150,000 more U.S. troops to Gulf

Knights-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Thursday ordered the Pentagon to send enough troops to Saudi Arabia to make it possible to go on the offensive and drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

The estimated 150,000 more troops would bring U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf region to about 380,000 soldiers, sailors and air personnel. The new forces include three aircraft carriers, a battleship and hundreds of battle tanks.

Bush's decision to threaten Iraqi President Saddam Hussein with a new, open-ended deployment will draw soldiers and equipment largely from armored divisions in Germany. But it also includes combat reserve forces in the United States, according to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

Within two months, virtually all Marine Corps combat units will be in the Arabian desert as part of Operation Desert Shield.

Bush said he wants to send "a very strong signal that the coalition army against Iraq will not water down" its demands for an unconditional withdrawal.

Baker wins Soviet backing

Knights-Ridder News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said for the first time Thursday that his government could not rule out the use of force against Iraq if peaceful efforts to end the occupation of Kuwait failed.

But Shevardnadze also emphasized during a break in talks with U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III that any action against Iraq be sponsored by the United Nations, and he said it was "too early" to consider a U.N. resolution authorizing force to resolve the Persian Gulf crisis.

The Soviet minister's acknowledgment that force might be required to dislodge Iraq from Kuwait marked a diplomatic in place until after Jan. 1.

During the Vietnam War, U.S. forces peaked at about 543,000 in April 1969 and began withdrawing three months later. Gen. Colin L. Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said of the new deployments: "Whether it will be adequate in the event of going to war with Saddam Hussein's army, I'm not going to speculate."

The new troops will include heavy armored divisions that increase U.S. ability to attack Iraqi ground forces.

Who's going

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Here are the forces that Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said will be deployed both from Europe and the United States for Operation Desert Shield in the Persian Gulf.

Army troops from Germany

The 7th Corps Headquarters from Stuttgart; the 1st Armored Division, Ansbach; the 3rd Armored Division, Frankfurt; a brigade-size unit from the 1st Armored Division, Garmisch; the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment, Nuernberg; and the 2nd Corps Support Command, Stuttgart.

From the United States

The 1st Infantry Division (Mechanized) from Fort Riley, Kan.

Cheney said various units to support and service the additional ground forces would be sent both from the United States and Europe.

Governor fires 2 top law officers

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus effectively fired Law Enforcement Director Mack Richardson and State Police Superintendent Rich Humphreys on Thursday.

The action was taken to restore public confidence in an agency rocked by allegations that troopers were giving special treatment to politicians.

"I will not tolerate, nor will the people of Idaho tolerate, any policy of special treatment of anyone," Andrus said. "Confidence must be restored, and there must be no lingering doubts about whether every Idaho citizen is treated the same."

Andrus, who won an unprecedented fourth term in a landslide two days earlier, said he had asked for and received the Richardson's resignation and had asked Humphreys to resign. Both were veterans to retire earlier than he had planned.

At a news conference later in the day, Richardson maintained that he had done nothing wrong. "Again, I repeat that I have never endorsed a policy of immunity from arrest as charged, and I support that statement by example," he said.

Richardson said in the last two years, a federal judge was arrested in the Coeur d'Alene area for drunken driving, a state judge was stopped for speeding in the Twin Falls area and the mayor of Coeur d'Alene was arrested for drunken driving at Lewis.

Twin Falls firefighters cool down a propane tank that was inside a $10,000 fifth-wheel trailer destroyed by fire Thursday afternoon. The trailer belonging to Ken Rounady was parked beside Rounady's Motor Lodge on Main Avenue West. The fire knocked out a window in the motel office but caused no other damage to the building, Battalion Chief Wayne Campbell said. He did not know the cause of the fire. Rounady had parked the trailer beside the motel office about one or two hours before the fire broke out. "I don't know what happened," he said.

Split Senate Magic Valley Republicans vow they will keep clout in chamber

By Anita Dennis

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the now evenly divided Idaho Senate, the Magic Valley won't lose any clout, lawmakers say.

"It'll probably make for less party politics," said Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, last year's minority caucus chairman and the second-most-senior Democrat in the Senate. Instead of gridlock in the Senate, Peavey foresees coalition-building and moderate Republicans joining Democrats to pass legislation.

The Democrats picked up two seats in the Senate in Tuesday's voting, leaving the body with 21 Democrats and 21 Republicans. Although Lt. Gov. Butch Otter, a Republican, will break any ties, it's not clear who will control organizing the Senate.

Noh

R-Twin Falls, is in line to become one.

But T.W. Stivers, a former Republican speaker of the House from Twin Falls, predicted less acrimony and more accommodation within the Senate than when the GOP controlled it outright.

"What I would see is more moderation in legislation that might not be as divisive," Stivers said.

No one yet knows who will chair committees or lead the House and Senate, but Magic Valley legislators said the area is in good shape to hold its own.

Sen. Michael Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, last year's Senate president pro tem, said the mostly Republican Magic Valley won't lose out a balanced Senate because most issues aren't decided along party lines. "If anything, (Magic Valley legislators) have seniority," Crapo said.

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-DeWalt, are committee chairmen. Sen. Joyce McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, is in line to become one.

But T.W. Stivers, a former Republican speaker of the House from Twin Falls, predicted less acrimony and more accommodation within the Senate than when the GOP controlled it outright.

agreed that the Magic Valley is well represented, both by having representatives in leadership positions and sitting on key committees.

"I think we've finally got to the point where we can do some good for the Magic Valley," said Newcomb, whose own caucus shrank by seven members as a result of Tuesday's vote.

Newcomb said a balanced Senate could force House Republicans, who still hold a 36-28 advantage, to be tough. When Republicans led the Senate, they got what they wanted passed, Newcomb said. Now more bills might come to the House "that we're not particularly fond of."

The House will also come into play in reapportionment, an issue on which the Magic Valley will feel the greatest loss of clout, predicted Sen. Lynn Tominga, R-Idaho Falls.

Who's in control? A hot issue remains murky

By Michelle Cole

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Republicans aren't going to share control of the state Senate gracefully, in fact, some insist they aren't going to share it at all.

"It will be a dogfight like you've never seen," said state Sen. Denton Darrington, R-DeWalt, the morning after learning the state Legislature would include a split Senate with 21 Republicans and 21 Democrats.

Republicans held the upper hand during the last session of legislation that reaches the floor and when the GOP had 22 seats to the Democrats' 19. But a lot of us won't be able to be off the floor," said Senate Majority Caucus Chairman Lynn Tominga, R-Rupert.

The Democrats have wanted to play games — now I suppose we will. Although Minority Caucus Chairman John Peavey has been in the middle of a few-floor scraps himself, the Carey-Darrington sees less friction and more coalition in a split Senate than do Republican leaders.

Darrington

tees, committee chairmanships, the type of legislation that survives a floor vote.

"I think you'll see a lot more consensus, more coalitions than we have in the past," Peavey said.

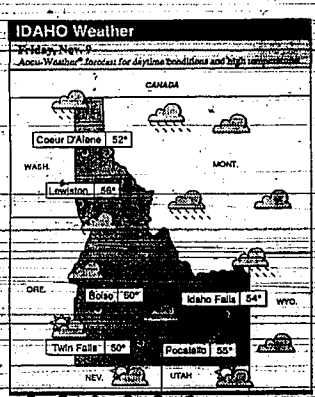

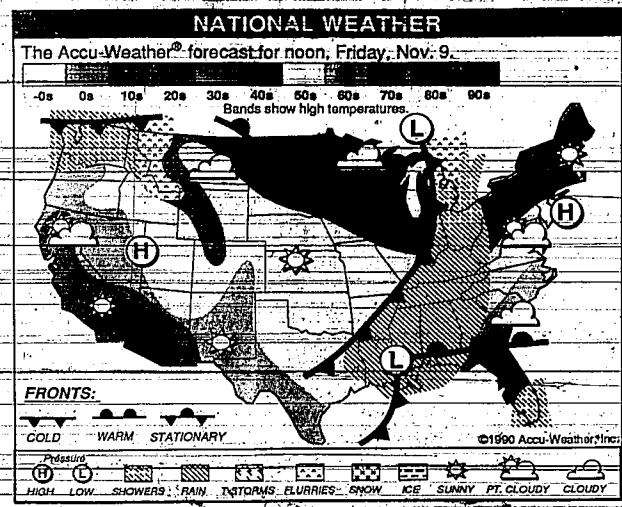

His foresees moderate Republicans joining with Democrats on certain issues.

But Peavey also foresees the first fight which will probably occur even before the session officially begins.

By law, members of the Legislature convene the first week in December for an organizational session during which committee chairmen and committee memberships are decided.

Rain splatters various sections of the nation

The Associated Press

Advisories and watches for winter-like weather in various parts of the nation expired Thursday and rain splattered areas from Oregon to New York state.

New Mexico got some relief after a storm dumped snow in every corner of the state. Up to 6 inches of snow powered various areas, including the northeast heights of Albuquerque.

Winds gusted to 50 and 60 mph across Wyoming's southeast mountains. An advisory for strong winds causing blowing and drifting snow was posted for the region.

A high wind warning was posted for Kodiak, Alaska, where 45-mph winds gusted to near 75 mph.

Strong winds and low wind chills were expected to linger through Friday around Valdez, Alaska. Winds gusted to near 60 mph and the morning wind chill was 25 to 35 degrees below zero.

Rain or occasional thundershowers reached much of Texas, Oklahoma, northwest Louisiana, southern Arkansas, eastern Kansas, northwest Missouri and southern Iowa.

Rain also extended across northwest Oregon and from southwest Idaho into northwest Idaho. Rain changed to snow over southwest Idaho. Snow was scattered in central Colorado, northwest Wisconsin, south-central New York state and northern Maine.

The nation's low Thursday morning was 4 degrees below zero at Alamosa, Colo.

Rupert, last year's Senate majority caucus chairman. "I think you're going to see the House playing a pivotal part," Democrat Rep. Gene Robinson, who was unsuccessful in his bid for the Magic Valley, and he said the valley's voice on natural resources could be at stake.

Should Sen. Ron Beilspacher, D-Grangeville, the senior Democrat on his Resources and Environment Committee, become chairman, Noh said it wouldn't be good news for southern Idaho. "Beilspacher is a friend of irrigators," Noh said.

Beilspacher did not return a phone call from The Times-News Thursday, but Newcomb said regional differences in opinions on resources aren't new. Now, each party will be represented equally on committees, he said. He is more concerned about spending and education.

The state needs to set priorities and be careful with its financial obligations in light of an economic downturn, Newcomb said, and Democrats who received Idaho Education Association support during the elections will push for more money for schools.

"It's definitely going to have some impact," Newcomb said. Democrats elected in 1988 on 15-year terms will support the IEA, not their constituents, down the line, he said.

The IEA made $273,787 in campaign contributions from January to October 22, according to a financial disclosure report.

They gave more than $28,000 to Democrat Rep. Gene Robinson, who was unsuccessful in his bid for the Magic Valley's District 25 Senate seat. The IEA had better luck with two Boise Democrats, Cynthia Scanlon, who was given $19,619 this summer, and fall and won in District 18, and Sally Snodgrass, who was given $17,692 and won in District 15.

Those two seats threw the Senate into a tie.

"They definitely did everything they could to make sure the candidates they supported made it into office. You have to expect they're going to try and wield everything they can get," Crapo said.

Dick Chilcote, former Twin Falls teacher and president of the IEA, said his organization "did fairly well" with its investments, although he was disappointed with Robinson's loss.

"It's not a win for us. We are looking out for the benefit of education in the state and for the hundreds of thousands of students in the state. They're the ones who win," Chilcote said.

And the association will invest through to profit from its involvement.

Idaho residents support education, Chilcote said, and it should be there every day to remind legislators.

Cheney said the Navy will send three additional aircraft carrier battle groups, plus Crosser, the 15th aircraft battleship — USS Missouri — also would be sent with escorts, as well as Amphibious Group Three from San Diego, Calif.

The Marine Corps will be sending the 2nd Marine Expeditionary Force from Camp Lejeune, N.C., the 3rd Marine Expeditionary Brigade from Camp Pendleton, Calif., and Marine Prepositioning Ship Squadron One from Norfolk, Va.

He also said additional Air Force units may be tapped.

"There clearly will be a need to carry further reserve units, and we will also be calling up for the first time combat units of the Army National Guard," Cheney said.

Specifically, he said that would include three National Guard units: the 48th Infantry Brigade-Mechanized from Camp Lejeune, N.C.; the 25th Infantry Brigade from Mississippi and the 256th Infantry Brigade Mechanized from Louisiana.

Usually, the majority party elects a president pro tem who then appoints committee chairmen and determines committee memberships. But with a 21-21 split, nobody knows exactly what's in store for Idaho senators.

"We think we ought to have half of the chairmanships or at least have a co-chair," Peavy said.

Peavy, a GOP leader, they insist Republican Lt. Gov. Butch Otter, who serves as president of the Senate and who votes to break ties whenever the Senate deadlocks, will have the tie-breaking vote when it comes to electing a president pro tem.

"I think it's crystal clear," Darrington said. "We'll have a Republican pro tem, nobody can argue that."

There's no question that Otter can break ties on the floor during the regular session — he's done so four times in the last four years. But there is some question about whether Otter's vote counts at December's organizational session.

"It's ambiguous," said Frank Walker, a deputy attorney general who spent Wednesday morning studying law books looking for precedents.

"But he acknowledged that when he took the $68,000 per year job in 1987 at Andrus' request, he was advised that there was some question whether state legislators held immunity from arrest. He said he took no action to stop or clarify the practice, and in retrospect, he should have."

"I was just kind of going along with a practice that had been going on for a number of years," he said.

Andrus named Deputy Director Richard Cade as acting department chief. Humphreys will stay on as police superintendent until a successor is named. Additional administrative changes will also occur, Andrus said, because he was convinced the ISP force was top-heavy with administrators.

"In my opinion, they are too lean at the bottom and too fat at the top of the governor's staff. I want to put more people out on the road."

The governor took the action a day after troopers in outlying State Police districts told him an unwritten policy of selective traffic enforcement existed, said a spokesman. Richardson, who publicly deplored using such a policy in any form,

No new income taxes, Bush tells reporters

Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, reviving the no-new-tax pledge he abandoned in a budget deal, said Thursday the only way Democrats will be able to raise income tax rates will be "over my dead body."

It ain't going to happen, I'll guarantee you," Bush told reporters at a news conference after saying he expects congressional Democrats to come up with new tax proposals.

But he hedged his pledge somewhat when asked flatly if he would reject new taxes.

"Can I make the promise I won't support them? Absolutely," Bush said. "But... sometimes you run into some realities. But I'm grinding up my loins to go into battle to beat back the tax attempts that I think are coming."

He said Democrats had an "insupportable desire" to raise taxes and accused them of trying to "stick me with being anti-civil rights for vetoing a landmark bill banning job discrimination."

Bush struck a sharply combative stance toward the Democrats who increased their power in both the House and Senate with Election Day victories.

"I didn't do as well as I'd like," the president said, reflecting on Thursday's GOP losses.

Bush said the clear message from Election Day was that "people feel they're taxed too much."

Six incumbent governors, of both parties, went down to defeat. The losses generally reflected tax or economic woes.

Bush, in one of his gloomiest assessments, said he was extremely concerned that the economy was faltering. He said he would consult with economists in and out of the government on the blow and stimulate growth.

Even before the election, Republicans were heavily outnumbered in Congress, and their losses Tuesday will make it harder for Bush to win veto battles and push a legislative agenda.

But Bush said the results won't tie my hands at all in dealing with lawmakers, signaling that he would use last congressional sessions in the next two years.

"When you extend the hand (of cooperation), somebody else has to reach out and shake it," Bush said.

He said he would appeal for Democratic support for his policies, but warned:

"I'm going to use the veto so as to stop a lot of bad things from happening in this country. I am more determined than ever to use it."

Bush abandoned his politically popular no-new-tax pledge during negotiations with Congress to reduce the massive budget deficits.

To the dismay of many Republicans, the deal Bush approved for fiscal 1991 includes $140 billion in new taxes.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, a Democrat, said Wednesday there's support among Democrats for a surtax on millionaires, one of the provisions omitted from the budget deal.

Bush said that if Democrats want higher taxes, "we're in for a whole of a fight and the proffered hand (of consultation) may miss the shake because we're not going to compromise on that."

Navy considers mothballing battleships

WASHINGTON — The Navy is weighing a plan to mothball its last two active battleships, an admiral told Congress on Thursday.

The commander of the Naval Sea Systems Command told a House subcommittee about the possible decision shortly after congressional investigators recommended that the Navy decommission the two World War II-era ships, the USS Missouri and the USS Wisconsin, unless they can demonstrate needed capability found nowhere else.

"I can tell you that it is under discussion," said Vice Adm. Peter M. Hekman Jr.

The USS Wisconsin is in the Persian Gulf as part of the U.S. military buildup to thwart Iraqi aggression. The USS Missouri has been conducting exercises off San Clemente Island in the Pacific Ocean.

Worker tears shuttle telescope blanket

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A protective blanket over part of an astronomical observatory aboard the space shuttle Columbia was torn when a worker accidentally knocked a metal pan into it, NASA said Thursday.

The mishap was not expected to affect Columbia's astronomy mission, which is scheduled to begin Wednesday, NASA spokesman Phillip Phillips said. The accident occurred Wednesday as the worker was moving a platform that provides access to Columbia's cargo bay, she said.

Brain activity offered as abortion guide

IOWA CITY, Iowa — A philosopher proposes applying the same legal standards to abortions as widely used in determining if a person is dead — is the surgeon's brain activity.

