Expert: Gem water cost too low

By N.S. Nakkavud
Times-News writer

BOISE - The answer to many water problems in the West and in Idaho may lie in charging users the true cost of that water. Because it is subsidized, federal water is so cheap that there's no incentive for the farmer to conserve it, said Marc Reinsner, writer, lecturer and consultant on western water issues.

Reinsner, of San Francisco, spoke Friday at an Idaho Centennial Commission-sponsored seminar - "Visualizing the Future: Idaho's Second Century Symposium."

About 40 percent of the water in California is distributed under what Reinsner called the socialist system of federal-Bureau of Reclamation subsidies. That also is true of water from federal projects in Idaho, such as the Minidoka Project.

The Reclamation Act required that federal irrigation projects repay the cost of the Economic ground rules to change

By Craig Lincoln

TWIN FALLS - Someday, the world will begin to reject traditional economic scorecards that emphasize jobs and money.

Only then, a social philosopher, economist and educator Hazel Henderson said, will the world truly understand if a country or a state is rich.

Henderson spoke Friday at an Idaho

Centennial Commission-sponsored seminar on the future. Her vision of the economy, which she started outlining decades ago, is now becoming accepted by many of her fellow economists.

Some only accept it after a few drinks, she said, but it's gaining followers. That's why the Centennial Commission invited her to speak at the Friday's session designed to bring a close to the state's Centennial celebration by looking Roosholt also acknowledged the relative worth of irrigation water that Idaho will have to consider as it heads into its second century. One acre-foot of water used to grow alfalfa is worth about $40. But sent

Army calls thousands of reserves for duty

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Army and Marine Corps on Friday ordered more than 15,000 reservists from across the country to report for active duty in support of Operation Desert Shield.

The Army said it was ordering 14,006 National Guard and Army Reserve members from 35 states to active duty, and it said that in excess of 12,000 more would be called up within days, including the first combat reserve units to be activated in the gulf crisis.

The Marine Corps called up 1,086 combat reserves, including 109 members of Company B, 4th Tank Battalion, Yakima, Wash., which will report for duty with the 2nd Tank Battalion at the Marine combat training center at Twentynine Palms, Calif.

Also, the Marines are activating 324 members of the 8th Tank Battalion at Rochester, N.Y., for duty with the 2nd Marine Expeditionary Force.

Both the 2nd Tank Battalion and the 2nd Marine Expeditionary Force are active duty units that are scheduled to deploy to the gulf as part of Desert Shield.

The Army did not say how many of its reservists would be sent to the gulf.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said the Army would activate three National Guard combat units, although they would be subjected to desert warfare training in the United States before a final decision is made on whether to send them to the gulf.

Those three units - the 48th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) of Georgia, the 155th Armored Brigade of Mississippi and the 256th Infantry Brigade (Mechanized) of Louisiana - were among the reserve units put on alert Friday for later call-up.

Bush off to Europe

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Bush got last-minute briefings on the Persian Gulf crisis Friday before embarking on a weeklong journey that will include a Thanksgiving visit with American forces sent to the Middle East.

Bush's first stop, early Saturday, was to be in France, to lay a wreath commemorating the first anniversary of Czechoslovakia's turn to democracy. The visit was the first ever by an American president. Hundreds of thousands of people were expected to pack into Wenceslas Square to hear him speak.

After celebrating Czechoslovakia's "Velvet Revolution," Bush is scheduled to fly to Germany to meet with Chancellor Helmut Kohl before heading on to Paris. There, he'll be reunited with longtime American allies in Europe - and former foes as well - in a treaty-signing ceremony that will push the Cold War further into the depths of history.

Bush went jogging Friday as he prepared for the transatlantic flight. He also wrapped up details on some domestic work, signed some legislation and went over briefing materials for his eight-day trip. A large part of the official talks

Recession puts brake on consumer inflation

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Consumer inflation slowed slightly in October and the country's trade deficit narrowed, but economists attributed Friday's seemingly upbeat developments to the near certainty that the nation has slid into a recession.

Meanwhile, President Bush wrapped up a week of hastily called meetings with his economic advisers and leading U.S. business executives as the administration scoured for ways to alleviate the pain from any economic downturn.

Bush received a generally bleak assessment of the economy's prospects from the executives, leading the president to acknowledge the possibility of a recession for the first time. He continued to insist, however, that any downturn would be brief and relatively mild.

"Most seem to feel that if we have a recession, it will not be deep and that we'll come out of it relatively soon, six months at most, and I would like to think that is true," Bush said in an interview with Cable News Network.

The Labor Department reported that the Consumer Price Index rose 0.6 percent in October, better than the 0.8 percent spurt that hit in August and September as oil costs due to the Persian Gulf crisis.

Imports dropped 2.4 percent to $41.3 billion, despite a huge 28.5 percent jump in petroleum imports. But exports also fell, that hit in August and September as oil down 2.2 percent to $31.8 billion. The prices surged after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Prices rose a modest 0.3 percent last month for products not related to energy. Economists said this "core" rate often seen as a better barometer of inflation, probably stayed relatively low because the economy - which many analysts think has tumbled into recession - is holding down prices.

The sliding economy is preventing the oil and energy shock from causing a runaway inflation, said Allen Sims, chief economist at the Boston Co.

The slightly improved inflation rate might give room to maneuver to the Federal Reserve, which has been under pressure from the Bush administration to ease its inflation-fighting campaign and lower interest rates to spur the economy, analysts said.

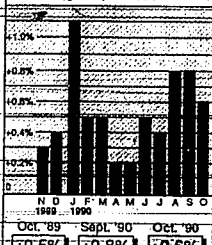

Also Friday, the Commerce Department reported that the U.S. merchandise trade deficit narrowed 3.3 percent in September, the first improvement since June. But the value of petroleum imports was at its highest level in nine years because of escalating costs due to the Persian Gulf crisis. Imports dropped 2.4 percent to $41.3 billion, despite a huge 28.5 percent jump in petroleum imports. But exports also fell, that hit in August and September as oil down 2.2 percent to $31.8 billion. The prices surged after Iraq's invasion of

'Keating Five' senators deny wrongdoing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators under investigation for helping Charles H. Keating Jr. battle federal banking regulations strongly deny any wrongdoing Friday before the Senate Ethics Committee.

One told the panel of fellow senators he "does not peddle influence; period."

The committee turned to personal defense statements by the "Keating Five" senators after the panel's special counsel, Robert Bennett, wound up a day and a half detailing accusations and evidence against them.

Bennett concentrated on Alan Cranston, the Senate's top 2 Democrat, on Friday, saying his help for Keating and the failing Lincoln Savings and Loan was "closely connected" to political donations from Keating.

Cranston, suffering from prostate cancer and making his first appearance at the hearings, was defiant in his denials.

"I engaged in no unethical conduct," he said firmly. "You know that I broke no law. ... You know that I pocketed no money, that there was no kickback in the form of any member of my family."

"Yes, I was persistent in expressing my concerns about the way bureaucrats were dealing with this large business in my state," he said, referring to the savings and loan, which was chartered in California. "I believed that its failure, if it came to that, would be a catastrophe for countless constituents of mine."

The Ethics Committee of three Democrats and three Republicans will make recommendations based on the hearings that could determine the political futures of the five, except Cranston, who has said he will not seek re-election.

The committee is trying to determine whether the $1.3 million Keating and associates donated to the five influenced their intervention on his behalf with banking regulators.

Many of the donations were given to the senators' campaigns and causes while Keating was trying to save his Irvine, Calif., institution. Regulators seized the thrift in April 1989.

Senate Ethics Committee panel members Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Warren Rudman, R-N.H., share a light moment Friday.

and it could cost taxpayers more than $2 billion to cover the losses.

First up to defend himself Friday was John McCain of Arizona, the only Republican in the group. He declared, "I know I acted ethically and properly."

Next came John Glenn, D-Ohio, who said, "At no time did I trade favors or perform actions in return for money."

Bennett has recommended that the committee dismiss McCain and Glenn from the case but that the investigation be intensified for Cranston, Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich.

Friday's second day of the hearings got off to an acrimonious start as Cranston's lawyer asked that one member, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., be barred from judging the California Democrat.

Helms, speaking under oath, stoutly denied Cranston attorney William makers demanded fair treatment for Lincoln.

"The most immediate decision for the panel is to determine whether the investigation of each senator should be intensified or dropped."

Bennett said as he outlined the evidence Thursday and Friday that Cranston, DeConcini and Riegle were more involved in helping Keating than McCain and Glenn. Keating donated $850,000 to three voter registration projects supported by Cranston and $49,000 to his political campaigns.

Bennett said that in September 1987 Cranston sought to solicit $500,000 at one time for the voter projects. His fund-raiser, Jay Jacobson, told the committee "she thought that was too much" and persuaded him to lower his request to $250,000, Bennett said. Keating gave the $250,000 Nov. 6.

Bennett is presenting his findings from a year-long investigation, said. "In retrospect, I think there was a link" between Keating's contributions and Cranston's assistance, "Sen. Cranston's contacts with the Federal Home Loan Bank board," Cranston will show, were closely connected with fund-raising by Keating.

He added, "It wasn't Mr. Keating who was always seeking things. Sen. Cranston sought contributions from Mr. Keating."

Bennett added, "The evidence will show four occasions when he accepted or solicited several hundred thousands of dollars from Keating for voter registration."

Cranston met on 12 occasions with regulators between 1987 to 1989 to discuss Lincoln, Bennett said. Cranston's Senate banking aide, Carolyn Jordan, "made several additional contacts, often at crucial points of the bank board's examination of Lincoln," Bennett said.

Bennett said Lincoln also made available a $300,000 line of credit to Cranston under "unusual circumstances" in which a Keating official flew from Phoenix to Los Angeles and "executed the documents in a hasty manner with Cranston."

Social club landlords not held liable

NEW YORK — Three landlords of a building that housed a social club where 87 people were killed in a March arson fire are not criminally liable for the blaze, a prosecutor has decided.

Bronx District Attorney Robert T. Johnson made the announcement Thursday after a hearing for Julio Gonzalez, who was charged with 178 counts of murder, arson and related crimes.

During the court appearance before state Justice Burton B. Roberts, Gonzalez's lawyer, Richard Berne, repeated his plan to use the insanity defense.

Gonzalez was accused of splashing gasoline inside the club's entrance March 28 before lighting it and causing the blaze.

Immediately after the fire, much discussion focused on whether the building's landlords could be charged in connection with the fire.

Michael Milken to be sentenced

NEW YORK — The sentencing of Michael Milken, former head of the Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. junk bond department, will take place Wednesday, the judge announced Friday.

Milken, 44, pleaded guilty in April to six felonies. He faces a maximum sentence of 28 years in prison.

The sentencing originally had been set for Oct. 1, but was postponed so that U.S. District Judge Kimba Wood could hear evidence to help her decide Milken's sentence.

Cheney extends construction freeze

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney extended a freeze on most military construction on the same day that President Bush empowered him to bypass Congress for authority to start building projects related to Operation Desert Shield.

The Pentagon announced Friday that Cheney had extended the construction freeze before it expired at midnight Thursday. It applies to all military building projects except those related to Desert Shield and those required for certain base closings.

Cheney first imposed the freeze Jan. 24 in light of planned changes in the structure and size of U.S. military forces and because of expected base closings.

The extended freeze is effective until April 16, 1991. In a statement, Cheney said it was necessary because of "continuing changes in the world situation" and limits on defense funds.

Unwilling reservist is left behind

WASHINGTON — A National Guard reservist who lost his bid for a court order to block his deployment to Saudi Arabia was left behind anyway when his unit was sent to the Middle East, officials said Friday.

Sgt. Michael R. Ange remained at Fort Lee, Va., to undergo medical tests when his Army National Guard unit, the 1450th Transport Company, was deployed to the Persian Gulf on Wednesday, said base spokesman Jay Whitmore.

A federal judge in Washington on Tuesday rejected Ange's bid for a temporary restraining order, which the reservist sought to block his deployment on grounds that President Bush lacked congressional authority to wage war against Iraq.

Ange, 26, a former Beaufort County, N.C., police officer, is now a student at Appalachian State University in Boone, N.C. He also claims that he is medically unfit for military service because of knee, leg and foot problems as well as an ulcer.

GOP committee practices questioned

WASHINGTON — Rep. Guy Vander Jagt's challenger for the top House Republican campaign post is charging financial mismanagement of the committee and raising questions about payoffs to its employees.

The challenger, Rep. Don Sundquist of Tennessee, has challenged Vander Jagt in a letter to account for money the National Republican Congressional Committee has raised and spent over the past decade. Copies of the letter were circulated to all House Republicans on Thursday.

Sundquist's letter to the Michigan congressman notes that the NRCC raised $28.5 million in the two-year election cycle leading up to the Nov. 6 voting, finished the period $2.5 million in debt and funneled only 7 percent of the money directly to candidates.

Police arrest anti-abortion activists

WASHINGTON — Police on Friday arrested more than 340 anti-abortion activists who tried to block entrances to two abortion clinics.

The protests organized by the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue snarled morning commuter traffic near the clinics close to the downtown area. District of Columbia police, wearing riot gear, carried some demonstrators onto waiting buses.

"We will continue to save children, no matter what the courts have to say," Operation Rescue spokesman Pat Mahoney said. "The sanctity and dignity of human life is what matters and we will be here."

Police spokesmen were not immediately able to provide the charges placed against the demonstrators.

VA will lower maximum interest rate

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs said Friday it is lowering its maximum interest rate for federally backed VA home mortgages by one-half percentage point to 9.5 percent, effective Monday.

"This should provide a significant stimulus to the housing market and the economy as a whole," said Secretary Edward J. Derwinski.

The new rate is for home and condominium loans. It means the monthly payment for principal and interest on a typical VA loan of $80,000 will total $672.29, down $29.37 a month from the previous rate.

The department increased the rate from 9.5 percent to 10 percent last February.

Spacecraft discovers lava domes on Venus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Foot's gold may cost the slopes of Venus' tallest slope, and 15-mile-wide lava domes that look like giant pancakes show up in Magellan's latest pictures of the planet, NASA said Friday.

Scientists released six new radar pictures, and engineers expressed relief at regaining contact with the spacecraft after a 40-minute black-out Thursday.

"The project's health is very good," Magellan manager Tony Spear said at a news conference. "We've had our share of problems, but they've been minor."

Some pictures show 600-mile-long, 100-mile-wide, horseshoe-shaped features, each surrounding a meteorite impact crater 10 miles to 15 miles wide.

Freight train hits school bus, kills 2

MILTONA, Minn. (AP) — A freight train struck a school bus at an unguarded crossing Friday, killing two and injuring 21, authorities said. Frantic pupils from a nearby school had to be restrained from going to the site.

Bob Sier, transportation supervisor for the Alexandria public schools, said those killed were the bus driver and a student, one of about 25 on the bus.

Seven of the injured were in stable condition. DePaul County Hospital in Alexandria with fractures and internal injuries, said Bill Haig, hospital administrator. "It looks like they're going to be here for a while," he said.

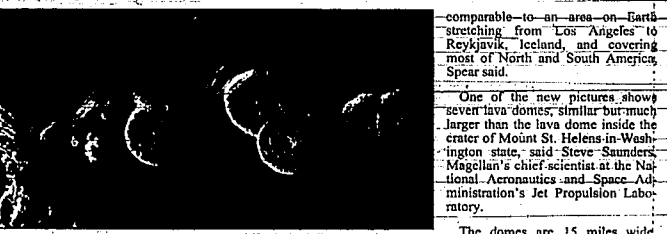

Image shows Venus lava domes averaging 15 miles across.

The horseshoes may have been formed by shock waves triggered by incoming meteorites or by wind-blown debris that settled to the ground after being kicked up by the impacts, said geologist Ray Arvidson of Washington University in St. Louis.

The horseshoes are "unique in the solar system," he said.

The space agency also displayed a computer-processed videotape that shows Venus' surface from the perspective of someone swooping over 130-mile-wide, half-mile-deep volcanic collapse craters and 38,000-foot-tall Mount Maxwell, the planet's tallest mountain.

Magellan has now used radar to peer through thick clouds and map 18 percent of Venus' landscape, comparable to an area on Earth stretching from Los Angeles to Reykjavik, Iceland, and covering most of North and South America, Spear said.

One of the new pictures shows seven lava domes, similar but much larger than the lava dome inside the crater of Mount St. Helens in Washington state, said Steve Saunders, Magellan's chief scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

The domes are 15 miles wide, 2,500 feet high and look like pans of cocoa-nut macaroons, Saunders said.

Magellan's radar also measures heat emitted by Venus' surface. Those measurements show some of the middle slopes of Mount Maxwell contain "mystery material" that emit little heat, said Gordon Pettengill of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Research professor Dr. Dorothy B. Spangenberg examines tiny immature jellyfish.

Shuttle delay causes laboratory to overflow with 20,000 jellyfish

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Dorothy Spangenberg's laboratory is jammed with 20,000 jellyfish — four times more than usual — because of NASA's delay in launching the space shuttle Columbia.

The biologist from Eastern Virginia Medical School plans to send 2,000 tiny, young jellyfish on a research mission to study their metamorphosis in a gravity-free environment. Originally scheduled for August, it was pushed into 1991 when the shuttle sprung hydrogen leaks.

Those leaks are fixed now, and NASA plans to launch Columbia in early December on an astronomy mission. The flight with Spangenberg's jellyfish, Columbia's next trip, is targeted for May.

Spangenberg said she needs a large jellyfish supply so there will be plenty at the right stage of development when it comes time for the mission. She expects to have more than 25,000 jellyfish by spring.

"It just keeps growing until until we have enough, although I don't know how to gauge how much is enough," she said. "We're going to get as many as we can between now and then."

Jellyfish polyps, an early form of the animal and about as long as the lead tip of a pencil, occupy aquariums, dishes and flasks in Spangenberg's Norfolk, Va., laboratory. The dishes and flasks are inside incubators.

