Ice sometimes looks nice

A sure sign of wintry weather in the Magic Valley is the formation of hundreds of icicles on the Snake River Canyon wall. With low temperatures predicted in the teens to near 20 this morning, the process should continue.

Senate witnesses call for caution, patience in gulf

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Even as the United Nations-inched closer Tuesday to giving a green light for war in the Persian Gulf, Congress heard pleas for caution and patience as it opened hearings on the critical decisions facing President Bush in the weeks ahead.

With momentum building for what could be a costly armed clash in the region, the Senate Armed Services Committee opened hearings on the military and economic implications of war.

Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate committee, said the "question is not whether military action is justified. It is. The question is whether military action is wise at this time and in our own national interest."

The Georgia Democrat expressed dismay about Bush's decision to boost American troop strength in the region as a possible prelude to offensive action. "After just three months," the administration has gone from the original military mission of deterring further Iraqi aggression, defending Saudi Arabia and enforcing the embargo to a military mission of liberating Kuwait," he said.

Former CIA Director James R. Schlesinger, who also is a former secretary of defense and of energy, told Nunn that Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein's economy "is rapidly becoming a basket case."

An almost airtight economic embargo imposed by the United Nations, he said, appears to be working faster than expected. "It is the most successful ever achieved since World War II," he said, adding that Iraq's military power would be "seriously weakened" as the embargo bit harder.

U.S. could lose 10,000 lives

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A six-month war against Iraq would result in the deaths of 10,000 American soldiers, the wounding of 35,000 others, and direct military spending of $80 billion, a retired Navy admiral told a congressional committee Tuesday.

But U.S. forces should be able to oust Saddam Hussein and capture the Iraqi capital of Baghdad in about half that time, or roughly three months, according to a prospective scenario prepared by the Center for Defense Information.

The private think tank's director, retired

Rear Adm. Gene R. La Rocque, outlined the projections as Congress began to weigh the potential costs — both human and financial — of initiating military action in the Persian Gulf crisis.

His estimates, which he described as the "best professional judgment" of military specialists at the center, dealt with information considered highly sensitive by the Pentagon and rarely discussed in public.

The risks of a U.S. military attack on Iraq were outlined at a hearing before the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee, which is examining the economic impact of the gulf crisis.

Big farmers to pay share of potato marketing costs

States News Service and The Times-News

WASHINGTON — A little-noticed provision in the 1990 Farm Bill will force big spud farmers to pay their fair share for industry advertising efforts.

"This is the end of the free ride," said Bob Mercer, president of the National Potato Board. "It's time for everybody to start paying."

The new law will make more money available for potato promotion. The Potato Research and Promotion Act, a bill sponsored by Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, and passed by Congress in October as part of the 1990 Farm Bill, eliminated a loophole that allowed farmers to reimburse their annual assessment of promotion fees from a budget administered by the National Potato Board.

The board, a Denver-based organization that conducts potato-market research, spends about $1 million a year paying farmers back, Mercer said.

Only 4 percent of the farmers demanded refunds, but these potato growers were among the largest foreign and domestic producers and were responsible for providing 17 percent of the total $5 billion bud-

Jones rules GOP controls Senate

By The Times-News and Associated Press

BOISE — Republican Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter can cast the tie-breaking vote at the 51st Legislature's organizing session next week to give the GOP operating control of the evenly divided Senate, Attorney General Jim Jones said Tuesday.

"It's not surprising. Anybody who reads the (Idaho) constitution Article 4 Section 13 can't have any doubt," said Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer. Republicans have control of the Senate plus one, and will appoint the Senate leader, Darrington said.

In a non-binding legal advisory, Jones, an outgoing Republican, said the state constitution places no limits on the tie-breaking power of the lieutenant governor as the presiding officer of the Senate and that the Senate's own rules incorporate provisions of a more comprehensive procedural manual that says the lieutenant governor can break ties on votes for candidates.

