45 Demos sue to block U.S. attack

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A group of 45 House Democrats asked a federal judge Tuesday to block any order from President Bush for a U.S. attack on Iraqi forces unless he first obtained permission from Congress. The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, also seeks a declaratory judgment that Bush is required by the war powers clause of the Constitution "to seek a declaration of war or other explicit authorization of Congress" before launching an attack. "If the president takes it upon himself — as he may at any moment — to initiate such a war without the unequivocal consent of Congress, the victim of Iraqi aggression will be, not just Kuwait, but the Constitution of the United States," the lawmakers said in court papers. Rep. Ronald V. Dellums, D-Calif., who organized the filing of the lawsuit, said the court action is intended to force Bush to give lawmakers a chance to debate the wisdom of waging war on Iraq.

"We're saying the president of the United States cannot on his own make that kind of determination," Dellums told reporters. "There are millions of people in this country who have serious questions about us going to war." Lawyers for the Center for Constitutional Rights, which represents the lawmakers, asked U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greener, a liberal appointee of President Carter, to hold a hearing in 10 days. At issue is whether Bush should seek specific authorization from Congress before launching an attack on Iraqi troops, who invaded Kuwait in August.

The war powers clause of the Constitution gives Congress the power "to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water." The present confrontation between the United States and Iraq poses every conceivable test of the applicability of the war powers clause," the lawmakers said in court papers. ## Plane still missing after day-long search in Albion area mountains

By Brad Bowlin

Times-News writer

ALBION — Nightfall curtailed the search for a missing twin-engine airplane carrying bank documents from Salt Lake City to Twin Falls Tuesday. About 25 searchers from the Minicassia search and rescue team, the Cassia County Sheriff's office, the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office and some volunteers, scoured the mountains south of Albion without finding a trace of the white Cessna — Seneca — that had been scheduled to arrive in Twin Falls at about 10:30 a.m.

The Regional Express courier plane's only occupant was a Boise pilot in his 30's, Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said. Authorities did not identify the pilot. "He's a well-seasoned pilot" who flies the Salt Lake-to-Twin Falls route regularly, said Al Hall, Twin Falls Regional Express manager. The plane was about 30 miles south-east of Burley when the pilot last contacted the Twin Falls control tower at 10:05 a.m., said Steve Storey, tower manager. "He called twice and said he was having serious problems," said Mitch Barker, public affairs specialist with the Federal Aviation Administration office in Seattle. "At that point he disappeared from the radar." Near-blizzard conditions were reported in the area throughout the day. Search teams were hampered by blowing snow and steep terrain, and two search planes from the Twin Falls airport were forced to land due to bad weather, Crystal said. The missing plane is equipped with de-icing equipment, said Scott Stapp, Twin Falls air traffic controller. The plane's primary cargo is bank doc-

Soviets shift to U.S. view

Knights-Ridder News Service

PARIS — The United States Tuesday won general Soviet backing for a proposed United Nations resolution authorizing use of military force in the Persian Gulf, Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said. The officials offered no details of their consensus, which was reached late in the night after hours of closed-door discussions. The United States had urgently sought to rally the Soviets behind the use-of-force resolution aimed at forcing Iraq out of Kuwait. "Neither Baker nor Shevardnadze would use the words 'military force,'" and Baker said that no language of timing on a resolution had been agreed upon.

However, it seemed clear from their comments that they had broken the U.S.-Soviet diplomatic stalemate which has overshadowed the 24-nation European summit here of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. Meanwhile, U.S. and Soviet officials announced President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev are planning to hold a summit in January in Moscow to sign a long-range nuclear weapons treaty. The two new signs of U.S.-Soviet accord came scarcely 24 hours after Bush failed to win Gorbachev's public support for a U.S.-sponsored U.N. Security Council use-of-force resolution. "We are united today... and we will be united in terms of our future approach within the United Nations, within the Security Council," said Baker.

Single test for all students?

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A national test should be created so graduating high school students can demonstrate to American business an ability to read, write and compute "at world-class levels," a business leader told a House panel Tuesday. "Business has lost confidence that a high school diploma reflects actual skills gained," William H. Kolberg, president of the National Alliance of Business, told a subcommittee of the House Committee on Education and Labor. Kolberg said the government must set up a framework for a national examination system that would be administered by the states.

Student abilities would be assessed on the basis of predetermined national basic skills requirements, he said. There is growing controversy over the need to test all students leaving high school — not just those interested in attending college. Kolberg's comments come less than a week after the head of the nation's largest testing organization opposed the idea in a letter to the president's Education Policy Advisory Committee. "The $107 million a year in extra cash would be needed to eliminate the backlog over the next 20 years." The state currently makes just over $162 million from a combination of fuel taxes Please see ROADS/A2

Stockmen hoping for big cut in state grazing fees

By Mark Kind

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Stockmen hope to win a big reduction in grazing fees from an Idaho Land Board committee today, but if they push too hard, they may win the battle but lose the war. That's because State Auditor J.D. Williams favors a reduction, but not the big reduction cattle and sheep producers want. "I think I would be perceived as a swing vote," Williams said.

He chairs a Land Board committee considering a new formula for grazing fees on state-owned lands. That group could pass a big fee reduction today — one that knocks 91 cents off the $5.21 now charged monthly per head on cattle grazed on state land. That would leave the fee at $4.30 if the Land Board adopts the committee's decision Monday. Normally, sheep grazing fees match the cattle fee, but low lamb and wool prices persuaded the Land Board last June to grant a one-year reduction in sheep fees to $3.91 per head per month. Cattle ranchers want the reduction partly because national efforts to raise fees on federal grazing lands — now at $1.81 per head per month. Randall Brewer, chairman of the Idaho Cattle Association's Public Lands Committee, said during the association's annual meeting last week in Sun Valley that supporters of higher federal fees often point out that state grazing fees are considerably higher than the federal fees. Serving with Williams on the Land

Board grazing committee are Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa and Idaho School Superintendent Jerry Evans — both of whom are members of the Land Board itself — as well as Idaho Cattle Association President Bert Brummett and Idaho Sheep Commission Chairman Ennis Pickett. Williams said in an interview Monday that he wouldn't vote for a big across-the-board cut. Neither would Evans, according to the Associated Press. Please see GRAZING/A2

Weather summary

A winter storm system has produced local heavy snow in the eastern Idaho mountains as it moved eastward Tuesday.

Behind this system, snow showers were scattered across mainly the mountainous sections of the state. Other frontal systems will move through Idaho today and Thursday.

Skies were mostly cloudy Tuesday afternoon and a few showers were falling in the valleys. Precipitation amounts were heavier in the mountains, but they were expected to taper off Tuesday night.

Snow fell in the Twin Falls area before daylight on Tuesday, with intermittent showers of snow and rain mixed with snow during the morning. More snow showers fell in the middle to late afternoon, with only light accumulations. In some nearby areas, however, snowfalls were heavier and winds eroded drifts. Heavier snowfalls were reported on the mountains to the north and south of the Magic Valley.

Winds of 15 to 25 mph were common around the state Tuesday afternoon.

The daytime temperatures varied from the 20s and 30s in the south to the 30s and 40s in the north.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 50 degrees at Lewiston and Rexburg. Fairfield reported the coldest at 17 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 90 degrees at McAllen, Texas. The lowest was 3 degrees at Truckee, Nev.

Storms leave much of West in grip of ice, snow, wind

The Storms' Progress

A winter storm roared through the mountains of Idaho and Wyoming and down across Utah Tuesday.

The storm produced as much as 10 inches of snow in Yellowstone National Park, and mountain resorts in Utah received from 6 to 12 inches of new snow with an accumulation of 24 inches expected by midday Wednesday.

Colorado's flirtation with Indian summer was expected to break off again Tuesday night with a winter-like storm blowing into western Colorado just in time for the start of the Thanksgiving holiday.

The winter system was expected to bring gusty wind, blowing snow and sharply cooler temperatures to the state after a long stretch of unseasonably warm weather.

A winter storm watch was in effect for Wednesday for the higher elevations of the Cascade and Olympic mountains of Washington with as much as a foot of new snow expected.

At midday, snow was falling across the Rockies and over northeast New York state. Showers reached along the central coast of Oregon and the lower elevations of the Rockies.

Light rain fell over parts of Minnesota, North Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and the northern coast of California.

Wind gusts to 30 mph and 40 mph whipped across the Plains, with gusts up to 66 mph reported at Granddulle Pass in western Texas.

Snowfall amounts included 3 inches at Butte, Mont., 2 inches at Austin, Nev., as well as 1 inch at Ely, Nev., and Helena, Mont.

Tuesday's low temperature for the Lower 48 states was 18 degrees at St. Johnsbury, Vt.

Atlantis ends Suit-trip in Florida

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis and its five astronauts safely returned home from a secret military mission Tuesday, ending smoothly the first space shuttle landing in Florida in five years.

The shuttle, diverted from the California desert because of high winds and damp runways, swooped through a clear, brilliant blue sky and touched down at Kennedy Space Center at 4:43 p.m. Its arrival was heralded by the customary twin sonic booms.

"Welcome home. It sure was a beautiful sight," Mission Control told the crew.

It was Kennedy's sixth shuttle landing; the last one was in 1985, when Discovery blew a tire.

Workers had to scramble to prepare for the landing, assembling a "convoy" of support vehicles and bringing in extra personnel. Atlantis had begun its mission Thursday with an unusual nighttime liftoff.

Atlantis' commander Richard Covey and pilot Frank Culbertson Jr. emerged with the rest of the crew less than an hour after landing.

U.S. military action is not required in the gulf, "the war powers clause is a dead letter."

The lawyers said that Bush and other spokesmen for his administration, notably Secretary of State James Baker III, have repeatedly dodged the question of whether he would seek congressional authorization before launching an attack.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana told reporters that the lawsuit "involves very complicated questions involving standing to sue, the executive power, and we will respond completely."

"We will indicate quite clearly what we think the president's responsibilities are and what limits, if any, exist," Thornburgh said, suggesting the administration would file a hard-line response to the suit.

Unlike other recent court challenges to the president's power to dispatch troops overseas without consulting Congress, the lawsuit does not rely on the 1973 War Powers Resolution, which DeLoach called "an extremely weak reed."

Michael Ratner, an attorney in the case, said a pure constitutional chalenge gives lawmakers a firm claim that they are standing to sue.

In Paris, the White House spokesman said the White House would have no comment on "their right to pursue that legal remedy," and gave the opinion that a challenge based on the War Powers Resolution would result in a declaration of the unconstitutionality of the 1973 act.

Courts have been loath to rule against a president's use of military force in previous cases, generally ruling that the cases presented political questions that cannot be decided by judges.

But Ratner noted that two federal appellate courts held in Vietnam War cases that judges could rule on the issue of whether Congress had authorized the conflict.

The lawyers denied their court challenge would obstruct Bush's efforts to build up a military withdrawal from Kuwait before a shot is fired.

"Our country is built on dialogue," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., and the chairman of the House Judiciary subcommittee on the constitution.

uments, Hall said.

More than a $1 million worth of canceled checks written by Farmer's National Bank customers were on the plane, said Lee Cline, cashier for the Buhi bank.

The checks were returning to Buhi after being processed by the Federal Reserve office in Salt Lake. Unless they are recovered, Farmer's accounts won't be charged for the checks until they can be re-traced through the Federal Reserve and back to the places where they were written, Cline said.

"Our customers are not going to get charged as quickly as they are accustomed to," he said.

Searchers will be back on horseback and in four-wheel drive vehicles Wednesday morning to look for the missing plane if no word comes from its whereabouts overnight, Crystal said.

Looking for a white airplane in snow-covered mountains is difficult, volunteer searcher Ray Searle of Declo said.

"Everything we saw looked white," Searle said, adding that his four-wheel drive pickup got stuck in the snow more than once during the day.

The search would be easier if the airplane's emergency signal transmitter were leading rescuers to the scene, but the transmitter was not broadcasting Tuesday, said Dan Rattiner, Twin Falls air traffic controller.

