Idahoans head for poll booths today

The major candidates in Idaho's general election scrambled for last-minute support Monday, the final day of the 1990 campaign.

Forecasters called for clear but cold weather across the state Tuesday, and predictions that the turnout on election day would be low. Polls open at 8 a.m. and remain open until 8 p.m. local time.

State Sen. Skip Smyser of Parma, running for Idaho's 1st District congressional seat, planned a 10-hour, 13-city swing Monday through the two most populous counties in the district: Canyon and Ada. But his scheduled news conference at Boise with a Republican congressional leader, Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., was cancelled when Vander Jagt's flight was delayed in San Francisco by bad weather.

The Democratic congressional candidate, Larry Larocco, conducted a similar round of visits in southwestern Idaho at a Boise senior center, western Ada County and the nor and the seat of retiring Republican U.S. Sen. James McClure headed for last-minute outcomes at the polls. Only a hotly contested campaign for attorney general, the Larocco-Smyser battle, and a number of heated legislative and local campaigns appeared to stimulate voter turnout.

State election officials estimated the turnout at 60 to 65 percent, which would be the first time since 1982 that the general election turnout dropped below 70 percent.

It also reflected a national trend this election year, with voters expressing general unhappiness with incumbents and favor of negative campaigns featured by charges and countercharges rather than substantive discussion of the issues.

The non-presidential election was aggravated by no significant ballot propositions and top-of-the-ticket races offering little suspense. Ada County, the state's largest, reported 4,000 fewer registered voters for Tuesday's election than for the 1988 general election, Deputy Secretary of State Ben Yarns said.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus was an odds-on favorite to win an unprecedented fourth term over Republican Roger Fairchild, the former state Senate GOP floor leader and Republican Rep. Larry Craig was the acknowledged solid front-runner over Boise businessman and former legislator Ron Twiggear to replace McClure.

Voter anger will show up in 3 regions

WASHINGTON — Look for early signals tonight from New England, Florida and Ohio to tell whether voters are as angry as advertised — and what they're doing about their off-year mood.

Those could be portents of an uprising against incumbents, which would damage the Democrats; or a trend against the Republicans; or mixed messages that would point to a standoff.

I won't take all night to find out. The bottom, if there is one, will show up in

Analysis

Eastern congressional and state contests even before the polls have closed in the Western time zones.

Reading the message is simple when seemingly close contests turn out to be landings, or heavy favorites start falling to a rout.

Listen, for example, to Vice President Dan Quayle, campaigning in New Jersey for a Republican Senate challenger.

And if Christine Whitman is elected to the United States Senate, I guarantee you we will have a Republican Senate come next January.

That's a safe, if hypothetical, guarantee. She's running against Sen. Bill Bradley, a two-term Democrat with presidential prospects and a hefty lead in the polls. Bradley got 64 percent of the vote last time. An upset of that magnitude would point to a Republican tilt, just when the underdog seems to be working to Democratic advantage.

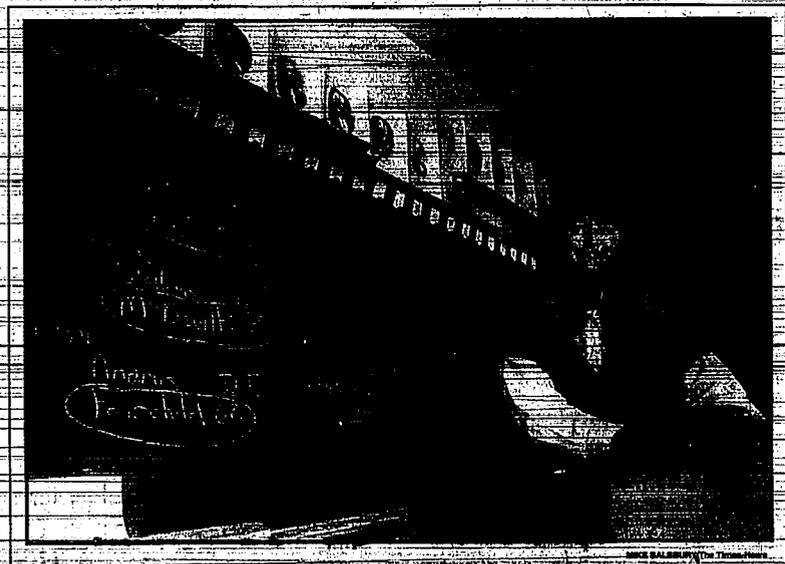

Here are some of the contests that are likely to provide early signs of the trend or lack of one:

- Incumbent Sens. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island, Dick Durbin and Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, a Republican, both led in late campaign polls. Earlier in the year, each had been considered a promising target for an opposition challenge. An upset in either case would be a symptom of major trouble for incumbents.

Ohio is prime territory for a big state Republican gubernatorial gain. George V. Voinovich, the former mayor of Cleveland, has ranked as the favorite over Democratic Attorney General Anthony J. Celebrezze, and that's one GOP strategist counts on winning. Losing would be a sign of Republican trouble that could last into the 1992 presidential campaign.

FILER — Some of the citizens who are expected to be informed about today's election aren't even old enough to vote.

Since school opened in August, the Filer High School class of 1991 has been getting a crash course in electoral politics and American government from teacher Melanie Hutchinson.

"I want them to be effective citizens," Hutchinson said. "If they're only getting half the picture, they don't know the issues."

Candidates' issue statements, campaign literature and newspapers have been required reading for several weeks as students hone up on their politicians. And the candidates themselves have made campaign stops in Hutchinson's classroom.

Gubernatorial candidates Roger Fairchild and Cecil Andrus, U.S. House candidates Sean McDevitt and Richard Stallings and legislative candidates Gary Robbins and Russell Newcomb have all addressed the class.

Baker, Saudi king agree at last on command plan

The Washington Post

JDDAH, Saudi Arabia — Secretary of State James A. Baker III and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia agreed Monday night on a framework for command and control over American and Saudi military forces here if the confrontation against Iraq turns to war, according to U.S. and Saudi officials.

But Baker also indicated he wants to give diplomatic sanctions against Iraq more time to work.

The command agreement appeared to remove one persistent obstacle to preparation for a possible military strike against Iraq.

President Saddam Hussein said the announcement that both sides are now satisfied with the arrangement seemed to be yet another effort to increase the pressure on Iraq.

Baker said earlier Monday that a "new phase" had begun in the Persian Gulf crisis in which the global community is prepared to "resort to force" if a peaceful solution is not found.

But senior U.S. officials emphasized Monday that Baker, while turning up the pressure on Saddam, would also like more time before using the military option, to give political and diplomatic efforts a better chance to resolve the crisis.

A senior Saudi diplomat said of the political and diplomatic pressure campaign "The Saudis are not in a hurry to get out of the Gulf."

According to a senior U.S. official familiar with the talks, Baker and Fahd agreed to leave in place the current military command structure, which includes a separate U.S. command over American forces and the commander of U.S. forces in the region, Gen. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, works in tandem with Saudi Lt. Gen. Khalid bin Sultan, who commands all Saudi, Arab and some other multinational forces.

Mt. St. Helens puffs forth towering ash plume

The Associated Press

YANCOUVER, Wash. — An explosion of steam and ash Monday at Mount St. Helens apparently created a small mudflow, but no damage was reported and scientists said they had no evidence a bigger event was in the offing.

The explosion did, however, cough 30,000 feet into the air, scientists said, and reports of some ashfall came from as far away as The Dalles, Ore., about 65 miles southeast of the mountain, said Steve Brantley, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Vancouver.

The explosion was recorded on videotape and generally southeast.

north fork of the Toutle River in Lewis, Cowitz and Skamania counties, but canceled it at 7 a.m. Forecasters said flooding was not likely because of the relatively small amount of snow on the 8,364-foot mountain about 100 miles south of Seattle.

Jonitz-Trieler said the explosion was "very minor, minor, minor" compared with the May 18, 1980 eruption that leveled 230 square miles of forest, left 37 people dead or missing and sent up an ash cloud that circled the globe.

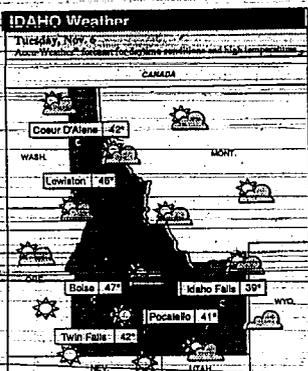

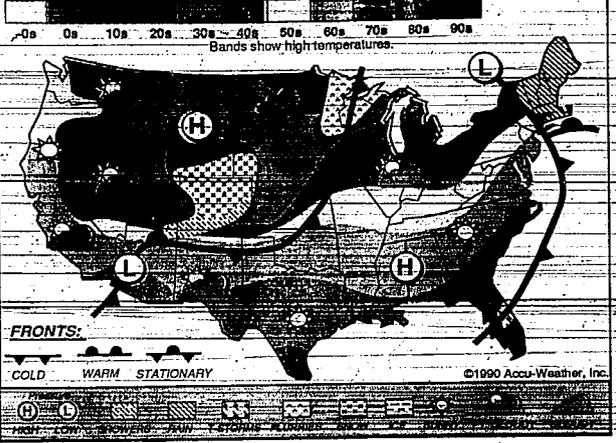

"This kind of thing is more like the steam and ash explosions that occurred last winter in December and January," she said. "Any hazards should be fairly low for your area."

Scientists who monitor the volcano say there has been a gradual increase in small earthquakes over the past three years. But there was no evidence they were linked to Monday's event.

Weather summary
Bris and gusty westerly winds buffeted the Magic Valley on Monday, adding a sharp bite to temperatures which remained in the 30s and 40s during the day.

A storm which crossed the state early Monday produced rain and snow over a wide area, with the heaviest amounts of precipitation in the north. Lowell's 1.15 inches was the heaviest reported. Other readings included .30 at Ketchum, .07 at Fairfield, .22 at Stanley, .16 at Moscow, .31 at Grangeville and .67 at Reznburg.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 56 degrees at Poyette. McCall reported the coldest at 24 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 86 degrees at Fort Myers, Fla. The lowest was 8 above zero at Sioux Falls, S.D.

Snow scattered across Midwest, Plains

The Associated Press
Snow was scattered Monday over the Midwest and the Plains and rain dumped much of the country.

At least 14 inches of snow blanketed parts of Idaho and at least 10 inches fell in Yellowstone National Park. The Great Lakes region and the Missouri Valley also got snow.

Travel was dangerous in northern Michigan, where wind chills dipped to zero. Gaylord, Mich., got at least 10 inches of snow.

Snow also fell in northwest Missouri. Power was knocked out for several hours to about 5,000 people in Independence after snow-heavy tree limbs toppled electricity lines, said David Ferguson, a spokesman for Independence Power & Light.

Kansas City received at least 4 inches of snow and Polo got about 10 inches. North Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and the Idaho panhandle also received snow.

Rain, turning to sleet in some spots, fell in Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, South Dakota and other parts of Michigan.

Other snowfall during the six-hour period that ended at noon CST included four inches in Drummond, Mont., Helena, Mont., and Lander, Wyo.

The early winter blust, four days after a spell of Indian summer sent temperatures soaring to the 70s, drew a mixed response from Michigan residents.

"I think everyone in northern Michigan knows it can approach real fast and bury you," said Sherry Barrett, from Pontreac. "I'm ready to ski. If I can't be playing in the sun and the sand, I want snow."

Rain on Sunday and overnight caused some streams and rivers in Indiana and Michigan to overflow, their banks.

Filer
The dress Filer High School seniors this year are wearing are a "mock legislature."

"The furies are often more than easy stump stops for the candidates. An October visit by Andrus drew several pointed questions from students about education, child-abuse prevention and other issues.

"But making the grade in this class means students get out of their desks, and whenever possible, out of their classrooms. Students are required to take part in government activities that range from volunteer work to writing letters to the editor.

"Many projects are aimed at reducing the need for government while students study its role.

"Volunteers from Hutchinson's classes have chopped wood for senior citizens, picked potatoes, tutored a Russian immigrant, built a haunted house at Halloween.

"By doing some of these things, students learn 'government is there to perform necessary services,' Hutchinson said. "If certain things can be done without government, it reduces the pressure on taxpayers."

Heide Loughmiller, an active citizen is about doing things and solving problems, not sitting in a classroom, Hutchinson said.

"Government is a process that can't be taught in four walls," she said. "They expect me to teach this out of a textbook? Give me a break!"

in the Senate.

Three-term Democrat Richard Stallings was named governor-elect.

Sean McDevitt to keep the southern and eastern Idaho seat in Congress.

Bannock County Prosecutor Larry Echols, a former Democratic legislator, was battling to become the first Republican to hold the office in the attorney general's race against former deputy attorney general Pat Kote.

Incumbent Democratic Auditor J.D. Williams, appointed to the seat 20 months ago, fought name confusion in his bid for a full four-year term against a Republican county commissioner, Richard Withams, and GOP Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards had to overcome the name recognition of her Democratic opponent, Marjorie Ruth Moon, who was trying to regain the office she held for 24 years.

The outcome of a dozen heated state Senate races spread throughout the state held the fate of Democrats' hope to claim control of that legislative chamber for the first time in three decades. The GOP holds a 23-19 Senate edge now and has controlled the Legislature since the 1959 session.

Abortion also moved back into the campaign as an issue on the final weekend. An anti-abortion rally in Nampa, with the crowd estimated by an accountant at 500, drew most of the major anti-abortion candidates.

On Sunday, TWiglar joined several other pro-choice candidates in a news conference on the Statehouse steps.

They said they were protesting a last-minute leftist attack at Boise churches, supporting Craig and several state Senate candidates.

Stallings reported late contributions of $8,000, all from political action committees and EchoHawk said he received $1,000 from the Las Vegas Palate Tribe of Nevada.

LaRocco reported receiving $7,000, including $6,000 in donations and a $1,000 loan from the Democratic Study Group.

Smyser reported on Monday late contributions of $14,500, including $5,000 from a business-political action committee.

He also listed $2,500 from Basic American Foods—a political action committee; Blackfoot and $2,000 from the national Right to Work organization, Springfield, Va.

Smyser listed $1,000 contributions from Idaho Dealers and Drivers for Eric Trade; Jamaica, N.Y.; ARCO, Los Angeles; Petrusco-Synbell-Good Government of West Nile; Stone, Inc. and the Vander Jagt Campaign Committee, Fairfax, Va.

suchness, the state Democratic chairman, appeared to have regained his edge over conservative John F. McGovern, in another test of incumbency. If that one runs to expectations, "Atkins will hold on; if it doesn't, House Republicans may be facing a difficult election night, despite their advantages in fund-raising and name recognition.

Same question, other party.

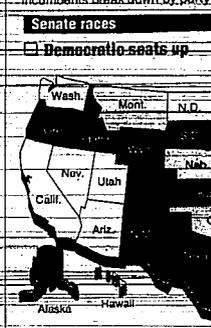

Republican Rep. Peter Smith of Vermont is trying to stave off a three-way challenger, Brimie Sanders, who came close last time in a three-way race. Smith tried shake the problems that go with incumbency and the budget mess by addressing his differences with the administration when President Bush came to Vermont to campaign for him.

In New Hampshire, there are unexpectedly close contests for two House seats that should be safely Republican, one defended by Rep. Chuck Douglas, one an open race. A loss in either could signal broader trouble for Republicans.

tion, Hutchinson said she turns the classroom over for three weeks each year to the students to hold a "mock legislature."

"I love it when an issue comes along to get them fired up," Hutchinson said. This year, the conflict in the Middle East has been a hot topic because high school seniors are at the age where many are considering military service.

Last year's mock legislature debated an abortion bill written by the students and the extracurricular discussions strained some long-standing friendships, Hutchinson said.

The idea is to get students to carry what they learn of government and politics beyond the classroom, but not to cause conflicts, she said.

"Participate," Hutchinson tells her students. "That's what makes the system work."

Her students have been campaign volunteers, and pages and interns for congressmen.

"I'm anxious to see a name from one of my classes on the ballot. But I'm far too young for that," said the 15-year-old Hutchinson.

Students give her credit for erasing the apathy most of them brought to the classroom in the fall.

"She lets us be a part of the class and that makes it interesting," said Heide Loughmiller.

Being required to read the newspaper each day (and take a quiz on news stories every day) keeps them on top of world and national events, as well as the local scene, students said.

"I understand (the news) a lot more now and I know what's happening, mostly because of this class," said Marc Roberts.

Although most students come to the class wearing their parents' political stripes, it doesn't take them long to develop their own opinions about politicians and issues, Hutchinson said.

"They come in knowing they are Republicans and that Republicans are good and Democrats are bad," she said. "But if you ask them what a Republican is, they don't know."

The results of last week's mock election display a strong bipartisan split, with the students Jeanine Oswald some of the younger candidates in major races, like Sean McDevitt and Roger Fairchild.

"I think they all avoided our questions to some degree," said Pete Jenkins after the Andrus visit.

Whether they like the candidates or not, the personal contact helps demystify politics, Hutchinson said.

One former student reported being surprised at seeing a well-known local pol in her English class at CSI.

"They learn that politicians put their pants on one leg at a time, just like the rest of us," Hutchinson said.

Less additional funds likely for Utah higher education

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Utah's colleges and universities should brace for an education budget giving them about half of the $37 million they wanted in additional funding, says the State Board of Regents' chief executive officer.

Higher Education Commissioner Rolfe Kerr said Gov. Norm Bangert has indicated he will propose the Legislature approve only $20 million in additional funding in fiscal year 1991.

"We're probably not going to get all the funding we need, and that's bad news," Kerr said during a speech here to American Federation of Teachers. "But it is a substantial increase, and that's the good news."

He said that $20-million could amount to a little more than 20 percent of the state budget, while in the past few years higher education has received a little less than 18 percent.

Overall, higher education will spend $398 million this year alone, and that budget doesn't cover cost-of-living adjustments for higher education employees or to provide for enrollment increases at each state institution.

"We realize that there is only so much the Legislature can do, since there are so many other state agencies they fund. However, higher education can't continue to absorb all these cost cutbacks in its programs," Kerr warned.