The only time a candidate would come to a vote in the Senate, Jones said, would be in the selection of the chamber's presiding officer, the president pro tem. The Senate will convene its organizing session Dec. 6 with 21 Republicans and 21 Democrats, the first time in 30 years the GOP has not been in clear control.

"Our constitution was not written in a void," Jones said. "It's got to be common sense that there has to be a way of breaking a tie in the organizing session."

Otter, who won a second four-year term on Nov. 6 without opposition from the Democrats, was traveling out of Boise and could not be reached for comment.

Republican Sen. Laird Noh of Kimberly agreed with Jones' interpretation of the constitution.

Initial recount confirms Ada Republican victory

The Associated Press

BOISE — Democrats lost one bid to tip a now-evenly split state Senate clearly to their control on Tuesday when the recount of a narrow Republican victory in Ada County confirmed the results of the official election canvass.

And the failure of the recount to reverse Republican Rep. Ed Osborne's win over Democrat Don Lojek has helped to hold the formal notice-of-contest-to-Osborne-victory filed just before the recount began.

But Democrats, looking for any edge to overcome a 21-21 Senate split and claim a working majority for the first time in three decades, still held out hope for the recount in the 179-vote victory of former Republican Allan Larsen of Blackfoot over Democratic Sen. Jim Christiansen of Aberdeen in southeastern Idaho. Over 41,000 votes were cast in that race.

A formal notice of contest, alleging voting irregularities, has also been filed in that race.

Another recount in the seven-county southeastern Idaho district is also under way in the 22-vote re-election win of Republican Rep. Myron Jones of Malad over Democratic challenger Mike Hovey of American Falls. Democrats filed a formal notice of contest in that race as well. Those notices ask the Senate or House to void the Republican victories and seal the Democrats.

Tuesday's recount in Ada County's District 17 actually extended the Osborne's victory margin from 94 to 97 votes for the seat formerly held by unsuccessful GOP gubernatorial candidate Rachel Gilbert. While Lojek picked up three votes, Osborne, a one-term House member, added six. More than 8,500 votes were cast.

"It appears that the original result is correct," Lojek said. "I certainly congratulate Mr. Osborne. It's good to know the system works."

But Lojek said he would not decide until Wednesday whether to press his challenge of the election result in 4th District Court through an appeal of the recount. He cited the fact that election officials could not account for 56 ballots in one precinct that were originally declared spoiled as one possible ground for an appeal.

Bush launches campaign for Mexico free-trade pact

Knight-Ridder News Service

MONTERREY, Mexico — President Bush began a strong push Tuesday for a free-trade agreement that promises to fundamentally alter economic relations between Mexico and the United States.

The proposed trade pact — the centerpiece of talks between Bush and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari — would give U.S. industries more access to cheap Mexican labor and allow more Mexican goods north of the Rio Grande by reducing trade barriers.

Bush vowed to keep the pact from being caught in the "evil vice of U.S. protectionism," acknowledging that the U.S. economic slowdown could fan opposition to the free-trade plan.

"As the gigantic United States economy slows down it may slow down the even more — it concerns me that some in our Congress might turn inward to...

a protectionist mode," Bush told Mexican and American business executives' here as he ended a two-day state visit to Mexico. Any agreement would have to be approved by Congress.

Bush said he did not expect that would be a major problem and predicted the two countries could "create and share unprecedented prosperity and jobs" through a free-trade pact, adding he hoped negotiations would begin next spring.

The two presidents also announced they would work toward opening nine new border points-of-entry, in addition to three new bridges over the Rio Grande, to ease congestion at crossing stations and to make travel between the two countries easier.

Roman Popadiuk, a White House spokesman, said specific sites for the nine new crossings had not been determined.

Provision.

Potato specialists have launched a two-pronged advertising campaign to make the potato more popular. Promotions under way since 1973 highlight the potato's high nutritional value and fewer calories. Advertising of the last two years has a different slant, emphasizing the convenience of potatoes.

