Stallings seeks impact statement on forest travel plan

By N. S. Nakkaviet
Times News writer

TWIN FALLS — Congressman Richard Stallings has asked the Forest Service to conduct a full-scale environmental impact statement on Travel Plan revisions by the Silverthorn National Forest.

"I am greatly concerned about the process that is currently being conducted by the Forest Service, the Idaho Department of Forestry, and the Idaho Department of Transportation," said Stallings. "I am concerned about the impact of the Travel Plan revisions, now under consideration by the Forest Service, proposed changes in the use of trails in the SNF, including the banning of motorized vehicles from some popular trails. Off-road vehicle enthusiasts have criticized the plan at information hearings held by the agency.

The proposal leaves most of the SNF open to motorized use, even in areas proposed for wilderness designation.

The public clearly wants more involvement in this plan. It has raised substantial recreational use issues that are important to a variety of Idaho interests,

Stallings wrote. "Some confusion also resulted because the original Draft Travel Plan was published in error."

Stallings said a complete impact statement would help clear up some confusion. And additional public participation would help relieve some of the controversy surrounding the Forest Service's attempt to bring its plan for trail use by motorized vehicles into compliance with its Forest Plan passed in 1987.

SNF Supervisor Roland Stofman, who had not yet seen the letter, said his office had not made a decision on whether it would conduct a full impact statement rather than the already planned environmental assessment.

A number of people in written and oral comment on the revised travel plan have requested an environmental impact statement, a process that would give the public a chance to respond to a draft impact statement. An environmental assessment, on the other hand, would not require additional public comment.

Stallings also said he felt the impact statement could avert a protracted legal battle over the new Travel Plan.

New PET plant at Buhl all ready to begin turning out baked beans

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

BUHL — PET Inc.'s new baked bean plant is nearly ready to start churning beans.

"We're hoping to have the whole thing ready to cook some beans in a couple of weeks," Plant Manager Craig Ollinger said Monday.

Workers are now testing the cast-iron pots, the brick ovens, the pipes, and the wiring at the plant, which covers 42,000 square feet and cost $5 million to build. It could produce up to 300,000 cases of B&M Baked Beans yearly.

"It's really a traditional way of making it on a large scale," Ollinger said. "We can never make B&M Baked Beans taste the same way without doing it the traditional way."

PET has long produced baked beans in Portland, Maine, using small white beans from the United States, including some from southern Idaho. The Buhl plant will primarily use beans grown in the Northwest, including the Magic Valley.

"The whole purpose of producing it in Buhl, Idaho, is to avert the transportation costs of shipping quite a number of small white beans from the Northwest to Maine," Ollinger said.

Ollinger is hoping to hold a grand opening at the plant sometime in December. By April, the plant could employ 40 workers on two shifts.

Many workers will be new to PET. But because the plant's peak production periods will coincide with the nearby PET evaporative milk plant's seasonal lull, Ollinger said the company hopes to shuffle seasonal workers between the two plants, minimizing layoffs at both and creating more full-time, year-round jobs.

Beans baked in Buhl will go to Western grocers, with coast cities providing the largest markets, Ollinger said.

Tax bill could hit all levels

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Democratic deficit-reduction plan under attack from the Bush administration would pass taxes on all but the poorest Americans, seeking the richest 1 percent with increases averaging nearly $14,000 a year.

The proposal would cut taxes slightly on those with incomes under $20,000 a year, according to an analysis Monday by the staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation. Those above the $200,000 income level would face a 7.4 percent tax increase.

For people between those extremes, the legislation would result in tax increases in the 1 percent range. That would result from putting higher-earners' taxes on alcohol and tobacco, giving up next year's income tax adjustment to offset inflation, and raising the amount of wages subject to the Medicare tax.

Economists for the House Ways and Means Committee, which wrote the proposal, estimated its tax changes and cost increases for Medicare beneficiaries would cost the average family $552 next year.

Analysts said:

- The poorest one-fifth of families, with after-tax income averaging $7,316, would get a $14 tax cut.
- The second-poorest one-fifth, averaging $16,917, would pay $114 more.
- The middle group, averaging $25,896, would pay $183 more.
- The second-richest 20 percent, averaging $36,481, would face a $280 tax increase.
- The top 20 percent, whose incomes av-

Tough talk over Kuwait on both sides

The Associated Press

The United States said Monday that American troops would remain in Saudi Arabia as long as necessary to counter Iraqi aggression, and Iraq insisted it would fight rather than withdraw from Kuwait.

"Time is much more likely to be on our side than it is on the side of the U.S. Defense Secretary Richard Cheney said, referring to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's nearly three-month-long occupation of Kuwait.

"We're there as long as the Saudis want us, as long as it takes to get the job done. And no one should underestimate our staying power," Cheney said of the U.S.-led force in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf.

Downwinders compensation wins approval

The Associated Press

DALLAS — President Bush signed a bill Monday authorizing payments of up to $100,000 for people who may have developed cancer from nuclear testing or uranium mining in Western States during the Cold War.

"These payments fairly resolve the claims of persons present at the test site and of uranium miners," Bush said in a statement. He signed the measure during a campaign trip here.

The United States conducted more than 200 atomic tests in the open air in both the South Pacific and in Nevada.

"Atmospheric testing of atomic devices is important to national security during the darkest days of the Cold War," Bush said.

Soviet leader says Nobel shows value of reforms

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, his eyes shining with pleasure, said Monday his Nobel Peace Prize reflected the world's recognition of the importance of his reforms "for the destiny of the whole world."

Gorbachev's $700,000 prize came as he delayed shutting the Soviet economy from a centrally planned to a market system.

While the Nobel recognition was bound to raise his international prestige, its effect was less certain in the Soviet Union, which is plagued by food shortages and ethnic strife.

"It will be an influence of an emotional and intellectual nature, because it is an appreciation of the cause we are all working for. All the more so because this award coincides in time with a most crucial stage in perestroika," he said.

Asked if there was the threshold of deep change and reforms, with regard to the economy's transition to a market system.

Gorbachev was expected to propose a new reform package Monday to the Supreme Soviet, but his speech was postponed until Friday.

The Soviet president said he received the news of the award from Norwegian Ambassador Dagfinn Stenseth at the Kremlin. Gorbachev said he would travel to Oslo to accept the award.

Some snow, rain fall across Northwest

The Associated Press
Rain fell across the Northwest on Monday, with snow in higher elevations, and rain also fell on the northern Plains. Rain, with some in the mountains, extended over Washington, the Idaho Panhandle and western Montana. In Oregon, showers in the northern Cascades were expected to turn to snow later in the day. Six inches of new snow covered Stampede Pass in Washington's Cascade range at daybreak, but snowfall discontinued during the morning. Showers also were scattered in east-central South Dakota and southwestern Minnesota. Elsewhere, showers also were scattered along the southern and eastern coasts of Florida. Jacksonville, Fla., warmed to a record-tying high of 90. Monday's early morning low for the lower 48 states was 19 at Butte, Mont. Temperatures around the nation at 9 p.m. EDT ranged from 37 at Yellowstone National Park to 93 at Beville, Texas.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved a defense spending bill Monday that leaves intact President Bush's 1991 budget request for the B-2 stealth bomber but trims spending on the Strategic Defense Initiative.

By a vote of 79-16, the Senate approved the $268 billion package for the fiscal year which began Oct. 1 after turning aside a serious challenge to Bush's B-2 program.

The legislation meets the levels set by Congress in the recently approved budget resolution and largely conforms to the military authorization bill setting spending ceilings adopted by the Senate in August.

Negotiators for the House and Senate will meet this week to hammer out a final version of the spending blueprint. The House-approved legislation slashes more than $2 billion from the SDI budget and stops production of the B-2 bomber at 15 planes, putting bargainers at sharp odds.

The Senate bill would reduce U.S. troop levels by 100,000, including 30,000 in Europe; would cut about 1963" when the United States signed and ratified the Limited Test Ban Treaty, Bush said.

The bill authorizes $100 million for a Radiation Exposure Trust Fund. Money for the fund would have to be appropriated in a separate bill.

The bill provides compensation for people who developed cancer in certain time periods and, depending on their type of cancer, in downwind areas of Nevada, Arizona or Utah from nuclear tests between 1951 and 1958 or between June and July, 1962.

Orin and uranium in Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming or Utah from 1947 to 1971.

Uranium miners are entitled to payments of $100,000. Persons exposed to radiation and who contracted specific diseases would be entitled to $50,000.

Courts have ruled the government was immune from prosecution because national security dictated a need for the uranium, but judges involved in the case urged the miners to seek redress from Congress.

Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah, an attorney who represented the eight miners in a federal lawsuit eight years ago, said the bill will benefit people he called "great patriots."

"They are victims of the Cold War, and they will now be compensated for their long suffering," he said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who co-sponsored the bill with Owens, said the formal apology contained in the measure "might mean more to victims than the money."

"People were sick of what went on and how callous the federal government seemed to be," Hatch said. The apology "should make people feel pretty doggone good."

One who agreed was Rula Orton of Parowan, Utah. Her 14-year-old daughter died in 1963 of leukemia, that doctors may have been induced by radiation, "I'm glad they're owning up to it," said Orton.

erage $81,934, would pay $1,173 more.

Those with incomes averaging over $428,000 — the richest 1 percent — would face a $13,951 tax increase.

Although other deficit plans are being considered, the House Democratic version is getting most of the attention now because of the administration's opposition and because it seems to have support from most of the party's House members.

President Bush, after meeting with the congressional Republican leaders, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas and Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, said Monday that they were "pretty much on the same wavelength" in preferring a House measure approved by the Senate Finance Committee. "What I'll do is say the action's in the Congress and I will take a look at what comes up," Bush told reporters on a campaign trip to Texas.

Unlike the House Democrats' plan, the Finance Committee version would avoid changes in income tax rates but would limit itemized deductions for people earning over $100,000.

The Finance panel's plan would raise taxes by just under 3 percent for families in the $30,000 to $50,000 income range; 1.9 percent for those between $50,000 and $75,000 and 3.5 percent for those between $100,000 and $200,000. The $200,000-plus group would pay 3.7 percent more.

Because of differences between the House Democrats' tax plan and the Senate Finance Committee, version will take some time to resolve, it becomes more likely that Bush will order the government shut down Saturday morning for the second time this month.

peace laureate, the late Andrei D. Sakharov, who was barred from collecting the prize in 1975; a decade later doctors told him he had leukemia.

Gorbachev recalled Sakharov from internal exile 18 months into his administration.

Many Soviets even those who support reform, are skeptical of Gorbachev's ability to transform the nation.

Historian Roy A. Medvedev, a member of the Supreme Soviet, said of the Nobel prize that "in internal affairs, it won't have much significance."

Most of about 14 Soviets interviewed at random in Moscow said that although Gorbachev may have helped reduce world tension, his contributions to his homeland were mixed.

"In international affairs, I think he's done everything right — it's domestically that there is disorder," said Andrei A. Tatischev, 23.

"I would be proud of him if he put things in this country in order. What happens there, outside our borders, doesn't interest me very much as an ordinary Russian person," Tatischev added.

Gorbachev said that when he took office, "the world was ripe for change. It had grown tired of the Cold War, the arms race; it's the hardships resulting from an overload of current problems facing the world community."

And I consider that academician Sakharov was fit the first ranks of searchers for the answers that agitated people's minds," he said.

Sakharov's widow, Yelena Bonner, who in an interview last week with a Norwegian newspaper compared Gorbachev to Napoleon, declined to comment on the award Monday.

Gorbachev appeared delighted as he stood before reporters, speaking calmly and slowly.

"I am deeply touched... I perceive this action... as a recognition of the immense value and the immense significance of the great cause of perestroika for the destiny of the entire world."

When he began his perestroika, we came to the conclusion that we could not continue to live as we had lived, that we needed deep transformations in all spheres of life," he said.

Correction

A story Saturday incorrectly stated Sen. Joyce McRoberts' position on indigent medical care and in-home health care. The Idaho Legislature decided last session to take over indigent medical care from Idaho counties, but no funding was provided.

McRoberts said she is working in the Senate Special Health-Care Committee on amendments to the indigent care bill that will determine funding levels and eligible medical expenses, which would include 50 percent dental care and 10 percent transplants, and some psychiatric services, depending on what the state can afford.

The in-home health care measure was funded when passed last session.

The Times-News regrets the errors.

Correction

A headline Monday incorrectly implied that the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory would become a candidate site for a national repository for high-level radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel if the Department of Energy investigation by the Federal Department of Energy at Yucca Mountain, Nev., is not selected. Until such a repository is chosen, however, spent fuel and high-level waste would remain in storage at INEL.

The Times-News regrets the error.

Supreme Court rejects free-speech argument in obscenity case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court turned aside free-speech arguments Monday and boosted the federal government's crackdown on obscenity.

The justices, over one dissenting vote, let stand the forced closing of three adult bookstores and nine video rental shops in Virginia under a federal anti-racketeering law.

The business owners, convicted of racketeering and selling obscene materials, had argued that the subsequent seizures of their properties violated their free-speech rights.

The seizures were carried out under provisions of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) that prohibited under that law may be forced to forfeit all assets and proceeds stemming from their illegal activity.

Justice Byron R. White voted to hear the business owners' appeal, but four votes are needed to grant such review.

In other action Monday, the court rejected the appeal of a former Air Force sergeant convicted in Washington state of aggravated as-

High court agrees to hear appeal of Idaho's Lankford, on death row WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court on Monday agreed to hear the appeal of convicted murderer Bryan Lankford, one of two brothers on Idaho's death row for a pair of 1983 murders.

The court said it will study one issue raised by Lankford's appeal: his assertion that he was wrongfully sentenced to death by a state judge after prosecutors and defense lawyers offered no evidence of any aggravating factors.

If the justices agree with Lankford, they could overturn his death sentence. They are expected to issue a decision by July.

It does not appear that the high court's decision would affect Lankford's murder conviction.

He and his older brother, Mark, were convicted in the beating deaths of Robert and Cheryl Bravencamp, a married couple on a camping trip. Prosecutors said the brothers wanted to steal the couple's van.

According to Lankford's appeal, the only issue that appeared to be open during his sentencing trial was whether he would ever be eligible for parole when sentenced to life in prison.

conduct for engaging in homosexual activity while knowingly infected with an AIDS-related virus.

Set aside a Minnesota man's federal conviction for burning an American flag during a 1988 demonstration in Minneapolis. The justices told a federal appeals court to reconsider the conviction in light of their decision last June that flag burning is protected political speech. Refused to let Texas, and by extension other states as well, ban deceptive advertising by airlines.

The justices let stand an appeals court ruling that only the federal government may regulate airline ads.

Unanimously ruled in a Georgia case that state officials need federal clearance under the Voting Rights Act of 1965, before holding elections for state judgeships.

Refused to revive a copyright lawsuit against the publisher of an unauthorized biography of L. Ron Hubbard, founder of the Scientology religion.

Turned down the appeal of two Peotone, Ill., policemen who said they were disciplined unlawfully for wearing earnings while on duty.

In the obscenity and racketeering case, the Virginia bookstore and video rental shop owners are the first ever prosecuted on racketeering charges stemming entirely from obscenity crimes.

Obscenity was added in 1984 to the long list of underlying crimes on which a RICO prosecution could be based.

The court's determination of the validity of post-judgment forfeiture in this case will have enormous impact upon the future of RICO obscenity prosecutions, both state and federal, lawyers for the convicted business owners said.

Dennis and Barbara Pryba, owners of the corporations that operated the bookstores and video shops in northern Virginia, were convicted of selling and distributing obscene magazines and videotapes worth about $105.

An employee, Jennifer Williams, also was convicted on obscenity charges.

Dennis Pryba was sentenced to three years in prison and five years probation, and was fined $75,000. Barbara Pryba was given a suspended sentence and fined $200,000. Ms. Williams was given three years probation and fined $2,350.