"We would be able to hear it, planes overhead would hear it, the control center in Salt Lake would hear it," Bushman said.

The transmitter, which is required equipment on all planes, may not be working for a number of reasons, he said. The batteries could be dead or the transmitter's antenna could have been sheared off in a crash.

"Maybe he glided it down in a field and didn't hit hard enough to set it off," Bushman said. "That's what we're hoping."

But searchers early Tuesday afternoon abandoned their efforts in the sparsely populated farming corridor between Interstate 84 and south hills between towns from Albion to Murghat, Crystal said.

"We figure if he went down there, someone would have seen or heard the plane by now," he said.

Instead, officers had volunteers concentrated on the mountainous area west of Albion.

Conditions probably did not improve for search and rescue teams to prove for search efforts Wednesday, Crystal reported the weather had gotten worse Tuesday evening, and snow showers are predicted throughout the day.

and permit, license and registration fees.

To reach the $75 million target, the committee's preferred option involved a three-cent-per-gallon increase in the state's 18-cent-per-gallon fuel tax, doubling the registration fees for all vehicles and then simply dividing what would total $27.5 million in general tax revenue equally among the other government programs, like education, prisons and social services.

The committee made no recommendations for replacing that general tax money, Rep. Dean Haagen said.

The $50 million budget reserve fund for an election-year pork-barrel statewide road and bridge aid bill that Gov. Cecil Andrus accepted to finance that work has traditionally been financed with highway user fees like the fuel tax and local property taxes.

The panel's preferred option gained the support of five of the eight members at Tuesday's closing session. A second alternative that differed only in calling for a 10-cent-per-gallon increase in fuel tax hike was supported by three-four members.

Two other options, including one that proposed a $26.5 million statewide property tax dedicated to road work, received only a vote or two.

But while the committee said it reported to the full Legislature, it also preferred alternative to underwriting the program, the other options would be cited to give the responsible regular legislative committees a combination of alternatives to consider.

The panel also indicated that its recommendation on local option taxing and user fee authority was not intended as an endorsement of the current law, but only a directive that the concept be thoroughly reviewed by the House tax-writing committee next January.

Truck registration fees now range from $30 to $55.

The financing director would be accomplished by fully underwriting operations of the State Police, now covered by about $10 million in fuel tax and registration money, with general tax receipts and simply earmarking the revenue generated by a quarter-cent of the state sales tax to highway work.

The precedent for using general tax money and cash from the state surplus for road and bridge work was set last winter when lawmakers siphoned $15.5 million from the state's 1989 budget reserve fund for an election-year pork-barrel statewide road and bridge aid bill that Gov. Cecil Andrus accepted to finance that work.

That work has traditionally been financed with highway user fees like the fuel tax and local property taxes.

The panel's preferred option gained the support of five of the eight members at Tuesday's closing session.

Grazing

"Our charge is to get the maximum long-term return. Any time we get less than the fair market rate of return, we're violating our trust," Evans said.

But Brackett, Pickett and Cernarusa could outvote Williams and Evans on Wednesday, Williams said.

It was possible that we could have a 3-2 split," he said.

That would send the matter to the full five-member Land Board, where two members - Evans and Gov. Cecil Andrus - have consistently opposed grazing fee cuts. If Williams were to vote with Evans and Andrus, that would kill the fee cuts.

In March, Cernarusa and Attorney General Jim Jones favored a reduction to $4.21, which died when Williams disqualified himself from voting because he was temporarily trustee of his family's cattle ranch.

A 91-cent cut in the grazing fee to $4.30 per head per month - spread over 247,000 animal months - would take about $224,000 out of the state school fund, which in 1990 totalled $497 million.

But Williams does favor some reduction in the fees - perhaps back to the $4.71 level of last February, which he voted to freeze in place for the year.

Evans voted to freeze it, Williams said. "It looked to me that was about where it should be."

That motion failed, however, when Jones left the room before the vote, Williams said.

Currently, state grazing fees are set at six times the previous 24-month average price per pound of 500-pound calves. That formula has produced a fee that is among the highest state fees in the 11 Western states.

The new formula takes into account the value of the forage, average costs of production, prices received for animals, and includes an 11-state average in state grazing fees, Williams said.

Depending on how the ingredients are mixed, the formulas under consideration this week will produce a "base" figure between $4.30 and $4.94 per head of livestock, and their financing.

Ranchers pay $1.81 per head to graze federal land. The average cost of private Idaho grazing land was $6.93 per head in 1989, said Stan Hamilton, director of the Idaho Department of Lands.

By comparison, the average in 11 Western states for grazing leases on private land is $8.70 per head.

Some private leases in Idaho run as high as $15 per head, but "that would be very good ground," Hamilton said.

Hamilton argued that the state fee should be somewhat lower than the private lease fees because the state offers fewer services to ranchers than private landowners do.

The grazing fee committee meets at 2 p.m. today in the state auditor's office. The Monday meeting of the Idaho Grazing Board will be in the Gold Room at the Capital.

Rifts emerge among 'Keating 5' as congressional probe continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — An aide to one of the "Keating Five" senators questioned the accounts of two of the other lawmakers Tuesday, underscoring rifts among the men being investigated for their conduct in helping savings and loan owner Charles H. Keating Jr.

The fourth day of the Ethics Committee hearings lacked the emotion and drama of the two previous sessions, when the five senators defiantly denied wrongdoing and appealed for exoneration that could save their careers.

But the testimony by an aide to Arizona Republican John McCain underlined the deep differences between him, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr. Other subjects of the inquiry are Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., right, confers with his attorney.

McCain and DeConcini have markedly different versions of what they discussed in advance of a meeting on Keating's behalf with the nation's top thrift regulator on April 7, 1987.

And Riegle contends he played no role in organizing that meeting — which he did not attend — while McCain's aide said she and her boss believe Riegle played a key role in setting it up.

The committee of three Republicans and three Democrats is to determine whether the senators pressured regulators to go easy on Keating because of the $1.3 billion that he and associates gave to the lawmakers' campaigns and political causes.

Much of the money was given while Keating was battling thrift regulators and trying to save his failing Lincoln Savings and Loan, of Irvine, Calif. The federal government seized the institution in April 1989, and it may cost taxpayers more than $2 billion to cover the losses.

The five senators are no longer attending the entire hearings. Fulltime attention is in California for treatment of recently diagnosed prostate cancer. The others tend to appear when their particular conduct is discussed.

DeConcini and McCain were there Tuesday, and Riegle attended briefly.

Gwendolyn van Paassen, McCain's economics assistant, testified Tuesday that during discussions before the 1987 meeting with Edwin J. Gray, then chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, "I believed ... that Sen. Riegle was involved" in organizing the session.

Riegle told the committee last Friday that he met with Gray a month before the meeting and suggested Gray meet with senators concerned about treatment of Lincoln. But he denied organizing the meeting.

That session has become crucial to the case, because Gray and the committee's special counsel contend that during it DeConcini offered Gray a deal on Keating's behalf. According to Gray, DeConcini proposed that Keating would issue more home mortgages if the bank board would waive a rule that limited risky investments such as those made by Lincoln Savings.

DeConcini denied in testimony on Monday that any such deal was offered, and the three other senators present at the meeting — Cranston, McCain and Glenn — have backed their colleague's version in earlier letters to Gray.

Ms. van Paassen also testified that she added that publicity about the meeting would be more embarrassing for McCain than DeConcini because McCain had received more money from Keating — $112,000 to $48,000.

DeConcini reminded the committee Monday that McCain issued a press release in July 1989 that he attended the meeting with Gray of his own free will.

Ms. van Paassen's testimony also highlighted markedly different accounts by McCain and DeConcini of their preparation for the April 2 meeting.

The McCain staff member said she understood from her boss and DeConcini staff member that the two senators agreed to a limited agenda that did not involve any negotiations on Keating's behalf in his battle with the regulators.

She said she and McCain believed the session would be "a simple inquiry on behalf of a constituent." We were not concerned about Mr. Keating but about the 2,000 employees in the Phoenix area of Lincoln's parent company, the Keating-owned American Continental Corp.

DeConcini has denied that he agreed to limit the discussion. His lawyer, James Hamilton, read from an earlier McCain statement to the committee in which McCain said he did not believe there was a "binding agreement" between the two senators prior to the meeting.

22 from Lebanese heroin ring arrested

WASHINGTON (AP) — An undercover sting operation against a drug ring smuggling heroin from Lebanon into the United States led to the arrests of 22 people in five states and the District of Columbia, officials announced Tuesday.

Members of this Lebanese-Syrian heroin smuggling organization were responsible for the importation of hundreds of kilograms of relatively pure southwest Asian heroin into the United States, Europe and Canada, according to a Justice Department statement.

A source close to the case said the heroin was coming from the Syria-controlled Bekaa Valley in Lebanon and "Syrian courier" helpings. If anything, they are hindering us.

The 16-month investigation led to the seizure of 25 kilograms of extremely pure heroin worldwide, said the statement.

Of the 22 arrested, 18 were charged with conspiracy to distribute heroin, a charge that carries a possible sentence of life without parole. The other four are charged only with immigration violations. Their nationalities were not given.

Most were arrested in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area and Northern Virginia, while three were in Detroit, two in New Jersey and one each in Toledo, Ohio, and Miami. Another nine people, including one in Germany, are expected to be arrested as part of the investigation, dubbed "Operation Helix," according to an official familiar with the case.

The investigation began in Alexandria, (Va.), at the Four Seasons Restaurant, an undercover meeting back in the summer of 1988, said a DEA spokesman Cornelius Dougherty.

The two undercover DEA agents met with Wadgy Charif, a Lebanese man who was the alleged source of heroin, the statement said.

Charif told the agents that his father, Kamal Charif, a former member of the Lebanese Senate, owned and operated one of the largest heroin processing facilities in the Bekaa Valley, and could supply a DEA undercover agent with substantial quantities of heroin, "the statement said.

In the next 16 months, undercover DEA agents bought or arranged to buy numerous multi-kilogram quantities of heroin through the Lebanese sources, according to the statement.

The two Charifs were among the people arrested in the Washington metropolitan area.

The State Department's report on foreign drug supplies, called the International Narcotics Control Strategy Report, issued in March, noted that Syria controlled "the prime drug-producing area of the Bekaa Valley."

"We believe that Syria tolerates and profits from the drug production and trafficking in the areas over which it exercises control," the State Department report said.

The report said Lebanese production of opium — the raw ingredient for heroin — increased significantly last year to as much as 45 metric tons.

During that year, the U.S. officials believe Lebanon produced as much as 6.5-metric tons of heroin, with 4.5 metric tons coming from locally grown opium and the rest from opiates imported from Afghanistan, Iran and Pakistan.

CNN hands over Noriega telephone tapes to judge

MIAMI (AP) — CNN attorneys on Tuesday handed a federal magistrate a briefcase filled with tapes of Manuel Noriega's telephone calls, saying they were confident the recordings would show his rights were never violated.

The network acted in the wake of the U.S. Supreme Court's weekend refusal to lift the trial judge's order denying Noriega's request for tapes, and surrender them to determine if their use invaded Noriega's attorney-client right to confidentiality.

"We hope and are confident that the court will conclude that the prior restraint is not appropriate under these circumstances," said Steven Korn, chief counsel to CNN's parent company, Turner Broadcasting System Inc. "CNN believes ... that the conversations that were telecast were not attorney-client privileged conversations."

They transferred the tapes to U.S. District Judge William Hoelveler in his chambers, but the judge said he did not want to hear any potentially privileged conversations. He ordered them given to U.S. Magistrate William Turnoff, who will make and study transcripts and report his conclusions back to the Hoelveler, the judge assigned to hear Noriega's drug-smuggling trial.

No time limit was set, but Noriega's lead attorney Frank Rubino said the judge guaranteed it would done

"with dispatch." It was not known if the lawyers would be called in to consult with the magistrate, or if a hearing would be held when his report was issued, said Rubino.

