U.S., Soviets agree on arms limits

The Associated Press
NEW YORK—The United States and the Soviet Union announced an agreement in principle Wednesday on a comprehensive treaty to limit non-nuclear weapons in Europe since the end of World War II.

The two sides also said they had made substantial progress on a separate agreement to limit long-range nuclear weapons. The agreement came at the end of more than five hours of talks between Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

It sets ceilings on weapons that may be deployed in Europe, but does not cover the number of soldiers that may be put in the field, a topic the negotiators agreed to skip.

Both ministers cautioned that final approval must await consultation with their allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact.

Shevardnadze said one sticking point remained concerning limits on helicopters, but that he was very confident an accord would be resolved by NATO and Warsaw Pact negotiators in Vienna, site of talks on the treaty for 10 months.

The last remaining roadblocks between the two superpowers were the number of Soviet heavy tanks in Europe and the number of Soviet intermediate-range nuclear warheads in Europe.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzgibbon detected the agreement with one word: "Great."

He said there would be no further comment Wednesday.

The accord is the projected centerpiece for a 34-nation summit meeting to be held in Paris Nov. 19-21. Until the two superpowers hear from their allies, no agreed judgment on whether that deadline would be met.

The two superpowers agreed in 1989 to limits on their intermediate-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

In 15 years of desultory talks before that on "Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions," they made no progress on conventional force reductions. The February 1989 nuclear agreement and the unilateral moves by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to end the cold war revived the conventional force negotiations under the rubric "Confidence Building Measures."

Magic Valley braces for pocketbook impact of budget compromise

The Times-News
FINANCIALS—When details of the federal budget compromise reached Idaho this week, they took a collective look at their pocket and wondered how much money would be left.

The answer is clear to most. What isn't clear is how the state's growing economy will be affected.

Increased gasoline taxes by 12 cents per gallon, a tax on all petroleum products except for home heating oil, increased cigarette taxes by 4 cents on Jan. 1, and another 4 cents in 1993.

Increased Medicare taxes and fees, and lower benefits.

Charge a 10 percent sales tax on purchases of new cars worth more than $30,000, jewelry and furs costing more than $5,000.

Increase income taxes on most individuals of families with incomes of more than $40,000.

Increase alcohol taxes.

Decrease farm support programs by $13 billion over five years.

Core Medicare providers to absorb portions of rising costs equivalent to roughly $32 billion over next five years.

Economists aren't certain how the budget compromise will affect the state's economy.

Bush puts popularity on line over budget

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press
WASHINGTON—"Blame me," President Bush invites nervous Republicans as he searches for votes to pass an unpopular package of tax increases and spending cuts.

The budget deal may be painful now, but the alternative probably is a deep recession that could doom Bush's re-election hopes in 1992.

Analysis
 Bush has put his popularity squarely on the line for an agreement that has sent election-minded congressmen diving into foxholes. The deal will hurt everyone, with higher taxes on gasoline, cigarettes, liquor and wine, increased health care costs for the elderly in Medicare.

It's like drinking a gallon of castor oil, said Sen. John Warner, R-Va., "but we're going to do it."

Meanwhile, but Republican lawmakers led by House Whip Newt Gingrich and other members of the GOP leadership have deserted their president in droves. They are particularly angry over Bush's "reversal" of his conservative policies, and the results support the idea that voters rather than Congress are determining handi-caps.

But in an interview, another handi-capped researcher said the study does not argue against a role for such stress in producing southernness.

The stress theory assumes that people are normally genetically biased to be right-handed.

Southpaws minority, even before birth, study shows

The Associated Press
NEW YORK—Lethal as they are, a study of thumb-sucking by fetuses suggests researchers using ultrasound examinations found that only 12 of 224 fetuses preferred to suck their right thumb, the 212 others favored their left thumb.

The study found that the position of the fetus did not affect thumb preference. Repeated observations of 17 fetuses, found that preference for a particular thumb continued through pregnancy, the researchers found.

The scientists from Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario, reported their findings in a letter to the editor in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature.

One could speculate that although the initial bias is a result of advanced right-sided neuromuscular development, its persistence results from reinforcing aspects of the left-sucking," wrote Peter Hepper, Sara Shahidullah and Raymond White of the University's Section of Psychology.

Beyond the results support the idea that genes, rather than stress during pregnancy, determine handedness.

But in an interview, another handi-capped researcher said the study does not argue against a role for such stress in producing southernness.

The stress theory assumes that people are normally genetically biased to be right-handed.

ed, but that most babies suck on a prolonged labor, under conditions that are few or cause higher activity, and affect the nervous system, and produce a left-handed infant, said psychologist and professor Stanley Corcos.

Studies show the likelihood of being left-handed doubles if one emerged from such a stressed birth or a difficult pregnancy, said Corcos, of the University of British Columbia, Vancouver.

In addition, some left-handedness is thought to be genetic, he said.

Arms

"The steady withdrawal of Soviet troops and tanks and U.S. outposts already are doing what the treaty seeks to accomplish. But a treaty represents a formal commitment by both sides to the withdrawal of their troops."
The Versailles Treaty that ended World War I imposed arms limits on Germany, the victorious powers, through sharply cutting their force. Versailles never agreed on similar limits for themselves and the German dictator Adolf Hitler started breaking the Versailles arms limits in 1935.
The new treaty on conventional arms would require the Warsaw Pact to withdraw 40,000 tanks, more than 51,000 artillery pieces and more than 41,000 armored personnel carriers from eastern and central Europe - four-sevenths to two-thirds of estimated current deployments.

The arms would have to be moved west of the Ural Mountains in the Soviet Union, about 2,400 miles east of Soviet borders with Poland.
The restrictions on the smaller NATO forces would be minimal, requiring only the removal of 2,000 tanks.
"Artillery strength in the built-up area is being capped at 20,000 for each alliance. The ceiling for tanks would be 20,000 as well and 30,000 for armored personnel carriers.
A ceiling also was set for aircraft, but Baker and Shevardnadze declined to say what level they de-agreed upon.

The Soviets agreed to hunt naval-based aircraft with statements outside the treaty.
"We've been working very intensively and productively," Shevardnadze told reporters. "I am very pleased with the results of our work."
Baker, agreeing, called the agreement "very productive and advanced."
"We are pleased with the agreement in principle on all of the remaining major issues."
Turning to another unfinished arm accord, one between the United States and the Soviet Union on long-range nuclear weapons, Baker reported that he had been able to make substantial progress.

Budget

get compromise would affect Idaho's economy, which is in its third year of expansion and should be strong compared with other states.
"There are some good and bad effects of this tax increase," West One Bank Economist Gene Schultz said. "Conventional economic wisdom is that interest rates will come down if money is loose, and businesses will have to pay more in taxes and therefore have less to spend or invest under the compromise," Schultz said, but companies should benefit from lower interest rates.
Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan introduced Wednesday that the budget compromise would exert downward pressure on interest rates.
"If we can convince ourselves that this move will have a net positive impact and reduce interest rates, I think that would assist in the first security bank economist Kelly Matthews said.
But Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said the compromise could lead Idaho into a recession.
"I think it's a really bad thing," said Antone, who is chairman of the state House revenue and taxation committee.

Antone is also worried that increased federal taxes on gasoline would eliminate the possibility of a higher state fuel tax to pay for $7 billion in needed Idaho road and bridge improvements.
A key question for Idaho's economy is how farm price support cuts will affect the state's economy. Farmers will drop out ahead of increased rates, crop drought to offset higher fuel costs and lower subsidy payments.
"The tax is adding on a three-percent good farm income," Schultz said. "We'd like to see that topped."
How much will the planned $13 billion in agricultural tax take out of Magic Valley agricultural economy? $19 million to $20 million, said the largest estimate was given by Phil Jones, executive vice president of Kanger Inc. at the Twin Falls Rotary Club Wednesday. He said that based on Idaho's percentage of national crop production, the Magic Valley could lose $1 million in tax payments over five years.
And because those dollars would change hands up to four times after they came to the valley, the total would be an $800 million loss, he said. Antone, who is chairman of the state House revenue and taxation committee.

Outcome seen as far-reaching in court's punitive damages case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court in a case that could reshape how the American legal system remedies wrongdoers in lawsuits, voted Wednesday to reinforce punitive damages awards.

The case, Punitive Damages, involves an insurance company that was ordered to pay $1 million for a car accident that caused no more than $100,000 in damages.

Justice William Brennan, writing for the majority, said the award was "excessive and arbitrary."

The system means wealthy companies are not held to the same standard as small businesses, he said.

Fed chairman throws support to budget plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan threw his endorsement on the $300-billion deficit-reduction package Wednesday, telling the House that he was not a "grave mistake" with serious consequences for an already weakened U.S. economy.

Greenspan's views were considered crucial to chances for success by a Bush administration that is hoping to get the budget plan passed before the end of the year.

Greenspan did not specifically promise to lower interest rates but he replied with an emphatic "most certainly" when asked whether he believed a budget agreement would ease downward pressure on rates.

The budget summit was expected to be a credible, enforceable reduction in the budget deficit stretching over a number of years.

Greenspan said in a reading of a statement at a congressional hearing.

He favored the budget package, should reduce the strain of the federal deficit on our national savings, lessen pressures in credit markets and encourage investment and the long-run growth potential of the United States," he said.

Congressional and administration officials said they had reached an agreement over the weekend on a package of spending cuts and tax increases and spending cuts.

White House officials have expressed unhappiness over various components, Greenspan said he believed negotiators had "unearthed the maximum cut in the deficit possible at this time, within the political context."

He said that rejection of the package would significantly dim prospects for coming to grips with the "converse effects of budget deficits."

Gainesville slayings case slows — GAINESVILLE, Fla. — The case of five slain college students remains a massive "who-dunnit" that may not be solved any time soon, the area's chief state prosecutor says.

About 40 members of a joint task force are still at work, trying to learn who was responsible for the late August killings, in which one victim was decapitated. State Attorney Len Register told The Gainesville Sun for an article published Wednesday, "It might take a lot longer than we hoped," Register said.

Man who sold 2 Live Crew albums guilty

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — An off-white jury Wednesday convicted a record store owner of obscenity for selling an sexually explicit album by the black rap group 2 Live Crew that had been banned by a federal judge.

The panel took only 24 hours to return the verdict against Charles Freeman, 31. The misdemeanor conviction carries a possible one-year jail sentence and $1,000 fine. Broward County Judge Paul Buckman set sentencing for Nov. 2.

Freeman, who is black, was arrested two days after the ruling when he sold the album to undercover police officers at his E-C record store in Fort Lauderdale.

The Miami-based rap group and its album "As Nasty as They Wanna Be" have been at the center of a federal obscenity dispute since June 15 when a Fort Lauderdale federal judge ruled their lyrics obscene. That ruling banned the sale of the album in three south Florida counties. Shortly after the decision sales of the 2-year-old album nationwide approached 2 million.

Freeman, who is black, was arrested two days after the ruling when he sold the album to undercover police officers at his E-C record store in Fort Lauderdale.

Despite some good news, industry weak

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rising oil prices and the domestic glut of goods helped push up the value of orders to factories for manufactured goods 1.8 percent in August, the government reported Wednesday.

Analysts said the oil-inflated boost disguised the weakness in the industrial sector.

The Commerce Department said orders for both durable and non-durable goods totaled a seasonally adjusted $244.6 billion, but added that "most of the increase is attributed to the petroleum-refining industry, which had substantial price increases during the month."