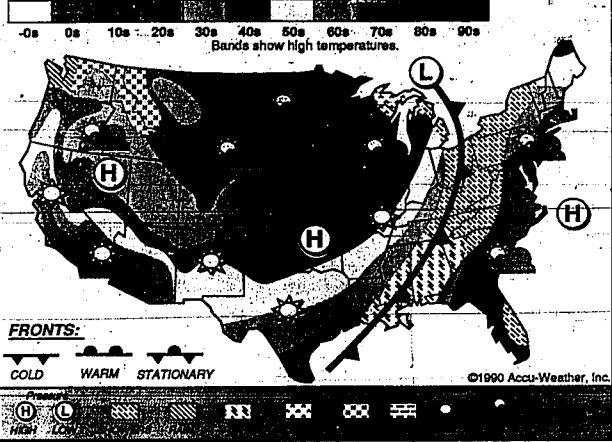

With the greater funds promised by the new legislation, members of the Potato Board also plan to launch their food safety campaign to educate the public about potato farming.

Thunderstorms, tornadoes zap nation's heartland

The Associated Press

Winter-like weather Tuesday replaced mild temperatures enjoyed by much of the nation's heartland for several days.

A fast moving cold front pushing high winds and thunderstorms left rapidly falling temperatures, snow and freezing rain in its wake.

Strong thunderstorms that developed along and ahead of the front marched across the lower and middle Mississippi Valley. Severe thunderstorms over central Missouri spawned two tornadoes in Columbia and just north of Warsaw.

About 20 people suffered minor injuries in O'Fallon, 30 miles west of St. Louis.

The thunderstorms produced high winds in Greene County that blew down trees and blew a car off the road.

As the damaging storms moved out of Missouri into west central Illinois, they produced high winds in Sterling and downed trees around Barry and Rushville.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says snow showers were scattered from the central mountains of Idaho down into southern and southeast sections of the state Tuesday, while much of the north enjoyed partly sunny skies.

Otherwise, only the higher mountains along the Idaho-Montana border had widespread, continuous snowfall. It also was a bit windy with gusty west winds to near 30 mph in some areas.

Afternoon temperatures around the state were mostly from the upper 20s through the 30s.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 49 degrees at Lewiston. Stanley reported the coldest at 2 degrees below zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 90 degrees at Corpus Christi, Kingsville, and McAllen, Texas. The lowest was 11 below at Williston, N.D.

Strong thunderstorms and locally heavy rain were scattered from central Illinois through central Missouri and northwestern Arkansas into northeastern Texas.

Thunderstorms in Oklahoma and Kansas produced hail and damaging high winds.

Snow prevailed behind the cold front from eastern Colorado to northern Minnesota. Heavy snow blanketed some of the mountains of Colorado.

Elsewhere, showers fell over parts of Florida, Vermont, New York state, Idaho and Montana.

Record high temperatures were set in Alpena, Mich., with 61 degrees; Beckley, W.Va., 69; Chattanooga, Tenn., 75; Chicago, Ill., 64; Dayton, Ohio, 69; Detroit, Mich., 66; Flint, Mich., 66; Fort Wayne, Ind., 65; Grand Rapids, Mich., 65; Green Bay, Wis., 63; Lansing, Mich., 65; Lexington, Ky., 73; Louisville, Ky., 73; Milwaukee, Wis., 67; Rockford, Ill., 65; Traverse City, Mich., Youngstown, Ohio, 66; Houghton-Lake, Mich., tied 57; and Jackson, Mich., tied 62.

California gun owners disobey registration law

Los Angeles Times

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Owners of hundreds of thousands of military-style assault guns in California are defying a law that requires them to register their weapons with the official of the National Rifle Association. Tuesday characterized as a massive demonstration of civil disobedience.

Under an 18-month-old statute that all but outlawed such firearms, owners of legally-acquired Uzis, AK-47s, AR-15s and other exotic semi-automatics must register them by Dec. 31 or face a stiff fine or possible criminal penalties.

The law was signed by Gov. George Deukmejian, only 5,150 out of approximately 300,000 such guns believed to be owned by Californians have been registered with the state Department of Justice.

straightforward reading of our constitution," Noh said.