A model law proposed at an international conference in Iowa City, called the Uniform Determination of Life Protection Act, would permit abortion of a fetus until the 70th day, or 10th week, after conception.

Hans-Martin Sass of the Kennedy Institute of Ethics said that after the 70th day, the fetus should be protected human life because it then begins developing a brain capable of determining individual characteristics and thought processes.

"The absence of brain-specific cells in early embryonic development could be understood as the absence of brain-life," he said. In that case, "abortion of inanimate life must be legally protected."

Panel members have tobacco ties

NEW YORK — Six of the 16 members of a newly appointed Environmental Protection Agency panel considering the health risks of second-hand cigarette smoke have ties to a tobacco industry research organization, documents show.

A seventh member of the panel was appointed upon the recommendation of the Philip Morris tobacco company, EPA officials said.

"They've stacked the deck with people who have close ties to the tobacco industry," said Dr. Alan Blum, a founder of the anti-smoking group Doctors Ought to Care. "It's pathetic."

Export boom could soften recession

WASHINGTON — The U.S. economy, if it does topple into a recession, will be cushioned by an export boom in foreign demand for chemicals, aircraft and scientific equipment, a trade group said Thursday.

The National Association of Manufacturers said a survey of 120 of its member companies found their expected exports to double from 10 percent of their total sales to 20 percent by 1993.

An export boom has accounted for more than one-third of total economic growth in the country since 1985, American companies have benefited from a weaker dollar, which has boosted demand for U.S. products overseas.

Boy Scouts may face discrimination suit

LOS ANGELES — A judge's ruling has cleared the way for a homosexual man to proceed with a discrimination lawsuit against the Boy Scouts of America and its national policy banning homosexuals as poor role models.

Timothy Curran, 29, was asked to leave the Scouts in 1980 when he took a young man to his senior prom. He filed his lawsuit in 1981 when his bid to return as an adult leader was rejected.

Curran, a free-lance television editor and former Eagle Scout, said he wants to serve as a scout leader and is not seeking monetary damages.

Redistricting forces some tough decisions on state legislatures

The Battle To Control Redistricting

When the results of the 1990 census are in, the political map of the U.S. will be redrawn. Some states will gain seats in Congress; others will lose seats. The process of mapping the new districts is controlled by the states. Here is a look at party control of state legislatures and governorships after the 1990 election.

KEY:

- Democrat control - 17 states
- Republican control - 4 states
- Split control - 23 states
- Independents - 2
- Not yet decided - 1
- Runoff likely - 1

Notes: "Not applicable" means that partisan control of a house of the state legislature or the governorship is not involved in control of redistricting. In Conn., Hawaii, Mont. and Wash., the legislature for the governor is directly involved.
 * Nebraska's single-house legislature is technically non-partisan.

AP/Pat Lynga

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York Reps. Chuck Schumer and Stephen Solarz won re-election with 80 percent of the vote, but they might already be thinking about their next jobs.

Redistricting could put them out of work in 1992.

The once-a-decade debate now begins to heat up—19 House districts need to be erased in 13 states that lost population in the 1980s.

In the big-ego, ambition-filled world of politics, that won't be easy. The decisions will be made next year, in most cases by state legislatures.

If history is any guide, members of Congress who could be affected by the plans will have considerable input—in person and through contributions to state lawmakers who draft the plans.

"The thing we fear most is being thrown into a district with another colleague," Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said last year.

"We are all the tender mercy of those whose agendas are not necessarily our own."

In most states losing seats, including all losing more than one, power of redistricting is shared between Democrats and Republicans. That generally means the losses or at least the risk of losses, will be shared, too.

Because available census data is preliminary and the process so complex, it's difficult to say with any certainty who will be squeezed out or forced into a race with another incumbent. And retirements or bids for other office would affect the outcome.

Here is a state-by-state look at early speculation among consultants for both parties.

New York (-3): A Republican district update likely will be eliminated, probably Rep. Bill Paxton. And two districts in New York City are vulnerable, leading to speculation that Brooklyn districts represented by Schumer and Solarz could be merged.

But the possibilities are nearly endless in the 20-district city.

Queens Democrat James Scheuer will be 72 in 1992 and could retire or be squeezed out. Democrats Schumer or Solarz might challenge Republican Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

Pennsylvania (-2): The Pittsburgh and Philadelphia areas each will lose a seat. Several members of the delegation are in their mid-60s; retirements are possible.

Otherwise, Democrat Joseph Kolter's district might be carved up in the west and a Republican incumbent, perhaps Curt Weldon, pitted against a Democratic incumbent, perhaps Thomas Ricketts, in the Philadelphia suburbs.

Ohio (-2): A Cleveland-area Democrat, maybe Edward Feighan, and a downstate Republican are vulnerable. Republicans — Clarence Miller and Chalmers Wylie could retire.

Illinois (-2): The Chicago-area seat to be lost is likely to be Dan Rostenkowski or Sidney Yates. If Rostenkowski retires in 1992, he's eligible to keep $1 million in campaign money. And Yates, who will have been in Congress for 42 years, will be 83 and could call it quits.

The other seat will come from Republican country in the north.

Michigan (-2): Republican William Broomfield will be 70 in two years and might retire. If not, he could end up in a race against fellow Republican Carl Pursell.

The other seat likely will come from the Democratic Detroit area.

Massachusetts (-1): Unless Republican Silvio Conte or Democrat Joe Early retires, a Democrat will be squeezed, perhaps into a race against Rep. Joseph Kennedy.

The prime candidates are Chester Atkins and Ed Markey, both of whom have enemies in the state legislature. Controversial Barney Frank is another possibility.

New Jersey (-1): Democrats control the pen, so newly elected Republican Rep. Richard Zimmer could be in trouble. But his won't be the easiest district to draw out.

Kentucky (-1): Democrats will draw the lines. Republican Rep. Larry Hopkins looks like the odd man out, forced either to run against a GOP colleague or for another office.

West Virginia (-1): Democrats control the process, but all four House members are Democrats. One will be squeezed out, probably either Alan Mollohan and Barney Stiggers.

Louisiana (-1): Democrats control the process, which likely means bad news for one of the delegation's four Republicans.

Kansas (-1): Democrat Jim Slattery was the odds-on favorite to go until Democrats took the governor's office and state House from GOP hands.

He could still end up in a race against a Republican colleague, but with better odds.

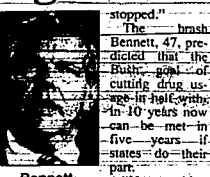

Iowa (-1): Republicans have a say, but the population losses in the western part of the state might force GOP Rep. Jim Ross Lightfoot and Fred Grandy into the same district anyway.

Montana (-1): The state goes from two seats to one, forcing Democrat Pat Williams against Republican Ron Marfene, unless one bows out.

Outgoing drug czar: U.S. breaking habit

WASHINGTON (AP) — William J. Bennett had far fewer as drug policy director with characteristic bluster Thursday, boasting Americans have turned against drugs and dismissing an congressional critic as a "bastard."

He allowed that his efforts to rid the nation's capital of drugs didn't work, but said it did help that Mayor Marion Barry, who has been convicted of cocaine possession, was "part of the problem."

Bennett, 47, predicted that the Bush goal of cutting drug usage in half by '94 in 10 years now can be met in five years if states do their part.

Bennett, at a White House send-off with President Bush, denied reports that he had run out of gas or feared for his family's safety as the first director of drug policy.

"I'm not the stampee-out-of-town type," said Bennett, who will actually relinquish his post at the end of the month. Bush said he has not yet settled on a successor.

The president showed Bennett, with praise, saying he had done "an outstanding job for his country" and "his hard work has paid off."

"We're on the road to victory," said Bush, who promised to stay on the front lines until this scourge is

"This country is beginning to break its interest and habit on drugs," he said.

The Brooklyn-born Bennett took umbrage with a parting shot fired at him earlier by Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

Rangel called Bennett's 19-month tenure "a colossal failure."

Cranston says he has cancer, won't run in '92

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alvin Cranston, D-Calif., said Thursday he has cancer of the prostate and won't seek re-election when his term expires in 1992.

"The physicians tell me that the cancer is apparently totally curable, but immediate treatment is necessary," Cranston said in a statement released by his office. "A positive factor is my otherwise robust health. Whether I face an operation or radiation therapy will be determined shortly," Cranston, 76, also said he would not seek another two-year term as deputy majority leader for the Congress that convenes in January.

Cranston's popularity among voters has plunged since he was named as one of five senators who allegedly intervened with federal regulators on behalf of savings and loan executives Charles Keating, a campaign contributor. The Senate Ethics Committee has been investigating those allegations.

Cranston said the cancer was first detected by the Senate physician during a routine annual physical.

Amnesty will accompany coronation

TOKYO — The Justice Ministry plans an amnesty for about 2.5 million people to mark the coronation of Emperor Akihito next week, a ministry official said Thursday.

The official said the scale of the planned amnesty was announced after a meeting between Vice Minister of Justice Yasuchika Negoro and Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

Akihito

Other details of the pardons, expected to be mainly for traffic violations, have not been made public, he said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

More than 10 million people received amnesty to mark the funeral of Akihito's father, Emperor Hirohito, in February last year.

Rescuers recover helicopter wreckage

ATHENS, Greece — Rescue teams have recovered wreckage from a U.S. Army helicopter that disappeared off the Greek coast on Wednesday.

The U.S. Embassy said Thursday the three crew members remain missing, but a police official in Isthmia, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said human remains were spotted near the crash site 35 miles southwest of Athens.

The UH-1H Huey helicopter crashed in the Saronic Gulf while en route to Hellinikon U.S. Air Force Base, adjacent to Athens International Airport.

The helicopter was on a training mission from the U.S. Army 6th Aviation Detachment based in Vicenza, Italy, said an embassy official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The official declined to identify the crew.

Dissident is only Indian candidate

NEW DELHI, India — India's two largest political parties declined offers Thursday to name a new prime minister, leaving only the dissident politician who helped unseat the government in the running.

Chandra Shekhar said he has staked his claim to be India's next prime minister in a letter to President Ramaswamy Venkataraman. But Venkataraman, who consulted the nation's leaders throughout Thursday, failed to summon Chandra Shekhar for a meeting, leaving open the possibility he might exercise his option to call an early election.

Chandra Shekhar broke with Prime Minister V.P. Singh's centrist Janata Dal Party, a move which led to the historic no-confidence vote Wednesday that brought down Singh's 11-month-old government.

Poland, Germany plan border treaty

FRANKFURT AM DER ODER, Germany — The leaders of Poland and Germany said Thursday a treaty confirming their present border would be signed soon, settling decades of debate over the frontier and ethnic Germans in Poland.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl made the announcement at his summit with Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, their first meeting together since German unification on Oct. 3.

Kohl said the treaty would be signed this month in Warsaw, but did not give a specific date.

"We want this border to bring us closer and not to divide Europe between the developed rich and the poor," said Mazowiecki.

Novelist Lawrence Durrell dies

PARIS — Lawrence Durrell, the British novelist who conveyed his love for Mediterranean life in "The Alexandria Quartet" and other lyrical works, died at his home in southern France, his family said Thursday. He was 78.

Durrell

The cause of death Wednesday was not disclosed. Durrell had been fatigued for about two weeks, a family member said, and the author said in a 1986 interview that he suffered from emphysema.

"The Alexandria Quartet" consists of four novels set in the Egyptian coastal city where Durrell served as press attaché at the British Embassy in World War II. The works, written from 1957 to 1960, are "Justine," "Balthazar," "Mountolive" and "Clea."

Ireland may elect 1st woman president

DUBLIN, Ireland — A lawyer who favors liberalizing strict laws on birth control and abortion appeared in a strong position Thursday to become Ireland's first woman president, according to partial and unofficial returns.

Mary Robinson trailed former deputy prime minister Brian Lenihan in the preliminary count, but pre-election polls indicated the second round vote likely would put her over the top.

Red Square gunman faces terrorism charge

MOSCOW (AP) — A man who opened fire on Red Square during the Revolution-Day parade has been charged with committing a terrorist act, a spokesman for the KGB secret police said Thursday.

Alexander A. Simonov, 38, of Leningrad, will undergo psychiatric tests to determine whether he was sane at the time of the shooting Wednesday, said Alexei Kandaurov, deputy director of the KGB public relations office. He gave no other details on the case.

AP Wirephoto

No one was hurt in the incident, in which the man pulled out the hunting rifle in the heavily guarded square about 80 yards from President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. The shooting came during a Communist Party march that followed the military parade.

A plainclothes officer knocked the weapon away as the man fired once into the air and again into the ground, newspapers said. He then was subdued by about 20 plainclothes officers and carried into the GUM department store across the square from Gorbachev.

Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze played down what may have been an assassination attempt, categorically denying that it indicated a loss of public support for Gorbachev's "perestroika" reform policies.

"I don't think this incident should be taken very seriously," Shevardnadze told reporters before meeting with visiting Secretary of State James A. Baker III. "This is a huge country where something is always happening somewhere."

Some of the nearly 5,000 anti-government protesters chant before Wednesday's march.

Simonov was interrogated and spoke in detail about his preparations for the act, the official Tass news agency quoted KGB investigator Pyotr Sokolov as saying.

Soviet Deputy Prosecutor Janis Danilits on Thursday sanctioned Simonov's arrest, Tass reported. Simonov is charged with committing "an attempted terrorist act," the news agency quoted Sokolov as saying.

part by one newspaper that the gunman was carrying a light explosive in addition to the rifle.

The conservative labor newspaper Trud said Simonov was carrying a small explosive usually used for military reorganizations that could cause no serious damage.

Kandaurov said the man was carrying at least one device, but added that laboratory tests would have to confirm whether it was an explosive.

"It is hard to tell now whom he was aiming at," Trud said. "But one thing is clear: If it were not for the immediate reaction of a policeman, who succeeded in knocking the gun into the air, a disaster might have happened."

KGB chief Vladimir Kryuchkov indicated Wednesday night that officials believed the man was deranged.

Simonov is being held in the KGB's isolation ward, Tass reported.

Analysts: Sacked Iraqi general opposed occupation of Kuwait

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saddam Hussein has dismissed his military chief of staff for opposing the occupation of Kuwait and analysts said Thursday the move indicated growing dissension in his armed forces hierarchy.

The Iraqi army's al-Qadisiya daily reported Thursday that Lt. Gen. Nazif al-Khazraji, chief of staff since 1983, was replaced by Gen. Hussein Rashid, commander of the elite 120,000-strong Republican Guards force.

The newspaper did not say what happened to Khazraji or when he was dismissed.

But several Western military and intelligence sources said Khazraji opposed the Kuwait occupation. They also believe Saddam might be seeking to surround himself with relatives and loyalists as the standoff with the multinational gulf force enters its fourth month.

A Western intelligence source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Rashid is a hard-liner in Iraq's Baath Socialist Party who would be expected to support Saddam's policies. Rashid had been Khazraji's deputy chief of staff for operations.

U.S. officials in Washington said Rashid is considered a "very competent" commander and led an armored brigade in the 1980-88 war against Iran.

"It's very ominous," said Hans Helms, Kopetzky, a former analyst with London's International Institute for Strategic Studies who is now with Control Risks, an international security firm in London.

Khazraji's dismissal now is indicative of some opposition to Saddam within the military, Kopetzky said in a telephone interview.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Khazraji was named a special military adviser to Saddam in what was seen as a de-motion.

Al-Qadisiya mentioned Rashid's new title in a report of a graduation ceremony he attended at Baghdad's military academy Wednesday.

The shakeup comes amid increasingly tough U.S. and British warnings they might use force to dislodge the Iraqis from Kuwait.

"Saddam's taking a big gamble," said analyst Stuart Chubb of the Geneva-based Graduate Institute of International Affairs and author of several books on the Gulf War.

Some analysts said Rashid's appointment was in part designed to keep the Republican Guards on Saddam's side.

The guards, considered to be Iraq's best troops, led the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

"The rest of the army may be neutralized. But the Republican guards with the multinational gulf force in the country below the road is national suicide," said Bernard Trainor, a former U.S. Marine general who has visited Iraq several times.

"As he lightens up, he's gathering around him all the hard-liners and sycophants who are afraid to challenge him," said Trainor, who heads the national security program at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government.

Rashid is believed to hail from Tikrit, Saddam's birthplace north of Baghdad in the past two weeks.

U.S. officials said Rashid is a member of the Baath Socialist Party with relatives, by blood or marriage, who come mainly from Tikrit clans.

Rashid's appointment is the second known top-level change in Baghdad in the past two weeks.

Gen. Hussein Kamel, Saddam's cousin and son-in-law, Kamel is also minister of industry and Military Industrialization and is believed to head Saddam's internal security apparatus.

Kamel, a Tikriti, has been responsible for developing Iraq's arms industry and producing new surface-to-surface missiles.

Beefed-up Saudi forces still no match for Iraq

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Despite spending billions of dollars on air defenses and anti-tank weapons and plans to double the size of its army, Saudi Arabia still is unable to fend off a full-scale Iraqi attack alone.

Unless Saddam Hussein's formidable military machine is crippled in the gulf confrontation, the means a sizeable Western military presence will almost certainly have to remain in the region for some time to come.

The Saudis have spent an estimated $1.5 billion on advanced weapons systems over the past decade. But they were unable to take on Saddam's million-strong military juggernaut when it crushed Kuwait in August and appeared to threaten the Saudis' own desert kingdom.

King Fahd had invited the U.S. to appeal for U.S. and allied help to protect a country which contains Islam's holiest shrines, despite an outcry by some Moslem hard-liners.