Rogers celebrates birthday at home

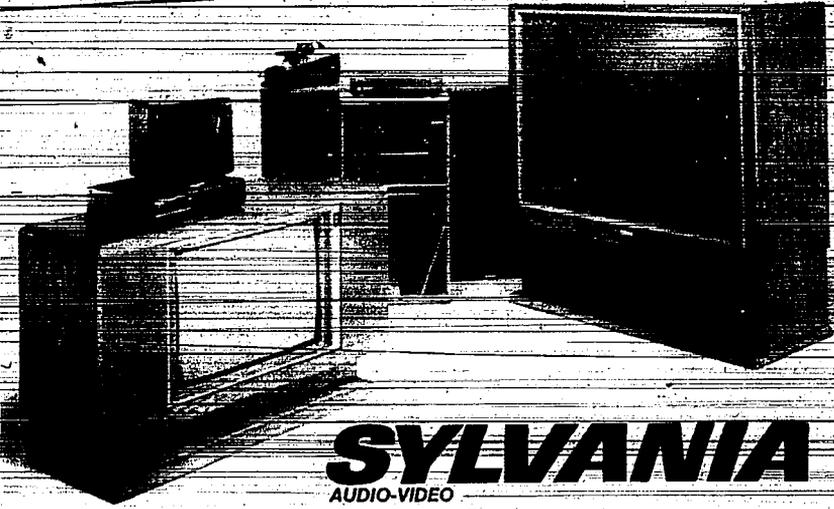

APPLE VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Cowboy crooner Roy Rogers celebrated his 79th birthday Monday, finding his happy trail led home after surgery last month.

"He's not up to jumping up and down yet," said Roy's "Dixie" Rogers Jr. His father underwent surgery Oct. 21 to correct an aneurysm in his aorta, the body's main artery.

The actor-singer, released Friday from St. Mary Desert Valley Hospital, is out of his fever and able to walk around the house, his son said. Recovery is expected to take six to eight weeks.

Giants steamroll over Colts to remain unbeaten

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The New York Giants continue to play their own personal game of chicken with the San Francisco 49ers.

The Giants steamrolled over the Indianapolis Colts 24-7 Monday night to join the 49ers as the first team in 36 years that two NFL teams have been unbeaten this deep into the season.

They did it, as usual, with a smothering defense and an offense featuring two Colts-Anderson touchdown runs, a lot of litter-bugging by Dave Meggett and precise passing by Phil Simms, who completed was 17 of 21 for 172 yards.

The Giants clinched it with a 31-yard fumble return by Dave Duerson, one of the members of their newly acquired over-the-hill gang.

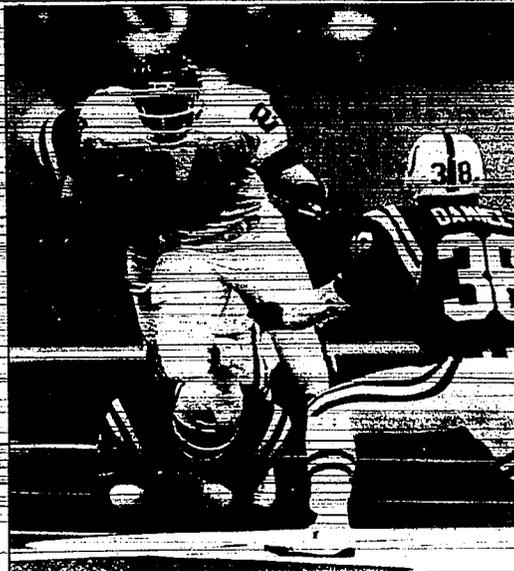

That win was the Giants' 11th straight in regular-season play going back to last year and put them one step closer to a Monday night meeting at San Francisco in three weeks with the 49ers, winners of 16 straight.

The last time two teams were 8-0 was in 1934, when Chicago and Detroit both started 10-0. New York and San Francisco would be 11-0 if they remain undefeated until their meeting.

The Giants, naturally, weren't buying it. "Being 8-0 means we have to work harder to be 9-0," said Anderson, who led a balanced rushing attack with 55 yards in 14 carries. "I'm sure the 49ers think the same way. Whatever our record is when we meet, that's the way it will be."

This one was no contest in the first half as the Giants scored on their first three possessions — a 23-yard field goal by Matt Bahr and touchdown runs of two and three yards by Anderson. In fact, the Giants had more touchdowns in the first half — two — than the Colts had in the game — one — as New York went off with a 17-0 lead.

half kickoff and march 80 yards for a TD, which came on a 1-yard run by Albert Bentley. It was set up by a 17-yard fourth-down pass to Billy Brooks from Jeff George, who completed 20 of 34 for 158 yards and was sacked three times, twice by Leonard Marshall.

Colts' running back Eric Dickerson was no factor, carrying nine times for 26 yards.

After Meggett fumbled away a Giants' scoring chance at the Indianapolis 10, the Colts put it away when Pepper Johnson sacked George and Dierson ran it in from 31 yards out for his first touchdown in eight NFL seasons.

"Starting the second half, we were able to move it and that was encouraging," Colts coach Ron Meyer said. "I thought we had a chance until the big turnover occurred. I thought we were still in the game until then. When the defense scores like that, it's just disastrous. You can't give them a gift like that. They'll earn it on their own next time."

New York took the opening kickoff and it became the custom-controlled ball for 8 minutes and 20 seconds, scoring on Bahr's 23-yarder at the end of a 74-yard, 13-play drive that included a third-down, 40-yard pass from Simms to Stephen Baker.

The next time they got the ball, the Giants went 58 yards in eight plays to score a touchdown set up by Meggett's 13-yard punt return and included a 7-yard third-down run and an 18-yard reception by the 5-foot-7, 180-pound water bug. The score came 24 seconds into the second quarter on a 3-yard run by Anderson.

After the Colts managed their only first-down of the half, New York went 74 yards in nine plays to Anderson's 13-yarder. Bahr drove the Colts by a pass interference call on the Colts' Craig Taylor on a third-and-a-half play and included a 17-yard burst to the 3 by Lewis Tillman, one of Anderson's backups.

Vandal, Bronco lock up Big Sky football honors

BOISE — Idaho quarterback Steve Nolan and Boise State cornerback Frank Robinson were named Big Sky Conference football players of the week.

Nolan, a fifth-year senior from Seattle, tied Big Sky and Idaho records by throwing six touchdown passes in the Vandals' 27-7 victory over Northern Arizona.

Pressed into service four weeks ago when regular quarterback Doug Nussmeier broke his ankle, Nolan increased his passing efficiency rating to .478 and has thrown just one interception in his 59 passing attempts.

Against the Lumberjacks, Nolan was 14 of 23 for 236 yards with no interceptions.

Robinson seemed to be everywhere on the field in leading the Boise State defense in the Broncos' come-from-behind 31-27 win at Montana State.

Against the junior from Riverside, Calif., credited with four tackles, forced a fumble, intercepted two passes — returning one 51 yards — and blocked two kicks.

BYU's Detmer chosen top offensive performer in WAC

LITTLETON, Colo. — Brigham Young University quarterback Ty Detmer and Colorado State defensive end Robert Chirco were named Western Athletic Conference players of the week Monday.

Detmer, who's gunning for the Helmsman Trophy, connected on 30 of 43 passes for 397 yards and three touchdowns Saturday to lead the Cougars to a 54-7 romp over Air Force.

Chirco, a senior from Aurora, Colo., sparked CSU's 17-8 victory over previously unbeaten Wyoming with two sacks, including one for a safety, and nine tackles, including one for a loss and four interceptions.

WAC officials said other nominees for offensive player of the week were Jamal Farmer of Hawaii, Mike Brown of CSU and Dennis Arey of San Diego State.

Mark Odum of Hawaii, Thomas Williams of Wyoming and Scott Giles of BYU were nominated for defensive players of the week.

Track world record holders test positive for steroid use

LONDON — World track and field record-holders — Bruce Reynolds and Randy Barnes — have been suspended for testing positive for steroids and could miss the 1992 Olympics.

The International Amateur Athletic Federation, the sport's world governing body, announced the suspensions Monday and said both athletes have offered a hearing by the Athletics Congress, the national governing body.

If the suspensions are upheld, Reynolds, holder of the 400-meter record, and Barnes, the shot put record-holder, face two-year bans. Suspensions of that duration, mandatory for a first offense, would keep them out of next year's World Championships at Tokyo and the 1992 Olympics at Barcelona.

New Browns head coach Jim Shofner and owner Art Modell answer questions at a press conference after the firing of Bud Carson.

Browns end Carson's misery, replace coach

Knight-Ridder News Service

BEREA, Ohio — The full story of coach Bud Carson's firing will not be told anytime soon.

Within one hour after Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell fired Carson, according to information obtained from 10 separate interviews Monday, a letter delivered to the Carson home in Moreland Hills stated that his contract would be honored only if he does not say anything "detrimental" about the organization.

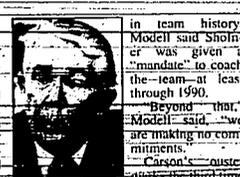

Carson would not comment about the letter.

"It's finally over," he said. "I knew it was going to happen after last night. Christ, about everything that could go wrong in one football game went wrong, huh?"

Carson made no other comment for the record.

Falling to their fourth consecutive defeat, the Browns were blown away 42-0 by the Buffalo Bills Sunday before a sellout through that had dwindled to an Indians-sized crowd in the fourth quarter. It was the worst loss by shutout in Browns history.

Modell named offensive coordinator Jim Shofner, 54, as the ninth head coach in team history. Modell said Shofner was given a "mandate" to coach the team at least through 1990.

Beyond that, Modell said, "we are making no commitments."

Carson's ouster marks the third time in the last six years Modell has fired his coach. Only two other coaches at the Atlanta Falcons and Phoenix Cardinals have gone through as many head coaches in the same period.

The Browns, Falcons and Cardinals are three of the 10 teams that have never made it to the Super Bowl.

Carson, 59, leaves the Browns with an overall record of 12-14-1 and a little less than 16 years remaining on his contract, which Modell said would be "honored in full."

The contract that Carson agreed to on Jan. 26, 1989, when Modell hired him over dinner at a fancy Italian restaurant near Carson's former home in Greenwich, Conn., called for salaries of $300,000 in 1989, $350,000 in '90 and $400,000 in '91.

Notre Dame climbs back atop AP college grid poll

The Associated Press

Notre Dame's rollercoaster ride in the rankings reached another peak Monday when the Irish regained the top spot in The Associated Press college football poll.

Georgia Tech's 41-38 victory over top-ranked Virginia held the Irish move from No. 2 to No. 1, a position they held for four weeks before losing to Stanford in early October. Notre Dame fell to eighth after that loss, but four straight victories and a series of upsets have allowed the Irish to reclaim No. 1.

Notre Dame (7-1), which beat Navy 52-31 Saturday, received 37 first-place votes and 1,456 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Washington (6-1) is second with 13 first-place votes and 1,403 points while Houston (8-0), the only unbeaten, unranked team in Division I-A, is third with five first-place votes and 1,387 points.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz, who was unhappy with his team's performance against Navy, said the Irish don't deserve the No. 1 ranking.

"We aren't the No. 1 team," he said. "You can't be a great team until you play great on defense, and we haven't put that phase of our game together."

Holtz is not concerned about who's No. 1 now or at any other time after than Jan. 2, and I think there are 10 or 15 teams that have a better chance of getting there than we do."

Holtz is known for puffing his own team, but this time he may have a point.

With games remaining against No. 9 Tennessee, No. 21 Penn State and No. 23 South Carolina, the Irish may not hold onto the top spot for very long.

Any time Notre Dame is ranked No. 1, the students in Grace Hall put up a big No. 1 that lights up at night. Holtz said "They tanked Virginia held the Irish move from No. 2 to No. 1, a position they held for four weeks before losing to Stanford in early October. Notre Dame fell to eighth after that loss, but four straight victories and a series of upsets have allowed the Irish to reclaim No. 1."

Washington was one spot below Houston loss, but four straight victories and a series of upsets have allowed the Irish to reclaim No. 1.

Notre Dame (7-1), which beat Navy 52-31 Saturday, received 37 first-place votes and 1,456 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Miami is fifth, followed by Iowa, Georgia Tech, Brigham Young, Tennessee, Florida, Virginia, Florida State, Nebraska, Texas and Auburn. The Cavaliers (7-1) dropped to 11th after holding the No. 1 spot for three weeks.

Nebraska (8-1) fell from third to 13th, Auburn from fourth to 15th after getting clobbered by Florida 48-7 and Illinois from fifth to 17th following a 54-28 loss to Iowa.

Despite probation, Houston makes case for national title

The Associated Press

If college football's national championship picture seems muddled, it's perfectly clear in Houston, where the Cougars are the only undefeated and unranked team in the country.

And also unbeaten.

The Cougars, serving a three-year NCAA probation, are barred from the bowls, but not from the Associated Press poll. After winning eight straight games and leading the nation in passing offense with 448 yards per game and total offense with 568.1 yards per game, they are ranked No. 3 behind Notre Dame and Washington in the poll of broadcasters and sportswriters. Coach John Brock says they ought to be better than that.

"We should be ranked No. 1," he said. "If we're the only team without a blemish, we ought to be ranked No. 1."

There is, however, one blemish — a probation "cloud" that hangs over the team's ambitions. The 1989 single-game bid of particulars in Houston's folder at the NCAA charges the Cougar program with all manner of misdemeanors.

The (infractions) committee determined that a considerable number of major violations of NCAA legislation occurred in the nation's football program," the report says. The Cougars are the only team in the NCAA charges the Cougar program with all manner of misdemeanors.

These violations included the provision of cash and extra benefits to student-athletes on occasions so numerous that the former players think they ought to be better than that.

Junior Gina McAdams was the lone Kimberly player selected.

Glenn Ferry landed senior Angie Young on the team. Decis Coach Lynn Payne was voted the league's coach of the year.

The All-Canyon Conference football team will be released after Valley finishes its run for the state title in the playoffs. The Vikings take on Sugar-Salem at 3 p.m. Friday in Holt Arena at Pocatello.

Filer places 3 on All-Canyon Conference volleyball team

The Times-News

GOODING — Regular-season champion Filer landed three players on the All-Canyon Conference volleyball team in the league announced Monday.

The Wilkies, who along with Declo represented District 4 at the A-3 state tournament had seniors Chanti Gartner, Brandi Bakley and Brandy Morrison honored. Declo, which took fourth at state, was represented by seniors

Thais Kidd and Melanie Darrington on the All-COCC team.

Gooding finished third in the league and had a pair of Sophomores, Dusty Pence and Tara Retfick, voted to the unit.

Junior Karena Kohtz and senior Marcee Stasny were honored from Valley.

Magan Kutting and Brandy Mason, a pair of senior 5-10 middle blockers, represented Wendell.

Marines tackle desert boredom with football

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) - It's probably the only football field of its kind in the world: mostly sand with cot-filled tents from one end zone to the other.

But the Marines, on a rare day off Sunday, didn't mind the dust.

"It's fun, a good way to let out aggressions," said Lance Cpl. Dale "Tom" Keller, 20, of Prineville, Ore. "It's better than sitting back at camp doing nothing."

Rest and relaxation for the 220,000 U.S. troops confronting Iraq in the Gulf has become more important with Operation Desert Shield in its third month and no end in sight.

Saudi Arabia is the first potential combat zone where the soldiers' two favorite diversions - alcohol and women - are banned.

In their absence, sports have become an important recreation, especially for the 30,000 Marines banned from Saudi cities - unlike their Army and Air Force counterparts - to keep a low profile.

The football is played in a stadium at a Marine base near the coast. The field is made of compacted sand. Every game is called the "Sun Bowl" - apparently after desert missiles which are part of the Iraqi arsenal. The field more closely resembles a dust bowl.

Even though clouds of dust partially obscured some of the play, the 100 fans at Sunday's main battle between the 174th Marine Wing Support Squadron and the 311th Marine Fighter Squadron yelled just like fans at home.

They cheered good passes and touchdowns, booed interceptions and shouted at the referee for calls they didn't like.

The Marines were playing flag football, a variation of touch football in which tackles are made by grabbing shirts. The game was played on a field of sand. The game, which the 174th won 15-14, was broadcast on the Armed Forces Radio Network.

Most fans sat in the modern stadium on one side of the field. But some stood outside a long row of tents running the length of the other side, just a few yards from the players.

"Just step right out and watch the game," said Lance Cpl. Ellory Myers, 20, of Casper, Wyo., whose tent is on the 40-yard line.

"It's a good bonus ... even when it wakes you up," he said. "I'm enjoying it, especially when people get in fights and stuff."

Rest and relaxation during a day off in the desert included football between Marines from the 7th Engineers of Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii and the VMA 311th of Yuma, Ariz.

"Ringside seat," said Master Sgt. Dan Rich of Rochester, N.Y., a maintenance chief with the 311th Tom Cats. "You get to holler at everybody. It's good for relieving stress."

But Lance Cpl. Wayne Lewis, 21, of Reading, Pa., who lives on the 50-yard line, said he wasn't interested in football and was angry the Marines hadn't put up the tents elsewhere.

"You get a better view of the game, and they wake me up around 8 a.m.," he said. Chief Warrant Officer Jerry L. Duck, 26, of Malden, Mo., was celebrating a 16-0 shutout by officers over enlisted men from his unit in the 311th.

"For an old man, I did all right," he said. "It helps the morale. I think the stadium is the best place in the country."

"This is great," said Sgt. John Grone, 23, of York, Pa., a photographer for the 174th "A" Co.

The stadium also has volleyball nets, a softball diamond, ping-pong tables and movies for men as well as women.

Capt. Cindy Stook, 20, a flight nurse from Pope Air Force Base, in North Carolina, was wearing shorts.

"It's one of the very few places we can wear them, which makes it doubly nice for women," she said.

Sweating in a "Pahiri" and shorts during a break in another game, Lance Cpl. Darren Ortiz of New York City, said it was like playing on the beach.