He said Jones' opinion is shared by other legal scholars, political pundits and public opinion, giving Republicans the upper hand in appointing the upper hand in appointing the upper hand.

"I think (it) bodes well for a smoother-sailing organizational session," he said.

Jones' 11-page opinion pointed out that under almost identical provisions of the U.S. Constitution, the Senate can't vote on organizational matters including whether an elected member is eligible to take his seat.

"We just don't think he's accurate," Senate Democratic leader Bruce Sweeney of Lewiston, Idaho, said. "You've got to talk, and you have to agree. If no one's willing to do that, things will be chaos... But once everybody does, things can run relatively smoothly."

CRP Senate leader Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls, reinforced by the opinion, also pledged evenhanded dealings with the Democrats.

opinion was persuasive enough to head off a confrontation over the issue before the Idaho Supreme Court, but he said that despite courts' traditional reluctance to become involved in internal, legislative political squabbles the court would probably review the matter and make a decision if asked.

"Going to court is not what we want to do," Sweeney said. "We haven't missed that decision."

He said Senate Democratic leader Bruce Sweeney of Lewiston, Idaho, would meet with their attorney Carl Burke next week about the legal aspects of the matter as well as with Senate Republican leaders on prospects for some kind of accommodation.

the people I have talked to have indicated that that would be the probable outcome."

Many Democratic leaders, their party waiting three decades for another chance to have a significant impact on legislation, have pressed for significantly more than just evenly divided committees.

And to reinforce them claims to power, they have cited a 1987 New Mexico Supreme Court ruling that nullified the tie-breaking vote of that state's lieutenant governor in election of a Senate president pro tem by an evenly divided chamber.

... But Jones pointed out that the New Mexico court never issued a decision to explain why it decided the vote so there is no basis for using it as a precedent. In addition, Jones said, the New Mexico case involved the lieutenant governor voting to create two president pro tems in direct violation of state constitutional, statutory and regulatory provisions that implied the job could be held by only one person. That alone, Jones said, could have been the basis for the court ruling.

The attorney general also discounted any suggestions that Otter's tie-breaking vote would give Republicans continued operating control in the state Senate violated the constitutional separation of powers doctrine.

While the lieutenant governor is a member of the executive branch, tie-breaking voting provisions clearly give him authority within the legislative branch.

"The even division between the two caucuses would be reflected in the administration of the Senate," Crapo said. That likely could include even membership on Senate committees, which would effectively give a unified Democratic caucus veto power over what legislation could reach a floor vote.

Boise Attorney Patrick Costello, who filed all three formal notices of contest on behalf of individual voters in the districts, said a decision would probably be made Wednesday as well on whether to pursue the request that the State void Osborne's election because of voting irregularities and seat Lokj. Depositions from Ada County election officials on the issue of alleged irregularities were scheduled for Dec. 3.

The decision on whether to press the contests of the victories by Larsen and Jones will also depend on what officials find during the recounts in that sprawling district that includes four paper-ballot counties, Costello said. Depositions of local election officials in that district have been scheduled to begin Dec. 10.

The notices of contest, along with a $500 bond to secure each, were filed with the Secretary of State as required by law. The House and Senate are the sole arbiters of the qualifications of voters and individuals to serve, and if any of the three contests are followed up it would be considered by lawmakers in January.

Bannock County Democratic leader Edgar Malepai contested Larsen's victory while Carl Kriz of Boise filed the challenge to Osborne's win. The contest of Jones' re-election was filed by Power County Republican Prosecutor Henry Boomer.

Appeals court keeps North ruling

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court left in place Tuesday its decision setting aside former White House aide Oliver L. North's three felony Iran-Contra convictions, setting up a likely Supreme Court appeal.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit denied independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's petition for a rehearing of the July 20 decision by a split three-judge panel.

The court let stand the panel's 2-1 ruling, which set aside all of North's convictions, and ordered a lower-court hearing to determine whether references to testimony the former White House aide gave Congress under a limited grant of immunity from prosecution had seeped into his trial.