Princess Caroline's husband dies as speedboat crashes into wave

Stefano Casiraghi and Princess Caroline in Monaco in 1983.

Italian financier Casiraghi, here piloting the Pinot di Pinot in March 1990, was a world champion speedboat racer.

MONTÉ CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Tragedy revisited Monaco's royal family Wednesday as Stefano Casiraghi, husband of Princess Caroline, died in a crash landing Sunday while defending the world title. Caroline, a widow at 33, donned black mourning clothes and rushed home from Paris, where she was visiting. Eight years and three weeks earlier, her mother, Princess Grace, died after a car crash. Witnesses said Casiraghi, 40, and co-pilot Patrice Innocent drove their catamaran, the "Pinot di Pinot," straight into a wave at about 93 mph during a morning heat of the World Offshore Championships being held near Monaco. The 42-foot boat flipped over, ejecting Innocent. Witnesses said Casiraghi remained strapped to his seat and bore the full impact of the vessel slamming into the water. The two-engine, five-ton boat then sank, witnesses said. Giulio Rassi, head of the race organization committee, told a news conference Casiraghi was killed instantly. He said other competitors, as well as divers and a doctor, pushed to the stricken boat and found Casiraghi trapped in the cockpit, already dead. Casiraghi was a sophisticated international financier who in 23 years married Caroline on Dec. 29, 1983. At his death, he was chairman of Cogefar, France, the French subsidiary of an Italian construction company owned by Fiat. He also held a 52 percent interest in Enasco, which owned about 3,000 apartments in Monaco and is building a 140-room hotel apartment complex. And he was the father of three children — two sons and a daughter. Casiraghi and Innocent had been favored to win the three-day race featuring sleek boats capable of speeds up to 123 mph. The accident came 10 minutes after the second stage opened Wednesday. Organizers canceled the day's events but said they would resume Thursday or Friday. Casiraghi had a passion for offshore racing. A competitor since 1984, he had won 12 of 80 races, including last year's world championship held off Atlantic City, N.J. Michael Ferruti, Jean-Claude Perrot and Nica were described as normal. They rarely did it, but they look out and at that speed, 'snuck under the boat, must have been killed by the blow,' said another racer. Emergency crews quickly pulled both men out of the water. Innocent was rushed to Princess Grace Hospital and Casiraghi reportedly was taken to the adjoining morgue. The prince issued a two-sentence communique confirming the death about four hours after the accident. 'The hospital said Innocent, the boat's driver, was being treated for his injuries. It did not elaborate. Caroline, the prince's child-

Princess Rainier III and the former Hollywood star Grace Kelly, divorced French playboy Philippe Junior in 1970. She married Casiraghi on Dec. 29, 1983 in a civil ceremony under a portrait of the late monarch. They had three children — Anne, 10, Charlotte, 4, and Pierre, 3. Their marriage brought some joy back to a family that was devastated by the death of Princess Grace in September 1982. The automobile accident injured Caroline's younger sister, Princess Stephanie, and left Prince Rainier emotionally unshaken. The relatively low-profile lifestyle Caroline had enjoyed since marrying Casiraghi contrasted vividly with the weekly splendor she witnessed in Monaco during the 1970s.

Iranian lawmakers throw punches

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's Parliament erupted in fistfights Wednesday when radicals accused spiritual leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei of bringing a forthcoming election for a key government body, sources said. The outcome of the election next week could determine whether the government body would be Khamenei or Iran's top spiritual leader, or replaces him with a council of radicals who oppose his recent overtures to the West. Tehran, M.D., which was broadcasting the heated parliamentary debate live, abruptly went off the air as arguments turned into a scuffle, the sources in Tehran told The Associated Press in telephone interviews.

Indian official says keep job quotas

NEW DELHI, India — While drawing a job quota plan aimed at helping lower-caste Hindus could only lead to further violence, Prime Minister V.P. Singh said in an interview Wednesday. Seventy-five people have died in riots or committed suicide in protest since the government announced Aug. 7 that it was reserving almost half of all federal jobs for lower-caste Hindus. There are now some 12 million unemployed educated youths in India, many of them from the upper castes.

Soviets say warheads redeployed

MOSCOW — The Defense Ministry on Wednesday denied a report broadcast on state-run television that nuclear warheads had been removed from areas where there was a risk of ethnic unrest. The report aired Monday night on the TV news show Vremya, quoted foreign news organizations as saying that the Defense Ministry was removing nuclear weapons from regions hit by ethnic conflicts. Vremya said the ministry was redeploying them in the Russian republic. The ministry's denial was pub-

Tamil rebels kill 5 in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Separate attacks by Tamil rebels left five Sinhalese villagers and two police officers dead, military officials said Wednesday. The villagers were killed to death Tuesday by a squad of rebels at Wakkala Village in the northern Anuradhapura district, officials said. During the killings, other rebels besieged the police station, preventing aid from reaching the village.

Former E. German spy chief arrested

KARLSRUHE, Germany — Authorities arrested the last chief of East Germany's spy network on espionage charges Wednesday in Berlin. East German prosecutor's spokesman said. The arrest of Walter Gissmann, coming hours after the two Germanys united, backs up promises by prosecutors that they intend to track down agents of East Germany's former Communist government and pursue espionage cases. Earlier, the Hamburg-based newspaper Bild reported longtime spy chief Markus Wolf had probably fled to the Soviet Union.

France limits visas to Lebanon

ANTHELIAS, Lebanon — France stopped issuing visas to Lebanon on Wednesday, apparently because of President Elias Hrawi's refusal to lift a blockade intended to end the rebellion by Gen. Michel Aoun. Also Wednesday, funeral services were held in this coastal town and other villages for 30 people shot to death Monday during Hrawi's 1-year night vigil in support of Aoun. Women buried themselves under the coffins of husbands and sons while mourners boomed because the papal nuncio failed to attend the services, Church bells tolled. Compiled from wire service reports

For Germans, Gorbachev is credited with unification

BERLIN (AP) — Germans in "hush" Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Wednesday that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is the man of the hour for clearing the way for unification of the two countries. "Since last year, talks with our East and West have made it clear that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is the man of the hour for clearing the way for unification of the two countries," Kohl said. "Without this decision, we would have not experienced the 372 billion toward the cost of reuniting the two Germanys," Kohl added. "In fact, a heavy outpouring of deutsche marks helped Gorbachev clear the way for unification."

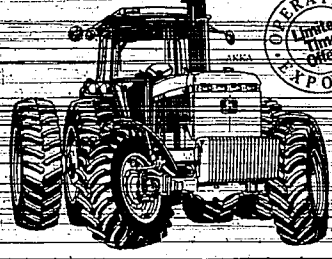

Group not allowed in Soviet republic

MOSCOW (AP) — A European parliament delegation was denied entry Wednesday, one day after riots erupted over an explosion that killed an Azerbaijani boy, news reports said. The independent Interfax news agency said an "unidentified explosion" exploded Tuesday in a village in the shadow of Nagorno-Karabakh. Although the explosion is mostly Armenian, the explosion occurred in a predominantly Azerbaijani area of the village, killing the 9-year-old boy and wounding his 11-year-old brother, Interfax said. About 400 Azerbaijani troops stormed into an Armenian section of the village, attacking its residents and accusing them of planting the device. Two Armenians were injured, Interfax said, without giving further details.

Greece orders 5-hour ban on private cars

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The government banned private automobiles from downtown Athens for five hours Wednesday and advised the sick and elderly to stay home as smog enshrouded the city. Buses, taxis and delivery vehicles were exempt from the ban aimed at containing record air pollution levels over the past two days. Premier Constantine Mitsotakis, who called for emergency measures to improve environmental policy, officials are expected to announce new measures to meet the crisis. High temperatures and lack of wind have exacerbated existing smog conditions, driving hundreds to hospitals with heart and breathing complaints. About 50 percent of the private vehicles are allowed to circulate in downtown Athens each weekday under permanent measures designed to contain the city's chronic pollution. The system allows cars with registration plates ending in odd or even numbers to circulate on alternate days. Offenders are fined. About 1.7 million cars are registered in the Athens basin.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq is Bush's plan to sell $2.3 billion in new weapons, including tanks, in the Middle East and sales of billions of dollars in U.S. weaponry to Saudi Arabia are crucial to a new regional coalition to balance that menace, Bush administration officials told Congress Wednesday. The United States hopes to build a "strategic defense" capability that will in effect drive up significantly the costs to anybody looking to take a wack at them," said Reginald Bartholomew, under secretary of state for international security affairs. "We do not want to leave the road to Bahrain open, as it was on the second of August," Bartholomew told members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, referring to the date on which Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait. Bartholomew and Paul Wolfowitz, under secretary of defense for policy, were testifying in favor of President

Sweets sent to servicemen

SANDPOINT (AP) — What started out as a day of sharing between young students and servicemen in Sandpoint has turned into an array of cookies for American sources in the Persian Gulf. Fifth- and sixth-graders from the Sandpoint Junior Academy and residents of the Alpine View Apartments had planned a day to bake cookies together at the senior citizens center. At the suggestion of resident Kathleen Bradley and through the efforts of Sgt. Charles Maple of the Washington Air National Guard, arrangements have been made to fly the cookies along with letters to families in the Persian Gulf. Maple, a Sandpoint engineer, said his job is to relate people and equipment in and out of Saudi Arabia periodically.

Deficit reduction agreement essential to America's future

—It's put-up-or-shut-up time for Congress. Amid much whining and handwringing, the House and Senate will vote this week on whether to approve the $500-billion deficit reduction package hammered out in the four days since the package was announced. Every special interest in America and every congressman are huddled to it has howled long and loud about the impact.

Larry Craig is typical. The Idaho Republican is the most eloquent and forceful of the anti-deficit crowd, and he writes: "It's painful, it's publicly unpopular and it takes taxes in an election year."

But we think the deal is also the last, not the first, problem that will dwarf the congressman's parolous concerns.

The budget compromise marks the first time in a decade that the presidential and congressional negotiators have agreed on a deficit reduction plan. It comes with the court's nose on the brink of recession. In the budget deal is the first real evidence Congress has produced since the beginning of the Reagan administration that it is willing to face painful realities. Those realities are that no longer is there without a budget-reduction agreement, the federal deficit will top $550 billion this year — more if war breaks out.

The stock market, which has long been waiting for some sign of fiscal discipline from the federal government, will draw the appropriate conclusions from either the budget deal or the brink of recession. In the absence of a budget law, oil prices — which for the last two months have been an irritant to the economy — will become an anathema, tilting the economic contraction that is certain to follow. Overseas investors, who have been flocking out of the U.S. in search of higher returns, will lose patience and

Speak out against threats, overgrazing

You don't have to go to Kuwait to have your salaries threatened by militant politicians and you don't have to go to New York City or Los Angeles to be the victim of a terrorist act of violence. These things can happen to you right here in southern Idaho, especially if you are a National Park Service ranger. This is in your job and in the American wilderness: the Idaho Cattle Association or Winslow Whitley (who runs one of the largest herds in the Chalk Creek District of the Sawtooth National Forest).

Ranger Donald Oman, a 26-year Forest Service veteran has a difficult job. The General Accounting Office reported in 1988 that 37 percent of the grazing lands in the Sawtooth National Forest are in poor condition. Poor range conditions result from one thing only: Overgrazing. Because Ranger Oman is charged with the protection of public lands, these lands are abused by all American citizens who wish to curb those excesses. It is not an individual; it is not a vendetta or a power play; it is simply his job.