Korn refused to say how many tapes were handed over, or to describe their contents or origins.

Agriculture secretary stays

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter has no plan to resign from the Cabinet, his chief spokeswoman said Tuesday, denying speculation he would soon step down.

Rumors have sounded on Capitol Hill and elsewhere that Yeutter was headed for greener pastures following completion of the 1990 farm bill and the conclusion next month of international trade talks.

One of the latest to surface is that Yeutter might be in line for an ambassadorship, perhaps to Germany, if that should become available.

Kelly Shipp, who has been Yeutter's press secretary since 1987, when he was President Reagan's U.S. trade representative, said reports of his leaving the cabinet soon, perhaps within 90 days, are "not true."

Specifically, on Yeutter seeking or being touted for an ambassador's job, Shipp said that "not true, absolutely, patently false."

On Tuesday handed a federal magistrate a briefcase filled with tapes of Manuel Noriega's telephone calls, saying they were confident the recordings would show his rights were never violated.

Housing plunge sets record but worse economic news still ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home building plunged 6 percent in October, the government said Tuesday, extending the longest construction slide on record, and linking housing starts to their lowest level since the 1981-82 recession.

Industry observers pointed to "shinking consumer confidence" and the growing inability of builders to obtain credit as causes of the ninth-month decline, the longest since the government began keeping track in 1959.

Many believe the slide will continue into mid-1991, especially in light of broader weakening in the U.S. economy.

"Consumers are scared to death," economist Martin Regalia of the National Council of Savings Institutions said, echoing the sentiments of many analysts. "They're concerned about their incomes."

"Business confidence is just as bad," added Thomas Holloway, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association. "We're also seeing the adverse impact of builders unable to get credit."

The Commerce Department said starts of new homes and apartments in October fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.04 million units. That was lowest level since construction of 902,000 units began in June 1982.

"The details of the October housing starts statistics indicate that the industry's condition is even more dire than had been thought," said Marilyn Schaj, an economist with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jefferette, a New York securities firm.

She noted that applications for building permits fell 6.8 percent to 925,000, the lowest level since 913,000 applications were filed in June 1982, "indicating that a rebound in starts is not foreseeable in the immediate future." Building permits are often a barometer of future activity.

Construction of single-family units dropped 1.0 percent to 854,000 units, a level Regalia said was approaching "recessionary" levels, which are the low 700,000s.

"But for Dan Pincus, a builder in Brick, N.J., it's almost better to admit we're in a recession so we can start talking about how to get out of it."

Customers are just running into holes," Pincus said, forcing his firm to lay off most of its workers and cancel projects. The crews that remain and his suppliers and subcontractors are being asked to wait for payment until his houses are sold.

"My cash flow has been stretched to the limit," he said. "We're down to building one house now, where we would have had three or four previously."

The construction industry has lost 185,000 construction jobs nationally in the last five months, including 80,000 in October, the Labor Department reported recently.

As a result, a panel said that declining construction often means declining sales of appliances, furniture and other home furnishings as well as building supplies.

Construction of multi-family units, such as apartments and condominiums, also plummeted, 23.2 percent to 187,000 units, after a 17.3 percent drop in September.

Analysts point to high vacancy rates in many areas of the country, which make builders hesitant to begin new projects and lenders reluctant to make new money available.

"The vacancy rates, the overbuilding have left us with inventories that suggest this weakness will continue," Regalia said. "In addition, some contractors are waiting for the government to issue regulations designed to make apartments more accessible to the handicapped before committing themselves to new projects. Starts in the Northeast, scene of some of the slowest housing activity recently, shot up 38.5 percent to 144,000 units."

Building site collapse affects UPI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fire officials Tuesday determined that no one was trapped in a massive cave-in at a downtown construction site that left six workers dead and 10 injured.

The collapse, which occurred at a site where United Press International is evacuating its headquarters, was not monitored for any warning signs of structural damage, he said.

"I have personally never witnessed anything of that massive nature," a fire department spokesman said. "We are trained for cave-ins like four feet wide. It reminded me of some of the videos out of Oakland, Calif., with the earthquake."

The sudden collapse on Monday night just four blocks from the White House swallowed several construction trailers, a large construction crane, part of an adjoining alley and several light poles. Witnesses said the accident caused a bright explosion.

At least 50 trucks delivered dirt to the site all day Tuesday, as engineers tried to reinforce the collapsed wall to prevent further erosion.

"They're going to be at it for days," said Charles Culver, director of construction engineering for the Occupational Health and Safety Administration, which is investigating the accident.

The collapse occurred when a reinforced wall failed Monday night at the half-block-square site.

Illinois woman cabinet hopeful

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is considering Rep. Lynn Martin of Illinois to succeed outgoing Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, an administration source said Tuesday.

Martin, who earlier this month lost a bid for the Senate seat held by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., told Bush last Thursday that she was interested in the secretary's job, said the source, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

A 10-year House Republican, Martin had talked to Bush about the job immediately after she lost the Nov. 6 election and then again last week before he left for his Thanksgiving trip to Europe and Saudi Arabia, the source said.

Constance Newman, director of the Office of Personnel Management, is the other candidate most frequently mentioned to replace Mrs. Dole, who is stepping down this week to become president of the American Red Cross.

New AIDS vaccine candidate to be tested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new AIDS vaccine candidate that has been shown to work in one chimpanzee was approved Tuesday for early human clinical tests, the Food and Drug Administration announced.

The candidate vaccine was developed through the cooperation of the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases, the National Cancer Institute and Immuno-U.S., Inc., a Rochester, Mich. branch of an Austrian company.

At a news conference Tuesday, company officials said the clinical trials will test the safety of the vaccine and determine if the 60 test subjects develop antibodies against human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), the virus that causes AIDS. This first step of human testing, called Phase I trials, will not use AIDS patients.

If the vaccine proves to be safe and shows promise, then Phase II trials will more thoroughly test for protection against AIDS. A final phase of testing would be required before the FDA releases the vaccine for general use.

The candidate vaccine is a genetically-engineered synthetic glycoprotein that was derived from the envelope, or skin, of the HIV1 virus.

If the vaccine proves to be safe and shows promise, then Phase II trials will more thoroughly test the safety of the vaccine.

This part of the virus envelope is called gp120. The theory is that the body's immune system will react to gp120 and develop antibodies. These antibodies then would trigger an immune response in the body should there be contact with the HIV virus.

Dr. Martha Eibl, director of AIDS vaccine research at Immuno AG, the parent company of Immuno-U.S., said that two forms of the vaccine were tested on four chimpanzees.

The chimps were injected with the candidate vaccine and then injected with the AIDS virus, using a dose that is 100 times the amount needed to cause an infection in the laboratory. All four of the chimps developed some immune response, and one of the animals remained free of AIDS.

It's again time of year to give thanks

DEAR READERS: Here's an update on my traditional Thanksgiving column.

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving, so why not take a few minutes to count your blessings? How's your health? You have a few minor complaints? Well, thank God they're not major. Obviously, you're still alive. You can probably think of at least one person who isn't around this year.

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal cords to utter human sounds, walk to the table on two good legs and read the newspaper, you've been saved by such concepts as the Lord! A lot of people couldn't. (Say a prayer for those who perished in a fire, a flood, an earthquake or an accident.)

How's your pocketbook? Think? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. No Medicare. In fact, one-third of the people in the world would go to bed hungry tonight. Would you rather be in Poland, the Soviet Union or Iraq?

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

God forbid! Are you lonely? The way to have friends is to be one. If nobody calls you, pick up the phone and call somebody. Go out of your way to do something nice for someone. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hoomey! Our system has been saved by such concepts as: If you don't like your elected officials, you can go to work and vote them out of office. We still have the soapbox and the ballot box.

Freedom rings! You can still worship at the church of your choice, or not worship at all if you don't want to. You can cast a secret ballot, or criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock at your door in the middle of the night.

And if you prefer to live under a different system, goodbye and good luck! You mean to go. There are no walls or barbed wire fences to keep you here.

In closing, I'll repeat my Thanksgiving prayer: Perhaps you will want to use it at your table tomorrow. Let one of the children read it.

"O heavenly Father, we thank thee for food and remember the hungry."

"We thank thee for health and remember the sick."

"We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless."

"O heavenly Father, we thank thee for freedom and remember the enslaved."

"May these remembrances stir us to service."

"That thy gifts to us may be used for others."

"And, dear God, please bless and watch over our men and women in the Persian Gulf and bring them home safely and soon. Amen."

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving, and may God bless you and yours.

— Love, ABBY

Help plants cope with low light

As days become shorter and sunlight intensity less and less, indoor plants have difficulty getting enough light for normal growth. You may want to consider moving indoor plants closer to a sunny window. Artificial light can also be used as a partial substitute for natural light.

We use a lot more plants to decorate homes than was the case a few years ago. Some plants are placed in areas that do not have enough light to sustain growth.

One way to compensate for low light is to temporarily move plants to a location with more light. Plants in a north-facing room or those that grow from a window can be moved close to a south-facing window. A plant in a high light location can be traded with one in low light at intervals of about two weeks.

During mid-summer, direct sunlight can be too strong for many inadequate natural light. Ceiling-mounted spot lights are effective in lighting a plant or group of plants.

Back-lighting a wall or shelf with fluorescent tubes which are close to the plants provides the most light. Tubes can be covered with a translucent plastic to hide them. A reading lamp can provide quite a bit of extra light to a small plant on a table.

To provide the greatest benefit, lights can be left on almost continuously. A few plants will have abnormally shaped leaves if they never get a dark period. Timers can be purchased which will turn lights on and off automatically.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Lakers' Worthy enters innocent plea in court

HOUSTON — Los Angeles Lakers forward James Worthy pleaded innocent on Tuesday to charges he solicited sex from two female Houston Police Department undercover officers before a game against the Rockets last week.

Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Jimmie Duncan set Worthy's trial for Jan. 15.

"We are in the process of assembling all relevant facts into this incident and we will have no further comment at this time," Worthy's attorney, Cornel Williams, said following Worthy's brief court session.

Worthy left the courthouse quickly, trailed by reporters and cameramen who followed the Lakers' star around the block while he searched for his limousine.

Room service for Foreman interrupts promoter's talk

NEW YORK — The crowd in Ballroom D at the Grand Hyatt Hotel was suddenly silent, and fight promoter Bob Arum stopped in mid-sentence. "A single voice rang out: 'Room service for George Foreman.' A little, old man pushed a cart into the big room. 'Room service for George Foreman.' It was a whole turkey, a tray of cheeseburgers and a silver chafing dish full of some unidentified porridge."

Foreman said, a broad grin creasing his face like a crack in a bowling ball. He went for the cheeseburgers.

Bengals coach Sam Wyche reports there may be leaks

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Bengals coach Sam Wyche, fined nearly $28,000 by NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue for barring female reporters from locker rooms, says the commissioner's office may be leaking internal reports to news organizations.

Commenting on "The McDonough" reported that the NFL's two-month investigation showed that aspects of one incident appeared to have been exaggerated.

Henderson wins AL MVP award

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson's dazzling array of talents — speed, power, batting and defense — outhined the sheer slugging of Detroit's Cecil Fielder to gain the Oakland Athletics' acceptance of the AL Most Valuable Player award Tuesday.

Henderson, one of the best leadoff men in baseball history, capped the finest overall season of his 11-year career by gaining 14 of the 28 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

His total of 317 points put him narrowly ahead of Fielder, who led the majors with 51 homers and drove in 132 runs. Fielder drew 10 first-place votes and 286 points in the voting by two writers in each AL city.

trley, who finished sixth in the MVP voting behind Toronto's Kelly Gruber and Chicago's Bobby Thigpen, got the other first-place vote.