One of the corporations the Prybas owned also was fined $200,000.

'Masterpiece Theater' host joins in rental strike

NEW YORK (AP) — The host of 'Masterpiece Theater,' the head of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and the former editor of The New Yorker have something in common with some slum-dwellers — they're on a rent strike.

The well-to-do tenants are protesting conditions at their Fifth Avenue apartment building overlooking Central Park. Striking tenants include television host Alistair Cooke, former New Yorker editor William Shawn and museum director Philippe de Montebello.

The building is being converted into a cooperative and apartments much like those for whom some tenants are now paying $1,500 a month are on sale for more than $1.6 million, with monthly maintenance fees of $3,200.

The building's owner, Arnold Goldstein, said the rent strike is a typical ploy tenants use during co-op conversions to force owners to sell them their apartments at lower prices.

The building, where a doorman stands guard in a black-and-white marble-tiled lobby, does not resemble the apartment houses in sections of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx where rent strikes are common.

Their plight is not likely to elicit pity from the average New Yorker. In a city where a studio apartment can easily cost $1,000 a month, most tenants at 1150 Fifth Ave. pay less than $2,000 a month for their eight- and nine-room units, due to the city's rent-control regulations.

Official to visit to discuss MIAs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach will meet with administration officials on Wednesday to discuss the possibility of providing additional information about the nearly 1,700 Americans still unaccounted for from the Vietnam War.

The visit is believed to be the first ever to Washington by a Vietnamese official of his rank. The United States has never had diplomatic relations with the Hanoi government.

Thach will meet with the U.S. special envoy for the MIA-POW issue, Gen. John Vessey Jr., and with Ann Mills Griffiths, who heads a group of family members of the missing Americans. He also will meet with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Advocates warn: Top insurance firms shaky

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group said Monday that five of the nation's top 20 property and casualty insurance companies would be threatened with insolvency in the event of a severe economic downturn.

Three short-term factors were also examined: the amount of risk the company insures, compared with the size of its cushion against unexpected losses, the degree to which its investments could be converted into cash and the extent of its investment in high-risk junk bonds.

James Willis, a spokeswoman for the Hartford Insurance Group, said Hartford rates high in assessments by credible agencies. "It would surprise me that suddenly someone else could come in and use what appear to be similar criteria and announce that we are vulnerable," she said.

Ms. Claybrook said Public Citizen believes the standards used by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, a commonly accepted rating group for insurers, "are not tough enough."

Her group's report said a combination of low premium volume, high claims and weak return on investment could mean potential financial trouble for the companies. "The failure of just one insurance giant would overwhelm the state funds designed to protect policyholders," Ms. Claybrook said. "The result could be another taxpayer bailout on the model of the savings and loan industry."

Smith of AIG said he was "flabbergasted" that his institution would be considered vulnerable. He said AIG had a 17 percent return on equity in last year's annual report plus the highest premium volume of any commercial writer in the country, and our cash flow continues to be exceptionally strong.

Other firms included in the survey were Allstate, Cigna/INA, Chubb, CNA, Continental, Crum & Forster, Farmers, Fireman's Fund, Kemper, Lincoln, Nationwide, St. Paul, State Farm, Travelers and USAA. Only Allstate and State Farm failed to register any of the potential danger signals, the study said.

Pilots group launches effort to improve image

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Airline Pilots Association, stung by negative publicity over such incidents as the recent conviction of three pilots for flying while intoxicated, is beginning a television and radio campaign to burnish its members' professional image.

The campaign theme is "Safety is daily commitment." The $250,000 cost-for-airtime was paid for by individual contributions from 2,500 pilots, according to Captain Henry Duffy, president of the association, which is the pilots' labor union.

Duffy said many pilots are frustrated by the attention given the arrest and conviction of three Northwest Airline pilots for intoxication while flying.

One of them recalled he had come in a Young's the night before piloting a flight from Fargo, N.D., to Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport.

"We got quickly by 19,000 passengers and focus on an occasional slip," Duffy said, referring to the number of flights safely concluded each day in the United States.

"Pilots have the feeling that there is no understanding of how much training they undergo, or how many checks they are subject to, and how many physicals they've had to take," Duffy said.

The television commercial will be aimed at 150 times on CBS' Headline News from Oct. 22 to Nov. 18, and is aimed, Duffy said, at business travelers — "our key target audience."

Thornburgh rules paying ex-employee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh ruled Monday against the Justice Department lawyers in agreeing to pay $25,000 to a former department official who was investigated in the alleged disclosure of government secrets, say sources familiar with the case.

A senior career department attorney who reviewed the case for a judicial political appointee Roger Pilon, concluded there was sufficient evidence to have justified his firing and therefore he was not entitled to reimbursement for legal expenses, according to a memo to Thornburgh obtained by The Associated Press.

Beirut Green Line starts to disappear

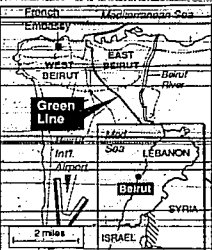

BEIRUT, Lebanon — President Elias Hrawi started dismantling Beirut's dividing Green Line Monday to unify what he hopes will be a militia-free capital after the defeat of rebel Gen. Michel Aoun.

Government bulldozers removed mounds of earth, rocks and utility obstacles from the Galerie Semaan crossing, on the highway linking Mostern south Beirut with the Christian suburbs of Hazmiyeh and Bab el Tini.

Militants then drove across the intersection, waving their hands to helmeted Lebanese soldiers and honking their horns in jubilation.

Lebanese and Syrian army engineering units removed mines from the intersection Saturday, when Syrian and Lebanese troops advanced behind a curtain of heavy air and artillery shelling to end Aoun's rebellion.

Syrian and Lebanese troops evicted Aoun's 11-month military in an eight-hour assault Saturday that killed 160 and wounded 800.

Apartheid ends in public facilities

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — A major apartheid law that barred blacks from public facilities for decades was formally scrapped Monday, but right-wing whites planned to exploit loopholes to maintain segregation.

In a separate development, police said factional fighting left eight blacks dead as rival groups battled with pistols and knives at a migrant workers hostel in Kempton Park, east of Johannesburg.

The Sunday night battle was the worst single incident since relative calm was restored to the black townships around Johannesburg three weeks ago.

Israeli leader: Criticism hypocritical

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Monday accused the world of hypocrisy, ignoring murders of Israelis while condemning Israel for killing 19 Palestinians in Jerusalem last week.

In a strongly worded warning to Iraq, Shamir also said any intervention in neighboring Jordan that upset that country's stability would bring swift Israeli retaliation.

Addressing Parliament, Shamir defended his Cabinet's rejection Sunday of a U.N. Security Council resolution urging a U.N. investigation of the deaths on the Temple Mount a week ago.

Freight train collides with bus, kills 19

BEIJING — A bus loaded with passengers hit a freight train, killing 19 people and seriously injuring 16 others, an official report said.

The bus plowed into the freight train, which was carrying coal, at a railroad crossing in Xinqi county, in eastern China's Shanxi province. The report in the Sunday edition of the Shanghai-based Wenhui Daily was seen in Beijing on Monday.

The report said 12 people on the bus were killed instantly. It did not say how many passengers the bus was carrying, how fast the vehicles were travelling, or who was at fault. Most railroad crossings in China are unmarked or poorly marked.

Town honored for saving Jews

PARIS — The little town of Le Chambon-Sur-Lignon now has a scroll of honor, and 30 villagers have medals, a half-century after they and their neighbors saved 5,000 Jews from Nazi persecution.

Israeli Ambassador Ovadia Sofer presented the Medals of Righteousness to townspeople who risked their lives as they sheltered Jews on the run from 1940 through 1944.

You gave a lesson of courage and dignity, but also a political lesson which statesmen of the entire world should retain and apply as a rule of conduct — don't give in to threats, don't let yourself be intimidated," Sofer said at Sunday's ceremony.

Fireworks kill 12

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Twelve people were killed Monday in accidents involving the manufacture of fireworks for this week's Hindu "Festival of Lights," a news agency reported.

A one-year-old boy, his mother and 90-year-old grandfather were killed by an explosion at an unlicensed fireworks factory in the south town of Chittapuram, Peshawar Trust of India said.

A's, Reds take the field tonight

CINCINNATI — Clearly, the Oakland Athletics are the best team in the World Series. Just listen to the Cincinnati Reds. Like Norm Charlton.

"It's a real honor for me to pitch against some of their hitters like Jose Canseco, Mark McGwire and Rickey Henderson," he said Monday. "Now, people get asked about home runs pitched against Hank Aaron and Roberto Clemente and maybe 20 years from now, people will be asking me how it was to pitch to Canseco and Henderson."

Or Paul O'Neill.

"I know they have some awesome players. All we can do is go out, play hard and have fun," he said. "Hopefully, it will be a close series."

Or this by Rob Dibble, from a few days ago: "No one expected us to do much this season. We won the National League pennant and no one can take that away from us, no matter what happens."

suffice it to say, the Athletics are not happy just to be in the World Series. And they

Team matchups - A9

On Monday, during workouts at Great Stadium, the Reds engaged in one of the most universal practices in sports — chatting up the other team.

"Everyone talks about their size and intimidation, but that doesn't win your games. You win games with wit and skill, and that's what they have," Eric Davis said.

A guy, any-like Jose Canseco.

"It's a great attitude with a lot of confidence in what he does," Davis accurately assessed. "If I had the ability he has, I wouldn't be afraid to say anything, either."

Whaddya say, Jose?

"The ball is really going to be carrying, so you'll see a lot of extra-base hits and, hopefully, some home runs mixed in," he shrugged. "I think we're going to get spoiled playing there."

Canseco did not lavish any praise on the Reds. None of his teammates did, either. They talked more about themselves.

"I take them seriously," Dennis Eckersley said, as if maybe some of the others did not.

If the A's are confident, they should be. This is their third straight World Series, so there are no jitters.

They won the championship last season, so they know how to defeat them. If the A's are awed by the A's aura of invincibility, who could blame them? Toronto, San Francisco and Boston were the last three teams to challenge them in the postseason, and Oakland won 12 of 15 games.

"I definitely think there's more pressure on Oakland," Reds manager Lou Piniella said.

They're talking about dynasties over there. They are a great club and they are expected to win. We think we can win. Anything can happen in a short series.

The Reds have seen what the Athletics did. Many of the Cincinnati players watched Oakland finish its sweep of Boston in the American League playoffs on the television screen on the center-field scoreboard at Three Rivers Stadium.

"I pulled hard for the Red Sox," said Todd Benzinger, a former Boston player.

"I really thought they might do better than they did. I was really hoping to have Jody Reed, Mike Greenwell and some of my other friends over here. Now, it's going to be Jose Canseco, Mark McGwire and guys you hate."

The Athletics admit they did not pay much attention to the Reds in the playoffs. In fact, they didn't even see much of them.

What happens in the first game might mean more than usual in the World Series because of the two teams' different attitudes and approaches.

A victory would do wonders for Cincinnati. A strong showing by Stewart and some Oakland home runs would get the Reds wondering just how invincible the Athletics are.

"I guess I'm one of the few guys here who can even remember the Big Red Machine," said Cincinnati's Ron Oester, a 34-year-old reserve. "I was in the minors when things were going great up here. Really, I compare the A's more to those other teams because of the power those guys have in their lineup."

Reds manager Lou Piniella says the pressure's on Oakland.

Guys like the Reds used to have guys like Johnny Bench and Tony Perez.

"Winning tomorrow will be a big key for us," said Perez, a Reds coach. "It would mean we could send a message we've beaten their No. 1 guy in postseason, Dave Stewart," Perez said. "I know they'll be much more relaxed than we will, because they're a veteran club. But our guys have been finding a way to get it done all year and I like our chances in this series, too."

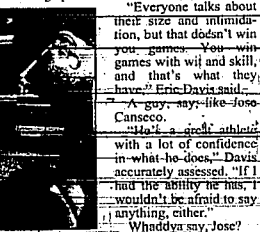

Willie McGee puts chap stick on his daughter's lips in Oakland before boarding the bus for the airport.

only fun they want is the kind that comes with winning it all.

"It is nice when you have expectations, and when they're high ones," Oakland manager Tony La Russa said.

Certainly, the A's expect to win when Game 1 starts Tuesday night. Clear skies are forecast for the matchup between Dave Stewart and former A's pitcher Jose Rijo.

The A's will be without shortstop Walt Weiss, whose left knee was torn up on a hard slide by Ellis Burks in Game 2 of the

Eagles score late to down Vikes 32-24

The Associated Press

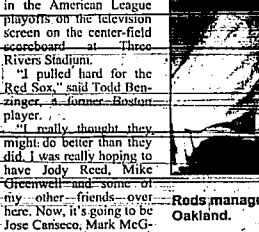

PHILADELPHIA — Rich Gannon and Chris Carter threatened to turn the NFL's Survival Bowl into a homecoming Monday night.

Scott Joyner, William Frizzell and some funny-bonused spoiled it. The Philadelphia Eagles beat the Minnesota Vikings 32-24 Monday night, scoring twice in a 59-second span late in the fourth quarter to overcome deficits of 12 points at halftime and nine with four minutes to go.

And Frizzell, who earlier had recovered a fumble and staged a drive with a sack, clinched it with an interception he returned 33 yards to the Minnesota 5 with just over two minutes left and set up Roger Ruzek's clinching field goal with 1:53 left. The 19-yarder was Ruzek's fourth of the game.

That left the Eagles at 2-3 and the Vikings at 1-5 in a battle of two playoff teams fallen on darker days. Minnesota's five losses have come by a total of 21 points.

Until the last quarter heroes, it was a night for Gannon, who

PHILADELPHIA — Calvin Williams learned his football on the playgrounds of Northeast Philadelphia, and Carter, cut by Philadelphia in September despite 11 touchdown receptions last season. Cavaliers on top 1st time ever

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — Coach George Welsh, who rescued Virginia's program from college football's skid row and nursed it back to health, moved the Cavaliers into the high end of the sport Monday.

"Maybe it's like Andy Warhol. Maybe this is our 15 minutes of fame," Welsh said after Virginia was elevated to No. 1 in the Associated Press poll.

It's the first time in the top spot for Virginia, which prior to Welsh's arrival in 1982 had only two winning seasons in the previous 29 years.

Under Welsh's command, the Cavaliers previously had expanded to include basketball, foreign sports as bowl games, 10 victory seasons and the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

Before this season, Virginia had not been ranked higher than ninth, but the Cavaliers, whose 610th start in their last since 1949 now have spent five consecutive weeks in the Top 10.

Virginia No. 2 last week, was a 31-0 winner over North Carolina State while top-ranked Michigan fell 28-27 to Michigan State.

The Cavaliers received 38 first-place votes and 1454 points from the AP's nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Charleston, Miami, a 34-0 winner over Kansas on Saturday, was second with

Best bets for District 22: Peavey, Morrison, Osborne

Voters in Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln Counties have been well represented in current Legislature, and next month's election offers them the opportunity to continue that pattern.

In two of the three races for District 22 legislative seats, incumbents are seeking re-election, and we see no reason to turn either of them out of office.

In the third race, a House seat is open because on the Legislature's brightest and most-respected lawmakers, Rep. Mack Neibaur, chose to retire. Although he is missed, voters in his district have the consolation of being able to vote for a candidate who shares Neibaur's conservative view of taxing and spending.

Senate: John Peavey
In his 16 years as a lawmaker, Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, consistently has been an articulate and effective spokesman for his district. He has been an outspoken advocate of the area's interests on such issues as water, the Saylor Creek Bombing Range and nuclear waste. He exhibits a genuine caring about the people of District 22.