"You can run as hard as you can," he said. "But your sweat moves nowhere that fast."

Irish don't care about being No. 1 right now

SOUTH-BEND, Ind. (AP) - Notre Dame is No. 1 in the college football rankings, and the Irish treated the award like a live grenade.

Pitch the prize toward running back Ricky Walters, and he heads the other way. "Normally, I don't think we deserve to be No. 1 at this point," he said.

Fling it at sure-handed tight end Derek Brown, and suddenly he's got hands of stone. "We've been there before, but it really doesn't mean anything during the regular season."

The Irish (7-1) would, in fact, like to leave the top rating and let someone else's territory and let them worry about it. The glory of No. 1 blew up in Notre Dame's face Oct. 27 when it was ranked No. 1.

"You can't expect to go against the Tennessees, the Penn States and the USCs like we have to, down the road, give up 31 points and expect to win ball games," defensive tackle George Williams said.

At hand may be the toughest times yet. The Irish face road games against No. 9 Tennessee on Saturday and No. 23 Southern Cal on Nov. 24, with a home date Nov. 17 against No. 10 Texas State.

"You can't expect to go against the Tennessees, the Penn States and the USCs like we have to, down the road, give up 31 points and expect to win ball games," defensive tackle George Williams said.

"I hope we can handle it," Walters said. "We've got the kind of coach who plays down the importance of being No. 1 right now. But we've got to play a lot better if we want to remain No. 1."

Hancock Bowl reaches agreement with USC, Michigan State

EL PASO, Texas (AP) - Southern football, California and Michigan State have reached an oral agreement with the organizers of the Hancock Bowl to play in the New Year's Eve game, bowl officials said Monday.

Bowl invitations cannot be officially extended until the Board of Regents of the Hancock College has made its decision. John Tollmer, chairman of the game's team selection committee, said the committee is not scouting any other teams.

Michigan State coach George Perles has said he wants to be up front against Northwestern and Wisconsin.

about his bowl game wishes and wants to go to the Hancock Bowl in this Monday-night conference, he said. "It's our first choice."

head football coach and his assistants, even after they began to tell the truth, were unable to recall the number of occasions they gave money to students-athletes.

"Those crimes led to the NCAA probation and the decision of the American Football Coaches Association to bar Houston from any honors, including voting for the Coaches in the United Press International coaches poll."

"We don't think you ought to break a rule and win the championship," said Charlie McClendon, executive director of the coaches-association. "You're playing under a different set of rules."

McClendon said it made no difference that the crimes for which Houston was cited began in 1978, when quarterback David Klingler and running back Chuck Weatherpoon were in-grade school, playing pee-wee football.

"That was two coaches and one athletic director ago," said Klingler, who has thrown for 34 touchdowns and 3,570 yards this season.

"We don't make the NCAA rules," McClendon said. "We just follow them. If you're on probation with them, then you're on probation with us. They're a rule-program as far as we're concerned."

Don James, coach of No. 2 Washington, agrees with McClendon.

"You can always argue that it's usually the team that played three or four years ago that got them in trouble," he said. "If you go out and cheat and you win games because of it, you do enjoy the visibility. It still does help. So from my standpoint, I would be strongly opposed to having a team on probation win a championship."

Carson

By firing him now, Modell still owes Carson about $575,000.

Carson is history 22 months and 27 days after Modell said, on the day he announced the firing, that he hoped Carson would be the last head coach.

Obviously, he's not my last head coach," Modell said. "I'm not going to leave the game, if I ever do, I'm not going to leave it as a loser."

All the empty seats during the fourth quarter at a Buffalo blizzard had a profound effect on Modell's decision to fire Carson.

"I would say the icing on the cake, if you want to call it that, was that it was embarrassing for all of us," Modell said. "I was, terribly, distraught to see 32,000 yellow seats open up with 12,000 fans in the stands. I hadn't seen that in years and years, if ever."

"And it was a culmination of many things: I was hoping and praying that Bud would turn it around. Week in and week out I was waiting ... but we kept slipping and slipping."

Shofner said his first decision will be to return Bernie Kosar to the starting position at quarterback.

NBA much richer as it enters new era of television interest

The Associated Press

In the early 1980s, the NBA virtually disappeared from television. The battles between Commissioner David Stern and Bill Turner Sports were loudly recalled, yet blurred black-and-white images of network games past.

Frankly, the NBA had gotten pretty boring.

The NBA entered a new decade this year and, from the standpoint of television interests, a new era.

This week marked the first few days of domestic bliss in the NBA's polygamous marriage to NBC and Turner Sports. Both signed four-year contracts with the league, NBC paying $60 million, five times what CBS paid under a contract that ended last year and Turner throwing in $275 million.

"Two things happened," Turner Sports senior vice president Don McGuire said. "One was the influx into the NBA of some very exciting players. Magic Johnson and Larry Bird came into the league in 1979-80. Then, in 1982, Michael Jordan in 1984.

"The second thing, and in this area—the NBA—was very smart. They didn't get greedy. They realized they had to build interest

They very intelligently mixed the media—cable, network and local," McGuire said. "They had the patience to let the thing build, rather than make some big move when the sport wasn't quite ready for it."

NBC will show a total of 22 regular-season games nationally, the most ever on free TV, while Turner Sports, an old NBA customer, will broadcast another 50 on its TNT cable channel.

NBC's coverage began with the Los Angeles Lakers at San Antonio last Saturday, but its next game will not be until the Detroit Pistons are in Chicago on Christmas Day.

TNT began its coverage with a Friday night doubleheader that included Phoenix vs. Utah from Tokyo.

"When it comes to TV, the Japanese are very good to work with," McGuire said. "First of all, they make all the equipment. They're very technically capable. Although basketball is a little different from what they do normally."

NBC is using two announcing crews. Mel Allen and Bob Costas—doing play-by-play, and Mike Fratello and Steve Jones doing color commentary. TNT has three teams with Bob Neal, Ron Thulin and Pete Van Wieren doing play-by-play, and Hubie Brown, Doug Collins and Jack Cavens doing analysis.

NBC and Turner Sports are comfortable, if unrelated, members of this NBA family.

"I don't think you'll see any rivalry," McGuire said. "We're going through a transition year where NBC is joining us in NBA coverage where we had CBS all these years. We never had a problem operationally with the network."

In fact, McGuire said, he believes the two networks complement each other.

"Our intense coverage of the playoffs only helps their ratings on the weekends," McGuire said. "The ratings feedback that interest. Then on the weekends you get a lot of viewers watching the Lakers and the Suns, and that builds interest for the Tuesday game."

The contract gives NBC first pick on games, but that represents no problem so far for TNT.

The network doesn't really do that many NBA games," McGuire said. "If they all of a sudden decided they want to do 60 games or so, that would definitely change the relationship. But as long as they do 25 or 30, it's no problem."

White Sox name former pitcher as new GM

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Ron Schueler, rumored for weeks to be the top candidate to take over the Chicago White Sox, was named general manager of the team today.

Schueler, a former pitcher and pitching coach with the White Sox, replaced Larry Himes, who was ousted in September after less than three years on the job.

"I'm very enthusiastic about this opportunity," Schueler said in a statement. "The White Sox clearly have positioned themselves for success."

Schueler, who has been a special assistant in Oakland's front office for several years, will supervise ma-jet league operations, trades talks.

"We are excited about Ron Schueler joining the organization to direct our baseball operations at the major league level," White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf said in a statement. "Ron's reputation as a talent evaluator is among the best in baseball."

Businessman claims Phoenix still his 1st choice for a baseball team

PHOENIX (AP) — Although his name has been linked to a Canada-based attempt to buy the Montreal Expos and keep them in Montreal, businessman Martin Stone maintains that his first interest is bringing an expansion franchise to Phoenix.

Over the weekend, Stone denied a story in the Montreal La Presse, a French-language newspaper which reported that he had offered to put up $35 million of the owner Charles Bronfman's $100 million asking price.

Stone, who did not return phone calls Monday to his Lake Placid, N.Y., residence, and business office, told The Phoenix Gazette he meant he would be a principal in the Montreal dealings only if the National League failed to name Phoenix to its expansion short list.

"I made a stupid mistake. I speculated on the possibility of involvement with the Expos if Phoenix didn't get a franchise."

The league expansion committee is expected to announce four to six finalists in December, and the league will expand by two teams in 1993.

Stone, who owns the minor-league Phoenix franchise, says he is partners in the area's bid for a major league franchise.

"I made a stupid mistake. I speculated on the possibility of involvement with the Expos if Phoenix didn't get a franchise."

Madin Stone

Stone said he would build a team in Tucson if he were associated with a major-league team in the Phoenix area 100 miles northwest.

However, La Presse quoted him as saying, "I don't want to leave my ranch and house in Lake Placid, and I'd have to live in Arizona a good part of the year if I was co-owner of the Phoenix team. It would be simpler for me in Montreal."

Lamar Whitmer, chairman of the county Sports Authority, told the Gazette he was puzzled by Stone's explanation.

"We are still on the same track," Whitmer said. "Martin has to show us his ownership equity, and we will proceed with our lease and design plans."

The Montreal newspaper said Stone offered to help team president Claude Brochu, who is attempting to get $70 million in private financing and the rest in loans from the Quebec provincial and Canadian federal governments.

Brochu said after weekend meetings that his consortium was still about $40 million short of Bronfman's asking price and added that he might have to seek investors from outside the Montreal area.

Brochu said negotiations were proceeding "on several fronts" and might not be wrapped up for a month.

"I think the meetings I had Sunday were very positive, and there will be a lot more of them over the next few days," Brochu said. "The whole thing will probably take until the first part of December to be fully in place. The complexity of this dossier is such that we will have to be patient."

Brochu met with provincial and municipal government officials about funding through preferential loans or equity investments. From the provincial government he fully operates Olympic Stadium, where the Expos play their home games. Brochu also is seeking a better lease through rent reduction and physical improvements of the stadium.

Former Kentucky assistant basketball coach feels vindicated in alleged payoff

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Former University of Kentucky assistant basketball coach Emory Casey said Monday he believes he has been vindicated from involvement in an alleged payoff that brought the NCAA harsh penalties from the school.

Casey reached an out-of-court settlement with Emory and Freight Company Oct. 25. He had filed an invasion-of-privacy suit against Emory and Security Experts Inc. in July 1988 that sought $6.9 million in damages.

"It hurts in the same aspect that I'm happy today that it takes me two minutes to prove myself innocent," he said at a news conference Monday.

"Hopefully, this has done that."

Casey earlier settled out of court with Security Experts.

"This case sort of started out in the media," said Joe Bill Campbell, Casey's attorney. "It's not an appropriate place to end."

The trial had been scheduled to begin Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Lexington before Judge Karl Forster.

The Los Angeles Daily News reported in 1987 that Casey, an assistant coach under Eddie Sutton, sent a package by Emory to recruit Chris Mills a few weeks earlier that allegedly contained $1,000 in cash.

Casey maintained his innocence throughout a NCAA investigation that reported other serious infractions. The probe concluded with Kentucky being placed on a three-year probation in May 1989 that included a two-year ban on post-season play.

The NCAA also prohibited Casey from coaching at an NCAA institution for five years. He has had one appeal denied before the organization's Infractions Committee.

Casey said that letters from Emory and Security Experts will be sent to the NCAA in hopes of allowing him to return to coaching.

"Whatever happens is up to them," he said.

Campbell said he had initially wanted to sue the NCAA but Casey was against it because "he wants to coach and participate in NCAA basketball."

He said the NCAA "did what they needed to do and we believe they acted in good faith in what they did. They're human beings and they make mistakes and I believe they made a mistake in this case."

Campbell said he has been approached by two coaches at "prominent" schools wanting to know Casey's availability as a coach.

"I do want to coach intercollegiate athletes... I really believe in the NCAA and what it stands for," said Casey.

Campbell would not disclose the amount of the settlement.

"Emory made an offer of money to Dwane Casey that we agreed to accept," he said. "Emory conditioned that offer on the amount remaining confidential. We agreed to accept that as a condition. The amount of money will never be known to anybody other than Dwane Casey and his lawyer, Emory and his lawyer and the judge."

He added: "It would be in contempt of court for me to disclose the amount of the settlement."

Campbell said the two sides agreed that all claims would be dismissed with the settlements.

"The lawsuit is over," he said. "There are no claims pending against anybody. There is nothing else for the court to rule upon."

Don't extend fishing season

In response to H.W. Harris and Mr. Strang's letter:

We feel that allowing the extended fishing season and the six-fish limit is no better than slaughtering the most beautiful trophy fish in our area.

A sportsman dreams of "catching the big one." With things the way they are now, these dreams will never become reality.

Is this another way of spending taxpayers' money on yet another dam, or does the Fish and Game condone the slaughtering of our precious wildlife?

This extends to the pheasant season. They have allowed the pheasant to become almost extinct.

What's next, deer? You already allow extra tags for them as well. We have been in those areas and have not seen an overabundance of deer.

We thought the Fish and Game was there to preserve our wildlife, not put it up for slaughter.

Fish and Game, let's preserve our wildlife for our children to enjoy.

Zoos of another kind

In last Monday's Times-News (Oct. 29), you ran a picture story about the closure of the Stone Zoo in Stoneham, Mass. This was necessary due to budget cutbacks. This action would make all the animals homeless—unless they could find other places to put them.

You pictured an orangutan, named Betty, and Betty had a friend Stanley. This made me very sad. But after studying Betty's picture, I had a wonderful idea. If Stanley looked just half as smart as Betty, we could send them to the Idaho Legislature or our national Congress.

These are the most richly funded zoos in the world.

This boyfriend search wrong

I am writing regarding Z103 radio station. I feel, and have always felt, that a radio station is there to provide information and good music. I do not feel, however, that a radio station is there to submit personal views or discuss challenges. Personal mail may be having.

On Nov. 1, Stephanie took it upon herself to inform listeners that "men were scumbags and that she had had a recent argument with her boyfriend and that most that she knew were scum." She went on to say that "she was now taking applications for a new boyfriend, and to please submit a resume with a photograph to Z103 radio station."

She proceeded to give Z103's current address and added that "there just had to be some nice guys out there, she just couldn't find them."

Maybe Stephanie was joking. I do not know and to me that is irrelevant. I feel that she took advantage of the radio station and used it improperly. Not only that, but I feel that this behavior is very unprofessional.

All we have our own lives and challenges in life and do not have time into a radio station to hear about other's challenges. I feel that people could care less. Consider me "tuned out" and looking for a radio station that offers entertainment, information and a professional attitude.

Malad plant facts wrong

The Times-News recently printed a news story headlined "Ravenscroft determined to build Malad plant." Several clarifications are necessary to your readers to be informed as to the ownership and nature of the referenced project.

First, it is not a Vernon Ravenscroft project. The original idea, concept, and reservations for this project have been known and progressively developed for over 80 years.

In 1913, the Department of Interior set aside a federal power site withdrawal for this project area.

Pioneer power company (Beaver Power Co.) was formed and that company acquired property needed for water conveyance facilities from state of Idaho school endowment land. Idaho Power later purchased Beaver Power Co.

In 1975, the state Parks Department acquired 200 acres of this area from BLM. Once again, the power site reservation was honored. The original land patent issued to the state specifically reserved the power site plus a reservation for ditches and canals needed to convey water for power purposes by authority of the Federal Power Act.

The present group working to develop the project includes Ida-West Energy Co., a totally owned Idaho Power subsidiary and Consulting Associates Inc., a Boise-based consulting firm with three individual owners. I am one of those owners.

Your news article contained a number of generalized project references and allegations made by the Malad Park superintendent.

I believe the public has a right to understand the detailed work involved in licensing any hydro project.

To approve a project, it is necessary to conduct an ongoing series of state, local and federal agency consultations and to conduct studies by competent professional consultants so as to answer all legitimate questions raised from these agency reviews.

If anyone reading this letter has an interest in specific technical details of the project, they should address a written inquiry to Blaine Gruff, Malad Project Manager, Ida-West Energy Inc., 333 N. 13th, Boise, ID 83702.

I would personally observe that the ongoing Persian Gulf crisis has prompted this to gain examining its energy policy. The Congress has expressly stated that energy independence is in the national public interest. I believe you'll agree if this nation was energy independent, we would not be risking American lives in the Persian Gulf today.

Methodist chorale was great

What an inspirational way to start a week! I'm talking about the United Methodist Marie Valley Chorale that was held this past Sunday in Gooding under the direction of Dr. Wong of CSI.

At a time when all we hear and read about are the negative aspects of life—i.e. war around the world, pressure of Iraq, political accusations, teacher-negotiations, new-age movement—and what our kids have been exposed to next it's uplifting to know the Lord blessed us with music and many talented people.

I was not only honored when asked to accompany the Gooding Choir on flute, but was brought to tears of joy as the many voices made such beautiful and peaceful music.

My hat is off to all of you who participated. It was great! To those of you who missed it, maybe they'll make it an annual event and you can hear it next year.

Thanks again for giving my week such an upbeat start. God bless you.

Vote keeps Jerome behind

Congratulations, Jerome! You have managed to remain in the 1950s, while the rest of the world has entered the 1990s. By not passing the school bond to give our children the proper facilities, they are being given the message that quality is not a value to strive for.

Either the children are learning that mediocrity is acceptable, that education is best done in crowded classrooms; that teachers who are underpaid and overworked should continue serving the needs of children in facilities which work against their goals.

Write up, folks! The future is at hand and the future begins today! As our children climb the ladder of success, we've got to stop stepping on their hands. Stop holding children hostage to your own petty issues long gone.

If you voted no to the bond, then come join the Jerome Public Education Committee and help figure out what is to be done now.

Since you have already voiced your opinion, then take a stand on what you believe - or get out of the way, because the rest of us are going to move toward the future.