Henderson and Fielder were the only players named on all 28 ballots. The award brought a $100,000 contract bonus to Henderson, who signed a $12 million, four-year deal a year ago. He is the fourth Oakland player to win the MVP: Vida Blue won in 1971; Reggie Jackson in 1973 and Jose Canseco in 1988.

Henderson, one of the best leadoff men in baseball history, brought together his many talents — speed, power, batting, defense — in the finest overall season of his 11-year career.

More than the slugging of Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire, it was Henderson who made the Athletics go this year. If he didn't open the scoring with a home run — a walk or single followed by two stolen bases and a sacrifice fly — he frequently started rallies that brought the A's back.

Golden Eagles prepare for challenge in Florida

By Larry Hovoy Times-News writer

OCALA, Fla. — "It's a national tournament atmosphere against some of the best athletic talent we'll ever see," summarized CSI Coach Fred Trenkle in preparing his team for the Central Florida junior college invitational this weekend.

The Eagles, carrying a 3-0 record, will go into the tournament as the No. 1 seed because they are ranked No. 3 in the preseason poll and the two teams ranked ahead of them were both beaten.

But if the Eagles win this one, it will be a very similar trip through the mine field one finds at Hutchison.

The Eagles open at 1 p.m. (MST) Thursday against Polk County, Fla., which is ranked seventh in the nation. If form then is followed through the tournament, CSI would go against No. 9-ranked Butler College of Kansas and then-host Central Florida, ranked No. 25.

"Everyone is saying already that the first game is the championship game — but winning it certainly doesn't mean you'll win the tournament. We have gone through national tournaments where we haven't faced this many ranked teams."

"The trouble is we're coming in as the top-ranked team and that means everyone is shooting for us. Right now they all think

Coaches, media make UI the Big Sky favorite

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho, which has won the last two Big Sky Conference men's basketball championships, is the preseason pick to make it three straight.

Both Big Sky coaches and the media picked the Vandals to add to the basketball titles it collected in the past two seasons.

The tongue released the poll on Tuesday. The Montana women, meanwhile, were just two votes short of unanimous selection by the coaches to repeat as Big Sky champions.

Idaho's men teams have posted a 50-12 overall mark, including 26-6 in Big Sky, over the last two seasons, but lost in the NCAA opening round both times.

Larry Eustachy is the new Mandal coach this season, replacing K. Kermit Davis.

Montana's male team was a close second in both polls. Idaho got five of the nine first-place votes in the coaches poll, and Montana, Nevada and Boise State got one each. Coaches were not allowed to vote for their own teams.

In the media poll the Vandals received 16 of 31 ballots cast by media covering the Big Sky, but five other teams got at least one vote for first. Montana received eight first-place ballots, Boise State got four and Weber State, Idaho State and Nevada one each.

Under Coach Robin Selvig, the Lady Griz have won the conference championship six of the last eight years and lost the championship game the other two.

Idaho, last season's runner-up in the women's title game, gained one first-place vote.

Denver Broncos like idea of game on Thanksgiving

The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Denver coach Dan Reeves figures the Broncos' soap opera might benefit by this week's move to Thanksgiving Day from its normal Sunday time slot.

"The short week might help," Reeves said Tuesday. "We won't over-coach them."

The Broncos' matchup with the Detroit Lions looked like a stroke of genius by NFL schedule-makers when it was announced months ago. The Broncos had played in the last Super Bowl and the Lions looked like playoff contenders after closing out the 1989 season with five straight wins.

Instead, both teams are 3-7 and beset with problems. Instead of fighting for playoff berths, the Broncos and Lions are trying to figure out what went wrong. "When you're looking at 3-7, the focus has simply got to be to win the next game," Reeves said. "You don't have time to think about the future or trends or anything like that."

Reeves had plenty of off-field problems to occupy his attention last week.

Quarterback John Elway went to a Denver columnist and complained about a lack of communication with the coach.

Offensive tackle Gerald Perry was charged with third-degree sexual assault and given a leave of absence. The woman involved was dating tight end Orson Mobley.

Cornerback Alton Montgomery was arrested for attempted assault after arguing with his girlfriend about a phone bill.

Boston's Clemens argues with umpire Rich Garcia after ejection.

Suspension will bench Clemens for 5 games

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Roger Clemens was suspended for the first time in his career for behavior which led to the Boston pitcher's ejection from the last game of the American League playoffs.

The penalty announced by AL president Bobby Brown will force the Red Sox star to miss one start. It comes a week after Clemens led the Boston Red Sox to a 3-1 victory over the Yankees in the AL Cy Young Award voting.

Although Clemens' appeal, Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman said, "Dr. Brown's statement and subsequent fine and suspension of Roger Clemens speaks for itself. Although we are not in agreement with the severity of the league's action, we are satisfied that the issue has been addressed."

Clemens was ejected by plate umpire Terry Cooney in the second inning of Oakland's 3-1 victory. But Cooney completed the A's four-game sweep Oct. 10. In his announcement, Brown cited Clemens for making "significant physical contact with an umpire (Jim Evans); threatening umpire Cooney; and verbally abusing umpire Cooney your mask off."

with personal obscenities and for not leaving the dugout immediately after the ejection."

Clemens was not immediately available for comment.

Last season, Clemens led the league for the second time in earned run average with a 1.93 mark. He was 21-6, the second winningest season of his career.

He finished second to Oakland's Bob Welch in the Cy Young balloting. Clemens won the award in 1986 and 1987 and was most valuable player in 1987.

Although Boston surprised preseason predictors by winning the AL East, the season ended on a sour note for the team and its star pitcher.

The altercation occurred after Clemens walked Willie Randolph, giving the A's, who led 1-0, runners on first and third. Cooney and Clemens got into a shouting match, and Clemens, trying to get closer to Cooney, bumped Evans.

After the game, Clemens and Cooney said that after Randolph walked, the pitcher shook his head near the mound. Cooney said he led Clemens. "I hope you're not shaking your head at me. He said, 'if you want to talk to me, take for verbally abusing umpire Cooney your mask off.'"

Arkansas prepares for rematch with No. 6 Duke

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It won't be necessary for Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson to give his second-ranked Razorbacks a Knute Rockne-type speech about George Gipp prior to Wednesday night's Big Apple NIT semifinal game against No. 6 Duke.

"I won't have to make a midnight speech or a morning speech to tell them they have an important game," Richardson said Tuesday. "I know they're fired up."

The experienced, talented Razorbacks are pumped up for the game at Madison Square Garden because it will give them a chance to avenge a 97-83 loss to the Blue Devils in last season's NCAA semifinals at Denver. It was the only time the teams have ever met.

In Wednesday's second game, No. 3 Arizona faces unranked Notre Dame. The semifinals winners play for the title Friday night, after the losers meet in the third-place game.

In last season's NCAA game against Duke, Arkansas rallied from an early deficit to a 7-point lead with about 10 minutes left. Then, "worn down" by the Blue Devils' pressure defense and pinpoint shooting, led by senior Phil Henderson.

"We worked so hard to catch up, we had nothing left to give at the end," Richardson said.

Richardson said that when his team took the lead, he had no intention of going to a "half-court" game.

"It's not my style," he said.

"I went to the dance with the girl I married and I wanted to come home with her. I don't want to do any second guessing. They were mature and a better team. The milk is spilled. I can't pick it up."

"We're looking forward to the rematch."

This time, the Razorbacks are the more mature team. They have two seniors and three juniors in their starting lineup, while Duke starts one junior, three sophomores and one freshman.

Idaho Supreme Court ruling makes good sense

Score one for the guys in the white hats.

In the ongoing cops-and-robbers contest being played out in the nation's courtrooms, the cops got a little help this week from the Idaho Supreme Court. The court, carefully balancing the needs of law enforcement with the rights of suspects, found room to make the job of police a little easier.

The ruling has to do with exclusion of evidence gained with an invalid search warrant. The question is this: If police get a search warrant and make an arrest, but the warrant later turns out to be legally flawed, should the case be thrown out? In this case, it was a drug search by Twin Falls police that resulted in a marijuana conviction.

The court's 3-2 split indicates just how ticklish this issue is.

Many people probably would say, "Hey, the guy got caught with the dope. Put him in jail and never mind the technicalities." But the Bill of Rights, whose 200th anniversary we celebrate this year, guarantees all citizens protection against unlawful search and seizure.

This guarantee means police can't search your home or car on a whim. They have to show probable cause that a crime has been committed before they can obtain a warrant.

It also means that, when the searches turn out to be illegal, judges must toss out the cases. If they don't, then the guarantee is toothless. Unfortunately, when they do toss out cases, criminals sometimes go free.

Ticklish indeed.

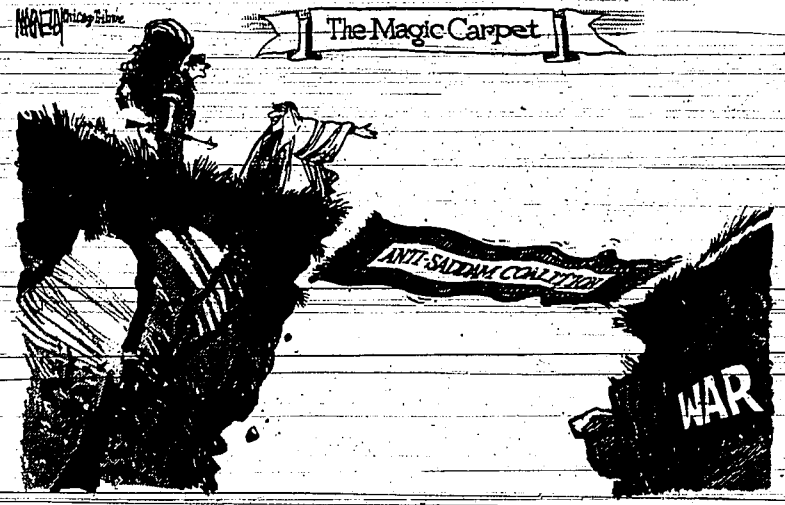

But three of the five Idaho justices, taking their cue from federal courts, found a good compromise.

If authorities issued the search warrant in good faith — but accidentally muffed the process a bit — then the case can stand, the court ruled.

That ruling should please police and prosecutors.

Those same authorities, however, received a quiet warning from the court: Don't make these mistakes too often. A pattern of similar errors would begin to look like abuse of judicial leniency.

Altogether, the ruling makes sense. It should help the white hats catch the black hats, without infringing on the rights of innocent bystanders.

What's holding up the contract?

To the Filer School Board:

We are 57 days into the school year and we have not settled our contract. So what is the holdup?

"Do you think the teachers don't want to settle? Our negotiating team has worked hard for the last nine months. When the school board decided to hire Gates and Bohannan, we presented petitions asking for the board to reconsider. We just want to talk to the board: We have waited patiently while you chose a new superintendent. We spent six hours in a meeting with Gates and Bohannan and a mediator. We presented you a petition from the members of Filer's community asking for a settlement and showed our support for talking to the board by showing up at a board meeting. Then Bob Lanting and our team sat down and talked. Our negotiators felt like we could come to an agreement at the next meeting Nov. 12.

But what happened? The school board went to a state board meeting and talked to Gates and Bohannan. Suddenly, we are negotiating illegally. So who's going to sue the board? The teachers? They want a settlement. The community? They want a settlement. Gates and Bohannan? They want to earn $6,000 more next year from Filer.

By not sitting down and talking to us face to face, Gates and Bohannan are the only ones who have anything to gain. The school board has much to lose in the eyes of the community and the teachers.

As teachers, our primary concern is the education of Filer's children. Shouldn't the school board take care of those most responsible to the students?

Oman was just doing his job

I guess when I read in the paper that the cattlemen didn't like the way that you wrote your story about their meeting and the secret deal that they cut with Ranger Oman's boss to get him transferred, it was the straw that broke the camel's back.

First, let's look at some of the problem. I think that we all should realize that Mr. Oman didn't make the laws that he was hired to enforce. I doubt that he was given a list of laws to ignore because of political pressure. So he probably went out to do the job that he was hired to do.