Each container is filled with artificial sea water that lacks iodine and thus prevents metamorphosis. Polyps can live indefinitely at that stage in the laboratory and reproduce continuously.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has sent up monkeys, chimpanzees, rats, flies, bees, moths, spiders and fish. The Soviets have carried a wider variety of animals into orbit, including dogs, tortoises and guinea pigs. Neither country, though, has ever flown jellyfish in space.

What makes the marine creature so suitable for a nine-day shuttle mission is that polyps develop into the more mature ephyra stage in five to six days when iodine is added to their water.

Ephyrae mature within four to six months into the final developmental stage, called medusa. It's the form familiar to most people — the 4- to 5-pound animals have bells, or humps, tentacles and long mouth arms.

Columbia's astronauts will videotape the jellyfish during the flight and iodine to the water of some of the specimens, and track their growth. Spangenberg will analyze the data.

"We need a range of organisms to begin to put together a picture to see if the response (in space) is similar from one organism to the next," said NASA's Gary Johns, the mission's payload scientist. "Jellyfish are a single point in that picture."

The Spacelab life sciences mission, which will include a rat study and 18 other experiments, originally was scheduled for late 1986, then early 1987.

Astronauts spend 1st full day in orbit under order of silence from Pentagon

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlanta's five astronauts spent their first full day in space Friday orbiting Earth in a public silence imposed by the Pentagon.

"That we're not hearing anything means the orbiter and crew are doing fine," said NASA spokeswoman Billie Denson.

Atlantis thundered into orbit Thursday night carrying a satellite that reportedly is to spy on Iraq. The shuttle was visible along the entire Florida coast and as far north as South Carolina as it rode a 700-foot column of flame through the darkness.

Hydrogen leaks crippled Columbia, then Atlantis over the summer. Both shuttles were cleared for flight last month following extensive repairs.

Atlantis last flew in March, when it carried another spy satellite into orbit.

"It puts Atlantis back into flying status again," said launch director for the shuttle's cargo bay within 24 hours of liftoff providing all went well. Experts believe the spacecraft will focus cameras or electronic signal detectors on the Persian Gulf.

As of Friday afternoon, Mission Control had punctuated the silence only to say Atlantis had achieved its proper orbit and the crew was well. Another report was planned Friday evening to announce the landing day, expected to be Monday.

The Pentagon plans to use the shuttle two more times, both in 1991 to carry mechanized cargoes. Future military satellites will be lifted into orbit by unmanned rockets, principally the Titan 4.

Atlantis' flawless liftoff — the second shuttle flight in two months — was greeted enthusiastically by NASA officials, who spent much of the year contending with grounded shuttles.

Columbia's astronomy mission has been on hold since May, when the shuttle's hydrogen leaks were discovered. Four countdowns were attempted before NASA stopped to make way for Discovery's October flight with a satellite on a mission to the sun.

If Columbia goes up in early December as planned, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will have achieved six shuttle flights for 1990. Nine missions originally were planned.

"I gave him the options; he made the decision," said Jerome Dambro, the public defender appointed to represent Crews. "He decided it was his best interest to face the charges in Pennsylvania."

Authorities suspect Crews in the Sept. 13 slayings of Geoffrey Logan Hood and Molly LaRue near Duncannon, Pa.

San Diego looks better to GOP as site of '92 national convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — David Duke and Ann Richards are two reasons San Diego is emerging as a likely choice for the 1992 Republican National Convention.

GOP officials insist former Klansman Duke's standing as Louisiana's most prominent — if unwanted — Republican does not disqualify New Orleans nor does the prospect of Richards as the Democratic governor of Texas eliminate Houston.

But they concede that Duke and Richards are among the political factors that will be weighed as the party decides where to gather to open President Bush's re-election campaign.

Five cities are in the running for the convention. In addition to San Diego, they are Houston, New Orleans, Cleveland and Tampa-St. Petersburg in Florida. The party's site selection committee plans to make its recommendation at the end of this month. But the final decision won't be announced until early next year.

So far, President Bush has expressed no public preference and White House aides say he isn't likely to do so. All it takes is a nod from the president toward one city to insure its selection.

"He has said he wants to go to the place that makes the most sense," said Mary Malin, executive director of the Republican National Committee. "He has not given us a preference one way or the other."

The Democrats already have chosen New York as the site of their 1992 convention.

"Politically, San Diego makes an enormous amount of sense," said Roger Stone, a Republican consultant who spent time in California on behalf of the Bush presidential campaign. "The state's going to be pivotal for the president's re-election."

No one disputes the importance of California, which will have 54 electoral votes in 1992, one-fifth of the 270 needed to win the presidency.

Neither is there any argument with the city's ideal weather.

The problems cited most often are the size of the convention hall and money.

The hall is the smallest of the five in contention, but backers of San Diego contend it is as large as the hall in Dallas where the Republicans met to renominate Ronald Reagan in 1984. There also is talk about holding the final session of the convention in Jack Murphy Stadium, the baseball park.

Money could be a greater problem. Normally the major exporter of political money to both major parties, California will have little to spare in 1992 when the state will have two Senate races as well as contests for seven new House seats.

When Republican Pete Wilson takes office as governor in January, one of his first acts will be appointing someone to succeed him in the Senate. Wilson's choice then will have to run in 1992 for the remaining two years of his Senate term.

In addition, 1992 is the year the seat held by Sen. Alan Cranston comes up for election. Democrat Cranston has announced he will not seek another term.

New Orleans was the site of the 1988 convention that nominated Bush for president. The Superdome is big enough for two conventions. Also working in the city's favor is what one party source called "the fun factor."

Bush slips in popularity for 3rd month

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's approval rating has slipped below 50 percent for the first time since his election, a polling group reported Friday.

The Times-Mirror Center for People & The Press said 49 percent of the people surveyed in its latest poll said they approved of the way Bush is handling his duties.

Thirty percent said they disapproved and 21 percent said they didn't know.

It was the third straight month that Bush's popularity had slipped in the Times-Mirror poll. It dropped from 76 percent in August to 68 percent in September and 55 percent in October.

However, respondents still favored Bush, by a 50 to 37 percent margin, over New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, his most frequently mentioned potential 1992 Democratic rival.

Two-thirds of the Democrats surveyed supported Cuomo, while 86 percent of the Republicans supported Bush.

The polling organization said Democrats, rather than being enthusiastic about Bush, may simply have yet to decide their favorite for the party's nomination.

The president received a 33 percent approval rating among Democrats.

Times-Mirror cautioned that this is a very early test of voter sentiment. Just after the midterm election four years ago, former Democratic Sen. Gary Hart led Bush by 51 to 38 percent. In January of 1983, in the midst of a recession, former Vice President Walter Mondale led President Reagan 52 to 40 percent.

The polling group also asked voters to grade the press on its coverage of this year's political campaign. The average grade was a C plus, compared with a D plus average in a poll after the 1988 campaign.

Deployment continues

Ground crews unload supplies for Operation Desert Shield from the rear hatch of a C-5 cargo plane at a base in Saudi Arabia Wednesday. The U.S. military buildup continues with deployment of more troops and equipment.

Army gives reservists little time to prepare for trip to Mideast

CLARKSTON, Wash. (AP) — The 25 members of Clarkston's 907th Engineering Platoon have little time to settle their affairs, and the support network for their families perhaps is not as good as active-duty soldiers, an Army Reserve official says.

To the 50 people gathered at the Astin Recreation Center Thursday, Tom Hunt of Enumclaw stressed the next 24 hours will be critical.

More than half the audience officially joined the active Army Thursday. They likely will spend six months in the Persian Gulf.

And Hunt warned the 25 reservists they had little time to get ready for a scheduled departure to Fort Lewis, Wash., on Sunday. Everything from arranging for direct deposit of paychecks to oil changes on their cars was on the list.

"I know you're saying to yourself, 'I've got all this work to do and I've got only 24 hours,'" said Hunt, family support coordinator for the 124 Army Reserve.

The 907th Thursday became the first of the 112 units within the four-state command to go on active duty.

Clarkston, Wash. (AP) — Although they will not know until 72 hours before it happens, it is expected the reservists will be deployed to Saudi Arabia. Nothing official has been said, but the unit's orders specify the "Operation Desert Shield" area of operations. Arceneaux said.

Last week's mobilization order came after the unit's members had been alerted in August about the possibility. At that time, 124th representatives presented much of the same material to them.

"We were kind of prepared for it," said Neil Anderson of Lewiston. "It was not a total surprise."

Ironically Anderson, 41, is a year away from reaching his 20-year retirement from the Army. An Idaho Transportation Department employee, he served the last six years in the Clarkston reserve unit, as well as in Vietnam in 1969-1970.

"This is going to be a lot better situation than that one," Anderson said. "I'm not out trying to chase down the bad guys. I'm just trying to protect our guys as a firm."

The risk factor is better.

"I was really disappointed in the American people last time. When we came back, we were treated really bad, I feel," he said. "It's my opinion this isn't going to last too long."

coming back." The couple has four children.

Hemenway was pursuing a doctorate at Idaho. Although military personnel are guaranteed restoration to their jobs upon release from active service, Hemenway has no assurance he will return to campus after open or research funds available.

What sets these people apart from many of the personnel already in the Persian Gulf is a lack of institutional support systems, Hunt said. Active-duty soldiers leave behind families that already have established a network through the local military community, he said.

"These families here, there is no military installation. They have to bind each other together," Hunt said. "They have to do it themselves. In this room, these people have to do it themselves."

And although he remained upbeat, Hunt belied some concern when he noted less than a dozen wives were in the audience, due to the fact that several reservists came from greater distances.

Not surprisingly, most reservists were interested in financial details. Most will not see their first military paycheck until the first of the year, Hunt indicated. However, the families will be eligible for military medical insurance and benefits.

And the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940 provides that reservists called to active duty will see the interest rate on their mortgage drop to 6 percent. Hunt said that could bring a $500 monthly payment on a 10 percent mortgage down to $300.

While money is a primary concern now, Hunt stressed it will take it back seat to other problems down the road.

Baghdad radio improves music but propaganda remains same

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The music has improved, but Iraq's propaganda pitch to American soldiers remains the same: You're risking your life and wasting your time in Saudi Arabia.

In daily broadcasts on what is now called the Voice of Peace, Baghdad Radio's English-language programming contains warnings to GIs that they risk coming down with "craziness" from long spells in the desert. It tells them that their Arab allies will turn their guns on U.S. soldiers instead of Iraqis. The messages also raise doubts about the U.S. role in the region.

GIs say they listen to the music, but tune out the commentary.

In the tradition of Tokyo Rose during World War II and Hanoi Hannah in Vietnam, Iraq started its blend of music, news and propaganda when the U.S. military buildup began after Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

In the beginning, the hourlong programs interspersed Arabic music and Western big-band sounds with taunts.

"To the American soldier in the Saudi Arabia desert, a voice would say, 'Would you like to be one of the cripples who are only lamented in the charity ceremonies?'"

Now, the programs are three hours long and the music is top-40 contemporary rock and oldies-but-goodies from the '60s and '70s.

A female announcer, dubbed Baghdad Betty by the U.S. troops, or a male colleague occasionally interrupts with comments such as:

"Let us be frank. We tell you that the embargo will not affect us a bit. We could work and prepare food and stuff for ourselves like our ancestors did some 6,000 years ago."

The embargo is a reference to trade sanctions imposed by the United Nations after Iraq seized Kuwait.

On Thursday, an announcer said: "One of your pals even killed himself a week ago, feeling terribly lonely. And two GIs quarrelled with each other and one of them shot his colleague after they used to be good friends."

"This is only normal. For one who is not accustomed to live in the desert and is forced to do so for so long a time could easily be driven to craziness. Then suicide is the 'only way out.'"

The announcer apparently was referring to a U.S. soldier found dead in a shower on Nov. 8 and the shooting death of a Marine the next day.

The U.S. military said he was killed when a rifle discharged accidentally.

The military has acknowledged one suicide among the 46 Americans who have died since Operation Desert Shield began Aug. 7. The rest were all listed as accidental deaths.

The Voice of Peace also claimed that a Saudi fighter pilot flew his plane to asylum in Sudan.

This, it said, illustrated the "miserable situation in the Saudi army." It said the kingdom's troops were unhappy with the presence of the more than nearly 300,000 Western military personnel in the Gulf.

It war breaks out, Arab soldiers will turn their weapons on the enemy, and believe me, (the enemy) is not the brave Iraqi army," the announcer said.

It includes reservists from Clarkston, Lewiston, Idaho; Moscow, Idaho; Pullman, Wash.; Oenoke, Idaho; St. John, Wash.; and Spokane, Wash. Only those living within a 50-mile radius of Clarkston were allowed to return to their homes Sunday.

Sunday, the firefighting unit will depart for Fort Lewis for several weeks of training.

The unit's activation order is to run for 90 days, but it is likely to be extended for another 90, said Major Wanda Arceneaux, spokeswoman for the 124th Army Reserve Command.

Repossessing Guardsman's car not OK

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — Prosecutors say a car dealer who repossessed the car of a National Guardsman serving in Saudi Arabia violated an act that protects soldiers from creditors when they're called to active duty.

"It happened the second week we were married," Sally DeRossette, the 19-year-old wife of Matthew M. DeRossette, said Thursday. "It was the only car we had."

The U.S. attorney's office filed the misdemeanor charge Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Jackson against Mike Kavanaugh, who operates Rocking Horse Motors in Vicksburg.

Prosecutors say Kavanaugh repossessed the 1981 Buick on Oct. 17 while DeRossette, 22, was training for Operation Desert Shield at Ft. Rucker, Ala.

DeRossette, a member of the 114th Military Police Company of Clinton, went to Saudi Arabia Nov. 9. He had purchased the car Aug. 17.

Assistant U.S. Attorney James Tucker said Kavanaugh violated the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act of 1940. Violation of the act carries up to a year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Tucker said it appeared that "Mr. Kavanaugh decided to circumvent the court procedures set forth in the act. Creditors need to check to see if they're in compliance because we've got a lot of young men over there."

Baker rebuffs suggestion as oil prices fall

The Associated Press

Secretary of State James A. Baker III on Friday rejected a Soviet envoy's suggestion that a solution to the Persian Gulf crisis be linked to the problem of Israel's occupation of land claimed by Palestinians.

Baker said there could be no rewards for aggression, and no partial solution to the gulf crisis. He spoke in Brussels, Belgium, on the first leg of a 12-day foreign trip that will include talks on the gulf crisis.

At the United Nations, diplomats said Baker was trying to persuade Security Council foreign ministers to come to New York to adopt a resolution authorizing force to drive Iraq from Kuwait.

President Bush was to leave Friday to join Baker for further talks with allies, then spend Thanksgiving with U.S. soldiers in Saudi Arabia. It would be the first presidential visit to front-line troops since the Vietnam war.

Despite the Bush administration's increasing impatience with Saddam Hussein, there have been increasing calls to avoid rushing into war. Egypt, the Soviet envoy and U.S. officials all urged on Thursday that more time be allowed for the U.N. trade sanctions on Iraq to work.

Oil prices fell below $30 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange Friday as traders decided to wait for a market break of war could take some time. The market was off $1.87, or 5.9 percent, to $29.25 a barrel.

Also expressing optimism were seven peace activists, who left London for Baghdad Friday hoping to set up camps on both sides of the Saudi-Kuwait border. They said they hoped to deter any fighting.

A news blackout remained in effect on the second day of the Imminent Thunder military exercise in eastern Saudi Arabia.

The six-day exercise includes a mock U.S. Marine amphibious invasion with air cover and close air and naval support of ground forces, although no live ammunition was to be used.

Defense analysts said the 1,100 combat aircraft taking part were a reminder to the allies have double its air power.

"That must be a very sobering thought for President Saddam Hussein," said Paul Beaver, publisher of Jane's Defense Weekly.

On Thursday, the Soviet Union's top Middle East envoy, Yevgeny Primakov, said the world should do everything possible to persuade Saddam to withdraw from Kuwait — including agreeing to talks on the Palestinian question.

He said some sort of "face-saving" reason should be given for Iraq to leave Kuwait.

Baker said Friday, however, that Washington and Moscow have forged a common position on the gulf crisis. He said they agreed that "we should not link this gulf issue with other issues."

Primakov might have been speaking for himself and not for the Soviet government, Baker suggested.

Saddam has said he might withdraw from Kuwait if Israel pulled out of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, seized in the 1967 Middle East war. But the United States and its allies have said Iraq must withdraw unconditionally.

Baker also said the Bush administration was consulting with its allies on whether to seek a U.N. resolution authorizing the use of military force against Iraq if peaceful means fail.

"It is the view of the United States that force as an option cannot and should not be ruled out," he said.

Baker, also in Brussels for trade talks with the 12-nation European Economic Community, meets Saturday in Geneva with the foreign ministers of Ethiopia, Ivory Coast and Zaire — all Security Council members.

An aide to Baker said Thursday the United States would like to introduce the resolution this month, while its diplomat presides over the council. Yemen, a pro-Iraq member of the 15-nation council, holds the presidency for December.

U.N. diplomats said Baker was consulting with Security Council members on bringing foreign ministers to New York to adopt such a resolution.

"I do not exclude the possibility that in November, the Americans ... may wish to stress the importance of the meeting by holding it at the ministerial level," said the Canadian ambassador to the U.N., Yves Fortin.

Foreign ministers occupy their country's seats on the council only in grave situations.

About 330,000 allied soldiers are stationed in Saudi Arabia. They face 430,000 Iraqi troops deployed in southern Iraq and Kuwait, which Saddam invaded on Aug. 2 in a dispute over oil, land and money.

Indian prime minister wins a confidence vote

NEW DELHI, India (AP)

Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar won a parliamentary vote of confidence Friday and appealed for an end to the sectarian conflict that brought down his predecessor's government.

The vote came after seven hours of acrimonious debate between supporters of the new government and lawmakers who questioned its legitimacy because of the political deals made to form it.

"The country cannot afford confrontation. We cannot go on fighting with each other," Chandra Shekhar told the lower house of Parliament.