Enough of Charboneau

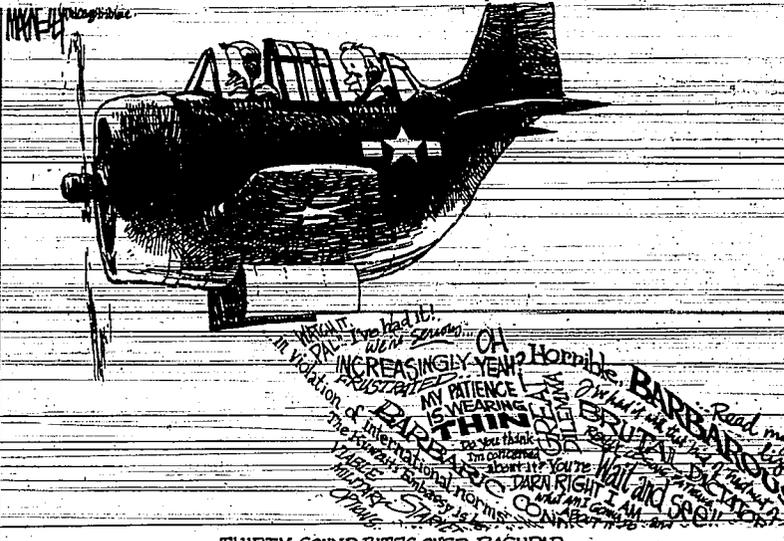

Poor Jaimi Charboneau, get a bloody nose! What about his ex-wife? What did she get?

I, for one, am sick and tired of hearing about a "convicted murderer" and his tantrums - about what he wants. He was convicted by a jury of his peers. For crying out loud, give us a break!

Thank you, Larry Gull, for finally being tired of this guy. Why not use the taxpayers' money for things like child abuse, drug and alcohol abuse; homeless people, instead of squandering it on some guy who murdered his ex-wife in a fit of anger.

Please, Times-News, enough of this crap about Jaimi Charboneau. Have some compassion for his ex-wife's family and let them make their trips!

Funds for Welk home wrong

We have raised taxes to reduce our national debt. We, as a nation to balance the budget, were to cut spending. Did we in the Congress and the Senate raise taxes to spend one half a million dollars to preserve and to keep a champagne bubble alive?

Must all America pay tax to preserve and restore the birthplace of Lawrence Welk, who in his own right is a multi-millionaire?

We can see the dollar signs for Stauberg, N.D., but must the whole nation pay for their prosperity?

While the rest of us hurt with unjust taxes, Lawrence Welk and his time slaves, on all over the U.S.A. and foreign holdings; Ocean Ave., Santa Monica, Calif. And God knows of how many other holdings and residuals from past performances.

If these places in North Dakota are to be preserved for posterity, then would it not be fair to all that Lawrence Welk with all his millions, foot the bill - not the American taxpayer?

Champagne music: it's just great. If we knew all the Jims we figured it was going to cost us half a million dollars, we think America would have turned him off.

And now he turns us off - the bubble burst.

Keep students out of strikes

History repeats itself. Might does not make right. Hostage taking is, not limited to foreign countries.

Children were held as ransom in the recent Bulter teacher strike. Teacher association members tactics of stripping classrooms, threatening grades, threatening people, encouraging students to "support" their teachers by being truant, walking out of school and breaking the rules has done more damage to "teacher credibility" in the eyes of students and parents and has hurt the student more than anything I have seen in the past 12 years since I moved to Bulter.

The strike may be over and proudly announced that it never really began, but teachers, please, have your rightfully due negotiations and leave the students out of it next time.

You have just managed to make your own job harder and to bite the hand that feeds you.

The emotional upheaval has sacrificed and interrupted the students' abilities to concentrate on their studies and they know you have not put their welfare first.

Teacher's thirty pieces of silver should make them enjoy their raise. To "support" God forgive us all. Perhaps other Magic Valley teachers can negotiate without such destruction.

Satan inspiring secret groups

America is a land of liberty; divinely selected to be a place of refuge for chosen people. There have been three great civilizations dwell here.

The two which preceded in each lasted for a thousand years or more. The second one perished about 400 A.D.

The cancer which caused the destruction of the first two is the same cancer which now covers America. It is called Secret Combinations.

What are Secret Combinations? There are groups of men who have received inspiration and guidance from Satan. They take oaths to uphold and protect each other in all manner of evil.

THIRTY SOUND BITES OVER BAGHDAD.

Their purpose is to get wealth and power. They kill, steal, and plunder to sustain themselves. Working is not part of their creed.

Both of these earlier nations perished because their systems became saturated with this practice.

They appealed to all classes of people, including church members who joined them who enjoyed the spoils, without working. They took over the government and court systems.

This eliminated all punishment for their deeds, and gave them official power to enforce their demands.

We have had prophesy that we would be subject to the same activities in our day. Accompanying the warning is an extortion to give citizens strength to stop it when it appears, or be destroyed.

Unfortunately, even so-called religious people have become intoxicated with this philosophy. It appears that the movement is compassionate, kind, and good. The character destruction of participants remains invisible.

Its only means of survival is the use of force.

This virus is spreading so rapidly across America and the world, that it appears impossible to avoid our fate.

Declaring sickness which covers the land, will precede that fateful day. It also preceded the final day of the other two great nations.

It was impossible to keep one's possessions, except for those which you could keep at your side, sleep with, and defend with your life.

They killed each other down to the last man.

I testify that this is true and that our nation is now involved with this terrible society and will reap the reward for doing so, I plead with us all to turn back before it is too late.

Freedom is proportionately based upon our willingness to accept personal responsibility. The more freedom, the more responsibility. The less freedom, the less responsibility.

There are no free rides. Tyranny is the end price for governmental paternalism.

U.S. troops in the wrong cause

The undersigned witnessed the appearance of President George Bush on CBS on Oct. 23. The president stated he would not negotiate a settlement with Iraq. The undersigned is certain the voters of this country will feel the above statement by the president does not represent the best interest of this country.

This writer's conclusion is he prefers a military settlement in preference to a peaceful one.

In the undersigned's opinion, the president by his statement before the election, has made it clear he does not represent the voters of this country by his retraction of the statement. "Read my lips: No new taxes." It has been reported, a man is only as good as his word.

Our government representatives are working hard to reduce the deficit by $500 billion in five years. New taxes is the solution; by reducing the waste of $180 billion each year that the General Accounting Office says Congress wastes. In five years, this waste applied to the deficit would reduce the deficit $900 billion without new taxes.

Why does Congress refuse to implement this saving?

The goals of the League of Nations, the Council of Foreign Relations and the Tri-Lateral Commission are not in the best interest of the citizens of this country. We should get out of the League of Nations, George Bush, before he ran for the office of vice president, was a member of the Council of Foreign Relations.

He resigned, but in so doing, he did not necessarily drop the goals of the organization.

The original goal of the Army and other branches of the service, was to protect the borders of this country. Not to police the world, as has been the case in this writer's lifetime.

Our president seems willing to sacrifice the lives of our youth and the tax dollars of this country's citizens. In an unnecessary war. This is evident by the presence of our military force in Saudi Arabia and our naval presence in the area. Our government has not learned from the past experience with the Arab nations in the Middle East.

Reference is made to the taking, holding and killing of hostages; the murder of U.S. servicemen in Lebanon. Our energy problem is not as bad as some would have us believe.

One would think the reasonable thing to do is not to get involved. If our Army now in Saudi Arabia was on the Mexican border, they would be leaving the purpose for which it was intended, protecting our borders.

Courageous action applauded

This letter is to Dion Connell. I, for one, would like to accept your apology. I think it takes a lot of courage on your part to admit to the public what you have done, where you are and how you are trying to improve.

It won't be easy, you've got a hard row to hoe. But you're going in the right direction.

Dion, you take care of yourself. I'm sure one-of-these-days we'll pass each other on the streets of Twin Falls. You won't know me, and I won't know you, but God does. With his help and your attitude, you'll do good. I'm putting all my money in your corner, Dion. We've got four aces!

Student without shots sent home

IDAHO FALLS — Third-grader Randy Hayes has been sent home from Idaho Falls' A.H. Bush Elementary School because he was not immunized against childhood diseases.

"I don't want to go home," the boy said after he was told Monday he was barred from school.

Bush Principal Robert Freeman said he dislikes sending children home, but knows of no better way to gain compliance with a new state immunization law.

Skateboarding raises ire in Shelley

SHELLEY — An increase in skateboard traffic on downtown sidewalks and parking lots in Shelley has business people worried about the safety of their customers.

But youths are contending they have no other place to go. In the middle are Shelley officials trying to find a solution.

"People are not allowed to ride a bike on the sidewalk, and a skateboard is the same type of wheeled conveyance," said Guy Carter, co-owner of the Dutch Treat Cafe in Shelley.

Snow closes some Yellowstone roads

IDAHO FALLS — An autumn storm has dumped up to a foot of snow in parts of eastern Idaho and closed the interior roads in Yellowstone National Park for the season.

Several minor accidents and slide-offs were reported in the wake of Sunday's storm. Snow was expected to continue Monday night, with an additional inch or two possible in some areas.

The Idaho Falls airport reported an inch on the tarmac, Rexburg checked in with three inches and St. Anthony had four inches.

This weekend, the National Park Service said it would keep roads open in Yellowstone National Park, barring a sudden change in the weather.

Boise man wins final lottery truck

BOISE — A Boise man has won the 15th and final new pickup truck in the Idaho Lottery Commission's "Bucks and Trucks" game and the game officially ended Monday.

Lottery officials said Warren Robertson, 19, bought a winning ticket at a Idaho truck stop over the weekend. He won a new pickup truck worth $20,000.

People with other winning tickets in the game have until May 4 to claim their prizes. Retailers have until Feb. 3 to turn in unused tickets.

Agreement on mentally ill reached

MOSCOW — A protocol spelling out ways to keep the mentally ill who have not committed crimes out of the Latah County Jail has been approved by county and Gritman Memorial Hospital officials.

The agreement comes after months of negotiations with the city of Moscow and advocates with the mentally ill.

The Latah Alliance for the Mentally Ill petitioned the Latah County commissioners last winter, charging the mentally ill were being jailed although they had not been arrested for any crimes, and in spite of a holding room reserved for that purpose at Gritman.

On Monday, Sheriff Ken Buxton, Moscow Police Chief Dave Cameron, Gritman administrator Bob Colvin and the commissioners signed a "mutual support" agreement to assure the jail is a last resort.

"It will serve as a training tool as well as a guideline for action on the street," Cameron said.

International Draft Horse Show set

POST FALLS — The International Draft Horse Show will be held at Sandpoint again this coming summer, after the association's directors voted to sign a five-year lease for the Bommer County Fair grounds.

The lease has a one-year option clause that gives horse show directors an out if the county and Sandpoint Chamber of Commerce fail to make promised improvements.

Hunting accident kills Blackfoot youth

SODA SPRINGS — A 14-year-old Blackfoot youth has died in a hunting accident south of Bancroft.

Trenton Lowe suffered a fatal gunshot wound about 10 a.m. Saturday. The Cassia County Sheriff's Department said the death occurred when a rifle fell to the ground and discharged or impacted.

Speeding ticket allegation upsets Andrus

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus, reportedly outraged by a report that state troopers were told to avoid speeding citations for legislators and other state officials, is calling Law Enforcement Director Rick Richardson and State Patrol Superintendent Rich Humphreys on the carpet.

Andrus spokesman Marc Johnson on Monday said the governor had tentatively scheduled a meeting in his office with the two for Tuesday.

Responding to disclosures of the speed-tolerance policy's existence by The Idaho Statesman on Sunday, Andrus said he would take disciplinary action against Richardson if he is found responsible for the alleged policy.

"The charge that has been made is very, very serious," Andrus said. "If the allegation is true, you bet your life there is going to be disciplinary action."

He did not specify what disciplinary action was being contemplated. The governor talked with both speed-tolerance critics Johnson said, and while Richardson did not deny that troopers believed a policy of favoritism existed, Andrus remained unsure just what was done or said to create that belief.

Richardson has been attending a law enforcement meeting in Twin Falls and was not expected back until Tuesday. Humphreys confirmed existence of the policy to the newspaper, maintaining it was Richardson who instituted it.

"I put an end to it instantly," Andrus said after being made aware of the policy. From now on, he said, legislators "better watch that speedometer."

Richardson, who was appointed by Andrus in December 1986, could not be reached for comment on Sunday. The disclosure gave underdog Republican gubernatorial candidate Roger Fairchild another opening to criticize the governor, blaming Andrus for the favoritism.

Andrus may not have initiated the policy, Fairchild said, but "the buck stops at the governor's desk. I think cronism runs rampant through his whole administration."

The former state Senate GOP floor leader said he has been stopped twice for speeding this year and paid fines each time. He said he never spoke to Richardson for speeding while serving in the Legislature.

Andrus said the only accurate statement made by Fairchild in his eleventh-hour charge is that the buck stops at the governor's desk.

State Senate Judiciary Chairman Denton Darrington, R-Declo, expressed no surprise "if it were an unwritten policy. The State Police would like to be looked upon favorably" by the Legislature, said Darrington, who said he has never been stopped for speeding. "He has no strong feelings about favoritism one way or the other."

But House Judiciary Chairman Don Loveland, R-Boise, was outraged by existence of the "go easy" policy. "If the department is doing that, they are out of line," he said. "Strong feelings about favoritism run throughout the state said they were under pressure to engage in selective enforcement, instructed by captains to be lax with lawmakers and an unnamed roster of authority figures."

They said the message was delivered in a series of regional briefings from an April 24 meeting, obtained by The Statesman, said "Policy of Tolerance. Don't write (tickets to) legislators; they control the money!"

Another document from a Jan. 18 meeting included the statement, "Regarding citing legislators and other authority figures, the director quotes, 'We will take a path of tolerance.'" But another trooper disputed the claims, saying he felt under no pressure to treat state officials differently from the general motoring public and at least two Republican state senators — Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, and 1st District congressional candidate Skip Smyser — both acknowledged being stopped in the past. Crapo said he was ticketed and paid the fine. Smyser said he simply received a warning.

Cpl. Del Foster, a 24-year veteran based in Mountain Home, said he decided on his own only to warn Smyser, then chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee.

Smyser did not seek special treatment, he said. "You get the feeling that the best policy is to quietly let them go and don't worry about it," he said.

Smyser, who acknowledged receiving nothing stronger than a warning from troopers in the past, discounted the claim of selective enforcement and doubted it was really taking place on Idaho's highways.

But Cpl. Elias Lieja maintained he was disciplined because he decided to ticket Bonneville County Sheriff Richard Ackerman, now a candidate for state Senate, and Ackerman's daughter for speeding.

Ackerman said he paid the fine, but complained about rude treatment from Lieja, who is appealing the action against him because of the incident.

Neighbors concerned about possible dump

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A proposed Bonneville County landfill site in the foothills east of Idaho Falls is running into flak from neighbors worried about everything from traffic to property values.

But Long said those concerns may apply to the current landfill, but not to the new one.

He said there would be no blowing trash.

The garbage would be compacted and recyclables taken from the waste stream at transfer stations before it goes to the landfill. The public takes in trash to the transfer stations.

Long said only 20 trucks a day would go to the new landfill, compared to the 20-trucks-per-hour driving to the current dump north of Idaho Falls.

The transfer stations would also cut down on the garbage that would come from the INEL and other counties. No toxic waste would come from the INEL, he said.

As for groundwater contamination, Long said the dump will have a liner of clay or plastic and any leachates will be collected.

Long said it is the best interest of the people of Idaho Falls to have the pit in that location," said resident Jeff Ogden.

"Once the landowners know what a subtle D landfill is, a lot of steam will go out of the furnace," Long said, referring to the expected Environmental Protection Agency regulations that will govern landfills.

Commissioners chose the site after a 4-month selection process. Since the choice was announced, some neighbors have said they are confused or upset.

Craig Jensen, who owns land just south of the site, has a number of concerns. He believes the new landfill could pollute groundwater and lower the value of his property.

"We had people calling from all around, and they're up in arms," Jensen said.

Bud Johnson, also a neighbor, said all that came to the area in hard winters could be affected.

And he fears heavy traffic if other counties and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory form a region

Valley life

Husband just hadn't thought about 2 extra wives for a long time

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an American, but I was born in the Philippines. Wilbur is 55 and I am 36. We've been married for eight years, and he adopted my two children. (I was a widow.)

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Yesterday I got a telephone call from a woman who said: "Hello, my name is Mary Elizabeth (Y) and her last name was the same as mine, so said, 'Oh, you must be related to Wilbur.' She said, 'Yes, he's my husband.'"

I was so shocked I could hardly speak, then I told her that Wilbur was also my husband. She was very surprised and said she had wanted a divorce so she could marry someone else.

Abby, Wilbur never mentioned that he was married before. Anyways,

I took her number to give to Wilbur. When he came home I told him about Mary Elizabeth, and he just laughed and said he had not thought of her for a long time. Then I said, "Maybe you have yet another wife who would like a divorce?" To my surprise, he said, "Yes, I have. Last I heard she was in San Antonio, Texas, but this doesn't bother me, I won't bother her."

I asked if he had any children. He said, "No, my first wife gave me a vasectomy for a wedding present."

Abby, now I worry about whether our marriage is legal. He's a kind and decent man, owns his own business and has been a fine father to my children. We were married by a Navy chaplain. But are we really married? Please tell me what to do.

—VERY WORRIED
DEAR WORRIED: Your husband should see a lawyer. He has at least two marriages that need to be dissolved before he is free to marry you.

DEAR ABBY: Please help settle a family argument. My husband thought Traci, our 14-year-old daughter, was spending too much time on the telephone. So he gave her a five-minute limit on all telephone calls. I think this is unfair. I equate Traci's telephone calls with "hanging out" as we did on street corners before we had telephones—and lived near enough to walk to our friends' houses. Therefore, my heart is not really into enforcing Dad's five-minute rule—especially since we have "call waiting" phones—and lived near enough to walk to our friends' houses. Therefore, my heart is not really into enforcing Dad's five-minute rule—especially since we have "call waiting" phones—and lived near enough to walk to our friends' houses. Therefore, my heart is not really into enforcing Dad's five-minute rule—especially since we have "call waiting" phones—and lived near enough to walk to our friends' houses.