War not as great as it seems

Those of us who think war is the cause for liberation of Kuwait is a great thing obviously either haven't fought in a war. Remember the human tragedy both sides suffer or know how it would feel to have a loved one risking their life on the front lines.

The following genocidal scenario depicts what would happen if such a war were to be fought.

Five million men and women are taken to Death Valley National Monument in California. Five hundred thousand of them are lined up, side by side, from the northern side of the park to the southern extremities. Each one of them is issued as machine gun and some have bazookas loaded with chemical and biological rounds. They are told to face the sun to the West.

Twenty feet in front of these people are the other 500,000 men and women who were told to do the same. Only these individuals are told to turn to the East facing the moon — this group being equally armed.

The signal is given and all at once, they begin shooting.

Seconds later, all but a handful have been killed and most of these are injured and/or infected with the chemical and biological weapons that they have been exposed to.

The result: mass extermination for no apparent cause.

As American citizens, we must hand together (like sensible 21st Century human beings should) and start conducting world affairs as a nation of people united instead of having a small group of individuals dictate whether or not mass groups of people are sent off to a hell hole to be killed.

Fossil bed information wrong

I don't know where you got your information and ideas about the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument.

I can't speak for the City of Rocks, except that if it acquired its status the same day as the Hagerman National Monument, when then President Ronald Reagan signed the bill, not "earlier this year," as you state in your Nov. 14. You also comment that "there shouldn't be hunting in high density tourist areas" but then say that the hunting ban was ludicrous. We all know that there was a ban on hunting on any National Park Service land. We were trying to get protection of the fossil beds, and other considerations were secondary.

When the Hagerman Fossil Beds Council first pursued national monument status for the fossil beds, the information we received from the BLM was to the effect that within a few years of monument status, tourist count could range from 250,000 to 500,000 per year.

This was by comparison many other Western parks and monuments; partly due to the very close proximity of the freeway to the fossil beds.

There's been something very wrong with the comments as reported in your paper previously about how the lack of hunting situation came about. Prior to the time when Mayor Meric Owsley and I went to Washington, D.C., (representing the HFC) to testify regarding the HFBNM bill, the HFC held many meetings.

Who protects our servicemen?

They protect us, do we protect them?

I want to let all the citizens of the United States of America know exactly what I mean when I say, "Do we protect them?"

My brother, a Marine lance corporal, was sent overseas to the Middle East to defend the U.S. interests.

He was deployed on Aug. 26, 1990, to Saudi Arabia to discover what it was like to use special Marine training to survive the deserts, heat and also to maintain control in defending the cause. He found that there were no tents, MRE dehydrated foods to eat, outstanding heat and humidity and bugs he had never heard of.

Meanwhile, here in our safe environment, a local bank decided that their interest in a vehicle purchased by the Marine lance corporal was not protected due to his deployment. The bank decided to harass the family of the Marine.

They proceeded to continue this for 6 1/2 weeks starting three days after deployment. When the family tried to work out some type of payment arrangements to help out until the Marine's frozen account could be accessed, the bank wanted payment in full or repossession was inevitable. To the point of deployment, the Marine had kept up his payments.

This was the first time he had fallen behind, which was only 36 days.

He did not have time before they shipped him to get his personal arrangements worked out.

He was on red alert for approximately 30 days prior to leaving.

So now to make a long story short, the Marine's vehicle has been repossessed, and all this time, he knew nothing about it until notified by his family.

His credit is ruined and he will return with no vehicle to drive.

His family has not been able to access his accounts until a "power of attorney" can be signed, which is fairly hard to accomplish in the desert where there are no known notaries of the public.

A remarkable event occurred in our home the other day that has everything to do with the imminent war in the Middle East.

Five kids brought home 36 A's and 4 B's. So we celebrated with a pair of ribs and steaks. (If I boast, let it be God's boast.)

What's remarkable? I don't require 'em to go to school and even encourage them to play hooky once in a while. I don't encourage them to get A's. It's OK if they do, but it's better to learn than follow the law of the grade. I told one of them that's too grade-conscious recently, why don't you try getting an F for a change, see if you can do it? I tell them that what they're being taught isn't of much importance. That the most important lessons are about knowing, loving and serving Him. Nothing must do with whatever is the square root of 81.

Neither do we allow them to go to kindergarten. Their childhood is too important for that. College? Well, I don't encourage it but if you know that's God's will for you, then go for it. Just don't pick Sodas University, please.

The "perk" pump is at a maintenance garage at E Street Southeast between First and South Capitol. It is outside a highway shack and is open seven days a week from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

There are no prices on the pump. The gas billed at about $1 per gallon is paid from office funds.

The taxpayers union estimates the cost for car, driver, maintenance and gas is about $75,000 per VIP. A list of VIPs is then given in the article — House speaker, majority leader, minority leader, minority whip and others.

Another item in the write-up is as follows: "Secretary of the Air Force had a government 'Gulfstream III' jet take him and his wife from D.C. to South Bend to see the Notre Dame football game against the Air Force Academy. The plane costs $1,892 an hour to fly."

Also, $500,000 has been set aside for the birthplace of band leader Lawrence Welk. Free mailing of $24 million will jump to $35 million to send notices of their accomplishments.

The Library of Congress study estimates that the House postage bill will top $136 million this year.

Iraqi lawmakers vote to free German hostages

The Associated Press

Iraqi lawmakers voted Tuesday to allow all German hostages to leave Iraq and occupied Kuwait, following a personal request by Saddam Hussein.

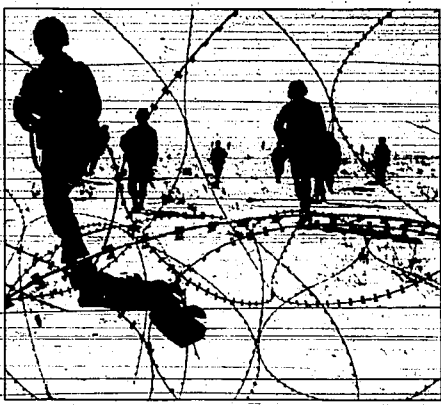

There was only one dissenting vote. The vote came after 90 minutes of debate, during which the lawmakers heard from at least 10 of the "guests," as Iraq calls foreigners barred from leaving since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The hostages who addressed the National Assembly said freeing the Germans would encourage European countries and the United States to show their willingness to avert war and negotiate a settlement to the Persian Gulf crisis.

Parliament speaker Saadi Mahdi Saleh said there were 124 Germans remaining in Iraq and Kuwait. No specific arrangements were made for their departure.

In Paris, German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said of Iraq's action: "I believe we should appreciate above all that the hostages are to be freed."

Also Tuesday, the chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff said Saddam's order sending 250,000 more troops to Kuwait was a publicity Saddam met in Baghdad with delegations from France and Switzerland on Monday and told them more Europeans would be allowed to leave, the official Iraqi News Agency reported. A Dutch company reported that 105 Dutchmen, 14 Belgians and three Britons who completed a government-commissioned dredging project will be permitted to depart.

Hundreds of foreigners have been prevented from leaving since Saddam's troops overran Kuwait, and the Western allies have accused Saddam of trying to use the hostages to split the alliance against him.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted Saddam as saying that freeing the Germans would encourage others to distance themselves from the Western allies pushing for war with Iraq. German Chancellor Helmut Kohl told Bush this week that a peaceful solution was still possible. "Whoever believes the problem can be solved militarily must consider not only the mission, but the end of the whole undertaking," Kohl said.

Media invaders also fill Saudi desert

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Daf, Peter, Tom, Ted and Sam are on the duty roster.

Bryant and Willard have come and gone, but The Juice has just arrived for Thanksgiving football.

They are part of a multinational force invading Saudi Arabia. No, it's not a military exercise for Operation Desert Shield. It's an influx of media, soon to be joined by White House reinforcements for Thanksgiving Day.

As of Tuesday, 517 journalists had registered with the Joint Information Bureau, the media center run by the American military and the Saudi government. Since Operation Desert Shield was deployed in August, more than 1,200 journalists have signed on. More than 300 are flying with President Bush, due to meet and greet the troops on Thursday.

Two at ABC to the "Voice of America" from the American Spectator to the Wall Street Journal, reporters are combing the sands. There's a veritable cornucopia of alphabets: CBS, NBC, CNN, BBC, ITN and PAOs, which is military speak for public affairs officers, whose job is to escort the media.

It's not just an American show. There are reporters from Britain, France, Germany, Japan, Italy, Greece, Portugal, Brazil and Egypt among others.

Nobody is making a bigger splash than ABC, which has nearly 50 people on the Joint Information Bureau registry. The network is running five shows out of Saudi Arabia, including its nightly news program with Peter Jennings.

Dan Rather of CBS and Tom Brokaw of NBC fill out the anchor spots, while CNN has a current crew of 19.

"It's been a major commitment on our part. We've earned our stripes," said Jim Miller, who heads CNN's operations in Saudi Arabia.

Willard Scott of NBC's "Today" show broadcast live all last week, and Bryant Gumbel was here earlier. Former football star O.J. "The Juice" Simpson arrived Tuesday and will appear with U.S. Marines on Thursday's NBC program that precedes pro football.

The onslaught has turned the miniature golf course and a garage roof of the main media hotel into "Satellite Alley" because so many of the dishes are bouncing signals off orbiting electronic stations.

Nearby is a carpeted and air conditioned tent that will serve as the White House media center. Joint Information Bureau officials have told some PAOs they will be so busy that they should postpone their turkey dinners for a day.

The media glare is a bit bewildering to the Saudis, whose Islamic kingdom has never before been under such scrutiny.

Ex-CIA official says Iraq 'casing' some U.S. bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iraq is "casing" American military installations in the Middle East as possible terrorist targets if war breaks out in the Persian Gulf, a former CIA official said Tuesday.

"I don't believe the Iraqis are going to unleash that capability against the Americans at this time," said Vincent M. Cannistraro. "But they are certainly preparing themselves, positioning themselves to do so once the situation changes."

He spoke at a luncheon sponsored by the National Strategy Information Center Inc., a private group concerned primarily with Soviet intelligence activities.

Iraq, he said, would like to split Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Morocco away from the U.S.-led coalition trying to liberate Kuwait from Iraq.

Beyond that, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is "casing American targets," preparing for terrorist attacks against U.S. military and other official installations, Cannistraro said. "They are preparing for an operation in the event a green light is given to conduct one," Cannistraro said. "That means having a good book on the targets. ... They are preparing themselves."

He said Saddam would probably order the attacks "at the time an outbreak of hostilities in the Gulf occurs."

Cannistraro, chief of operations and analysis at the CIA's Counter Terrorism Center for two years until his resignation in September, said he didn't think the Soviets, who had close ties to Baghdad, were involved with the operation he described.

"All the signals are the Soviets are professing a new religion on the subject of terrorism," Cannistraro said.

He said Iraq is providing weapons, money and information to various groups, including one headed by Palestinian militant Abu Abbas, as well as the Iraqi-backed Arab Liberation Front.

Thatcher vows fight for party leadership

PARIS (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher waited only a few minutes Tuesday to declare that she would fight on in a contest for the leadership of Britain and the Conservative Party.

"I am naturally very pleased that I got more than half the parliamentary party and disappointed that I did not quite enough to win on the first ballot," she told reporters outside the British Embassy, where she had received news of the voting of party parliamentarians in London.

"So I confirm that it is my intention to let my name go forward to the second ballot," she added, appearing determined and composed.

Mrs. Thatcher failed by only two votes to gain a "first-round" victory over former Defense Minister Michael Heseltine. She received 204 votes. Heseltine gained 152 and 16 Conservatives abstained. A first-ballot victory required 206 votes; but a candidate needs only a majority to win in the second round next Tuesday.

Mrs. Thatcher, who was in Paris for a European summit, was expected to come under pressure from some of her allies to step down rather than prolong the contest. The opposition Labor Party also sought to take advantage of the political infighting by proposing a motion of no confidence in her government.