Rep. Tom Morrison, R-Gooding, is finishing his first term in the House with a solid though not splashy record. His conservative belief in limiting the amount of lawmaking the Legislature ought to do means Morrison probably will never advance any sweeping proposals. He has sponsored only a few bills, but he has placed his efforts carefully: funding for the Clear Lake Grade, the minimum driving age, DUI enforcement.

Rep. Dwight Osborne
Taxpayers across the state will miss the influence Rep. Mack Neibaur has had on the Legislature. Neibaur employed his penny-pinching attitude and sharp intellect to help regulate state spending.

Osborne's opponent, Pattie Nafziger, has a good background in civic service and probably would be a dedicated legislator. But her liberal attitudes toward spending and taxation are out of step with District 22.

Reduce waste, foreign aid

It has been reported that the Democratic and the Republican Ways and Means Committee is seeking a $500 billion cut in the federal deficit in the next five years.

The plan dubbed the Barrostone Plan would soften Medicare cuts, shave the proposed gas tax by 1 cent, eliminate a series of energy and business tax breaks, drop the 2-cent-a-gallon tax on heating oil and discard a proposal to delay unemployment benefits by two weeks.

One can readily see that the new plan still has substantial tax increases.

Nothing has been said about the billions of dollars Congress does out each and every year in foreign aid.

Foreign aid has not made friends; in fact, many recipients are less than friendly. In many cases, the aid has benefited a few foreign government officials.

A General Accounting Office study made recently states Congress wastes $180 billion each and every year.

Those addressing the deficit problem evidently are not interested in stopping the $180 billion government waste or reducing foreign aid.

Stopping the $180 billion government waste applied to the deficit would reduce the deficit $90 billion in five years without a tax increase.

defabry not education boon

Many voters recently received a letter from darrell defabry telling us that it was imperative to vote for him in the upcoming ballot box. He promised that only he can rectify inequities in the school funding organization formula, though he doesn't say how he would do that. Perhaps because Mr. defabry only recently moved to here from California, he doesn't understand the historic complexities of the issue.

I do know that thanks to Sen. John Peavey, we here in Blaine County can at least count on receiving a small sum each year in state funding. Had it not been for legislation John worked hard to get passed by the Legislature in 1988, Blaine County schools would very likely be receiving no funding at all today.

I, frankly, feel that Mr. defabry has a lot of nerve billing himself as a champion of public education when he chooses to send his own children to an exclusive private school in Sun Valley which costs well over $6,000 per child.

Hire CPA, don't elect one

If I was starting over in life, I would be a school teacher, lawyer or certified public accountant. Being a school teacher always seemed attractive to me because when I thought I would like to be off my job, they were. Everyone has to have a lawyer except a lawyer because he already has one. Likewise, everyone has to have a CPA. He works hard and saves all those fees and gets rich collecting from others.

Gary Robbins is a CPA and a successful one, according to his political ad on TV. Yet, he is running a dairy over at Richfield. Not a modern, computerized dairy, according to the pictures, but one you run with a pitchfork and a milking stool. Also, according to the TV spot, Gary is the only CPA in the Idaho Legislature. If, in fact, we need a CPA in the Legislature, I wonder how this one lone person could find time to represent his constituents after being available as a CPA. If the Legislature needs a CPA, let them hire one - not elect one.

I wonder if Gary is like the old cigarette ad that stated "I would rather switch than fight" or was it the other way around?

Taxpayers should revolt

We need a national taxpayers' revolt in order to get the federal deficit solved. Only a large howl of rage from the voters will make Congress sit up and listen. The citi-

This huge grin with a body attached swept up and pumped my hand like a piston; then we both slumped down at the crushed hatbox we now shared.

I can't say he frowned, but the grin faded a foot and a half, but he quickly jacked it back out to full circumference. "Ho-Ho-Ho crashe!" and proceeded to tell me who he was, what he was, why he was what he was and how many kids, dogs and wives he had - and asking for my support as he wiped his hand on his shirt.

So's the ups and tude to me; if he lost, homeless, he would walk the streets, old folks would live in barns. I mean, he had us both bawling and I was fixing to tell that other louse and he had his hand on my shoulder (getting rid of the balance of the mustang on his hand in the process) and the flashback all went off. But suddenly I was alone, my old buddy left me, consoling a lady with a freshly wrenchered knee.

I went on down the hall until I walked into an electrically charged chain-link fence. And when I woke up to meet candidate Philbur...

zens the "can't do Congress" is alienating in droves must demand accountability and restructuring from this bureaucratic empire.

Congress has got the nation in the financial mess we are in. With their bureaucratic empire maintained by an army of about 32,000 invisible aides, our lawmakers focus more on re-election money, giving their constituents wide latitude to draft legislation plot strategy and even decide how to vote.

We need leadership to get out of debt, not more taxes. Neither President Bush nor Congress were concerned over the deficit when $4 million was spent on luxurious presidential airplanes, Congress became themselves huge pay increases and if heavy $44 million to be spent on sending many to Mars.

We need leadership that's got guts enough to cut out the waste in government spending, free grants and the special interest vote-getting programs. We need leadership in Congress that's concerned in getting a balanced budget instead of their favorite pastime passing about 2,000 commemorative resolutions a year such as "National Dairy Goat-Awareness Week."

When the president went before the nation on TV pleading in desperation for support for the summit budget, he didn't tell us he was asking the taxpayers to foot the bill for each of their pork barrel demands. Behind closed doors, big oil companies got $40 million for incentives and taxpayers got more gas taxes. Then Bob Dole had the nerve to tell those who rejected it they should pay tribute to their leadership. Where's the leadership in a sound spend budget?

We don't need more taxes on gas. The mom-and-pop beer drinker, cigarette smoker and the elderly didn't create the deficit, so why should they be singled out to pay off what the champagne drinkers in Congress got us into - such as the savings and loan crisis.

Taxpayers need to revolt and vote every incumbent out of office to get real leadership.

Military retirees ready to help

I am director of the Retired Affairs Committee at Mountain Home Air Force Base.

This committee, consisting of Army, Navy and Air Force retirees, now has assistance to approximately 12,000 military retirees in Idaho, eastern Oregon and northern Nevada. These retirees are standing by to assist the dependents of service personnel currently in the Midwest. Many of us have had duty assignments in that part of the world and have firsthand knowledge of the conditions that exist there. I would like to represent this to all of the family support programs provided by the various military services.

Our contact is Senior Master Sgt. Jack Wynngaard, Family Support Center, Mountain Home AFB, phone 828-2438. The residences in the vicinity of the family housing help will be called upon to provide the assistance needed.

Get '40s graduates together

I am writing you on behalf of the Twin Falls graduates from the 1940s. There have been 90 years for some and near 30 for others. Election charges misleading

Re: Mr. Burks' letter in the Oct. 12 paper. I did not own a used tractor in 1981 or '82 for a new model. Mr. Burks claims that I represented this tractor as free and clear. Mr. Burks further claims that he bank (he doesn't mention which one) notified him that they had secured interest in it and Mr. Burks' firm had to pay off more than $8,000. I assume that implement dealers have people sign these papers so if their trade-ins are not free and clear, the dealers can come back against them as any money owed. Why didn't Mr. Burks do so?

I filed a Chapter 11 reorganization (not a bankruptcy) eight years ago. At that time, I returned the tractor to Mr. Burks and received nothing for my equity. Mr. Burks had (1) the tractor so we could (2) the tractor so we could (3) pay him for it. I understand that no payments had been made. I heard nothing more from Mr. Burks. Mr. Burks knew we had filed but he chose to make no claim to the court. Again, why not?

Could it be that this is just another of the knave tactics being used in this Senate race? Mr. Burks has no doubt been very busy lately mailing us a journal. Anyone who was in agriculture during those years of crisis would hardly call it a "journal."

Eight years have gone by. I have been through six divorces. If there truly was an $8,000 loss, it seems to me that any competent businessman would have tried to recover that loss and that a man of integrity would have confronted me by phone or by mail - if not in person - sometime in the last eight years. Since the first I heard of this accusation when the newspapers called, the grooves are definitely in question.

One of the sad aspects of politics is that it is impossible to win a lawsuit for libel or slander if one is in an elected position. I hope the voting public recognizes what is actually going on here. As Mr. Burks said, "I was just a victim."

Politics hard on the electorate!

I stumbled into a political rally the other day - a meet-the-candidate type thing - and I say stumbled since they had run a piano wire a foot off the floor across the hallway in front of the pollux room I was going to walk by, and they had a third lady inside the room.

Anyway, I had my hot dog in my right hand so landed on my left wrist and sprained it, so I limbed on in. "What this business with the piano wire?" I gumbled.

The lady looked up at me sharply. "Oh, that's for the good of the country - these people spend a lot of money, you know, and... you voters just can't seem to appreciate it."

I felt abashed, apologized and held out my swollen wrist. "Uh, do you reckon...?" and she nodded, swiftly wrapping my other wrist with a bandage.

There, compliments of candidate Huber-Walker, she informed briskly, giving me the last smile a frog sees on an alligator. I turned to leave. She reached for her scissors. I went on in.

Kimberly students grateful

To Kimberly community residents: On behalf of the student body of Kimberly Elementary School, we would like to thank the School Board, the administrators, the school staff and the many parents of our school district that supported the passage of the bond for the middle school. Thanks to you, we will have fewer kids in each classroom. This will allow us to learn more because the teachers will be able to take more time with each student. The music room, the science room and the new multi-purpose area will provide the students with many opportunities.

As we all look forward to filling those new 12 classrooms, we feel challenged to make a commitment to you - the Kimberly community - to accept the responsibility of such a building and financial undertaking. We are excited to know that you are supportive of our education and, hopefully, all of us will carry this enthusiasm into our classrooms and schoolwork.

We are proud of our schools. Thank you for supporting us.

Twilegar, while trailing in race, scored strong points in debate

By Quane Kenyon
The Associated Press

BOISE — Although polls show Ben Twilegar trails in his U.S. Senate race against Republican Rep. Larry Craig, a couple of Craig's answers in their televised debate Sunday night could energize the Twilegar campaign leading into the final three weeks.

Twilegar, former state legislator and Boise City Council member, started off slowly in the hour-long debate with rather vague answers.

He also wasted a lot of valuable response time with anecdotes, instead of hammering home his major points.

But he struck hard with what has a major theme of the campaign, Craig's attendance record and got Craig to say that "absolutely not" had he ever missed important votes in Congress to make a paid speech to a special interest group.

After the debate, Twilegar's staff passed out documentation that on Sept. 13-14, 1983, Craig missed three votes while making speech to the American Mining Congress in San Francisco for which he was paid $7,000.

The documentation included a copy of the program, listing Craig as a speaker on "The Need to Educate an Anaphoric Public."

Craig said he could not remember if "I have watched that very closely over the years not to do that sort of thing. He didn't come up with the proof tonight. If he's making that charge, if he can prove it, fine. I can't say absolutely not. I will only say that I do not remember."

Craig, a 10-year veteran of the U.S. House of Representatives, got in his major points.

He made it clear that Twilegar is rather vague on wilderness, stressed that the Boise Democratic has been endorsed by the Sierra Club (Twilegar denied it), and was able to outline his program to help balance the federal budget, by limiting the growth in federal spending to 4 percent per year.

Twilegar's most compelling argument that he probably won the debate on points by just showing up.

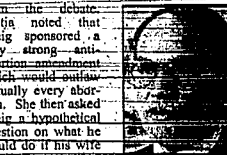

He's had trouble generating much excitement in the campaign, because Craig has kept his distance, with polls showing him with a strong lead.

Twilegar hasn't had much money for a contested U.S. Senate race, and certainly needed the exposure from a statewide televised debate. His staff contends he will have enough money to get his message out in the final weeks.

Craig, meanwhile, said he planned to leave Boise at 6 a.m. Monday to return to Washington, D.C., for important votes Monday afternoon, saying only that he would return to Idaho as soon as he could — with the campaign heading into its final three weeks.

Twilegar has been asking the same questions about Twilegar's four-year voting record on the Boise City Council.

LaRocco, Smyser has voted for tax boosts

The Associated Press

Democratic congressional candidates LaRocco says his Republican opponent, Skip Smyser, talks about "no tax increases" but his voting record indicates otherwise.

In a campaign appearance Monday, LaRocco said 28 times during his career in the Idaho Senate, Smyser voted for tax or fee increases.

"The point is not that all these taxes are not necessary but the point is that he's voted for all these tax increases for 10 years and now he wants us to believe his lips when he says he won't vote for any more," LaRocco said.

"The people have read his lips and they don't believe it," professional politicians who promise one thing and deliver the opposite," he said. "Idahoans are not going to fall for another political lie."

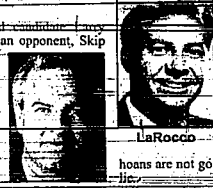

Smyser defended his 10-year record in the Idaho Legislature as "one of the thousands of tax increases proposed by the Legislature over the last 10 years."

if that's all that Larry LaRocco can use to off-set his calls for tax increases at the national level, I'll be happy to let the people determine who will be better at leading this country to a balanced national budget," he said.

Smyser said most of the fee increases were proposed by user groups, such as the Idaho Potato Commission, which used the money for industry promotion.

"I have voted for funding for emergency medical services, to help provide those needed services in rural areas of our state."

He said he and the GOP majority in the Legislature voted for higher value taxes to provide for the education of our students and to maintain critical services at a time when the state had a huge deficit.

LaRocco and Smyser defended their 10-year record in the Idaho Legislature as "one of the thousands of tax increases proposed by the Legislature over the last 10 years."

Changes pending for fuel tank insurance fund

BOISE (AP) — Faced with a report from actuaries that the plan department will go broke in just two years, state insurance and oil industry officials will join forces to find a way to make Idaho's underground fuel storage tank insurance fund work.

At the direction of House Transportation Chairman John Sessions, Rep. Driggs, following a day-long hearing Monday, Insurance Fund Director Steve Parris and officials of the industry, finance, and agriculture departments will make their recommendations for changes in the plan approved earlier this year within several weeks.

Earlier this month, Monroe Golleher disclosed the findings of independent actuaries that indicated the potential exposure of the Petroleum Clean Water Trust Fund for cleaning up contamination caused by leaking tanks insured under the fund would strip the fund's $21 million in anticipated revenues through September 1992.

The legislation enacted this spring in the wake of new federal requirements to reduce potential tank leakage and ensure owners can pay for cleaning up contamination provides the required $1-million maximum coverage through the trust fund that is financed by a tank registration fee and a one-cent transfer fee on each gallon of fuel sold in the state.

But in addition to providing the coverage for tanks specifically covered by the new federal requirements, the state law extended the possibility of coverage to above-ground storage tanks and small tanks for residential heating oil and on-farm fuel storage.

That addition of an estimated 100,000 tanks to the estimated 7,500 under direct federal regulation is what fueled the fund on Oct. 1.

Actuaries told the special legislative panel, headed by Sessions and Sen. Ann Rydahl, R-Idaho Falls.

Lawmakers pressed for universal access to the insurance plan since the transfer fee on fuel was being paid by everyone in the state. But without a significant increase in either the registration or transfer fee or a hike in the amount of a tank owner would have to pay before insurance would kick in on a clean-up, the coverage of the program will have to be scaled back.

The state and industry officials will work on a plan that would phase in the insurance over the schedule that the federal government has required tank owners to obtain it. That means coverage would be available for some 60 owners of 12 or more tanks by the April deadline next year and for owners of some 3,500 more tanks by their deadline next October.

Man charged with perjury

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A Post Falls man has been ordered to stand trial on a perjury charge after he allegedly lied about his financial records in a court case.

Deitz, 33, was seen driving away from the Kootenai County Courthouse in a Corvete after asking a judge for a public defender.

Deitz said in a sworn financial statement that he owned a Corvete, Ford Bronco, Jeep, Triumph, motorcycle, pickup truck, three speed boats and two utility trailers.