This is where the cowboy ethic enters the scene. Ranger Oman's life has been threatened in recent N.Y. Times articles by Winslow Whitley and others. Why would a grazing permit holder be such a threat to a public servant?

Wayne R. Owen

Perhaps Mr. Whitley feels the threat of what he gets to face for nearly 30 years on public lands. If you want state support and attention for yourself and to bull with the rights of his and my children or their children). Perhaps an uneconomical business structure would go under if herd sizes were brought down to the carrying capacity of the land. That, my friends, is market competition. If you want state support and attention, go to Columbia, even the Soviet Union has abandoned that practice.

Perhaps Mr. Whitley pines for the mythical romanticism of the Old West, where real things were done by real men. I wish the men wrestled a living out of the wilderness.

And take someone over the best in the field of many Old West comic books as a toy. The true history of the West is not one of romanticism, it is one of dirt, greed, persecution, abuses and excess.

The cattle industry in the Western United States has been a political force for decades. If you have aggressively sought farm subsidies, and gotten them. They have lobbied hard for pet projects and have used dirt cheap prices

(about a third of the cost of simply administering the program) and gotten them. They have lobbied for the control of the Bureau of Land Management, and they run it. I don't know how a few seats in the U.S. Congress — Steve Symms' office intervened in Forest Service affairs at the request of the Idaho Cattle Association to manage the transfer of Ranger Oman to someplace where he wouldn't make so much noise. And now they are (once again) fussing to get Winslow Whitley out of the job. I don't know if our United States government is celebrating all of the readers of The Times-News to write letters of support to Ranger Oman at the Sawtooth National Forest headquarters in Twin Falls. You should also make your voice and let your anger be felt by writing the U.S. Forest Service, the Department of Agriculture, the Idaho Cattle Association, Steve Symms and your state legislators.

Do not support welfare ranching or allow Mr. Whitley or the Idaho Cattle Association to rule federal policy on land use management.

Wayne R. Owen, a Oregon City, formerly a graduate of Boise State University who teaches plant ecology at the University of California, Davis.

put their money elsewhere. In short, business as usual in Congress. Yes, this is a truly painful deficit reduction plan. No one relishes paying 12 cents more in gasoline prices. Higher medical premiums. But that's just the point. In order to solve our considerable economic problems, every American is going to have to share the pain.

But told Congress to blame him. That's a courageous position one month before a national election. How showing leadership on the federal budget crisis, the first president in a long time to do so.

By the way, what Bush and the congressional leadership are proposing is only the first painful step. Even if Congress accepts it, we'll be running a $293 billion deficit next year. But it is essential that we have a deficit-reduction plan that will show the world about America's willingness to do what is necessary to put its economic house in order.

It's a question of will, and a lot is riding on the answer.

Special-interest groups of all kinds are calling in their chieftains from all that PAC and lobbying money they have spent. They are lobbying their respective members of Congress to kill the deficit-reduction plan and protect their place at the trough.

President Bush has called on the American people to pressure their representatives to pass it. We think he's right. Right are the numbers to call and how is the time to make your voice heard.

Right changes in Medicare

All senior citizens have a voice in their congressmen or representatives in Washington, D.C. Today, I made calls to my Idaho-elected officials, McClure, Symms and Stallings. I told both Mr. Symms and Mr. Stallings that if they voted for the present budget with its devastating cuts to Medicare, I would do my best to see that they would not be re-elected when their terms were over.

Medicare is vital to me as I have employed as a health care technician 24 hours a day. I need hospitalization and other services that Medicare helps pay. Every month, I pay a premium back into the Medicare account out of my Social Security. I do not want Medicare to be cut or reduced. Security of Medicare is so important to me that I don't work under Medicare, I don't have any other "pay-as-you-go" program.

Do you know that the deductible amount of services I pay for myself prior to Medicare is presently $75 and will rise to 100 percent to $150 with this budget reform? We are all over 65 years old. Medicare is what we rely on for the next five years.

We can all sit back and complain. We all suffer from lethargy. I urge all of you please make that telephone call today. Congress is coming to town. They are here and will be here in person. Support us. This is the language they understand. We have tremendous power and a formidable voice if we use it. Call (202) 224-3112 before 8 a.m. for night rate. One call puts you in touch with all three of them.

Vote for change
Have some unanswered questions. Maybe other voters do too. I would like the incumbents from Idaho Legislature to tell why they deserve a 95 percent raise, when average weekly wages in this country have dropped 9 percent in the last 10 years?

—Why should Idaho, who had very few savings and loan problems, send money to less-fortunate states like Texas, Florida and Louisiana, who did? This will be an enormous economic drain on the whole Northwest.

In my country, who do 40,000 children die of preventable diseases? D.D.D. Do not elect officials who know that George Bush, as vice president, was head of the force that provoked the S&L's devaluation? Do you know that 25 of the failed S&L's, where money was tracked, had no auditable loan records?

Do my elections really expect us to pay hard-earned money to S&L's which were wet up by criminals to be looted by those same criminals? Put all the perpetrators behind bars, then I'll think about coughing up my $5,000 bail out share!

If I vote for you, would you please work against the rise in taxes. Nationally, since 1980, corporate profits are up 70 percent, chief executives earn up to 500 percent more than their workers and 10 million employees are laid off?

Do you know, if I have questions, how I can contact you? I was informed. He was never available in the office when I called for an appointment.

Later, I was informed with a letter that the company was in the final stages of liquidating all remaining liabilities and would be "no asset, no liability" going to shell. If this is the case, the company will have significant potential to shelter future income due to their net operating "losses."

I agree with Francis Smith of Mackay, who was a victim of our July 27, 1990, article in The Times-News on company management for Idaho and its people.

Don't elect illegal

I am disappointed in the lack of leadership of our Idaho state government and the lack of leadership of our federal government. I don't need money from the federal government and the state government. I need to be able to hold down cost and provide access to quality health care for all.

Let me be the first to congratulate you on your excellent editorial regarding the election of a president. I did with no photo copies and that was the last I saw of the certificates — I do have certificates numbers.

President-elect, I was informed. He was never available in the office when I called for an appointment.

Later, I was informed with a letter that the company was in the final stages of liquidating all remaining liabilities and would be "no asset, no liability" going to shell. If this is the case, the company will have significant potential to shelter future income due to their net operating "losses."

I agree with Francis Smith of Mackay, who was a victim of our July 27, 1990, article in The Times-News on company management for Idaho and its people.

Country needs health care plan

By Steve James A-1 and Steven D. Symms and Rep. Richard H. Stallings.

It is time for the United States to adopt a national health care plan similar to plans that have worked well for years in Canada, Europe and throughout the world.

The United States and South Africa are the only two industrial nations on earth that fail to provide health care coverage for all their citizens as a matter of right.

Today, 37 million U.S. citizens have no health insurance coverage whatsoever. A further 50 million U.S. men, women and children are so under-insured that a serious illness or need would bankrupt them.

With costs doubling every six years, the U.S. health care system is totally out of control for workers and employees alike. We need national health care to hold down cost and provide access to quality health care for all.

Support Kimberly schools

In July of this year, I retired after serving six years on the Kimberly School Board. During that time, I learned what is required to make the Kimberly School System "one of Idaho's finest." A dedicated and knowledgeable team of board members, administrators and teachers, as well as small class size, are necessary for a school system to be one of the best. Kimberly has a strong team, which is why the school system has thrived. Kimberly is a growing progressive community. Some of the school's classrooms are overcrowded now, more will be in the future. Eighty students are housed in portable units. These units are very expensive to heat and maintain each year, as well as to run. They are poorly insulated and noise is a problem.

A number of Kimberly students attend school in other districts. Some out-district students attend school in Kimberly. Records kept from students who want to get away from the school, as well as those who want to leave a very small school that cannot provide the variety of classes and special equipment that Kimberly offers. Many requests for admission are turned down every year. School administrators will not accept any out-of-district students who are at a grade level where overcrowding is at that level. Please remember that the state provides the funding for all students and the school which they attend receives that funding.

My children are grown, so let us all participate in our district's efforts to support our schools as our parents and grandparents have done in the past. I urge all Kimberly parents to approve the school bond issue on Oct. 9.

New blood needed in Congress

Ladies and gentlemen, do you remember when our country was doing well? Ladies voted themselves a hell of a raise? Do you remember how they acted amongst themselves, that they wouldn't bring their pay increases up as a campaign issue? Well, folks, the American voters don't make such a promise. I think our representatives in Congress have the nerve to bring pay raises up, they think we have short memories.

President Bush just recently accused the Democrats in Congress of being responsible for the huge federal deficit. But the president is the one who advocated for the 50 percent pay increases and later signed the bill. And we the voters are sending messages to voters of this country. He thought we had enough money to spend thousands and thousands of dollars in pay increases. Now he is whining about the huge federal deficit.

We have an election coming up and this year you go to the doctor and have to pay more out-of-pocket expenses, remember the pay increases. Providers of Medicare services also have a reason to remember the pay increases. I think just about everyone in America has a reason to remember the pay increases.

Congressman Larry Craig says in his TV ads that the voters should vote for him because he has 10 years experience. He says it is not time for "on-the-job training." Folks, I think it is time to have new representatives in Congress. Our experienced legislators have got this country into one heck of a mess. And we the voters have to pay to have it fixed.

Candidates are disappointing

As we draw near to the holidays and election time, I get a very sad feeling in my heart.

Every time I turn on the TV and radio, I hear different candidates putting each other down, trying to convince us that they are the best one to take the political office we are running for.

Each one tries to convince us that their opponents are lying to us, trying to get our votes. And since none of us can know exactly what anyone else is thinking, we have to go on our instincts and hope that we vote for an honest person.

You know, it's pretty scary thinking about the future. Sure, we tell our children right from wrong and tell them it's bad to lie, but I'm sure the people who are running for office were taught pretty early in life that lying is OK. What happens? If this is what we can expect from the next generation of politicians? I'm afraid to think what our future and their futures will be like. I only hope when my four children are adults, they will remember the things that I have been teaching them. I hope they will set an example for those they come in contact with.

The Constitution and Bill of Rights gives all of us the right to freedom of speech and that is one of the things that makes this country a great place to live. The only problem is those who choose to abuse that right. If adults are going to continue to forget the values that our country was based on, we ought to elect citizens to office while they still remember right from wrong. At least their "little" lies don't usually hurt anyone.

Poll: Utahns back school prayer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A poll of Utahns don't care for the American Civil Liberties Union's attack on school prayer, but they also don't support the use of state taxes to defend the practice, a new poll shows.

The latest News-KSTV-TV poll found 75 percent believed prayer had a place in public schools.

The ACLU has sued two school districts, their superintendents and school boards, for allowing sessions at high school graduation ceremonies.

The News-KSTV-TV poll suggests that the legislature may want to allocate money to defray legal costs in fighting those suits.

But the Dan James & Associates poll, based on 100 telephone interviews and with a margin for error of 3.2 percent, revealed that 77 percent think it would be wrong to spend state funds on the lawsuits.

Since Burger's suggestion, number of private attorneys have come forward offering their services free to the school districts. It now is uncertain if any specific appropriation will be sought in January's legislative session to pay school legal fees.

If prayer were allowed in public schools, the poll found that 76 percent of Utahns favor a multi-denominational, voluntary setting.

News-KSTV-TV poll found that 70 percent agree that prayers should be allowed at special events like football games, club meetings or graduations, but that voluntary prayer was inappropriate in regular classroom settings.