—TRACI'S MOM
DEAR MOM: First, some pertinent unanswered questions: How are Traci's grades? Has she been neglecting anything of importance in order to "hang out" on the telephone? The telephone to some teen-agers is a lifeline, so since you have "call waiting"—and if Traci hasn't been neglecting her homework and chores—imposing a five-minute limit borders on cruel and unusual punishment.

I think Dad should lighten up.

Voting on what's best for coming generations

Election Day today has me in a tizzy. First, I must write out my choices. Then line up my shoes. Shoes? Yes. Let me explain.

One election morning, I arose extra early and dressed in the dark, eager to be among the first walking in line for the polls to open—a tradition in my family.

The one person I recognized in my new neighborhood stood behind me in line. We watched the gray dawn creep over the school designated as a polling place. Then we entered the gymnasium lined with voting booths.

I stepped into a booth and drew the curtains behind me. My neighbor could see only my legs. He wasn't being rude; that's all anyone can see of people in the act of voting. When I came out, he had news for me.

I was wearing one black shoe and one blue. It could have been worse—One shoe could have been red, because whenever I find shoes I like, I buy the same style in various colors. That's why, when elections roll around, I set out my shoes.

As for having in hand a list of preferences for candidates and ballot proposals, that's another family tradition.

I did it better in my younger years as a member of the League of Women Voters. We studied issues all year, not merely at election time. I didn't have to ponder yes or no. I knew.

Some things I voted for over the years are forgettable. Once I marked an X for a judge thinking he was the man who championed rehabilitation programs. Well, he had the same first and last name, but he wasn't the right man. Far from it, I winced.

Other choices are sweetly memorable: When I visit the old neighborhood and realize it has the best schools in my home state, I feel good about the bond issues we voters worked so hard to pass decades ago.

Come to think of it, I vote these days on the basis of what is best for coming generations. Many older people do. What kind of education, what kind of environment, what kind of society do we want the children to inherit? What freedoms do we want to ensure for them?

Our generation has lived through wars, the Great Depression, recessions, and every kind of rehabilitation challenge. We know firsthand that citizenship carries a big price tag in terms of diligence and activism.

That's why so many older people write so many letters to government officials; attend rallies at the drop of a slogan; speak up at council and school board meetings. We name our telephone, we send contributions

Call us names if you disagree on a particular issue, but don't call us in different.

In the last national election, 78.4 percent of those 65 and older said they were registered to vote, and 68.8 percent said they voted—a remarkable statistic in this land of low-voter turnout.

So I figure the least I can do to show my respect when I go to the polls is to have a list in hand—and wear shoes that match.

Stiff sentences handed down in drug cases

BOISE — Three Minidoka County men convicted of cocaine trafficking and related charges earlier this year received stiff prison sentences Monday.

Rene Perales, 34, of Rupert was sentenced to 15 years in a federal prison. Salvador Rios, 36, of Paul was sentenced to 10 years in a federal prison.

Gerald Rex Draper Jr., 31, of Paul was sentenced to 13 1/2 years in federal prison. In addition, each man will undergo five years of supervised release after serving their prison terms.

The sentences were handed down by U.S. District Judge Edward Lodes.

These defendants were responsible for the largest single deliveries of cocaine to law enforcement ever prosecuted in Idaho, said U.S. Attorney Maurice Ellsworth.

The substantial sentence each received should send a clear message to those involved in drug trafficking in Idaho — If you deal drugs, sooner or later we'll catch you.

Because parole has been eliminated from the federal system, the sentences must be served with only minimal reductions for good behavior.

Judge reduces bail for man charged in Wendell murder

GOODING — Bond for a 19-year-old Wendell man charged with second degree murder that week has been reduced to $25,000.

Will A. Beaver was arrested Oct. 31 after the shooting death of a former California man. He remained in the Gooding County Jail Monday afternoon.

Bond was originally set at $100,000, but 5th District Magistrate Judge Thomas Cushman reduced the amount at a hearing late Friday.

It was satisfied his attorney had provided me with sufficient information to justify the reduction, Cushman said. Beaver is represented by Gooding County Public Defender Severi Swenson, who declined comment.

Beaver's family ties to the area were considered in his ruling, Cushman said. Beaver's mother and grandmother live in Wendell.

Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson had requested the original bond amount, arguing that the nature of the incident and Beaver's lack of ties to the community warranted the higher amount.

Candidates, public to gather at Republican headquarters

TWIN FALLS — The public is invited to spend election night at the Twin Falls County Republican headquarters, where candidates and party workers will await the results of today's balloting.

The gathering begins at 8 p.m. at GOP offices, 1180 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. Refreshments will be served.

Court date set for rancher accused of threat to ranger

TWIN FALLS — Oakley, rancher Winslow Whiteley will appear in federal magistrate court Monday Nov. 12 to enter his plea to charges that he threatened the life of a federal officer.

Whiteley was cited by the U.S. Forest Service for allegedly threatening the life of Twin Falls District Ranger Don Oman.

Whiteley's attorney, Ken Pedersen, said he will plead not guilty and would likely ask for a trial in federal district court on the misdemeanor charge.

Seminar scheduled on how to deal with the media

TWIN FALLS — A seminar and workshop on how to deal with the media will be sponsored by the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, the College of Southern Idaho and the Better Business Bureau of Southwest Idaho on Nov. 20.

Speaker at the day-long seminar will be Steve Lemay, who was press secretary to former Idaho Gov. John Evans and did consulting work for former President Jimmy Carter.

The class is limited to 20 people. Registration fee is $89 and includes lunch. The session will be held in the CSI Development Center telecommunications classroom.

Thanks to some gusty winds, a simple game of catch turned into a tree climbing expedition for Valley High School student Aric McClain Monday afternoon. He and some friends were throwing an "Aerobic Ring" at the CSI campus when it became caught on a tree branch. "I don't think it's going to come off, dude," he said after several tosses of a shoe in the ring's direction.

Citizens groups to test waters for school bond issue

By Kirk Mitchell, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A citizens committee promoting a $9 million school bond issue election in Twin Falls will form five new subcommittees to test community sentiment toward the proposal.

Gurth Eaton, chairman of the 25-member Community Committee, told the Twin Falls School Board Monday the subcommittees will explain the bond proposal to members of the Twin Falls community and relay their perceptions back to the trustees.

Some committee members recently expressed doubts about the Twin Falls School District's ability to sell some parts of the bond proposal to the public, especially the planned construction of a new auditorium and gymnasium at Twin Falls High School and a companion plan to send all ninth graders in the district to Robert Stuart Junior High School.

The school board will decide early next year whether to hold a bond issue election to build a new $9 million middle school and make $3 million in improvements to the high school, including 10 new classrooms, the auditorium and the gymnasium. The plan would also make O'Leary Junior High School a second middle school.

The subcommittees will seek advice from people in education, the professions, business and government.

A fifth subcommittee will be responsible for producing brochures and for mailing information.

If there were an overwhelming negative reaction to any one part of that, then the board would have to pay attention," Eaton said.

School Board Chairman Steve Tolman said it is important that community feedback be funneled through the Community Committee to add credibility to the information.

He added that any committee recommendation to alter the bond issue proposal should come soon so the district has a chance to promote a new concept.

Once the proposals have passed their initial opinion-gathering tasks, they will help promote the bonding issue, Eaton said.

The Community Committee will meet next week to start forming the five subcommittees. At that time, the district will help pamphlets to committee members to help them promote the bond issue proposal.

Eaton said the school board has done a great job laying the groundwork for the election and he was skeptical whether a modification of the proposal would be necessary.

"This is a defensible proposal," he said.

Right to Life leaflets left at churches raises concern

By Anita Dennis, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Campaign to Life of Idaho's distribution of right to life leaflets at churches Sunday was unfair politicking, critics say.

"I think there should be a separation of church and state and they should not be handing out political information at the churches, even with their approval," said Pam Lincoln, chairwoman of Magic Valley Citizens for Choice.

"We make no apology," says Right to Life of Idaho, Inc., statement released Sunday. "It is a well-known fact that church-going believers tend to be pro-life. The churches had nothing to do with the distribution of our literature. It was our freedom of speech that was exercised today — not the churches."

The anti-abortion group says its last-minute, statewide campaign effort is legal under a 1938 U.S. Supreme Court decision that declared a municipal law illegal because it violated freedom of the press by prohibiting the distribution of literature of any kind, at any time, at any place and in any manner.

Churchgoers of many denominations received the leaflets in Twin Falls, Jerome, Minidoka, Gooding, Cassia and Lincoln counties, said Marilyn Scott, president of the group's Magic Valley chapter.

Pastors were not contacted beforehand, Scott said, and anti-abortion activists simply placed fliers on parked cars; they did not go into churches.

"It really shouldn't even be an issue. Everything in Idaho was totally legal," she said.

At least one minister did not appreciate members of her congregation finding fliers, which endorse pro-life candidates for state office and U.S. Senate candidate Larry Craig, on their cars as they left church.

"I certainly don't support their tactics. I thought that was an inappropriate action," said Rebecca Ireland, minister of the United Methodist Church of Filer.

"It's a Sunday. It's not a time to be up on the political soap box," Ireland said. Churches should be involved in the political arena, but not without consent, not on a Sunday and not involving one-sided material, she said.

The interim pastor of the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls, Robert Smith, said a member of the congregation asked to make the literature available in the church, but that would be could not.

"All it would do is create divisiveness," Smith said. Instead, fliers were left on parked cars outside of church doors. "It's not an endorsement of any kind by the church," Smith said.

Churches in and around churches were not present at a reading of Sunday's distribution of leaflets, Fran Hernandez, secretary at St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls, said her church was contacted in advance and approved the distribution of the pro-life campaign literature.

Fliers were placed in the entryway for people to pick-up if they chose, Hernandez said.

Minister Mike Bullard of Twin Falls' First Presbyterian Church said he, too, was contacted 11 days ago by someone from a pro-life group who asked if Bullard or his church would hand out the group's materials.

Bullard said he refused because it would be illegal.

"For a tax-exempt charitable organization such as a church, we may campaign for issues. We may not campaign for candidates," Bullard said.

The Internal Revenue Service has rules prohibiting churches from distributing literature, such as candidate report cards and does not allow the distribution of political literature close to the election, he said.

Laurel Morgan, a public affairs specialist with the IRS in Boise, could not say whether Right to Life of Idaho's campaign at church steps violated federal law.

A full-featured examination would have to be completed, reviewing the materials and circumstances on a case-by-case basis, Morgan said.

"It's not something we're going to go out in the public and say, 'They did this. This is wrong,'" she said.

Rebecca Dehal and a board member of Right to Life of Idaho, said "sour grapes" is behind the criticisms of her group's actions.

"Anything we did yesterday cannot affect any church's tax status," she said.

Council rejects northeast city development

By Phil Sahn, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council upheld Monday night the Planning and Zoning Commission's denial of a 22-lot subdivision proposed for Mountain View Drive.

The developers, Snake River Estates, wanted to develop Falls East Estates, Three on S. 3/4 acres in the northeast corner of the city. But many area residents opposed the development, contending that lot sizes, projected to average about 8,000 square feet, were too small for the area.

"We want the requirements for an R-2 zone. On average we've met the requirements if an R-1-8,000 zone," said engineer Dale Riedesel, who represented the developer, Richard Messersmith.

The amount of usable building space on the lots, called "the building envelope," would have been smaller than those in neighboring subdivisions, Riedesel told the council.

He also said city services are available and a sewer line would be brought in to the development. The proposal conforms with the city's master street plan, Riedesel said.

But residents were not swayed by his remarks.

"The lot sizes simply are not consistent with those in the surrounding area," said Tom High, who lives in the neighborhood. "This is not, as the Planning and Zoning Commission said, part of the harmonious development of the area."

Lot sizes of other subdivisions in the area average more than 11,000 square feet.

Besides the lot sizes, residents also expressed concern about the traffic the development would generate and the fact that there were no restrictive covenants presented in the developer's original plans, High said.

Developer Lyle Frazier spoke in favor of the development, saying the city needs more affordable lots in that area of town.

Messersmith told the council that restrictive covenants would be submitted with the final draft of the subdivision plans. No duplexes would be allowed under the covenants, he said.

The council voted unanimously against the proposal, as the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Messersmith had approached the planning commission last July but the plan was rejected. The Commission wanted larger lot sizes.

The commission voted 9-0 against the development. The City Council voted 5-0 to reject the proposal Monday night.

"I hope you don't get the feeling that all city employees are dissatisfied with the job you're doing," Stewart said.

The interim pastor of the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls, Robert Smith, said a member of the congregation asked to make the literature available in the church, but that would be could not.

"All it would do is create divisiveness," Smith said. Instead, fliers were left on parked cars outside of church doors. "It's not an endorsement of any kind by the church," Smith said.

Churches in and around churches were not present at a reading of Sunday's distribution of leaflets, Fran Hernandez, secretary at St. Edward's Catholic Church in Twin Falls, said her church was contacted in advance and approved the distribution of the pro-life campaign literature.

Fliers were placed in the entryway for people to pick-up if they chose, Hernandez said.

Minister Mike Bullard of Twin Falls' First Presbyterian Church said he, too, was contacted 11 days ago by someone from a pro-life group who asked if Bullard or his church would hand out the group's materials.

Bullard said he refused because it would be illegal.

"For a tax-exempt charitable organization such as a church, we may campaign for issues. We may not campaign for candidates," Bullard said.

The Internal Revenue Service has rules prohibiting churches from distributing literature, such as candidate report cards and does not allow the distribution of political literature close to the election, he said.

Laurel Morgan, a public affairs specialist with the IRS in Boise, could not say whether Right to Life of Idaho's campaign at church steps violated federal law.

A full-featured examination would have to be completed, reviewing the materials and circumstances on a case-by-case basis, Morgan said.

"It's not something we're going to go out in the public and say, 'They did this. This is wrong,'" she said.

Rebecca Dehal and a board member of Right to Life of Idaho, said "sour grapes" is behind the criticisms of her group's actions.

"Anything we did yesterday cannot affect any church's tax status," she said.

Twin Falls vet faces burglary, assault charges

By Anita Dennis, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls veterinarian David James Stafford has been charged with first-degree burglary and aggravated assault against another veterinarian with whom he once had an extended feud.

Unbelievable. Incredible. Our innocence will be shown. I guarantee you," Stafford said in response to the charges.

The 37-year-old veterinarian is tangled in legal tangles. Stafford has been summoned to appear in court Nov. 13 on the two new felony charges, and he is also scheduled to go to trial in January on a charge of grand theft in connection with surgery that a client says was never actually performed on his dog. That theft has also cost Stafford $100,000 in legal fees, an unfair enrichment and breach of contract.

Utah police report no new leads in search for parents of baby

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Police have no new leads in their efforts to locate the mother of a newborn infant left on an Ogden doorstep last Thursday.

But Detective David Lucas said still hopes to hear from the mother. "There is the possibility that the mom is not OK," he said Monday. "People have been coming down hard on the mom, but it may not have been the mom (that left the baby). We hope she will come forward so we know she is OK."

An 8-pound, 4-ounce baby girl was found in the front doorstep of Melba Bingham's home sometime Thursday. There was no note of explanation left with the child.

Doctors said the girl appeared to be 12-24 hours old and accept for low temperature, was in good condition. It did not appear the child was born in a hospital.

The girl remained in good condition at McKay-Dee Hospital Monday, a hospital spokesman said.

Lucas said several people called in with tips following extensive news coverage of the case, but none have panned out.

The most solid lead police have is a description of a light green Ford Taurus with Idaho license plates seen cruising through the area prior to the discovery, Lucas said.

A private family graveside memorial service was held Nov. 3 in Halley.

Raymond Tolman

JEROME — Raymond Tolman, 77, of Jerome, died Saturday, Nov. 3, 1990, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

He was born April 20, 1913, in Madison, Idaho, the son of Cyrus O. Tolman and Sarah Hunt Tolman. He was raised and educated in Cassin County. He was then employed in road construction. He married Florence Davidson on Nov. 24, 1936, in the Salt Lake City LDS Temple. He worked in the munitions industry in the College of Pharmacy, Pocatello, before moving to Oregon in 1948.

They lived first in Vale and then in Ontario for 29 years, where he was employed as a plumber. They moved to Salt Lake City in 1971 and to Idaho in 1981. They have lived in Jerome for the past two years.

He was a member of the LDS Church. Surviving are two daughters, Connie, the daughter of Cheryl and Jeffrey Harris of Jerome; and one sister, Josephine Dolittle-Harris. She was raised in Halley and graduated from St. Mary's of the Wasatch Academy in Salt Lake City. She then attended the University of Utah and earned a Bachelor of Science degree from the College in Boise. She moved to Los Angeles and was employed as a personal secretary for the owner/manager of the Redlyn Hotel. She married John Mulvihill in 1922 in Boise and he died in 1943. She married A.M. Huffman in 1947. They lived in Victorville for a short time and then moved to Casper, Wyo. After her husband's death, they moved to Ketchum and then to Jerome in 1973. They were later divorced.

She was a member of Chapter E-PEO, the Jerome County Club and was a pink lady for the Montiz Hospital Auxiliary in Sun Valley.

Surviving are two nieces, Josephine Hildreth of Jerome and Ruth Peterson of Twin Falls; one nephew, Charles Harris of Halley; and several great- and great-great nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by one sister, one brother and one niece.

Thieves offer drug bribe after running into deputy's car

SPOKANE (AP) — A couple of thugs offered a deputy sheriff's automobile with their stolen car and later tried to bribe him with some low priced cocaine, sheriff's officers said.

Spokane County Sheriff's Lt. John Simmons said two unidentified men were in a 15-year-old car when they hit deputy Brian Miller's personal car Sunday, causing minor damage.

Miller, who was off duty, chased the car into a shopping center but was not equipped to sustain help, Simmons said.

Miller told the men he was a deputy and asked their names so he could file a police report for insurance purposes, Simmons said.