Idaho resident now on power council

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — An Idaho man has been named chairman of the Northwest Power Planning Council.

Jim Goller, who has served as vice chairman of the council for the past two years, was appointed to the council by Gov. Cecil Andrus in 1987.

The opening year will be an important test period for the council," Goller said. "With the energy surplus gone, we're entering a critical period. The region's utilities, utility commissions and others are going to have to take action quickly."

Accidents kill 2 Idaho men

The Associated Press

A traffic accident and a farm mishap have claimed the lives of two eastern Idaho men in separate incidents over the weekend.

In Blaine County, deputies said Michael D. Lukkin, 38, Ammon, was killed Saturday when the car he was driving ran off a road on the Bonneville-Jefferson county line. Lukkin was found dead in his car at about 3 a.m., said Jefferson County Deputy Sheriff Mike Miller. Police said the wrecked car was in a canal.

A Mexican national died Saturday from head injuries suffered in a farming accident near Firth.

Rogelio Pina, 20, of El Roble, Mexico, was last seen Saturday on the Farm on Fifth-Wappole Road around 5:30 p.m. when he was run over by a combine. Witnesses said the combine stopped and when it restarted, the driver backed up, crushing Pina's head.

Clerk in hot water

BOISE (AP) — Fish and Game officials say they are checking to determine if there is any damage to wildlife from oil which soaked into a small Ada County sewage treatment plant.

"The only thing we can do is take a look tomorrow and see what residual effect there is," said regional Fish and Game fish biologist Chuck Jensen.

John Bastida, Ada County clerk and a candidate for the county commission, said he was caught with a bottle of kerosene oil to kill a patch of thistles on his property.

Tense moments in Red Sea blockade

BOARD USS SAMUEL B. ROBERTS IN THE RED SEA (AP) — Iraqi crewmen of a container ship, crewed by a U.S. boarding team, leading to tense moments before the vessel's master agreed to change course. Navy officers say another reported incident, U.S. warships for the first time joined in a boarding party by "fast-roving" from a hovering helicopter onto the deck of an Iraqi ship in the northern Arabian Sea.

In nearly nine weeks since the U.N. embargo against Iraq began, the multinational force of naval warships has intercepted 2,350 commercial vessels, nearly 40 a day, U.S. military spokesmen said. They said they could not provide a breakdown by members of the multinational force, nor any updated figures on the number of boardings or diversions of ships.

The U.S. warships are part of an international force enforcing the U.N. embargo, which was imposed in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2. The majority of boardings have occurred in the Red Sea, mainly along the approaches to Jordan's key port of Aqaba.

Despite Jordan's assurances to the country, U.S. officers say some prohibited cargoes appear to be slipping through Aqaba and being taken overland to Iraq.

The Roberts, the frigate USS Elmer Montgomery, and Greek and Spanish frigates are serving as embargo gatekeepers for ships entering and leaving the Strait of Tiran, which leads into the Gulf of Aqaba.

The 3,600-ton Roberts, based at Newport, R.I., has conducted about 40 boardings itself and one previous diversion of the Sudanese freighter Blue Nile, in the Tiran Strait Oct. 5.

The tense confrontation occurred Friday when a combined Navy Coast Guard team from the Roberts boarded the 24,302-ton, Qatar-flagged container ship Bar'zan after following it for eight hours as it headed toward Aqaba.

Cmdr. John W. Townes III, captain of the

Roberts, said Sunday that some members of the Bar'zan's crew, identified as Iraqis, "verbally abused" the Americans, using "a lot of four-letter words."

He said the situation never got out of hand, but that the best thing is to step away, he said.

The Bar'zan, which had picked up cargo in the United States and Spain, agreed to divert to the Saudi port of Jiddah after its cargo manifest was "found to be unclear as to the ultimate destination" of some goods on board, Townes said.

U.S. military spokesmen said Marines from the amphibious landing dock ship USS Ogden climbed down by rope onto the Iraqi-flagged tanker al-Mutanabbi on Saturday after it was intercepted by the Ogden, the frigate USS Brewton and the Australian missile frigate HMAS Darwin.

Once the Marines secured the 66,155-ton tanker, inspection teams from the Brewton and Darwin boarded from small boats.

Fired Air Force general still at work in Pentagon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Michael J. Dugan, fired last month as Air Force chief of staff for disclosing U.S. contingency plans for war with Iraq, is working in the Pentagon as an aide to Air Force Secretary Donald H. Rice, a spokesman said Monday.

Dugan remains on active duty and has been working as a special assistant to Rice since shortly after Defense Secretary Dick Cheney fired Dugan on Sept. 17, said Air Force spokesman Col. Joe Purka.

The matter of Dugan's status arose after Cheney said during a radio interview in London on Monday that Dugan is "no longer in the Air Force."

Cheney was responding to an interviewer's question about whether the United States would consider targeting Iraqi President Saddam Hussein with military force as a way of reversing the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait. Among the remarks made by Dugan that led to his firing was that U.S. contingency plans included massive air raids on Baghdad that would target Saddam and his family.

Cheney said in the interview that U.S. policy forbids targeting of foreign leaders.

When reminded of Dugan's statement, Cheney said, "He's no longer in the Air Force."

Dugan, a 32-year veteran and former fighter pilot, maintains his rank as four-star general until President Bush formally nominates him for retirement and the Senate acts on the nomination. Purka said Bush had not yet made the nomination.

If the Senate does not act within 90 days of the date of Dugan's firing, his rank would slip to major general, Purka said. Major general is two notches below general.

Bush on Sept. 21 nominated Gen. Merrill A. McPeak to succeed Dugan as the Air Force's top-ranking officer.

In his position as special assistant to Rice, Dugan is assessing the Air Force's system for evaluating officers and is studying how military pilots and navigators the service will need in the future, Purka said.

Purka said Dugan is not accepting news media requests for interviews.

CSI students oppose smoke-free proposal

TWIN FALLS - College of Southern Idaho students responding to a recent survey opted against upgrading the college's smoking policy.

As a result, the Student Senate passed a resolution asking that the current policy not be changed, but that it should be enforced.

The Nauman of the Student Union reported the results of the resolution to the CSI Board of Trustees Monday night.

When asked whether the college should prohibit smoking altogether, 283 students or 56 percent said they did not want CSI to become a smoke-free school.

The current policy allows smoking in designated areas on campus.

Although 83 percent of the respondents said they were non-smokers, several of the non-smokers said they did not want to infringe on the rights of the smokers, Nauman said.

In the survey, 61 percent said they did not want the current smoking policy to change.

Man arrested as police look into Sunday break-in TWIN FALLS - A popcorn business was broken into Sunday night and police arrested a man they found in the bathroom with a bag of candy.

Lloyd Leroy Loucks, 23, who lives at Graecian Auto Court & Trailer Park, appeared Monday before 4th District Magistrate Judge Kevin C. Edwards on a charge of first-degree burglary.

Edwards set Loucks' bond at $3,000 and appointed a public defender to represent him.

Twin Falls police went to the Blue Lakes Mall when they received a 9:30 p.m. call from the mall's maintenance company, court papers say.

A supervisor told police he saw an employee enter Sadtler's Popcorn.

Three police officers found the metal mesh door to the business broken and open. They arrested a man they found in the bathroom with a paper sack filled with candy, court papers say.

Man charged in stabbing at Burley bar; 2nd sought

BURLEY - A man has been charged with aggravated battery in connection with a stabbing at a Burley bar Sunday night.

Albert Gonzalez Ochoa, 19, was in jail on the charge Monday, Cassia County Sheriff's Detective Dave Tracy said, and a warrant has been prepared Monday for a second man.

Juan Luis Rodriguez, 18, was stabbed seven times in a scuffle at Ken's Bar, 139 Main St. W., at about 10:15 p.m., Tracy said. Rodriguez stepped in to prevent a woman from being hurt in the fight, which began when a patron failed to show proper ID that he was 21 years old.

Rodriguez was stabbed by two people five times in the back, once in the right side and once in his right hand, Tracy said. He was taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital, where nurses Monday declined to report his condition.

Public meetings will explain new drinking water rules

TWIN FALLS - State officials will explain new federal public drinking water standards at a series of public meetings.

The new regulations cover improvements in treatment and monitoring of bacteria, water quality, lead, copper, nitrate, and organic and inorganic chemicals associated with health risks.

"We have 2,700 drinking water systems that will be affected by these new rules come Dec. 31," said Joe Nagel, administrator of the state Division of Environmental Quality of the Department of Health and Welfare.

Magic Valley area meetings, all at 7 p.m., will be Tuesday at the Heyburn Elementary School in Twin Falls; Thursday at the Old City Hall, Town Square, Ketchum; Oct. 23 in Aspen Building Room 108, College of Southern Idaho; Oct. 29 at the South Central District Health Department, 202-14th Ave. East, Coalinga; and Oct. 30 at the Jerome County Courthouse.

Written materials will be available at the meetings.

Victory Bridge cost goes up

By Phil Salmu
Times-News writer

The company's revised bid totaled $1,047,924. The original bid was $1,047,619.

TWIN FALLS - The Utah construction company that won the Victory Bridge contract made a clerical error that understated the winning bid by $60,000.

The City Council released the company, Wadsworth Construction, from the contract Monday night, and grudgingly accepted the firm's revised bid, meaning the Victory Bridge will cost $60,000 more than anticipated.

City Attorney Fritz Wendellich said it's unlikely the city could have legally bid the contract to its original bid.

If the error is due to a clerical mistake, or is made in good faith, the company probably cannot be held to the contract, Wendellich said. Additionally, if the error could cost the company its anticipated profit, the contract probably will not be considered valid, he said.

Wadsworth presented documents to the city that showed it expected to make a profit of between $40,000 and $50,000 on the $1 million project, Wendellich said.

Wadsworth said that error could have cost the company its profit, according to the documents.

The City Council approved the company's original contract two weeks ago, knowing the error had been made.

Wadsworth evidently was willing to go to court if the city had tried to enforce the contract, Wendellich said.

Nelson wins approval for circuit court

By The Times-News and the Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Senate has confirmed the nomination of former Twin Falls attorney Tom Nelson to the 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals.

Sen. Bob D'Amico, R-Idaho, said in a phone interview, "I thought it would go smoothly, it just took a long time."

Nelson was nominated last July to fill the vacancy created by the death of Blaine Anderson in 1988.

The Senate confirmed him late Friday, but the action was not announced until Monday by retiring Republican Sen. James McClure.

"Tom's wealth of experience in water and natural resources issues will be a great asset for the 9th Circuit," McClure said in a news release.

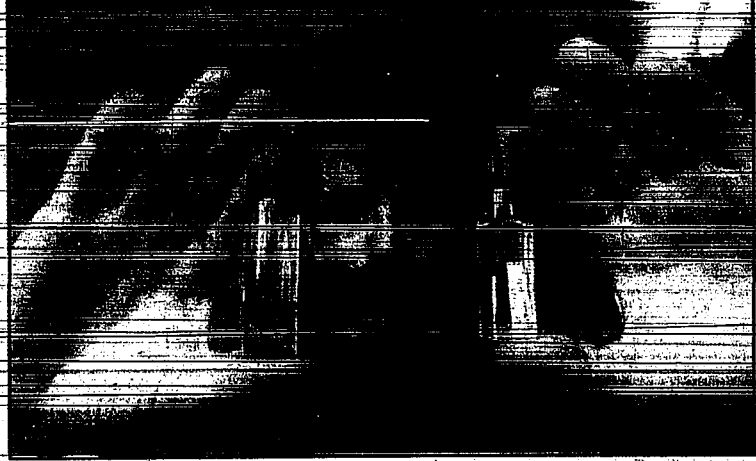

Nelson is a partner in the Twin Falls law firm Nelson, Rasholt, Robertson, Tolman and Tucker. He works in its Boise office. He has previously served as a deputy state attorney general.

Although the 9th Circuit Court is based in San Francisco, Nelson said he'll continue to live in Boise and will travel hear cases.

He'll resign from private practice before being sworn in sometime in November, he said.

"It's going to be a challenge and I'm looking forward to meeting that challenge. When they carry me out the door I want to be remembered as a good lawyer," he said.

The 9th Circuit, the nation's largest judicial circuit, covers seven western states, including Idaho, as well as Alaska, Hawaii, Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands.

Cavers find unusual insects

Spelunkers capture rare and possibly new creatures

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Local cave explorers have located five cave adaptive creatures that may be types never seen before.

A group of six spelunkers stumbled upon the insects during an outing recently. The spelunkers are part of a group, called Magic Valley Grotto, that has been exploring and surveying lava caves in the area in cooperation with the Bureau of Land Management.

The cave creatures have been cataloged by the BLM. But a new species must be confirmed by an entomologist experienced in cave insects, according to Dennis Fielding, a BLM entomologist. For verification of a potential new species, larvae would have to be found and raised in a controlled environment. Fielding said.

The spelunkers' specimens will be sent to the Department of Interior, then to an entomologist, who will identify the creatures, or verify they have never been found anywhere else before.

There are only five entomologists in the world qualified to identify cave adaptive insects, and the closest one lives in Canada, David Johns, director of the exploration group, said.

The spelunkers have spent their entire lives in total darkness inside the cave. As a result, they have neither eyes nor optic nerves, but have longer antennae than most insects, Johns said.

The specimens were found in a local cave. But Johns declined to give the exact location. He said the cave has a 60-foot vertical "drop" at the entrance, which makes it very dangerous for anyone other than experienced cave explorers to enter.

Also vandals often enter newly discovered caves announced through the media and "destroy the natural beauty" of the caves with litter and graffiti, Johns said.

One of the albinos insects discovered by the group resembles a silk worm - it spun an intricate web, crawled back along each span of the web to check each crossing point, then retreated to "half its body length until an insect became entangled in the web, Johns said.

Then the worm quickly shot its suckled-like mouth into the insect and sucked out the body fluids, Johns said.

The group of adults - Dave LaSalle, Chuck Carter, Vernon Ray, William Aitchcock, Paula Purletti with the BLM and Johns - also found an albino spider, a creature resembling a centipede, another that looks like a cricket and several unusual looking gnats.

Rare blind Harvestman spiders were also found in the cave. These spiders are extremely rare - they are known to inhabit only three caves in the world, Johns noted.

Racing group makes pitch for race track near Jerome

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The Jerome Horse Racing Association presented plans Monday to build a permanent race track on Bureau of Land Management property south of Interstate 84 in Jerome County.

At a BLM public meeting Monday to consider a proposed land use plan for the Bennett Hills Resource Area, members of the association said they want to build the track east of U.S. Highway 93 and south of the door said Tom Larson, president of the association.

The facility would have grandstands, restrooms and a parking lot, Larson said.

A long-term lease would be needed to use the land, which the BLM lists in its "disposal" class, according to Paula Purletti, an outdoor recreation planner for the agency.

BLM will put together a proposed land-use plan for the Bennett Hills area, which includes Jerome, Blaine, Elmore, Cassia, Gooding and Blaine counties, but that will take several months, Purletti said. Declining how the land is to be used will depend on public response.

Multiple uses of the area proposed for the race track would be a good possibility with shared use of restrooms and parking areas, according to Larson.

"This won't happen soon. It will be a five- to three-year project just to get it started," he said.

Jerome officials arrive at schedule for kindergarten center construction

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Construction of Jerome's kindergarten center is back on track following an agreement Monday among city, county and school officials.

They worked out a building schedule that will satisfy city and county building regulations and allow permits to be issued for construction of the center at the end of 30th Street.

A building permit for the 4,752-square-foot facility, located outside the city limits but within the city's impact zone, had been held up because the project did not include several items required by city code.

Under Idaho law, the area of impact is the water and sewer line extension and utility territory just outside the city limits that is subject to city planning and zoning regulations.

Kirk Hansen, Jerome County building inspector, told the district the center would need paved streets, gutters, fire hydrants and a sewer line installed before it could continue with construction of the center.