County bans prostitution at ex-bordello

VIRGINIA CITY, Nev. (AP) — County commissioners have voted to prohibit prostitution at the bankrupt Mustang Ranch, saying they are tired of the "circus" surrounding Nevada's most infamous bordello.

The Storey County commission's action Tuesday prevents the Internal Revenue Service from being able to sell the property as a brothel when it is put on the auction block.

The IRS seized the Mustang on Sept. 21 for a tax debt estimated at $14 million owed by owners Joe and Sally Conforte.

Commissioner Karl Larson said the county is not against legal brothels. It's just weary of the ruckus stirred by Mustang's notoriety.

"We're tired of the circus," Larson said. "Conforte is gone, and now we have to minimize our problem."

Larson said the county will increase its $10,000 annual license fee to make up for lost revenue from the Mustang.

But he said allowing prostitution to continue at the 440-acre ranch would perpetuate its "current state of notoriety."

"If it just wouldn't look good for Storey County," Larson said.

The commission's action gives the Mustang's real property and business value a boost.

Larson said the county will increase its $10,000 annual license fee to make up for lost revenue from the Mustang.

IRS officials have said they would sell the Mustang as real property and not as a brothel.

County officials said banning prostitution at the ranch likely will further decrease the property's value.

Winds die, firefighters make progress

By N.S. Nookhood
Times-News Writer

OAKLEY — Firefighters gained the upper hand on a 160-acre forest fire as winds died Wednesday.

Gustling winds more than doubled the Green Fire near Cache Peak, 13 miles east of Oakley, Tuesday before finally subsiding early Wednesday morning.

"It's real tough fighting fire in 40 mile-per-hour winds," Fire Incident Commander Danny Schwartz said. "If the wind stays down, we should be able to make some great progress and possibly contain the fire by Friday night."

Officials estimate that firefighters will contain the blaze by about 6 p.m. Friday and have it under control by 6 p.m. Saturday.

The fire, discovered about midday Monday and believed to have been caused by lightning, burned in extremely dry, dense timber in a remote area at an elevation from 6,000 to 9,000 feet.

The winds created two spot fires, about 30 acres each, a half mile east of the main blaze that has covered some 100 acres.

Sawtooth National Forest officials said specialized hotlines were attacked. The two spot fires were contained around 10:30 a.m.

A fire break around the main fire.

"There's a lot of rotten timber and snags through the area. There probably hasn't been a fire through the area in 100 years," the spot fire, the fire that is one to two miles from the nearest road. Winds also picked up again Wednesday afternoon but caused no problems.

Though temperatures remained low and humidity high for the area, the fire burned very hot in timber thoroughly dried by four years of drought. Forest Service spokesman Walter Kopp said, "No structures were threatened by the fire."

But two firefighters have suffered injuries. One firefighter was hospitalized after a hot ember fell into his boot severely burned his ankle, another injured a "trick knee" and was taken out of the fire line.

As flames headed into Idaho backcountry for the start of the six season Wednesday public land managers renewed their warnings of the high fire danger despite the season.

"Even though fall is arriving, we continue to experience high to very high fire danger," said John Reinbeck. "The dryness of forest fuels is of great concern."

Idahoans writing letter to Yeutter about wheat price

By Mark King
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho agriculture groups and the state Agriculture Department are drafting a letter to U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, asking him to stop the plunge of wheat prices.

"We're going to try to give him some information on things he can do administratively to raise the price of wheat," said Greg Nelson, director of the Idaho Department of Agriculture.

Wheat prices have dropped about $1.45 since Jan. 1 and have taken big plunges in recent months. Locally, growers were paying about $2.15 per bushel Wednesday. Wheat is grown on about 250,000 acres in south-central Idaho, second only to alfalfa and across Idaho it is grown on more acres than any other crop.

At a meeting Monday, representatives from the Wheat Commission, the Sugar Beet Commission, the Idaho Rural Council and the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation debated what to include in the letter.

Among their ideas were increases in the USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation loan rate and greater use of Export Enhancement Program funds.

"They've only used about one-half of (EEP funds)," Nelson said. "They've got to be aggressive in using these."

EEP awards exporting companies with certificates redeemable for CCC-owned commodities, allowing them to sell certain commodities internationally at prices below the U.S. market. Selling wheat exports boosts the U.S. price by tightening supplies.

CCC loans allow farmers to hold their grain off the market when prices are low. The loan rate often pushes the market price upward, because farmers won't sell unless they've offered a price close to the loan rate.

Currently, the loan rate is $1.85 per bushel for wheat.

Also discussed at Monday's meeting was increased food aid to countries suffering because of Iraq's recent refusal to make payments to its lenders. An increase in the farmer-owned reserve also could protect farmers from sliding prices, Nelson said.

The groups have not approved a final draft of the letter, although Nelson expected the letter to be complete and signed by each group by Friday. Nelson expects the Idaho Potato Commission also to sign on, he said.

The letter also will probably criticize the proposed five-year, $13 billion reduction in USDA commodity payments contained in last week's budget agreement, Nelson said.

The first College of Southern Idaho "recycling olympics" were not without controversy. During the newspaper bundling competition Mike Glenn, CSIS assistant to the president, tries to hold an armful of papers from another team as Jan Mitchell tries to confiscate the goods in question, all in good humor. Five teams competed in other contests including aluminum can stacking and the plastic jug toss. The Wednesday event was part of the activities of Wellness Week at the college.

Tritium in groundwater declining, study shows

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — The level of tritium seeping into the groundwater below the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory has declined dramatically over the past three decades, a new federal report indicates.

While wastewater from operations at the site has consistently been tainted with substantial levels of the radioactive hydrogen isotope, the U.S. Geological Survey study found that amounts filtering into the groundwater of the massive Snake River Aquifer have fallen nearly 93 percent below the levels considered safe under federal drinking water guidelines.

INEL's disposal of tritium has been a bone of contention between managers of the Energy Department facility and environmentalists. Officials at the latter had the site and the Geological Survey have maintained it was impossible for tritium to migrate through the aquifer to the Magic Valley while their critics claimed the site had mismanaged tritium and other hazardous compounds, jeopardizing water quality.

Until 1984, wastewater from the site's chemical processing plant was injected directly into the aquifer. At other operations it was stored in filtration ponds.

Based on readings from 26 wells on the site, the average concentration of tritium in the groundwater in 1961 was 140 times the highest allowable level under the federal Safe Drinking Water Act. The maximum reading was over 42 times

Jerome computer purchase creates controversy

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The city purchased a computer for the police department that drew other bidders and the city could have a major problem, according to a city council member.

"The bidding process and awarding of the purchase may not have been done legally, but was allegedly stipulated," said Adams. "It is a legal and computer programmer and one of the other bidders told the council Tuesday night."

The city purchased a $2,775 computer from Stephenson's Computer Consulting of Twin Falls after the city council held a price-offer by the other two bidders.

This was done after other companies had given the city higher proposals for a computer that would meet the original written specifications of the city provided.

Stephenson's, who offered to sell the city the system, had downgraded the specifications and sold the city a black and white monitor instead of a color monitor as required in the specifications, according to Adams. Other specifications had not been met or had been changed by Stephenson's, he added.

Two bidders, Adams and Mike Dahmer with Systems Associates, told the council they could have beat Stephenson's price if they could have offered the same computer the city ended up buying.

Councilman Rocky Jackson said the city may have a major problem on its hands. Mayor Gerald Ostler told the council it could not make a decision at the meeting, but would have to "look into it."

After the council meeting, Larry Bauer, the new public works director, said he did contact Stephenson's and secured a lower price for a computer that would meet the requirements of the Jerome Police Department.

He said he did not contact the other companies who had submitted proposals to see if they could provide less expensive equipment.

Cities do not have to go through the legal bid process for items costing as little as a computer.

Repair ordinance Council plans special workshop on city pool

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A proposed ordinance to prohibit the repair of residential vehicles in residential areas will win opposition from local attorneys who said some of the wording is vague, indefinite and uncertain.

The bill is arbitrary and capricious, therefore, not enforceable, attorney Mick Hedges said. "I can build an airplane, repair my motorboat and load shotgun shells in my garage, but I can't fix my car."

Hedges said he was representing 14 Jeromites but declined to name his clients, asked what exactly the council was

The Recreation District pool, leased from Spears Manufacturing Company, will not be discussed at the same meeting, however, despite such a request from the mayor and Recreation District Director Mike Depper.

The workshop will be open to the public and scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Dec. 4, at City Hall.

The city has a contract with the Recreation District to manage and operate a swimming program for both city and county residents.

The Rec District's concern is to work with the city to provide a swimming program for the public. However, it would the opportunity to sit down and discuss the options we have. I intend to continue to work with the city," Depper told the council.

Jackson then told Popper, "My concern is that you are a private entity. We draw money from city taxpayers. Do you expect the city of Jerome to use city tax money out of pocket to pay for this?"

Popper said he took exception to that statement since dollars put into the pool come from both the city and the county.

"If we split our ways, it's not prudent," Popper said.

"Why did you recommend the Jerome pool should never open again?" Jackson asked Popper.

"I wouldn't say never," said it wasn't a question of never, Popper said that the condition of the facility was unsafe," Popper replied.

Jury acquits Twin Falls man in case of aggravated battery

By Anita DeLuca Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A week-long jury trial Wednesday with a judge deliberating for two hours acquitted a Twin Falls man of aggravated battery.

April Marcos Landi, 23, was tried before U.S. District Judge Daniel B. Meighan on two felony counts stemming from a January incident in which he allegedly beat and struck a 14-year-old boy during a basketball game.

One count, in which Landi was charged with aggravated battery by driving down the street with the boy's mother partly hanging out his window, was dropped because the boy was not present at the trial.

Public Defender Michael J. Wood, in closing arguments Wednesday morning, told the two male jurors and 10 female jurors that Twin Falls County Chief Deputy Prosecutor John Schilling's case was "weak with embellishment, inconsistencies and contradictory testimony."

"He should not have been allowed to stand at the podium in the first place," Wood said. "Their Street, you can't see every time you look at it."

The incident took place at a 7-home on Filter Avenue and was charged with aggravated battery by driving down the street with the boy's mother partly hanging out his window.

OUR BOYS REALLY LOVED THEIR GRANDDAD, BUT WHEN HE DIED WE WEREN'T GOING TO TAKE THEM TO THE FUNERAL HOME OR THE SERVICES.

YOU SUGGESTED THAT IT MAY BE IMPROPER AND GAVE US WAYS TO INVOLVE THEM AT THE FUNERAL HOME. THEY TALKED ABOUT THEIR FEELINGS AND SHARED SOME SPECIAL MEMORIES OF THEIR GRANDFATHER.

YOU WERE RIGHT! THEIR PARTICIPATION WAS IMPORTANT. I WONDER IF OTHER FUNERAL DIRECTORS WOULD REACH OUT LIKE YOU DID?

Well, Boss! We should be seeing the old dirt road any time now!

This doesn't look as rustic as I remember it.

The only thing as rustic as I remember it is this car!

The answer, my friend, is blowin' in the wind. The answer is blowin' in the wind.

L.M. Boyd What's what?

From goat and rabbit
Q. Which does Angora fur come from - Angora goats or Angora rabbits?
A. Both. They're native to the Turkish province of Ankara. So we Angora-ists, and that's worth thinking about, suppose.

What our pentecost had that most people don't is a pink nail which will readily split a board that with a thumb nail.