The 522-member house voted 269-204 in Chandra Shekhar's favor, formally endorsing his taking over as head of the government.

Fifteen legislators abstained and the rest were absent.

More than 390 people have been killed across India in the past four weeks in Hindu-Muslim riots and in clashes with police over a Hindu fundamentalist group's plan to build a temple at a site now occupied by a mosque.

Chandra Shekhar said he would hold talks with the Hindu World Council to stop its campaign to demolish the mosque in the holy Hindu city of Ayodhya, 310 miles east of New Delhi.

"Even if they do not want to talk to me, I will go on talking to them," he said. "I shall talk to every citizen of India, but there will be no compromise on the unity and integrity of India."

Chandra Shekhar replaced his longtime rival, V.P. Singh.

Cocaine seized in raid on labs

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Police destroyed 17 cocaine-processing laboratories in a series of raids deep in the southeastern Colombian jungle, police said Friday.

In the Caribbean port town of Cartagena, meanwhile, security forces seized 375 pounds of pure cocaine that was being transported in an 18-wheel truck to a clandestine airport, national police spokesman Maj. Jorge Martin said.

The cocaine, hidden in bags labeled "sugar," was destined for export to the United States, Martin said. After finding the drugs, police arrested the truck's driver and two passengers, he added.

In the southeastern-jungle region known as San Jose de Guaviare, anti-narcotics police destroyed 17 drug laboratories and confiscated chemicals and equipment used to process cocaine, Martin said.

He said the drug suspects escaped into surrounding jungle upon hearing the approaching police.

The government of President Cesar Gaviria is pressing on with its anti-drug crackdown despite intimidation from the Medellin cocaine cartel.

In the past three months, the cartel has kidnapped nine journalists, some of whom belong to Colombia's most influential families.

Colombia's Medellin and Cali cartels supply most of the cocaine consumed in the United States and Europe.

Natives protest tests

PAPEETE, French Polynesia (AP) — Islanders seeking independence from France hurled garbage at government buildings and demanded an end to nuclear-weapon testing on French-owned islands.

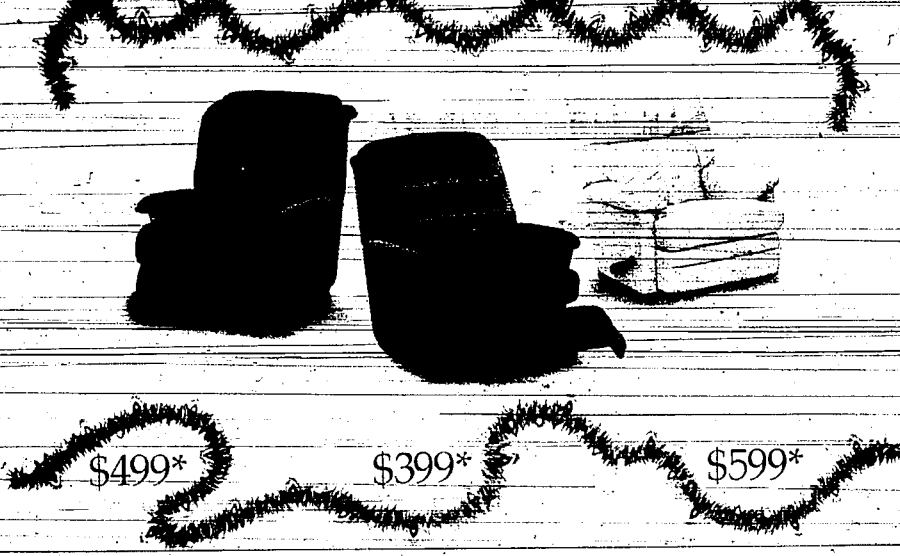

The protest Thursday by about 30 members of the separatist Polynesian Liberation Front took place outside the High Commission of France in Papeete, Tahiti. The protesters dispersed peacefully.

Quake injures many

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Hundreds of Indonesians were injured as they fled their homes and schools during an earthquake that rocked Indonesia's northernmost province, authorities said Friday.

The earthquake, measuring 6.2 on the Richter scale, struck Thursday. It damaged hundreds of buildings and caused landslides that halted traffic between the town of Kutane in Aceh province and the remote district of Blang Kejeran, the police said.

U.S., Czechoslovak ties honored on eve of Bush visit

Wearing a Gorbachev mask, Zdenek Matajovsky of Prague waves an American flag during Friday celebrations.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Czechoslovaks on Friday excitedly awaited President Bush's arrival on a history-making visit coinciding with the first anniversary of the Velvet Revolution that toppled communist rule.

On the eve of his first-ever U.S. presidential visit, Prague officially renamed its railway station in honor of President Woodrow Wilson, who encouraged a "much earlier Czechoslovak push for independence."

The simple ceremony, said Prague Mayor Jaroslav Korn, was a fitting prelude to a presidential visit that would "complete the magic circle" of U.S.-Czechoslovak relations. "As if with a message from our ancestors," he said, "the president will visit for the first time ever."

Within the citadels of power in the post-Cold War Prague government and among the populace at large, excitement—even exhilaration—was in the air. "It's perfect," 24-year-old medical student Tomas Sklmar said of the timing of Bush's visit. "American democracy is the greatest ideal," exulted Karel Kren, who also is studying medicine.

In anticipation of Bush's arrival Saturday, Czechoslovakia's domestic business showed a smiling U.S. president with the inscription, "Thank You! American flags fluttered in the breeze, mounted on elegant buildings alongside Czechoslovakia's national flag of matching red, white and blue.

It's good he's coming on Nov. 17," said Zdenek Matejovsky, a 32-year-old waiter, who waived the American flag and then impulsively hid his face behind a mask of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Bush's trip comes at a period of substantially improved relations between Washington and Prague. Only a week ago, the president signed legislation extending most-favored-nation trade status. Bush at the time called the measure "an important milestone not only in U.S.-Czechoslovak relations, but also in re-integration into the global economy and the community of free nations."

Earlier this fall, in a meeting in New York with Czech President Vaclav Havel, Bush announced he was lifting travel restrictions on Czechoslovakia's diplomats in the United States. Three months earlier, U.S. officials said that Prague had agreed to accept U.S. Peace Corps volunteers.

Bush hosted Havel at the White House, and the playwright and former prisoner, under the communist regime, addressed a joint meeting of Congress.

On Friday, Czechoslovak officials restored Wilson's place in this country's history, cementing ties that stretch back to when Wilson helped his friend Tomas G. Masaryk gain Czech and Slovak independence from the crumbling Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Wilson recognized Masaryk's "de facto government" set up in U.S. exile before independence. Masaryk, a philosopher and acknowledged role model for Havel, became the first head of the new state in 1918.

Prague's main railway station was named after Wilson in gratitude for his help. His name was dropped after the communists seized power in 1948, but remained customary for Prague residents.

Air France strike strands passengers

NICE, France (AP) — A strike by Air France employees shut down the airport at this French Riviera city for a second straight day Friday and stranded thousands of passengers.

The Air France employees went on strike Thursday, claiming that the company's plans to reduce the number of foreign flights to and from Nice could cost the jobs of 300 workers.

Russian leaders take their struggle to the legislature

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Russian leader Boris N. Yeltsin took their power struggle to the legislature Friday, as they demanded different steps to rescue the economy and hold the Soviet Union together.

Gorbachev announced plans to remove military and government officials blocking his reform plans, but indicated he would not ask for the resignation of Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov.

Yeltsin, president of the Russian Federation, demanded Ryzhkov's ouster and the formation of a new leadership with strong representation from the nation's 15 "republics."

Their conflicting speeches showed the two leaders were still far from resolving their differences and ending the paralysis of power in the Soviet Union.

Yeltsin had said after a private meeting with Gorbachev on Sunday that the two leaders would form committees to work out a power-sharing agreement, creating hope for a unified effort to end the country's economic crisis.

But Gorbachev told the Supreme Soviet legislature that Sunday's meeting was merely "routine," and he refused to give the Russian leader more national power.

Dropping his usually robust voice to a near-whisper in the cavernous chamber, Gorbachev said, "In a coalition government, if the Russian government gets any more power, it will mean discrimination against the other republics."

Yeltsin sat stone-faced through Gorbachev's speech.

Immigrants will be sent to the East

BERLIN (AP) — Germany, swamped by immigrants from all parts of the world, will assign 20 percent of all asylum-seekers to the formerly Communist east starting in December, officials said Friday.

West Germany long was popular with refugees because of its generous social benefits and liberal asylum laws crafted after World War II. These now apply in former East German territory since unification on Oct. 3.

The 11 states in western Germany competing for immigrants with the growing numbers of asylum-seekers. They have demanded that Bonn put some of the burden on the five new states in eastern Germany.

The number of asylum-seekers in Germany is expected to top 200,000 this year. Fewer than 10 percent of the applicants are ever expected to be granted refuge, but processing their applications can take years.

Although asylum-seekers are not allowed legally to work, they are eligible for welfare benefits, including government-subsidized housing while their cases are being decided.

The Interior Ministry said Friday that each of the five new states, Saxony, Brandenburg, Mecklenburg-Lower Pomerania, Saxony-Anhalt and Thuringia, must count on receiving 20 percent of asylum applicants a year starting Dec. 1.

Although the western states say they can no longer cope, the new eastern states face far more serious financial difficulties in absorbing the newcomers.

The Economics and Social Science Institute of the German Trade Union says the local governments face a shortage of more than $66 billion to run their communities over the next four years.

Hungary scraps its Soviet-made missiles

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Hungary, which has urged the Warsaw Pact to disband, said Friday it is unilaterally scrapping its Soviet-made ground-to-ground missiles, all capable of carrying nuclear warheads.

The Defense Ministry, which made the announcement, also gave figures on the number of such missiles in other Warsaw Pact nations and said Hungary's destruction of the weapons will be completed by the spring.

The decision, made at Thursday's Cabinet session, was taken to reflect the reduction of East-West tensions and changes within the Warsaw Pact, a government statement said,

IF NOVEMBER 17 IS YOUR BIRTH DAY: You work extremely well under pressure, when there is a crisis, when cause is right and justice is being denied. You are determined, sensual, capable of assuming role of leadership. Cancer, Capricorn persons are attracted to you. Recent objections to partnership or marriage will be overcome following spirited debate, dispute.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)—New Moon position accents mystery, intrigue, sensuality. You'll learn where the money went in connection with partners, creative bookkeeping. Social activity tonight results in profit.

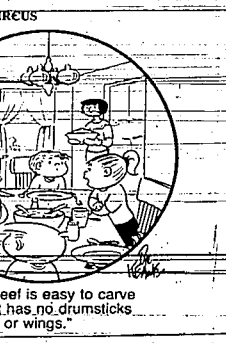

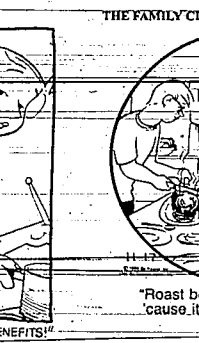

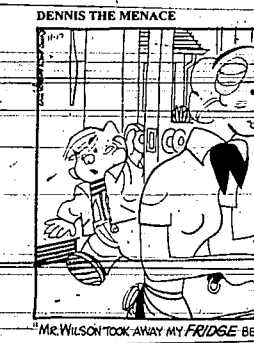

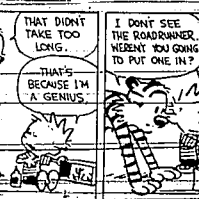

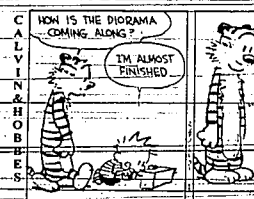

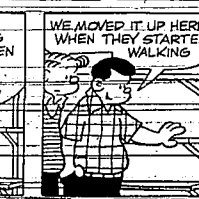

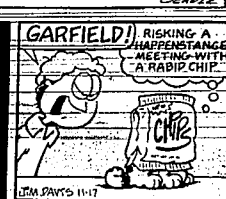

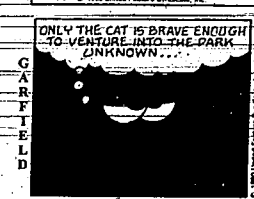

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Law that had retracted will bend in your favor. Lunar position accents image, credibility, partnership, marriage. Aquarian declares, "You have won me over!" You'll get needed tax break.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It's necessary to analyze, synthesize piece together puzzle. Member of the opposite sex discloses, via written message, "I think you're grand!" Spotlight on employment, basic issues, health, dependents.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Family member admits mistake, seeks rapprochement. Be lenient toward abandoning principles. Recent financial loss, be recouped. Gift represents genuine token of affection. Libra involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Attention revolves around real estate, repairs, home, security. Plumbing commands "special notice." You'll have access to information previously withheld. What begins as "something minor" accelerates.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get

A. About 200 frost-free days.

Mayor of Aspen says his dogs are perfectly healthy vegetarians

ASPEN, Colo. (AP) — Mayor Bill Stirling's two dogs might have a bone to pick with their master, who is raising the pets to be strict vegetarians like himself.

"People are curious and amused at first because it is contrary to the popular myth that dogs need to have meat to thrive," Stirling said.

Stirling's household is bound to get the public straight. He said he feeds his dogs carrots, celery, lettuce and new-age commercial dog food that contains no animal products.

Stirling says Glenda, a large malamute, and Emily, a Hungarian sheep dog, "are absolutely thriving in perfect physical health."

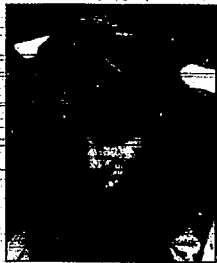

Despite being carnivores, dogs can eat like rabbits and "be healthy on a vegetarian diet if it is done properly," said Aspen veterinarian Scott Dolginow.

Stirling said he and his wife, Katharine Thalberg, also avoid

Ron Reagan will have own syndicated talk show

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Reagan, son of the former president, is getting his own syndicated late-night talk show, a spokesman for the 36-year-old actor said Friday.

The show, to be based in Los Angeles and co-produced by MCA-TV and Fox Television Stations, Inc., will be shown on the seven TV stations owned by Fox, and syndicated to other stations.

Each one-hour program will offer topical talk, comedy and contemporary music in what the show's producers called a "thematically-driven format."

Reagan, 32, left ABC's "Good Morning America" last summer after four years as a contributing reporter.

Cleveland Clinic is now treating emir of Bahrain

CLEVELAND (AP) — The emir of Bahrain is receiving medical care at the Cleveland Clinic, according to a spokesman for the Gulf country's embassy in Washington.

The unidentified official told The Plain Dealer newspaper that Sheikh Isa bin Salman Al Khalifa, 57, flew to Cleveland from Bahrain on Wednesday for a routine checkup.

The Cleveland Clinic is widely known for its coronary expertise and past treatment of leaders from the Middle East. A State Department official said the Arab leader suffered a heart attack Oct. 14.

Hospital officials on Friday refused to confirm the sheik's visit.

Bahrain is supporting the U.S. effort to oust Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

The Khalifa family has ruled the country since 1782. Sheikh Isa became emir in 1961.

Carlene Carter, father plan sentimental journey

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Carlene Carter is planning a sentimental journey with her father, Nashville crooner Carl Smith, on a cable television program.

Carter will perform the song "You Are the One," which Smith originally recorded in 1956 — the year she was born. Carter brought back the tune this year by recording it for her hit album "I Fell in Love."

Smith, 63, who has not performed publicly for five years, also will sing on the "Nashville Now" variety program Monday on The Nashville Network. He will perform his 1971 song "Red Door."

Susan Sizemore, a spokeswoman for the show, said Friday there are no plans for them to sing together.

Carter's mother is country music veteran June Carter Cash, now married to country star Johnny Cash.

Rockefeller Center spruces up for holidays

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a balmy 71 degrees, but the scent of Christmas was in the air Friday as a 75-foot-high Norway spruce was hoisted into place at Rockefeller Center.

The Christmas tree, the 58th erected in front of the skating rink and above the gilded sculpture of Prometheus, will be the main attraction for millions of holiday revelers.

During the next two weeks, crews will decorate the huge spruce with 20,000 multicolored lights that will blink to life Dec. 3 at a ceremony led by Liza Minnelli.

This year's tree was donated by Charles Cenci of Norwalk, Conn., in honor of Cenci's father, who planted the tree in his front yard 61 years ago when it was 6 inches tall.

"I figured a lot of people would enjoy it," Cenci said Thursday as crews prepared to cut it down.

Cenci's sister, Shirley, said their father would have been proud to see the tree become one of New York City's holiday centerpieces.

"I almost cried about 10 times today," Ms. Cenci said as she searched the ground for fallen branches to place in a basket to adorn her parents' graves at Christmas.

The Rockefeller Center Christmas tree tradition began in 1931.

Rejection of heart killed Stormie

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Stormie Jones, the world's first heart-liver transplant recipient, died of an unusual rejection of her transplanted heart, doctors said Friday.

The cause of her death surprised doctors at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, where Stormie had her historic operation in February 1984. It's unusual for heart rejection to occur so long after surgery, said Dr. F. Jay Fricker, a pediatric cardiologist.

"I've never seen it occur or reported in the literature before," he said at a news conference. "It's unique that it happened this late and so acutely."

Stormie died Sunday at Children's Hospital after being rushed from her home in White Settlement, Texas, with a sore throat and fever. She was 13.

Fricker said it's not known why the heart was rejected. He said Stormie showed no signs of heart trouble.

Doctors said they would study whether the unusual rejection was related to the experimental anti-rejection drug Stormie was taking. The drug, FK-506, is being tested only at the University of Pittsburgh hospitals, of which Children's is one.

Meanwhile, Stormie's mother said Thursday she cherished the time she had with her daughter because she knew time was short. "Everything that Stormie did was to me special, because I always knew that some day we wouldn't have Stormie any more."

Lois "Suzy" Purcell said in her first public comments since Stormie died.

