inside of the toilet tank. As the chamber fills with water after a flush, the water pressure compresses the air in it. When the toilet is flushed, this compressed air forces out the water under pressure to give a forceful positive flush. The bowl is cleared in only 10 seconds, but it takes about 60 to 90 seconds to refill the tank. Flushometer tank toilets work best if you have normal to high water pressure in your area. Check with a local plumber about your water pressure. There are also some super-low-flow toilets that use less than 0.5 gpf. One type uses an electric air compressor to assist in the flushing. This produces a very vigorous flush to clear the bowl with almost no water. Another toilet uses electric elements to incorporate the waste instead of water to flush it away. As the waste is vaporized and burned to a fine white powder, the vapors are vented outwards. Since it Please see DUMLEY/E2

James Dudley
Cut your utility bill

Sony expands line of digital audio recorders

By Jube Shiver Jr. Los Angeles Times

Under pressure to establish digital audio tape recorders in the U.S. market following a recent lawsuit challenging their importation, Sony Corp. Wednesday introduced portable and car-DAT machines to boost consumer interest in the costly and controversial products.

Introduction of Sony's $1,100 car-DAT player and the $850 Walkman portable-DAT recorder comes two months after the Los Angeles songwriter Sammy Cahn and four others filed a class-action lawsuit seeking to block U.S. sales of Sony's digital audio tape recorders.

The plaintiffs, who filed the lawsuit July 9 on behalf of 40,000 American songwriters and music publishers, accused Sony of infringing their music copyrights because DAT recorders are able to make near-perfect copies of recorded material.

DAT players, which achieve high-quality sound with digital technology similar to that of compact discs, have long been available for cars from companies such as Kenwood and Clarion. But so far only Sony has braved objections from composers and recorders.

Michael S. Oberman, lawyer for the songwriter plaintiffs, said Wednesday that the lawsuit was not ready for trial. But several experts said Wednesday that Sony's decision to quickly expand its lineup of digital audio tape machines was made to improve its chances of fighting the case.

"A judge is more likely to grant an injunction barring sales of DAT recorders before Sony has made a big investment in DAT," said Paul Gluckman, managing editor of Audiowest, an industry trade publication. "Plus, I think the company wants to get other suppliers off the fence regarding the introduction of DAT machines."

A knowledgeable Sony spokesman could not be reached for comment Wednesday. But in a prepared statement, the company said brisk sales of its two home-DAT recorders prompted it to accelerate its plans to market car and portable units in the United States.

Sony's move drew praise from competitor Technics, the Secaucus, N.J.-based consumer electronics arm of Japan's Matsushita Electric Co.

"I think it's good and healthy for the market; I wish we did it first," said Paul Foschino, assistant general manager of Technics, which plans to introduce a $900 home-DAT recorder later this month. "But regardless of who introduces them first, the idea of having more DAT players is increasing enthusiasm."

A model shows the new Sony palm-sized digital audio tape recorder-player that weighs less than 1.5 pounds.

Booming business, lawsuit greets dubut of DAT

By Stanley D. Miller The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Booming business and a lawsuit greeted the debut of Sony Corp.'s digital audio tape recorders Wednesday.

Within days, many stores were sold out of the biggest item to hit the recording industry since compact discs. At the same time, the National Music Publishers Association filed a class action lawsuit against Sony, charging the manufacturer's digital audio tape machines promote illegal home taping of music.

"I don't think people stormed the doors, but it was generally very successful," said Shari Haber, spokeswoman for the Copyright Clearance Center, N.J., of initial sales.

All-18 units stocked by the nine United Audio Centers stores in the Chicago area sold out the first day, said Bob Goldsmith, manager of one outlet.

Sony is the first company selling popular priced digital audio-tape or DAT, machines in the United States.

Digital audio tape offers the sound fidelity of compact discs. Its introduction to the U.S. market had been held up by opposition from record companies fearful that the tape's ability to make near-perfect recordings of compact discs would encourage pirating and cut into disc sales.

That issue was largely resolved last summer when hardware manufacturers and record companies agreed on new technology that would allow digital copies to be made from compact discs but would prevent further copies being made of the resulting tapes.

But the music publishers' lawsuit, filed in federal court in New York City, seeks to block the importation and sale of the Sony DAT equipment. "This equipment was fully designed and intended for the purpose of infringing copyright," said Marvin Frankel, an attorney representing an estimated 40,000 songwriters and 450,000 copyrights.

The suit cites a recent survey sponsored by a music industry trade organization showing that DAT owners intend to use the equipment to tape pre-recorded music.

White Sony is the first to market DAT, Matsushita Electric Industrial Co., the Japanese firm that produces the Panasonic, Technics and Quasar brands of DAT, has a competitively priced DAT recorder on the U.S. market this fall.

Sony's BTC-75ES lists for $950. Another, less sophisticated model selling for $900 will be more widely available, Ms. Haber said. For example, Sony has 120-minute blank digital audio tapes retail for $18. Ms. Haber said.

L.A. Nov. 17 and have since learned that honesty works wonders. By truthfully reporting my family's financial poverty, I received a full scholarship to one of the country's top 10 universities. I don't know how you do it, the greatest good, please tell your readers that the best ends are achieved, by honest means.

Dear Mr. Ross: I am not asking you or anyone else for my money, I am a widow on a fixed income. I am a widow on a fixed income.