"After the meeting this morning, I did sign the application for a permit and I will issue the permit as soon as I receive a letter from the city telling me they agree they'll allow the School District to do and not do," Hansen said Monday.

The project's contractor, Paulson Brothers Construction of Twin Falls, will put in small fire hydrants in about two weeks, said City Administrator Larry Umke. That cost is included in the bid price of $243,307 for the center, according to Mike Gibson, School District business manager.

The city is documenting the phased construction plan and will keep close contact with the School District to be sure we are in full support of the kindergarten project," Paine said.

"We are delighted with the cooperation of the mayor and council in helping get the facility off the ground," said Superintendent Wilbur Brown. "The winter is just what it is, we can keep the construction on schedule."

Grandmother works hard in low-budget campaign

While journalists and political junkies are focusing almost exclusively on the state race, a slightly-built, 70-year-old grandmother is quietly campaigning to become the first woman to lead Idaho's County seats to the Statehouse in December.

She's Merle Stoddard, a retired speech pathologist with an arduous of community service awards and family roots that were planted in Twin Falls County generations ago.

She's a first-time candidate with no previous political experience. Her low-budget campaign depends upon a few handmade signs and lots of shoe leather.

Stoddard's goal is to knock on every door in the county before Election Day. That includes nursing homes.

When she meets potential voters Stodard explains that she became a candidate after her opponent, Rep. Leo Barnes, R-Buhl, voted with the minority against the repeal of Idaho's trigger law. The dormant statute attached original penalties to abortion throughout the U.S. Supreme Court reverse its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

After discussing her support for reproductive rights, Stoddard reveals that she doesn't have much background on other issues. But she insists that she does have "common sense" and is "willing to learn."

"I've been to meetings with Merle, sat on her at the state politics meeting, she took notes furiously, asked good questions," said Mark Stubbs, former Twin Falls County GOP chairman, who is himself a candidate for the Idaho House of Representatives.

"She's a dedicated candidate," Stubbs said. "But on the other hand, Leo Barnes is a hard-working incumbent."

Barnes, a 57-year-old dentist, is taking Stoddard's challenge seriously. Three weeks ago, Barnes spent a week away from the office attending a legislative meeting on health-care issues. But he can't afford to leave his business to campaign, so Barnes relies instead on a little on-the-job politics.

"All the people who come in needing their teeth worked on, all go home with a yard sign," he said.

Barnes maintained a low-profile during this year's legislative session. He didn't sponsor bills of any significance and spent most of the time with committee recommendations.

Although he has not done any formal fund-raising, political action committees have been eager to help the first-term incumbent.

"We've been asked them for anything," Barnes said. "I've volunteered to send a little here, a little there."

The area's reluctance to support a Democratic and well-placed ads late in the campaign should produce an overwhelming Barnes majority.

But, local pundits aren't ready to call the race just yet.

Hunter finds remains of missing woman

BOISE (AP) — A hunter has found the partial remains of a Boise, Idaho, woman, sheriff Craig Landers said Monday.

A hunter late Sunday afternoon discovered the skull of Cathy Enoch, 22, in the forest about four miles southeast of Clear Creek Lodge, Landers said. Mrs. Enoch, 22, and her boyfriend, 23-year-old Gerard Middlemist, were missing since May 20.

She was identified by dental records and X-ray charts. Forensic scientists will review the remains more closely.

Bridge

Wadsworth's revised bid "was $200,000 lower than the second-low bid," one City Engineer Gary Young told the council. The bridge will be built with a $700,000 federal grant, a $500,000 state grant and $200,000 raised from tax-increment financing from the expansion of Universal Frozen Foods.

It's other-business at its biweekly meeting, the council accepted an ordinance requiring landscaping and setback requirements along the city's major streets.

A public hearing on the ordinance was planned, but no one showed up.

The ordinance designates setbacks and landscaping requirements from center lines of arterial and collector streets, specifies landscaping requirements and prohibits signs from protruding over the public right of way.

An advisory committee made up of City Council members, Planning and Zoning Commission members, Chamber of Commerce representatives and interested citizens had worked on the proposed ordinance.

That committee had suggested a 10-foot wide landscaped strip separating sidewalks from business parking lots. The group suggested the strips contain "plant life" and that they landscape on a lot longer than 40 feet must have a 1-foot berm.

The Planning and Zoning Commission had recommended the landscaped strip be 12 feet wide and that the term "plant life" be replaced to also include "grass." The ordinance also wanted at least 50 percent of the landscaped strip to be planted grass.

The council said 10 feet was wide enough for the landscaped strip and rejected the figure of 50 percent grass, saying landscaping does not have to be grass to look good. The ordinance was then passed.

Campaign

"We really consider" her a formidable opponent," said Dave Munroe, Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee chairman.

Munroe's Democratic counterpart agrees.

"I would say, out of strictly the Twin Falls County candidates, she's running the strongest campaign," said Gary Nielsen, chairman for the county Democrats. "She's been active in the community for a long time. A lot of people know her."

They protest too much. You're either part of the problem or you're part of the solution, Idaho's congressional delegation can't seem to decide where they belong in the current debacle involving the federal budget.

For Senators Homer H. Hickam Jr. and Steve Symms and Congressmen Larry Craig and Richard Stattling have pumped out more than 100 press releases since Congress took up the deficit mess yesterday.

Many of these statements are faxed via telephone to this newspaper with duplicates following the next day by mail.

Japanese students seek out CSI for farm studies

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Young Japanese farming students will soon be coming to the College of Southern Idaho to learn agricultural business practices.

The new concepts could help them survive financially once huge Japanese government farm subsidies are maneuvered over the next few years.

CSI professor told the school's trustees Monday night.

About 10 Japanese students could come to the campus by early November, said Jeff Fox, assistant professor of English and languages at CSI.

The students' education will be paid by Nagata Prefecture, which is one of the Japanese provinces. Nagata Prefecture is located west of Tokyo.

Professors officials hope that through the young farmers they will be able to modernize a farming philosophy that blends more on muscle than machinery.

Traditional Japanese farmers are unlikely to change their methods, but the next generation of farmers holds promise, Fox said.

Two years ago, Takuma Saito, a business consultant representing Nagata University, a Japanese newspaper, a farm cooperative and other clients, wrote to more than 100 col-

Public hearing on boat speed controls canceled

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A public hearing on possible wake control and speed regulations for motorboats on the Snake River from Pillar Falls to the Perrine Bridge apparently has been canceled.

The man who scheduled the hearing, Twin Falls County Parks and Recreation Director Darrell Heider, was out of town last Friday and Monday. But his secretary, two county commissioners and a member of the county Parks and Recreation Commission said the hearing would not be held.

The hearing was set for Wednesday at 7:30 a.m., but this date never was determined. Heider had said it probably would have been at the College of Southern Idaho.

Some area canoeists have expressed disappointment in the proposal to allow motorboats in the Snake River. Pillar Falls is the last good part of the river left for canoeing.

The hearing would have given those people, and others who favor

LaRocco, Smyser hold even in funds

BOISE (AP) — Republican Skip Smyser kept pace with Democrat Larry LaRocco in fundraising during the summer, and he now pumped $30,000 more into his bid to claim Idaho's 1st Congressional District next month.

Campaign finance reports filed Monday with the Secretary of State's office showed the GOP state senator from Parma raising nearly $174,000 during the July-September period to bring total receipts for the campaign to $267,000.

Smyser has received $150,000 from individual contributors and another $110,000 from special interest political action committees that support the campaign with $6,200 coming from party committees, mostly the National Republican Campaign Committee.

LaRocco, who filed his statement last week, reported generating another $171,000 in contributions during the summer quarter to push total receipts to his campaign over $234,000. His financial support for the campaign was $200,000 coming from party committees, mostly the National Republican Campaign Committee.

In what has been considered an extremely tight race for the seat, LaRocco is vying to run for the U.S. Senate. Smyser has spent over $270,000 compared to LaRocco's $270,000, but both have debts.

LaRocco owing nearly $60,000 and Smyser almost $56,000.

And going into the final five weeks of the campaign, LaRocco had more than $46,000 in cash on hand while Smyser's bankroll totaled $21,000. But the Republican was set to benefit later this week from a major fund-raising visit to Boise by Vice President Dan Quayle.

leges throughout the U.S. to find a suitable agriculture-based college for the program.

Baito's clients chose CSI over several other agricultural colleges because of the Magic Valley's acceptance of "values," Fox said.

"It was really quite a coup," Fox said.

The students will live on farms where they will learn when it is prudent to buy a new tractor or more-

Japanese farming, which is highly labor intensive, is not competitive on the world market largely because of its expense, Fox said.

Farms are typically between 10 to 20 acres. Many Japanese farmers work the land part-time, with other jobs in big cities, Fox said.

Fox, who lived in Japan and taught English there, was among a group that met with farmers, college professors and government officials for two weeks in August to discuss the plan.

The program could expand to include as many as 50 Japanese students at a time and be copied by other prefectures, once it is proven successful, Fox said.

In other business, the board set the date for trustee elections for Dec. 18. Dr. Thad Scholes is the only trustee up for reelection for the six-year term.

motorboats in that stretch of the Snake, a chance to speak.

No arrangements to hold the hearing have been made," Commissioner James Fraley said Monday. "It is canceled as of right now."

Heider had said in late September that the hearing would take place at CSI. At that time a specific building and room for the hearing had not been arranged.

County Commission Chairman Marvin Hempleman seemed surprised last Friday when asked about the hearing, being canceled. After making a phone call to Heider's secretary, Hempleman confirmed that the hearing would not be held on Wednesday.

The commissioner said, however, a hearing will be held eventually.

"We have not got one letter in favor of letting motorboats on the river down there," Hempleman said.

The commission has received about 10 letters on the subject.

The county has accepted a state grant to build a boat ramp and other facilities along the Snake as part of the proposed Centennial Park. The grant money comes from gasoline taxes paid by motorboat users.

In accepting the grant, the county cannot restrict the types of boats that would use the ramp.

The land for the Centennial Park is being bought by the Rotary Club, which has raised about $85,000 toward buying seven acres. The county could have title to the property by next spring.

Wendell suit targets highway commission

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A lawsuit has been filed against the members of the Wendell Highway District Commission by two former employees.

Lenny A. Meyers and David Henцеле charge that WHD commissioners Verlan Mason, Neal DeWitt and Mitchell Bunn terminated their employment in May without giving them a reason or a hearing they were entitled to by law.

A government entity such as a highway district may not fire public employees without reason, said attorney Robert Bartlett of Wendell, who is representing Meyers and Henцеле.

"Their job performances were satisfactory," Bartlett said. "There was no reason to fire them."

Meyers and Henцеле are seeking in excess of $20,000 each, Bartlett said, and a jury trial has been requested.

The WHD board of commissioners met in an executive session Thursday to discuss the litigation with its attorney, Robert Williams of Jerome.

In the regular commission meeting on the executive session, Mason said the board has no comment on the charges.

Williams said Friday that he also does not want to discuss the case.

"I'm not going to comment on it except to say that it is our belief that the commissioners acted properly in everything that they did, and that will be a portion of our defense," Williams said.

In their complaint against the commissioners, Meyers, 45, and Henцеле, 43, contend they never violated any of the provisions of the district's written employment policy and that their job performances were "at all times satisfactory."

Meyers and Henцеле claim that during their employment, which began in July of 1989, they were never reprimanded, suspended, placed on probation, discharged, warned or had any other adverse employment action taken against them.

The complaints say that Idaho law imposes an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in the employer-employee relationship.

Meyers and Henцеле say the commissioners breached this implied covenant by failing to offer them a hearing, prior to discharging them and by refusing to tell them why they had been fired.

"It is our contention that they (the commissioners) can't do that," Bartlett said.

"Depending on the type and classes of employees that they, in our belief, were, there did not need to be just or reasonable cause for their termination," Bartlett said.

Meyers and Henцеле are claiming damages for loss of wages, retirement funds and insurance. They seek attorney fees, special damages in excess of $10,000 and consequential damages in excess of an additional $10,000.

Bartlett said the highway district has 20 days to file an answer to the complaint unless there is a settlement offer.

Williams declined comment on what answer he plans to file.

"When we file an answer it will be in the public record," he said.

Rabies case no reason for worry, says official

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

JEROME — A single case of rabies here last month is no cause for alarm, but it is a reminder that danger exists, a health district official says.

"You can expect rabies to be present in animals," said Terry Schultz, environmental director of South Central Health District. "People just need to exercise caution."

Bats have been just about the only verified Idaho carriers of rabies found in the past two decades, said State Epidemiologist Fritz Dixon.

Heider had said in late September that the hearing would take place at CSI. At that time a specific building and room for the hearing had not been arranged.

In the Jerome case, a man swatted and captured a flying bat that was "displaying erratic behavior" and brought the animal to the health district office for testing, Schultz said.

Idaho has not had other animals such as skunks, raccoons or foxes infected with rabies "in the recent past," Dixon said. "These animals are typically more aggressive than the mostly docile bats, he said."

However, over the past 30 years health officials have documented a westward movement of rabies-carrying raccoons, skunks and foxes that began in the Appalachian Mountains.

The spread of rabid raccoons, skunks and foxes halted in eastern Montana until about five years ago, when the incidence of rabies rapidly spread to western Montana.

"That has given us concern that we will see rabies in other animals like skunks and raccoons," Dixon said.

State officials began examining road-kills in eastern Idaho for signs of rabies, but have yet to find a rabid animal among them, Dixon said.

If cases in Idaho begin appearing, the state would probably recommend a six-shot vaccination series, he said.

But the recommendation for shots would vary in each case, Dixon said.

When an animal is caught, it can be examined and shots would only be necessary if the animal is infected, he said.

If the animal escapes, the decision to give the injections would depend on the circumstances of the bite, Dixon said.

A resident of rural Idaho returned home late one night to find what he thought was a pack of stray dogs snoring on his porch, Dixon said.

The man proceeded to kick the animals in the ribs to chase them away and he was bitten in the process. When he turned on the porch lights, he discovered that the animals were actually coyotes.

Dixon said he told the man he didn't need shots because he had cornered and attacked the coyotes and it was natural for them to react.

A bite resulting from an encounter with a nocturnal animal such as a bat or a coyote during the daytime would likely require shots, he said.

Boise New Kids appearance means fans going berserk

By Julie Fenslow
Times-News writer

Forget Barbie dolls, Nintendo games or their two front teeth: All new Kids on the Block fans want for Christmas are tickets to the group's Feb. 17 concert in Boise.

The concert is four months and a day away, but New Kids mania is expected to reach fever pitch in the weeks leading up to the event.

Rose Ward, co-owner of Sheri's Western Collection in the Lynnwood Shopping Center, said at 11:45 a.m. Monday she'd had 100 callers since 8:30 a.m. inquiring about the availability of New Kids tickets.

"It's mostly parents," Ward added. "The kids are in school, so mom's taking care of it."

Sheri's is the only Boise State University Pavilion ticket outlet in the Twin Falls area. The store's phone lines were also jangling Monday with questions about tickets for upcoming concerts by Alabama and ZZ Top.

Altogether, Ward logged 200 calls on the three concerts. "This phone has not quit," she said.

Ward said Sheri's will have only 30 tickets—its standard allotment—for the New Kids show, and that the tickets probably won't arrive until late morning or early afternoon. But she said she'll accept orders as they come.

And despite all the calls, Monday, Ward said she doubts there will be lines for tickets when Sheri's opens at 9 a.m. "I've never had a waiting line for tickets," she said, adding that most people know the store has only a few seats available.

New Kids fans will have a better chance at tickets by calling the Pavilion direct, Ward said. The Pavilion number is 385-1766, and six lines will operate today. The phone order fee is $1.50, with a 10% charge for each ticket.

Tickets must be charged to a major credit card.