POPPING BEANS?
 Our Chief Progenitor once says you'll soon be trying Nuna beans; then you'll now buy popcorn. Nuna beans, too, expand when heated. Taste a tiny like roasted peanuts. They've been growing since the 1700s.

Understand the three-bond ammal.
 It can roll itself into a ball so perfect you could bow a strike with it.

Was none other than Benjamin Franklin who turned "positive" and "negative" into electrical terms.

Another state with more than 1,000 lakes is Nebraska.

RD SKIN
Q. How come Native Americans used to be called "redskins"? Their skin isn't red.

A. Some early Algonquians mixed fat with berry juice and minerals to blend a vermilion makeup they fancied. That was why Europeans hung the redskin tag on them. It suited the popular prejudice, so stuck for a couple of centuries.

Boaters who use their boats the least are the saltiest, it's said.

Three out of 10 retired people prefer only two meals a day, surveys show.

Dear Abby

people that packers' then I suit a machine they fly-travel in the run, dance, swim and do everything I can do. Abby, please set the record straight and encourage people to get more understanding of this condition. (PHED)

IN PITTSBURGH
DEAR FRIEND: Thanks for giving me the opportunity to state that anyone who has a heart is old enough to have a heart problem. And thanks to the advances in medical science and technology, we now have the modern miracle—the pacemaker.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter who lives in another city believes she has a ghost or spirit living in her house. She says that ever since she rented this house, things get noisy, the lights get turned on, doors open by themselves, etc.

She is really upset by all this and doesn't know what to do. My suggestion was to move quickly, but moving is expensive, and besides, she can't find another place she can stay. My question is: Is there some way to get the ghost out of the house?

LOUISE IN MISSOURI

DEAR LOUISE: Advise your daughter to phone the clergyman of her choice and ask whether he or she has performed exorcisms (the sort of expelling evil spirits). Another exorcism does not perform exorcisms, ask if the exorcism of someone who does. It may not help, but it can't hurt.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a writer stated that it was foolish to work for nothing at a hospital (cont. Thanks for saying, "The rewards of volunteerism are real money.") You're right, Abby.

In 1988, a study was done by the University of Michigan Survey Research Center. They followed 2,700 people in Tecumseh, Mich., over a 10-year period to determine the effect of social relationships on health. They found that regular volunteer work, more than any other activity, dramatically increased life expectancy.

This was especially significant for men. And this did not volunteer work, but those who volunteered at least once a week.

Researcher Yale, the University of California, Johns Hopkins, the National Institute of Health and the Ohio State supports these findings.

LONGTIME VOLUNTEER LEADER MECHANICVILLE, VA

DEAR LEADER: So what use is doing for others, feel their time, and good about themselves. Volunteers, particularly those who work in hospitals, hospices and nursing homes, are too busy to dwell on their own troubles or feelings. Those who give a gift!

DEAR ABBY: I want to clear up a common misconception that has resulted in unnecessary painful feelings. My husband is 72 years old. He's pretty and popular, and she's worn a pacemaker for two years. I don't know if "Unit" people get to know her, they make a real connection like "My grandfather has one of those, what's wrong with you? I thought they were only for old people."

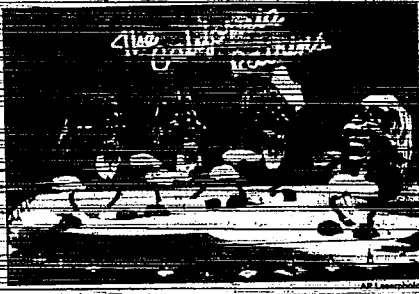

This has caused a great deal of pain for my friend. I just wish you'd tell

The California raisins: A last tango?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The animated raisins that danced off the vine and into the hearts of American consumers are sitting on the next TV commercial, yielding the advertising spotlight to a new dry character.

The California Raisin Advisory Board and its advertising company, which since 1986 have used award-winning Will Vinton Productions for memorable "Claymation" television ads, said they have chosen a new studio.

"There are some slightly different things we wanted to try," said Louise Ore, vice president of Fookes Cone & Belding, an advertising studio that handles the board's commercials. "It's just things, a few conditions, but there were no clay animators."

The raisins account is going to a different ad agency.

Ballantine, who appeared as Grape in the 1986 TV series, wouldn't be singing or dancing. "McHale's Navy," said Tom Gaskell, co-owner of Sculptors, "Ballantine" will play the raisins' manager.

One said California raisins will appear in the commercials, which are expected to air next month, but he declined to discuss details.

ing the new commercial, but it's not hurtful to us," he normally do between 20 and 25 commercials," said Robert Rintney, vice president.

The spots won four Clio awards for advertising excellence and managed to boost sales of raisins, a $500-million industry in the Central Valley. Over a 3 1/2-year period ending last year, U.S. consumption rose nearly 20 percent, said Linda Wood, spokeswoman for the California Raisin Advisory Board.

California farmers sold raisins in 1989 than in any other year except 1983, when growers dropped the price about 30 percent, Ore said.

"It took everyone by surprise," she said of the "ephemeral" success.

The TV spots also spawned dancing-raisin T-shirts, lunch boxes, beach towels and other products.

"You name it, we had it. We had about 300 items," Wood said. The number of raisin products has now dropped to about 10, but sales of the fruit itself are holding steady, Wood said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFE

For many that the stumble at the threshold... Shakespear

What do you think of our defense... against three... asked an... with... 108842... 3... 53... can you fault either of us... acting in panic?

West led the diamond five and East rose with the ace to lead the heart queen... East was afraid to lead his diamond nine... South had the diamond king and the spade ace... he would have had a quick nine winners...

South covered the heart queen... West won the trick... West won... West led his spade ace... and that was the end of the defense... There were 11 tricks for South and a bad score for East...

Should East have doubled three? asks West... The answer to that question is no... A double by East would have directed at lead of East's suit... not West's...

Although the game can be defeated... the answer to that question is no... A double by East would have directed at lead of East's suit... not West's...

Included in the list of violations were giving illegal recruiting inducements to prospects and extra benefits to athletes already enrolled.

All of the violations took place within three years. The school was first on probation in 1985. The school was first on probation in 1985.

Declo stays on ground to get past Kimberly

By Deed Breland
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The power game came to Kimberly Wednesday night as the Declo Hornets kept their playoff hopes alive by knocking the Bulldogs 27-7 in a Canyon Conference encounter.

The victory for the Hornets came without completing a pass as they rushed for 261 yards and four touchdowns. Kimberly, on the other hand, found success on the ground in the first half taking a 7-6 lead as they rushed for 88 yards. In the second half, the Bulldogs gained nine yards on the ground.

"We played hard the first half, but then power game took us out of it," said Kimberly Coach Gordon Hogan.

"That power game was led by Bryce Ostrhout with 23 times passing 124 yards, nearly half of the total yardage."

Ostrhout led the way for the first score of the game as Declo drove 87 yards. The senior running back had a key 23 yard run in the drive and drove into the end zone from 10 yards out.

Kimberly answered with a 68 yard run for a touchdown. A big run by Chad Hodgins and a personal foul penalty on Declo set up Kimberly at the 9 yard line. On fourth and goal, Chris Glenn found Brian Thompson in the end zone for the first score that gave the Bulldogs a lead.

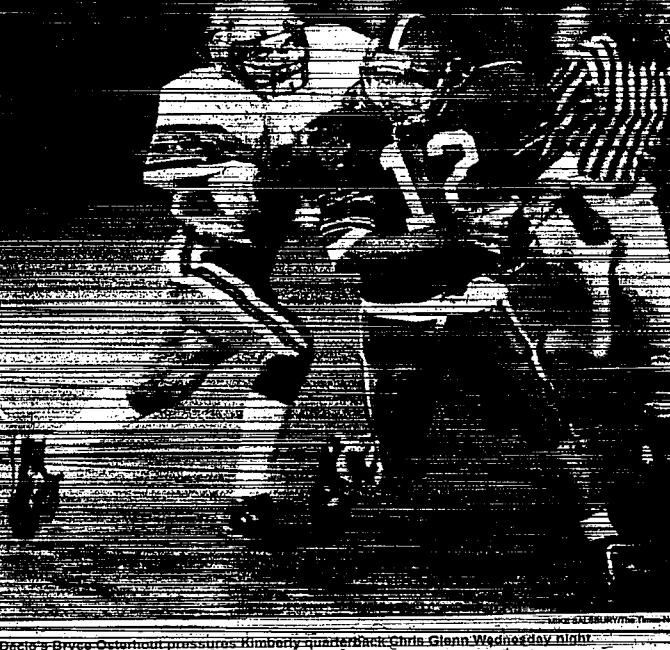

The Bulldogs looked as if they would be driving for another score as Brian Smith picked off a Travis Asher pass and set up Kimberly territory.

On the next play, Declo's Ryan Payne picked off Glenn and returned the ball 65 yards to the 10 yard line with 2 minutes left in the half. After three Ostrhout runs, Asher kept the ball end and went in with 19 seconds left as Declo led 12-7 at the break.

The kids responded real well. They could not get good on that play," said Declo Coach Jeff Peak on the intercom between halves.

Declo of Kimberly couldn't move the ball in the third quarter, but the Hornets scored twice in the final period to lead 21-7.

Boise, Twin Falls football teams meet at crossroads

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

Twin Falls and Boise arrive at a crossroads when they meet Saturday at 7:30 p.m. today in the final game of the state football season.

From two weeks ago, it appears these are teams headed in opposite directions. Twin Falls, which has never competed well against Borah, came a huge 34-6 win over the Indians Tuesday night and seem headed upward.

"We've had two back-to-back poor performances," says Coach Jon Lund. "They will pick up confidence in this win over"

Coeur d'Alene and believe they are on track. We just have to forget last week's loss and go play."

"Helping somewhat will be the return of three defensive backs: Brandon Miller, Riley Boyd and Aaron Lyda. All our line should be back. Terry Thumson remains on the sidelines for another week with a leg injury, causing Lund to come up with another offensive idea."

"We will try to go more with a two-back set so they can't key on (junior running back Tai) Gordon," the coach said. "And we will keep Tim Horner and Curtis Yoozen at the running back spot for this season."

Shawn Thompson, a 6-1, 178-pounder who has excellent speed, may have to run about 70 percent of the time and the other 30 percent to tight end Bryan Tuller (6-3, 200), Tuller said.

The outcome of this game hangs more on the willingness of the teams to compete than many Lund concluded.

Defensively, with one exception, QB, (junior) Steve Adams, and Altim Schroeder, they match up well against one line — about 185 pounds. They have a very active linebackers in 180-pound senior Mark Woodall. Lund said.

"I really feel the key to this one is the line. If we can't control the line, the other one is passing, they usually look to wide receiver — team that's going to win," he added.

Bosox don't choke; take AL East crown

The Baltimore Sun

BOSTON — As it turned out, the Heimlich maneuver would not be necessary — the Red Sox didn't choke in the final day of the regular season to set up a rematch of their 1988 playoff series against the defending world champion Oakland Athletics.

The new baseball rules against public displays of alcohol consumption aside, the Red Sox needed long innings to change the odds of this year's collapse.

Right-hander Mike Boddicker held the White Sox to just five hits over seven innings on the way to his 17th victory of the year, securing that pushed the Red Sox into their third playoff series in five years.

The White Sox were not without opportunities to force a season ender, but they faced the season ender a couple times too often and wasted great chances to make Boston feel the heat.