The crisis has benefited the Saudis inasmuch as the threat to their oil fields overcame the pro-Israel lobby in the U.S. Congress, which for years blocked the sale of state-of-the-art weaponry to Riyadh on the grounds it was technically at war with Israel.

Now the Americans have pledged to sell the Saudis some $20 billion worth of sophisticated hardware including F-15 C/D Eagle fighters, Patriot missiles, 350 M1A2 Abrams tanks and 500 Bradley Fighting Vehicles.

But even after delivery of the new arsenal over the next two or three years, analysts say the Saudis will be unable to take on Saddam alone if he's still around.

The Saudi defense plan relied on being able to hold the attackers off for long enough to get outside assistance, said Nadav Safran, a professor of Middle East studies at Harvard University.

"When Saddam's troops marched into Kuwait, the Saudis realized that even after two decades of beefing up their defenses, they still didn't have the capacity to hold him off, even for a few days," said Safran, who is the author of "Saudi Arabia: The Ceaseless Quest for Security."

King Fahd and his defense minister, Prince Sultan, are planning to more than double the size of the 65,000-man regular Saudi armed forces, which is supported by a 56,000-man National Guard.

It is unclear where the recruits will come from.

Marine call up more reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps Thursday ordered another 90 combat reservists to active duty for deployment in Operation Desert Shield.

The Marines to 723 the number of Marine combat reserves put on active duty this week.

The Marines are the first service to activate combat reserves for the Persian Gulf crisis.

Also Thursday, the Air Force said it planned to order to active duty 265 doctors, dentists and other medical specialists who are members of the Air Force Reserve.

The Army also was expected to announce new call-ups of support forces from its ranks.

The Marines today said 90 members of the 773rd Marine Attack Helicopter Squadron from Marietta, Ga., were ordered to active duty to become part of the 5th Marine Expeditionary Brigade, which is assembling at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Twin Falls beats odds, wins grant for housing

TWIN FALLS — Despite misplacing a letter and getting its application in on the last day, the city of Twin Falls has won a $4,000 low-income housing grant.

Besides Twin Falls, Nampa received $112,000 and Pocatello won $44,500, according to the office of Gov. Cecil Andrus. A total of $220,500 was available to Idaho cities through the U.S. Department of Urban Renewal.

The grant money is to be used to improve rental housing for low- and moderate-income households while allowing property owners to hold down rent increases. The city will choose which property owners get money, Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney said.

When the city applied for a similar grant before, only two or three neighborhoods would have qualified for the money. The grant's standards defining low income are fairly restrictive, Courtney said.

Unless the 1990 census data come in, the city probably will use 1980 figures in choosing areas that most need the money.

The city applied for the grant in mid-September. A letter from the state describing the grant program and inviting the city to apply was misplaced in City Planner Larry Orton's filing cabinet but he managed to get a duplicate application in on time.

Courtney said Thursday that the Idaho Migrant Council is interested in getting some of the money.

H&W director will face drunken driving charge

HELENA — Richard L. Rich, Donovan's director of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, will be prosecuted on drunken driving charges, Blaine County officials say.

Donovan, 40, of Boise, was arrested Oct. 5, three miles south of Ketchum, on Idaho Highway 75. Sheriff Walt Fleming said Monday that test results recently received show Donovan's blood alcohol level was above the legal limit of 0.10 percent.

Donovan has pleaded innocent, and his attorney, John Ohman of Idaho Falls, said Monday he thinks the case "is defensible." But Ohman would not say how he would handle the case.

He said Donovan is hoping for a trial date within a couple of weeks. The Health and Welfare director has been on leave from his job since shortly after his arrest.

A motion from the defense to disqualify 3rd-District Magistrate Daniel Alban from the case was granted recently, and Magistrate John Varin was being appointed in his place, Ohman said.

Crossroads of Idaho wins variance for large sign

JEROME — At a special Planning and Zoning Commission meeting Thursday, crossroads of Idaho was granted a variance to the Jerome County ordinance to allow a 600-square-foot sign to be installed 80 feet above ground.

Located at the intersection of Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93, Crossroads of Idaho is a new truck stop scheduled to open Dec. 3.

County ordinance prohibits signs more than 30 feet tall.

Approval of the sign had been delayed because the commission had not had a quorum at the past two meetings. The delay had caused some doubt as to whether the sign could be constructed and put up on time for the opening day, according to Ron Stanley, part owner and contractor.

The sign needed to be 80 feet in the air so it is visible to east bound traffic, Rex Lytle, of Lytle Signs, Twin Falls, said at an October public hearing.

No objections to the sign were presented at the hearing.

Gooding may shun regional landfill

By Phil Salom
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gooding County probably will not join other Magic Valley counties in a regional landfill.

The reason comes down to money, said Gooding County Commissioner Bob Tupper. The county can ship its garbage to the Mountain Home landfill for less money than joining a regional effort, he said.

Preliminary cost estimates for Gooding County to join a regional landfill plan range from $34.85 a ton to $47.15 a ton. Although Mountain Home has not quoted a price, Tupper said the commissioners there assured him they could beat the one for joining a regional landfill plan.

"I'm sure it would be cheaper there than it would be over here," Tupper said Wednesday.

Mountain Home has about 900 acres for its landfill with 35 to 40 feet of soil, Tupper said. The landfill probably will last a long time.

The Gooding County landfill is about the same distance — 54 miles — from the one in Mountain Home as it is from the one in Twin Falls County, Tupper said. Gooding would not have its own trucks to transport the garbage. They either would be leased or contracted out.

Gooding County now pays $60,000 a year to have garbage buried at its landfill. If the county ships garbage to Mountain Home it probably would build a transfer station where garbage would be put into trucks for the journey to the landfill.

Tupper said Gooding County probably will not start shipping to Mountain Home until the federal Subtitle D regulations come on line. The regulations have been expected for a couple of years but have not come out yet.

Subtitle D probably will require landfills to have plastic liners under them to prevent contaminants from leaching into groundwater. The regulations probably will make the cost of burying garbage much more expensive.

Tupper said the Gooding County landfill is directly over the Hoggeman water supply. That landfill almost certainly will have to be closed when Subtitle D comes on line.

Tupper said he would happily take suggestions from Gooding County residents who might have a better solution to the garbage problem. Tupper's home phone number is 837-4862.

Potato crop sets record; yields down

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Yes, Idaho did end up with a record potato production this year, despite a cold spring and a hot summer that together reduced yields by about four 100-pound sacks per acre.

According to the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service, the state's potato production is expected to total 112.3 million sacks, surpassing the previous record of 102.6 million sacks set in 1988.

The increase in production was due to a record 393,000 acres harvested in 1990. Statewide yield was 286 sacks per acre, the lowest since 1984. Yield in the 10 southwestern counties, at 395 sacks, is unchanged from 1989.

But in Idaho's other counties, yield is estimated at 280 sacks, down five sacks from 1989.

Nationally, fall potato production is forecast at 342 million sacks, up 5 percent from last year and 9 percent above two years ago.

Sugar beet production for Idaho is projected at 4.68 million tons, compared with 4.04 million tons in 1989. Yield, at 25 tons per acre, is up 2.2 tons from last year. Harvested acres are forecast at 187,000, up from last year's 177,000.

Nationally, sugar beet production is forecast at 27 million tons, 8 percent above last year's production. The increase resulted from higher yields and a 6 percent increase in planted area.

Economic growth slow, report finds

The Associated Press

BOISE — An index gauging Idaho's economic growth tumbled 0.7 percent in September, but it is unclear whether the decline means the lagging U.S. economy is affecting the state, First Security Corp. said.

"It's possible that some of the national weakness may be beginning to rub off," Kelly Matthews, chief economist for the Salt Lake City-based bank-holding company, said Wednesday.

But at the same time, it might be a one-month drop like we had in February and June," Matthews said. "Probably a little of both makes sense."

Five of the index's 11 indicators fell in September, below the previous month's figures. The index is adjusted for inflation and seasonal factors.

Auto loans and sales, non-residential construction values and new non-cultural job openings all declined, Matthews said, while consumer loan delinquencies rose.

First Security said the Idaho drop was nearly as large as September's 0.8 percent decline in the U.S. economy's vigor and was the state's lowest monthly gain in the past year.

On Wednesday, the Idaho Division of Financial Management said it had lowered its estimates for the state's economy through 1992. It cited a Massachusetts forecasting

Jerome council opens computer plans

By H.R. Weibel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The City Council has opened 10 proposals — not bids — for a computer to be used by the police department.

A $2,225 computer was purchased from Stephens Computer Consulting of Twin Falls, but was returned when Jack Adams and Mike Dalmer, who own computer companies in Jerome, challenged the type of system Stephens had provided the city.

They said it wasn't in accordance with specifications the city had given the two submitted proposals on a $2,000 Jerome firm before the purchase of the computer.

Proposals opened Tuesday ranged from a low of $2,145 submitted by Eagle Co. of Jerome, to $5,600 from Valcom Co. of Ketchum. Other proposals were received from Wendell, Twin Falls; Jerome, Boise, Austin, Texas; and Aroura, Colo.

Stephens' bid did not submit a proposal. Adams of Eagle Co. told the council he was impressed by the number of proposals submitted.

"It's incredible that companies from all do a lot better on their computer systems," Adams stated.

The council unanimously voted to take the proposals under advisement and set Nov. 20 as the award date.

The council also heard a report from Larry Paline, city administrator, on a water system Spears Manufacturing Co., south of Jerome, offered to the city in April 1990.

At that time, the council unanimously accepted the offer.

Hagerman official sees training need

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — City office workers need to have more adequate accounting training, says City Auditor Robert Poulsen.

Over the past five years, the city has had problems in identifying funds, he told the City Council on Wednesday. The treasurers know how much total cash there is, but they are unable to figure the cash balances of individual funds, Poulsen explained, and computer records for the auditor are inadequate.

"We spent five days trying to find out what the cash balance is," he said, noting that discrepancies in the records covered a $30,000 spread.

He added that the auditing fee of $3,240 does not include the extra work that has to be done.

Other accounting problems are caused by confusing, improper money transfers, Poulsen said.

City Clerk Coletta Lloyd has not been trained well enough to handle the city's automated accounting system, he said. "Prior personnel was not trained well enough, either."

At Poulsen's suggestion, council members agreed to hire a secretary from the auditor's office in Gooding to train Lloyd for 10 days, in the afternoons after City Hall is closed.

Poulsen said the city's computer and software system is adequate, but the clerk needs to learn how city budgets are operated and how those records must be kept on the computer.

Lloyd, who was hired in September, said she is willing to take the training. Poulsen said the ultimate responsibility for the city audit falls on the council.

"Training has got to be provided," he said. "Figures on cost of the training or when it will be scheduled was not decided."

Residents join forces to ask for larger calling area

By Cathryn Stephens
Times-News correspondent

EDEN — A group of Eden, Hazelton and Murching residents want to persuade the Public Utilities Commission to increase the local calling area — and residents are willing to pay an additional $4 a month for the expanded service.

About 300 residents from the three towns attended a public forum Wednesday to learn about possibly gaining toll-free phone service to Twin Falls.

Organizers have collected approximately 1,400 signatures for a petition from area residents who want the change. Dawna Eliason, in charge of the petition drive, said the signatures represent about 83 to 90 percent of the total population of the area. Eliason said area residents want the change because a large percentage of their long-distance telephone calls are to Twin Falls. She said other communities — including Kimberly, Hansen and Buhl — have toll-free calling to Twin Falls.

Their livelihoods are here and they are not just whining," Eliason said. "They have no access to doctors here. (Twin Falls is) where they do their business. We have to pay for long distance for everything we buy."

The audience of 300 heard from staff members of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission Wednesday evening as well as from representatives from U.S. West. PUC staff members explained that they would gather data about phone use in the area and research the special needs of the residents and then make a recommendation to the PUC. The commission would then decide if it wants to grant a hearing.

Previously, at a Sept. 13 hearing, the PUC denied the request from residents to add Twin Falls to the local calling area because of a lack of interest in the community. But Eliason said community members were simply not informed about the date of the hearing.

PUC staff members said the turnout at the meeting was the largest they had seen for an informational meeting.

"I think it's really an impressive showing of the community," said Eileen Benner, telecommunications analyst for PUC. "If they can continue the support it will be a big factor in the case."

U.S. West representatives explained to the group ways to cut down on their long-distance charges.

"The company will most likely come out and say, 'no, we don't support the expansion,'" said John Souba, assistant manager of regulatory affairs for U.S. West.

Questions from the audience were answered and residents' comments were listened to during the meeting.

Anti-abortion losers say position hurt them

Idaho

BOISE (AP) — The state Senate architect of Idaho's controversial but vetoed anti-abortion bill and a Republican Senate leader who strongly backed that bill conceded on Thursday that their positions were the catalyst for their narrow defeat in the polls this week.

"I do think I need to apologize," said freshman Republican Roger Madsen of Boise. "It mobilized $30,000 and a hundred foot soldiers."

Republican Floor Leader Rod Beck of Boise agreed his strong support for the bill "fueled the opposition. It was the catalyst for an army of volunteers."

Madsen, the chief Senate sponsor of the National Right to Life bill that Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus vetoed in March after a divisive legislative battle, lost by 68 votes to pro-choice Boise minister Cynthia Scanlin, who announced her candidacy at a pro-choice rally last winter.

And Beck lost to Sally Snodgrass by 238 votes. Both women said the incumbent's position on abortion was the factor that made them enter the race last spring.

But the two ousted incumbents maintained that abortion was not the major issue in their losses, contending to write in candidates protesting former Right-To-Work coordinator Gary Glenn for an County Commission seat brought out organized labor that then voted for Democrats.

They also pointed to the massive financial support both Scanlin and Snodgrass received from the Idaho Education Association. The IEA put over $30,000 into the two races, allowing the challengers to dramatically outpace the Republicans.

But Madsen acknowledged that despite a 93 percent rating on education issues by the teachers' union, he was denied its endorsement because of his leadership on the abortion bill.

And while Beck maintained the media was misinterpreting his and Madsen's losses as referendum on the abortion issue, Republican House

Speaker Tom Boyd of Genesee said the outcome of Tuesday's election statewide suggested differently.

Boyd, who opposed what would have been the nation's most restrictive abortion law in last winter's debate, said if the issue was submitted to voters in a neutral fashion "Idaho would be pro-choice."

"People said Republicans were probably going to suffer because of their position on abortion, and I think some took their lumps," Boyd said.

As a result of the 1990 campaign, the state Senate, where the abortion bill passed on a 25-17 vote in March, now has 24 members opposed to that kind of legislation.

Court rules on fraud

BOISE (AP) — Someone seeking to claim damages on the basis of fraud must show damage as a direct result of the fraud, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

"In order to secure relief on a basis of fraud, the party seeking redress must have been damaged, injured or harmed as a result of the asserted fraud," the court said Thursday. "A false representation which causes no loss is not actionable."

The court upheld lower court rulings in favor of American States Insurance Co. against Bryant Motors, Inc., over the sale of a bus to the school district at St. Maries.

Bryant sued the bonding agent for North American Diesel, Inc. over a joint venture in which the diesel company built a bus chassis and Bryant supplied the body for a bus sold to the school district.

Education groups find no quick fix

LEWISTON (AP) — Two statewide education reform groups agree there is no "quick fix" for problems facing Idaho's public schools, but each is developing a list of proposed long-term actions to give lawmakers next year.

The Governor's Task Force on the Future of Education in Idaho was formed last spring by Gov. Cecil Andrus and Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans.

A group of teachers, parents and other citizens from throughout the state was chosen to evaluate the state's public school program, decide what improvements are needed and develop a strategy for making the changes.

Later last spring, a group of corporations formed the Idaho Education Project and hired education consultants to gather similar information and draft an action plan and recommendations to give to legislators.

Surprisingly, an Idaho Education Project researcher said, business people, teachers and parents have virtually identical ideas about what schools should be like in the future.

A "higher order" of basic skills will be needed to keep up with an ever-increasing demand for knowledge, said Dr. Eric Zarnitsky, who is on leave from the Boise State University English Department to work on the project.

"Students need to be competent in these areas more than ever before," Ms. Zarnitsky said.

She said 500 people surveyed from 10 Idaho communities identified five different areas included in the "higher order" basic skills.

Rape perjury draws jail time

MOSCOW (AP) — A 19-year-old Troy woman has been sentenced to 72 days in the Latah County Jail for falsely testifying that two men raped her.

The two migrant workers Angela Jean Stephens accused of the crime spent 78 days behind bars before Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mossman dropped the charges against them.

A deputy prosecutor argued Wednesday that Ms. Stephens should serve 156 days in jail — as many as the total served by the men she falsely accused.

Robin Eckman said the stories of true rape victims would be viewed with skepticism because of Ms. Stephens' false testimony.

"She deserves to be punished," Ms. Eckman said. "The message needs to go out that this type of conduct is criminal."

Federal official approves Indian bingo on reservations in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — The Department of the Interior's top lawyer says as far as the federal agency is concerned, Indian bingo is legal in Idaho.

Interior Solicitor Thomas L. Sansonetti argued state legal officials that a review of the issue has produced the same result as the first time around, although on different grounds.

Some of Idaho's five Indian tribes have launched on-reservation bingo containing the same rules authorized under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. State officials, headed by Attorney General Jim Jones and Gov. Cecil Andrus, contend the games are not legal, because of the state constitutional prohibition on gambling.