The passenger shouted at Miller but after he calmed down, the men offered to sell Miller good cocaine for half-price, Simmons said Monday.

"It was after he identified himself as an officer, Simmons said, 'I don't know what they were thinking.'"

Miller went home to call Spokane police and dispatchers described the car that hit his had been stolen.

The Washington State Patrol arrested the driver of the car on Interstate 90 west of Spokane, Simmons said.

Officers were still looking for the second man, Simmons said.

Lula Z. Webb

BUHL — Lula Z. Webb, 95, formerly of Castleford and Buhl, died Saturday, Nov. 3, 1990, at the Burley Care Center.

She was born Jan. 30, 1895, in Osage, Ark., the daughter of Sanders and Mary Elizabeth Bunch. She married Doyle Webb on Dec. 19, 1914, in Hopeway, N.M. They moved to Elmhurst, Wash., and then to Castleford, where they farmed until moving to Buhl in 1958.

She was active in church and community activities in Buhl and Castleford.

Surviving are three sons, Donald "Bud" Webb of Rupert, Charles "Chick" Webb of Lewiston, Norman and Norman "Bill" Webb of Nampa; 13 grandchildren; 39 great-grandchildren; and seven great-great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband in 1976, one son and three grandchildren.

County fair earned $18,000 more this year than in 1989

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Fair earned $18,000 more this year than last. As always, all of the money ultimately will be plowed back into the fairgrounds and next year's fair.

The annual agricultural expo earned $82,147 in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, according to audit figures released to the Fair Board

Monday by McMullen, McPhee & Co. The previous year, the fair earned $64,373.

Overall, the fair's net earnings were $29,853 less than the Fair Board budgeted, but the audit included $30,171 in depreciation that the board did not budget for.

Also, the board budgets more for items such as grandstand entertainment to give it flexibility in selecting acts, fair manager Cindy Demoney said.

This year, the fair earned about $57,000 less on the Nitty-Gritty Dirt Band and Marie Osmond than budgeted, but the groups also cost less than the board budgeted for entertainment.

"What we do is budget for some uncertainty," Demoney said.

It cost $400,576 to put on the 1990 fair. The event generated $468,864 in revenues.

The fair received $10,782 in county property taxes, with the remainder of the county's $12,000 annual allocation listed as "property tax receivable."

The fair owns assets totaling $884,084, including $722,173 in "property, plants and equipment," as well as $157,558 in the bank in other business.

The Fair Board approved a three-year carnival contract Monday, locking in the fair on Labor Day weekend for three more years.

Reed Williams of Inland Empire

Shows had insisted that a change in fair dates to the last full week of August would not work for him, Chairman Roy Jessor reported.

"Some of the dates we were talking about moving to would be completely impossible for him to provide the carnival," Jessor said.

But apparently Williams' schedule is flexible enough to allow a run that either begins or ends on Labor Day.

The board re-estimated an additional $14,500 for capital improvements for the Capital Planning Committee to propose spending. Demoney mentioned that several roofs in fair buildings were in need of repair.

The board decided to hold a contest for the public to select the 1991 fair theme.

Fair staffers received an across-the-board 8 percent raise.

Demoney received a $1,000 bonus and Assistant Manager Bill Baker received a $600 bonus.

Vet

The new criminal charges stem from two incidents that occurred more than a year ago.

According to police reports, a residence in the 800 block of Ash Street was burglarized on Halloween 1988 and a microwave oven worth $200 was taken.

Before that, on Sept. 15, 1989, Twin Falls veterinarian Robert L. Monroe told police he was in his vehicle on Kimberly Road and was stopped at its intersection with Lo-way Street when he glanced at a pickup truck in the left lane and saw a driver pointing a gun at him.

"I haven't even been close to the man in years. I avoid him at every opportunity," Stafford said.

Monroe and Stafford were locked in a 16-month legal dispute in 1988 and 1989 over property that Stafford purchased from Monroe 12 years ago.

Court records say Stafford stopped paying for the buildings while he still owed $71,500, and in March 1988, Monroe sued to foreclose on the two buildings. Stafford filed a counterclaim, accusing Monroe of breaching their contract and disparaging Stafford's business reputation.

In July 1989 the two settled out of court. But before and during the court case, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spent many months investigating reports of vandalism, burglary and other incidents from each veterinarian.

In February 1987, Stafford's veterinary hospital was burglarized; in March, someone put sugar into the gas tank of Monroe's truck.

In May, Monroe reported that two of his horses had been poisoned; in June, Stafford's Arabian stallion was poisoned and died.

In March 1988, Monroe's dog was shot and killed; in April, Stafford received an anonymous phone call telling him to leave town or he would end up like his horse.

At the time, each veterinarian sued the other; but, each denied involvement in the other's problems.

Stafford's attorney, Greg Fuller, said the charges took his client and himself by surprise.

He acknowledged that the same name was involved in the new charge, but he couldn't say if there was any connection to the past.

Monroe could not be reached for comment Monday.

This April, Stafford was charged with felony grand theft by deception.

Prosecutors charge in that case that he was paid $427 for repairing a dog's fractured leg when in fact there was no fracturing and no surgery was performed.

The dog's owner, Gary Thietten, has sued Stafford in connection with the grand theft charge.

He says Stafford perpetrated, fraud, was negligent and unjustly enriched and failed to perform services promised. Thietten seeks a jury trial and compensation determined by the court.

Idaho Deputy Attorney General Dallas Burkhalter said he has looked into the grand theft charge for the State Board of Veterinary Medicine, but the board has not determined whether it will take administrative action, Stafford's license is intact, he said.

Stafford says all the criminal allegations are false and will be proven so in court.

"It's just a nasty vendetta," he said.

Hospital earnings nearly double projections

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center exceeded income projections by 96 percent last year with total earnings of $2 million.

Hospital Administrator John Bingham reported to the facility's board of trustees Monday for financial year 1989-90, which ended on Sept. 30.

The biggest difference between actual income and projections was in the operating budget. It was projected to be $7,182, but actually was $11,670, or 57 percent as much as anticipated.

Non-operating income was $1.6 million, or 56 percent higher than hospital officials projected.

Net revenue of $30.8 million was 12 percent higher than the hospital's anticipated revenue of $27.6 million. It cost $30.4 million to operate the hospital, which was 57.8 million more than projected.

The reason revenues exceeded projections was that both the number of days patients stayed in the hospital and average number of patients were higher than expected.

MVRMC had 5,420 admissions during the year, and officials had anticipated only 5,099.

Hospital Board Chairman Ben Kalz said he was impressed that the hospital administrator was able to estimate revenue and patient visits with as much accuracy as it has.

The only area in which actual revenue was lower than what was projected was out-patient services.

Even then, revenues were 29.8 percent higher than last year, which was 2 percent lower than projected.

In other business, the Hospital Board approved the purchase of two lasers for $255,750 for surgical procedures at the hospital.

The lasers will be used to vaporize, coagulate, excise, ablate and weld cell tissue. The lasers do not alter normal cell tissue during surgery, and at the same time reduce blood loss, recovery time and the length of the operation.

Brandt off to Baghdad on renegade mission

The Associated Press

A former West German chancellor broke ranks and headed for Iraq on Monday to seek freedom for foreigners held hostage by Saddam Hussein, and the European Community convened a special session in hopes of keeping members in line.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III met with the exiled emir of Kuwait, and volunteered that military action to recover the oil-rich emirate from Iraqi invaders was under consideration.

The USS Midway, one of four American aircraft carriers deployed as part of Operation Desert Shield, entered the Persian Gulf, since the U.S. Independence, which left the gulf last month after a few days, the Midway apparently was sent in as a show of force.

Iraq meanwhile said that in the event of war over Kuwait, it would attack Arab countries participating in the U.S.-led multinational force.

The latest mission to Baghdad was mounted by former Chancellor Willy Brandt, who left Germany on Monday in a chartered Lufthansa Airbus that can carry about 250 people. Brandt, who was seen off by Iraq's ambassador to Germany, carried letters and a bouquet of flowers from relatives of the estimated 400 German hostages.

Brandt's mission has the backing of the German government despite the EC's stand against negotiating for the release of the hundreds of foreigners in Iraq and Kuwait. Saddam has tried to use the hostages — whom he calls "guests" — to splinter the alliance against him.

Also Monday, a delegation of Irish legislators left Baghdad after talks with Iraqi officials aimed at winning freedom for an estimated 220 Irish

"We are given in believe that the Iraqi government will soon resolve the issue of Iraqi guests," said Irish lawmaker Michael Higgins.

Former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone of Japan also was meeting with Iraqi officials in hopes of winning the release of more than 300 Japanese hostages.

Diplomatic sources in Baghdad said David Lange, a former prime minister of New Zealand, and Anker Jorgensen, a former prime minister of Denmark, plan to come to Iraq and Ireland, Germany and Denmark are EC members. A special meeting of European Community foreign ministers was scheduled in Rome for Monday night to discuss departures from the EC policy.

During the weekend, about 50 British and American hostages in Iraq were allowed to call relatives at home.

State Department deputy spokesman Richard Boucher quoted many of the hostages as saying they had lost weight, that the food was poor and that they were often afraid.

He added, "We think if (Saddam) is genuinely concerned about allowing husbands and fathers to talk to their wives and children, he should simply release all the hostages and let them come home."

One father said his hostage son told him Bqian should not yield.

"He said the telephone call was being recorded but he didn't give two monkeys and to let the government know that the hostages want no negotiations with the terrorists and they are 100 percent behind them," the father said. British officials did not identify the father and son by name.

But in Brockton, Mass., Mary Trundy said she'll go to Baghdad for Christmas, if it will help her twin brother, John Stevenson. She said he had called her several times in Florida.

"We're all planning to spend the holidays with John," she said.

Secretary of State Baker was in Saudi Arabia on Monday as part of a seven-nation tour aimed at testing support among Arabs, Europeans and the Soviet for military action against Saddam.

In the Saudi town of Taif, Baker met with the emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, who was driven from his homeland by Iraqi invaders Aug. 2

Gulf crisis brings 'war' boom to video games

AP Laserphoto

Video programs such as "F-15 Strike Eagle" with its gulf war scenario are selling more since hostilities began.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sunrise comes to the Persian Gulf, as you strap yourself into your F-15 fighter jet and roar away from the deck of a carrier. Welcome to the gulf war in a video game simulation.

MicroProse Software Inc. of Hunt Valley, Md., is giving would-be fighter jocks a chance to test their mettle with the closest thing to combat simulators — highly sophisticated video games.

One of the games, F-15 Strike Eagle, has been especially popular. It contains a war scenario in which jets blow up enemy tanks and destroy them while outrunning tank and missile fire.

Sales of F-15 Strike Eagle, Gunship, Airborne Ranger and other games are up 30 percent since the Persian Gulf war began, says an executive at MicroProse.

Kathy Gilmore, MicroProse spokeswoman, said:

"We think it's because of the Middle East crisis. We think people know what's happening over there and our games realistically simulate a situation."

Even soldiers in Saudi Arabia may soon be at the controls of Strike Eagle. One of the game units is being flown out Tuesday for servicemen to "kill time" and "imagine enemies in the absence of outright hostilities."

Gilmore declined to give exact sales figures, but said 500,000 "computer copies" are now enjoying the F-15 simulation on home machines, in addition to thousands playing the game at coin-operated video arcades.

MicroProse engineer David Belamy, who demonstrated the game last week for a rapt audience at New York's noisy Broadway Arcade, said it's so real "you start to feel like a real fighter jock."

He put 50 cents in the console, thumped up his jet and took off on a mission on which he shot down an enemy plane and blew up oil tanks and two enemy speedboats, accompanied by stereo sound effects.

Players gaping around the video console gave F-15 a thumbs-up.

"It's real fun," said 16-year-old Jesus Malena.

MicroProse is preparing a more sophisticated gulf war game for personal computers.

The scenario is being built into a game tentatively entitled Gunship. It will allow a player to fly at an expected retail price of $59.99.

Gunship 2000's chief designer, Jim Day, said its gulf scenario will feature Army helicopters that go out to destroy military and oil installations while carrying "guests" — detainees at the sites.

Players select types and numbers of helicopters and weaponry, and bone up on maps and intelligence before their missions.

"No two missions are ever played the same way," Day said.

Day said his researchers combed large amounts of publicly available military data for precise details on weapons and tactics, including the sounds they make.

"We are certainly not promoting war or anything, but an individual using the game as a simulation can relate to it," he explained.

Ted Markley, MicroProse vice president of product development, underscored the point that no one wants a real war.

In fact, he said, "If we could send our product to Saddam Hussein and say, 'Let you play this and we'll play yours,' then let's send our troops home."

Satellite photo hints at uranium mine in northern Iraq

LONDON (AP) — Soviet satellite pictures have confirmed that an industrial operation is in place in northern Iraq, where Kurdish opposition groups have reported seeing a uranium mine. Jane's Defense Weekly said Monday.

The respected defense industry magazine said the satellite photos taken shortly after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, picked out new road systems built in the Gara mountains, 40 miles south of the Turkish border.

John Moore, a mineralogist from Imperial College, said the photos showed signs of possible excavations at two sites, the report said. Experts from the National Imagery Center near Cambridge, picked out a 2,500-foot long building at the site, Jane's said. Those experts suggested three possible uses: chemical weapons production, a conventional weapons site, or a nuclear-related site.

There are four Iraqi military bases nearby in the rugged territory, the report said.

Jane's said the Kurdistan Democratic Party has claimed its agents penetrated the security around the site this year, and found two sites were being developed.

Astrological Forecasts

IF NOVEMBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have unusual vision, possess some of the best of both worlds, and can be self-indulgent to point of having "caveat totum" (Latin, Libra Scorpio) persons play important roles in your life. You'll travel in December, social activities will accelerate. During 1991, you make best work equal: fall in love, will no longer play "second fiddle." July will be outstanding, emotionally, financially.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You might be saying, "This is my kind of day!" Don't on fresh start, initiative, originality. You'll feel more secure, more certain of love. Initiation his mark — you'll know what happened and why.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Attention necessary on family, home, security, completion of negotiations. Food plays important role, you'll be invited to dine gourmet-style. Success indicated in dealings with women.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Distance, language barriers overcome. Previous intimations no longer apply. Focus on power, authority, creative capabilities. Love relationship intensified. Financial dilemma is resolved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-range prognosis identified. You'll learn more about love, emotional responses, what you want to maintain. Financial status of partner or mate will figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): High-lighted presence, new start, style. Focus on "on-legs" arrangements, partnership proposal, marital status. You'll be cited for presentation of concept that saves money, time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Individual who had been "missing" returns in dramatic fashion. Be receptive but expect plausible explanation. Focus on security, property, desirable goods, reunion. Concrete representation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Valid opportunity exists for display of talent, product, humor. Key is diversification. Member of opposite sex confides "physical attraction." Same goes to social aside. Gemini, Sagittarius are represented.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Confidential file is open for your perusal. Be discreet, play cards close to chest, maintain aura of mystery. "Fidelity" goal: twelve-month meaningful relationship. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius are represented.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Confident file is open for your perusal. Be discreet, play cards close to chest, maintain aura of mystery. "Fidelity" goal: twelve-month meaningful relationship. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius are represented.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Changes occur at home, at first "ecary," but eventually beneficial. Many of your fondest aspirations fulfilled by tonight. You'll win friends and gain stomach allies. Libra plays role.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What seemed nebulous could become solid in a hurry. Focus on career, standing, pride, achievement. Find out what is expected. Don't get hurt. Very important person, on your side. Consult Virgo.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Distance, language barriers overcome. Previous intimations no longer apply. Focus on power, authority, creative capabilities. Love relationship intensified. Financial dilemma is resolved.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Long-range prognosis identified. You'll learn more about love, emotional responses, what you want to maintain. Financial status of partner or mate will figure prominently.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): High-lighted presence, new start, style. Focus on "on-legs" arrangements, partnership proposal, marital status. You'll be cited for presentation of concept that saves money, time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Individual who had been "missing" returns in dramatic fashion. Be receptive but expect plausible explanation. Focus on security, property, desirable goods, reunion. Concrete representation.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Valid opportunity exists for display of talent, product, humor. Key is diversification. Member of opposite sex confides "physical attraction." Same goes to social aside. Gemini, Sagittarius are represented.

Working mother? If a man's mother worked on a payroll job, he'll respect his wife to do so. If the mother stayed home, he'll probably hope his wife will, too. That's the claim of a collegiate counselor. She thinks a single woman ought to think about that pattern before picking out a household partner.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"To give a reason for anything is to breed a doubt of it." - William Hazlitt.

After today's slam failed, South had a long day of rationalization for his play. It made sense on the face of it, but a closer inspection later revealed that he missed a free shot. Dummy's diamond ace won, and one round of hearts exhausted the enemy's trumps. Dummy's last-in hand was ruffed and three rounds of spades were cashed, ending in dummy. With spades and diamonds eliminated, South led a club back to his queen and West's king. West had an easy exit in clubs, and East's J-9 over dummy's 10 gave the defender a sure trick for one down.

Bridge score table with columns for NORTH, SOUTH, WEST, EAST, and various card suits (S, H, D, C).

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: ♠ 8 4 3 2, ♥ 5, ♦ 10 J 8 5, ♣ K 4 2. North: ♠ 7, ♥ 6 4 3 2, ♦ 9 8 7 4, ♣ A Q 6.

ANSWER: Two diamonds. Too much for two spades and a shade light for three. Make a two-over-one and show spade support next.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 2143, Dallas, Texas 75211. Write well-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Mom speaks out on Sly's love life

Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. What does Sylvester Stallone's mother think of his love life?

A. "The outspoken, sometimes bawdy Jacqueline Stallone, an Olympic-wrestling proponent and the Sylvester Stallone.

No piano mover woman who single-handedly brought the huge quilted headband back into fashion — isn't pleased. She "much" prefers the way in which her younger son, Frank, conducts his affairs of the heart.