There was just a couple of big innings and two walks with one out in the seventh inning, but he got Fletcher to pop out and got off easy innings. Steve Carlton lunged at a run-ning single to left field. One run scored, but right fielder Mike Greenwell made a perfect throw to cut down Dan Pasqua at the plate, and end the inning. Boddicker left Boston "took over in the eighth and pitched two scoreless innings to record his 21st save, but it took a diving catch by right fielder Tom Brunansky to end a seven-inning rally in the ninth and kept the Fenway crowd of 32,937 in hysterics. This time there were seven mound ed-pole to maintain order on the field, three more than the night before.

Perhaps the Boston Police figured so, as it was a trucker number, 135266, that got after blowing a 69-game lead in September.

They apparently didn't want to leave anything to chance, not after they struggled at the plate the night before. Alex Fernandez started to self-destruct in the second inning, they jumped at the opportunity to stake Boddicker's claim.

Fernandez gave up three straight hits to open the inning, and the White Sox defense completely changed the situation with a string of fundamental lapses that would only serve to hasten the Please see BOSOX/D2

Advantages hard to find in NL championship

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Forget about home-field advantage for the National League playoffs. There isn't any.

Throw out post-season experience, too. The Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates have little of that, too.

Head-to-head results? Dead even. It's hard to find an advantage for either team as the NL playoffs begin Thursday at Riverfront Stadium, and they kind of like it that way.

It's not going to be a thing about matchups of this strength against that weakness. Pittsburgh's Bobby Bonilla said. "It's just going to be two teams going after each other. It's going to be a lot of fun."

They've already had a good time at each other's expense this season. They split their season series 6-6, ultimately beating each other. The Pirates came to Cincinnati in mid-August and put together their first-ever four game series sweep at Riverfront. The next weekend, the Reds nearly returned the favor, taking three of four in Pittsburgh.

They proved something to each other, neither team can feel dominant in this home park.

They were in the playoffs against Pittsburgh, 250, manager Don Lind's said. "When they beat you five in a row, people are starting to wonder."

Part of the reason could be the ballpark. The two cities are only about an hour's flight away, their weather is similar, and their fields are nearly identical. Riverfront Stadium and Three Rivers Stadium are a close match.

Pittsburgh's winning something for the first time, like a reliever Bob Dibble said. "I think it will be a much more even series."

Now this for even. The Reds had a 250 team batting average, best in the league and seven points higher than Pittsburgh. But the Pirates have scored more runs and hit more homers.

Brett, McGee take league batting titles

George Brett watches the evening batting title that helped him earn the A.L. batting title.

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Willie McGee won his National League batting title Wednesday, watching Ricky Henderson fall short of George Brett in the AL race.

Brett became the first player to win batting titles in three decades after leaving Henderson a 329 mark to McGee's 341. McGee was batting .326 in 55 at-bats, overtake Brett, wound up 15 for 3 against California to finish with a 325 mark.

"This is going to be right up there as far as accomplishment in my career," Brett said. "To do something no one's ever done before is a tremendous thrill."

Brett and Henderson's batting titles in 1976 at 333 and in 1980 at 330, McGee inserted as a pinch-hitter in the fifth inning Tuesday against Cleveland and hit a sacrifice fly. He singled in this final 1990, but two innings later.

At 55, Brett also became the third oldest player to win a batting championing. Infielder Ted Williams (40 in 1958) and Homey Wagner (37 in 1911).

A batting title is a far cry from what was expected. McGee, who started off the season slumping badly.

"The talk shows, newspapers, TV media were suggesting I might be over the hill," Brett said. "You hear the same thing every day, you start to believe it. It's so hard to hear you're over the hill. You're ugly. I'm going to start believing I'm ugly."

Empty games and I'm still hitting .240. I've had a second inning. I did it's been a good lesson for me. A lot of people gave up on me, and I didn't give up."

While Brett won his title, McGee won his title, McGee won his title, McGee won his title.

Viola beats Bucs for milestone 20th win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Frank Viola became the 18th pitcher in history to win 20 games in a regular season. He added a fifth victory with a 3-1 win for New York as the Mets beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 Wednesday.

Viola (20-17) was 2-7 with the Minnesota Twins in 1988 en route to American League Cy Young Award. He is the 10th pitcher since 1900 to win 20 in each league. Viola had lost three previous attempts at his 20th. He worked seven innings Tuesday to pitch the final in his Mets career.

Viola made a 3-3 tie in the seventh against Mike York (1-1) when Tabler was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded. Viola and Kelvin Torpe had singled and Darren Reed singled. New York's Chris Jeter hit a two-run homer in the eighth, his first major league hit. Jeter had been 0-for-10.

The Mets scored twice in the first against 41-year-old Jerry Reuss (1-1) in his last game. Tabler led off with an RBI single. Tabler led off the sixth with his fifth home run. Reuss, who left in the sixth, broke into his history to pitch in four decades.

NCAA Presidents Commission throws weight behind reform

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The powerful NCAA Presidents Commission decided Wednesday to throw its full weight behind the only thing missing from the sweeping three-pronged package that goes before schools Jan. 7.

The commission's support does not guarantee passage of the many proposals, which among other things would reduce scholarships, curb coaches' salaries and limit the number of sports.

In an unexpected development in their two-day meeting, the presidents also voted to toughen Proposition 48, the controversial freshman admission requirement.

"We will sponsor a resolution that will call for legislation in 1992 to strengthen the requirements of intercollegiate athletic eligibility," said commission chairman Martin M. Hinton.

Springer passes Valley past Eiler

The Times-News

EDMONTON Valley quarterback Chuck Springer passed for his team's first score, then ran for another five seconds later as the Vikings knocked out the Wildcat in Canyon Conference football Wednesday.

The unbeaten Vikings took the mercy rule for the sixth time in as many outings and in posting their third consecutive shutout victory over the Wildcat boosted their series advantage to 18-12 and extended their regular season and conference winning streaks to 16 and 12 games, respectively.

Despite an extra berth, which allows V-P representatives, the defeat sounded the death knell for Eiler, which fell to 2-3 with all three losses in league play.

With 7 minutes, 31 seconds showing on the first period clock, Springer passed for a 3-3 tie.

Quarterback Tyler Ballard and wide receiver Steve Foster connected for a 20-yard pass.

Titles

The 31-year-old McGee has been absent from the NL race since he was traded by the St. Louis Cardinals on Aug. 28. However, he had already made enough plate appearances to qualify for the crown and his 50th homer proved to be the final for Philadelphia's Leary Dykstra.

New York's Dave Magadan and Eddie Murray of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

At the time of the trade, McGee slumped the last month of the season, leaving the title to McGee.

Magadan, in second place going into the season's final day, needed to score a run to overtake McGee, and left with a game against the Pirates after dying out in his first at-bat. He finished at .325.

Murray, who entered the last day with a .328 average, finished his season in Los Angeles with a night game against San Diego.

effort to cut down Greenwell at the plate. Tom Brunansky followed with a base hit to right that turned into a triple when right fielder Sammy Sosa overran the ball and allowed it to roll to the fence.

If that wasn't bad enough, the White Sox had Brunansky hung up between third and home on a blowout to allow the third run of the inning to score. It was Fernandez's throwing error that allowed Brunansky to cross the plate.

Merritt, Buddeker was having little trouble with the White Sox lineup, which managed two soft singles through the first five innings.

He watched what would have been his 17th victory get away after a decent performance against the Blue Jays on Friday but would not allow the White Sox to endgame it this time.

It is entirely possible that last night's game was the last regular season start Buddeker will make in a Red Sox uniform. He becomes eligible for free agency after the postseason tournament, and there has been speculation that he'll take advantage of it. There also has been mild speculation that he might return to Baltimore, but there is still the matter of facing the Oakland Athletics in the playoffs.

Once-promising Dupree signs on with Rams

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Marcus Dupree, one of pro football's most promising young runners before a knee injury seemingly ended his career in 1985, signed Wednesday with the Los Angeles Rams.

Dupree, 26, has played in 170 games, and Rams coach John Robinson admitted he does not know what to expect of the former USFL player.

"It's new ground for us," Robinson said. "It's a longshot. I guess. You're asking about a guy who has the talent to be a great player."

"We'll continue to evaluate his return. Obviously, being away from football for five years, it will take a period of adjustment for him to get his skills back."

Robinson said Dupree will be on the regular roster rather than the practice squad but definitely won't play Sunday, when the Rams play host to the Cincinnati Bengals.

"The condition of Dupree's knee probably will determine when — and if — he will be able to play in the NFL. He'll have to be in good shape when he worked out Wednesday."

"He looks fine to me, but you really can't tell," Coury said. "He weighed 250 pounds when he played for me, and weighs 210 now. He thinks he can play. I'm glad we got him. If it works out, it'll be a great signing on an expensive gamble for the team."

Dupree went to the University of Oklahoma and had an outstanding freshman season, rushing for 905 yards on 129 carries and scoring 13 touchdowns. He played in just four games as a sophomore.

"I was injured in the second game, but I didn't know it at the time," he said after jogging off the practice field.

"I've still got work to do," he said. "The knee feels great, doesn't hurt, and it's strengthening."

Coury said Dupree, who gained 60 yards on 45 carries and caught 28 passes for 182 yards for the Breakers (then in New Orleans) in 1985, appeared to be in good shape when he worked out Wednesday.

Boston all too familiar with needing 1 win

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox know all about needing one more victory. They just aren't sure how to do it.

For the fifth time in 42 years, Boston's championship hopes went to a one-game playoff Wednesday.

Win or lose, it was an all-or-nothing scenario for the Red Sox and their long-suffering fans.

They have won seven World Series since 1918, before the infamous sale of Babe Ruth for $100,000 to the New York Yankees. But the real inability to win it all began in 1948, when Ted Williams & Co. finished tied with Cleveland in a 154-game schedule, then lost the pennant to the Indians in a one-game playoff at home.

In 1949, leading by one game, the Red Sox went into Yankee Stadium needing to win only one of two games with the Yankees for the pennant. Boston lost both games and finished one game behind.

At odds of 100-1, the Red Sox won the 1967 "Impossible Dream" pennant, beating Minnesota while California ended Detroit's bid for the final day of the season.

In 1972, the Red Sox led the AL East by 1 1/2 games with four to go. They then lost a series in Baltimore, then two in Detroit.

Boston finished with an 85-77 record that year, Detroit 86-76. It's the only time in history that a team finished second with the same number of losses as the winner. The playoffs also ended by a result of an "owner's players' strike."

In the Red Sox era, the 1978 season was the most gut-wrenching — lost only 68-90.

In 1979, Boston blew a lead by going 2-14 in a September stretch, but then ended the regular season with a 106-76 record. In the final day, while the Yankees won 7-6, the Red Sox won 3-2.

Bill Buckner's error in the 1986 World Series prevented Boston from breaking their championship drought.

Backy Dent's three-run chip shot runner into the left field.

Right-center field added a two-run homer in the eighth inning and the Yankees won 5-4.

In 1988, the Red Sox won the division with outside help. They lost six of the last seven games, but they were helping.

They were helped by the St. Louis Cardinals when Enos Slaughter sprinted around the bases from first on an eighth-inning double by Harry Walker for a 7-3 victory in the seventh game.

In 1987, Jim Lonborg ended a 20-year Yankee dynasty when he was beaten by Hall of Famer Bob Gibson and the Cardinals 7-2 in the decisive game.