In the six years since the historic transplant operation, Stormie had endured organ rejection, hepatitis and a second liver transplant last February.

Mrs. Purcell thanked the hundreds of people she has never met who sent encouraging wishes during Stormie's six-year struggle for life.

Skeletal remains of woman are found

HIGHLAND, Kan. (AP) — Skeletal remains found in a farm field were those of a missing Missouri woman, and a man charged in the slaying of another woman was tied to both deaths, officials said.

The remains found Sunday in the northeast Kansas field were identified Thursday as those of Patricia Diane Rose, 31, of St. Joseph.

An autopsy showed she died of blows to the head, said St. Joseph police spokesman Sgt. Jim Connors.

The body of Crystal Lynn Simmons, 33, also of St. Joseph, was found in the field Monday about 400 yards from the remains of Ms. Rose.

Ms. Simmons also died of blows to the head, officials said.

Marvin L. Irvin, 41, was charged with murder in Ms. Simmons' death. Authorities said he probably also will be charged with a second count.

"We have both physical and witness evidence that would link Irvin with Ms. Rose," said Dwight Scroggins, the Buchanan County, Mo. prosecutor.

The farm where the women were buried is near property once owned by Irvin's family.

Authorities say Irvin also was a suspect in the disappearance of another St. Joseph woman, Micki Jo

West, 19, who has been missing since 1979.

Irvin was held without bond in Buchanan County on a parole violation charge in Iowa. He was convicted in 1988 of threatening a Jefferson, Iowa, woman.

Irvin's attorney sought a gag order Thursday to prevent St. Joseph police and prosecutors from commenting on the case to the media.

"We think it's endangering our client's right to a fair trial," said Buchanan County public defender Timothy D. Ernst.

There are allegations of other crimes ... he has not been charged with.

Board allows ISU to offer doctorate proposal despite objections

POCATELLO (AP) — Despite strong opposition from University of Idaho, the state Board of Education will allow Idaho State University to bring forth a proposal for a doctorate in educational leadership.

The proposed program concentrates on development of educational skills for students seeking high-level administrative positions in education and in the educational components of business, government and industry.

The only similar program in Idaho is at Moscow. Programs are offered at the University of Montana at Missoula and University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

ISU officials told the board's Academic Affairs and Programs Committee Thursday there is a demonstrated need for the program in eastern Idaho. Colleen Mahoney, board member from Lewiston and chairman of the committee, asked ISU to develop the full proposal and Idaho to deliver ideas for program delivery to the Pocatello area.

"There are at least 40 administrators and a large number of principals, not to mention a great number of people from the INEL that are interested in going on in their education," said Mike Gallagher, ISU vice president for academic affairs.

"First, we must ask the question whether the state can afford two doctoral programs for a population basis of 1 million people," Bell said. "We believe there is little justification and much to recommend against a duplicate program at Idaho State University."

University backs INEL facility plan

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho Falls, site of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratories, needs more research facilities, and the University of Idaho wants to play a leadership role in their development, school officials say.

According to an Idaho report presented to the Idaho Board of Education here Thursday, rapid expansion of the INEL's research programs in new energy technology and support for environmental restoration and waste management have created a heavy demand for research facilities and technical education programs.

Newer the UI Foundation's University Place building at Idaho Falls for a proposed $7.5 million state-funded building, to be jointly operated by Idaho State University and UI at Idaho Falls, would address the need for more research facilities, the report said.

"Lack of such research facilities limits not only the INEL in its efforts to attract research funding, but precludes the state from realizing the economic benefits of technology transfer to existing and new industries," the report said.

UI students at Idaho Falls also have difficulty completing graduate education in programs involving course work or theses that require research facilities, UI officials said.

"There is (an) opportunity for the UI to provide leadership in assisting INEL, the state of Idaho and itself by providing new research facilities at University Place through the UI Foundation," according to UI's report. "Conceptually, the facility would consist of approximately 75,000-square-foot, housing a research laboratory facility."

Thomas O. Bell, academic vice president, said the concept of the facility has been tossed around with INEL officials for years.

"It is a concept we believe is important for the universities and INEL. We will continue to explore it."

The University of Idaho provides graduate programs in engineering and sciences at Idaho Falls. ISU provides undergraduate general education courses and a graduate program in business administration for INEL employees and contractors.

This fall, UI enrolled 1,303 students and ISU enrolled 1,920 students at Idaho Falls.

UI is currently expanding its offerings at Idaho Falls to include management engineering and computer engineering, according to the report.

Gov. Andrus gains a county in late returns

BOISE (AP) — The tabulation of results from Idaho's Nov. 6 general election isn't complete yet, but it appears Gov. Cecil Andrus has gained a county.

In unofficial results reported last election night, Andrus lost Lemhi, Jefferson and Franklin counties to Republican challenger Roger Fairchild. But tabulation of the numbers in the secretary of state's office Friday found a transposed number, and Andrus actually carried Franklin County.

Penny Yursara, chief of the election bureau, said Andrus had 1,401 votes in Franklin, 1,348 to Fairchild. A number was transposed in election night reports, giving Andrus 1,041 votes, apparently losing to Fairchild by 307 votes.

Experts say efficiency will be key to meeting future energy needs

BOISE (AP) — Experts agree efficiency, and its impact on the economy and environment, will be the key factor in meeting energy needs of both Idaho and the nation in the coming century.

Efficiency is being seen as a resource for the first time, Peter Johnson, former Bonneville Power Administration chief, said Friday. "I predict that 50 years from now we're going to be five times as efficient as we are now in the use of energy," Johnson joined Idaho Power Co.

Chairman Joe Marshall and Idaho Public Utilities Commission President Joe Miller as panelists at the Idaho — Centennial — Commission's Second Century Symposium, "Visualizing The Future," which attracted more than 800 people to the Boise Convention Center.

About 100 attended a segment on "Providing Energy in Tomorrow's Environment: The Challenge," moderated by David B. Struhs, staff director of the President's Council on Environmental Quality.

The panelists agreed that technology offers the promise of solving many of the problems clouding the nation's energy future, but a public consensus also must be developed on how the technology should be applied and what economic and environmental prices should be paid.

Marshall, representing the state's biggest electric utility, said sustaining economic growth at even a modest level will require a realization of those prices and a willingness to live with them.

And even though renewable and "exotic" energy resources — such as solar, wind and hydrogen — might provide more realistic alternatives in the future, he said, planning must be based on what is available or can be developed now.

"We as a state are going to have to accept growth in electrical generation and transmission facilities," Marshall said. "We are living in a dream world if we place our entire future ... on conservation and demand-side planning alone."

Johnson, who serves on a National Academy of Science committee auditing the performance of the U.S. Department of Energy, said Bush administration officials developing a national energy strategy are stressing "least-cost" energy resources that make the best possible use of available generating capacity.

Struhs said there is a subtle difference between that emphasis and the more spartan image associated with a reliance on conservation, since using resources more efficiently should not involve "a sacrifice in standard of living or comfort."

"Efficiency will be the watchword of the '90s in my opinion," he said.

Johnson said other countries are ahead of the United States in increasing efficiency, and are proving it need not be a source of hardship.

The Japanese already are at least three times more efficient than we are in the use of all energy resources, and don't seem to be suffering for it," he said.

Miller said rate structures will play a significant role in helping to provide an incentive for efficiency, but he and Johnson said there also is a growing ability to more precisely quantify other costs involved.

State legislators may oppose new drug law

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho and Washington state officials admit they were caught unawares by reports Congress would require them to suspend driver licenses of convicted drug offenders — or face a cut-in-federal highway dollars.

How lawmakers would react to the federal mandate was unclear. It is similar to the provision which provoked a 55-mph national speed limit during the 1970s and a standardizing age-a-year-old legal-drinking-age-a decade later.

On one hand, legislators may like the goal of discouraging drug usage. Yet, they may dislike what some see as federal "blackmail."

"We have a tendency to resist that sort of thing until the last minute, complain and do all of those things because we don't like to be blackmailed," said Idaho Senate Democratic Leader Bruce Sweeney of Lewiston, who sits on the Transportation Committee. "But we generally end up doing it because we can't afford to lose highway dollars."

Meanwhile, Washington state Sen. Darwin Nealey, R-LaCrosse, questioned whether the measure would hit rural areas harder. But he could not predict how the Washington Legislature would respond.

"It just seems like we're kind of a little messianic on drivers convicted of a drug offense. The cut would increase to 10 percent Oct. 1, 1993."

Idaho receives up to $100 million a year in federal highway funds. Washington picked up $303 million in funds last year.

More college freshmen come to Idaho than leave it each year

MOSCOW (AP) — Out-of-state students are more likely to cross the border to attend Idaho colleges than Idaho residents are to seek higher education outside the state.

But if non-Idahoans attending Ricks College in Rexburg are excluded, a greater number of first-time freshmen are migrating out of Idaho than are coming into the state.

More than half of Idaho's out-of-state college students enroll at Ricks, a private, two-year college operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, according to statistics compiled by the Idaho Board of Education.

In fall 1988, the most recent year for which figures are available, 4,802 freshmen entered Idaho to enroll in colleges and universities. At the same time, 2,367 Idaho students went out of state to start college.

At the University of Idaho, 298 of the 1,368 first-time freshmen, or 22 percent, came to Moscow from outside Idaho. That makes UI the second favorite destination of out-of-staters but far behind the 2,492 who went to Ricks.

Two Utah schools were the favored destination of Idaho freshmen looking to leave their home state. They are Brigham Young University, also run by the Mormon Church, and Utah State University at Logan, which attracted 140 Idahoans.

By state, students were most likely to come to Idaho from Washington, Utah and California.

Recount sought in legislative election

GRANGEVILLE — Republican Twila Hornbeck of Grangeville wants a recount in her Idaho House of Representatives election, which she led most of the night but wound up losing by 23 votes.

Orofino Mayor Paul Decelle, a Democrat, was 100 votes behind Hornbeck in unofficial election night reports. But Lewis County Auditor Cathy Larson came up with another 128 votes for Decelle the next morning, putting him ahead of Hornbeck by 23 votes.

Larson said the extra votes came from a single precinct that hadn't been plugged into the county's computer election night.

Airlines discontinues Idaho Falls route

IDAHO FALLS — With American Airlines pulling out of Idaho Falls, airplane seats will be harder to find and probably more expensive in the city.

An American Airlines regional manager told employees Wednesday that the airline would be cutting its Idaho Falls service beginning Jan. 7 because of high fuel costs.

Lise Olson, an American spokeswoman in Dallas, said American is reviewing its entire route system and cutting its service to several cities across the country. But Idaho Falls is the only city to lose all its American service.

Tom Silvester of Murdoch Travel in Idaho Falls said American has kept Idaho Falls air fares competitive and "pretty reasonable." But with American gone, Delta Airlines, the only other major carrier serving the city, will be less likely to offer discounted fares, he said.

UI officials uphold penalty for hazing

MOSCOW — University of Idaho officials have upheld sanctions imposed by the university's Inter-Fraternity Council against the local Sigma Alpha Epsilon chapter for alleged hazing of its pledges.

The sanctions were unveiled Thursday by Inter-Fraternity Council President Fred LeClaire. They include immediate suspension for Sigma Alpha Epsilon from council activities such as rush, Greek Week and voting.

LeClaire said the suspension would be reviewed by the council's tribunal when Sigma Alpha Epsilon's international organization announces its response to the hazing allegations, including any sanctions it might impose against the Moscow chapter.

ISU rural health program reconsidered

POCATELLO — A proposed Idaho State University program aimed at improving rural health care got a new lease on life when a state Board of Education panel agreed to consider the plan.

A preliminary proposal for a family practice residency program was rejected last week by the Special Health Programs Committee, an advisory group to the Board of Education's Academic Affairs and Programs Committee.

Financial concerns and lack of demonstrated support from area hospitals were cited in the committee's recommendation.

Supporters maintained that the rejection was based solely on a hope-of-intent, which does not typically contain the information the committee found lacking.

Montana fire crews battle last hot spots

HELENA, Mont. — Helicopters ferried small firefighting crews into steep, timbered canyons Friday to battle the remnants of a three-day, 35,000-acre blaze, which fire officials said was all but under control.

"We're winding down," fire information officer Dave Turner said. "They made some pretty remarkable progress today."

Fire officials said the fire that burned a state game range and other timberland in Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument should be fully contained by Saturday evening.

Jimenez new Utah Hispanic Affairs head

SALT LAKE CITY — Gov. Norm Bangerter has appointed Ruben J. Jimenez as director of the Governor's Office of Hispanic Affairs.

Jimenez, who has been manager for equal opportunity at US West Inc., fills a vacancy created when Maria Ortiz left Utah to take a position with a national minority affairs group.

"The Hispanic community is a great contributor to Utah's quality of life," Bangerter said Friday. "We look forward to the leadership Mr. Jimenez will provide to the Hispanic community as we work together to improve the quality of life for all of Utah's citizens."

Civil Liberties Union files suit over prayer during ceremony

REXBURG (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union has filed on its threat to sue the Madison School District over prayer at school activities.

The ACLU filed a lawsuit Friday in U.S. District Court in Boise on behalf of two Madison County families who claim the district is violating their constitutional rights by allowing prayer at graduation ceremonies and before athletic events.

The plaintiffs are listed as Jane Doe and her two children, X and Y Doe, and David and Diane Roe and their child, R Roe.

ACLU attorney Stephen Pevar of Denver said the suit was filed because the district is violating a prohibition against public schools being used as vehicles for religious teaching or activities.

"Parents have a right to expect that the public schools will remain absolutely neutral in religious matters," he said. "Parents who wish to have prayer in school should place their children in private schools."

Ann Hancock, chairman of the Madison School Board, said she would not comment on the lawsuit until the papers are served by a federal marshal.

"Our problem is they have been threatening this so long," she said. "It is not appropriate for us to comment until it is official."

The school board has tentatively scheduled a meeting Tuesday to respond to the lawsuit. Hancock, four other school board members and Superintendent Chris Mattocks are named individually as defendants.

Pevar said the plaintiffs filed their complaint anonymously because they fear reprisal and harassment from people in the community or within the school," Pevar said.

The ACLU first threatened suit against the district in June after several families complained that the relationship between the Rexburg schools and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints violates the constitutional separation of church and state.

In response, the Madison School Board agreed to halt some practices, such as allowing Mormon seminary instructors to conduct parent-teacher conferences in the schools. But it said it would continue allowing student-initiated, student-led prayer at graduations and in locker rooms before athletic events.

School officials, hoping to avoid a costly legal battle, also agreed to abide by court decisions over prayer issues pending in Utah. The ACLU has brought similar suits against Granite and Alpine districts in Utah in an attempt to ban prayer in that state's 40 school districts.

Granite and Alpine contend banning graduation prayers would deprive students of their constitutional rights to free speech. The ACLU contends the districts' purpose in having prayers is to advance or endorse religion, and it is wrong to use public funds to promote prayer.

The group also has been considering a lawsuit against the Grangeville School District over administrators' refusal to stop prayer at commencement ceremonies without a court order.

Snake River Alliance urges hearings on possible Hanford radiation release

BOISE (AP) — The Snake River Alliance is urging Gov. Cecil Andrus to schedule hearings early next year in a new $5 million federal program for people who may have been impeded by radiation from the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington.

The latest National Defense Authorization Act includes $5 million for health advice and medical referrals for citizens of Idaho, Washington and Oregon who might have been affected by past Hanford radiation releases.

"It's important that the public, and in particular northern Idaho's Hanford downwinders, are involved right from the beginning in designing this program," said Kerry Cooke, executive director, in a letter to Andrus.

"So we've asked Gov. Andrus to schedule public hearings in early 1991. We've also asked Gov. Andrus to work quickly to establish Idaho's part in this tri-state project," the letter said.

Andrus is vacationing in Hawaii, but Press Secretary Marc Johnson said the letter has been sent to David L. Humphrey, deputy director of the Department of Health and Welfare. Humphrey is coordinator of the new state oversight committee on the Department of Energy and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Johnson said Humphrey will be asked to review the new federal legislation and make a recommendation on what the state should do in response to the Snake River Alliance request.

Cooke said the alliance has high hopes for the program.

"It's encouraging that the federal government is admitting that those people who might have been harmed by federal government programs should be acknowledged and helped," she said. "It's the least the downwinders deserve, and it is a start in the direction of public education."

"We've asked Secretary of Energy Watkins to act immediately to reprogram funds so that money will be available for the start-up of the Hanford downwinders health program," Cooke said the letter to Andrus asked creation of a "high-visibility post" to coordinate the program "because we think a strong tri-state show of intent will gain public confidence in the program."

A plan for implementation must be submitted to Congress by May 5.

The Snake River Alliance, comprising more than 1,100 members, describes itself as a citizen organization working for peace, reversal of the nuclear arms race and responsible solutions to nuclear waste.

Twin Falls seeks status of All-American City

TWIN FALLS — The city is going to prepare an application for All-American City status with the National Civic League.

David McAlindin, city economic development director, said the application will cost $400, but winning the designation would pay off in public relations and possibly as an economic development tool.

"It certainly would go on the top of my letterhead," he told the City Council.

McAlindin said Twin Falls already is doing many of the things the designation is given for, such as citizen participation, volunteerism and philanthropy, community vision and pride. Coverdell Avenue is Idaho's first city with the designation, he said.

"I don't see any downside to it," McAlindin said.

But it is not an easy designation to receive, said Tom Courtney, the city manager. This year, only nine cities received the honor, he said.

The council told McAlindin to prepare the application and if there are no hidden costs to send it in.

Twin Falls County Fair 75th anniversary theme sought

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Fair will celebrate its 75th birthday in 1991 and the public is invited to help choose a theme for the week-long event. The person submitting the winning theme will receive two season passes to the fair, along with two reserved rodeo tickets and carnival tickets.

Entries can be brought to the Twin Falls County Fair or mailed to P.O. Box 257, Filer, 83328. Entries must be received by Dec. 3. The Fair Board will choose the winner Dec. 10.