After talking very briefly to reporters, she went back to the Embassy. She had earlier warned her host, President Francois Mitterrand, that she might be a little late for the evening's entertainment in Versailles.

Earlier, Europe's longest-serving prime minister had busied herself with top-level meetings and, according to sources close to her, avoided telephoning London for updates on the election.

Mrs. Thatcher started the day in talks with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Mitterrand and continued with a series of meetings with the heads of state of Turkey, the Netherlands and Bulgaria. The talks were dominated by events in the Persian Gulf, sources said.

Fighting erupts in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Hundreds of rebel fighters attacked more than a dozen military positions in El Salvador on Tuesday. At least 20 people were killed and 46 were wounded, the army said.

The fiercest fighting was in the eastern provincial capitals of San Francisco Gotera and Usulután, where combat lasted more than five hours.

Fighting was reported in seven of the nation's 14 provinces.

Leftist guerrillas also attacked the main air base on the outskirts of the capital, damaging one aircraft and an airman's dormitory, and several military positions within a 15-mile radius of San Salvador.

Rebel sabotage damaged electrical installations and power lines affecting about two-thirds of the nation, the government electrical company said.

The armed forces reported five soldiers, eight rebels and seven civilians dead. It said 27 soldiers, eight rebels and 11 civilians had been wounded. Hospitals and relief workers gave a higher toll — 25 — for civilian wounded.

Hospital sources in the provincial capital of Usulután reported at least 11 civilians, including two children, had been admitted by midmorning.

Rescuers in the capital said they had evacuated 14 wounded civilians from three nearby towns.

A rebel communique said the coordinated attacks in the eastern, northern and central sectors of the country were a national campaign to punish the army for human rights abuses and intransigence at the negotiating table.

The Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front, or FMLN, attacked major garrisons in the east at Usulután and San Francisco Gotera shortly after 2 a.m. with mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and rifle fire.

5 die as PLO, Israelis battle

AIN ATTA, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops attacked a squad of PLO guerrillas near Israel's self-designated security zone in southern Lebanon, and one soldier and four guerrillas were killed in the firefight, police said Tuesday.

Ten other guerrillas fled, two bleeding of wounds they suffered in the night-long clash with Israeli troops and allied militiamen of the South Lebanon Army.

The military command in Israel confirmed the clash near this village, about three miles north of Israel's so-called security zone.

Gunmen kill shoppers in Sikh holy city

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Masked gunmen, suspected to be Sikh separatists, opened fire on shoppers in a crowded market on Tuesday, killing at least 13 people and wounding 15.

The assailants cut electric lines to the Krishna Kot market and walked down the street firing automatic rifles at people thronging shops before they closed for the day, police superintendent Sanjeev Gupta said.

At least 13 people were dead on arrival at the nearby Govt. Ty Bhandur Hospital, Gupta said. Eleven victims were Hindus and two were Sikhs, he said.

According to United News of India, at least 15 people were killed by Sikh militants in other parts of Punjab state on Monday and Tuesday.

B.S. Bhatia, a doctor at the hospital in Amritsar, said eight of the 15 injured were critically wounded. "Most of them have been shot in the face or chest," he said.

Bhatia spoke in the emergency ward of the hospital, which was besieged by relatives and friends of the victims. Some of the wounded screamed in pain.

At Krishna Kot, shops and restaurants were open, but unattended. Residents and many shopkeepers were among the victims or had taken the wounded to the hospital.

Subhash Kumar, a resident of Krishna Kot who witnessed the attack from the roof of his home, said the victims were standing outside shops when they were gunned down. "I saw at least three people killed outside a video store," he said. "Two others were killed in front of a restaurant."

Kishan Lal, one of the wounded, said he saw at least five or six attackers. "They came on foot and they were masked," he told reporters from a hospital bed. Lal sustained a bullet wound in his left leg.

One 18-year-old boy said he survived because he stopped to smoke.

Burma opposition leaders sentenced

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Burma's military rulers have sentenced two opposition leaders to 10 years in jail, their toughest move yet against the party that won May's general election, a political source said Tuesday.

The sentence came on Monday, the U.N. General Assembly took up a resolution demanding that the government free its political prisoners and expressed concern about its failure to hand power to the National League for Democracy after its landslide poll victory.

A military tribunal in Rangoon sentenced the league's Kyi Maung and Chit Khaing on Monday, said the source, who was reached in the Burmese capital from Bangkok and spoke on condition of anonymity.

Kyi Maung, 72, was the party's acting leader and a retired army colonel. He was considered a moderate and a potential mediator.

Vandals damage church in Jerome for 2nd time

JEROME — For the second time in a week, vandals have damaged St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

Rev. Baldwin Camin, pastor of the church, went to the church Tuesday and noticed a light post had been damaged, a window had been kicked in and several outside water faucets had been turned on, resulting in about $50 in damage to the church at 1301 N. Davis St., Jerome police officer Patty Ward said.

On Nov. 13, vandals pulled out heavy-duty electrical wires, damaged gutters, hosing and removed switch plates. City police are investigating the incidents, Ward said.

JEROME — A local man who crashed into a convenience store early Tuesday morning is scheduled to be arraigned today on charges of driving under the influence, driving without privileges and failure to show insurance.

Jose Felix Sanchez, 29, could not be arraigned Tuesday because his blood alcohol level was still at 19 nearly eight hours after the incident, said Patty Ward of the Jerome Police Department. The state's legal limit is .10.

Sanchez pulled into the Circle K parking lot on Main Street at about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday, and kept going into the bumper of his 1975 Chevrolet sedan went through the east wall of the store.

Police estimated the damage to the store at $5,500. The sedan suffered about $500 damage, Ward said.

School cost estimate up by $500,000

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Architects designing a new middle school and additions to the high school estimate that the buildings would cost $9.5 million, or $500,000 more than school officials initially projected.

However, part of the increase is to cover contingency costs like inflation. Design West Architect Jim Coles told School Board members Tuesday night.

"We're trying to keep this total issue down as much as possible," Coles said.

The School Board will decide early next year whether to hold a bond issue election for a new middle school and new additions to the high school including a gymnasium, 10 classrooms and an auditorium.

Design West architects showed floor plans for the different proposals.

The auditorium and performing arts center would include seating for more than 600 overhang in front of the stage would have room for either portable seating or an orchestra pit.

The auditorium, which would be separate from the main campus, would be built where the painted rock is located northeast of the high school and close to music rooms.

Architects reduced the size of the gymnasium from earlier estimates. It would be the size of a full basketball court and have seating for 400. The gym would have its own locker rooms and it would be used mostly for physical education classes.

The building would also include 10 regular classrooms.

"The main thrust of this gymnasium is to give more room for physical education classes," Design West Architect Dean Schultz said.

The new middle school, which would be built on property the district recently purchased north of North College Road, would

Magic Valley motorists got a taste Tuesday of driving conditions that may last through Thanksgiving. Here a fast moving snow storm reduces visibility on a road south of Wendell.

Holiday brings stormy weather

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — As folks sit down to turkey and cranberry sauce Thursday, they may find themselves thankful they traveled safely through inclement weather.

"There's a whole series of winter storms that will swing through the intermountain region all Thanksgiving weekend," said Bill Galkin of the National Weather Service in Kimberly. "It may be the pits."

The cold, wet storms are hovering over the Pacific coast and should be moving right over Idaho every 12 to 24 hours, Galkin said, making travel treacherous in almost every direction. He recommends keeping posted to the current weather and road conditions on the radio or television before hitting the road.

The storms look like they'll bring rain and snow at 3,500 to 4,000 feet, but could turn out to be just heavy clouds overhead.

On Tuesday, Galkin predicted rain and snow for this afternoon and evening.

Another storm probably will bring rain to the Magic Valley and snow to the mountains on Thanksgiving day, he said. It may warm up Saturday and Sunday, however.

"Just drive carefully," he said. Drive slowly and carry chains, a shovel, warm clothes and snack food, he said.

Travel toward Salt Lake City, Ketchum and south toward Wells could be snowy.

Travel to Boise, at a lower elevation, shouldn't be as bad, but the road could have icy spots, Galkin said.

Overwide road conditions call 336-5600. For southern and central Idaho road conditions, call 886-2266. Reports are updated three times daily.

Closed for the holidays

TWIN FALLS — Although it is probably safe to finish shopping for that Thanksgiving meal before Thursday, a few grocery stores will remain open for those last-minute items.

Most local businesses and government offices will be closed, however, during the long holiday weekend. Although some grocery stores and retail businesses remain open on Thanksgiving day, it's a good idea to call ahead for store hours.

Bank branches, the post office and most courts will remain closed over the holiday. Grocery stores and retail businesses remain open on Thanksgiving day, it's a good idea to call ahead for store hours.

Nearly all downtown stores will be closed, but many will be open longer hours on Friday, Saturday and Sunday to accommodate holiday shoppers.

Whitely plans innocent plea, attorney tells U.S. magistrate

The Associated Press

BOISE — An attorney says an 80-year-old Oakley rancher plans to plead innocent to federal charges that he threatened a U.S. Forest Service official.

Winstlow Whitely is charged with a federal misdemeanor, interfering with a Forest Service officer in the performance of his duty last September.

The New York Times earlier this year quoted Whitely as saying he and other ranchers would cut the throats of Twin Falls District Ranger Don Oman if they got the chance.

The Forest Service has been in conflict with ranchers in the South Hills area over the agency's enforcement of grazing permits in the Twin Falls District. But the agency notified the Idaho Cattle Association recently it will not transfer Oman because of the conflicts.

Whitely did not appear in court Tuesday, but Twin Falls attorney Bart Browning represented him and told U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams that Whitely wanted the case heard in District Court.

Williams said a court appearance will be scheduled as soon as the necessary papers are filed. After the court session, Browning said he was advised the rancher intended to plead innocent.

Williams told Browning the maximum penalty for the misdemeanor charge is a $500 fine and six months in jail.

Gooding contractors doing without building inspectors

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Local contractors no longer have anyone to inspect their buildings, but city officials say they are working on the problem.

The State Building Inspector has officially notified Gooding that his office will no longer inspect structures built in Gooding.

The move came after the City Council asked for termination of the city's contract with the inspector's office.

Several contractors attended a City Council meeting earlier this month to complain about the high rates the state office was charging. The council decided to look for an alternative. Mayor Gene Heller said he will contact the Gooding County building inspector, Keith Clark, about inspecting for the city, either on a retainer or on an individual-personal service contract basis.

Heller also said he would ask Howard Winegar, the building inspector in Hagerman, if he would be interested in the job.

Heller said he would have a full report on the outcome of these interviews at the Dec. 3 council meeting.

Problems stemming from a delayed water diversion will be alleviated somewhat next summer. The council voted to give City Attorney Craig Hobbey $150 to file a diversion application for three decreed water rights the city holds on the Little Wood River.

The diversion point for the water is currently on the west end of town. The application is to move the diversion 2 1/2 miles east. Heller said the move would allow the city to access the water before other water rights holders. He claims some of those water rights holders have been taking more than their allotted amount of water and cheating the city out of its much-needed water.

Hobbey will apply for both a pump diversion and a gravity flow diversion change with the Department of Water Resources.

In other business, city residents will be able to voice their opinions concerning the proposed drainage correction on Main Street during two public meetings scheduled for the next two weeks as well as the Senior Citizens Center.

The Senior Citizens Center has applied through the city's office for a state grant to improve facilities. A public hearing on the subject has been scheduled for the regular City Council meeting on Dec. 3.

A public work session concerning drainage repair on Main Street, meanwhile, has been tentatively set for 7 p.m. Monday.

Heller said the council will meet with J.U.B. Engineers to put together a "pock-age" so merchants on Main can understand each phase of the repair program.