In April, the Portland regional solicitor for Interior concluded that since Idaho amended its Constitution to authorize the state lottery, Idaho Indian tribes can "engage in, or license and regulate" bingo games.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan met with Andrus and other officials in May, and Andrus requested a review of the issue.

"Based on our latest review, we have concluded that Idaho tribes can lawfully engage in bingo games pursuant to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act," said a letter from Sansonetti to Clive Strong, chief of the Natural Resources Division of the attorney general's office.

"What it says is that Indian bingo is legal," Strong said.

A spokesman for Gov. Cecil Andrus said Wednesday the governor was aware of the opinion, and disputed with it.

"You could say that at the very least, he was disappointed in the decision," said Press Secretary Marco Johnson. (Manuel Lujan personally wrote to him (the governor) about it a couple of different occasions. Certainly he left the impression that the opinion would not come down as it did," he said.

"The governor thought it was a clear-cut case and he was led to believe that Interior would think the same way," Johnson said.

He said it would be up to the sttorney general to decide whether to pursue legal action over the issue.

The basic question, Sansonetti said, is whether Idaho, as a matter of public policy, "permits" bingo for any purpose. He noted that state laws now allow a state-run lottery.

There also are numerous games of bingo played regularly across the state, although the legal validity of those games is disputed," he said.

The state attorney general's office maintains that the so-called "contingent bingo" where the participant is required but not required to pay a fee is legal but strict "pay for play" bingo games are illegal," he said.

authorizing bingo games.

"The state attorney general's office maintains that these games are illegal. However, there is no evidence that the state has taken any enforcement action against any bingo game operated in violation of state law," Sansonetti said.

Idaho's new gambling statute allows "charitable games of chance by qualified charitable organizations." The federal official said under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, that also authorizes Indians to operate bingo games.

The federal official said his research found no distinction between "charitable" and "pay for play" bingo games.

Suspect spits on attorney during trial

SPOKANE (AP) — A man convicted of one Spokane murder and arrested in another was ordered removed from court after he spat for his court-appointed defense attorney and threw a cup of water at him.

Later, when defendant Damon Chapple was given a choice between behaving in court or watching the proceedings on a television monitor in an adjoining room, he chose at Spokane County Superior Court Judge Kathleen O'Connor.

Chapple was herded from the courtroom by six deputies.

Every day you come to get his (Chapple) spitting in the blood," he said while leaving the courtroom.

The outburst occurred Wednesday, the third day of jury selection in Chapple's first-degree murder trial.

He is charged in the death of 27-year-old Isabel Jones, who was sexually assaulted and beaten to death in August 1978 at an apartment complex she managed on Spokane's South Hill.

During jury selection Wednesday,

Chapple said he wanted to fire the attorney, Richard Kayne, for insubordinately representing him and other reasons.

Then, Chapple suddenly spat on Kayne and threw a cup of drinking water on the attorney before the judge intervened and ordered the defendant removed.

After a noon recess, O'Connor said the trial would continue despite the outburst.

California adopts tests for pollution

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California will begin random roadside testing next spring of diesel smoke from heavy trucks and buses under a program adopted Thursday by the state Air Resources Board.

The program, approved 7-1, will apply to all such vehicles in the state regardless of where they are registered.

It asks "truck and bus operators to do more than just improve their gas-line-powered cars have done since 1974 through the Smog Check program," said the board's executive officer, Jim Boyd.

The program requires the testing and repairing — if necessary — of gasoline-powered passenger cars every two years. The state already has two programs to control diesel emissions.

Officials declare victory in Medfly war

EL MONTE, Calif. (AP) — Agriculture officials Thursday declared victory over the Mediterranean fruit fly, a crop-destroying insect that has taken California 15 months and $52 million to eradicate.

"We're here to eradicate that we have eradicated the Medfly in California. Unless there is another introduction, it will remain eradicated," said Dick Parnell, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Parnell joined state agriculture chief Henry Voss at a news conference in pronouncing victory and lifting of a quarantine.

"Traps will continue to be placed throughout the area to detect any new arrivals."

The arrival of illegal fruit and vegetables, usually carried in travelers' luggage, virtually ensures future infestations, one official said in an interview last weekend.

"There is some perverse streak in human nature. They seem to believe it's fun to outsmart authorities and bring in just one mango or just one pineapple from Hawaii," said Gary Curry, spokesman for the state Department of Food and Agriculture. "All it takes is one person."

Quarantines were imposed on movement of fruit from infested areas. The big worry was that the flies could spread to a agricultural area and wreck California's $18 billion-a-year farm industry.

Fusion researcher responds to 'furor'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A University of Utah scientist who claims to have discovered a cold fusion energy process said Thursday his "sterile furnace" was still white-hot last month's was unfortunate.

Dr. Martin Pons checked reports Wednesday, his first appearance in Utah in weeks. He issued a statement to reporters the next day, when he met with an advisory council evaluating his work and related research.

Pons and colleague Martin Fleischmann caused a stir when they missed a council meeting two weeks ago and left Utah, apparently without making their destinations known to officials of the university or the university's National Cold Fusion Institute.

Fleischmann returned to his home in Tisbury, England, for medical treatment and did not return for the review, said Fritz Will, director of the state-funded institute.

"Obviously, the fact that we did not publish our itinerary seems to have caused considerable distress to some people, which is regrettable," Pons said in a news release.

Pons called the commotion over his disappearance a "sterile furor" and said he spent the time "traveling."

He met with the Fusion Energy Advisory Council, Council chairman Raymond Hixson said. Pons has made research advances that are the basis of a ninth patent application on cold fusion.

Author from Hansen returns for readings

Idaho author Charles Potts will give two free public readings in the area during the next week.

Potts, who now lives in Walla Walla, Wash., will read with local poet SOOJ Preston at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the CSI Center at the University of Idaho, 521 Fourth St. E., Ketchikan.

He'll also read at 7 p.m. Monday at the CSI Community Room, 1100 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., in Potts presentation sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho Library Center, English Department and the CSI Student Senate.

Poet and orator Potts, who lived in Hansen during the mid-1960s, will offer readings from his forthcoming book, "The Chill at Appomattox," which is subtitled "How the South Finally Won the Civil War."

Potts explains that many ideas espoused by Jefferson Davis and the Confederacy are now public policy, and he points to Southerners' success in the national political arena as further proof of his point. Potts will also offer readings from "The Dictatorship of the Environment" and "Lovers"—two volumes of poetry books.

Waiting on fame's doorstep

Marcy Bros. looking for major boost from new record company

By Julie Fanzelow Times-News writer

JACKPOT — Not long ago, the Marcy Bros. carved themselves a corner of country music history when the group made the pages of "Tiger Beat" magazine. It usually is the domain of pop and TV, as such as New Kids on the Block and Fred "Winter" Vega's "Savage." But a recent contest in the magazine offered fans the chance to meet the Marcy's.

In addition to teen adulation, the Marcy's won good reviews for their first major label album, "Mending Your Mind." The video for the single's first single, "Cotton Pickin' Time," still ranks among country music's top-requested clips more than a year after its release.

Despite good fortune, good looks and labels, the three brothers from Oroville, Calif., have yet to break into the top rank of country stars. But the brothers, who will visit Cactus Pete's Gala Show on Dec. 26, believe the big break may come soon.

In a recent interview, Kendal Marcy, the trio's youngest at 22, spoke with enthusiasm about the Marcy Bros. decision to move from Warner Bros., which released its first album, "Mending Your Mind," in 1985. Both Warner Bros. and Atlantic are now being absorbed by one of a small line-up of an exclusive type thing. Obviously we feel very fortunate to be involved in that initial push," Marcy said.

Warner Bros. has many of country's biggest names on its roster. Hank Williams Jr., Highway 101, Nashville, Travis and Dwight Yoakam, among others. "There's only so many hours in the day," Marcy said. "And the more artists there are on the roster, the harder it is to spend the individual time, especially breaking the artists into the market. We're looking for a relatively new label to Nashville, the cover of "Tiger Beat," Marcy said, and the best-known artist in its line-up is 1960s rocker Billy Joe Royal, who is now turning up for a concert at the Cactus Pete's Resort

They've only six or seven people on the roster, whereas Warner Bros. has 42," Marcy said. "You can just see that the ability to market an act is much simpler because you don't have so many."

The Marcy Bros. also feel fortunate that they have captured the vital agent market," Marcy said. He and brother Kevin, 28, and Kris, 21, draw fans from 8 to 80, but acknowledged the brothers' particular appeal among teen-age girls.

"I don't know how to react to that," he said. "It was really funny. I mean, I've got my country and we're the best of the best," Marcy said. "We kind of look at it and go, 'that's

Noted children's books author in town today

By Julie Fanzelow Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than 2,000 children's picture books are published each year, but only one wins the Caldecott Medal.

Uri Shulevitz, a past medalist, will be in town today to lead story-telling sessions and sign autographs at Jud's Bookstore, 120 Main Ave. N.

Shulevitz is traveling around the country promoting his new book, "Toddlercreek Post Office," which he wrote and illustrated. Jud Baxter, owner of the downtown bookstore, says his trip marks the first time a Caldecott medalist has visited Twin Falls.

Two story sessions are set at Jud's, one at 10 a.m. and another at 1 p.m. Things get started at 11 a.m. with a telephone interview that will be broadcast on the radio. The public is welcome. An autograph session will start at 4 p.m.

Shulevitz, 55, won the Caldecott Medal (given each year to the illustrator of the best Strange and Exciting Adventures of Jeremiah Hush." In addition, he has illustrated two children's books by Jean Redlyn Singer. In a telephone interview this week from his home in New York City's Greenwich Village, Shulevitz said, "Toddlercreek Post Office" was based on his own experiences living summers in a tiny town in upstate American picture book (for children) New York, a town much like that depicted in the book. "The first time I went to this post office, I had to step over a huge dog as I went through the entrance," Shulevitz recalled.

Like many small-town post-offices, Toddlercreek's is a place where few packages are mailed, but many friendships are made and many tales are told until one day when the several of which "post" inspector arrives and announces the "end" of the town.

Shulevitz said the book represents a variety of "things" the kind of America with "soul" and "The story has a sad quality, but Shulevitz defends it. "I had certain wishes. It would be a happy story, but as it happens sometimes from the material itself guides you what to do where it wants to go," he said. "This is the way it turned out."

Shulevitz said he does not usually read his stories to children before he submits them to publishers. He said he does not believe in market research approach to books, and beyond that, he said he thinks it is unnecessary. "I have a certain sense," he added, "I'm still in touch with the child within me."

Shulevitz looks forward to sharing his stories with a real, live audience of kids. "If I must read, I would love to read 'Toddlercreek Post Office' to see what their reaction would be," he said.

Shulevitz was born in Warsaw, Poland, in 1935, began drawing at age 3, and never stopped. World War II forced his family from its home when Shulevitz was 4, and the family spent the next eight years wandering before eventually settling in Paris in 1947.

He later moved to Israel with his parents, then arrived in New York City at the age of 24. In addition to writing and illustrating children's books, he teaches other people to do so in a two-week workshop he conducts each year at Harvard College in Orono, N.Y., and has written a book on the subject.

For celebrities there's no such thing as being too bad

By Lena Blisberg Orange County Register

When Sean Penn was good, he was very good — just punching out photographs. But when Roseanne Barr was bad, she was horrid, i.e., mauling the national anthem at a ballgame in front of 27,000 shocked witnesses.

They are the "bad boys/bad girls" of the entertainment world. Penn, Barr, Rob Lowe, Madonna, Lincee Campbell, Lenny Wahlberg, Mickey Rourke, Sam Kinison, Robin Givens and on and on.

Bad boys/bad girls are celebrities whose real or alleged "bad" sexual and other exploits are splashed all over the tabloids, broadsheets and television screens. They are being better known for their infamous reputations than for anything they've done as actors, comedians or two that Penn has been in since "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," but it's much easier to recall he was Mr. Madonna for a few short years, during which time he beat up more than one paparazzi. "The Donald" was just an ordinary millionaire until his "friendship" with Maria Magdalene set off a reporter feeding frenzy. Wrecked, he became a star.

Federal official approves Indian bingo on reservations in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — The Department of the Interior's top lawyer says as far as the federal agency is concerned, Indian bingo is legal in Idaho.

Interior Solicitor Thomas L. Sansonetti informed state legal officials that a review of the issue has produced the same result as the first time around, although on different grounds.

Some of Idaho's five Indian tribes have launched on-reservation bingo games, contending they are authorized under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act. State officials, headed by Attorney General Jim Jones and Gov. Cecil Andrus, contend the games are not legal, because of the state constitutional prohibition on gambling.

In April, the Portland regional solicitor for Interior concluded that since Idaho amended its Constitution to authorize the state lottery, Idaho Indian tribes can "engage in, or license and regulate" bingo games.

Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan met with Andrus and other officials in May, and Andrus requested a review on the issue.

"Based on our latest review, we have concluded that Idaho tribes can lawfully engage in bingo games pursuant to the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act," said a letter from Sansonetti to Clive Strong, chief of the Natural Resources Division of the attorney general's office.

"What it says is that Indian bingo is legal," Strong said.

A spokesman for Gov. Cecil Andrus said Wednesday the governor was aware of the opinion, and disappointed with it.

"You could say that at the very least, he was disappointed in the decision," said Press Secretary Marc Johnson. "(Manual) Lujan personally spoke to him (the governor) about it on a couple of different occasions. Certainly he left the impression that the opinion would not come down as it did," he said.

"The governor thought it was a clearcut case and he was led to believe that Interior would think the same way," Johnson said.

He said it would be up to the attorney general to decide whether to pursue legal action over the issue.

"The basic question, Sansonetti said, is whether Idaho, as a matter of public policy, "permits" bingo for any purpose. He noted that state laws now allow a state-run lottery.

"There also are numerous games of bingo played regularly across the state, although the legal validity of those games is disputed," he said.

"The state attorney general's office maintains that the so-called 'donation' bingo, where the participant is requested but not required to pay as a prerequisite to participation, is legal but strict 'pay for play' bingo games are illegal," he said.

authorizing bingo games.

"The state attorney general's office maintains that these games are illegal. However, there is no evidence that the state has taken any enforcement action against any bingo game operated in violation of state law," Sansonetti said.

Idaho's new gambling statute allows "charitable games of chance" by qualified charitable organizations. The federal officials said under the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, that also authorizes Indians to operate bingo games.

The federal official said his research found no distinction between "donation" and "pay for play" bingo games.

Suspect spits on attorney during trial

SPOKANE (AP) — A man convicted of one Spokane murder and on trial in another was ordered removed from court after he spat on his court-appointed defense attorney.

Later, when defendant Damon Chapple was given a choice between behaving in court or watching the proceedings on a television monitor in an adjoining room, he cursed at Spokane County Superior Court Judge Kathleen O'Connor.

Chapple was herded from the courtroom by six deputies.

"Every day you come to get me (in jail) there's got to be blood," he said while leaving the courtroom.

The outburst occurred Wednesday, the third day of jury selection in Chapple's first-degree murder trial.

He is charged in the death of 57-year-old Isabel Jones, who was sexually assaulted and beaten to death in August 1988 at an apartment complex she managed on Spokane's South Hill.

During jury selection Wednesday,

Chapple said he wanted to fire his attorney, Richard Kayne, for inadequately representing him and other reasons.

Then, Chapple suddenly spat on Kayne and threw a cup of drinking water on the attorney before the judge intervened and ordered the defendant removed.

After a noon recess, O'Connor said the trial would continue despite the outburst.

California adopts tests for pollution

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California smog squads will begin random roadside testing next spring of diesel smoke from heavy trucks and buses, under a program adopted Thursday by the state Air Resources Board.

The program, approved 7-1, will apply to all such vehicles in the state regardless of where they are registered.

It asks "truck and bus operators to do more than what owners of gasoline-powered cars have done since 1984 through the Smog Check program," said the board's executive officer, Jim Boyd.

The program requires the testing and repairing, if necessary, of gasoline-powered passenger cars every two years. The state already has two programs to control diesel emissions.

Officials declare victory in Medfly war

EL MONTE, Calif. (AP) — Agriculture officials Thursday declared victory over the Mediterranean fruit fly, the crop-destroying insect that has taken California 15 months and $52 million to eradicate.

"We're here to celebrate that we have eradicated the Medfly in California. Unless there is another introduction, it will remain eradicated," said Jack Parnell, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Parnell joined state agriculture chief Henry Voss at a news conference in pronouncing victory and lifting of a quarantine.

Traps will continue to be placed throughout the area to detect any new arrivals.

The arrival of illegal fruit and vegetables, usually carried in travelers' luggage, virtually ensures future infestations, one official said in an interview last weekend.

"There is some perverse streak in human nature. They seem to believe it's fun to outsmart authorities and bring in just one mango, or just one pineapple from Hawaii," said Gera Curry, spokeswoman for the state Department of Food and Agriculture. "All it takes is one person."

Quarantines were imposed on movement of fruit from infested areas. The big worry was that the flies could spread to agricultural areas and wreck California's $18 billion-a-year farm industry.

Warner Bros. has many of country's biggest names on its roster: Hank Williams Jr., Highway 101, Randy Travis and Dwight Yoakam, among others. "There's only so many hours in the day," Marcy said. "And the more artists there are on the roster, the tougher it is to spend the individual time, especially breaking the artists."

Atlantic, on the other hand, is a relatively new label to Nashville, he said, and the best-known artist in its line-up is 1960s rocker Billy Joe Royal, who is now revving up for a comeback in the country arena.

"They've only six or seven people actively on the roster, whereas Warner has 22," Marcy said. "You can just see that the ability to market an act is much simpler because you don't have so many."