Airport advisory panel seat will be available in January

TWIN FALLS — A spot on the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Airport Advisory Board will open in January and interested citizens are urged to apply for the position.

Airport Manager Ron Menden said applicants should send a resume and introductory letter to the board. The address is: P.O. Box 1907, City of Twin Falls, Air Board.

Condoms that may not meet standards recalled voluntarily

BOISE — Condoms distributed throughout Idaho are included in a voluntary recall by the manufacturer, Safetex Corp. of Colonial Heights, Va.

Four brands of condoms may not meet federal standards established by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to prevent infections.

They are: Saxon Spermicide, Saxon Wet-Lube, Embrace and Gold Circle Coin.

Shipping records show that some Saxon Spermicide and Saxon Wet-Lube were purchased by the Department of Health and Welfare for distribution through the state's seven district health departments. Distribution has stopped.

"The recall covers less than 20 percent of the condoms we have distributed in the last year," said Susan Ault, family planning coordinator for Health and Welfare.

Transportation Department rejects Big Wood bridge bids

BOISE — The Idaho Transportation Department has rejected all five bids received for replacement of two bridges over the Big Wood River north of Ketchum.

The project will be re-advertised within a few weeks, officials said Friday.

The department announced Nov. 2 that Cannon Builders Inc. of Blackfoot was the apparent low bidder on the job. But the company's bid of $1,130,480 — as well as four other bids received — were considered too high and rejected by the department's contract administration office.

The project calls for removing two narrow bridges over the North Fork of the Big Wood River on Idaho Highway 75 and replacing them with two new "prestressed" concrete bridges. Crews also will widen and pave approaches to the highway.

Transportation officials said they hope to have the project completed by next summer. A starting date will be set when the contract is awarded.

Twin Falls schools unsure about impact of ruling

By Brad Bowlin and Kim Wall
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — There are too many children in Twin Falls' kindergarten through third-grade classrooms, thanks to a judge's ruling Thursday that invalidates the state superintendent of schools' formula for figuring class sizes.

Fourth District Judge Robert Newhouse of Boise sided with the Idaho Education Association in a lawsuit against Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction.

Until now, Evans has been counting art, music and special education teachers toward fulfilling the 20-to-1 student-teacher ratio for grades K-3.

In its suit, the IEA disputed that formula, saying it was contrary to what the Legislature intended when it allocated funds to help districts achieve the 20-to-1 ratio.

"In order to give meaning to the statutory construction and legislative intent it appears to this court that each school within a school district housing grades K-3 must use the monies appropriated to accomplish class size reduction to a 20-1 pupil/teacher ratio," Newhouse said.

Under Evans' method, the Twin Falls School District was in compliance with the state's ratio, said Terrell Donich, superintendent.

Without counting specialized teachers that often do not have full class loads, the district's student-teacher ratio is higher than 20-to-1 in each of the targeted grades.

In Twin Falls kindergarten classes, there are 22 students for every teacher, in first grade, the ratio is 21.8-to-1; in second grade there are 23.2 students per teacher and in third grade the ratio is 24.3-to-1. Overall, the ratio for the four classes is 22-to-1, Donich said.

The 1990 Legislature earmarked $13.7 million to reduce class sizes in kindergarten through third-grade classrooms.

Although Judge Newhouse ordered Evans to gather more information from school districts about how they plan to use the class size funds before distributing any more money, Donich said he isn't sure how Twin Falls schools will be affected.

"It could mean nothing would change this year," he said.

Evans could waive the requirement since school districts have already spent the money the Legislature allocated for reducing class sizes, Donich said.

United Way won't achieve fund goal by Thanksgiving

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The United Way of Magic Valley's annual fundraising campaign will not reach its goal by the scheduled date, but officials are optimistic that this year's drive will raise more money than last year.

The United Way crossed the halfway mark this week, reaching $140,984.73, but "we're not, obviously, going to make it" to the $265,000 goal by Thanksgiving, said Kathy Williams, United Way executive director.

The money is coming in, and most of the large corporate donors are giving more money this year than in the past, Williams said. It's just taking longer than expected for the accounts to fill up.

"We're really optimistic," she said. "We are seeing some really nice increases across the board increases."

This year's early campaign start may be partly blame for the slow arrival of many accounts, Williams said. The 1990 campaign began Sept. 1, a month earlier than in past years.

Minus old debt, Farm Credit Bank would be in black

By Mark Kim
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If the Farm Credit Bank of Spokane, Wash., were not still recovering from the disastrous 1980s, it would have made a net profit of $6.8 million in 1990's third quarter, President Doyle Cook said this week.

But because the bank shelled out $50.4 million during the quarter to pay off debts incurred during the 1980s to keep the bank afloat, it posted a $43.6 million loss.

In the third quarter of 1989, the bank lost $24.2 million.

Cook sees 1990's performance as a considerable improvement, considering that the big losses were expected and were paid for out of $88 million in bail-out funds received during the quarter.

"We're very pleased with the success of our financial recovery plan to date, and our financial results have been better than expected."

The bank serves southern Idaho through the Interstate Federal Land Bank and the Interstate Production Credit Association, as well as the Eastern Idaho PCA.

During the mid 1980s, the bank's predecessor, Federal Land Bank of Spokane, endured huge losses following a downturn in farm real estate values. The loss was $272.6 million in 1986, because many borrowers couldn't pay their loans and because the bank provided $136 million to founder, Farm Credit System banks in the Midwest.

Last summer, the bank received an $88 million bailout from the Farm Credit System Financial Corporation, which was formed in 1987 to save the troubled Farm Credit System.

The bank has been rebuilding since January, trying to regain its financial footing.

"You're going to see a considerable improvement in Spokane's operation," Cook said in a telephone interview. "We will be having a strong, viable organization."

Cook attributed the bank's improved financial picture to improvement in the agricultural economy and improvement in the association's marketing and customer service efforts.

The district's current net interest margin to average earning assets of 1.44 percent was substantially higher than the .5 percent reported for the first nine months of 1989.

More loans have been paid up, Doyle said. The district's non-performing loans — loans on which the borrower is not making payments — declined from $425.5 million at Dec. 31, 1989 to $405 million as of Sept. 30 as a result of the improved agricultural economy and improved repayment ability of the district's borrowers.

Despite aggressive pursuit of delinquent farmers, few have gone into foreclosures and bankruptcies, Doyle said.

"Our foreclosures and bankruptcies are down considerably," he said. "We're doing our best to work with farmers and restructure their debts."

Nonetheless, even though 67 percent of the problem loans were current at the end of the quarter, the long-term outlook for these loans is "still in question," Cook said.

Contributing to the 1990 earnings picture was approximately $18.9 million in interest income from collections of non-performing loans, as well as gains of approximately $2.6 million on the sale of "acquired properties."

Aggressive marketing brought in $88.4 million in new long-term loans at the bank's Federal Land Banks, compared with $82 million last year. Total short-term

UI looks at fish lab sites

By Mark Kim
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The University of Idaho is looking at three possible sites for a new southern Idaho fish laboratory.

"That will be a research facility, primarily aimed at commercial hatchery needs," said Ernie Brannon, aquaculture specialist at the university's Moscow campus.

All three proposed sites lie along the Snake River. One is near the Twin Falls sewage plant, another is near Hagerman, and the third is near the Magic Valley's Idaho Department of Fish and Game's hatchery west of Twin Falls.

"We'd like to be as close to Twin Falls as possible," Brannon said. That would allow staffers to work closely with College of Southern Idaho researchers, he said.

When completed in 1992, the $2 million lab will employ three or four full-time researchers.

"I'd say by summer 1992, we'll probably be in operational mode," Brannon said.

Already, the university has gotten $500,000 in federal matching funds for architects' fees and other planning expenses for this and other new construction projects.

"We have the matching funds committed for the first phase, so we can spend the money in February to hire an architect to design and engineer ... the southern Idaho aquaculture facility," said Gary Lee, director of the University's experiment stations, in a press release.

The new building will contain the laboratory's administrative offices, indoor troughs, a holding facility and outdoor ponds.

The lab will permit research on warm- and cold-water species, Brannon said. The university wants to use spring water in the lab.

Wood River Valley's cookie airlift successful, founder says

By Barbara Newwert
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The cookie airlift that sent hundreds of dozens of homemade cookies to servicemen stationed in Saudi Arabia for the Desert Shield project has been deemed a "fantastic" success.

Spearheaded by Ketchum resident John Martinson, the goodwill mission brought together several hundred boxes of cookies to provide a bit of holiday cheer for servicemen overseas as well as airmen stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base.

"We've got to show them we support them," Martinson said as he praised the efforts of the local community as well as people of the Magic Valley.

The goodwill gesture provided enough boxes of cookies to fill a van and a suburban to the brim.

senior citizen centers throughout the Magic Valley.

The last load was sent to Mountain Home Air Force Base last week where the boxes will be individually addressed and shipped to servicemen in time for the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons.

Martinson said that if our servicemen are stationed in the Gulf next spring or even next Christmas, he may possibly coordinate another goodwill effort — this time sending much needed reminders of home such as letters, local newspapers, sports results and magazines.

Heyburn audit gives city clean financial bill of health

By Lynda Body
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — City officials received a clean bill of health from auditors Evans and Beck for fiscal year 1990.

"The audit went very well this year, as good as ever," Evans said.

During the regular meeting Wednesday night, the auditors told council members that the city budget is in a sound financial condition.

Revenue exceeded expenditures for last year, Evans said.

Evans also told the council that the water and sewer department is not making enough money to replace or make major repairs to the system. This is typical of cities, he said.

Generally, cities rely on grants for repair or replacement of these systems. This is true, he said, because cities do not charge enough for these services to cover costs.

A draft policy regarding retention and review of city records was discussed. Action is expected to be taken at the next council meeting.

The policy complies with recent state laws regarding public access to city records as well of retention.

City Superintendent Al Hodge has placed a stop work order on the contractor pouring curb and gutter for the city. Work is expected to resume in the spring, when the weather is more favorable, he said.

Seven applicants were tested for the vacant police officer position. The police chief will make a recommendation to the council at a later date.

The new fire station is nearly complete, Hodge reported. He said he expects the work to be completed within the next week.

City crews have spent the past few days flushing fire hydrants, Hodge said. He said the job is almost complete.

State education board OKs salary policy for deans, vice presidents

POCATELLO (AP) — The state Board of Education has given final approval to a policy using a 10-year-old list of pay levels for deans and vice presidents at similar institutions in other states as a guide for setting administrators' salaries in Idaho's university system.

The 6-1 vote late Thursday in Pocatello came after sometimes heated arguments by deans and administrators over the policy. He said a new list of "peer" institutions and whether the board was exerting too much control over routine operations at the schools.

Board members, finally, decided against approving a new list of schools outside Idaho to use in comparing pay levels, citing concerns that university officials might use it to justify faculty and administrator salaries higher than the board is prepared to accept.

Board President Gary Fay of Twin Falls argued against using any peer lists as a guideline for setting administrative salaries, but finally joined those voting for the policy. He said it could be amended later.

Karl Shurtliff of Boise, one of the two newest board members, cast the only vote against the policy drafted and tentatively approved last month. He said administrative pay should be set by the board on an "ad hoc basis," using its own best judgment. "We don't care what they pay the dean of the College of Education at Arizona State University," one of those currently listed as a University of Idaho "peer institution," Shurtliff said.

"I submit the answer to what we should pay could not be found here, on this board, in the collective wisdom of our people who run our universities and in the good sense of the people of Idaho," he said. "I'm not willing to give to people outside the state of Idaho the ability to set pay levels for our deans and vice presidents. And that's what this policy does."

But other board members accused Shurtliff of micro-management. "This board is spending its time buying light bulbs when it should be spending its time improving public education," said Keith Blackfoot of Blackfoot, who was appointed along with Shurtliff last spring by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The controversy over administrative salaries erupted last summer when University of Idaho President Elizabeth Zinser said they should be boosted significantly at the Moscow school to attract qualified applicants. She said she was even willing to raise some above her own annual level — $120,000.

Meanwhile, the Board of Education delayed for two months consideration of a guideline on student fee increases after its Finance Committee approved a compromise between student leaders and Idaho State University officials.

Board members not on the Finance Committee wanted more time to study the agreement.

The guideline would cap student fee increases in the spring at 2 percent above the Consumer Price Index and tie fee hikes to similar percentage increases in student financial aid.

Shurtliff, however, said increasing financial aid might not be enough to offset higher fees that could be pricing students out of the higher education market.

"Education at our institutions isn't just for those individual students," he said. "It's also for the public good."

President signs water pact with Idaho tribes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush has signed a landmark water rights agreement with the Shoshone-Bannock Indian Tribes over use of the Snake River, although he objects to a provision Congress added late in the process. Bush announced Friday he had just signed the Fort Hall Indian Water Rights Act of 1990, following five years of negotiations between tribal attorneys, and federal and state officials.

The negotiated settlement allocates the river about 580,000 acre-feet of water per year from the Snake River, along with $22 million in federal funds for the tribal development fund.

"I applaud the spirit of compromise that allowed the parties to resolve their differences without the need to resort to costly and often divisive litigation by which many other western water disputes are decided," Bush said.

The president praised the resolution for quantifying the tribal water rights, protecting the interests of other water users and finalizing all disputes and litigation over the river water. It also does not require significant new storage or irrigation projects.

Bush said late in the legislative process and without administration comment, Congress included an objectionable provision in the legislation. He said it could be interpreted to allow the tribes to collect money from the Claims and Judgment Fund that the act pays them, if the money was not appropriated by Congress to the Shoshone-Bannock within a specified period.

He said that could circumvent the normal appropriations process and had an unwarranted use of the fund.

"I am quite concerned... that the objectionable provision might become a precedent for the inclusion of similar provisions in future legislation, which would not be acceptable to the administration," Bush said. He has directed the secretary of the Interior and the U.S. attorney general to watch for those types of provisions in the future, which he vowed to turn down.

The water pact still must be accepted by the tribal membership and the Idaho Legislature. One group of Shoshone has voiced opposition to it, saying it was created without telling them the ramifications. But tribal attorneys support the agreement as the best deal for the Shoshone-Bannocks.

Task force wants changes to boost Hispanic education

BOISE (AP) — Requiring basic language instruction in public schools may sound like an extreme suggestion, but it is one of many that could help Idaho's future, according to a new state report.

That and other far-reaching recommendations are part of a report by a state Task Force on Hispanic Education planned to present Friday to the state Board of Education.

"We're talking about some fairly radical stuff," task force Chairman Sam Byrd said Thursday.

Byrd said the report is one of a large number of its future workbooks. Byrd said the number of Hispanics is believed to have grown to 10 to 14 percent of Idaho's population.

The task force, headed by the state Board of Education, was commissioned in June to investigate the state's Hispanic education system.

If the board adopts the recommendations, it will have to look for funding from the Legislature.

State GOP leader says party must get back to hard work

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Republicans need to get back to the strong ideas — and hard work — that made the party dominant in Idaho politics for many years, says a GOP leader.

And that includes more than just trying to limit the growth of government and spending, says Larry Eastland, Idaho's political consultant, pollster and possible candidate in the 1992 congressional election. Eastland on Friday sent out statements statewide, designed as a message to Republicans, who suffered heavy defeats in the Nov. 6 general election.

The GOP, which has controlled the Idaho Legislature for 30 years, lost two seats in the Senate and fell into a 21-21 tie. Democrats gained seven seats in the House, one state office and one congressional seat.

Eastland said "Republicans must realize that it is not enough for the party to simply try to limit government. Too many issues are not solved and too many needs are not met in a fast-changing world to leave it at that," he said.

"It is our job as Republicans in Idaho to take the smarter road of private enterprise solutions to public issues in contrast to the Democrats' all elected officials."

His suggestions might bump into other Idaho Republican leaders.

Rep. Larry Craig, shortly after he was elected to the U.S. Senate, said he won with a conservative program and saw no reason to change it.

Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Blackfoot, assistant floor leader, also said he fell Republicans lost ground this year because they stayed "front-right-wing politics, and should return to more conservative ideas."

Eastland suggested Republicans should take the lead working for several things:

— A unified university system, with one chancellor for all of Idaho's higher education. That could cut overhead, streamline departments, allow for campus specialization and allocate resources more efficiently.

— Initiatives to promote "a wide array of efficient recycling companies" to recover potentially billions of dollars in wasted resources.

— Initiatives "to bring government back to the people and out of the hands of the professional officeholders." Included would be limits on terms for both federal and state officials, restrictions on money pumped into elections by special-interest groups and full-compliance of interest and disclosure legislation for all elected officials.

"Why not reconsider the property tax as the basis of school funding? We need to pursue a broader tax base for education that is more fair and equitable," he said.

Eastland said Republicans need to get back to the basics of politics, such as good grassroots involvement, revitalization of precincts, better information gathering on voter attitude, more efforts to raise money and early training for new candidates.

"Additionally, our party has to look at the new demographics of our people here in Idaho," Eastland said. He said a lot of new people have moved into the state in the last 10 years.

"These new Idahoans won't vote Republican just because we ask them out of party loyalty. They are educated, independent and well-informed. They demand real answers, not platitudes. They don't accept tradition-based platforms. They demand solution-based programs," he said.

Eastland also said Republicans no longer have the luxury of in-fighting, which handed some 1990 elections to the Democrats.

"There was a time when in many parts of the state, Republicans could say, 'That's your problem in Roter. Well, now it's everybody's problem,'" he said, about the divisions loans at the Production Credit Associations increased 19.3 percent to $457.5 million as of Sept. 30, compared with $383 million Dec. 31, while total long-term loans outstanding declined 3.9 percent to $2.2 billion.

Cook said the bank is shying away from risky loans based on the value of farmland and basing its lending on farmers' ability to pay back the loans.

"We're doing a much better job of looking at cash flow," he said. "Certainly in farm lending we have gone to cash-flow financing."