Fee on air tickets cited as way to pay for improvements

By Phil Salton
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A fee toward 200 air-line tickets might raise up to $90,000 annually for the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

The fee, called a passenger facility charge, was approved by Congress at the chaotic end of its last session. Money raised from the charge would go toward airport improvements, such as remodeling the airport terminal. But the funds also could be used for runway repairs and other projects.

Twin Falls Airport Manager Ron Madson said the fee could be no higher than $3 a ticket. The airport's consulting engineer, Dale Riedesel, whose contract with the airport recently expired, said the fee potentially could bring in $80,000 to $90,000 a year.

That money, along with up to $300,000 a year in money from a federal aviation trust fund, could go a long way toward remodeling the terminal. The regional airport's allotment from the trust fund this year is going toward ramp improvements.

Madson described the passenger facility charge as a user fee.

"It could be a vehicle to eventually get a terminal remodeling going without going to the public for a vote. That way those who use the terminal would pay for it," Madson said.

Riedesel said money from the fee and the trust fund might enable the city to take out a loan to remodel the terminal instead of going to the voters and selling bonds. Federal funds could pay for up to 75 percent of the public-use areas of a remodel terminal.

Both men made their comments at the monthly meeting of the Airport Advisory Board. The board met without a quorum and without a Sun Valley representative attending.

The agreement between Twin Falls and Sun Valley regarding the airport is scheduled to expire in December 1991.

Greg Kadlec, advisory board chairman, and other advisory board representatives have suggested letting the agreement die and replacing Sun Valley's representatives with two from Twin Falls city or county.

Sun Valley Mayor Ruth Lieder suggested to her City Council in October that they sever the agreement with Twin Falls. The council, however, decided to send one of its members to the next Airport Advisory Board meeting.

That meeting was held Tuesday. Also at the meeting, Madson told the board the airport earned high marks in a recent inspection by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The inspection includes runways — badger holes along the side of runways must be filled every day in case a plane should veer off the runway — as well as approach lights — how well runway paint reflects light, emergency response of firefighters and numerous other aspects of his airport operation.

"Overall, the airport looks very good this year and the items requiring attention are small or administrative issues which are common at many airports," the FAA report states.

Solution to Hanford waste tank problem years away, officials say

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — It will be years before a solution is found to the problem of potentially radioactive nuclear waste storage tanks at the Hanford nuclear reservation, officials said Tuesday.

Hydrogen building up to potentially explosive levels in some tanks was revealed by the U.S. Department of Energy last March.

Since then, scientists have studied a variety of plans for finding out exactly what is inside the most dangerous tank, known as 101-SV, and how to deal with the contents.

Deputy Hanford manager Phil

Harris said Tuesday a plan for taking a core sample of the tank is at least two months away.

Even learning the exact contents of the tank is at least one year away, Harris said.

"There will be more surprises," Harris predicted, as engineers review old documents and past practices to learn the contents of the tanks.

Don Provost, a Hanford expert for the state Department of Ecology, said the state is satisfied with the progress in solving the tank problem.

Tuesday's technical briefing — Hanford officials — highlighted Sunday's removal of three probes from inside the storage tank. Scientists will study residue clinging to the outside of the probes as a first step in determining exactly what is inside the million-gallon tank. The residue totals about a cup and a half of material.

"We have a poor knowledge of what materials are in 101-SV," Harris said.

The contents of the storage tank produce hydrogen, which appears to have become trapped under the crust that floats at the top of the waste, officials have said. That hydrogen, which can build up to explosive levels, periodically vents through filters.

Officials worry that an accidental ignition source such as a spark from a probe could trigger an explosion that could collapse the tank and send radioactivity into the atmosphere.

Because of that, work on finding a solution has been slow.

The probes that were removed Sunday were part of normal monitoring systems that were routinely removed in the past. But all such work was put on hold after the explosion problem was identified.

It will take 30 to 45 days to study the waste material scraped from the probes, said Terry Blankenship, tank manager for Westinghouse Hanford Co., which operates the 177 tanks for the Energy Department.

Among the things officials hope to learn is whether the crust itself is flammable in case of an explosion, he said. Ron Gerton, head of the tank program for DOE, said resolving the explosion issue is the agency's top safety priority.

The Richland DOE office has created a special group of 23 federal and contractor employees to solve the problem, Gerton said.

That is a change from the past when production of plutonium for nuclear weapons was Hanford's top priority, Gerton said. That work is being phased out. The most recent venting of hydrogen gas occurred last Oct. 24 when 7,000 cubic feet of gas was released. Westinghouse said the hydrogen concentration in the space above the waste level of the tank reached 4.5 percent for 30 minutes, Westinghouse said.

Racism trial witness sentenced for assault

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — The star witness from last month's white supremacist trial in Portland was sentenced Tuesday for kicking a man in the head with heavy boots during a "skinning" initiation.

As the result of a plea bargain with the prosecution, Dave Mazzella, 21, pleaded no contest in Jackson County Circuit Court to a reduced charge of fourth-degree assault.

He was sentenced to six months in jail. Mazzella must serve three years of probation after his jail term. As a condition of the probation, he agreed not to associate with any organization that promotes white supremacy.

The original charges of first-degree assault and two counts of second-degree assault were dismissed in connection with the August attack against Anthony Bounds.

Jackson County Sheriff's Capt. Bob Kennedy said Bounds was beaten by Mazzella in an initiation rite for the Southern Oregon Skinheads at Emmigrant Lake Aug. 4.

Since then, both Bounds and Mazzella have said they were no longer racist skinheads or involved with the white supremacist movement.

Driver cited in Oregon bus wreck

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (AP) — State police cited the driver of a Greyhound bus Tuesday after his bus rolled onto its side on an icy stretch of U.S. Highway 97, leaving 23 people injured.

Troopers said 22 of the 29 bus passengers and a passenger from the sports car were taken to Merle West Medical center in Klamath Falls.

Nursing supervisor Mike Darger said six were admitted, and the others were treated and released.

The bus was southbound 50 miles north of Klamath Falls when the wreck occurred at 11:50 p.m. Monday.

Senior Trooper Josie Stanton said the bus was passing a sports car when it hit the car and forced it off the road. The bus then ran off the other side of the highway and hit some trees, spun around and rolled on its side.

She said the roadway was a solid sheet of ice at the time of the wreck.

The driver of the sports car, Ann Marie Jenkins, 19, of La Pine, was uninjured, troopers said.

Most of the injuries were minor scrapes and bumps and bruises, Darger said. Most of those admitted for treatment were elderly and some suffered broken bones, he said.

"We could have had a lot worse," he said.

William R. Lewis, 26, of Eugene, said he was riding in the back of the bus in a window seat when he saw the driver try to overtake the sports car.

"It just started fishtailing. Then it started sliding fishtailing," he said.

Lewis said at one point he thought the driver would regain control, but then the bus went over an embankment and crashed.

Blind Commission

BOISE (AP) — Public agencies can't charge the Idaho Commission for the Blind, or any other nonprofit organization, rent for allowing food service facilities in public buildings.

And those agencies can't operate vending facilities to benefit their "fun funds" unless they first notify the Blind Commission or other nonprofit groups of the opportunity, an attorney general advisory says.

Edward J. McHugh, administrator for the Blind Commission, asked for the advisory.

He said the commission has met "resistance" from some agencies, which prefer to operate vending machines to benefit employee "fun funds" or to expect payment to the funds.

The state Food Service Facilities Act makes it clear that handicapped people are to be given first priority in operating food service facilities in public buildings, the advisory said.

It was prepared by Deputy Attorney General W. Dallas Burkhalter.

The Blind Commission must be given first priority to operate such facilities, then any other proposal from an organization representing the handicapped.

"A governmental agency may not grant a food service contract to any other party unless it determines in good faith that no nonprofit organization representing handicapped persons is willing or able to provide satisfactory food service," the advisory said.

Panel wants more funding for junior colleges

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A special legislative committee is recommending the state should expand its financial commitment to community colleges, but it fell short of backing any specific method of underwriting the multimillion-dollar bill.

The House-Senate panel endorsed a bill that would require the state to more than double its financial support of the existing two-year schools in Twin Falls and Coeur d'Alene from 40 percent of the operating cost to 85 percent over the next decade. The state is spending just over $3 million this year for the College of Southern Idaho and North Idaho College.

The committee plan would phase out the current local property tax support that accounts for about 25 percent of the support for those institutions. Student fees and other miscellaneous revenue would continue to make up the difference as they do now.

House Education Chairman Janet Lay, R-Hampden, maintained such a move would put the two-year schools on an equal financial footing with the four-year colleges. But Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, questioned the wisdom of making such a recommendation when the method for financing it remains up in the air.

"Unless we are serious about coming up with a new tax or some other source of revenue, then I don't know if talking about phasing it out will do any good," Noh told committee members on Monday.

Idaho Falls voters will consider next May a property tax increase to finance operation of a two-year school there, and officials believe that the requirement for a two-thirds majority to pass the proposition will sink it.

"Acknowledging that, the committee agreed to continue looking at state financing options like a tax on carbonated beverages that has been blasted by the soft-drink industry and authority for counties to use sales or income taxes rather than property tax to foot their part of the bill.

"Wrapping up its summer and fall review of the state's junior-college situation and ways of improving it, the committee recommended creation of six community college regions in the state with each of the four-year schools making their current community college programs independent.

Each region would be under the scrutiny of a citizens council that would develop, implement and monitor proposals for community outreach and vocation programs in public schools.

In addition to recommending construction of a community college in Idaho Falls, the panel also called for creation of a community college in southwestern Idaho by the end of the decade.

INEL chemical plant could restart in December

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — After more than a year, and many missed deadlines, major operations at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant could start up again in early December.

A lengthy, costly project to upgrade underground pipes at the plant is nearly done, and waste calcining and fuel processing should begin shortly.

"I think we've just finished tying the bows and ribbons on those jobs," said Bob Campbell, executive vice president at Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co. WINCO. WINCO is the Department of Energy's contractor at the plant.

The repping was required to meet federal environmental standards. It has effectively shut down two major operations at the plant, one of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's oldest and largest facilities.

That has displaced about one-fourth of WINCO'S 1,600 employees, shifting them from production jobs to training, decontamination and inspection work.

Earlier, WINCO management said it hoped to open the plant in spring, a deadline later moved to mid-July and then again to December.

Many of the delays were administrative.

Attorney general says state's new ethics law is tough

BOISE (AP) — Efforts to weaken the ethics in government bill approved by the last Legislature actually made it very tough, Attorney General Jim Jones says.

The 1990 Legislature passed two ethics bills, after three years of debate on the subject. A corrupt practices bill prohibits public employees from using their employment for personal gain. Another measure requires public employees to report conflicts of interest. Both measures became law July 1.

Jones said his original proposal wasn't as strict, but an effort to amend it in the Senate to weaken it actually made the ethics measure much stronger by imposing a strict $50 limitation. No public official can accept any gift worth more than $50, or receive a benefit valued at more than $50, he said.

He said Tuesday it still is unclear whether that limit will apply to a biennial event for legislators, the North Idaho tour. Shortly after every legislative election, sponsoring organizations spend $500 to $600 per legislator on air fare, rooms, meals and travel.

"We're still looking at that," Jones said. The law impacts anyone who has business with the Legislature, but it is unclear whether a loosely knit group of companies would meet that definition, he said.

"The new practices required by the ethics laws should inspire more public confidence in government servants," he said. "However, at least one surprising change has occurred — an almost-flat prohibition against public employees receiving the benefit of anything over $50," he said.

In guidelines prepared by Deputy Attorney General Frank Walker, chief of the Intergovernmental Relations Division, the attorney general's office said:

"It would be improper for Twin Falls Highway District commissioners to accept a weekend of golf and accommodations at Sun Valley from a construction company doing business with the district.

— A public servant may not cash in on his public position by making compensated commercial endorsements. Walker concluded that Idaho Falls Mayor Tom Campbell should not accept a free cruise trip in exchange for endorsing the cruise.