Dear L.R.: You're not the only one who has "jazzed up their letter with dramatic" effects. However, you're one of the few who had taken the time to write back and admit it.

Dear Mr. Ross: I am not asking you or anyone else for my money, I am a widow on a fixed income. I am a widow on a fixed income.

Honesty really does pay, because I'm now sending you a modest check. I might suggest you turn it over to your parents, who could probably use it, if not to merit their wisest words, at least make ends meet this month.

Toothpaste manufacturers must now prove claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Makers of toothpastes and mouthwashes who want to claim their products prevent plaque and other dental conditions must show their ingredients are safe and effective, federal health officials said.

The Food and Drug Administration told these manufacturers to submit data supporting their claims within the next six months.

A number of toothpaste and mouthwash manufacturers are promoting their products' ability to reduce or prevent plaque, tartar and other deposits on teeth and guard against gum disease.

Under the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, manufacturers making these kinds of claims must show that the ingredients in their products are safe and effective, the agency said.

If the claims cannot be supported with scientific data, manufacturers would have to remove such claims from the labels of their products, the FDA said.

The FDA request for data was to be published in the Federal Register on Wednesday.

Hilton's Kansas City office who has placed an order for Vector No. 6, in midnight blue.

But can this stunner, intense free spirit with a mission pull it off? Skeptics point out that the Saudi prince, keeps promising to take delivery of his car but has yet to do so. (And say enthusiasts who are in the buy later models say they would gladly take Vector No. 1 off Wiegert's hands.) Vector's auditor Lavenbough & Horwath, qualifies the company's financial statements by saying that no adjustment has been made for possible production difficulties that might develop when the car is produced in commercial quantities.

Defining success for the Vector all depends on one perception: "Vector will receive their cars for the prices at which they originally contracted — well below $250,000. So Vector Aeromotive will take a loss on those autos.

None of this appears to have unduly shaken the investors or potential Vector owners interviewed. "When I went into it, I knew it was high risk," said Daniel Cordoba, Wiegert's dentist, who invested $5,000 in Vector Car, the partnership that folded. His stock was converted into Vector Aeromotive stock.

Wiegert "is very charismatic" and the car "performs," Cordoba said. "I've only ridden in it twice, but both times it was the highlight of my life." It probably got my original interest back, but I'm not sure about a profit.

"It's a wonderful car. It's a well-engineered piece of machinery. I want the car very badly," said Los Angeles lawyer Frank Alcantara, who put a $100,000 down payment on Vector No. 11 and owns $40,000 in Vector stock.

But there's a little risk here," said Alcantara, who owns a Ferrari Testarossa worth about $200,000 that has doubled in value since he bought it a few years ago. "The question is, is Jerry going to get to No. 117? I'm not kidding you, that's a big question."

"I don't intend to be another chapter in the automotive history books," Wiegert said. "My objective is to see this company profitable and to share the success of my company with shareholders."

balloon-framing and platform-framing construction. Which type is most energy efficient? O.H.

A. In balloon-framing the wall studs run from the foundation all the way up to the roof. This is often used in two-story construction or in rooms with high ceilings. Platform-framing builds the second floor walls separately on top of the first floor.

With proper construction, there isn't a significant energy efficiency difference. Since balloon-framing is generally stronger, more wind may result in fewer air leaks over time.

Facelifts leave up to 40% dissatisfied

Q: Is getting a facelift dangerous? A: Not in the majority of cases. What's more, 60 to 70 percent of Americans who have a routine facelift (tightening of the jaw and chin areas and skin manipulation to lessen facial sagging) are satisfied. Who's not happy? Patients who were either ill informed about the procedure and its probable results (a facelift will not alter, for instance, the deepening-with-age line that runs from beneath the nose to the mouth), and candidates who expect surgery to significantly change their life. By the way, I'd hate to be in that 30 to 40 percent of unsatisfied patients. Those are big numbers.

LOCATION — FROM BUYER'S VIEW

QUESTION: How important is it to a buyer when considering a home purchase to know the neighborhood's crime rate or whether others in the same location?

ANSWER: The classic advice is to buy a modest house in a more expensive area. Such a house is easy to resell, and its value will hold up well. Remodeling or adding to it is possible because alterations won't push it out of the price range.

On the other hand, the most luxurious home in a rundown area probably won't ever rebound the owner for the money invested. No matter how elegant it may be, it will be hard to sell. Buy with location in mind. Eventually, you'll be a seller.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Life is made up of constant calls to action, and we seldom have time for more than hastily contrived answers.

— Learned Hand.

Today's West failed to answer the bell when it came time for effective action. Instead he dug up a wooden defense, and South had no trouble in winning nine tricks.

West led fourth best, and East's heart queen was allowed to win. South-also ducked-the heart-nine, and West won his jack. West now made a silly play. He led a third heart to clear the equally-acting 7.

West was asleep when he led a third heart. With no hope of cashing his hearts, he should have switched to spades after winning the second heart trick. And what about South?

He wasn't wild enough to lead hearts. If hearts are 5-2, he cannot succeed when West has the club ace. And if they are 4-3, the game is always safe. Therefore, he must win the second heart and start the clubs.

East wins and shifts to spades, but South has his own tricks. If one decides to snooze while playing the dummy, the best time to do it is against a sleepy West.