Capital within the district rose 22.9 percent to $201.1 million at the end of the third quarter, compared with $163 million at the end of 1989. The increase in total capital was attributed primarily to the bank's receipt of $88.6 million in financial assistance, which was partially offset by net operating losses and net equity requirements.

Other elements of the district's financial recovery plan are progress in the Interstate Production Credit Association and the Interstate Federal Land Bank, which serve portions of southern Idaho, ex-going to take a while," Williams said. One of the United Way's largest contributors, Universal Frozen Foods, is expected to bring in its donation around Dec. 1, she said.

Williams said she would like to meet to ask their stockholders to merge the two associations in December. That will help save on administrative costs.

The Farm Credit Bank of Spokane provides $2.7 billion of agricultural credit to stockholders in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, and Alaska.

Captains of industry offer advice during National Bible Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Some captains of industry offer a perennially repeated message to their fellow Americans — read the Bible each day. It's the key to good production.

A group founded by business people has been stressing that advice for half a century in its sponsorship of National Bible Week, which this year is Nov. 18-25.

On the 50th anniversary observance of the event, the current national chairman, Richard M. DeVos, president of Amway Corp., said: "My goal is to encourage every American to make daily Bible reading a personal commitment. God interacts with us in many ways. I believe one of the best ways to find and follow him is through the pages of your Bible."

Special events for the week are planned in about 10,000 communities, along with public service media ads and state and local proclamations, to stress the Bible's importance in American history and cul-

Victor W. Elmicke
Head of laymen's group

The sponsoring Laymen's National Bible Association was started in 1940 by a small group of New York businessmen. It since has expanded to include businessmen throughout the country as well as public officials.

"The Bible gives us a positive pattern to live by, and also a program to die by," said DeVos, a member of the Christian Reformed church. "Other patterns are some person's theory, but the Bible is... what God says we ought to be."

"It's vital to our behavior and society. It's the guidebook to life."

While presidents, governors and mayors also lend backing to the association's Bible campaign, leading businessmen have been its working ministers. "There are a tremendous number of business people throughout the country who are very good and devout people interested in this cause," said Victor W. Elmicke, the association's president the last nine years as well as president of V.W. Elmicke Associates, a Bronxville, N.Y.-based provider of business forms. Elmicke, a Dutch Reformed

There are a tremendous number of business people throughout this country who are very good and devout people interested in this cause.

—Victor Elmicke, business form producer

Church member who holds a doctorate in industrial psychology, said recent Wall Street scandals produced a "feeling that something was very wrong with the ethics of businessmen."

But that's a mistaken image, he said, "it's not representative." He said 99 percent of the business people he has known were "fine, upright people," many of "strong faith." Noting that a different national business figure each year is chairman of the Bible drive, he said they are "a whole who of the business world, wonderful, wonderful people."

The executive chosen as national chairman recruits about 100 business people as associate chairmen, who in turn each recruit 10 to 15 others, thus totaling 1,000 to 1,500 each year.

"Over the years, you've had 30,000 or more business people participating," Elmicke said.

Elmicke, whose family has a long-time custom of reading from the Bible each morning at breakfast, said, "I believe that unless we get back to the basic principles in the Bible, we're not going to solve the many problems around us."

He cited the drug problem, saying more spending and legal crackdowns won't solve it. "We'll stop it when families again start gathering around the breakfast table each day, and give young people some self-esteem," Elmicke said. "I know their own worth, so they will spurn drugs, he said."

President Bush said his wife served as honorary chairman of this year's Bible Week. New York Gov. Mario Cuomo was the governors' chairman and New York City Mayor David Dinkins was the mayors' chairman.

At a luncheon Friday, preceding this week's observance, the association planned to accord special recognition to the translation committee of the New Revised Standard Version of the Bible, which was sponsored by the National Council of Churches and issued this year by eight publishers.

The Rev. Reuben H. Gums, executive director of the association, said Gallup surveys indicated 3 million people increased Bible-reading as a result of a recent year's observance of Bible Week.

Pilgrims flock to see 'miracle crosses' in Louisiana couple's bathroom

Knight-Ridder News Service

VIOLET, La. — They are hoping to catch a glimpse of God in the bathroom, these pilgrims who line up every night outside a red-brick ranch house on Guerra Drive, waiting for a moment in the lavatory.

There, in a small, curtained bathroom, appears a "miraculous" phenomenon of crosses — elaborate, foot-tall figures that are ignored at the ends and appear set off in the distance.

Three of them glow in white and one in gold. Some see a red cross that floats past the others.

"I would say it's a miracle," said Ralph Strassel, a gray-haired pipe welder from nearby Meroux, La., who viewed the crosses with his wife, Pearl, and left clutching four Polaroid snapshots of the scene.

"Miracles can happen anywhere," Strassel said. "On that this parade of pilgrims agrees."

Woman sues Mormon Church over molestation

PHOENIX (AP) — A Phoenix woman is suing the Mormon Church and two church leaders, claiming that they advised her after she was hospitalized to entrust her three sons to the custody of her former husband, a convicted child molester, and he molested them.

The woman also claims church officials encouraged her former husband to serve as leader of a church-sponsored Boy Scout troop and that he molested one or more of her children during troop outings.

The names of the woman, her former husband and her children were not available.

Names as defendants in the lawsuit filed in Maricopa County Superior Court earlier this month are the Salt Lake City-based church, church branch President Don Excell of Dewey, former church bishop Grant Shumway of Phoenix, and the woman's former husband and his wife, John Lyons, the church's Arizona spokesman, said Thursday that he had not seen the suit and could not comment on it.

Neither Excell nor Shumway could be reached for comment Thursday.

The woman says in the lawsuit she married in 1974 but divorced four years later after she observed her husband engaged in sodomy with a foster son who was living in their home along with their three sons.

The man was convicted of two counts of child molestation and was released from prison in 1983 after serving five years, said Michael Arna, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections.

He now is serving a 37-year sentence in the state prison in Florence for convictions last year on one count of child molestation and attempted child molestation, Arna said.

The woman claims that in January 1988, after she had been hospitalized with a brain tumor, Excell and Shumway asked her to send her son to live with her former husband while she was undergoing treatment, which continued for much of the year.

Shumway and Excell assured her that "everything was in order and that no harm would befall her children," the suit says. Excell promised to interview her son regularly and

They have come by the hundreds, young and old, to a wallpapered bathroom in the white-shuttered house, where Leo and Loretta Alphonso have lived for more than 15 years.

Some visitors, including a local priest, have walked away skeptical, but many are eager to proclaim the bathroom images a miracle.

The pilgrimages started about two weeks ago, after the ninth and final day of a novena that the Alphonsoes were saying to St. Jude.

The Alphonso had prayed in church that day to the patron saint of hopeless causes, whose figure also sits between a television set and a grandfather clock in the Alphonso's living room.

At 10:30, just before Loretta Alphonso, 37, was ready to retire for the night, she looked into the mirror of her medicine chest and saw a brilliant reflection of crosses behind her in the bathroom window, her husband said.

As word of the apparition spread, however, people started flocking to the Alphonso's house at all hours of the day and night to see for themselves.

Recently the couple posted a note on the door setting evening viewing hours.

"Good thing they have two bathrooms," said Lorraine Acosta, a cousin who was showing people in and out the kitchen door.

Visitors have been grateful, too. In groups of four, they walk into the Alphonso's kitchen, with its frilly pink curtains and ceramic trinkets, and are led down a gray-carpeted hallway through a bedroom and into a bathroom.

The bathroom is narrow and immaculate, with aqua fixtures, floral wallpaper and ceramic unicorns displayed around a mirrored sink.

When viewers go in, the lights are out — and the crosses become instantly visible. "Look!" Loretta Nicolsa, 63, exclaimed to her husband Sam as the couple blessed themselves. "It's too perfect to be a street light."

"Only God could do that," agreed Sam Nicolsa, 65.

Other pilgrims have taken a little more persuading.

Some have turned on the bathroom light to look for evidence of a hoax.

Many have walked into the Alphonso's back yard, which faces the bathroom window, to check for a street lamp that might somehow be casting images against the glass.

There are street lights behind the house, but they are so distant it seems unlikely they could create the effect, most visitors agree.

Determined to check out the possibility, Eric Stephens, 33, decided to raise the window.

When he lifted up the bottom sash, only the top half of the cross was visible, but he could see no overlay, he said.

"It's like it's in a place of its own," said Stephens.

His wife, Sile, 46, said they had visited the bathroom three times and were convinced about the authenticity of the images.

"The beautiful thing about it," she said, pointing to her 18-year-old daughter, Kristine, "is she came to church on Sunday. See, that's the miracle of what you see — what it is."

She said she had seen the crosses in the bathroom window, her husband said.

Many pilgrims pointed out that if the bathroom was not a choice spot for a miracle, well, neither was the neighborhood.

Selling pressure keeps stock market rebound at minimum

The Associated Press — Volume on the floor of the Big Board Thursday, November 16, 1990, was down to 165.4 million shares, up from next several quarters.

NEW YORK — The stock market eked out a small gain Friday in an advance restrained by selling pressure on long-distance telephone issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 2.50 to 614.64 points.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 766 up, 725 down and 517 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board Thursday, November 16, 1990, was down to 165.4 million shares, up from next several quarters.

The stock effects of FCI's drop spread to other long-distance telephone issues. American Telephone & Telegraph fell 1 1/2 to 32 1/2, United Telecommunications 2 1/4 to 22 1/2, and GTE Corp. 1/4 to 27 1/4.

In a statement responding to the stock activity, AT&T said its long-distance volume and revenues remained strong.

In the economic news, the Labor Department said the nation's core inflation rate, which excludes volatile food and energy

The report was "definitely encouraging," said Michael Metz, a vice president at Oppenheimer & Co. "It suggests that if you subtract oil, inflationary pressures are easing."

Separately, the Commerce Department reported that the nation's trade deficit narrowed 3.3 percent in September, showing its first improvement since June.

Brokers said the most recent data evidently gave the Federal Reserve whatever encouragement it might still have needed to take new steps toward lower interest rates in the money markets.

But the reaction in the stock market was mild at best. Analysts have said the market largely anticipated a move toward easier credit with its recent rise to eight-week highs.

General Electric rose 1/4 to 55 1/4 as the company raised its quarterly dividend from 47 cents a share to 51 cents a share.

Other gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 1 1/4 to 113 1/4; Exxon, up 1/4 to 50 1/4; Coca-Cola, up 1/4 to 45 1/4; and Merck, up 1/4 to 85.

Government claims compound S&L crisis

NEW YORK (AP) — Investors and companies that bought junk bonds from Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. have heaped more than $10 billion in new claims of the collapsed Wall Street firm, accusing it of rampant illegal activity.

Stacks full of claims by various parties against Drexel arrived at U.S. Bankruptcy Court to meet a Thursday deadline.

The claims are in addition to $11.3 billion sought by two federal thrift bailout agencies and by far exceed the amount Drexel can dole out in its Chapter 11 reorganization. Lawyers said total litigation claims would exceed $20 billion. More than 100 lawsuits have been filed against Drexel. One New York law firm alone filed 11 cases seeking $9.28 billion on behalf of shareholders and companies that assert they were defrauded by Drexel, the once high-flying investment firm that sought bankruptcy protection February.

Meanwhile, in a legal claim released Thursday, federal thrift regulators for the first time pinned much of the blame for the S&L debacle on Drexel's junk bond dealings, which were overseen by Michael Milken.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and Resolution Trust Corp. accused Drexel of payoffs, fraud, price manipulation and other crimes they allege hastened the demise of 48 S&Ls.

Drexel managed most of the $15 billion in high-risk, high-yield bonds bought by thrifts in the 1980s. When the junk bond market collapsed a year ago, much of the holdings were wiped out. Overall, the S&L crisis is expected to cost taxpayers $500 billion over the next 30 years.

Thrift industry analysts said that without judging whether Drexel broke the law, blaming the firm for the industry's failure was excessive.

"The fact is junk bonds played a very small role overall, but it's an area the S&Ls shouldn't have been in at all in the first place," said Kenneth H. Thomas, a Miami consultant who has studied portfolios of failed thrifts. Several creditors and outside observers complained the government was ignoring its own role in the thrift debacle.

New funds established

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gov. Norm Bangarter has announced three new venture capital funds have been established to promote high technology businesses in Utah.

The groups plan on investing several million dollars in fledgling Utah companies and hopefully will attract additional investors.

Bangarter told members of the Utah Pioneer Partnership Friday at the Alta Club in Salt Lake City.

The funds include the Whitehall Technology Fund, based in Salt Lake City; Battison, Johnson & Wang, from Chicago, and Columbine, headquartered in Denver.

The size of the funds was not released.

Bangarter said the new funds join a group called in 1986 called Utah Ventures, whose goal is to assist in start-up and development of technology-based companies in Utah. That fund, Bangarter said, holds about $10.5 million.

Recession may miss 2 Idaho firms

BOISE (AP) — Two of Idaho's biggest employers are on a list of 20 companies a news magazine predicts are most likely to thrive during the looming recession.

Albertson's Inc. and Hewlett-Packard Co. were singled out in U.S. News and World Report's Nov. 15 issue as having lots of cash and little debt — ingredients for success in hard times.

Warren McCain, Albertson's chairman, said the company has had a longstanding policy of avoiding debt.

"We knew that the bubble had to burst sometime, and we were preparing ourselves ahead of time," he said.

The magazine asked Standard and Poor's Compustat Services Inc. of Denver to sift through hundreds of corporate balance sheets. U.S. News reporter Terri Thompson said.

"Standard and Poor's screened all publicly-traded companies with $5 billion in sales or more and picked the ones with the lowest long-term debt as a percentage of capital and the highest interest coverage," Thompson said.

The results show that Albertson's and H-P have the financial means to confront a recession.

Boise-based Albertson's is the sixth-biggest grocery chain in the nation. H-P's Boise operations are the electronics giant's biggest revenue producers.

The magazine's list includes Apple Computer, Boeing, General Electric and Walgreen.

A low debt-to-capital percentage means the company has lots of assets to cover its obligations. Interest coverage measures the number of times a company's pre-tax profits cover interest.

Albertson's long-term debt is 14 percent of its capital. Its pre-tax income will cover interest expenses 14 times.

H-P's debt is 4 percent of capital while its coverage is seven times.

H-P always has had a pay-as-you-go policy," said Don Curtis, Boise site operations manager. "If it's too easy to find the money for a given investment, then management doesn't have to analyze the investment too carefully," Curtis said.

Lumber firm to plead guilty in water cases

SEATTLE (AP) — The Weyerhaeuser Co. has agreed to plead guilty to five criminal violations of the federal Clean Water Act for dumping paint wastes into a tributary of the Chehalis River, the U.S. attorney said Friday.

In a plea agreement, Weyerhaeuser will pay a total of $500,000 in fines and restitution for its nine-year dumping of paint wastes and wash water into Shannon Slough from a sawmill in Aberdeen, U.S. Attorney Mike McKay said.

If Weyerhaeuser had not tried to stop the pollutant discharge, the government would have sought more serious sanctions, including felony charges against the company and some of its employees, McKay said.

Weyerhaeuser is to be commended for conducting environmental audits, identifying problems and making some effort to solve those problems, McKay said.

However, the response was too slow, and the steps taken wholly inadequate.

The violations stem from 1989 investigations when officials from the state Department of Ecology and federal Environmental Protection Agency visited the sawmill. Officials investigated the mill in July 1989 to check a complaint that paint wastes from the mill's seal and stencil operation were being dumped into a drain.

Until six weeks before that first visit, Weyerhaeuser had been discharging waste waters directly into Shannon Slough for almost nine years, McKay said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

And while the great and wise... And all their trophies pass away... Some sudden thought, some careless rhyme...

I counted nine tricks with a 3-2 diamond break, confessed South. "However, the entry problems were too much to overcome..."

West led three rounds of hearts to force South's ace, and South took stock. He could count on two spades...

South led a club to dummy's king after winning the heart ace and then led a diamond to his ace...

South had a third diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a second diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a third diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a fourth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a fifth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a sixth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a seventh diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led an eighth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a ninth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a tenth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led an eleventh diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a twelfth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

South led a thirteenth diamond. West was cashing his high heart and exited with a spade to dummy's ace...

Bobsled Federation under investigation

The Associated Press

The U.S. Olympic Committee, prompted by financial irregularities and complaints from athletes, has launched a dual investigation into the operational and bookkeeping practices of the U.S. Bobsled Federation.

USOC officials confirmed Friday that they had suspended funding to the United States Bobsled and Skeleton Federation until the organization complies with USOC financial bylaws.

The bobsled federation, like all 41 of the national sports federations receiving USOC funds, is required to submit to an annual review of its records by an outside auditor.

A-1 Division I football crown goes to undefeated Pocatello

POCATELLO (AP) — Quarterback Steve Halesford led the Indians to a touchdown in the second half as Pocatello outlasted Centennial of Meridian 28-14 Thursday for the A-1 Division I high school football championship.

The victory at Holt Arena in Pocatello represented the Indians' first undefeated season (12-0) since 1957. They also were the first Division I team to win back-to-back championships, also defeating the Patriots last fall under coach Jim Koetter.

Centennial, 10-2, rushed for 127 yards and passed for 42. Pocatello rushed for 121 yards and rolled up 88 in the air.

Editorial employees laid off at national sports newspaper

NEW YORK (AP) — The National, the nine-month-old daily sports newspaper that is running into financial problems even as it tries to expand, has laid off 18 editorial employees to cut costs, a spokesman said Friday.

Unbeaten Valley Vikings face toughest test today

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — It is the supreme reward so it is fitting it should be the supreme test. When the undefeated Valley Vikings meet the Homedale Trojans at 1 p.m. in the Idaho State Holt Arena for the Idaho Class A-3 football championship, the Vikings can expect their most severe test of the season.

That's the opinion of Coach Red Malone who has seen some good teams come and go in front of his Vikings this year. The Vikings have faced running teams and some passing but Malone says the Homedale combination of speed in running, passing and defense will be most severe this time around.