"There's no way Frankie would pay alimony like Sylvester does to these two nobodies," says Momma Stallone, referring to Sly's first two wives. "Sasha (the first Mrs. Rambo) was a girl who got a lift from New York to Los Angeles so that she could watch his dogs. A year later, he makes Rocky and she goes for $20 million in alimony. And then, Brigitte Nielsen, this beauty, comes along right behind her. I could see if the girls had contributed something (editor's note: Sasha bore Stallone two sons). You know, if they'd gotten married and struggled side by side, it doesn't seem fair."

Sly's inquisitive oldest son, and says his nearest competitor, Arnold Schwarzenegger, is "a piano mover." As for his female box office competition, she says, Meg Ryan.

"There must be some mistake" (Kim Basinger is nothing, Michelle Pfeiffer is nothing, and could never hold a candle to a perfect star, like Sophia Loren, who was on the streets but decided to go the classy route.")

Q. How does one get to be named one of "America's Most Beautiful Women?"
A. No matter how drop-dead gorgeous you are, it seems that the only way to be named to the list — which Harper's Bazaar puts out every fall — is apparently to be an actress or a singer. All 10 of this year's beauties either croon or sing to us for a living. Non-celebrities clearly are not among the beautiful people.

As usual, the list of knockouts includes some shockers. Joining undisputed beauties on the list — like Julia Roberts and Farrah Fawcett — is Meg Ryan, best remembered for her lusty scene in the movie "When Harry Met Sally." Meg Ryan? Surely, there must be some mistake. Even she was shocked! "If I can be on a list of America's 10 most beautiful women, it should give EVERYONE hope," she says. "I mean, lit."

Meg tries to exercise every day. "And for my complexion, I drink lots of water, especially when I'm in that Los Angeles air."

Recently, however, Ryan filmed a scene for Oliver Stone's upcoming movie about rock star Jim Morrison. "The Doors," that might blow her good looks all to hell and back. She's a little worried. "I have to be inside a closet that catches fire," she says. "But first, of course, they cover me from head to toe with this sticky fire retardant gel. I don't know yet how my skin and hair are going to react. Can you imagine?"

Q. Why don't newscasters Connie Chung and Bryant Gumbel do a special together? They seem like such a natural fit.
A. This will never happen, because Chung and Gumbel are now at different networks — (Chung moved from NBC, where Gumbel works, to CBS last year) — even when they were working at the same network, chances of an on-air pairing were slim. Why, you ask? Because Bryant strongly dislikes Chung.

The bad-blood thickened and began to boil when Chung was co-hosting "The Today Show" one morn' and was notified that she would have to schmooze with Bryant to fill excess air time without benefit of a script. Instead of running to sit near him in the cozy coziness of the program, Chung bolted from the set and Bryant had to go it alone. Bryant was not amused, and the incident earned Connie the nickname "High O. Low IQ" from NBC types.

AT CBS, Connie is now encouraging it along and he, who, and has become a veritable queen bee. The broadest tournaist who ruined her elegant public image by appearing on a recent People magazine cover under the screaming headline "I WANT A CIG" is notorious for her demands. Just recently, she asked the brass to build a special street in her office so that her fur coat would not have to bear the humiliation of hanging on a door hanger. And that's not all: Once, Ms. Chung also asked for — and presumably got — a special desk. Seems she was afraid of nicking herself on the lethal angular edges of the standard CBS work station.

Jane's on the run

This prince is a fresh one

NBC's "Fresh Prince of Bel Air" may be a mere moderate hit, but nearly everyone agrees on one thing: Its star, Will Smith (left), the rap duo D.J. Jazzy, left, & the Fresh Prince), is an undaunted fresh and engaging performer.

Will Smith, The Philadelphia rapper.

And Smith is finding TV stardom to his liking. "It's a lot easier than the music — not as demanding on your time and energy. Plus, it pays more money, so Smith's voice trails off and laughs. "So I'm having a ball."

If you can see it you can hit it.

Donna, is that you?

AP/Lanphoton

"Twin Peaks" cast member Lara Flynn Boyle, left, with James Marshall and Sherry Lynn Penn, makes a startling transformation this TV season. The all-American high school girl (Donna Hayward) turns into a smoking, shades-sporting vamp. The enigmatic ABC mystery soap airs Saturdays.

Sue Ellen and J.R. wed on screen

Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. My friend thinks Larry Hagman is married to Sue Ellen of Dallas, but I don't think so.

Larry Hagman

35 years and going strong
A. You're right. Hagman and his wife Maj (pronounced My), a Swedish designer, have been married 35 years. They have a daughter, Heidi, 32, and a son, Preston, 27. Linda Gray (Sue Ellen) is divorced from postscripted James.

Q. My family loves "Twin Peaks" and we'd like to visit the town. Where is it?

A. Twin Peaks is fictional but much of the background for the first episodes were filmed in Snoqualmie, Wash., and the residents aren't uncharitably happy about it. A few businesses in town are capitalizing but other residents are embarrassed—about being shown as tourist traps.

Q. Who played Helen on the "Murder, She Wrote" series Aug. 26? My husband insists it was Vivian Vance of "I Love Lucy."

A. It was Doris Roberts, best

Linda Gray

A single woman known now as Mildred Krebs, Remington Steele's secretary.

African background sets stage

BURBANK, Calif. — The breathtaking panoramas of Africa provide the backdrop for "Cheetah," the story of two American teenagers who join their scientist parents at a research center in Kenya and soon learn that Africa is more than just a continent away from their native Los Angeles. The film will make its television debut on The Disney Channel this winter.

Zion Canyon's a masterpiece

Endless scenic vistas await those driving through Zion National Park in Utah. The Virgin River carved the towering cliffs of Zion Canyon and still flows along its floor. Within the park are desert terrain and massive sculpted rock forms, as well as waterfalls and the delicate foliage of spring-fed hanging gardens. The main canyon is accessible from the south and also from the east, where the highway passes through a spectacular landscape and a mile-long limited clearance tunnel.

Two visitor centers are open year-round, and various activities are offered during certain seasons, including guided nature walks, tram tours, horseback rides, a folkloric festival and a summer theater.

What's offered: Zion has three campgrounds which are open year-round. The two main camps are priced at $6 per night, having drinking water, flush toilets, dump stations and grills. Visitor centers provide information, visitor assistance, slide programs, exhibits, maps, brochures and free back-country permits. They are open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

What it costs: Entrance fees are collected during the peak season from early April through November and may be extended year-round. Fees are $5 per vehicle or $2 a person. Annual individ-

Deer's no optical illusion

Escape to the outdoors

Usually a sportsman doesn't spot a bug buck until after that deer has seen him and is running away. To hunt deer successfully, the hunter needs to see the deer before the deer sees him.

Here are some suggestions from the hunting professionals at Nikon Sport Optics to help hunters see, and bag, more deer this season.

Begin with an eye examination. Many hunters will spend hours sighting in their rifles to make sure they shoot straight and accurately. However, they often won't visit a vision specialist for a simple checkup that usually lasts 45 minutes. Wearing glasses that will aid in their ability to see game in the woods.

Slow down your stalk. Most hunters move too quickly through the woods to see game. The best way to slow down your stalk is to look at your watch. Don't travel more than 75 yards in 30 minutes. Traveling 50 yards in 30 minutes will allow you to see even more game.

Use a bright pair of binoculars with high resolution to extend your look precisely to detect camouflaged game at a distance and in thick brush. Being able to see further lets you spot a buck long before he sees you.

Look for deer parts. Rarely will you see the total body of a deer when you're hunting. Search for a patch of white hair, which may be the inside white of a deer's ear or the patch of white hair on a deer's neck. Look for a dark circle, which may be a deer's eye. Try to see a deer's leg protruding from behind the base of a tree. Be on the lookout for the white flagging of a deer's tail. Search for a line parallel to the ground about three feet high above the ground that may be a deer's back.

Always leave your scope on its lowest power when walking to obtain the widest field of view. Then, if you see a deer in the distance, you can increase the power of the scope, which will help you to see the deer more clearly and easily put the crosshairs where

Binoculars can help you see the deer before it sees you

You'll be able to spot and take more deer if you cover less ground while searching intensively through your eyes and your optics. Buy the experts at Nikon.

Hunting is the ability of sportsmen to find and see game. To take that game, you must be able to see it clearly, aim accurately, and shoot straight.

Animal world is a complicated one

A dark side of the animal world is revealed when NATURE travels the African country of Botswana to investigate a mysterious organization run exclusively by females.

This clan rallies around in the dead of night to hunt and scavenge what they can from other predators along the Okavango River.

The Sisterhood, premiering Sunday on PBS, profiles the spotted hyena, a creature born cuddly and puppy-like, who grows into a rather ungainly-looking cross between a dog and a cat with jaws that can exert a ton of pressure to crush the bones of its prey.

Intimate moments in the lives of Africa's most successful vegetarian-maligned carnivores are captured for the first time in the film. Because of their shabby looks and

Dominant females control this pack's social structure. Spotted hyenas do not command the respect and affection that humans bestow on animals like leopards and lions. The great "King of Beasts," in fact, is leery of the hyena, who, with sister circling, can chase a lion up a tree and unslurp its meal.

The hyena clan in The Sisterhood consists of 20 members, and commands 20 square miles of land, including a small village. The group prowls the village at night, eating refuse the villagers set out; these living garbage dumps can eat a third of their body weight in one sitting.

The film also captures the clan in a feeding frenzy, which takes place during a violent thunderstorm on the plain—a scene which has led NATURE series producer Fred Kaufman to dub The Sisterhood the "Nightmare on Elm Street" of natural history films.

Hit the Road

Treat the causes, not symptoms

Car Care Council

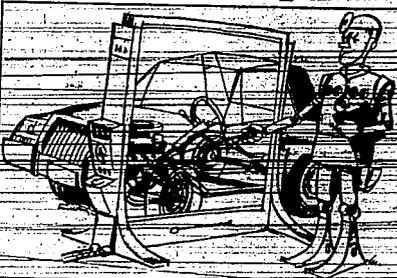

In the automotive world, wintertime starting trouble is a disease that will not go away—primarily because attention is often focused on treating the symptoms, rather than preventing the problem, automotive experts agree.

"Despite improvements which have been made in fuel and ignition systems on vehicles over the past decade, the problem lingers," Roger Kwapiach, Champion Spark Plug's manager of automotive technical services, said.

"Towing, jump-starting, engines, and recharging batteries have become a part of most motorists' lives, but these services merely address the symptoms of the problem."

Preventive maintenance before winter, focusing on engine tune-ups, spark plug replacement, filter changes, and attention to dirty fuel injectors, is the sure way to overcome the hard-starting phenomenon.

The ideal time for preventive treatment is before the great challenges occur. Cold and flu shots are recommended for certain patients prior to traditional cold-and-flu seasons. In the same way, preventive maintenance for your automobile is best done before their most formidable challenge winter. "Any weakness in the ignition system shows up most quickly in damp weather, with the normal result being a car that won't start," Kwapiach explained. High voltage current, which seeks the path of least electrical resistance, will follow cracks or bulges carbon tracks on the exterior of ignition wires, along the distributor cap.

Preventive maintenance is the real key to success.

Accumulated moisture in these cracks or tracks serves as a conductor, diverting current away from the spark plug firing tip, where the spark is required to start the engine. Cold temperatures also play havoc with the ability of the engine to start in this weather. Oil, when cold, becomes thicker and forces the starter to work harder to turn the engine over during starting.

Cold also reduces the reserve capacity of the battery, which can quickly lose its charge when it must "load" for awhile in unsuccessful starting attempts.

BMW adds two sporty models for 1991

Woodcliff Lake, NJ — Two new four cylinder models, powered by the first four-valve-per-cylinder BMW engine designed for volume production, are joining BMW's 3-Series as early as 1991 models.

At $25,500 base price, the new two-door 318is puts a sporty BMW driving experience within the reach of most buyers. At $19,900, the new four-door 318i gives new meaning to the term "entry level BMW."

Both of the new BMWs are powered by the same 16-valve engine. And last, but not least, this reappreciation of the 1800 designation, which appeared on the first model in the present 3-

Sports coupe is new.

Series back in 1984. There is not only a new engine, but two different models that have benefited from close to seven years of BMW's typically thorough engineering reputation.

The new models' most prominent feature is the new four-cylinder engine, which combines the high power output of four valves per cylinder with typical BMW smoothness, all around response and durability, and excellent fuel efficiency.

It is the latest in BMW's long line of four-valve-per-cylinder engines which began with a 16-valve racing powerplant in 1966 and includes 11 different engine types, and the first specifically engineered for quantity production. (One of the BMW M3 and the new M5 have much in common with racing engines and are largely hand assembled.) In its layout, the new four is closely related to the mighty V-12 engine of BMW's flagship models, the 750i, luxury sedan and the brand new 850i sports coupe.

Choose a mate

According to "Self" magazine, if you are contemplating marrying someone who has the same birth order as you (for instance, first or last born), you may want to think twice. The most compatible couples have dissimilar birth orders. For example, when first borns or only children marry last borns, the last borns get someone more responsible than themselves, and first borns only get someone more carefree. The most compatible birth-order pairs are: first borns and last borns; first children and last borns; first borns and only children; and mothers and last borns.

Are you tired of the family bating on which mouse will win the Indy 500 across your kitchen floor??? The little Mickey in the bread drawer being your taste tester??? Or meeting Speedy Gonzalez mouse at the coffee pot before 6:00 AM???

Well there is an answer! Try the P.C.U. (pest control unit). The P.C.U. operates at a constant frequency of 40kHz. This ultrasonic driven unit differs from other units currently being sold in the fact that it's output is electronically swept from about 20kHz to 40kHz. With this technique, this unit is more effective and never allows the mice to get used to one given frequency which, with this unit you can say goodbye to! Monthly pest control kills, messy traps, dead bodies, and dangerous liquids, powders and sprays. This unit will cover 1,000 square feet, plug into a 110 socket, and has an indicator light to let you know it's on duty. LET THE P.C.U. Flattery hard to resist It will hurt

Q: I am a 29-year-old single man. I think I am reasonably attractive. I have nice clothes, sunglasses, etc. Why then does my best friend who has none of the above, always get the best-looking woman? Many times I have been with him at parties or nightclubs and about the only compliment I have heard him give is he walked off with the girl.

What has he got that I haven't got? The only difference can be between us is that he flatters women. I can't say anything that would cause a woman to be attracted to me. I am a nice guy. Do women really fall for all that flattery? How can I learn to do it? And what are the compliments that men use to get a woman to go out with them?

A: Flattery will get you almost everywhere. I can't give you a list of compliments because you would be a woman so much. Flattery only works if it is based in truth. Perhaps your friend knows that you cry on male and female, likes to be complimented on his physique if it is full of lies. For example, the man who tells every woman she is beautiful is a liar, and few women will believe him. The man who compliments a woman's good features probably gets her attention. It takes more than that to get a woman interested.

Maybe you need to change your basic attitude. When you refer to women as "the goods," you tell me you see them as outlets for your sexual pleasure, not as real people.

Kids are in pressure cooker: Get them away from it all

By Peter G. Hanson, M.D.
North American Press Syndicate

"Even Jack and Jill can get 'burned out.' And it's not from jumping down an ill-fated hill. Children, like adults, have stress every day in their lives and need to learn stress management techniques.

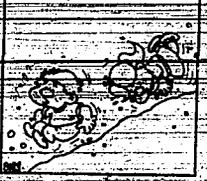

While children do not usually struggle with the work or household responsibilities parents face, their stress should not be underestimated. Elementary and high school children can be extremely successful as children try to "fit in" academically, socially and athletically.

Over-planned or over-pressured to try drugs or engage in other destructive behavior, the pressure is greater than classroom pressure to learn history and math.

We tend to think of stress management techniques as being necessary for adults, but one of the best treatment for reducing stress works for both adults and children: occasional breaks or mini-vacations away from a stressful environment whether home, work or school.

Parents are beginning to recognize the need for family stress and the need for all members to take a break periodically. For example, Hilton Hotels Corporation used data obtained from the latest TravelTime Report, The Hilton Report on Children & Travel to make its Family Back Week-end program into a special family vacation.

The survey questioned 300 children across the United States about their needs and wants regarding swimming and hotel stays. Almost 60 percent of the children surveyed would like to go on vacations, partly other than they currently do, and 87 percent

All work and no play — prefer going with their parents more than anyone else.

Children need frequent breaks from their routine. As parents plan for mini-vacations during the school year, they should be aware of the stress their children are feeling and consider the times when a break will best benefit themselves and their children. Parents should not rely on the summer vacation period to be the only "stress break" a child gets during the year.

After all, learning to handle stress is just as important as pursuing excellence in school and sports — the three Rs have just become the three Ss.

Charge safely into holiday season

Charge! Thousands of shoppers, armed with their credit cards, storm the stores when holiday season hits.

A leading provider of credit card authorization services, banks and retailers, Control Data Corporation's TeleMoney Services, has compiled a list of ten tips to help consumers get through the holiday shopping season without undue credit card stress.

1. Beware of Blackouts. When you're ignoring the holiday crowds, keep your credit card in a safe place.
2. Don't Play With A Full Card. Carry only the cards you plan to use.
3. Clean Up Your Cartons. Always tear up receipt cartons and dispose of properly.
4. Beware of Phone(s) Requests. Never give your credit card number over the phone, unless you dialed the number.
5. Save Your Slips. Save all receipts and compare them to your monthly bill to verify purchases and amounts. If you have a dispute about a charge, start writing to your card issuer. Telephoning will not protect your rights.

Avoid unpleasant surprises.

Let a merchant copy your credit card number for your personal check. Many people handle checks and can give the information fraudulently. Don't write your telephone number or address on charge slips; many states are passing laws making this requirement illegal.

8. Keep Your Secrets. Never tell anyone your Personal Identification Number (PIN). Do not keep your PIN with your card.
9. Fill in the Blank. Sign each new credit card upon receipt. When cards expire, cut them into pieces and throw away.
10. Teach Your Children. Make sure children who use your card understand safety rules for credit cards. Consider a card for each child in his or her own name to avoid confusion as the check-out.

CHICAGO (AP)—Loic Waquet stepped into a boxing ring, suffered a broken nose, buried his teeth and was KO'd.