Other ways to buy New Kids tickets:

- Tickets will be on sale at 14 Select-Seat outlets, one is at the Albertson's in Mountain Home.
- Other outlets are in Boise-area Albertson's stores, at the Pavilion and in the Boise State University Student Union.

Fax orders will be taken. The machine will be turned on at 10 a.m. (its number is 385-1900), and orders will be handled as if they were phoned in, including the $1.50 per ticket machine charge.

Mail orders also will be accepted. Orders should be sent to the BSU Pavilion 1910 University Drive, Boise, ID 83725.

Ward said Sheri's may try to obtain additional tickets later in the week if any are available. But Pavilion officials expect that the 11,777 seats for the New Kids appearance will probably sell out quickly.

The New Kids on the Block are today's kids' what Elvis Presley, The Beatles and Donnie Osmond were to teeny-boppers of past generations.

The five-member ensemble has sold more than 15 million copies of its first three albums. The Kids' fan club claims more than 100,000 members, and the group's publicist says the band receives about 30,000 fan letters every day.

Reader urges that AIDS patient let family know about condition

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Suramericano" who wanted to know if he should tell his family that he had tested HIV positive for the AIDS virus. I cast my vote for a resounding YES.

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

Our son tested positive nearly three years before he felt any ill effects from the disease. I, his mother, learned about his illness only 23 days before he died. He had lost a little weight—that's all.

When he first learned that he tested positive, he told his sister, who was his best friend. He swore her to secrecy because he didn't want to worry me. I could never understand why he had episodes when he would run a high fever, miss a day or two of work, and be fine the next day. He had his own home, so I didn't know the suffering he endured. If only he had told me, perhaps I could have helped him physically and spiritually. He needed no financial help because he was a very successful decorator and had the best insurance available. God took him from us a year ago.

I know that he thought it best that I didn't know, but it hurt me more not knowing. He deprived me of the opportunity to tell him how very proud I was of him and how much I loved him.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Suramericano's" letter wondering whether to tell his family that he had tested positive for AIDS, I can offer the viewpoint of a family member who wasn't told until it was too late.

My dear cousin chose to tell only his parents and siblings, and then only after the AIDS virus had become active. By the time he died, I could only guess why he was ill, but I'll never know for sure.

I respect my cousin's right to make this decision, but knowing now that he was gay and died of AIDS doesn't cause me to cherish his memory less. However, many things continue to haunt me—the visits I would have made, the things I might have said, the understanding that was never achieved. Was he ashamed? Or did he think I would be ashamed? Was it really necessary for him and his immediate family or to be so isolated during his final or death?

My choice as a family member would have been to know the truth (however painful) and to have dealt with it. It would have been far better to have been there, offering words of love, knowing I did everything I could—than to have been shut out.

HURT IN SAN FRANCISCO

READERS: The few letters I received advising "Suramericano" not to tell his family were different variations on the same theme.

DEAR ABBY: Before giving "Suramericano" any advice, I would have to know what kind of relationship he has with his family. It is anything like mine, I would vote no. Here's my story:

I am a gay male. I've always been a good son and didn't want to live a lie, so when I was 17, I told my parents. I was gay, hoping they would not judge me. Our relationship with me for moral support, explaining that no one chooses his or her sexuality. It is something inborn in all of us. They refused to believe him. Instead they quoted Scripture, labeled me a sinner, and told me I was no longer their son!

I envy my gay friends whose parents accept and love them just the way they are. Unfortunately I wasn't that lucky.

80-year-old craftsman creates wooden toys despite blindness

CLIFTON, Ill. (AP) — The spinning drill bit bites into soft pine an inch from Ed Behems' left index finger, flaring its mark safely over and over.

His skill in creating wooden toys would be remarkable for anyone, but Behems' blindness makes his work without seeing what he's doing. The 80-year-old craftsman is blind.

AP Wirephoto

There is no hint that he can't see his work in the finished wooden tractor-trailer trucks, the small railroad steam engines, the pickup trucks, wheelbarrows and wooden animals he builds in his basement shop.

"I know just about where everything is—unless somebody moves it," Ed Behems says, moving carefully through the narrow and twisted passages in his workshop where the musty smell of cedar and the spicy aroma of freshly worked pine fill the air.

Blindness attunes Ed Behems to the smoothness of his toys.

craftsman from Champaign visited him and suggested he try building birdhouses.

"Before," he says, "I'd only look at the pieces."

He says he finds joy building toys, children's rocking chairs, tables and doll cradles. He sells his work, but only for enough to cover his expenses.

And he looks ahead to new challenges.

Now Behems has a long waiting list of people who want his custom-built bird houses to give as holiday gifts.

His interest in toys originated a quarter, when he was growing up on a farm in Illinois.

In his mind lives the blueprint for a working steam threshing machine—a scale model of the one his brother, Harry, used to own. It will be 18 inches long and an alcohol burner will make the steam.

The thresher will be metal and Behems will use the metal-working skills he developed during a 31-year career at a Kankakee factory.

"When I was a kid you know there wasn't too much money in those days. I had to make my own toys," he said. "I made trucks—a whole construction outfit. Even a crane. And I made a Caterpillar tractor and put an alarm clock (mechanism) in it to drive the thing."

His blindness makes him an even better toy maker, because how he feels—the contours—and tests—the smoothness of finished surfaces with his hands made extra-sensitive by his

Drive is short

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Last week's Red Cross blood drive fell 45 pints short of the 120-pint-per-day quota, but many people—including 14 high school students—donated for the first time.

Marge Olson, blood chairwoman for the Red Cross Sawtooth Chapter, said 107 pints were drawn Monday and 88 were taken Tuesday.

Donors receiving pins were Albert Powers, 13 gallons; Gary Woodland, 11 gallons; Colin Randolph and James Rutherford, 8 gallons; Pat Romans and George Gilmore, 5 gallons.

Clyde Warren and Leila Shepherd received their 2-gallon pins, and 1-gallon pin winners were Luree Evans, Leonard Johnson, N. Wayne High and Vickie McElmoud.

The next Twin Falls drawing is set Dec. 17-18 at First Presbyterian Church.

Radioactive beagles to be buried at Hanford

Spacecraft Ulysses fires its thrusters

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - The Ulysses spacecraft fired its thrusters Monday, starting a four-day maneuver to fine-tune its path toward Jupiter and put it in a better position to study the sun.

Ulysses was carried into Earth orbit aboard space shuttle Discovery on Oct. 6. Six hours later, it was released from the shuttle's cargo bay.

The spacecraft will use Jupiter, the solar system's largest planet, as a "gravity slingshot" to leave Earth and fly almost over the sun's south pole in 1994 and north pole in 1995.

Ulysses is the first spacecraft to fly closer to the sun than it was when it was launched. To study the sun's poles, Ulysses doesn't need to get close to the sun, only to leave the plane of the orbit.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Reason in my philosophy is only a harmony among irrational impulses.

North: 1972 GMC original, good cond. 1986 Nissan Sentra... South: 1973 GMC custom pick-up... East: 1977 Chevy 1/2 ton 4x4...

West led a club dutifully to dummy's ace... South ruffed the club exit with his eight... East's slam was one of the worst...

ANSWER: Two no-trump. A jump to two no-trump in the second round is "highly" invitational but non-forcing.

CELEBS

HIT THE ROAD

THE BIG OUTDOORS

The 'Family' is too scattered

By BetteLou Peterson
Knight-Ridder News Service

Q: I enjoy watching reruns of "Family." Can you tell me what's become of the cast? Is a "Family" reunion in the offing? Todd M. Kron, Marietta, Ga.

A: Sada Thompson (Kate) does theater, music and an occasional TV role. James Broderick (Doug) died in 1982. Meredith Baxter Birney went on to "Family Ties," now does TV movies. Gary Frank (Willie) does TV guest roles. Kristy McNichol (Buddy) is a regular on "Empty Nest." No reunion has been mentioned. Most of the regulars are too busy to be interested.

Q: Tell me how these actors are related: Adam Baldwin, of "Next of Kin"; Alec Baldwin, of "The Hunt for Red October"; Daniel Baldwin, of "Sydney"; Stephen Baldwin, of "The Young Riders"; and William Baldwin, of "Flatliners." Laura Labran, Detroit, Mi.

A: Alec, Daniel, William and Stephen, in order of age, are brothers. Adam's the outsider.

Q: My husband has been a fan of Kim Basinger for a long time. He insists she was in a TV series years ago. I think she's too young. Mrs. Alan Olmstead, Tijuana, Ca.

A: Basinger, 37, has done two TV series, "Dog and Cat," 1977, and "From Here to Eternity," 1979-80.

Q: On the Daytime Emmy Awards show, my favorite, Alex Trebek, said he would like to become a first-time daddy. I know he has grown children from a first marriage, a son and several daughters. He's talked about their frequent ly. Give some background on his new wife. Judy Yeman, Verona Beach, N.Y.

A: You've been hearing things. Trebek's first marriage, which ended in 1981 after seven years, was childless. The new Mrs. Trebek, Jean Curran, is 26, a real estate developer. It's her first marriage.

Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn return

STURBEAK, CA — Mark Twain once remarked, "Someday they seem worthwhile to take up the story of the young ones and so, which is correct but in fact, they do not." The Return of Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, a Disney Channel Premiere Film, will debut this Sunday.

The film takes up with Twain's legendary characters Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn to explore one such possibility — following them into adulthood and recreating the unique era of steamships and frontier enthusiasts.

With Megan Follows as the radiant Becky Thatcher, Paul Winfield as gentle freed man Jim, Ned Beatty as blustery con man The Duke of Bridgewater, William Windom as Judge Thatcher, Raphael Sbarge portraying the spirited and brash Tom Sawyer and Mitchell Anderson as his contemplative yet equally spirited counterpart Huck Finn, "Back to Hannibal" is an exciting story of adventure and intrigue, with the two friends as young adults, returning to their hometown of Hannibal, Mo., to investigate a murder in which their old friend Jim is the prime suspect.

"Back to Hannibal" finds the main characters in their mid-twenties, with Tom working as a fledgling lawyer in Chicago and Huck struggling as a cub reporter in St. Louis.

Their old friend Jim, the freed man whose gentle, stoic ways made such an impression on the two as boys, is accused of murdering Becky Thatcher's husband now a fog-shrouded dock under mysterious circumstances. Huck asks Tom to return to Hannibal to defend Jim against the seemingly unbelievable charges. The two immediately find themselves fleeing an entire town angrily, intent on hanging Jim for his "crime." But joined by a young orphaned lad named Marcus (Zachary Bennett), whose daring and enthusiasm remind them of their own youthful adventures, Tom and Huck utilize some quick talking, fast thinking and cunning wiles to solve the mystery and clear Jim's good name.

Making his debut as Kerry Nichols is Allan Dean Moore, who appeared in "Lethal Weapon 2."

Although Moore doesn't have much rap music experience, a story that had been heard in the rap world, Kurtis Blow, one of the seminal movers in the rap movement, has been hired for six months as a consultant.

The show is also capitalizing on its greatest resource, double-Daytime Emmy Award-winning actress Erika Slezak, who plays Viki Buchanan.

Viki recently suffered a stroke, and instead of making a miraculous recovery, she has returned home paralyzed and speechless.

Thoughts are heard in voice-overs by Slezak.

Predictably, from her first wordless scene (Viki's haunting return home to her family at Llanfair), Slezak has been tearing our hearts out. Is her name already being engraved on Daytime Emmy No. 32?

Rabbitt can't believe he made it

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Despite 15 albums and 76 No. 1 hits, singer Eddie Rabbitt is still searching for security in the music business. "After all this time, I still feel like I'm trying to make it," the 45-year-old country music singer says.

In an industry of ego and hype, it's a refreshing statement from a performer with an impressive resume.

In a 16-year career, Rabbitt has recorded five records including "I Love a Rainy Night" that topped both the pop and country music charts. His "Horizon" LP sold 2 million copies. He has starred in two network TV specials and was the centerpiece in a widely played, live concert that touted him as much as the product.

And as a prolific songwriter, he has written most of the songs on his records, plus "Kentucky Rain" — Elvis Presley's 50th gold record.

Rabbitt reviews these accomplishments with an understated detachment that he feels has contributed to his success. "I guess I'm one of those people who are in an interview, 'always want to do something a little better the next time. I think if you start to feel secure, you don't do as well. A writer has to keep one foot in the street and one pocket empty and be hungry for it. I remember reading or someone saying, 'Be careful. The moment you think you are great, in that moment, you are not great any more." That's a real wise, bum piece of advice.

Rabbitt's long voice carried him to the top of the country charts in February with "On Second Thought," an award-winning music video. Among his other hits are "She's a Wonderful," "Someone to Watch Over Me," "Heart of the Matter," "Drivin' My Life Away," "Every Which Way but Loose," "Suspicious" and "Step by Step."

Two of his songs made movie soundtracks: "Every Which Way but Loose" was the title cut of the Clint Eastwood film, and "Drivin' My Life Away" was in "Roadie." His current LP, "Jersey Boy," is what he calls "the best album I've done in a long, long time. I am a very happy, relaxed, carefree musician when I was growing up. I heard it on the radio and just took to it."

Rabbitt was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., but was raised in East Orange, N.J. He is Irish and the family name means "counselor to chiefs." He left home for Nashville in 1968 on a bus with $1,000 in his pocket but no contacts, no job and no place to stay. His first night in town, he wrote a song titled "Working My Way Up to the Bottom" while looking in a bathtub in a scrubby hotel.

Morgan goes on

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Keith Whitley and Lorie Morgan seemed the perfect pair when they married.

Then Whitley died last May of an accidental alcohol overdose. Morgan became a widow at age 29, losing her husband just as her career took off. "I finally have something I've waited for all my life — the success of this career," she said. "But I also lost part of my life that I had lived for and that was a 13-year marriage with Keith. It was a woman's dream — to have a fairy-tale marriage. If I had to take my choice, I'd rather have him than anything."

Factories rev up motorcycles

With the exception of the USA, motorcycle markets showed a trend towards recovery in 1989, according to Eberhard von Kuenheim, chairman of the Executive Board of BMW AG.

"Last year we produced approximately 26,000 motorcycles at our factory in Berlin," he said, "eight percent more than in 1988. Our sales amounted to 27,000 units, meaning that we have succeeded in reducing our stocks."

Due to very substantial demand for the GS models and new machines, the K1 and K100 RS, the company will be increasing production in the course of 1990.

"Although we already fulfill all emission standards worldwide, we will become the world's first motorcycle manufacturer to introduce a fully controlled three-way catalytic converter at this autumn's International Bicycle and

There is increasing demand for the new products.

Motorcycle Show in Cologne," he said. "Koenigsmeyer, starting in spring 1991, this catalyst technology will then become available as an option in the K1 and K100 RS," he explained.

The Digital Motor Electronics featured in these models provides the technical foundation for sophisticated emission control, noted von Kuenheim. "We hope that lawmakers will promote this development by offering suitable tax benefits."

Station wagon has come back to life

By Jim Mateja
Chicago Tribune

Just when you thought the station wagon was dead, General Motors brings it back to life.

That's "life" as in the first new sheetmetal on the machine since your teen-ager or daughter was born. The sheetmetal wagon of the '70s and '80s has been replaced by one with rounded corners and edges, the aero look that not only means a pleasant new appearance, but a slight boost in fuel economy as well as the ability to slice through the wind rather than be buffeted by it.

We test drove the Chevy Caprice and Buick Roadmaster Estate wagons, two of the trio of new wagons from GM for 1991. Both offer distinctive, eye-catching styling in sharp contrast to the block of metal that had been running around the streets since the late '70s. What made wagons appealing in the '70s is still offered for the '90s, a 115.9-inch wheelbase and 217.5-inch length to provide the room for three sets of seats and eight-passenger carrying capacity.