Valley brings an 11-0 record into the game while Homedale has lost only once this season — that a season-opening 35-6 loss to Weiser, which currently is undefeated and plays for the Class A-2 championship in the 10 a.m. game today at Holt Arena.

“We have been able to scout them a couple of times,” said Malone of the Trojans. “The two things that impressed me most were their throwing and their tough defense.”

All of it runs under the aegis of senior quarterback Chris Hoshaw, a 6-1, 190-pound senior who is completing his third starting season.

Hoshaw is very good at running the option and “one of the best quarterbacks we've seen in a couple of years,” Malone said.

The Trojans prevent leading up for the option on the outside by running excellent trap plays and some lead dive. “But basically, they like to try to get outside and get in a foot race with you,” the coach said.

He added that was no surprise because “this is easily the fastest A-3 secondary in the state.” And that translates to where all that speed comes from on offense.

Malone said it is difficult to load up for Homedale in anything because the Trojans will look totally like a passing team one week and a running team the next.

“We're going in thinking we'll be seeing something in the 50-50 range,” Malone said. “They threw a lot against Decio but they were very balanced against Fruitland last week.”

“They like to work on you offensively. They'll spread it out and run the heck out of it and when you try to stop that they come back with the pass.”

For that reason Malone says Valley has two keys.

“First, we have to be able to run the ball. For two reasons. First, it will keep the ball out of their offense's hands and second, we really don't want to put in a position of having to throw against that quick second.

Celtics beat Jazz, 114-89

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Robert Parish scored 8 points and Larry Bird 6 in a 24-4 third-period outburst Friday night as the Boston Celtics whipped Utah 114-89 for their 20th consecutive Boston Garden victory over the Jazz.

The Jazz led 58-55 early in the second half before Bird ignited the big rally with a free throw and a illegal defense technical foul. Kogge Lewis and Brian Shaw scored 4 points apiece and Kevin McHale a pair in the next 69 minutes as the Celtics charged to a 79-62 lead.

Lewis led Boston scorers with 24 points, while Bird had 23 and Parish 20.

Utah, which lost its fourth straight, was led by Jeff Malone with 23 points, John Stockton with 18 and Karl Malone with 17.

Mavericks 99, Lakers 86

DALLAS (AP) — Derek Harper scored 8 of his 19 points during a 15-2 run to open the third quarter as Dallas Mavericks broke a seven-game regular-season losing streak against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Harper hit two 3-pointers and a driving layup at the start of the fourth quarter as the Mavericks extended a 69-68 lead to 84-70. The struggling Lakers lost for the fifth time in seven games this season and saw their string of six straight victories at Reunion Arena end.

The Mavericks, continuing to adjust to the loss Roy Tarpley and Paul Pierce, both of whom underwent knee surgery earlier this season, got 17 points each from Rolando Blackman and Herb Williams.

Byron Scott led the Lakers with 23 points. James Worthy added 21 and ex-Maverick Sam Perkins, heavily booed by the Reunion Arena crowd, had 18 for the Lakers.

76ers 115, Bullets 102

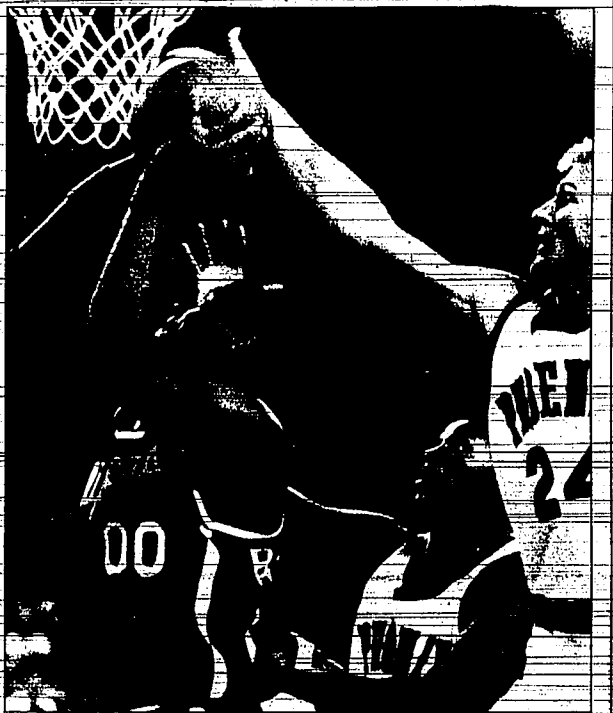

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley had 35 points and 18 rebounds, Ron Anderson hit a game-tying 3-pointer with 4.4 seconds left in regulation and Philadelphia used a 10-0 run to defeat Washington in overtime.

Barkley scored on a follow shot to give Philadelphia a 98-96 lead to start the extra period, but then fouled out, setting up Mark Adair's two-free throws that tied the score with 3:52 left.

The 76ers then scored the next 10 points for a 108-98 lead with 1:21 remaining.

Anderson had 22 points and Hersey Hawkins 20 for the Sixers.

Orange Bowl will be showdown — barring upsets

The Associated Press

Right now, the Orange Bowl's the place to be on Jan. 1. But if top-ranked Notre Dame loses to Penn State on Saturday, then perhaps the Cotton Bowl will be just as happening a place.

That's because the big bowls already have made their matchups. Now their teams just have to win. Being a favorite isn't enough.

I knew who was going to win, we wouldn't play," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said. His team, ranked third, will play Texas, Texas A&M or Baylor in the Cotton Bowl.

No. 3 Miami (6-2) plays Boston College on Saturday, and Erickson said he's worried.

“You saw what Stanford did to Notre Dame, right?” the coach said.

No. 2 Colorado (9-1-1), which plays the Fighting Irish in the Orange Bowl, plays Kansas State on Saturday. The Buffaloes probably would move up to No. 1 if they win and Notre Dame falls against Penn State.

“It's the greatest feeling to be in the position we're in now,” Colorado guard Joe Garten said. “After three games, we pretty much thought the national championship was out of the question. A lot of things have gone our way. We're a lot tougher mentally than we were last year, and we feel a lot better prepared for the Orange Bowl.”

In other top games, No. 4 Georgia Tech is at Wake Forest, No. 5 Brigham Young is at Utah, No. 6 Florida is at Kentucky, No. 7 Texas is at Texas Christian, No. 8 Virginia plays Maryland, No. 9 Florida State plays Memphis State at Orlando, Fla., and No. 10 Washington is at Washington State.

In the second 107, No. 12 Houston plays Eastern Washington, No. 13 Iowa plays Purdue, No. 14 Tennessee plays No. 15 Mississippi at Memphis, Tenn., No. 16 Michigan plays Minnesota, No. 17 Clemson plays South Carolina and No. 19 Southern Cal is at UCLA.

Rounding out the Top 25, No. 21 Ohio State is at Wisconsin, No. 22 Illinois is at Indiana, No. 23 Michigan State is at Northwestern and No. 24 Auburn plays Georgia.

Notre Dame (8-1) must beat Penn State, Southern Cal and Colorado to win a national championship. Listening to High coach Lou Holtz, you would think Notre Dame doesn't have a chance.

“We're going to raise money for a charity, I'd ask people to donate a nickel for every yard we've given up since the start of the season,” Holtz said.

BSU isn't used to being the favorite against Idaho

By Dave Gotsch
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — The bets are on. And at least one University of Idaho student is putting her money on the Boise State University Broncos, slight favorites in Saturday's football game between BSU and the Vandals.

If the Broncos win, they'll tie Nevada for the Big Sky Conference championship and assure themselves of an automatic berth in the NCAA I-AA postseason playoffs. An Idaho victory would create a tie between the Vandals and Broncos for second place and cloud the playoff picture.

There's no doubt, though, as to who the girlfriend of BSU All-America defensive end Eric Helgeson favors in the 20-year-old rivalry. In a Tuesday night telephone conversation, Helgeson found out that his girlfriend, a U of I student, was putting her bucks on the Broncos.

“She was betting a bunch of people that BSU is going to win, you know, laying out a bunch of money,” said Helgeson, a 6-foot, 2-inch, 230-pound senior, who like his girlfriend is a graduate of Boise's Bishop Kelly High School.

“And she's taking a lot of guff from a lot of people up there. They're saying “Doesn't your boyfriend play for Boise State. She laughs it off and stuff, but she's a Boise State fan right now. She'd better be,” Helgeson said.

The Broncos, 8-2, 6-1, will be trying to shake off the stigma of an eight-game losing streak to the Vandals, 7-3, 5-2, which dates back to 1982.

“Unlike the past few years, however, the No. 5-ranked Broncos will assume the role of being the favorite. And when the two teams take to the blue turf for the 1 p.m. game at Bronco Stadium, the Broncos will have the advantage of a partisan crowd possibly in excess of 23,000. The BSU-Idaho game drew a Bronco Stadium record crowd of 23,687 in 1988.

“I like being the favorite,” said Helgeson, Mapp denied under oath having told anyone she overheard such a thing.

But Manning, after quizzing her on the stand, ruled her testimony was “material and necessary” to the New Jersey investigation and ordered her to appear Dec. 14.

George Hyler, Mapp's attorney, said Friday that he planned to appeal that decision. “The lady is not a reluctant witness,” Hyler said. “She's willing to testify. She gave testimony in great detail under oath. We don't see why she needs to be up there.”

who is poised to become a first-team All-America for the third-straight year. “I like being the underdog, too. But I like playing at home in front of our crowd. I think anytime we play at home, we're going to be the favorite. It doesn't matter who we play. We'll be the favorite because we're playing in front of our crowd.”

Last Saturday afternoon before a Bronco Stadium crowd of 22,611, Helgeson sacked Nevada quarterback Fred Griffin three times as BSU shelled the previously unbeaten Wolf Pack 30-14.

Helgeson's strong performances in recent weeks may draw a double-team strategy from the Vandal defense.

“I anticipate a double team. But if they do that, we're going to raise money for a charity.”

Valvano denies giving warning about point-shaving

Knight-Ridder News Service

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The recent suggestion that Jim Valvano suspected point-shaving in his North Carolina State basketball program three years ago has left the former coach stunned.

“It's just not true,” Valvano said Friday. “It absolutely begs any credibility whatsoever.”

To shave points is to agree to win a game by a margin less than the point spread set by bookies.

A New Jersey detective testified Thursday in Wake Superior Court that an informant had told the state's organized crime division that an N.C. State women's basketball player claimed to have overheard Valvano warning players about point-shaving during the 1987-88 season.

The detective was in the state to persuade Judge Howard Manning Jr. to order the athletic Rhonda Mapp, to travel to New Jersey, to testify about what she overheard before a grand jury investigating possible point-shaving at N.C. State.

Mapp denied under oath having told anyone she overheard such a thing.

But Manning, after quizzing her on the stand, ruled her testimony was “material and necessary” to the New Jersey investigation and ordered her to appear Dec. 14.

George Hyler, Mapp's attorney, said Friday that he planned to appeal that decision. “The lady is not a reluctant witness,” Hyler said. “She's willing to testify. She gave testimony in great detail under oath. We don't see why she needs to be up there.”

Mapp was a freshman at N.C. State the year she is alleged to have overheard Valvano warn players that they would be in trouble if they were involved in point-shaving.

According to the informant, Mapp said the players who walked out of Valvano's office after the conversation were Charles Shackelford and Vinny Del Negro, who now play in Italy; and Kelsey-Weems, who plays for the Continental Basketball Association.

Top-seeded Steffi Graf returns a ball during her victory over 6th-seeded Katerina Maleeva in the Virginia Slims Championships.

Steffi Graf hangs on to top spot

Knight-Ridder News Service

NEW YORK — Throughout a turbulent, injury-riddled year, Steffi Graf almost always has found a way to win, somehow still grabbing a victory as routinely as reaching into her skirt for a new ball. But, of course, it seldom was so easy. It may be the supreme compliment that Graf has remained the No. 1 player in the world during a year of distraction and disappointment. Even at her worst, it seems, Graf continues to be the best.

was improving, but when Graf took the court against Maleeva, she didn't look so good. "I'm not 100 percent yet," Graf said later. "But I feel much better than I did, that's for sure." Still, Graf certainly didn't look like the defending champion or the No. 1 woman in the world. In seven previous matches, Maleeva had managed to take one set off Graf, even that in a tiebreaker. But last night, for a while, she made Graf look beatable.

forward volley to clinch the set. And when Maleeva opened up the second set with a double fault on the way to falling behind 0-40, the momentum appeared solidly in Graf's corner. She broke Maleeva in that game and when she headed for her court-side chair, Graf heaved a sigh of relief, or maybe it was a breath of exhaustion. It just got better from there: Graf had her serve then broke again at 15 in the next game when Maleeva pounded a forehand into the net. Graf was ahead 3-0 and had surrendered only three points.

She was rolling. By the time the match was over, in 61 minutes, Graf had polished off the last 10 games to end with the straight tie to the tournament semifinals, quite an achievement, especially since she had considered defaulting against Capriati before escaping with her 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 victory.

Graf double-faulted on the third point of the match. She had to save a break point to win that first game and netted a service return — on a second serve, yet — to squander the possibility. But when Graf broke Maleeva then at 2-2, she was broken after leading the game 40-0. "After that, I knew then I had to be more aggressive," Graf said. "I had to go for my shots more. Before, I was taking advantage of the possibilities. But when I got broken there, that woke me up."

Miller scored again inside for a 76-61 Arkansas lead with 9:53 remaining. Five straight points by Day, who finished with 27, put Arkansas on top by 18. Ernie Murry's 3-pointer with 5:41 left made it 92-71. The Sooners got no closer than 16.

Bruin girls rally to beat Boise

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Ashley Mayes hit both ends of a bonus free throw situation with seven seconds left, tapping a fourth-quarter rally that lifted the Twin Falls girls' past Boise 34-33 Friday night. Mayes bounced in the first one but swished the second as the Bruins scored their 17th point of the final quarter — which exactly matched what they'd mustered in the first three periods of cold shooting.

26-17. But Cindy Scheel hit four points, Stacy Butler five and Shannon Phillips a field goal. Butler's three-pointers, the only one of the game, cut Boise's advantage to 31-30 with 4:42 remaining. A follow shot by Jamie Essinger gave the Bruins their first lead with 41 seconds showing. But Boise batted back into the lead when Louise Todd scored off an in-bounds play, with 14 seconds left and the Bruins rounded downcourt for Mayes' clinching play. The win came in Twin Falls' best overall showing — except for early shooting.

a lot more second effort shots by working the offensive boards.

Kohring said Boise's defense could have had an influence on Twin Falls' shooting, noting "they play man and we should have been a little more patient — looking for the shot, especially in the first half." But she said the big difference was the better position defense the Bruins played — and reduction of team fouls at the same time. "Defense was a point we'd discussed strongly all week," Kohring said with a smile. "We were able to turn it up a notch and we did a much better job of covering the cutters."

"We hung onto the ball tonight and showed more intensity for four quarters," said Coach Kevin Kohring. "We consistently had better rebounding position and we had

Penn State coach Joe Paterno is 6-4 against Notre Dame. He doesn't look at the troubles of the Fighting Irish, he looks at his record. "It's not like we're coming down there and we're saying, 'Oh my God, what are we going to do against this fantastic team?'" Bicknell said. "At this level, you play good teams just about every other week, and Miami's one of the better ones we'll play. We respect them; we're not in awe of them."

Georgia Tech (8-0-1) is the only unbeaten team in Division I-A. The Yellow Jackets play Wake Forest and think that they have a chance for the national championship. "I know that our kids read the papers and listen to the radio and watch television. So it's not something I try to ignore," Georgia Tech coach Bobby Ross said. "I simply remind our kids that if we want to continue to stay where we are or improve our position, it's important that we focus on our upcoming opponent and beat them."

matter what they do." If BSU's defense reacts well to what the Idaho offense does, it may well mean a BSU victory. And just what would that mean to the Broncos? "It would mean just about everything," Helgeson said. "That means we've accomplished every goal that we've set out, basically, except for the national championship. We've won the Big Sky championship and we've beat Idaho." Can BSU beat Idaho for the first time since a 45-43 victory in 1981? If Helgeson and the Broncos play the way the can, it's a good bet they will.

Surprising Gooding tops Buhl

By Brad Breland Times-News writer

GOODING — The mismatch of two teams traveling opposite directions didn't turn out to be a direct-throw ally. Buhl, which hadn't lost a game this season, was on the road playing winless Gooding, a team struggling to be competitive in all of its contests. Most of those wins were at the quarter to 21-14, but Buhl closed the gap to a pair of points. Baskets by Gooding's Mandy Patterson and Tara Reinke foiled that comeback attempt as the Senators led by as much as eight in the quarter and five points heading into the final period. In the opening minute in the fourth quarter, Buhl made another run. Stahlacker hit a basket and a three-pointer to bring the Indians within a point and under a bucket by Buffy Combe, Buhl led for the first time since the second quarter.

Buhl saw a lot of opportunities go away in that stanza. "I think the third quarter is what our shot's just weren't going in," said Buhl Coach Joe Shepard, who sat and watched as what looked like easy shots bounce off the rim. minute left. Tonya Eckert hit two free throws giving Buhl the lead and a pair of charities by Engles tied the game with 52 seconds left. The Indians couldn't convert on their end of the court and a free throw by Kim Lukehart with 29 seconds left proved to be the final bucket of the game. Stahlacker had a dozen points and Eckert averaged 10 for the Indians, who fell to 2-1 this year. In the junior varsity action, there were two games involving both an A and a B squad. In the A game, Gooding won 27-26. Dusty Pence had 12 points for the Senators. In the B contest, Buhl bested Gooding 25-24. Rayme Owen paced Buhl with eight points. Janet Bieker had 10 for Gooding.

The lead didn't last, however, as the Senators battled back and took the lead, but a trio of Gooding turnovers knotted the game with a Arkansas (2-0) plays No. 6 Duke, a 100-76 winner over Boston College, in the tournament semifinals at New York on Wednesday. The Blue Devils beat the Razorbacks in the semifinals of the NCAA tournament last year.