"They intend to keep it a small label, more of an exclusive-type thing. Obviously we feel very fortunate to be involved in that initial push," Marcy said.

The Marcy Bros. also feel fortunate that they have captured the vital teen market. Marcy said he and brothers Travis and Dwight Yoakam, among others, "from 8 to 80," but acknowledged the brothers' particular appeal among teen-age girls.

"I didn't know how to react to that at first. It was really funny, I mean, here we are country and we're the cover of Tiger Beat," Marcy said. "We kind of look at it and go 'that's

Noted children's books author in town today

By Julie Fanelow
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than 2,000 children's picture books are published each year, but only one wins the Caldecott Medal.

Uri Shulevitz, a past medalist, will be in town today to lead story-telling sessions and sign autographs at Judi's Bookstore, 120 Main Ave. N.

Shulevitz is traveling around the country promoting his new book, "Toddlecreek Post Office," which he wrote and illustrated. Judi Baxter, owner of the downtown bookstore, says his trip marks the first time a Caldecott medalist has visited Twin Falls.

Two story sessions are set at Judi's, one at 10 a.m. and another at 1 p.m. Third-graders from Twin Falls and Kimberly plan to attend, but the public is welcome. An auto-graph session will start at 4 p.m.

Shulevitz, 55, won the Caldecott Medal (given each year to the illustrator of the best American picture book for children) in 1969 for "The Fool of the World and the Flying Ship," a Russian tale retold by Arthur Ransome.

Shulevitz

His other books, several of which have also won awards, include "Rain Rain Rainsure" and "The Strange and Exciting Adventures of Jeremiah Bush." In addition, he has illustrated two children's stories by Isaac Bashevis Singer.

In a telephone interview this week from his home in New York City's Greenwich Village, Shulevitz said, "Toddlecreek Post Office" was based on his own experiences living summers in a tiny town in upstate

New York. I have much like that depicted in the book. The first time I went to this post office, I had to step over a huge dog as I went through the entrance." Shulevitz recalled.

Like many small-town post offices, Toddlecreek's is a place where few packages are mailed, but many friendships are made and many tales traded, until one day when the postal inspector arrives and announces the post office will be closed due to lack of business.

Shulevitz said the book represents a vanishing America, "the kind of America with a soul that means so much to me." The story has a sad quality, but Shulevitz defends it. "I had certain wishes it would be a happy story but, as it happens sometimes, the material itself guides you what to do and where it wants to go," he said. "This is the way it wanted to be."

Shulevitz said he does not usually read his stories to children before he submits them to publishers. He said he does not believe in a market-research approach to books, and beyond that, he said he thinks it is unnecessary. "I have a certain sense," he added, "I'm still in touch with the child within me."

Shulevitz was born in Warsaw, Poland, in 1935, began drawing at age 3 and never stopped. World War II forced his family from its home when Shulevitz was 4, and the family spent the next eight years wandering before eventually settling in Paris in 1947.

He later moved to Israel with his parents, then arrived in New York City at the age of 24. In addition to writing and illustrating children's books, he teaches other people to do so in a two-week workshop he conducts each year at Hartwick College in Oneonta, N.Y., and has written a book on the subject.

For celebrities there's no such thing as being too bad

By Laura Bleiberg
Orange County Register

When Sean Penn was good, he was very, very good — just punching out photographs. But when Roseanne Barr was bad, she was horrid, i.e., murdering the national anthem at a ballgame in front of 27,000 shocked witnesses.

They are the "bad boys/bad girls" of the entertainment world: Penn, Barr, Rob Lowe, Madonna, Luther Campbell, Donnie Webber, Mickey Rourke, Sam Kinison, Robin Givens and on and on.

Bad boys/bad girls are celebrities whose real or alleged drug, sexual and other exploits are splashed all over the tabloids, broadsheets and television screens. They end up being better known for their infamous reputations than for anything they've done as actors/singers/comedians.

Oh, you might be able to name a movie or two that Penn has been in since "Times at Ridgeman" High, but it's much easier to recall he was Madonna's first short years, during which time he beat up more than one paparazzi. "The Donald" was just an ordinary millionaire until his "friendship" with Maria Maples set off a reporter feeding frenzy: Wreck a car, become a star?

On the surface, it seems to work that way. The Diceman has rocketed Andrew

D. Clay above his fellow rude-and-crude comedians into celestial stardom, while Innocent Andrew keeps insisting, he's not at all like that bad guy.

There is such a thing as being too bad. But don't think that means the public has grown tired of these real-life soap operas.

For some in Hollywood, even a possible murder rap isn't bad enough to cool the hot attraction for a bad man.

"You know women who see me on TV at the courthouse taking pictures, during the Christian Brando murder trial, come up to me at nightclubs and say, 'Can you give me Christian's phone number?' Yeah babe, sure," said Phil Ramey; one of Los Angeles' most infamous celebrity paparazzi.

During the heyday of the studio system, publicists manufactured private lives for the stars, with studio chiefs going so far as arranging marriages for their stable of actors and actresses. The system has changed since then: Ramey and others agreed that most publicists today try to protect their clients' private lives, but added they do call the tabloids to let them know their clients can be seen at Spago/The Ivy/72 Market Street.

"I think if the publicist is not finding ways to get their clients' names in the papers or on the radio, then he or she is not

Scouts will hit the streets soon to collect food for the hungry

TWIN FALLS - A total of 3,000 local scouts will join the fight against hunger by collecting food to help feed the hungry in the Magic Valley area.

The Scouting for Food National Good Turn kicks off Saturday when Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers go door-to-door to distribute bags for the collection of non-perishable food, which is then donated to food banks for local distribution.

Nov. 17, scouts will return to pick up filled collection bags, which they are asking residents to place outside their doors by 9 a.m. Those who do not receive collection bags but would like to contribute may call 733-2067.

The types of food most needed are nutritional non-perishable food items such as baby formula, peanut butter, complete packaged meals and canned goods including vegetables, fruits and chunky soups.

Food will be taken to local collection sites, where it will be sorted and donated, sorted and distributed to food banks serving the Magic Valley area.

Local agencies cooperating with the scouts include the South Central Community Action Agency, Salvation Army, Buhl Ministerial Association, East End Providers, Burley Christmas Council and Gooding Ministerial Association.

Last year, Snake River Council scouts collected over 25,000 cans of food for nearly 4,000 families in the Magic Valley area.

Bad

getting into trouble a lot, nowadays with the whole anti-drug thing, it really hurts their image," Brown said.

And as far as most publicists are concerned, seeing their clients' dirty laundry paraded across newspapers and television screens coast to coast is more like a bad dream, Brown said.

"We're trying to protect their performance. But he doubted that a "bad" behavior - like getting into a fight while the camera whirrs - is planned.

The danger is that the stars do too much and people turn "off" from them," Calder said. "The major stars don't have to resort to this kind of behavior, although even if you go back to the old days, Betty Davis is very proud of how she would disrupt sets and demand things."

Celebrity journalists and publicists said most of the bad boys/bad girls simply have the misfortune of getting caught in the act. Charles Fleming, West Coast correspondent for Variety, said he, too, doubts that rude behavior is orchestrated.

"She (the publicist) had him do only one very brief interview with Bryan Gumbel on the 'Today' show about the production of 'Bad Influence.' She had him say in a couple of places he had made a mistake in a controlled atmosphere, the scandal died down," Grant said, adding that months after the "Today" appearance, Lowe did so many interviews, the public became bored with the whole affair.

"I think that the two of them together have really rehabilitated his image," Grant said. "I think it depends on what level of career you're on. When you need to re-invent a career, like with Margaux Hemingway, then you have the requisite Playboy pictorials."

"But he, too, agreed there is a limit to what the public will tolerate."

"You can't go too downscale or you'll be stuck there forever," he said, citing Jessica Hahn as an example.

"There's another thing that's clearly at work," Fleming said. "What's not uncommon is a very wide and self-destructive bent in Hollywood, all the way from Marlon Brando and Elizabeth Taylor - who were the best-looking people of their generation and who became self-hating - right up to the present."

Linda Brown, a publicist with PRK whose client list includes Bob and Bart Simpson, agreed that a notorious reputation can bring a star more publicity than a public relations firm could ever afford to buy. But she believes that as America's mores become increasingly conservative, most of that behavior has become unacceptable.

'Either she's really clever and did this to stand out from the crowd or she really is sort of nutsy. Clearly, she does not know how to conduct herself in public.'

—James Grant, movie magazine editor

But the woman who has been uncensored the Queen of Downscale is Roseanne Barr.

"Either she's really clever and did this to stand out from the crowd or she really is sort of nutsy," said Enquirer editor Calder. "Clearly, she does not know how to conduct herself in public." Grant said.

Fleming agreed, and then waxed philosophical.

"I think we almost start waiting for chinks in the armor to appear, and inevitably we're not finding them. It's almost like she didn't realize how far she could push before she offended people, and with the National Anthem, she offended people."

Fleming added that, ultimately, Sam Kinison, rock star Axel Rose who was recently arrested after allegedly hitting his neighbor over the head with a wine bottle, and Andrew Dice Clay, said he didn't enjoy about their notorious reputations.

Richfield's Behr, Hagerman's Callow among Magic Valley writers honored

TWIN FALLS - Several members of the Twin Falls Chapter of the Idaho Writers League were honored in the league's 1990 statewide contest.

"We had very good participation from the Twin Falls chapter," said Alice Behr of Richfield, chapter president for 1989-1990.

"Eighty people from the chapter won a total of 24 prizes. The Idaho Writers League has about 180 members statewide.

In the assigned title contest, the following people placed: Behr took second place in the article category, third place in essays and third honorable mention in richfield, first Sandra Calkins of Serious, first honorably mention in light verse, second honorable mention in serious verse, third honorable mentions in article and juvenile fiction.

Also in assigned title, M.J. Freeman of Hagerman, first honorable mention in essay and Betty Conover of Buhl, second place in serious verse.

Religious, secular groups battle film industry's NC-17 rating

By Judy Howard
Dallas Morning News

To a number of religious and secular groups across the country, Hollywood's cinematic glitter has acquired a peep-show taint.

Already discredited by an industry that they say peddles films laden with sexually oriented themes and sadistic violence, these groups now are angry about the movie industry's new adult rating category, NC-17.

The rating restricts children under 17 from viewing movies with adult themes, and replaces the infamous "X" category.

The category also provides a wider creative berth for serious film makers hemmed in between the R and X ratings.

The religious and secular groups aren't buying it. The new designation, they argue, will enable movies featuring pornography and excessive violence to be advertised more extensively and shown in the multiscreen theaters that many families prize.

"Hollywood will now be able to pump celluloid sewage into the country's neighborhood theaters at will," wrote John Evans of Richardson, Texas, editor-in-chief of "Preview Movie Morality Guide." In a letter to the pamphlet's subscribers, Evans said, "It's basically the same thing as X rating, and this now opens the door for the mainstream theaters to show what formerly were X-rated movies."

said Debbie Dena, president of the Tarrant County (Texas) Chapter of the American Family Association.

The organization said it would ask its 2,600 members to mail their complaints to Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America. It also will ask members to telephone theaters and urge them not to show NC-17 movies.

The Motion Picture Association announced the new rating Sept. 26 and clarified the R rating. Explanations will be mailed to exhibitors and film critics about what qualifies a movie for the R rating.

The National Council of Churches and the U.S. Catholic Conference

'Hollywood will now be able to pump celluloid sewage into the country's neighborhood theaters at will.'

— John Evans, editor, movie-monitor-magazine

According to industry observers, the new rating helps correct a classification system that allowed excessively violent films to carry the R rating, while erasable, got stamped with an X rating.

Moreover, "X" had become synonymous with movies of the kind advertised in the runchy, neon splendor of porn strips.

In contrast to the X rating, the MPAA has copyrighted NC-17 so that it won't become a free-for-all category. The association must view a movie before the NC-17 rating is used.

"Our belief is that the NC-17 rating is very helpful insofar as it distinguishes high-quality, sophisticated films that have adult content and adult appeal from the pornographic segment of the market," said Ted Black, King, vice president of operations of American Multi-Cinema Inc.'s Southwest division in Dallas.

"It allows those films to play without that kind of stigma," he said.

But how-16-at-least-100 representatives from religious and secular groups are expected to gather in Washington, D.C., to discuss the film industry's rating system and the new NC-17 category.

The one-day conference is being organized by the National Coalition on Television Violence, a television and film monitoring group based in Champaign, Ill., and Good News

Communications, a Christian organization based in Atlanta.

The groups will consider forming municipal or statewide film and video ratings boards. Rating boards would allow the community to use community standards to protect their children against movies that can be detrimental, physiologically, physically and spiritually, said Ted Black, chairman of Good News Communications. He is the publisher of "Movieguide," a film rating service.

Brian Sullivan, director of television research for the National Coalition on Television Violence, said the efforts of religious and secular groups are not censorship.

"We feel that this is not a First Amendment issue. We're trying to provide accurate information on these movies," he said. "We are trying to unveil the cloak of misinformation, the charade that Jack Valenti and the Motion Picture Association of America has created for 22 years."

Hopper an informant in new film

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Dennis Hopper, who rode to counterculture glory playing the coke-dealing cyclist in "Easy Rider" (1969) — which he also directed — will play a notorious federal drug informant in the HBO TV movie "Barry Seal."

To begin filming in mid-November, with Roger Young writing and directing, the film is based on the real-life story of drug informant Adler "Barry" Seal, who was machine-gunned to death in Baton Rouge, La., in 1986 by three Colombian hit men.

Calling Seal a "flamboyant character," Hopper says the role is both "a great responsibility" and "a challenge."

A pilot-turned-coke smuggler, whose undercover work led to federal charges against one of the leaders of the Medellín Cartel, Seal had declined to enter the federal witness protection program.

"He was a thrill seeker ... who, when he got caught, admitted he'd done wrong and said, 'Let me do work my way out of it,'" says Allen Epstein, who is executive producing with Jim Green.

Oldman can't lift 'Chattahoochee' off the ground

Knight-Ridder News Service

The final installment of a blockbuster trilogy and the somber tale of a Korean War veteran put this week's list of new videos:

CHATTAHOOCHEE (1990) (HBO) $89.99. 96 minutes. 2 1/2 stars.

Gary Oldman, Dennis Hopper. A war hero returns from Korea to discover that peace requires a different kind of courage.

His demons put him in a brutal mental hospital for the criminally insane, and he unites the prisoners in fighting back.

If this sounds familiar, it is. Oldman brings passion and conviction to the protagonist, but this attempt at heroism stays resolutely on the ground.

BACK TO THE FUTURE PART III (1990) (MCA/Universal) 118 minutes. 2 1/2 stars. Michael J. Fox, Christopher Lloyd, Mary McCormack. The finale of this lively trilogy takes Marty and Doc to the Old West, where Doc falls in love.

This forces the movie to view him as both a smitten romantic and a cartoon mad scientist.

At its best in juxtaposing the real West and outer space, it is entertaining—but nowhere near the original.

But then, what's?

Smith Sisters kick off concert season

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Performing a musical style they call "fusion folk," the Smith Sisters will open Magic Valley Community Concerts 1990-1991 season — possibly its most eclectic ever — on Monday.

The duo will perform at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium. No season subscriptions for the series remain, but some extra tickets may be turned in. Call 733-2791 for availability.

The Smith Sisters record for Flying Fish and have shared concert bills with Loreta Lynn, Reba McEntire, Crystal Gayle, Emmylou Harris, Bill Monroe and Doc and Merle Watson. They've also been heard on radio shows "All Things Considered" and "Mainstream Stage" and The Nashville Network's "New Country."

Natives of Falls Church, Va., Dani and Megan Smith have been performing together since 1981, taking their music as far away as the Soviet Union while remaining favorites on the strong Washington, D.C., folk scene near their hometown.

The Smiths play traditional and original songs on a wide variety of instruments — guitar, dulcimer, auto-harp, penny whistle and bodhran — but it is their vocals that have captured many critics' and fans' attention.

A writer for The City Paper in Washington, D.C., said, "When you hear them harmonizing, they sound as eclectic enough to be the house band at the Pearly Gates." Chicago magazine called the Smiths "the most exciting female duo on the scene today."

Future Magic Valley Community Concerts this season will include pianist Steve and Horowitz on Feb. 4; the Mac Framton Trio, a jazz group, on Feb. 26; and Light Blues, a British vocal ensemble, April 15.

Murtaugh girl Idaho's representative for writing letters to kids of year 2090

The Times-News

MURTAUGH — Fifth-grader Samantha Lopez hopes future young people won't have to worry about child-abuse, but if they do, she has a book they should read.

"I think kids will like this book because it tells about a real problem, a problem kids have today," Samantha wrote in a letter that will be placed in a time capsule to be buried at the Library of Congress.

Samantha, 10, wrote to future kids about the book, "Don't Hurt Laurie" by Willo Davis Roberts.

Her letter and 49 others — one from each state — will be placed in the time capsule along with student photos, profiles and letters.

Some changes on the way as Big Bird and the gang turn 22

By Jay Shabazz
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Next Monday Big Bird, Ernie, Oscar the Grouch and others will start their 22nd season wandering along that public television path that kids of all ages know as "Sesame Street."

There'll be a few changes. Two teen-agers are joining the cast. So is a Claymation creature, Cecille Ball. Oscar's mother will come to visit. Whoopi Goldberg and Robin Williams each will be in two "Sesame" shows.