Loic Waquet

purifies the sociologist chalks up to the pursuit of their national or ethnic heritage.

The University of Chicago doctoral candidate is studying the class and joblessness in Chicago. Two years ago, he stumbled upon the Woodlawn Boys and Girls Club and decided the South Side youth organization would provide a perfect study field for his dissertation. "I felt that both the popular and scholarly literature on poverty and black America was full of stereotypes and clichés and wanted to find out what really was going on in a black neighborhood." Waquet said. "I was, as they say, seduced by the world of boxing."

The catch, however, was a rule that only people willing to hop into the ring could hang around the gym. So for the next six months at the gym, really just a ring and a few punching bags, Waquet used to come to the gym just to hang out.

"I was quite a bit of a nerd," he said. "I went through a progression of nicknames from 'Freakinman' with an attitude to 'bad dude' to 'Busy Louie'."

They call me Busy Louie because I throw a lot of punches in the ring, because I'm a hard worker.

By February, the 5-foot-8½-inch, 155-pound Frenchman whose name is pronounced loah-vaah-cohnt believed he was ready for his first fight in the Chicago Golden Gloves, tournaments held every year in March.

Three rounds later, he was beaten.

Neither was his wife Elizabeth who trained with him. "I thought he would be killed," she said.

His trainer, D.D. Amour, said he "retired" Waquet from the ring because he has a major physical weakness for boxing—his nose "bleeds like a faucet."

Amour said the gym, as a neighborhood of boarded-up buildings and empty lots, gives hope to neighborhood youngsters.

Sweethearts and Spurs

The Winner

A pulling contest would certainly liven up the sleepy old village

By Bert Dalton

He sat on the high spring seat like a contented Bantam rooster, his body rolling with each bump in the road, looking every smaller when compared to the giant team of Belgian draft horses which pulled the wagon. The reins held loosely in his hand, he whistled a tune between his teeth. The road was lined on each side by trees which formed a tunnel of shade from the sun which beat down mercilessly.

A short way ahead, the tunnel came to an end and the village appeared. He stopped the team, and with his hand on the wagon wheel vaulted to the ground. Carefully, he examined the legs and hooves of the big sorrels. Still whistling softly, he remounted the seat and pulled on into town.

At the village square, he drove the team to the water tank and let them drink. Finished, he drove them to a big tree and tied them in the shade. He looked around. The afternoon sun boiled down as though intent on scorching anything that might be about. He crossed the square to where a sign said "Pedro's Bar and Grill." One time, he looked over the swinging doors, then strolled inside. "A lemon, Senor!" Pedro greeted him with a drink. "Faith, and I do believe a wee dash of lemonade might help heat this parched throat of mine," the stranger returned.

"Nothin' stronger, Senor?"

"I never touch the stuff. It addict one's mind and befuddles one's senses."

"Ah, Senor, it is not often we see strangers here! You plan to be with us for a while?"

"Just passin' through, my friend."

A woman entered from the backroom. "The top of the morning to you, Senorita! the stranger greeted.

"Senorita!" Pedro corrected. "Marta-Rosa is my wife, Senor Mister."

"Timothy Stout! I'm right pleased to meet you, Ma'am. Faith, and aren't you the pretty one, though!"

"Thank you, Senor! It isn't often we have one of such gallantry passing through here!"

"That is a fine-looking team you have out there," Pedro commented. "Do they pull well?"

"Well enough to wheel the wagon down the road."

"I mean, do you ever put them to a set pull, Senor? Where they really show what they are made of?"

"Reckon not, my friend. I haven't been long. I won them in a wee poker game about a month ago." Gesturing toward the back bar, Timothy said, "I see a picture of a team on the wall there. Do you have an interest in pulling horses?"

"Just a casual interest, Senor. A friend took that picture at the tri-state meet. That team of yours looks a lot like the team that won third place. Mind if I go have a closer look?"

"Be my guest! But they are not that team, my friend. The team that won third had stocking feet and blaze faces. Old Jasper and Jacob are straight sorrel. Could they appear another wee dash of fire tomorrow?" The like a baum to my parched throat."

The glass refilled. Pedro went to examine the team. When he returned, he was bubbling with enthusiasm. "They are remarkable animals! Such beauty, such strength, such size, Senor! But, as you say, they are not the team that won third place as they are sorrel straight through!"

"A thought is thrashing about in my mind," Timothy ventured, twirling his glass. "Perhaps we could stage our own wee pulling contest and liven up this sleepy little village. Does anyone about lay claim to a pulling team?"

"There are some, but none to compare to this magnificent pair of animals you have, Senor!"

"Those blacks in the picture, are they from around here?"

"By the saints above, what those be doing in a place like this? They were the champions of the tri-state meet! Senor, I have a team which resembles them, but my team is black with white stocking feet and blaze faces. They could never compare with those great beasts out there!"

"Ah, my friend, have you given thought as to what a contest like this could do for your business?"

"Think of all the people who would come to town. Whoever loses in the contest, you would win because of the extra business."

"No, Senor! I could not pit my poor, untried animals against your team!"

"My team is untried also, my friend. Faith, and perhaps a wee wager might change your mind and cause more interest in the townfolk as well! Not a large wager, mind you, just enough to create interest!"

"No, Senor! I could not make such a foolish bet. My poor, unskilled team against those beautiful beasts out there?"

"Perhaps the proper odds?" Timothy fumbled in his pocket and came up with a sizable roll of money, held together by a rubber band. Methodically, he counted off $200, replaced the band and returned the roll to his pocket. "This is what I have in mind, my friend. I will put up $200. You will put up $100. We will let this beautiful lady, your wife, hold the stakes. When the contest is over, the winner takes all!"

"No, my Senor! I could not bet with my wife, my Maria Rosa? That would be unthinkable!" His eyes met those of his wife and held for a second.

"No, my friend! Faith, and I didn't mean to include your wife in the wager. She would need only to turn the money over to the winner."

"Done, Senor. We have a bet! Shall we pull at 10 o'clock in the morning?"

"Agreed!" Timothy answered. "Timothy took his team and went to the edge of town to camp for the night. Pedro went to the stable to brush and fuss over the team of blacks. He spent hours getting them ready for the contest.

Word spread through the village like fire through dry grass. Pedro was going to pull like and Spike, the blacks, against the stranger's team—in the morning, a sizable crowd gathered.

"Who is going to drive the blacks, my husband?" Maria Rosa asked.

"Sanchez will drive."

"I hope you know what."

"Have trust, my lovely," Pedro said. "Trust!"

The teams were brought out and

The big pair slowly tightened the traces and settled into their collars. Slowly, they moved forward. Timothy stopped them and unhitched them from the sled.

Sanchez brought up the blacks. Pedro stood well away with Maria Rosa at his side. Sanchez poked up the reins and spoke to the team. Spike mimed nervously. Sanchez spoke again. The blacks moved forward into the collars. Suddenly, Spike backed up, danced excitedly and tossed his head. Sanchez tried again. "He will not pull, Amigo!" Sanchez called to Pedro. alas, what shall I do?" Pedro held his hands out and shrugged his shoulders. "We lose!"

"Ah, Amigo, I am sorry!" Sanchez yelled. "Amigo, I am so sorry!"

María handed over the money. Thank you, most beautiful Senor! Timothy prattled. Your beauty is only exceeded by your graciousness!

"Don't fret!" Pedro soothed. "Do as you wish." Timothy came forward holding out his hand. "Give him the money, María Rosa," Pedro directed. "We have lost!"

María handed over the money. "Thank you, most beautiful Senor! Your beauty is only exceeded by your subsistence. To Pedro he said, "Thank you, friend! I must be on my way. Down the road may I swap bigger and better things!"

"Wait Senor, surely you would not depart from our humble village without first having a glass of lemonade to show that it is so ill feelings. Come into my humble place of business. We will drink together."

Inside, Pedro poured the lemonade. "It would be nice if you would give my team a second chance, Senor," he suggested. "That would not be fair!" Timothy yelled. "On the grave of my sainted mother, I never let you get away with such a fair and square!"

"This I do not question, Senor."

You did win fair and square. Perhaps another contest would be arranged. "I am most content with my winnings are present my friend!"

"Ah, Senor, surely adding more money to the already bulging roll of bills in your pocket would not make it too cumbersome to handle nicely. A second contest is the only way possible for me to regain myself in the eyes of the villagers. Surely I am entitled to this chance, no matter how small a chance it is."

"But, my friend, you have no chance! You say how your blacks acted when confronted with a load. Another contest would be like eating candy from a wasp's nest!"

"Give my team a chance, Senor. I will wager everything I own for another chance! I would rather leave this town penniless, with only my María Rosa at my side, than to leave this people penniless. My friend, just what is it that you would wager? Timothy asked, interested.

"My humble place of business and my blacks against your team and the roll of money which you carry in your pocket, Senor. I have nothing else to wager!"

"Are you sure this is what you want my friend?"

"Ah, Senor, I have no other choice. I have no face!"

"Then this doeth!" Timothy ran in. "We have another bet!"

"Thank you, Senor! Ah, thank you!"

"Who will drive the blacks, my husband?" María Rosa asked. "I will drive," Pedro stated, and María smiled.

The teams were ready and a coin was flipped. Pedro would go first. He hitched the blacks to the sled and requested more bags of sand to be added to the load. He rubbed the reins and spoke to the team. They eased ahead, taking the stick from the traces, then settled into their gait to pull their effort was magnificent! The sled moved ahead five feet. Pedro hitched them to a stop and unhitched them.

Timothy brought the sorrels into place, shaken by what he had just witnessed. He spoke softly to the big team. They settled down but the pull. Three times they tried but the sled would not move. Timothy unhitched them. "I lost," he said, unbelieving. "I lost."

"María, Senor—Wait!" Pedro said. He brought the blacks to the water tank, wet the brush and scrubbed at the face of one of them. The whitewash came off readily, showing the shiny black eyes.

"The team in the picture!" Timothy exclaimed incredulously. "The team in the picture! I think I had better go now!"

"Wait, Senor! Surely you would last long without first having a glass of lemonade to show there is no hard feelings!"

"You are most gracious, my friend. You are most gracious. Faith, and I do believe I have had enough lemonade for this day. I best get on my way down the road."

"If you insist, Senor," Pedro fumbled in his pocket and brought out the roll of money. Carefully he removed the rubber band and extracted a 10 which he handed to Timothy. "Never let it be said that a stranger came to our sleepy little village and left empty-handed."

"One question, my friend: before I go, just what did you whisper in that horse's ear?"

"Ah, senor, it was nothing, really, I just told him how big, how strong and beautiful he was and that soon he would be all shiny black just the way he was before I painted him."

Timothy hurried away, leaving "Wait, Senor! Wait! You wagon! I offer you $25 for you wagon!"

Timothy retraced his steps, smiling. "The wagon? $25? Faith, and I say the wagon is worth at that wagon in the next town, it would be worth one hundred hundred; but due to the circumstances, I will settle for a mere sixty."

"Forty, Senor," Pedro offered. "Sixty," Timothy boggled.

Everyone makes a motion in this judge's courtroom

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Everybody made a motion in Judge Milton Whatson's courtroom.

For the pop jazz band of Judge Samuel Operatore, the judge, jurors, attorneys and spectators who are forced to be inactive, stretched and swayed under the guidance of an aerobics instructor in St. Clair County Circuit Court recently.

Whatson said he thinks the four-minute session, held during a break in the trial of a personal injury lawsuit, helps keep people alert. "I think it's probably very valuable for the jurors," said defense attorney Ann Hamilton, who participated in the aerobic. "I think it helps keep them alert and attentive."

The aerobic break was intended to let jurors exercise more than their civic duty. "Sitting and listening can be very fatiguing," Whatson said.

"I saw no reason why exercise should be restricted to jurors and the judge," he said.

"OK, you guys, spread out," said aerobics instructor Jan Voellinger as she and the jury stood and stretched the length of one wall in the small courtroom. They began with simple inhaling and exhaling, followed by neck movements, looking to the right, center and left.

The jurors then rolled their shoulders, pushed the air and bobbed their hips. "It does help relieve a little tension," Hamilton told the instructor. "Can I do it during the closing arguments?"

The Winner

A pulling-contest would certainly liven up the sleepy old village

By Bert Dalton

He sat on the high spring seat like a contented Bantam rooster, his body rolling with each bump in the road, looking even smuglier when compared to the giant team of Belgian draft horses which pulled the wagon. The reins held loosely in his hand, he whistled a lullaby between his teeth. The road was lined on each side by trees which formed a tunnel of shade from the sun which beat down mercilessly.

A short way ahead, the tunnel came to an end and the village appeared. He stopped the team, and with his hand on the wagon wheel vaulted to the ground. Carefully, he examined the logs and hooves of the big sorrels. Still whistling softly, he remounted the seat and pulled on up to town.

At the village square, he drove the team to the water tank and let them drink. Finished, he drove them to a big tree and tied them in the shade. He looked around. The afternoon sun boiled down through the forest on scorching rays of light that might be about. He crossed the square to where a sign said "Pedro's Bar and Grill." One瞥, he looked over the swinging doors, then strolled inside.

Afternoon, Senor! Pedro greeted. Care for a drink?
"Ahh, and I do believe a wee dash of lemonade might help heal this parched throat of mine," the stranger returned.

"Nother stronger, Senor?"
"I never touch the stuff. It ad-does one's mind and befuddles one's senses."

"Ah, Senor, it is not often we see strangers here! You plan to be with us for a while?"

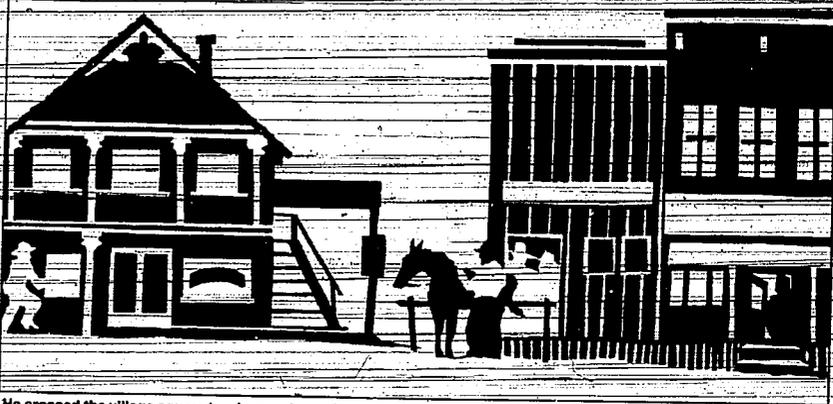

"Just passin' through, my friend."

A woman entered from the backroom. "The top of the morning to you, Senorita!" the stranger greeted.

"Senor!" Pedro corrected. "Maria Rosa is my wife. Senor."

"Timothy! Stout! I'm right pleased to meet you, Ma'am. Faith, and aren't you the pretty one, though!"

passing through here!

"That is a fine-looking team you have out there," Pedro commented. "Do they pull well?"

"Well enough to wheel the wagon down the road."

"I mean, do you ever put them to a set pull, Senor? Where they really show what they are made of?"

"Reckon not... my friend. I haven't had them long. I won them in a wee poker game about a month ago." Gesturing toward the back bar, Timothy said, "I see a picture of a team on the wall there. Do you have an interest in pulling horses?"

"Just a casual interest, Senor. A friend took that picture at the tri-state meet. That team of yours looks a lot like the team that won third place. Mind if I go have a closer look?"

"Be my guest! But they are not that team, my friend. The team that won third had stocking feet and blaze faces. Old Jasper and Jacob are straight sorrel. Could you spare another wee dash of lemonade?" "It's like a team to my parched throat."

The glass refilled, Pedro went to examine the team. When he returned, he was bubbling with enthusiasm. "They are remarkable animals! Such strength, such strength; such size, Senor! But, as you say, they are not the team that won third place as they are sorrel straight through!"

"A thought is threshing about in my mind," Timothy ventured, twirling his glass. "Perhaps we could stage our own wee pulling contest and liven up this sleepy little village. Does anyone about here claim to be a pulling team?"

"There are some, but none to compare to the magnificent pair of animals you have, Senor!"

"Those blacks in the picture, are they from around here?"

"By the saints above, what would a pair of animals such as those be doing in a place like this? They were the champions of the tri-state meet! Senor, I have a team which resembles them, but my team is black with white stocking feet and blaze faces. They could never compare with those great beasts out there!"

"Ah, my friend, have you given thought as to what a contest like this could do for your business? Think of all the people who would come to town. Win or lose in the contest, you would win because of the extra business."

"No, Senor; I could not pit my team, untired animals against your team!"

"My team is untired also, my friend. Faith, and perhaps a wee wager might change your mind and cause more interest in the townfolk as well! Not a large wager, mind you, just enough to create interest!"

"No, Senor! I could not make such a foolish bet. My poor, unskilled team against those beautiful beasts out there?"

"Perhaps the proper odds?" Timothy fumbled in his pocket and came up with a sizable roll of money, held together by a rubber band. Methodically, he counted off $200, replaced the band and returned the roll to his pocket.

"This is what I have in mind, my friend. I will put up $200. You will put up $100. We will let this beautiful lady, your wife, hold the stakes. When the contest is over, the winner takes all!"

"No, no, Senor, I could not bet my wife, my Maria Rosa? That would be unthinkable!" His eyes met those of his wife and held for a second.

"No, my friend! Faith, and I didn't mean to include your wife in the wager! She would need time to turn the money over to the winner."

"Done, Senor. We have a bet! Shall we pull at 10 o'clock in the morning?"

"Agreed!" Timothy answered. "I musty look his team and went to the edge of town to camp for the night. Pedro went to the stable to brush and fuss over the team of blacks. He spent hours getting them ready for the contest.

"Timothy took his team and went to pull like a team of blacks, against the stranger's team in the morning, a sizable crowd gathered.

"Who is going to drive the blacks, my husband?" Maria Rosa asked.

"Sanchez will drive."

"Have trust, my lovely," Pedro said. "Trust!"