Panel: Hubble maker smelled trouble

WASHINGTON — Technicians suspected a problem in the manufacture of the Hubble Space Telescope's main mirror but never told anyone and the $1.5 billion instrument was launched with a blurred view of the universe, investigators said Tuesday.

The manufacturer, Perkin-Elmer, did not assign its best people to the telescope construction and "there was a surprising lack of participation by optical experts with experience in the manufacture of large telescopes," the investigators' final report added.

NASA released the study by a six-member panel headed by Dr. Lewis Allen, director of the space agency's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

Court ruling affects health coverage

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that self-funded employee health care plans, which cover some 9.5 million American workers, are not subject to state insurance laws and regulations.

The 7-1 decision in the case of a seriously injured Pennsylvania teen-age girl is a victory for employers with such plans but could be a significant setback for employees covered by them.

For the Pennsylvania teen-ager, it may mean having to surrender more than $50,000 she won in a lawsuit over the accident in which she was hurt. Self-funded plans are those in which all benefits are paid directly by an employer, and not purchased through an independent insurance company.

Alabama mayor delays curfew proposal

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Mayor Richard Arrington backed a city-wide curfew for youths under age 17, then decided to delay presenting it to City Council.

Arrington had said he would make the proposal Tuesday, but he told the council more research was needed. He said he plans to submit the proposal, and other measures to halt an increase in youth violence, in two weeks.

The curfew would be similar to one that went into effect recently in Atlanta.

U.S. farm exports expected to drop

WASHINGTON — The value of U.S. agricultural exports is expected to drop 4 percent this fiscal year to $38.5 billion, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The value of those exports rose to a nine-year high of more than $40.1 billion in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

Gray

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former top federal regulator testified Tuesday that Sen. Dennis DeConcini improperly offered him a deal in exchange for testimony about his relationship with savings and loan owner Charles H. Keating Jr. and that three other "Keating Five" senators acquiesced in the proposal.

Edwin J. Gray, a star witness at the Senate Ethics Committee's hearings into the five senators' relationship with Keating, said DeConcini's offer at a 1987 meeting will be "etched in my mind forever."

"I considered it improper," he declared. "The whole setting was an intimidating one."

He said DeConcini, apparently speaking for the other three senators as well, asked that regulators not apply to Keating's embattled Lincoln Savings and Loan Association a rule "limiting risky investments."

DeConcini referred to Keating during the meeting as "our friend from Lincoln," said Gray, former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

None of the five senators was present for his testimony in a packed Senate hearing room.

Keating was the chairman of the now-failed Lincoln S&L when the evening meeting took place in DeConcini's office on April 2, 1987. The committee is trying to decide whether the five senators intervened improperly for Keating, a political donor who along with associates contributed $1 million to the senators' campaigns and causes.

Gray was expected to face stiff cross-examination from attorneys for DeConcini, D-Ariz.; John McCain, R-Ariz.; Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich.; John Glenn, D-Ohio and Alan Cranston, D-Calif. All the senators except Riegle attended the meeting with Gray and all have denied that a deal was offered for Lincoln — which was in deep trouble with Gray's regulators.

Gray testified DeConcini asked that the risky-investment rule not be applied to Lincoln and added, "If you do that, we'll get our friend from Lincoln to make more home loans."

"I said we had gone through the administrative process and I'm not going to do that," Gray testified.

Gray said, "We did not succumb to that pressure" and the risky-investment rule was not withdrawn. "Nothing was speeded up... nothing was slowed down" in the Lincoln investigation as a result of the senators' intervention, he said. Gray testified he did not protest to the senators after the alleged deal was offered because he feared they would not back legislation to provide money-raising authority for the hard-pressed Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Fund.

USDA sees moderate prices, big farm incomes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department projected on Tuesday that consumer food prices will climb more slowly in 1991 and that farmers will see near-record incomes as production increases.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said there are still some trouble spots but "the situation has changed for the better" from the financial crunch of the mid-1980s.