Next Monday also will be a special occasion for Joan Ganz Cooney. It'll be her first season as the ex-chairman of the show's producer, Children's Television Workshop. She turned the reins over last month to David Britt, a veteran CTW executive who has been with the production company for 18 years. But she's staying with CTW, and especially with "Street," she says, because "I want to work directly on the creative side and the strategic planning side."

Sesame Street no longer concentrates on four or five educational goals, as in its early years.

Her renewed involvement with "Sesame Street" is due "in some degree" to the death last May of Muppet-master Jim Henson, who created a number of characters for the show, including Kermit. Although the series has an extensive tape library of Henson's characters, "I want to make sure that the relationship with the Muppeteers continues very strong, and that we create, maybe, new characters," she says. "I'm interested in seeing that the show stays very contemporary. It is that, having gone from four to five basic educational goals its first year to a teach-while-entertaining "curriculum" for pre-schoolers that Cooney estimates has covered 200 topics.

They include sibling rivalry, pre-science, death, adoption, and, of course, love.

Last season, the series, which is seen in 80 countries and still is aimed at children 2 to 5 years old, began segments set in a home day-care center for tykes.

"That was done and remains in the 'series' because it's something our audience can identify with," says "Street" executive-producer, Dudley Singer.

Increasing numbers of kids wind up in day-care centers or after-school programs — whether parents are whether divorced or still married, must work to make ends meet.

materials and books would be used for children's activities in Dallas day-care centers.

Also afoot for next season, but on PBS, is an as-yet-untilted literacy series to teach reading and writing skills to children 7 to 12 years old, she says.

As with the major networks, cable, independent stations and videocassette players have bitten into PBS audience, and "Sesame Street" has been among the shows affected. But not so much in the morning, Cooney says.

The real ratings drop of "Street" is due, mainly, to cable's Nickelodeon channel aimed at viewers 2 to 15, she says.

It occurs in the afternoon when older children come home from school and commandeer the TV set. At such times, she says, "the little kid that might want to watch 'Sesame Street' is overpowered by his or her older sibling."

Magic orchestra to open with Vivaldi, other pieces

The Times-News Keeser's own composition, "Prelude." Ticket prices at the door will be $4.50 for adults and $2 for students. Children over the age of 7 are welcome. Season tickets will also be on sale for $8 per adult and $3 per student. Season tickets will admit subscribers to next week's concert, the Christmas concert, Dec. 17 and the spring concert April 18. Season tickets will be on sale at the first concert or may be purchased by calling Eileen Knight at 678-8991 (days) or 678-0780 (evenings).

Keeser will present a seminar on the evening's concert at 7 the night of the performance. All interested concertgoers are invited to attend. The room number for the lecture will be available at the ticket booth Thursday.

NEW YORK — When John Updike finished "Rabbit at Rest," he took a large pile of newspapers used for research and threw them away.

Enough was enough. The author wanted to finish his book and forget about Harry "Rabbit" Angstrom. This "ordinary" man from Brewer, Pa., a speedy basketball star in high school who tags pathetically behind the 30 years.

The books were increasingly difficult to write, burdened with telling new readers about old events and providing new events for old readers. After four novels it was time to leave Rabbit behind, at last.

John Updike Feeling cleansed

"As I was writing it I was fully aware not only of trying to make some sense to readers who hadn't read the others, but of trying to round out the series," Updike, 58, explained in an interview at the Manhattan offices of Alfred A. Knopf publishers.

"There comes a time when you've used up your life, if your life is leached to run its natural course. He's reached it a little earlier than I hope to myself. He's had enough of the world."

The Rabbit books began in 1960 with "Rabbit, Run." Harry, increasingly named "Rabbit" but increasingly known as just Harry — is in his late 20s and going downhill.

He's stuck in a dead-end town, out of shape, bored with his job, bored with his marriage. While his wife is pregnant, Rabbit runs — away.

The last quarter of a basketball game used to carry him into this world," Updike writes in "Rabbit, Run," as Harry takes to the road and droves south. "You ran not on the crowd thought for the sake of the score but for yourself, in a kind of idleness."

The 1960s confuse Harry, the '70s depress him and the '80s finish him off. He returns for three more books, published 10 years apart, his marriage to Janice Springer surviving while his relationship with his son, Nelson, deteriorating.

"Rabbit Redux" (1971), the astronaut is walking on the moon and Harry is crawling on Earth. When Janice leaves for another man, Harry shakes up with his son, a teen-age runaway called Jill and a radical named Skeeter.

"My career, sociological thought about myself had been that I was fortunate to be a boy and an American."

Ads are gone, but smoking still fills television screens

By Scott Williams
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Not a Marlboro Man has galloped through the intellectual landscape since television banned cigarette commercials in 1971, but California public health researchers say there's still too much smoking on TV.

Cigarette ads are banned, but people still smoke: The grizzled old cop fires up a grizzled old stooge; the troubled teen lights a filter tip; the sneering gangster takes a puff on a coffin nail.

"Television, with its power to inform and entertain, also has a tremendous power to persuade, cajole and educate. What does it say about smoking? Glad you asked."

"We wanted to assess the prevalence of smoking on television and we wanted to look at it in a way that is smoking and the message that is being given," said Patricia Madden, co-author of the study of smoking on prime-time television.

She and Georgette L. Overby are researchers at the Prevention Research Bureau in Berkeley, Calif. Overby, a former nurse, has directed funded centers for social and biomedical research on alcohol and other abused substances.

"The foundation of their experiment is the 'cognitive social learning theory' developed by the sociologist Albert Bandura and others. It is, in essence, the kid with a Stone theory of social behavior.

"If the kid sees somebody toss a stone through a window, the kid is likely to do the same thing if the behavior is rewarded, and somewhat less likely to do it if nothing is being given." said Patricia Madden, co-author of the study of smoking on prime-time television.

smoking — the status of the characters involved in the smoking and how they reacted to it. The observers also checked for embedded anti-smoking messages.

The results were more surprising than you might expect. "The scales are still tipped toward the pro-smoking message," Madden said. The study found an average 25 minutes of smoking per hour, with anti-smoking messages in little more than three-quarters of a minute per hour. You'd have to watch two hours to see an anti-smoking message."

Madden said. "Smoking occurred in 53 percent of all programs and 41 percent of all episodes in the sample, while anti-smoking messages occurred in 39 percent of all programs and 20 percent of all episodes.

Crime shows had more smoking on them, and the smokers tended more often to be bad guys.

"We were encouraged by the fact that smoking does not tend to be glamorized any more on television," Madden said, "and we would like to see scriptwriters weave more anti-smoking messages into their plots."

When anti-smoking messages were involved, the majority of smokers and the people who reacted negatively to smoking were adult, white male, plot-related characters, the study found.

Transporting souvenir soils a dirty business

DEAR ABBY: I collect dirt. Allow me to explain. We vacation mostly in the USA, and in our travels we've stopped to admire the view and have taken home a piece of that view, such as a handful of seashells, a flower or some dirt.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Before he left, I asked him to send us a handful of soil (yes, dirt) sealed in a zip-locked bag.

We have these tiny little jelly jars that I would like to fill with samples of dirt from all over the world.

Hubby says it's against the law to bring in dirt from another country. I could understand it if it were a ton or two, but a handful?

Please let me know if it's really illegal.

— BETTY IN HESPERIA, CALIF.

DEAR BETTY: Margaret Webb, public information officer for the U.S. Department of Agriculture Animal and Plant Health Inspection Services, says: "Your husband is correct. Even a handful of dirt can contain microorganisms and/or insects very harmful to our plant and animal life.

"So systems vary around the world, and nature tries to keep a balance between plant and animal life. When dirt is transported to a new environment, it can create havoc beyond your wildest dreams."

"Bottom line: There are very strict laws regarding bringing dirt into this country without a special permit. Respect them!"

DEAR ABBY: My ladyfriend and I are supposed to be in love. We have been intimate, and have considered a life together. There is, however, one obstacle.

She currently insists upon continuing a "just friends" relationship with four or five of her ex-lovers, including an ex-husband to whom she was married 10 years ago — for only one year. (No children.)

These relationships consist of Christmas correspondence, occasional phone calls and visits that include overnight stays.

She says that in her previous special circles; this is considered normal behavior; in my circle, it is not condoned.

I am of a jealous nature, and insist that all such contacts with her ex-lovers stop as a requisite for a serious, long-term life together.

What is the "norm" for the average range of America society regarding this dilemma? And have you any advice?

— CONEUSED

DEAR CONEUSED: The norm for Americans of any age who are supposed to be "in love and considering a life together" is to forsake all others.

And if your ladyfriend insists on continuing overnight stays with past lovers, I advise you to bid her farewell — unless you are prepared to demand that she be tested for AIDS (and other sexually-transmitted diseases) before each of your own romantic encounters.

DEAR ABBY: I have long been a student of the Bible, but I cannot find a list of the seven deadly sins anywhere, and I am too embarrassed to ask my pastor. Please tell me where I can find them.

— MIDWEST CHRISTIAN

DEAR CHRISTIAN: The seven deadly sins are not listed as such in any Bible. They can be found in the writing of St. Thomas Aquinas. They are: envy, lust, greed, gluttony, sloth, pride and anger.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know."

To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Popularity of 'Ghost' a surprise

New York Daily News

It was supposed to be the summer of movie men and their fast, dangerous and high-tech machines. Instead, when "Ghost" surpassed "Pretty Woman" last weekend as the highest-grossing film of the season, it became clear this was the summer of lovers and their deus ex machina.

Released by Paramount Pictures on July 13, the Patrick Swayze-Moore Whoopi Goldberg co-starrer has taken in, as of Sunday, $180,635,227 after 115 days in the U.S. and Canadian marketplaces. It reached the No. 1 spot last Friday with a gross of $12,335,459.

"It's a fun summer," understates "Ghost" director, Jerry Zucker.

And, obviously, a profitable one.

"Ghost" is currently the 12th highest-grossing film of all time in North America. It has been in release for just under 1 month in 17 foreign countries and has already earned $57,489,260. In addition, while there are still no concrete plans for a video release, Paramount executives are confident that "Ghost" will reinforce quite nicely on video.

The film, shot on a rather modest budget and best described as a cute comic-romantic-thriller, deals with a murdered investment banker (Swayze), his grieving lover (Moore) and the charlatan medium who speaks through as a ghost (Goldberg). In short, it did not have HIT written all over it.

"I was just looking for a good movie and an executive at Paramount gave me a copy of this script and I loved it," says Zucker, who helped write, direct and/or produce the likes of "Airplane," "Top Secret," "Ruthless People" and "Naked Gun."

"I loved the themes in this movie," he continues. "I didn't think about it as something different from what I'd done before. I just thought it was a nice movie — but I never imagined this."

Prince Charles, John Cleese in video touting business environmentalism

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles plays an environmentally friendly heir to the British throne in his comic video debut with John Cleese.

The royal thespian has a sit-down role in "Grime Goes Green: Your Business and the Environment."

The 30-minute video premiered Thursday at a meeting sponsored by Business in the Environment, which has just published an environmental guidebook for industry.

Cleese plays James Grim, a decidedly un-green industrialist who says: "Of course I've heard of the greenhouse effect, but you are not telling me that every time I spray my car paint, a tomato ripens in Minnesota."

The video shows him frankly cleaning his plant ahead of a royal visit. He mistakes two environmental inspectors as Buckingham Palace advance men and when he realizes his error he ejects them in a Basil Fawlty-like rage.

Grim, blinded by fury, fails to recognize the prince, who is hidden behind a newspaper he is reading in the plant's lobby.

The industrialist launches into the 41-year-old son of Queen Elizabeth

II saying: "So, from the palace, are you? Only I expect you'll be wanting to inspect the drains as well, won't you..."

When Grim sees Charles he stops in mid-sentence, his face contorted in horror and embarrassment. But the prince calmly explains that "if everybody's going to wait for a royal visit before they clean up their act, we'll never get anywhere..."

"Having a thought and a care for the environment must become an integrated part of good business practice," said Charles, who came up with the idea for the video.

It sells for $675.

'Marked for Death' too predictable

By Lou Cedrone
The Baltimore Evening Sun

One of the best things about Steven Seagal's movies is that you know the bad guys are not going to get the best of the leading man. They may subdue him for a moment or two, but he doesn't subdue long. Captivity is not something that Seagal's characters take to.

Seagal's newest movie is "Marked for Death," and once more, the star is fast and lethal. When he isn't working with a high-powered rifle, he is breaking bones and chopping off heads.

Actually, he crushes more bones than he breaks.

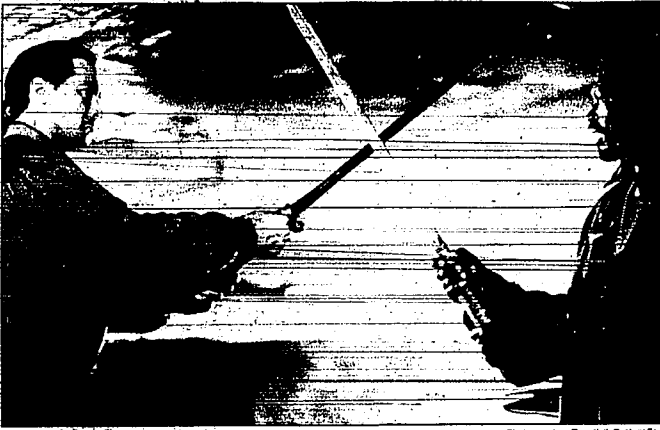

Crushing makes more noise, and noise is one of the things a Seagal film offers.

The star's newest movie is like his others. It has a noisy, sexy, glib quality. It is full of knife fighting and car chases.

It also dulls in spots and is predictable in that we know the hero's relatives (his sister and her daughter in this case) are going to be put in danger.

They die, in fact, brutalized, but then everyone is brutalized in this movie, one that takes place in Chicago and Jamaica but was filmed mostly in Los Angeles.

The bad guys are espousing dreadlocks when they aren't falling drugs, are practicing voodoo,

The leader is kind of a screwface which accounts somewhat for its R rating. He has blue eyes and speaks with a Jamaican accent, which may sound nice in television commercials but is almost totally incomprehensible here.

There is no getting around it, but Seagal fans don't really want to. They know what they are buying here, and whether the hero crashes a bone or breaks a back (by breaking the body over his knee), the Seagal fans howl with delight.

Seagal seems to be loosening a bit. His DEA agent shows affection by slapping and jabbing, and there are times when the star seems almost animated.

As an actor, he has a way to go. At present, he makes Clint Eastwood look like Spencer Tracy, but he is improving, moving along.

Chucky's 2nd movie morbid, uncomfortable

The following are capsule reviews of movies now showing in the Magic Village. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and the Los Angeles Times. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

CHILD'S PLAY 2 (R): Although handsomely produced, this implacably evil killer doll, With Jonny Agutter, Gerrit Graham, Catherine Elise, Grace Zabriskie.

FANTASIA (G): Fifty years after its premiere, Disney's boldest, most experimental film remains one of the masterpieces of the animator's art.

The newly cleaned and restored prints bring out details that had faded into invisibility over the decades, and the original Stokowski sound track is back in its rightful place.

The sequences set to "The Nutcracker Suite," "The Dance of the Hours," and "Night on Bald Mountain" offer some of the most perfect animation ever done.

GHOST (PG-13): The movie's slogan is "Believe," not an unreasonable request.

But even those who'd be happy to comply must get past a certain woolly-mindedness to its script and a production prettified to the point of sickness.

With some of its actors — Demi Moore as the cracked-voice, desolate lover; Whoopi Goldberg as an extremely reluctant spirit go-between; and Vincent Scott as an insouciant, nutway-dwelling ghost — things are in the best hands possible. But Patrick Swayze as a corporate New York banker?

Never in 7 million corporate years.

MEMPHIS BELLE (PG-13): The opening is pure old-fashioned movie stuff.

But once this saga of one of the gallant B-17s who flew daylight missions over Nazi-occupied Germany gets into the air, it's unstoppable, a low-key portrait of true American grit under almost unbelievable conditions.

Even when a few of its special effects are not great, the film's overwhelming feeling of reality holds one, while Matthew Modine, Sean Astin, Eric Stoltz and Gary Conick Jr. stand out among this 10-man crew.

QUICKLY DOWN UNDER (PG-13): Tom Selleck and Laura San Giacomo are likably unassuming in this revisionist Western set in 1860s Australia.

There are some powerful, crap-tive themes concerning the genocidal destruction of the aborigines, but most of the film plays like a panoramic episode from "Gunsmoke" or "Bonanza."

As a villainous out-leboran, Alan Rickman steals the show, (as usual).

SIBLING RIVALRY (PG-13): Can love kill? Carl Reiner's new comedy with Kirstie Alley as a wife — whose impromptu infidelity goes highway when her partner decides to mix macabre graveyard farce with sentimental family comedy — but the lines aren't there, the stylization is slack.

It doesn't work, though Bill Pullman catches the right manic, goof-ball tone as a window-blind salesman drawn into the fray.

STEPHEN KING'S GRAVEYARD SHIFT (R): All that misshy piece of horror shock has going for it is a great set, a derelict, ominous textile mill overrun by rats.

What happens there is predictably grisly but defies credibility at every turn.

With David Andrews, Kelly Wolf, Stephen Macht, Brad Doury.

WELCOME HOME ROXY CARMICHAEL (PG-13): Winona Ryder, playing yet another black-garbed, misfit teenager, is the only reason to see this odd part-satire, part-drama about the return of a mid-Western town's prodigal daughter, who's now famous.

Famous for what we are not destined to know — or eventually care.

Darryl Strawberry said the New York Mets left him no choice but to leave them for the Dodgers.