In 1975, led by Carl Yastrzemski, Boston swept Oakland in the best-of-five playoff, then knocked them in a thrilling World Series win against Cincinnati Reds. Carlton Fisk tied the game with his dramatic 12th inning home run, but the Red Sox overcame a 3-0 deficit and beat the Red Sox 4-3 on Joe Morgan's two-run single in the ninth.

The Red Sox were on the verge of breaking their World Series championship drought when they were swept by the Yankees in the 1986 World Series.

The next day the two-time former MVP and the Red Sox's only divisional playoff.

The Red Sox took the lead but the Yankees went ahead in the ninth.

Michigan State to investigate allegations made in book

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Michigan State University will investigate serious allegations made in a new book about the Spartan football program.

The book, "The Spartan Football Program," by Alan Curran, would be reported to the Athletic Department by a university committee, likely to be headed by associate provost Lou Anna Simon.

The provost's office has overseen the athletic department since football coach George Perles took on the dual role of athletic director and coach earlier this year.

Some of the charges might be true, Trombow said. "I don't think it's simply anything other than a collection of allegations."

The focus of the investigation will be two charges, one that the football team paid for a plane ticket for former Spartan stand-out Lorenz White so he could visit family in Florida, and another that the team paid $10,000 to drop charges against a football player allegedly involved in an assault at a restaurant.

But Perles was quoted as saying the book "is not true."

Commissioner asks ABC chairman to review '20-20' segment, magazine claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Fay Vincent telephoned the chairman of Capital Cities-ABC and asked him to review a "20-20" segment on the George Steinbrenner investigation.

Sports Illustrated reported on its Web site.

In an eight-page story, Vincent accused Steinbrenner of "investigating" John M. Dowd and their investigation of the New York Yankees owner.

Steinbrenner resigned as manager of the Yankees in 1985, but continued baseball's investigation of his relationship with admitted gambler Howard Spira.

Steinbrenner lawyer Paul J. Curran said the article showed the investigation was "the ultimate in sleaze."

Curran also called baseball to reinvestigate former Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield.

"Things were swept under the rug. There was a double standard applied," he said. "Things that should have been checked out fully and fairly."

Bidding adieu to an old green tub

I bobbed along in the old float tube and recognized that it was no longer adequate. Its colors were drab, green and olive. The black, blue and brown - yup, even camouflage - were the colors of their only five-year-old.

Warren Schoth Fishing

The adjustment strap on my tube wasn't even quick release, practically a staple feature of even the cheapest tubes today. The apron was solid, catching water which in turn rubbed at the time I cast. Probably the worst facet of this design was its shape - round. Ordinary, commonplace round.

Over the years, several thousand people sat in basic round float tubes and caught fish. They were perfectly happy, if a little tipsy. Some had back seats, most had no aprons because the original tubes were for fly fishing and spin casting and bait casting. When fly fishermen discovered float tubes and started using them in earnest, they quickly began a small revolution in functional design and practicality. Old motor chairs, such as fish and dles and hand paddles gave way to vibrant fins of every type. The fins were soon modified so they could be faced and adjusted.

Today, fins are built that are designed to rotate on a swivel. Electric motor platforms are built in or may be added to float tubes for increased speed and maneuverability. Float tubes shape began to change roughly a decade ago. The wedge shape was created to provide buoyancy in back, making the tube more stable and to ride better.

Another manufacturer made the tube cover optional, providing more room for your knees. The interior cockpit became. Please see SCHOTH/D5

2 more grizzlies killed after attack on hunter

JACKSON, Wyo. - Two grizzly bears, one a female, have been killed by hunters in Wyoming since another grizzly attacked a Cody elk hunter two weeks ago, bear biologists say. The attack may have made hunters overly eager to shoot bears.

"We have a lot of people entering the woods that are prepared to shoot any bear on sight if they encounter one," said John Talbot, a Wyoming Game and Parks Department biologist who's chairman of the Intergovernmental Grizzly Bear Committee. "I don't know what we do about that."

The committee discussed possible remedies Tuesday, including requiring permits for people using any grizzly habitat all season.

The three recent grizzly deaths - the bear that attacked the hunter also was killed - and a high number of bear deaths last year may double about official pronouncements that the threatened species is recovering in the Yellowstone region.

According to published guidelines, only six bears and no more than two females can be lost annually over a six-year average if grizzlies are to fulfill recovery goals set by biologists.

A total of at least nine bears and four female grizzlies have now been lost from the Yellowstone ecosystem this year, officials said.

Goose season begins Saturday with Region 4 adding two weeks of hunting opportunity for area hunters.

By Larry Hovey Times-News Writer

JEROME - More early days of hunting and less early harvest will give Magic Valley waterfowl hunters a taste of what the next five years will bring when the Region 4 goose season begins Saturday.

The region is adding two weeks of hunting opportunity for area hunters but the trade-off is that for the first five weeks of the season, the time-and-possession limit will be one duck goose on the day and possession limits.

The other change waterfowl hunters must accept is the continued expansion of steel shot zones. The expansion begins Saturday morning, steel shot will be required in all areas along the Snake River, including the 200 yards above high-water mark on the river in Cassia County.

Just about all the counties in Magic Valley are total steel shot zones. The exception is one large portion outside the 100-yard range of Snake River in Cassia County, most of Blaine County and a smaller part of Elmore County.

But this is the last year any waterfowl may be taken in any Idaho county with legal shot beginning next year, everything elsewhere will require steel.

Randy Smith, Idaho Fish and Game Department biologist, said the additional goose hunting days for the lower Magic Valley area is an attempt to bring Region 4 into the statewide standardized opener. It really arrives only a year early because

Steel shot use lags while full compliance ordered next year

The Associated Press

BOISE - Idaho's waterfowl hunting will run strictly under steel shot. Only steel shot will be legal in the skies over every stream and pond in the state.

But despite a five-year nationwide phase-in to acquaint sportsmen with shooting steel, the compliance rate is low. The practice of wildlife remains, an expert says.

Ramros swirl around steel shot like fog on a winter hunting day and are the biggest roadblock to its success. Hunters shy away for fear of getting an undesirable shot, he said. He said some continue to shoot lead illegally.

Game managers, expecting complete steel shot compliance in five years, said. "You're trying to change 200 years of tradition in four or five years," Roster said.

The practice of shooting lead is much older and continued much longer than slavery in the United States.

Game departments say, "We've got real good compliance, but the sales figures (on shotgun shells) are very clear. There's a mediocre compliance and the sad part is ed the early harvest reduction. "We are assured hunting framework dates by the federal government and as we try to fine tune our local management of the Snake River portion of Region 4, holding an extra two weeks to protect the wild fish. Officials from Idaho and other interests met earlier this week in Portland with the federal judge charged good population going into the season.

"Rather than take a chance of cutting too far into our breeding stock, we felt a slow approach would be better. That's when we stepped up with the one and a half harvest increase," Smith continued. "We will be able to take a look at our breeding pairs again next spring and we will always have the flexibility to adjust our harvest to meet the criteria of the five-year plan for maintaining populations in this area. We can increase harvest very quickly if the population can sustain it."

What the regulations say is that three geese may be taken but only one may be of the dark species. The Canadas and Lesser Canadas generally provide all the harvest in southern Idaho. But the regulation would allow hunters to take a couple of snow geese if they should happen on any.

That 1-1 runs through Nov. 11, On Nov. 12 through Jan. 6, the Region 4 harvest jumps to two daily and four in possession.

For the first time in a while all of Region 4 will have a daily harvest. The area is the Chains Ferry area - everything east of state Highway 66 - will correspond to Magic Valley rather than the third region in the previous few years.

The only portions of the southern part of the state that do not open this week have to do with the Port Hall Indian Reservation. The reservation, plus Bingham, Blaine and Hamlet counties, will be closed for another week.

Hunters are reminded that duck hunting will remain closed until Oct. 20.

Meager steelhead run fuels calls for restrictions

The Associated Press

LEWISTON - This fall's meager run of steelhead so far on the Snake and Salmon rivers is fueling calls for tighter restrictions on commercial fishing.

Bert Bowler of the Idaho Fish and Game Department said swiftness with the record run of 1982 are out of the question and it will require a stretch to even near the good run of 1988 or the fair run of the year before that.

"We're going to have to set some pretty good returns over the Hiabor and McNary (dams) if we're going to play catch-up," Bowler said.

The number of steelhead at Bonneville Dam was less than half the number of a year ago overall, and the count of the fishery's planned goal of 62,000.

The meager showing has raised concerns about the future of the wild fish. Officials from Idaho and other interests met earlier this week in Portland with the federal judge charged with monitoring the runs.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones called the session an opportunity to maybe lay some groundwork and get a feeling for what the other parties' position is and maybe where the judge is.

Idaho was joined last month by the state of Washington in calling for tighter steelhead fishing regulations to offer more protection for the fish returning from the sea to spawn.

The state had previously challenged the anadromous fish. Please see STEELHEAD/D5

Make several checklists to prepare for fall hunts

As the big game season approaches it is not too soon to begin planning and organizing the variety of clothing, gear and equipment which will be needed opening day. Some planning and list making can improve the chances of getting into the field with all the equipment needed for an enjoyable hunt.

A good way to prepare for hunts is to make several lists for each type of hunt you may be planning. For example, the list needed for a one-day deer hunt in your truck will be different from the list needed for a three-day elk hunt on horseback.

A hunt which takes the hunter away from the vehicle for the day will be different from a hunt consisting of only short hikes from the road. The following are examples of lists I have created to meet my types of fall hunts.

The first list contains the items I always want on my person - any big game hunt - from the toilet to the car keys. It contains items such as knife, ammunition, insect-icide, log, binoculars, first aid kit, survival kit, camera, etc.

The second list names the additional

David Hocklander Hunting

Items needed on a one-day hunt using a truck. This list includes the following: change of clothes, boots, block and tackle, saw, game bags, etc.

I can be very complete with this list since the horse allows me to take more equipment.

The third list is for all day walking hunts away from the vehicle. This type of hunt carries a back pack with the following items: food, water, binoculars, rope, etc.

The fourth list is for the hunt which will take me only short distances from the truck. This list can contain every possible piece of equipment which I can carry. It can include more generous food and drink rations, such as a cold can of soup, a change of clothes, a spare firearm, spotting scope, cover and tee for cooling down game, ample water, etc.

The fifth list is for the overnight hunt. The quantity of certain items will of course vary depending on the length of stay. On the list is sleeping bag, change of clothes, cooking utensils, food, tent, tarp, matches, AW, shovel, etc.

I have a comprehensive list of equipment which I use on all hunts. Each individual hunter will have other gear to include but it should get you started in composing your own lists. Once the lists are completed they can be added together to meet the needs of each hunt.

If you're planning an overnight trip, it's my vehicle with day long walk hunt. I can include the trip, binoculars, and other items to complete my checklist.

Checklists such as these are only of value if used. To insure that they will be available when needed and that you will not have to scramble through your equipment for several pieces of each common piece.

When preparing for a hunt check the items off as they are found and assembled for the hunt. Then check the items off into the vehicle when you are finished. This will help prevent leaving your food or rifle sitting by the front door.

During the hunting season most of my equipment is assembled and ready to go. The items on the first list are put into a big sack which is included in any of the types of hunts. The saddle bags serve as the seasonal storage spot for the horseback trip specialties on the second list.

A two-compartment hip pack serves as a collecting point for the third list. Most of the equipment included on the fourth list is put in my truck at the beginning of the season and stays there until closing day.