Friday night's loss was the worst for Oklahoma (1-1) since 1980, coach Billy Tubbs' first season, when Nebraska beat the Sooners 90-63.

Duke took command 26 minutes into the game, launching a 24-2 run that included 28 straight points while holding Boston College (1-1) scoreless for 6:44 minutes in slipping out an early 6-4 deficit. Two free throws by freshman Grant Hill tied the game 6-6 with 17:33 to go in the half and the Blue Devils quickly tamed the game into a rout. Grant Hill scored eight of Duke's first 10 points.

The 6-foot-9, 275-pound Miller also helped Arkansas (2-0) with out-let passes to start the fast break and on at least three occasions tied up Oklahoma shooters.

Two baskets by Day, one a 3-pointer, put Arkansas in front by five with 16:02 left in the half. Razorbacks stayed in front until a three-point play by Terry Evans made it 27-26 with 9:20 left in the period.

By the time Boston College's Doug Able converted a layup with 9:45 left in the half, Duke led 30-10 on the way to a 44-25 advantage at intermission.

Miller picked up his third foul 1:17 into the second half and sat out five minutes. Arkansas led by nine points when he returned.

A steal and layup by Fletcher gave Arkansas a 27-26 lead and then Ken Terry tied the game with a three-point play by Bryan Evans made it 27-26 with 9:20 left in the period.

McCaffrey scored five points in the first three minutes of the second half to spark an 11-0 Duke run that pushed the lead to 30 points.

Twin Falls Bruins make soccer awards

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — With its 9-6 state tournament qualifying season in the books, the Twin Falls High School soccer club dished out awards at its banquet Thursday. With the four individual honors going to juniors, Coach Reed Hollingshead sees a bright future for the Bruins, who were sanctioned as a lettered sport for the first time this fall at Twin Falls. "We should have most of the kids back next year. We'll have a real good team next year," Hollingshead said. Center forward Justin Aiken, who totalled 16 goals in 15 games, was the offensive player of the year. Sweeper Greg Thompson earned defensive player of the year honors. The sportsman award went to reserve goal keeper Justin Bailey. Vince Gibson, who helped on defense and in the midfield, was acclaimed most improved. The group will return to action as the Twin Falls Fury in March. The Fury will have age group teams for 12, 14, 16 and 19-year-olds.

Chargers' 300-lb. nose tackle battles back from severe beating

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Joe Phillips was the San Diego Chargers' strongest player, a symbol of durability and the anchor of the defensive line.

None of that helped him seven weeks ago when he became the victim of street violence.

"I always thought I could physically take care of myself in any situation," said the 6-foot-5, 300-pound nose tackle. "It simply isn't true."

Phillips, 27, was attacked by three men on a street in a suburb of San Diego. One was a woman, emerged from Suska's, a Mission, Beacon, Calif., restaurant and bar. He was kicked repeatedly in the head, suffering multiple facial fractures.

At least one of the attackers beat him with steel-tipped shoes, police said.

"I just had no chance, no chance. It was a feeling of total helplessness," said Phillips, who before being hurt had not missed a game since joining the Chargers in 1987.

According to police, the three assailants yelled something at Phillips' companion from their car, then stopped the auto and rushed Phillips after another exchange of words.

Police have arrested three construction workers, all in their 20s, in the Sept. 26 attack. They were pleaded innocent to felony assault charges and are awaiting a Dec. 10 preliminary hearing to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to hold them for trial.

Phillips, honoring the request of prosecutors, said he couldn't talk about the circumstances of the at-

Joe Phillips has recovered enough to work out with weights.

"The district attorney has asked me to tell my story on the witness stand," he said. "I want to give them every chance to do their thing."

In the first few weeks after the attack, Phillips said, "I felt a lot of anger, a lot of resentment about it happening to me. . . . But I'm kind of through all the vengeance kind of feelings. I just want to see them brought to justice."

Phillips got a psychological lift last week, when he rejoined the team. He is spending his days lifting weights, exercising, running and attending team meetings, striving toward his return to football.

Last Sunday, he watched from the sidelines at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium as the Chargers beat Denver, 19-7.

"It was strange," Phillips said. "It was almost harder than watching it at home on TV. I'm like, 'Let me out there. I wanted to play, to make a tackle but all I could do was live vicariously through the guys.'"

He's expected to miss the rest of the regular season but could be ready if the Chargers (5-5) reach the playoffs.

Phillips, who remains on the Chargers' reserve non-football-injury list, spent five days at Sharp Memorial Hospital after the attack. He underwent surgery for installation of a titanium plate to help support the splintered bone around his left eye. A piece of teflon also was implanted to help support the left eyeball and keep it in place.

"The injuries he had were very severe," said Dr. Lee Rice, the Chargers' team physician. "I'm lucky, frankly, that it didn't blind him."

Phillips said he will be blind for three days after the attack because his eyes were so badly swollen.

"You talk about a scary feeling. I just lost it. I flipped. You have no idea how much you rely on your eyes," said Phillips, who in some instances is still experiencing episodes of double vision.

"I think he can make a full and complete recovery as it relates to his return to football," Rice said. "But there is still some concern about his full and complete recovery as to his vision."

Phillips may have to undergo further surgery if the sight problems continue, and there is a chance he may be left with some vision problems, Rice said.

Also a third-year law student at the University of San Diego, Phillips had to drop out of the fall semester because the vision problems prevented him from keeping up with his studies.

But he said he can make up his studies later. He's just thankful to be alive.

"Physically, I've still got some things to overcome. I still have to wait for the vision to come back 100 percent, but I'm working out, feeling better and it's good psychologically to be back with the guys."

Cards, letters and flowers he has received from relatives and friends, as well as strangers also have lifted his spirits.

"The support of the community has meant a lot," he said. "People can hurt other people, but the vast majority of people are good. Maybe what I've learned about life is to make the most of your time here because it can be over in a blink-of-an-eye."

"That kind of carries over into football, to make the most of the time you're playing because that's short enough. Sometimes it gets to be a burden with all the pressure, but you've got to keep yourself in your mind that you're playing because you love the game. I mean, if your life isn't enjoyable, you've got to change."

Northern Dancer, one of greatest race horses, sires, dies at 29

Knights-Ridder News Service

CHICAGO — Northern Dancer, certainly the most profound and certainly the most profitable producer of racehorses in the history of the thoroughbred world, is dead at the advanced equine age of 29.

He was humanely destroyed early Friday morning at his home, Northern Station Station in Chesapeake City, Md.

At the time of his death Northern Dancer was suffering from toxic, a term used to describe pain in the abdomen commonly caused by the segment of the intestine twisting.

"If he were a younger horse we would have sent him to a veterinary hospital for an operation," said Rick Waldman, vice president of Winfield Farms. "At his age it would have been inhumane to subject him to an operation."

"It was a difficult decision to take his life by lethal injection but he was going through a lot of pain and was dangerous to himself and those people working on him."

Four years of equine life are considered to be the equivalent of one year of human life, making the short stallion with the bulky behind the counterpart of a 716-year-old man.

The sports world never had such a Romeo. "The mares can be ugly, good-looking, tall or short or whatever," Winfield stallion manager Paul Clevenger said when Northern Dancer's love life was going strong at age 24. "It really doesn't seem to matter to him one bit."

The bottom line is that he not only mass-produced racehorses who excelled on both sides of the Atlantic but passed on his flair for getting excellence to his sons and daughters.

Of Northern Dancer's 635 offspring, 467 won races and 143 were stakes winners. According to Waldman, he and his sons collectively sired more than 1,000 stakes winners.

"Northern Dancer must be regarded as one of the greatest if not the greatest sire of all-time," said Vincent O'Brien, trainer of his most renowned son, Nijinsky II. In 1970, Nijinsky became the last English Triple Crown winner and following his racing career he emulated his sire at stud.

After Northern Dancer's unmatched breeding legacy began manifesting itself annually his yearlings became increasingly precious commodities at auction. In 22 years at the top-of-the-line Keeneland sales in Kentucky 174 of his yearlings sold for $160 million, an average of $919,621.

Fourteen yearlings brought an average of $3,320,357 in the 1984 summer sale at Keeneland. The second most successful sire at the sale was Seattle Slew, whose 17 yearlings averaged $2,003,763 less.

As a runner, Canadian-bred Northern Dancer also was outstanding, winning 14 of 18 starts, including the Kentucky Derby and Break-ness, and never finishing out the mile before retiring as a 3-year-old because of a tendon injury to his right foreleg.

Amazingly, in retrospect, when Northern Dancer was yearling his Winfield Farms owner, E.P. Taylor, tried to sell him but couldn't get the $25,000 asking price. Taylor then turned him over to trainer Horatio Lugo to go to what he called the owner into gelding the colt.

Taylor said "No!" Northern Dancer repaid him multimillions of times—in dollars!

Player development talks falter

NEW YORK (AP) — Talks on a new player development contract between the major and minor leagues broke down Friday with each side threatening to go its own way and no new talks scheduled.

The major league executive council met in Chicago and unanimously reaffirmed its proposal, in which minor league franchise shifts, scheduling and expansion would need the approval of the commissioner.

The National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, the minor league governing body, presented what it called its final proposal during Thursday's bargaining session. The heads of the 17 minor leagues are to meet Saturday in Chicago and are expected to reaffirm that proposal.

"As far as I'm concerned, negotiations are over," Nashville Sounds owner Larry Schmittou said Friday. "We've told their negotiators that there's no more blood in this turp."

The major leagues already have canceled the joint winter meetings with the minor leagues and scheduled their own sessions for next month at Rosemont, Ill., instead of Las Vegas, Nev., the trade center.

"With the breakdown, it appears more likely that the major leagues would have most of their prospects play for newly created teams at spring training sites and that many of the existing minor league teams would be forced to sign players who were not drafted by big league clubs: Only 10 of 26 Class AAA teams, the highest minor league level, have major league working agreements for next season.

"If they're going to go to complex baseball, the more power to them," said Schmittou, one of two minor league owners who attended Thursday's bargaining session. "They have to go, what they have to do, we have to do what we have to do."

In addition to control issues, the majors want to decrease their subsidy of minor league operations.

Salary level, success don't match

The Baltimore Evening Sun

Salary figures substantiate the fact the Baltimore Orioles had the lowest payroll in all of major league baseball this year. This is reason for applause, not denigration. These are hard times for the players and the fans on professional athletics is suddenly not what the working class wants to hear.

The Orioles spent the lowest amount, $7.9 million, on player payroll of any club in the majors in 1989. The Baltimore Orioles are the only team in the majors who have a payroll in the pockets of the employees for no other reason than to prove you are a liberal spender?

There's no correlation with how much a player is paid and how he performs. Collectively, the way the players are paid does not motivate an athlete. Take the Chicago White Sox as a refreshing example. They were the second lowest paying organization, a notch above the Orioles at $9.8 million, yet had the second best record in the majors. The Cincinnati Reds had salaries amounting to $14.8 and won the National League pennant and World Series against an Oakland Athletics team that earned $7 million more.

Clubs such as the Kansas City Royals, California Angels and New York Mets paid out $21 million-plus and didn't get value received from the high-priced talent.

To finish dead last, with the worst record in baseball—the New York Yankees paid their players $19.3 million. Again, money isn't the answer. In all the time of being under baseball, beginning as a short-term minimum wage hopeful, we have never seen or known about a player who was abused.

In the era before free agency, there were occasions when an athlete would have a banner year and was underpaid when compared to a contemporary. But baseball had a way of correcting this inequity. In most cases, an appreciative team would correct the monetary inadequacy by offering a sizable raise at the next contract negotiation.

That's the way it formerly worked. But now players are paid on potential — not on results. Easily the smartest executive the game has ever known was Baltimore's Rickey, who operated the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers when they were powers in the National League.

Rickey's philosophy was to "keep 'em hungry," which meant he didn't give the players what they wanted, the majors or in their expansive farm system, with comfortable contract arrangements that deprived them of incentives. How the Orioles have been operating is similar to the old Rickey method.

Just because the Orioles are painted as a team that made a lot of money off ticket sales and from broadcasting arrangements and doesn't give it away should be no reason to consider this shows proves they don't want to win. Where does it say in the rules that the players making the most money will be the most successful?

Back to Rickey: It was referred to as "El Cheapo" ... but he understood the game and nature of the business better than anyone before or since. We get the impression the Orioles are ingesting into the free-agent market, even considering pitcher Danny Jackson, who couldn't win with the Reds, as good as they were, to defuse the criticism that has followed the publishing of how much the various clubs spent on salaries for the hired hands.

If this is true then they have suddenly been overcome with a serious case of false vanity. The Boston Red Sox have always been among the top spenders, dating back to a wonderful philanthropist and human being named Tom Yawkey, an owner who was a delight to know but had a habit of overpaying and thereby spoiling the employees. But the Red Sox have always been among the best farm systems in both leagues, haven't won a World Series since World War I.

They were referred to as the Gold Sox, which had something to do with the size of the checks they took home on the first and half-of-every month. Just because the Orioles have made a ton of profit doesn't necessitate turning it over to the players. Pay for production, not promise. There should be their only consideration.

Justifying a low pay scale by going out to acquire some overpaid underachiever is contradictory to their policy and good business practices. But the Orioles are being corrected by critics from sources believing that the way to score runs and prevent the opposition from doing the same is with a checkbook. It won't work, never has.

Martin Luther King issue begins to affect recruiting in Arizona

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Athletic recruiting at Arizona's two biggest universities is being adversely affected because of voters' rejection of a paid Martin Luther King Jr. holiday, and the situation could worsen, officials say.

"I don't think it's any question that we have a problem to overcome," said Charles Harris, athletic director of Arizona State in Tempe. "Unfortunately, it's pretty clear that it's not gonna go away, and that it will certainly have some impact."

Dick Tomey, head football coach at Arizona, says that since the Nov. 6 vote, there's already been some negative recruiting engaged in against Pacific-10 Conference members Arizona and Arizona State over the King issue in the intense battle to woo high school prospects.

"We're gonna try to put a stop to it," he said, declining to elaborate on who is doing what.

Arizona State football coach Larry Marmie said he has noticed no signs of any backlash in recruiting. But Harris said the King issue "has come up."

And with all the adverse national publicity generated, Arizona basketball coach Lute Olson said, "We've had questions asked in situations that we haven't had questions asked before." This year's recruiting is virtually completed, but "you don't know if that might not sway it in the opposite direction" at the last minute, he said.

Players and officials, with the state's pro teams, the Phoenix Cardinals and the Phoenix Suns, also uniformly view the results as an embarrassment. But Suns president Jerry Colangelo and Cardinals coach Joe Bugel said it is too early to tell whether the King controversy will result in any free-agent players by passing Phoenix.

It may have already cost the state the 1993 Super Bowl. The NFL has said it will decide by March whether to move the week-long party to another state.

Harris, Olson, Tomey and Phoenix Suns coach Cotton Fitzsimmons all emphasized that passage of a King holiday is a moral issue.

So did Lute Sharpe, a Pro Bowl offensive tackle for the Cardinals. The vote "should have been decided on the merit of the proposition — for what Dr. King stood for and what civil rights mean," he said.

"People should point fingers at themselves. What do you think it does to the image of this state? We are definitely behind the times here, there's no doubt about that."

"I'm a black man who lives in this state. I have children who go to school here and some of the racial comments that both my wife and I have had to hear in the short time we've lived here is distressing. I don't know what the future holds for us."

But Olson said the message that is being disseminated because of the King vote "is so different from the atmosphere that I've seen that exists in this state with the majority of the people."

And Harris, who is black and who grew up in the South when it was still segregated, said, "I haven't found the environment or the atmosphere (in Arizona) to be dramatically different than anywhere else. Issues of sensitivities toward minorities or minority issues always exist. And that's a generational issue; it doesn't go away with a vote one way or the other, frankly."

Phoenix, Tucson and Tempe all have paid King holidays, as do 16 other of Arizona's approximately 80 municipalities. The state's Board of Regents in September 1988 swapped a paid King Day for Presidents' Day for the three state universities, which include Northern Arizona University.

Tomey, who was among coaches and administrators from both institutions strongly supporting holiday passage, said some parts of the country "still think that no community in Arizona nor no university, nobody in Arizona honors Martin Luther King's birthday."

But Arizona became the first state to put creation of a paid King state holiday to public vote, and 535,120 people voted against Proposition 302, while 517,854 voted for it. The measure lost by 17,266 votes, 50.8 to 49.1 percent.

Also on the ballot was Proposition 301, which would have swapped a paid King holiday for the already existing Columbus Day holiday. It lost 3-1.

Olson said the biggest problem "was the confusion on the propositions."

Tomey also said the King holiday has been an issue three or four times in a recruit's decision during his four years at Arizona.

He said there are "some strong feelings" over the issue, particularly in California, prime recruiting ground for Arizona and Arizona State.

NCAA regulations prohibit in-person visits with football recruits until Dec. 1, but Tomey said the King issue has arisen in telephone conversations.

He said he and his staff plan to bring up the issue "with everybody we're recruiting... because we know it's a concern. It's a concern to us as residents of this state."

Colangelo, who lobbied hard for Proposition 302 and noted that the vote cost Phoenix the 1994 NBA All-Star Game, said, "I am very, very disappointed. A lot of time and effort has been poured into this cause and I think our state will suffer greatly because of what I see as a mistake by the voters. I will not rest until this is approved."

Fitzsimmons added, "I have to think that half the people who voted against it are prejudiced. Maybe the other half had financial reasons. The point is, it's still the right thing to do."

Cedric Dempsey, Arizona's athletic director, said, "I think it's early to try to judge it at this point. When you're recruiting, any negatives people can use will be used. And whether that comes about will be hard to tell right now. Hopefully, some of these things will be resolved. It obviously is not a positive forus."

Tomey said, "But the facts are, it does impact economics, it does affect recruiting and so on. But I still think the thing that affects recruiting more than anything is the experience our people are having here." He said if they "feel good about being here, they'll articulate that to their friends and that's the bottom line."