The rear tailgate has a pop-up window for easy storage of small packages, or you pull one of two release levers to swing the gate open sideways to let the kids in or swing it down to pile the groceries in. There's even room for the dog as well as the child. The third seat holds the little kids facing rearward so that the noise travels away from the driver and front-seat occupant.

The wagons are big enough to tow a boat, although when you look back along the car in the rearview mirror from the driver's seat, it looks like you already are in a boat.

The Roadmaster wagon starts at $21,445. There's less standard equipment in the Caprice, which starts at $17,875.

Both Six Flags Magic Mountain in Los Angeles and Marine World-Africa-USA in San Francisco are offering new attractions.

What's offered: The new Viper roller coaster at Six Flags is the tallest, fastest looping-coaster in the world:

Viper riders will turn upside down seven times as the coaster travels through 3,850 feet of coiled steel track, reaching speeds of 70 mph. Its highest point soars 188 feet above the ground and features three massive vertical loops, a classic corkscrew and a diabolical head-over-heels double loop called a boomerang.

The key feature of Elephant Encounter, Marine World's new attraction, is the close contact between guests, elephants and trainers.

There are spots throughout the attraction where people can meet and feed baby and adult elephants and spend time talking with trainers. Three new shows: the one on "tap" toe, including a sea lion show, a killer-whale and dolphin show and a bird show transformed into a haunted house called "The Bird-Drop Inn."

Prepare for black powder hunting so you can bag that deer

Escape to the Outdoors

Black powder deer hunters need to know that bagging a deer takes skill, patience and the correct tools. The hunter who prepares himself can be assured of a better hunting season.

As every black powder hunter knows, black powder hunting has its own unique challenges.

A muzzleloading rifle allows for only one shot so this shot must count. For this reason, it is very important that a black powder rifle be accurately sighted in and the proper powder charge used.

Connecticut Valley Arms (CVA) recommends starting the powder charge at 25 yards using 50 grains of powder. The grouping should be checked after every three shots. For accuracy, make sure the barrel is cleaned after every shot and after it has had time to cool. Increase the powder charge in increments of five grains until the best grouping is attained. (Note: The powder charge should not exceed 90 grains. Any amount of powder over 90 grains can result in overcharging the rifle.)

Become familiar with the gun before the hunting trip.

Once the optimum powder charge is determined, the rifle is ready for final sighting. Again, starting at 25 yards, adjust the sights until the shots are zeroed to the bullseye. Repeat this at 50 yards and 100 yards. When this has been done, your rifle will be properly sighted in for up to 100 yards and you will know the proper amount of powder needed for optimum results.

Black powder has different applications as to the type and caliber of black powder rifle that can be used during black powder season. The Hawken model is the most known for its light carrying weight and compact style.

The rifle traditionally is a half stock gun with one tenon and brass fixtures. CVA offers different styles of the Hawken for both the traditionalist and the non-traditionalist.

The traditional Hawken comes in both 50 and 54 caliber and is offered in both a right and left handed model. It has one turn in one rilling, a double set fully adjustable trigger, a click adjustable rear sight and all the brass fixtures that come on a traditional black powder gun.

For the non-traditionalist, there is a Hawken that does not include the brass fixtures. Some hunters prefer the non-glare finish of the hardwood and fixtures with this style rifle.

This gun features a one turn in 60 rilling, a double set fully adjustable trigger and a fully click adjustable sight. This model is also offered in a carbine version with a one turn in 48 twist. This is an all-purpose twist for conical and round ball.

Along with the proper gun, every hunter must be certain to have all the accessories needed to load and shoot a black powder rifle.

Rising Gasoline Prices Increase Attractiveness of Lincoln-Mercury Vehicles

Recent world events have driven up gasoline prices, and fuel economy could be a key purchase decision. Now, as never before, Theisen Motors has products to meet this challenge.

- Did you know that Lincoln-Mercury's 1991 large cars get better fuel economy than the smaller cars did in 1975?
- Did you know it costs less to drive a Lincoln-Town Car today than to drive a Bobcat in 1980?
- Since 1990 every Lincoln and Mercury car exceeds 20 miles per gallon, highway.
- Did you know that Lincoln/Mercury is considered one of the finest builders of cars in the world today?
- Theisen Motors' low overhead means you can probably drive a Lincoln or Mercury for less money than any car on the road.

Are you swayed by Ultrasuede?

Think of the softest, most fluid and pliable leather imaginable, and you have Ultra-leather, a luxury cloth-like fabric from the makers of Ultrasuede. Forget the expensive care, weight and unevenness typically associated with real leather. Ultra-leather is machine washable, lightweight and as thin as six inches wide.

Priced around $50 per yard, Ultra-leather has a polyurethane face and comfortable rayon/nylon backing. Here are some sewing considerations in working with Ultra-leather:

CIPPING—Ultra-leathers do not fray or ravel and requires no seam finishing. Unlike Ultrasuede, Ultra-leather is easy to pin and has no nap. It's perfectly acceptable to place pattern pieces slightly off grain, greatly reducing the necessary waste. Instead of the usual two and one-fourth yards of 45-inch fabric we'd ordinarily use in a pair of pants, we used only one and one-half yards of 48-inch Ultra-leather. It's easy to run through two layers of Ultra-leather (out 3.5) straight stitch.

Donna Salyers
Sewing, etc.

seams, not the lapped seams often used in Ultrasuede.

INTERFACING—Collars, cuffs, lapels and other detail areas call for a sew-in interfacing. Pressing can easily melt the face, so avoid fusible interfacings. Breaking or pressing, don't. Creases in pants must be stitched, or simply make tapered pants that will hang well without a crease. This is one instance where a lining is not an asset; lining a skirt or pants will cancel the stretch and recovery properties.

SEWING—Like leather, Ultra-leather has a slippery face and you'll want to baste each and every seam with water-soluble glue stick as opposed to simply pinning. Use the thinnest needle possible, probably 9 or 11, a good quality, all-purpose thread and a long foot (3.5) straight stitch.

Once seams are stitched, it will be necessary to secure opened seams with a glue stick. Because glue stick washes away, it will be necessary to re-glue seam allowances each time a garment is laundered. An alternative is to close seams, smooth seam allowances in one direction, trim the under-layer, then topstitch. This eliminates bulky, uneven, bulky seam, quite undesirable in a fitted skirt or pants.

TOPSTITCHING—The face of Ultra-leather, like genuine leather, tends to stick to the presser foot, causing stitches to "stack up." A topstitch, after collar-foot or walking-foot offers a simple solution. In topstitching, use a long stitch to avoid perforating the fabric.

HEMS—Secure a conventional one and one-half inch hem with glue stick and be aware that with each laundering, it will be necessary to re-glue the hem. Re-gluing, we feel, is preferable to an obvious line of stitching along the hem. For a casual look, turn up a one-half inch hem and topstitch.

Donna Salyers is a sewing columnist from Ohio.

Water water everywhere may be too much

Susan Kelley, of Kelley-Nursery, says to stop watering those ornamentals now.

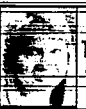

When you think about it, it makes sense. We would only be watering ornamentals now.

August, September and most of October are normally dry. We don't start getting winter rains and snow until late October or early November. The plants expect that. And when this weather pattern holds, the plants are able to harden off and get ready for winter.

This method of withholding water only applies to established trees and shrubs (those that are more than one year old).

If the plant is brand new, it has to be kept reasonably moist — just enough to prevent wither, but it won't need to be watered as much as if you planted it in spring, but enough to get things going.

Back to the established ornamentals you've been withholding water from. These plants will not outper tender new growth during this period, and that is why they are less likely to suffer damage in cold temperatures.

About the first of November, or whenever we've had some frost, but the ground isn't frozen yet, water everything heavily.

The roots are better off frozen in ice than they would be frozen in dry soil. The ice will actually insulate the plants from temperatures colder than freezing. But dry soil can get colder. And the roots will wither, and some will die.

As long as we're heading into the winter here, it's good time to remember that foundation plantings — those under the eaves — probably are "bone dry" during most of the winter.

Water those as often as possible, especially if the winter temperatures are mild. Otherwise, we'll see drought stress in them next spring.

Cathy Walworth is an avid Twin Falls gardener.

New "dangerous-dog" laws in Pennsylvania and New Jersey impose penalties on owners of dogs that attack humans or domestic animals without cause and, under some circumstances, require destruction of the canines that do so.

For the first time in both states, the law makes failing to confine and control a dangerous dog a criminal offense. Passage of the legislation resulted from effort by state dog clubs, veterinary and humane associations, the American Kennel Club and the American Dog Owners Association.

For a copy of the Pennsylvania law (Act 46 of 1990), write to your state senator or representative. Savage recommends that New Jersey residents call the health or animal-control departments of their own municipalities, or their state representatives, for copies of the law.

Herpes concerns him

Q. Like millions of Americans, I suffer from herpes. But I have an additional problem. I am a serviceman stationed overseas. I know there are herpes dating services back in the states, but I don't know about any dating service like that over here.

A. Do you? "Also, do you think it's a good idea for me to place a personals ad in military and other publications looking for a partner who has herpes?"

Q. I don't know how to make contact with women herpes victims and I am sure nobody else would want me as a sexual partner. What should I do?

A. I don't know enough about the herpes dating service in this country to recommend it. It may be a great service.

Q. It may be a great way for some people to make money. And I don't think you should make herpes the basis for choosing a partner or starting a relationship. I know you face some risk of rejection, but you should look for women to date in the same way you would if you didn't have herpes.

A. When you meet someone you like, you must tell her you have herpes once a relationship has been established — and before you have sex with her. If she loves you, she will love you with herpes.

Q. Of course, you must follow your doctor's advice on when to have sex. Also, you must use condoms. Don't make herpes the determining factor of your life! Having herpes is not pleasant, but it isn't the end of the world either.

"I can't put my Food Fighters away in the attic. They're a complete collection!"

"I have to sleep on the floor — my stuffed animal collection takes up the whole bed!"

These somewhat surreal sentences were actually spoken by real people — my own children! Small collectors with big and bizarre collections are quietly residing in very normal homes, saving their allowances or begging their parents to buy just one more object.

If you have one of these zealots, have some respect — that collection just might be museum quality.

The Detroit Historical Museum is looking for contemporary children's toy collections for the toy gallery's inaugural exhibition, "Collectors in Toyland," opening in December.

The collections will be on loan. The museum is looking for good representations of what today's children are collecting. For information call Lori Naples, 313-833-1419, anytime.

Or, here is another option: Parents who have been through several seasons of toy-buying will tell you that the old cliché is true: Buy the kids big expensive toys and they will play with the box more than the toy. Wouldn't it be nice if parents could check out toys on loan like books at a library? And wouldn't it be nice if day-care providers could have a fresh set of toys every week — without having to buy them? Or handicapped children could borrow the often expensive and hard-to-find especially adapted toys? Well, they can, at a toy library.

There aren't many around, though. So you — and some other dedicated people — might have to start one.

The USA Toy Library Association would be glad to help you. Contact them at 2719 Broadway, Evanston, Ill. 60201 or call 708-864-8240, 10-6 weekdays.

Just charge it, pretty please

LIVERMORE, Calif. (AP) — Some kids don't need lunch money anymore.

Series is harder to call than to play?

By Lynn Hoogenboom
TV Data

NBC may have big plans to put a dent in CBS' World Series lead by programming "Fine Things," based on the book by ultra-romantic novelist Danielle Steel, opposite the first World Series game (airing Tuesday). But Tim McCarver, who is broadcasting the World Series along with Jack Buck, isn't worried.

In fact, he's a lot more concerned about making sure Steel's fans enjoy the World Series, which he's convinced they'll be watching along with everyone else. (The Series will continue with Games 7 and 8 on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. "One of the things about postseason play is that it's a different audience," says McCarver, who broadcasts regular-season baseball games for both CBS and for superstation WWOZ.

"The boyfriend of girlfriend who may be watching it with their friend. Or just people who are not as familiar but are watching because of the event—because you're an American citizen and you're compelled to watch the World Series."

Take that, NBC.

"The trick of it is to get the point across without offending the person who knows what you're talking about and considers it obvious," says McCarver. "And you also want to explain sophisticated points to someone who's just watching for the first time. That's what I have to do. That's what I feel is my responsibility." McCarver, who just broadcasting you do have the physical means of getting it out of your system.

There's a reason for all this tension. "World Series are bigger than life," McCarver says. "I've played in three (1964, 1967 and 1968, all for the St. Louis Cardinals). I can tell you almost everything that happened in those games—a lot of very vivid moments."

As a broadcaster, McCarver tries to prepare for all eventualities, but he refuses to get spooked by the possibility that something might go wrong.

"If you're fearful of making mistakes, you'll make mistakes," he states with total certainty. "I mean, I'm a human being, and I'm going to make mistakes over the course of a three- or four-hour broadcast. If you're looking for perfection from me, you're looking at the wrong person. I'm not out to perfect the business. But I can't out to bring you, naturally, and in total, exactly what's happening."

Horse Made Miracle

He had to find a way to save Old Bess, but what could he do?

By Bert Dalton

Old Jock Bently limped across the yard of Longs Training Stables to lean on a corral fence. He whistled and a sway-backed old bay mare raised her head from the feed manger and came to him. She put her head over his shoulder while his arms went around her neck to rub her ears and stroke the time-wearied hide affectionately.

"Good Old Bess," Jock muttered. "Good! Old Bess." Her velvet nose nuzzled his cheek through she knew every word he was saying.

Old Jock tensed when he saw his son-in-law, Marty Long, coming toward him from the main house. "Good morning," Marty greeted. "How are you this morning?"

"Fine, Marty, even Old Bess is feeling her oats this morning!"

"We have to talk about Bess,

"She is not useless! She is the only thing I have left in this world! You can't help but remember the morning she was born." His voice softened as he remembered. "You and your mother made quite a fuss over her."

Jock. "It seems Bess is all we've talked about for the last three weeks, Marty."

"Try and see it my way, Jock. I don't begrudge the hay and grain she eats; it's a matter of room. I have those 15 mares coming from that syndicate up north. Those boys are proud of that bunch! They want me to care for them and train the colts. It means a lot of money to me as well as building a reputation as a trainer."

"I know what it means to you and Nelda," Jock defended. "But sending Bessie off for dog food because she's old is more than I can take. Next thing, you'll be wanting to get rid of me!"

"Now, Jock, be fair! You know you are welcome here and always will be! You are family."

"So is Old Bessie," Jock countered. "Figure it out for yourself, Jock. Those mares are due to arrive tomorrow. What am I going to do with them?" A beautiful stallion in the far corral paced up and down. "Look at Admiral! That black-heated devil is always looking for trouble. He'd sure like to get over the fence and raise hell with those geldings!"

"I've seen what he does when he gets a gelding cornered," Jock admitted.

"We've been over this same ground a dozen times lately, Jock. I hate to press the matter, but the old mare must go. Business is out!"

"No, Marty! No, don't make me do it!" Jock begged.

"Be sensible, Jock! Either put a bullet in her head yourself or I will have the cannery pick her up!"

"No, Marty, it would be easier to shoot myself!"

"Jock, I've developed this place into a good business. It hasn't been done by being sentimental. You have until the day after tomorrow to make up your mind. If something isn't done by then, I'll make arrangements to dispose of her!"

Turning abruptly, Marty stalked away.

"What are we going to do, Bessie?" Jock asked. "What are we going to do?" He waited until he saw Marty drive away in the pickup, then went straight to his daughter, Nelda.

"What have you been up to this morning, Daddy?" Nelda greeted cheerfully.

"Nothing much. There isn't much a stiff old goat like me can do!"

"You've never let being crippled up slow you down before. Is something wrong, Daddy?"