"The overall economic health of this industry is infinitely improved over what it was five years ago," Yeutter told the department's annual outlook conference.

James R. Donald, chairman of the department's World Agricultural Outlook Board, said the 1991 forecast calls for an average food price increase of 2 percent to 3 percent, compared with almost 6 percent this year.

"Projected record meat supplies, higher dairy product output and the likelihood of bigger citrus crops this season will moderate food price rises," he said.

Donald also said food marketing costs will rise more slowly if overall inflation eases to around 4.5 percent instead of this year's 5.5 to 6 percent.

Donald said farmers will expand 1991 plantings of several crops to take advantage of more flexibility under new farm program provisions. Globally, he said, commodity production "will increase substantially."

in 1990-91 and that production of livestock products "will reach a new record as red meat recovers and poultry supplies continue to increase."

Some U.S. products will face rising competition from other countries, particularly for wheat. And U.S. meat export increases probably will slow as Japan cuts back on imports.

"The big news next year will be grains, and plenty of it," Donald said.

New British prime minister Major epitomizes virtues of Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — John Major, the youngest and fastest-rising British prime minister of the 20th century, epitomizes the virtues of self-reliance and initiative preached by his predecessor.

Major described himself as a Thatcherite but insisted he was his own man.

"I am not running as 'Son of Margaret Thatcher.' I am running as myself, with my own priorities and my own program," Major said over the weekend.

He reaches the highest office in the land 11 years after entering parliament, without leaving a trail of bruised and resentful enemies. And he came all the way up from poverty without so much as a university education.

Former Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine mounted the successful challenge to Mrs. Thatcher in the Conservative Party that caused the prime minister to abandon her office. But Mrs. Thatcher endorsed Major to succeed her and in the three-way fight for the party leadership, and the prime minister's ship, it was Major who had the votes to defeat Heseltine and Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd. Softspoken, bespectacled and often referred to as "the gray man," 47-year-old Major has none of the obvious qualities as-associated with the political high-flyer.

But Mrs. Thatcher saw in him a sharp mind, political judgment and the conciliator's talent for negotiation.

She saw him as "a man of the people," her aides said, and even his opponents say so.

He appeals to the right wing of his party with free market economic views, and to the left wing with his sympathetic outlook toward Britain's underprivileged.

Even for the new breed of Conservative who broke into ranks of Oxford and Cambridge-educated Tory privilege, Major has an unusual background.

The son of a sometime circus performer and actor, he left school at 16, worked as a laborer and spent eight months on welfare before he started his successful banking career as a clerk at age 18.

Tall and deliberate, Major has neat gray hair, clean-cut features and a quiet manner of speech nearly free of the inflections of class and geography that still pigeonhole so many

'I am not running as "Son of Margaret Thatcher." I am running as myself, with my own priorities and my own program.'

— John Major, Britain's new prime minister

Britons.

He sees increased social mobility as "one of the greatest achievements of the last 10 years," and says his goal is "a genuinely classless society in which people can rise to whatever level that their own abilities and their own good fortune may take them."

The contribution of blue-collar workers should be respected, he says.

"We will need the practical manual skills of people in the future and we should recognize those for what they are — a very genuine talent."

Once asked if getting not having gone to university, he said "not a bit."

"It has been of immense value to me to have been on the other side of the fence and to know what it was like to face a few difficulties, and I don't regret any of that."

Besides the broad electoral appeal of his background, Major's greatest practical asset is his financial experience as a banker, chief secretary to the Treasury and lately as chancellor of the exchequer during a difficult year for the economy.

Major climbed swiftly through Standard and Chartered Bank, where he was an executive for 14 years before entering national politics.

His lack of expertise in foreign affairs is regarded as a weakness — he spent only three months as foreign secretary — but he has indicated the veteran Hurd would stay on to head the Foreign Office.

Major's stance on the Persian Gulf crisis is unlikely to differ greatly from Mrs. Thatcher's. On Europe, he says he is convinced Britain will be able to negotiate an outcome on political and monetary union that will be acceptable to the European Community and to Parliament.