The fifth list items are usually assembled in my basement for quick loading when needed. This list of planning and organizing allows me the freedom to take off on a hunt in a moment's notice with the assurance I will have WITH ME the gear I need for an enjoyable hunt.

Judge rules deer decoy not wildlife, dismisses charges

GREENSBURG, Pa. - A deputy district judge has ruled that a judge had reversed the convictions of two hunters who were bogged by state game officers for shooting at a stuffed deer.

Aaron J. Stiffey Sr., 46, of Bolivar, and James Wagner, 41, of New Florence, were arrested Dec. 7, 1987, during a hunt. They were charged with shooting at the decoy from a vehicle on a public road, not wearing proper hunting garb or having their hunting licenses, and having loaded firearms in their pickup trucks.

Wildlife officers testified that the decoy was a stuffed deer. Stiffey said the decoy was a deer and that they saw stripes on one of the shots. And they said that when Stiffey was cited, he remarked: "I guess you got me."

Wagner and County Chairman Plesan Judge Richard B. Conover, the an- prosecuting attorney, opposed their attorneys. The judge ruled that the two hunters were overturned Stiffey's conviction because the stuffed deer was not alive and did not meet the state definition of wildlife.

Technical ethics: Surprising new phenomenon taking hold

During the buyout furo of last decade, reality in business reached a low point. Yet, while companies, instead of building themselves, were buying other companies or perishing in the effort, a different and opposing force got underway and became a groundswell.

Sylvia Porter Finances

It started down in the ranks, for removed from the steel and glass towers of corporate officers, with the people who create the things the corporate officers buy and sell.

It's a surprising new phenomenon called technical ethics.

Technical ethics is something you should know about because it may determine whether a company whose stock you own will slide into the forward into the future or spend its money on the non-growth of debilitating lawsuits.

The technical ethics groundswell really began four and a half years ago when the space shuttle was destroyed due to engineering problems that were already well known to the space agency and to its contractors. A succession of investigations showed there was great danger in flying the shuttle just four quarters for business and political reasons.

Following the destruction of the Challenger, many engineers argued that they were just following orders in remaining silent about known flaws. But others, angry that red flags they had raised had been ignored, began to speak loudly. It may be good for one's job if one loses the political line, they said, but there must be an ethics standard — a point at which the concerns exceed the desires of the still player.

The result has been a new concentration on business and professional ethics in many of the nation's schools. Following the Wall Street crash, many recent years' business schools have begun to require ethics courses. An increasing number of schools of engineering is doing the same.

Largely unmentioned is the fact that companies themselves have begun to hire ethics consultants.

The problem is a complicated one, according to those who have faced it. Engineers and other technical professionals, accustomed to unwavering equations and issues that are clearly black and white, often are little versed in the realities of managing a project in today's competitive business environment.

The engineers would like to make forever and so never budget every minute, says a manager at a major aerospace company. "They don't understand that conditions cannot be perfect all the time. They sometimes like to do the best they can at the best they can."

They don't realize that there's another company out there that will say it can do the same, or better, for less. Whether the company is telling the truth is not always considered when contracts are awarded.

The engineers found that there is no way that a company can justify doing something — anything — that it knows to be wrong.

The laser videodisc format is actually the big brother of the compact disc and is continuing to grow in popularity among audio-video enthusiasts.

Though the concept of the optical disc has not changed in its 11-year history, there have been some big technology advances.

Today's laser videodisc players provide more than 400 lines of horizontal resolution to complement large screen monitors. Most new discs range from hit movies to music videos and also incorporate true digital sound.

And 1989 was a banner year for disc sales in the United States.

Some of the popularity growth may be attributed to the acceptance of the compact disc.

What can this playback-only disc system do?

Here's the lowdown on the laser videodisc format.

They come in three sizes, 12, 8 and 3-inch. The 12-inch discs feature hit movies, concerts, operas, and educational material. They can contain up to 60 minutes of audio-video programming per side.

The 8-inch discs are usually music videos with up to 30 minutes of programming per side.

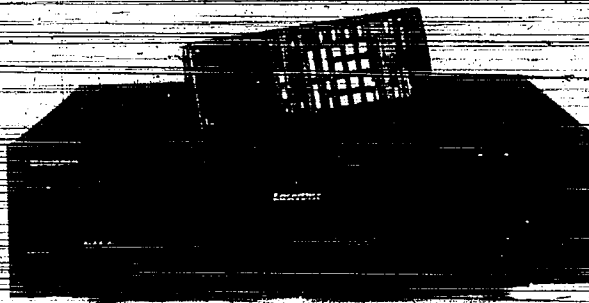

The 3-inch laser videodiscs are known as CDVs (compact disc video) and are sold in color. They resemble standard CDs but are able to hold up to 5 minutes of video along with 20 minutes of audio. These discs are also compact discs, which can be played on most current models of laser videodisc players; are available in 3- and 5-inch sizes. The 5-inch disc can store up to 74 minutes of material and the 3-inch disc up to 20 minutes.

The price of laser videodiscs also make them attractive to collectors of classic and old movies. Many new releases on disc are priced at under $30, whereas the same title on a tape may cost as much as $90.

Music videos, even less with CDVs, list for about $10.

Since these discs are read by a low-power laser beam, there is no wear to them. With proper handling and storage, they should last a lifetime.

Many leading hardware manufacturers currently offer laser videodisc players. You can select from such names as Pioneer, Magnavox, Yamaha, Sony, NEC, and Philips. Please see LASER/D7

Computers, videos get new twists for fun

The Associated Press

The fun and of computers and videos has become a separate entertainment industry. One of the new twists is interactive video. Pioneer provides the background or electronic on-screen lyrics and mood images, and a mike to connect into the home entertainment version of a song. Kanoto means "empty orchestra" in Japan, where the form is starting with castles and orchestral backing bands. It has been popular for at least 15 years.

There's also a selection of Japanese, Chinese, Mandarin, Korean and Tagalog songs.

The equipment lets the singer override the vocals or even lets him adjust the pitch.

Home colorization. You can enter the colorizing your videos with the Video Equalizer from Videonics. This machine includes a digital video enhancer, digital video processor with color function and a three-channel audio mixer. The unit's digital paintbrush will let you change color of scene elements without affecting other colors or objects. You also can sharpen images by removing noise or snow. And you can add stereo music or voice along music to the existing sound.

For game addicts, here comes something called U-Force Power Games, a four-games cartridge to be used with the U-Force hands-free controller for Nintendo.

The system turns a 3.5-inch floppy into a personal action without touching the player. It wires gloves, helmets, floor pads or joysticks. Games on the cartridge include Power Field B-Ball, where the player can dribble, drive and shoot with natural movements; just as though he were on a real basketball court; Hose 'Em Down, which has the player direct a hose to demolish a burning building; the Nuclear Rat Attack, in which the player must fight off thousands of nuclear-waste eating rats attacking his space ship; and Rock on Air, with the player creating music from a wave of his hands. U-Force is from Braderford.

Shoes for barefoot kids help family just skimming the surface

Minneapolis' millionaire Percy Ross is internationally known for his philanthropic work and likes to encourage others to help solve problems for those in need. He has earned a fortune and a wealth of fame over his lifetime and wants to share both before his death. His motto is "He who gives while he lives — also knows where it goes."

Percy Ross Thanks a million

Our icebox is going out. I couldn't handle it with a good icebox. The washer and dryer (11 years old) both need repairs. I couldn't handle life without a washer and dryer — not with nine kids. We have two cars that are both heading for the junkyard. We have a major house repairs. It's a real mess. Several rooms need new ceilings, new dry wall, paint, trim and so on. But Mr. Ross, all I'm asking for is your help to get all nine of our children a couple of pairs of shoes each.

nine children, whether or not you can provide for their every need. You didn't ask for my opinion, though just my financial assistance. My $360 check will buy each child two pairs of shoes at an average cost of $20 each. Is this a knowledge for me? No, but by the amount I know for the other hundreds of requests for shoes this week, I'm going to feel pretty lucky to own a pair myself.

While figure out why she thought I would smile at him and say such a thing. We only receive Social Security, so there isn't much of a chance that we can get $218 extra unless you can help. Thanks a million anyway for just reading this scribble and make your own decision.

Well, this time I'm asking for me? Why? Because I want to get myself something for a change. I've put up with more BS than a cowboy on the Santa Fe Trail. I've done and done for others, and still get treated like a piece of shit. I don't want to be like some new clothes, a 19-inch color TV, and a trip to Atlanta on my day off. I won't cite any specific figure, because I really don't know how much I want — just enough, I guess.

Dear Mr. Ross: We are a family of 11. Our needs are great that not one person would be able to really help us unless they were rich. All I'm asking for is a small donation so I can buy my children some shoes. I have seven children, going to school this year. They want baseball all summer, because they didn't have any shoes.

My husband and I are making a lot of sacrifices. Could you possibly make a little of your money to help my children? Mrs. M.P., Fairmont, City, Ill.

Dear Mr. Ross: Help! I am about to run away to China. I divorce my husband or I go out of my mind. My husband's two hearing aids both gave out on the same time, just after the warranty ran out. The company is holding them until we come up with $218 ransom (repairs). My husband is wearing a "loaner" now, which means he cannot really hear much, which results in his misunderstanding.

Dear Mr. Ross: I've written you a few times, always asking for shoes, namely my mother. I wanted to get her something nice, but every time payday rolls around, something comes up and I'm broke before you know it.

From now on, it's no more putting No. 1 on the back burner — it's front burner with the flame on high for me! Mr. B.D., Montgomery, Ala.

I have plenty in our home, but we are short of cash. My husband works 60 plus hours a week. We haven't gone under financially, but we are skimming the surface. I go to bed at night crying because my kids all want something I can't get them.

I admit sometimes being too annoyed with him. Recently, I told him he is still handsome, but he thought I said "dumb" and slammed out the door. I never know if

Electric surge suppressors a must for today's homes

Q. A high-voltage surge damaged my TV and microwave oven. I plan to get surge suppressors to protect them. How do I select among the many surge suppressors available and do they use much electricity? D.G.

James Dullay Cut your utility bill

A. Electric surge suppressors are a must for today's homes. Almost every electric device, including your radios, TVs, furnace, air conditioner, clothes washer and dryer, cordless telephones, etc., have electronic circuitry that can be damaged by common super-high-voltage surges.

These high-voltage surges in your home will reach 6,000 volts and occur thousands of times each year. Although the surges occur for only a few millionths of a second, they can instantly burn out or slowly destroy any electronic circuit. Even if the television or microwave is turned off, a strong surge can jump the switch and still harm the circuitry.

High-voltage surges are generated from outside and inside your home. External surges come from lightning, accidents involving electrical poles, and nearby businesses. Inside your home, they occur when a clothes washer, air conditioner, refrigerator, any device with a motor, turns off.

You should mount a whole-house surge suppressor on the circuit-breaker box. This blocks external surges from getting into your home. This will save surge suppressors in outlets where you plug in electronic equipment. These protect you from internal surges. You can also get surge suppressors to protect your telephone line and TV cable from high voltage.

The level of protection varies significantly among similar-looking surge suppressors. Different types of electronics require different levels of protection. Good suppressors should respond within one-billionth of a second to block surges. The shortest response time specification is best.

Another important specification is the clamping voltage. This indicates at what voltage level the surge suppressor begins to block the surge and dissipate it harmlessly. It can range from $100 to $200. Please see DULLAY/D7