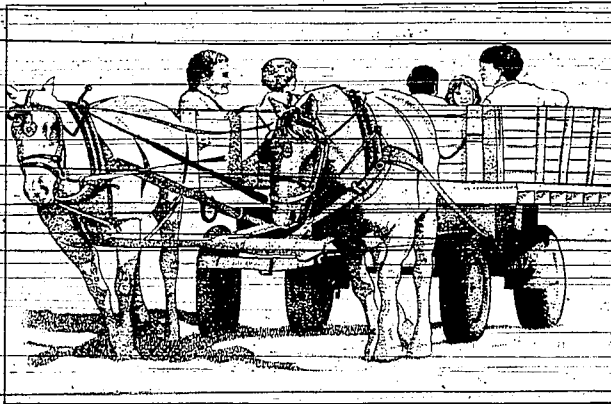

"Everything is wrong! It's Marty! Marty says I have to shoot Bessie or he will send her off for dog food!"

"Now don't get all upset," Nelda soothed. "Bessie is old, she has been out there for years. She has completely outlived her usefulness."

"She is not useless! She is the only thing I have left in this world! You can't help but remember the morning she was born." His voice softened as he remembered. "You and your mother made quite a fuss over her. You were 10 years old, and you said she was a royal looking little lady. That's why we named her Royal Lady Bess! You were 16 when your mother was killed and that train wreck. You and Bessie and me have been through a lot together. Sure, I kinda fell apart for a while after your mother died, but Bessie never let us down. She ran her heart out for us and was one of the best." Nelda smiled.

A tear streaked down Nelda's cheek, but she said nothing.

"Remember the day I caught you and Marty sneaking a little kiss in Bessie's stall? Even then that young pup knew a good thing when he saw it! Shame-faced, the two of you asked if you could get married."

Good, reliable horses can be pretty hard to find, and maybe even harder to keep.

"Yes, yes, I remember, Daddy. But please don't go on about Old Bess! I know how much she means to you! I feel the same way, but there is nothing I can do about it. When Marty told me what he planned for Bessie, I protested! But, he told me he would run the business the way he saw fit. Marty is not all business. He has always been a good husband to me and he tries in his own way to be good to you, Daddy."

"He is good to me!" Jock agreed. "He's always shipping me a five or a 10 when he thinks I might need something. I wish I could be as thoughtful when it comes to Bessie. She is no ordinary horse! She's my Bessie!" Tears streamed, unashamed, down his cheeks.

"Please don't take this so hard! Nelda begged. "Perhaps if you talked to Marty again, you two could come to a better understanding."

"It won't do any good. It won't do any good at all! We have talked and talked. All we manage to do is get mad at each other." Nelda changed the subject. "I'm going into town, Daddy. Is there anything special you would like me to bring you?"

Jock had already headed for the door. "No," he muttered. "What I need is the best in either."

He sat for a time in the two-room house. Marty had built for him. He watched Nelda drive off in the car. He hobbled to the main house and went straight to the phone and dialed Jock's friend's

"Jeb, this is Jock Bently. I got a little problem you might be able to help me with."

"Why sure, Jock. I haven't seen you in town lately! What can I do for you?"

"I need a place to keep my mare, Jeb."

"You mean the sway-backed old bay?" Jeb asked.

"Yes, Old Bess."

"What's wrong with keeping her where she is?" Jeb asked.

"Marty thinks he has to have the room for some other horses," Jock said bitterly. "I'd work for you, Jeb. I'll clean stables or anything if you would put her up for me!"

"Jock, we don't board horses here. We haven't for quite some time," Jeb explained. "We are even dismantling the corrals."

"Oh, Jock muttered. "I . . . I . . . thanks anyway, Jeb."

"Why don't you dispose of the old mare, Jock? She is no good for anything. Sell her to the glue factory or for dog food," Jeb advised.

Slowly Jock hung up the phone. He sat for a while, head in hands. He picked up the phone and dialed Mark Whitney's stables down the road a few miles. Slowly, haltingly, he explained his problem to Mark.

"Jock, I know how much the old mare means to you; at least I think I do. But, Marty is right. Dispose of her," Mark advised. "The old mare has far outlived her usefulness."

"I'm sorry to have bothered you, Mark," Jock apologized. "Later in the day, Jock found Marty in the stables. "You didn't really plan on getting rid of Bessie, did you, Marty?" he asked. Marty turned abruptly. "Jock, you are the most unreasonable man I ever met! I must have the room! We've talked and talked about it. Every time we talk, we lose our tempers. The old mare is going. That is final!"

The shipment of mares arrived the next morning. Jock, Marty and Slim Roberts, Marty's foreman, were on hand to watch the unloading. As the travel-weary mares filed down the ramp, the three men looked them over carefully.

"What's the matter with those birds up north?" Slim asked suddenly. "They had no business shipping mares this near to foal. There is a couple that look as though they could foal in the next two days."

"You are right, Slim," Marty agreed. "However, I checked the breeding charts. Higgins sent me and none of them are supposed to foal for at least two weeks."

"I don't care what the book says. A couple of them won't go more than a day or two," Slim answered.

Old Bess, a trifle disturbed at having her domain infringed upon by the intruding band of foreigners, made the rounds to greet each one with the relentless precision of a neighborhood gossip. Then, as if to associate with such foolish young females "was beneath her dignity, went back to the feed manger. Soon, all the young mares were lined up feeding contentedly.

In the adjoining corral the geldings lined the fence separately, then from the mares watching curiously like a bunch of excited school boys.

Admiral, just beyond the geldings, paced the fence relentlessly.

Over-inhabits, head held high, tail in the air, he would gallop away from the fence, turn and come charging back.

"Has your boy would like to get through the fence and start a ride on Slim?" "I'm thinking 'til he had just a little more courage, he'd try to jump, Marty."

"He'll calm down, Slim. He's just all shook up over these strange mares."

"As the deep blue shadows of night settled over the Admiral crew, mares calmed and went to his manger to feed."

"During the night, one of the young mares wandered around the enclosure restlessly pawing the ground. Her nervousness soon spread to the rest of the mares then to the geldings—in the next corral. Aroused, Admiral—in his enclosure—once again paced the fence."

As the gray light of dawn appeared in the sky, the distraught young mare lay down in the center of the corral to give birth to her colt. Old Boss came to stand beside her like a protecting, expectant midwife.

"Admiral's excitement mounted to fever pitch. He charged about enough several times. He galloped to the far side of his enclosure, turned and charged the fence separating him from the geldings. In a great leap, he left the ground—and his shoulder smashed into the top rail. With a crash the rail was knocked free of its moorings.

The terrific force of his catapulting frame carried him over the lower rails. He landed flat on his back among the startled geldings. Momentarily stunned, he staggered to his feet, willing a challenge. Then, with an angry scream of rage, charged wildly. With the speeding, red-eyed stallion bearing down on them, the geldings took flight.

The concentrated wall of horse flesh hit the fence, separating them from the mares. With the sound of a firing Winchester, the fence went down.

The frantic band of geldings poured through the breach, the battle-ready stallion in hot pursuit.

The mares and geldings are in a race to the station and straggled them, trying to get a gelding singled out.

In the main house, Marty, awoken by the clamor, tumbled into his trousers and jerked on his boots.

"What in the world is wrong?" Nelda asked, half asleep, half awake.

"It sounds like big trouble at the stables!"

Admiral's excitement mounted to a fever pitch. He charged about as though possessed of the devil. He galloped to the far side of his enclosure ...

stables! Marty shouted over his shoulder.

Outside, he raced across the yard to Slim's house shouting, "Slim, Slim, get down here!"

"Slim appeared at the door, half dressed. "I'm right with you, Marty."

"Together, they raced for the corral. At the fence, they scanned the scene of havoc in the center of the corral, at the feet of his mother lay the newborn colt. Old Boss, ears laid back, eyes blazing defiance, shifted around the young mare and foal protectively.

A sorrel gelding burst from the milling herd and raced across the corral. Admiral in hot pursuit. Seeing the old mare blocking the gelding yered off. The stallion plunged straight ahead. Like an enraged fishwife, the shriveled Old Boss met him straight on. Old Boss went down.

"Get a rope on that stallion, Slim. Quick!" Marty yelled. In an instant, he was inside the corral, dodging around the squealing, frantic horses, working his way toward Boss and the new colt. As he reached her, Boss staggered to her feet again, taking up her vigil.

"Looks as if the scene just as Slim, rope in hand, entered the corral. Slim shook out a loop; and as the stallion thundered past, gave it a backhanded flip. The loop settled around the bay neck.

For a moment, the stallion fought, bawling his rage. Then he gave up and stood on his sides, nostrils flared, his great sides heaving.

"That'll slow you down, you son of the devil!" Slim muttered. "If you don't behave, I'll give you a lesson in manners!" Talking softly, Slim came closer, intending to slip a halter hitch over Admiral's nose to form a make-shift hackamore. The stallion reared and lashed out with a forefoot.

"So you want to play rough, do you, Big Boy?" Slim said, quietly. "I can play just as rough as you can!"

With a leap, he grabbed Admiral by the ears, twisting down as though he intended to jerk them completely off the bay head. The stallion reared, squealing in protest. Slim's feet came clear off the ground. When his feet again touched earth, he maintained his hold on the two ears and set his teeth into the nearest one. The stallion stood motionless.

Marty came to help and quickly put a loop over Admiral's nose and pulled it tight. "Turn him loose and get clear," he said to Slim.

Slim released his holds. For a split second, Admiral stood defiantly, then lashed out with a forefoot. The hoof caught Marty a miscalculation high on the shoulder. Stumbling, he fell among the wildly milling horses. A hoof lashed out, barely missing his head. Another horse stepped on him and nearly fell.

Slim grabbed the rope released by Marty and tied the belligerent stallion to the fence. Jack, who had been watching, jumped over the fence and made his way toward Marty. As he neared the prostrate form, the shoulder of a plunging horse, knocked him down. On hands and knees, he and threw his remaining feet over the head and chest of his son-in-law.

Old Boss, seeing Jack in the corral, charged to his side. With ears laid back, toothless gums bared, she stood at the side of the two young figures.

With arms waving wildly, Slim broke through to Jack and Marty. He helped Jack to his feet, then aided Marty. Marty staggered. Slim stooped and straightened Slim-Marty's body over his shoulder. Boss returned to take up her vigil by the newborn colt.

The doctor was summoned to look after Marty. He suffered from a badly bruised shoulder and several places where the skin was missing, but nothing was broken. Sliding him a sheet to make him sleep for a few hours, the doctor explained to Nelda. "Then keep him quiet for a day or two."

Mid morning, a truck rumbled into the yard and pulled directly to the stables. Jack, seated in the doorway of his house, paid scant attention until he saw the letters on the cab door. "Ace Dog Food Co."

Sudden panic gripped him! He was off the step and heading across the yard before the truck had time to stop.

Shouting with his heart hammering wildly, Jack pushed the driver came to meet him.

"Yesterday, someone called and said there was a worthless horse to be picked up here. Which one is it?"

"Worthless horse?" Jack questioned. "There's no worthless horse here!"

"That's Long Training Stables' 'til the driver asked."

"Yes," Jack quavered. "Yes, this is Long Training Stables."

From across the corral, Old Boss nickered and wandered over to stand while Jack stroked her neck and ears.

"Would the man working on the fence over there know what horse I'm supposed to pick up?" the driver asked.

Jack knew he had come to the end of the line. Slim would know of the order. Feeling his head nudged by Judas, betraying his best friend, Jack spoke. "This is the animal Marty called about."

"Why didn't you say so?" the driver asked, disgruntled. "Do you think I have nothing to do but stand around here?"

"You said your driver called for a useless horse. She isn't worthless! Only ... only to some people." Jack's voice broke. "Take her. Take her and get it over."

With arms waving wildly, Slim broke through to Jack and Marty. He helped Jack to his feet, then aided Marty. Marty staggered. Slim stopped and straightened with Marty's body over his shoulder.

"Tears streaked his cheeks. For a moment, he looked at the pallid, old head. "Good-bye, Bessie," was all he could say.

"Goodbye." Then, turning, shoulder shaking, he hobbled toward his house.

On his bed in the main house, Marty stirred. "You're all right, Marty," Nelda assured. "Just don't thrash about and hurt yourself."

"What's my injury?" Marty asked.

"Dad is fine," Nelda assured. "Only bruised a little. His biggest hurt was when the truck came for Old Boss!"

"Oh, good Lord! You ... you mean that truck has already been here!" Marty blurted out. "How long ago?"

"About an hour," Nelda said. "I've got to get out of here!" Marty yelled. "I've got to catch that truck before something happens to Old Boss. If I'm too late, I'll never forgive myself. Nelda, you should have seen that old Mare and the old man protecting me out there in the middle of the corral! I've got to go after her."

"Marty, stop it! The doctor said for you to be quiet today. If someone tries to go after Boss, let me go."

"No! I got myself into this mess. I hope I can get myself out of it!"

Draping his shirt over his shoulder, he hurried from the house. He called to Slim, who was working on the broken fence.

"Quickly, he explained to Slim and Nelda that he'd jumped into the cab of the stock van."

"We've got to catch that truck, Slim!"

"We will, Marty! We may have to drive like a bat out of Hades, but we will catch it."

"You've got to get more speed out of this truck, Slim!"

Slim grinned. "This old truck is doing her best! She's kinds like Old Boss. She's not as young as she was a few years ago!"

"At a truck stop down the road about 20 miles, they caught up with the lead horse trailer. They were having a late lunch. After listening to the driver complain about having his lunch interrupted and the whims of some people, Old Boss was transferred from one truck to the other."

"Marty sighed. "Man, what a relief! I was afraid I'd never see that old mare again."

"Old Jack was at the stables to meet them. In the van, head held high, like a queen triumphant, returning from reviving her royal consort."

Marty walked over to Jack and put his arm around the old man's withered shoulders. "I'm sorry, Jack! I'm sorry for all the near-death I've caused in the past few weeks." "I'm ashamed to think I've let you down."

"Forget it, Marty. Let's forget anything like this ever happened. Right now, I'm so happy I would forgive you anything!" Marty's eyes met those of old Jack. In that brief moment, Jack and his son-in-law came to a real understanding.

Slim stepped to the end of the truck. Marty walked slowly toward the house. Old Boss, with all the pompous dignity of a queen at coronation, nickered down the ramp into the corral.

"Along, Jack. Turned over the fence." The ancient mare came to put her head over his shoulder while his arms went around her neck to rub her ears and stroke the time-weathered hide.

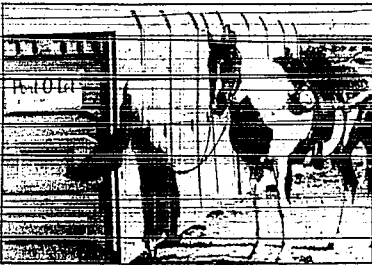

"Bessie, you're back to stay." The old man's voice quavered. "The weather's nice, nuzzling the time-weathered check- as if she knew every word he was saying.

Uncle Pearl vs. Little Bill

HAZARD, Ky. (AP) — State House Minority Leader William R. Strong is running against his uncle, but neither candidate is pulling any punches. "I love him, but ... what am I supposed to do?" Strong, a Republican said of his Democratic opponent, Pearl-Strong. The incumbent's radio advertisements portray Pearl Strong — a former state representative himself — as a tax-raising pawn of the Franker Democratic establishment. The elder Strong, 68, describes his nephew as a political careerist who has turned his back on the mountains and their needs.

"Uncle Pearl refuses to debate me on the issues," begins one William Strong ad. "Maybe he's afraid, because he knows the people don't approve of his past record, which is why he lost the 1986 primary by nearly 500 votes." "I'm sorry, Little Bill," Pearl Strong responds in another ad. "You have been debating for four years in Frankfort and the people in the 39th District have not seen anything yet." Until this fall, the uncle used to stop by William Strong's insurance office-in-Hazard for a daily chat. Now, he mails his insurance payments.