Dodgers hand Strawberry a mint Ex-Mets star signs $20.25 million, 5-year baseball contract

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry signed a five-year, $20.25 million contract with the Los Angeles Dodgers on Thursday, saying the New York Mets "just let me walk away." The Mets say they will be better without him.

At 28, the seven-time All-Star joins the Dodgers at the prime of his career, following a season in which he hit 37 homers and 108 RBIs, a Mets record. But that and his popularity with New York fans weren't enough to keep him here.

"They never made any offer like they were interested in me. It was a choice the Mets had to make and it shows me it wasn't in their interest. I can't understand it. They just let me walk away," Strawberry told WFAN radio in New York.

"It's tough to make a change, but they left me no choice but to make the change," Mets general manager Frank Cashen dismissed Strawberry's loss, vowing the team would rebuild their outfield and be even stronger in a few years.

"I don't say that you can't replace that kind of talent overnight, but I think that we have enough resources to win without Darryl," he said. "I think we have a chance to even be a better team and organization within a couple of years than if we were without him."

Strawberry, born and raised in Los Angeles, said he was glad to be going home. "Eric Davis, who had to be someplace where I was going to be happy," Strawberry had few kind words for the same agent, Eric Goldschmidt. Davis, who is feuding with Mets management, has two years left on his contract.

Strawberry, who hit 264 in eight seasons with the Mets and was the top pick overall in the 1980 draft, said he remains baffled by the actions of Mets management but will miss his New York teammates.

"I can't understand it," Strawberry said. "They just let me walk away."

And the Dodgers were there waiting.

"Darryl is one of the premier players in baseball and we welcome him to our organization," said vice president Fred Claire, whose team finished five games behind the eventual World Series champion Cincinnati Reds in the NL West.

"We know he will make many contributions to the Dodgers in years to come," Strawberry, who filed for free agency Oct. 22, made no secret about his desire to return to his hometown, where he attended Crenshaw High School and hit .400 as a senior. He lives in Encino, a wealthy suburb in the San Fernando Valley, and regularly attends Los Angeles Lakers games.

"It's been his lifelong dream to be a Los Angeles Dodger and to play in front of his hometown, friends and family," Goldschmidt said.

Strawberry will receive a $1.5 million signing bonus and be paid $3.5 million in 1991, $3.75 million in 1992, $3.5 million in 1993, $3 million in 1994 and $5 million in 1995. With Strawberry, the Mets won two NL East titles, including in 1996 when they went to beat the Boston Red Sox and win the World Series.

Strawberry hit two home runs in the playoffs to help Houston and homered to clinch Game 7 of the World Series.

Before the 1988 playoffs between the Mets and Dodgers, Strawberry said that he and his best friend, Cincinnati outfielder Schmidt, said.

CSI unveils basketball team against Lewis-Clark

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho takes the wraps off its 24th edition of the Golden Eagles Saturday night in hosting the Lewis-Clark State junior-varsity at 8 p.m.

The Eagles, a surprise second-place finisher in last year's national tournament, bring back four of those players and augment them with a solid-looking crew of freshmen.

While the Lewis-Clark team is called jayvees, it will lack only the three seniors on the squad and include a pair of 7-footers.

The Eagles remain at home Monday night to entertain Haugen of Germany, a professional team made up largely of Germans but including two former Oklahoma State star Sylvester Kincheon. Also on the roster is Rimas Kurtinaitis, a Russian who was flown into this country to compete in the NBA three-point shooting contest two years ago.

Which is no more than fair because two of the taller players LCSJ is bringing in Saturday night are European. They are 7-footor, Zimbir Fretk Beji of the Netherlands and 7-0 Rolf Rose. Both are in the 225-pound range.

The top scoring threat apparently is 6-7 junior Wade Venters, a Richland, Wash., product.

"In both games we're going to be facing more maturity than we're used to seeing, of course, more so Monday than Saturday," says Coach Fred Trenkle. "Make no mistake, we'll be facing men Monday because these are professional players."

I won't be CSI's first taste of playing a team last year the Eagles knocked off the Australian professional champions by 21 points.

However, the Lewis-Clark team will be taller.

The German team will have Kincheon at 6-10 along with Dieter Klein at the same height.

College teams still uncertain who's No. 1

By Ed Schaylor Jr.
AP Sports Writer

The No. 1 ranking this year isn't exactly a four-leaf clover. In fact, it's been a boulder, which has fallen on the feet of its holder four times this season.

One of the four teams knocked from the top rung was Notre Dame, and the Fighting Irish could become No. 5 on Saturday when they play ninth-ranked Tennessee.

Elsewhere, at 2 1/2- and 3 1/2-hour second time, Washington is poised to play Atlas with the heaviest No. 1 ranking in years.

Washington, already in the Rose Bowl as Pac-10 champions, is home against UCLA.

"I don't know who is No. 1, but it seems like Notre Dame has as much right to claim it as anyone," Yale coach Johnny Meyer, whose team plays its first No. 1 team since a 38-20 upset over Auburn in 1985, said.

Tennessee (51-2) is favored in Saturday's game, and Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz isn't surprised. He's still reeling in the wake of Notre Dame's porous defense in a 52-23 victory over Navy last Saturday, which enabled the Irish to rise to the top again when Virginia lost 41-38 to Georgia Tech.

The Cavaliers (7-1) take a No. 11 ranking into a home game Saturday against North Carolina. Also, No. 7 Georgia Tech (7-0-1) meets Virginia Tech.

In other games involving the Top Ten, No. 3 Houston is at No. 14 Texas, Oklahoma State is at No. 4 Colorado, Ohio State is at No. 6 Iowa, No. 8 Brigham Young is at No. 25 Wyoming and No. 10 Florida plays Georgia at Jacksonville, Fla.

Houston (20-3) on probation and "can't" use its own Texas Tech (6-1) can. This game will be a big step toward that goal for the Longhorns, who are 4-0 in conference play.

MSU officials will rehire football coach despite losses

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Montana State University officials ended speculation Thursday about head football coach Eric Solomonson's future, saying he will be rehired for the 1991 season.

"I want to reaffirm my personal commitment to coach Solomonson and to convey MSU's commitment to him as well," MSU Athletic Director Doug Fullerton said at a morning news conference.

Thursday's announcement ended talk that Solomonson's job was in jeopardy because of the Bobcats' disappointing 1990 season. After a 2-1 start that included an upset over defending Big Sky Conference champion Idaho, MSU has dropped five of six games, including its fifth straight loss to intrastate rival Montana. Solomonson, in his fourth year as MSU coach, has posted seasons of 1-10, 4-7 and 4-7. The Bobcats, with two games remaining in 1990, can finish no better than 5-6 this year.

Burley-Moscow A-1 playoff game expected to feature aerial show

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

MOSCOW — If fans are a little late showing up for the Burley-Moscow Class A-1, division II, playoff game Saturday, they shouldn't worry. The one certainty about this game is it is going to take a while.

That's because both teams are expected to come out throwing at the University of Idaho Kibbe Dome at noon (PST) Saturday.

The winner will move on to play in the state finals next week.

"From everything we've been able to find out, Moscow is very similar to us," says Coach Bill Hicks, winding up his first season at the Bobcat helm.

"They throw it as well or perhaps better than we do. Defensively they look like we do. So we expect the team that comes out ready to play and makes the fewest mistakes will win."

Burley has lost only to division I playoff twin Twin Falls, that by giving up two late touchdowns and then being denied a last-minute score after driving to a first down at the 10-yard line.

Of late, Brian Peterson has been Division I teams, nipping Lewiston 30-29 in the season finale and topping Coeur d'Alene 7-0 on the second weekend of the season.

Moscow is coached by a former Burley mentor, Eric Bjorkman, bringing about a full circle. In addition, this will be Burley's last appearance in Class A-1 competition, the Bobcats dropping to Class A-2 next fall.

"This is going to be a good game. This is going to be a long game," Hicks predicted.

They have the excellent passer (175-pound senior Shane Heick) and they have four good receivers who just don't miss the ball very often. We are impressed by what we've learned about them," Hicks said.

Three of the wideouts are veteran seniors, with the biggest being 6-3, 210-pound Bernie Zimmerman.

Seniors Matt Dacey and Matt Stinebaugh both weigh in at 155 pounds and junior Matt Shupe and Matt Warwick, both 6-foot, 180 pounds, provide depth and additional targets.

That all lines out very well with the Bobcats' physical makeup with Justin Robinson at quarterback and several good receivers.

Of late, Brian Peterson has been the Bobcats' hottest receiver but Burley appears to mix up its throwing to backs a

CSI women seeded 1st in Region 18 volleyball tourney

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho women's volleyball team today is the No. 1 seed in the northern division with, apparently, as good a shot as anyone to win the lone trip to the national tournament in Miami in two weeks.

Not even Coach Brent Stroud expected all this to be happening because in late July trouble seemed headed his way. His starting middle blocker called to say she wouldn't be back this year. A couple of recruits, as always, chose other schools and a couple that seemed headed for the Eagles decided to get out of athletics entirely.

But at that point, things started turning around when Stroud learned of the availability of a former Uruguay national team member — and although he still isn't exactly sure how it happened — Alicia Brugman signed on with CSI.

"This was nice," Stroud remembered. "Alicia brought us more technical ability and volleyball savvy than any sophomore had when she was leaving. But the nicest thing was the way our sophomores decided themselves into players."

Those three were Jackie Dunn, a 6-footer from Idaho Falls; Shannon Cate, 5-10 from Buhl; and Vikki Altred, 5-9 from Pleasant Grove, Utah.

"Last year I didn't think those three would be playing that much for this year. But they hung in and worked and worked and worked and ended up doing a nice job for us."

With a somewhat sheepish grin, Stroud, in internal pre-season coaching pessimism, said "I was hoping for a 500-season because we were going to be so young and inexperienced."

He anticipated the incoming freshmen were talented but needed time to adapt to the college game. The team sustained another setback when freshman Nicki Gina of Butte County sustained a knee injury and underwent surgery late last spring. She

Big Sky weekend slate pairs 4 conference teams in the top 20

By Quinn Kington
Associated Press Writer

It won't be hard to sort out the Division I-AA rankings of Big Sky Conference football teams after this weekend. The four Big Sky teams in the top 20 are paired in the top games.

The featured contest is at Boise, where undefeated Nevada takes its 12-game winning streak to Bronco Stadium and what could be the largest crowd to watch a Big Sky game this season. The Wolf Pack is ranked second in I-AA and host Boise State is No. 6.

The game could decide whether Nevada is No. 4 or No. 5 in the Big Sky football title with Boise State, 5-1. A Boise victory keeps alive the Broncos' chances of a co-championship, but BSU also would have to beat Idaho the next weekend.

At Mississippi, No. 17 Idaho plays Montana, No. 19, and the loser probably will have to forget about making the Division I-AA playoffs. Both teams are 6-3 going into the game.

West Virginia, No. 15, and Arizona, with both teams at 4-5 and the winner still has a chance at a winning season. Eastern Washington, 5-4 is at Montana State, 3-6, with the Bobcats battling a serious quarterback problem.

The game with the job of Coach Karl Solomonson assured through next season.

In the only nonleague game, Idaho State, 2-7, and in desperate need of a victory, hosts NAIA Mesa State. But it won't be easy, because the visitors are 6-0, ranked No. 6 in the division and last week scored 79 points against Fort Lewis.

The Nevada-Boise game matches the Big Sky's two best defensive teams, which might be a clue why they are on top of the standings in an offense-minded conference.

The Boise squad has given up 128 points in nine games to 148 for Boise State. No other Big Sky team has surrendered less than 217. The team also ranks 1-2 in total defense and passing defense.

Coach Chris Ault said Nevada is playing very well heading into the showdown. "Right now, we're playing very well in all facets of the game. The offense moves the ball and keeps the defense rested," he said.

Boise's Skip Hall could say the same thing, although BSU has been far less consistent than Nevada this season. Boise State leads the Big Sky in time-of-possession, with the Wolf Pack alone second, with the Grizzlies.

"They've got excellent athletes. There's no question about that," Hall said.

"I think the defensive lines are comparable, and the secondary is comparable. Our linebackers might be a little stronger. This is a classic matchup of two very strong defenses."

History appears to be on the side of Boise State. Nevada has been able to win in Bronco Stadium only once, in 1996. "The circumstances were very similar to this year," said Ault. "We were unbeaten going into the 10th game up there just like this season. It's a hard place to win, but we know we've done it before."

Idaho has been running up big scores in recent weeks, averaging more than 50 points in four straight victories.

But it's been against Chico State and Big Sky also-rans. The Vandal offense, which leads the Big Sky in rushing, could be in for a little tougher time against Montana.

The Grizzlies have been giving up just 87 yards per game on the ground, best in the league, and rank third in total defense.

Montana's offense, led by senior quarterback Brady Bennett, also averages 55 points and 432 yards per game.

That's where they are good," said coach John L. Smith. "The numbers say that (going against the rust) and they are. They never leave anybody uncovered and they never give up the cheap play."

But the Vandal players are confident. Guard Chris Hoff said, "It's going to be a heck of a challenge, but don't think they're going to throw anything at us that we can't handle."

And running back Devon Pearce, the Big Sky's top rusher with 1,055 yards: "We don't consider their statistics too much of a threat. They are a good team and their athletes play hard, but if we play Idaho football and execute all the right plays, I think we'll be OK."

Pearce is a fine, fine back," said Montana Coach Don Read. "Their offensive line also is outstanding, in the tradition of Idaho."

"Their defense also is playing well. They are just a good football team," said Read.

Montana State's Solomonson, 5-0, is a vote of confidence Thursday, with his contract extended through next year. MSU started 2-1, including a victory over Idaho, but has lost five of its last six to fall to 3-6. The Bobcats are 12-30 in four years under Solomonson.

Burrows, important than top security is quarterback.

Joe Vleck, injured against Montana and kept out of last week's Boise State game, may have to start since John Ternault suffered a foot injury that could sideline him the rest of the season and freshman Mark Fisher also could be out with a kidney injury.

"If Vleck can come back, that will really help, because he's a very accurate passer with experience," the coach said.

Eastern has its own problems, with quarterback Scott Stuart injured.

Arizona bowl officials think King holiday lack won't hurt

PHOENIX (AP) — Officials of Arizona's two bowl games, re-acted optimistic that voter re-jections of a Martin Luther King holiday will not hurt the Dec. 31 bowls.

The issue already has caused NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue to recommend that the 1993 Super Bowl be taken out of Phoenix.

But John Jaster, executive di-rector of the Fiesta Bowl, said he didn't expect the vote on a pro-posed state holiday in Tuesday's election would seriously affect the bowl selection process.

"It is a concern, but it has not been expressed by any team we've dealt with recently or his-torically," Jaster said.

"Our organization and our treatment of people have been good through the years."

Phoenix's Copper Bowl offi-cials said he hasn't heard any re-actions from schools with tradi-tional bowl games.

"I have no indication that it will affect us this year. I'm not sure about future years," said Mario Miller, Copper Bowl ex-ecutive director.

However, Miller had said he didn't think the impact would be noticed right away.

"Personally, I think it's unfor-tunate for the state of Arizona," he said, adding that the bowl's board members "are disappoi-nted."

Copper Bowl officials said two bowl games being consid-ered to play in the Dec. 31 game in Tucson.

Marinovich still a puzzle

LOS ANGELES — Is he really a Robo QB, programmed for success and an early departure from South-ern Cal? Or is Todd Marinovich just a kid having fun?

Maybe it's a little of both.

After all, father Marv — a South-ern Cal and NFL player himself in the '60s — pretty much pro-grammed him to be a passer from childhood with a regimen of special training and special diets.

His first game as a sophomore, a 25-of-35, 337-yard outing in a na-tionally televised 34-16 victory over Syracuse, added to his growing rep-utation.

Although he has since had another 300-yard, three-touchdown passing day, in a 37-22 win over Stanford, all his Saturdays haven't been so spectacular.

There was an 80-yard passing day, with two interceptions, in a 31-0 loss at Washington.

There was a 174-yard outing, with three interceptions, in a 35-26 defeat by Arizona.

Suspended from Southern Cal's Oct. 27 game against Arizona State for cutting classes, Marinovich was told by coach Larry Smith that he must compete weekly with senior Shane Foley for the starting job.

Foley filled in against Arizona State in a 12-6 victory. Then, when against Cal before Marinovich took over on the second, Southern Cal se-ries and went the rest of the way in a 31-31 tie last Saturday.

Rutledge made magic Sunday for the Redskins

Knight-Ridder News Service

HERNDON, Va. — Jeff Rutledge has been a backup quarterback for so long that even his own family takes his role for granted.

Last Sunday, for example, when the Washington Redskins played the Detroit Lions in Pontiac, Mich., the three Rutledge children (ages 7 to 11) played soccer rather than watch their dad's team on TV.

Laura, Jeff's wife, spent the afternoon ironing. She didn't even bother to set the VCR. Laura stopped taping the games several years ago because Jeff hardly ever got on the field. That didn't seem much point.

But last Sunday, something truly magical happened.

With the Redskins trailing Detroit, 35-14, with 10:23 left in the third quarter, coach Joe Gibbs sent in Rutledge — to relieve young Stan Humphries. What figured to be a routine mop-up job turned into an NFL production of "The Natural," with the 33-year-old Rutledge playing the part of Roy Hobbs.

While his wife did the laundry and his kids played soccer back home, Jeff Rutledge mounted the greatest second-half comeback in Redskins history.