4-state search launched for overdue plane

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Authorities launched a four-state search Tuesday for a small plane that departed here Monday night but failed to arrive at its destination in Southern California.

Civil Air Patrol spokesman Jerry McDonough said the plane was carrying a pilot and one passenger and was headed for Thermal, Calif.

An aerial search was conducted in a direct line from Grand Junction to Thermal, but there was no sign of the plane, he said.

Searchers have not heard a signal from the emergency locator transmitter, he said. No information on the plane was available immediately.

The plane departed Walker Field airport in Grand Junction at 7:40 p.m. Monday, he said.

Initial reports indicated the plane was on a return trip to California, possibly starting its journey in South Dakota.

High winds hampered the search effort in some of the mountain areas.

Gets your attention

Q. In the movies, what's a "MacGuffin"?

A. An inanimate object that holds your attention without actually doing anything. Like a fireplug in a spy show scene. Alfred Hitchcock coined the term.

Most popular name among 19-year-old women nationwide is Jennifer. Among 19-year-old men, Jason.

No less an authority than the National Institute of Mental Health has published the claim that the average first-born child is more intelligent than the child with older brothers and sisters.

If ink won't erase, you can't "undo" it. If it will erase, why don't you call it "deleble"? That's a good word.

BOYCOTT

Q. Our word "boycott" started out as a man's name. Who was the man?

A. Captain Charles Boycott, a land agent who collected rents during the 1880 Irish famine. Merciless fellow.

Boycott: Nobody would have anything to do with him.

You and I don't think left-handed people are immoral, but a lot of ancient Romans did.

John Bartlett ran the University Book Store in Cambridge, Mass. Every time a browser asked him who wrote this or that, he jotted down the query on a notepad. Such collected notepads made up the first edition of Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations."

The U.S. Government between 1912 and 1918 washed its circulated paper money and put it out again.

SUPERSTITION

You can trace most superstitions back to practical origins, but this one is baffling: Many women in Thailand, however well-educated, refuse to drive a nail into a wall when she's expecting. Think it could make the child ugly.

In Cleveland, Ohio, you can't get married in a bathing suit, not legally.

If you don't think publicity is important, consider this: More than 250 species of marsupials carry their young in pouches. But other than kangaroos, how many can you name?

Idaho/West Groups optimistic on salmon

BOISE (AP) — Groups attending the "salmon summit" are mostly optimistic that the talks could lead to a plan to save the dwindling supply of Pacific Northwest salmon.

But groups pushing for endangered species protection for the salmon say they still plan to go ahead with that request.

Jack Robertson, deputy administrator of the Bonneville Power Administration, said he's optimistic because "people believe that a total, integrated solution is necessary," instead of "some sort of piecemeal, temporary solution."

Sue Frederick, representative of the Shoshone-Bannock Indian Tribes, said the tribes are concerned because no apparent progress is being made toward saving the fish runs. "The problem is real; we have to find a real solution," she said.

Conservation interests took a dim view Monday of BPA's new proposal to save wild salmon runs, claiming it doesn't meet an earlier agreement to treat fish and power equally.

The conservation and outdoor groups had their own proposals Tuesday.

Eric Chaney, Eagle, director of Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited, suggested that BPA should shut down its hydroelectric dams on the Columbia-Snake system for brief periods, allowing young salmon to pass through the dams unharmed.

"I hope to see the dam as the last process to protect migrating fish."

Jim Baker, Northwest representative for Friends of the Earth, said he wanted to push conservation. Conservation could reduce the need for power, which means more water could be used to protect fish, he said.

"Conservation offers an excellent opportunity to reduce the need for electricity," he said.

"I hope to see an opportunity to put some of them on the table" at the salmon conference.

Those present at a news conference during a break in the salmon summit expressed frustration that the salmon problem has been studied for years, but not much seems to get done.

"The issues have been studied to death. We've been at this for years," said Baker.

"The time for denial (that there is a problem) is over," said Chaney. "If we're not going to do something quick, somebody else will do it."

"This nation is not going to stand by and let the largest salmon run become extinct."

He acknowledged it is "hard to accomplish in four months what we have failed to do in four decades. But we have to try."

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., set up the "salmon summit" in hopes of heading off a potentially economically disruptive endangered-species designation for the runs.

He sets Feb. 1 deadline.

Election loser drops ethical bar-complaint

MOSCOW (AP) — An independent candidate for the Idaho Senate says he may drop an ethical complaint he talked about against Craig Mosman, who beat him for the Senate seat.

Mosman said the announcement by Andrew Schwam proves the talk of a complaint was a political stunt, and said Schwam lied about raising the charges in the first place. He said he's seen no evidence of it.

Schwam, a former district judge, ran as an independent and finished second in the November election, who won with just 36 percent of the vote.

Republican Gary Scott finished third.

"Who cares?" said Mosman, Latah County prosecutor. "The election is over."

In the closing days of the campaign, Schwam alleged that Mosman should never have handled a case as prosecutor when his father, Moscow attorney Roy Mosman, represented the defendant. The case involved the University of Idaho basketball player Lorenzo Nash, charged with delivering cocaine.

Mosman said there was nothing unethical about it.

Schwam disagrees: "The actual prosecution was handled by Mosman's deputy, Robin Eckmann."

The bar needs to tell the world that an attorney who holds a public office can't face close relatives in court," said Schwam. "In retrospect, I regret that I started with a complaint."

Death Row inmate granted trial to challenge ruling on marriage

BOISE (AP) — In a case headed by a constitutional showdown, a court on Monday was granted a non-jury trial on its claim that prison officials are illegally preventing his Death Row inmate.

But Idaho Solicitor General Lynn Thomas contended any marriage between the two would create an unacceptable security risk.

Rejecting a motion by the state to dismiss Creech's civil lawsuit, Ada County Magistrate Michael Denmark scheduled a "three-day" evidentiary hearing to begin Dec. 5.

Under tight security, Sheryl Lynn Miller was allowed to attend the hearing at a small courtroom inside the Idaho Maximum Security Institution south of Boise.

"It's great to see Tom," Miller, 32, said afterward. "I'll stay here up now for the next three weeks."

Thomas hopes a legal triumph will put a permanent end to Death Row marriage proposals and add some substance to a 1987 U.S. Supreme Court decision which held that Missouri prison restrictions violated a fundamental right to marry.

"We're making a legal stand here," he said.

In arguing against Creech's marriage request, Thomas asserted that Miller would be entitled to regular visitation rights should she marry the inmate, and that would create a major security risk.

Thomas said letters from Miller to Creech talk about helping him get out of prison. And an informant revealed that Creech apparently enlisted a corrections officer to help him escape.

In an affidavit filed with the court, prison investigator Steven Duell concluded, "I strongly believe... that this escape plot was very real and could not be taken lightly, due to Mr. Creech's previous violent behavior prior to and during his incarceration."

Representing Creech will be Dennis Chamey, a 25-year-old University of Idaho law student who is offering assistance through the college's Legal Aid Clinic class.

Chamey has a limited license to practice law with supervision by an attorney.

Creech and Miller hope to reverse a Feb. 27 decision by Arvon Arava, warden of the Idaho prison, denying their marriage request for security concerns.

Also this year, Arava denied permission to Thomas Gibson, another Death Row inmate who wanted to tie the knot. Gibson has a similar legal challenge pending.

"Mississippi native Miller began her relationship with Creech four years ago as a cross-country pen-pal. They were engaged to be married in March 1989. Spending most of the 1980s on Death Row, Creech, 40, was sentenced to death for a 1981 prison slaying. Creech was also convicted of earlier slayings in California and Oregon."

School board thinks law on side of prayer

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Wearing a lapel button that read "I long as there are tests, there will be prayer in schools," Grangeville School Board Chairman Trent Woods indicated Monday he believed the law — as well as God — may be on the board's side in allowing prayers and Bibles in public schools.

"There is a very definite question of legality in this case," Woods said at a School Board meeting. "It's not a black-and-white issue as the (newspaper) editors would have you believe."

At issue was a commencement prayer and Gideon Bibles, which the board decided last month to continue in the district despite a possible legal challenge from the American Civil Liberties Union.

Earlier this year, the ACLU objected to prayer in Ketchikan public schools and using churches for school events.

Grangeville School District trustees said they believed the majority of patrons in the district favored commencement prayer and allowing the Gideons to distribute Bibles.

"Of all the controversial decisions I've been involved in since I was on the board, I've never had one that got more support," Woods said.

Board members supported a lawsuit filed in the Madison School District at Rexburg, challenging the ACLU's position.

University department merger touted as benefit

MOSCOW (AP) — The dean of the University of Idaho's College of Agriculture says Idaho's farmers and ranchers should benefit from the merger of the animal science and veterinary science departments at the school.

Larry Brannen said the merger of the two departments means the college will provide a more integrated approach to solving problems faced by the animal production industry.

The animal science department has focused on nutrition and reproductive physiology, while the veterinary science department has focused on diseases. At last week's approval by the Idaho Board of Education, the two departments will be consolidated next month.

Brannen said the merger makes sense since the University of Idaho's role in the cooperative program in veterinary medicine between Idaho, Washington and Oregon has changed dramatically in the past two years.

He said no faculty on the Moscow campus now are directly involved in the program.

Only three veterinary science faculty are left on the Moscow campus.

"Having a small unit on campus doesn't make a lot of sense," Brannen said.

Seven veterinary science faculty members at the university's Caine Veterinary Teaching and Research Center in Caldwell will be involved with WOI and focus more on production medicine, he said.

The center provides fourth-year veterinary medicine students with part of their training after they take their first three years at Washington State University.

Fraternity loses recognition due to pledge hazing

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho says it has withdrawn recognition of the local chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity because of a pledge class hazing incident.

The school said Tuesday it was withdrawing recognition in addition to sanctions levied by the Interfraternity Council and Pan-Hellenic Council last week.

Bruce Pitman, dean of student advisory services, announced the action after parallel university and national fraternity investigations into allegations that a pledge class of 19 was subjected to sleep deprivation, verbal abuse and mental hazing.

The Moscow chapter of the fraternity subsequently refused to discuss the investigation's findings with university officials and representatives of the Greek organization governing bodies.

"The investigations confirmed the hazing charges and we found some evidence of minor physical abuse, which occurred during the chapter's pledge class activities," Pitman said. "We have said all along these are serious charges which will be dealt with seriously."

Withdrawal of recognition means the local SAE chapter will not be permitted to use university facilities or be permitted to participate in rush for incoming freshmen. It has no academic impact on the status of individual students who are fraternity members.

Sanctions will remain in place until the fraternity petitions for reinstatement and it is granted.

Larry Brannen, dean of the College of Agriculture, said the merger makes sense since the University of Idaho's role in the cooperative program in veterinary medicine between Idaho, Washington and Oregon has changed dramatically in the past two years.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Learn the ABC of science before you try to ascend to its summit."
— Ivan Pavlov.

"I played you for the diamond ace instead of the king," alibied East. "Had you held that quick entry, we would have kept South from scoring more than one spade trick."

An accurate statement as far as it went. What was the main fallacy in East's analysis?

East allowed the spade jack to drive out South's queen, and South took the losing club finesse. East tried to reach West in diamonds, but South took his ace and settled for 10 trick tricks. He couldn't afford the diamond finesse, since the game might have failed had East held the spade length, including the ace.

What about East's feeble defense? Was he right to duck at trick one? To get the answer, imagine that West has the diamond ace and South has the king and queen. When East's diamond shift goes to West's imaginary ace, the spade return gets only two winners if South goes right and blocks the suit. However, if West has either the diamond king or the ace, East beats the game by taking his spade ace immediately and shifting to diamonds.

The key to the defense lies in dummy's semiclosed club suit and East's sure entry in that suit. Since the chances of establishing three diamond winners are better than playing for three spade winners, and the extra spade trick for South rates to be insignificant, the spade ace at trick one is the better play.

ANSWER: One no trump. With a square hand (no ruffing values), the one-no-trump response is better than the single raise.