The journeyman quarterback, who considered retirement during the past off-season, completed 50-of-62 passes for 263 yards and one touch-down. He also scored on a daring 12-yard run with 18 seconds left in regulation time to tie the score, 38-38, and force overtime.

In sudden-death, Rutledge coolly stood in his end zone and completed a 40-yard pass to wide receiver Art Monk on a critical third-and-15 situation. Washington drove from there to win the game, 41-38, on Chip Lohmiller's 34-yard field goal.

Now comes the tricky part: Can Jeff Rutledge do it again? We won't have to wait long to find out.

Gibbs' "big named" Rutledge his starting quarterback for next Monday's prime-time showdown with the Philadelphia Eagles at Veterans Stadium.

The strucky Humphries, who has thrown six interceptions in the last two games, will take a seat.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"If a little knowledge is dangerous, where is the man who has so much as to be out of danger?"

Thomas Henry Huxley

If you listen closely to the bidding, you can sometimes get a good picture of a player's distribution. In today's case, the bidding screamed for a trump lead to cut down dummy's ruff. West solved that problem easily, he stubbed his ace in choosing which trump to lead.

North's bidding made it obvious that he was very short in clubs — he had bid two suits and strongly supported a third. Accordingly, West had no trouble deciding on a trump lead. Unfortunately he chose to lead the ace and another trump.

South unlocked his trump 10 at trick one and won the second trump lead in dummy to lead a club. East's ace won, but with no third trump to lead, East shifted weakly to a diamond. This gave South an easy ride. He was able to ruff a club in dummy, and together with two spades, two diamonds and the club king, his four trump winners brought his total to 10.

West would have done much better had he led a low trump instead of the ace and another. Since he had no quick entry to lead a third trump, he had to hope that East could win an early trick. Against this defense, South loses any chance for a club ruff. When East wins the first club, he leads his trump to West's ace, and a third trump lead holds declarer to only nine winners.

Patty Duke's confession autobiography hits the TV screen as 'Call Me Anna'

By Emsi Levine

Celebrity autobiography is a strange hybrid. Part confession, part revelation, part plea for attention, the autobiographer seeks to attract a new crowd of followers who admire the celebrity for baring his or her faults. The latest celebrity to join the fray of confessors who have had their works brought to the screen is Patty Duke, author of "Call Me Anna."

The troubled memoir depicts an unhappy childhood and an adulthood plagued by drug and alcohol addiction and mental illness. Produced and directed by Gilbert Cates, who produced last year's Academy Awards, the production airs Sunday, Nov. 11, on ABC. It stars Howard Hesseman ("Head of the Class"), Ari-Meyers ("Kate & Allie") and Jenny Robertson ("Bull Durham"), as well as Duke, who portrays herself in recent years.

Cates had worked with Duke (whom he refers to as "Anna," her real name) before. "I directed her in the TV movie 'Fatal Judgment,'" he explains. "As preparation for working with her, I had read her book. When we finished the movie, I asked her if she had ever considered filming the book. She said that it had been optioned twice, but nothing had ever happened with it. I asked her if she wanted to work with me on it, and she said yes. We took it to ABC, and they loved it, and here we are."

Cates had originally wanted to air the movie as a four-hour presentation but was talked into filming it in a two-hour version by the network.

We regret any inconvenience this may cause.

"It was incredibly hard to decide which parts of her life to show," he explains. "When you see the finished movie, it looks obvious, but those are the kinds of decisions that kept me up nights."

"We decided to concentrate on a few different periods of her life," he continues. "There's the time when she was a little girl, and she appeared on 'The $64,000 Question.' That's a favorite scene of mine. In fact, because right after I got out of the Army, I had a job flashing the 'Applause' sign on that show. We had to make sure it was authentic, and it is, down to the cooling units that kept the contestants cool in their booths. People who knew the show say it looks really authentic."

"It was a hard decision for Duke to appear in the movie, according to Cates. 'I guess I was the one who convinced her," he says frankly.

"Sophia Loren had played herself at many ages in a movie many years before, but that hasn't been done very often. I think Duke was right not to play herself at 20. But why shouldn't she play herself recently? I thought it would be interesting."

The results, in Cates' view, were more than interesting. "I'm very moved by it," he says simply. "Her life has been unbelievable. It takes a lot of guts to put your life on screen, and not more so attractive, one has children who are living, ex-husbands who are living, and she shows herself in a very unflattering way. It makes you really feel for her."

ON THE COVER: Patty Duke stars in "Call Me Anna," an ABC movie based on her memoir of a troubled childhood and adult life. It airs Sunday, Nov. 11, on ABC.

Reynolds still speaks to MacLaine:

Q: Is it true that Debbie Reynolds was so offended by her portrayal as a pushy, self-centered mother in "Postcards from the Edge" that she refused to even speak to Shirley MacLaine, who plays her?

A: Carrie Fisher wrote the book on which the movie is based, and she also wrote the flick. The book is a grim recounting of her bouts in a drug rehab program. The movie softens the material, adding MacLaine's role as the mother, which Carrie insists is a composite character not based on her real-life mother, Debbie Reynolds. Anyway, Debbie and Shirley get along just fine. My Hollywood spy spotted Q: If Ed Begley Jr., the star of TV's "Parenthood," really the committed environmentalist he claims to be? — M.T.

A: Begley could well be one of the pioneering environmentalists of his generation. He walks or bikes to the studio, taking mass transit when necessary. He began driving an electric automobile long ago. He recycled his garden compost heap, installed low-flush toilets and has planned drought-resistant landscaping. Hagley's interests and efforts are not limited to his California home. He recently joined singers Don Henley and Bonnie Raitt to protest Massachusetts' legendary Walden Pond from commercial development.

Q: Is the long-awaited "Godfather Part III" finally expected to launch any new stars? — F.C.

A: All bets are on handsome Fede d'Ambrosio, making his film debut. He was waiting tables before he got the role as the son of Al Pacino and Diane Keaton.

D'Ambrosio's real-life parallels his film role. His parents wanted him to go into the family business, too. However, in d'Ambrosio's case, the family business is bakeries, not the Mafia like the Corleones.

Q: We hear that Rob Lowe is a psychological mess because he still hasn't gotten over that scandalous videotape of himself having sex with that disgraced girl. Anything to the left? — V.T.

A: No question Rob has had problems coping with the embarrassment of having those videotapes go public nationally. On the other hand, some Hollywood cynics suggest that the 26-year-old actor, never a macho type on the screen, is now being viewed by female fans in a positive new light. In any case, Lowe tells me: "I'm shocked at how many lessons you learn in 12 months."

Q: How did the incident take place? "But we take a licking — and keep on licking." Rob is currently making a movie comeback of sorts playing a squeaky-clean Navy officer in "Desert Shield."

Q: What's become of Ali MacGraw, the former model/actress who once was wed to the late Steve McQueen? Is she still active in Hollywood? — T.P.

A: Ali, 51, has reached an age that in Hollywood effectively shuts her out of many roles for women, usually aimed at a younger age bracket. But Ali has been keeping busy lately with occasional TV parts, with her son Josh (by former husband-producer Robert Evans) and with a number of private projects. One which will eventually go public is "Moving Pictures," the title of Ali's recently completed autobiography. I hear it will be especially moving about her marriage to Evans, and about her stormy union with McQueen.

Q: "TWIN PEAKS" SPIN-OFFS: Are you ready for a "Twin Peaks" T-shirt? The spinoffs are beginning to emerge in connection with the hit-TV show. First to arrive is "The Secret Diary of Laura Palmer" from Pocket Books. For $8.95 you can read the late Laura's diary from the time she was 12 to just before she was murdered when she was 16. The book, although basically a promotion gimmick for the television series, is well written by Jennifer Lynch, daughter of director David Lynch, the brains behind "Twin Peaks." On a smaller scale, a Fullerton, Calif. fan, Steve Ryan, started a newsletter called the "Twin Peaks" Gazette.

Q: Hasn't Jane Fonda put on some weight since she fell in love with media magnet Ted Turner? Are all those rich, fancy meals at fault? — P.B.

A: Jane gaining unwanted poundage? Perish the thought. Keep in mind that Jane is financially loaded by starring in that series of exercise tapes. More than just an expanding waistline is at stake if she puts on weight. Fact is Fonda is as annoyingly svelte as ever, as you'll see in her new video, "Lean Routine." After the taping, in which Fonda left younger exercise hounds paning, she went out with Turner to celebrate — eating ever so judiciously, of course.

Q: Isn't it one of Hollywood's dirtiest secrets that Barbra Streisand is no longer a with-it pop singer, and is having trouble landing a record contract? — H.N.

A: Not so. Barbra continues to be in great demand as one of America's favorite balladeers. She doesn't have to compete with the flavor-of-the-week rock group. You're on safer ground when you speculate about record contracts. Key executive changes at CBS records, Barbra's longtime company, have fed the Hollywood rumor mills that she's about to jump labels. The commercial stakes are considerable, but Barbra is definitely fielding other offers.

Q: It was surprising to read that one of those famous Friars Club Roasts given recently for Chevy Chase turned out to be a real let-down, with several walkouts. Was this because there were women guests on the dais, which inhibited the usual four-letter language? — C.P.

A: The operative four-letter word at this roast was "dull." Many of the lesser comedians called on to roast Chevy were boring, while the top ones like Dan Aykroyd weren't all that sharp. In fairness, the walkouts were largely Manhattan businessmen who had to leave the long cere-

Nice guys finally end up at the altar

By John N. Campbell

This week, after six long years on "The Young and the Restless," Cricket and Danny Romalotti tie the knot in Maui, Hawaii. So the boss daughter, Lauralee Bell (Cricket), and the rock 'n' roll musician (or Michael Damian (Danny) finally march down the aisle on the soap. Danny always felt he wasn't good enough for Cricket, and Cricket wasn't sure of her own emotions. Maybe Danny was right?

Only a month ago, the "poor-me" tune annoyed Cricket while Danny fought trumped-up drug charges. But, after being cleared, he proposed and this time Cricket accepted.

The move surprised Michael Damian.

"I didn't have a clue this was about to happen," he declares. "Cricket and I have been on and off on and off forever. There was always some excuse, some story turn. After this drug story, I guess the writers were stumped, and said, 'Why not?'"

In early October, a "Restless" unit went to Maui for 12 days. Halfway through, Damian flew to the mainland for a weekend concert, and showed up for the ceremony.

"I can't get over Maui," added Michael. "The place was loaded with honeymoon couples. On the last day I sneaked in a golf round, 11 holes in an hour and a half, and raced for the plane."

Sneaking in a round of golf here and there reveals the pattern of Damian's life. On weekends he's out performing at state fairs or concerts. Mondays he's back at CBS playing Danny. Pining the performer down isn't easy. There's always another date, a meeting with recording companies. Just when you want Damian, he's gone. Yet the soap job feeds the singing career and vice-versa. "It's all performing," says Michael. No big deal.

Settling in as a newlywed, means quiet time on "Y & R." Having completed all those summer weekend concerts, Damian now sits back to write new songs for his winter album.

"I'm in control," says Michael. "I try and sell my songs to recording companies, and they're always telling me to 'do this, do that.' I just go my own way. I know rap is hot now, but I can't do that. I'm hanging enough in my own way.

"I was told a nice guy on daytime was a doomed character," Michael notes. "I guess Danny is the exception. Funny, a few weeks ago at a concert a 78-year-old lady came up to me and said, 'I always thought you were soft. That has changed. You're o.k. I'd go out with you now.'"

Nine years on the show as Danny Romalotti proves that nice characters can survive.

Gordon Thomson, whom prime time soap fans will recall as Adam Carrington in "Dynasty," has joined the cast of "Santa Barbara." Gordon plays the role of Mason Capwell, the shrewd and deceitful heir to the Capwell fortune. Gordon had a short-term role in "Ryan's Hope" many years ago, so in a way, this is a return to daytime. Damian, a Canadian born actor.

It's the George's Food Company,
Chicken by George, has been supplying its fresh product to supermarkets for some time. Now, her husband John V. Burns, the former governor of Kentucky, is a new customer. He's opening his second restaurant, John Y's Chicken Grille, which will stock up on a variety of chickens and healthy chicken dishes. Including, of course, his wife's own brand.

Q: Isn't it true that since the beginning of her marriage to Timothy Hutton, Debra Winger has been hitting the bottle pretty hard? — J.P.

A: In the early days of her career, Debra had the reputation of being a tough liver, one who caroused quite a bit. Now 33, Debra has settled down. She's the mother of a son by former husband Hutton. The union went south last June.

The boozy rumor may have gotten started because Winger will play Tom Hanks' alcoholic girlfriend in her next movie, "Significant Other." And remember, Winger is a very strong actress who prepares in detail for her roles.

Q: I met Steven Seagal, the hot actor and martial arts specialist whose new movie "Marked for Death" is taking it in at the box office. Has trained quite a few star pupils. How about naming a few? Was Sly Stallone among them? —

A: Not to my knowledge. One of Seagal's martial arts students was Sean Connery, who influenced Stallone to "attain." Another catalyst, student and adviser was the late James Mason, who gave him important advice: "The secret is not to act, but to be," a philosophy that has guided Seagal throughout his meteoric screen career.

Q: Can it really be as difficult being beautiful as actresses always claim in interviews? — T.H.

A: Farrah Fawcett is very vocal about the drawbacks and insecurities involved in being unusually good-looking, especially in Hollywood. Fawcett says she never received quality roles or good reviews until she took off her makeup in such films and television movies as "Extremities," "The Burning Bed" and "Small Sacrifices." Fawcett feels that being beautiful doesn't always mean being confident and sums it up by describing what it's like to walk into a room and have everyone turn and look at you. She says thousands of thoughts go through your mind and not one of them is, "Don't I look fabulous?"

Q: Is it true that at long last George Burns has realized that he's just too old to perform? — M.P.

A: Perish the thought. Burns will forever be the trouper. As long as he's well enough to stand up, he'll come forth with the jokes. George's 95th birthday TV special is being planned now.

He also recently put in an appearance with Bob Hope (age 87) in another of Hope's TV specials. The two — especially Burns — may be geriatric but they are unstoppable.

Q: What's the story about popular TV star Bert Convy? Is he really as sick as they say? Is it AIDS? — A.R.

A: At first rumors in Hollywood had Convy, who co-starred with Burt Reynolds in their popular syndicated quiz show, suffering a stroke. But the truth finally emerged. Convy, 56, who once played pro-baseball, was recently operated on for the removal of a brain tumor. He's now out of the hospital, and undergoing follow-up therapy.

'Cheers' big number 200 pushes NBC to big number one in Nielsen ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's "Cheers" was the most-watched show on television for the fifth time this season, but CBS is moving close to NBC in ratings for the season to date, according to Nielsen ratings released Tuesday.

NBC's saloon comedy, which celebrates its 200th episode on Thursday, averaged a 22.4 rating, helping the Peacock Network win the week with an average prime-time rating of 13.5.

CBS, whose "60 Minutes" and "Murder, She Wrote" each had their highest ratings since the season began, was second last week with a 12.6. ABC was third with an 11.9.

However, CBS' season-to-date margin is much closer to NBC and is making the ratings race tighter than had been anticipated, said NBC research vice president Preston Beckman.

Although NBC still leads with a 13.3 average, CBS, trying to rebound from three consecutive seasons as third in prime time ratings, now has a 13.0 average for the season so far. ABC is third with a 12.5.

It's a much tighter race — CBS is making it even tighter that we thought," it would be, Beckman said. He credited part of CBS' surge with the Nielsen performances of CBS' "Murphy Brown," "Designing Women" and "60 Minutes."

In last week's battle of "The Cosby Show" vs. Bart, NBC's "The Cosby Show" easily bested Fox Broadcasting's half-hour "The Simpsons." The former averaged an 18.6 to the 15.8 for

A special Monday showing of Burt Reynolds' "Evening Shade" CBS comedy also fared well. It was 24th in the rankings with a 15.1 average, far better than the 9.5 rating and No. 57 ranking of its regular Friday broadcast.

In the news wars, ABC's "World

News Tonight" won the Nielsen battle for the 43rd consecutive week. It averaged an 11.4, well ahead of the 10.0 for the "CBS Evening News" and the 9.5 of the "NBC Nightly News." The week's top 10 list was dominated by old reliables, save for NBC's showing of the movie hit, "Three Men and a Cradle," and ABC's new "America's Funniest People." They were, respectively, fourth and 10th in the rankings.

Are you tired of the family battling on which mouse will win the Indy 500 across your kitchen floor??? The little Mickey in the brand drawer being your taste tester??? Or meeting Speedy Gonzalez mouse of the coffee pot before 6:00 AM???

Well there is an answer! Try the P.C.U. (pest control unit). The P.C.U. operates at a center frequency of 40kHz. This ultrasonic driven unit differs from other units currently being sold in the fact that it's output is electronically swept from about 21kHz to 54kHz. With this technique this unit is more effective and never allows the mice to get used to an given frequency width. With this unit you can say goodbye to: Monthly pest control bills; messy traps; dead bodies; and dangerous liquids, powders and sprays. This unit will cover 1,000 square feet, plugs into a 115v socket, and has an indicator light to let you know it's on duty. LET THE P.C.U. (Your electronic cat) DO THE JOB WHILE YOU WORK, SLEEP, and PLAY

Why does the Christmas season start so early?

To allow you more time to shop, to provide greater selection, and to allow for comparison shopping. You avoid long lines, get greater personal attention and find the items you want in greater supply. Items to be mailed require early purchase. Today, "shop early" implies that the season has become over-commercialized. To us, the Christmas spirit is one of giving. And giving means shopping... early or late. So shop early this year, for your convenience.