Elected to Parliament in 1979, he entered the Cabinet in 1987 as chief secretary to the Treasury. From July to October 1989 he was foreign secretary, and when Nigel Lawson resigned as chancellor of the exchequer in October, Major replaced him as the nation's top treasury official.

Major started life in the comfortable suburb of Cleam and went to Rutlish Grammar, a state school for bright children.

When he was 11 the family, including two brothers and a sister, moved to the tough south London neighborhood of Erith following "an injudicious investment" by his father.

He speaks with affection of his father, who was 66 when John was born and soon began losing his eyesight.

Israeli jets retaliate for 5 deaths

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Israel sent warplanes to blast guerrilla bases Tuesday after five Israeli soldiers died fighting Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon.

Lebanese police said eight Palestinian guerrillas were killed in the overnight clash with Israelis on the northern edge of the security zone and that two more guerrillas died in the air raid. Lebanese police said they had no reports on the number of wounded.

It was the Jewish state's highest death toll in the region since 1988, when eight soldiers were killed by a car bomb. The clash was the third in a week between Palestinians and Israelis in southern Lebanon — a surge of violence that could threaten efforts to end Lebanon's civil war.

Three of the Israelis were buried Tuesday in their homeland.

Major Gen. Yossi Peled, commander of the sector where they died, said in a eulogy: "The terrorists mission was foiled. The settlements of the north are safe. The price is unbearable."

Shortly after the Israeli air raid, reporters based in southern Lebanon said they saw four Israeli gunboats cruise past the border town of Naqura, apparently heading toward Sidon. Several helicopter gunships hovered overhead, the witnesses said, but there was no immediate report of naval bombardments.

An estimated 5,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas are based in refugee camps near Sidon. Police fired 12 rockets into a hill-top position occupied by guerrillas of Abu Nidal's Fatah-Revolutionary Council in Shahab, near Sidon.

At least two guerrillas were killed and three wounded in the three-minute raid by F-15 and F-16 jets, police reported.

It was Israel's 19th air raid on Lebanon this year.

Singapore forms new government after resignation

SINGAPORE (AP) — Goh Chok Tong formed a new government Tuesday and prepared to replace the only prime minister Singapore has ever known.

Goh officially takes office Wednesday, and his new government includes a prominent post for his predecessor, Lee Kuan Yew.

Lee had been prime minister since the former British crown colony became a self-governing state in 1959. During 31 years of authoritarian rule, he helped transform the former colonial outpost into a flourishing banking and commercial center.

The transition of power to his chosen successor has been in the works for more than two years.

The 67-year-old Lee is to be a senior minister without portfolio attached to the prime minister's office.

Snow by computer on the way to Bald Mountain

By Barbara Neiwert
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — A new computerized snow-making system for Bald Mountain has left maintenance crews scurrying to finish installation and operation for opening day next week.

The $2 million system was cranked up for the first time Monday with good results. Finishing touches will be complete by the Dec. 7 opening.

Sun Valley Co. employees Stew Brown, left and Denzel Rowland keep track of the snow making system through computer controls.

Operations crews will continue to monitor snow production for the next week and a half, which will add substantially to what Mother Nature has forgotten to send to the ski hill with — acres of deep powder snow.

Snow making is nothing new for this resort. For the past 17 years Sun Valley has spread man-made snow around the heavy traffic areas.

However, this new automated system, which reacts to computerized instructions, is just the fourth of its kind in the United States.

"I think this is an innovation in the (ski) industry that's going to be more and more important," predicted Max McKinnon, mountain operations manager for Sun Valley Co.

Such state-of-the-art automation is now common at ski resorts throughout Europe. The technology has been available for only the past five or six years, McKinnon said.

Sun Valley Co. officials are hoping the system will ensure early season openings around Thanksgiving from now on.

In a worst case scenario, McKinnon said that if there is no natural snow by opening day, flakes spewed from the new equipment will cover the major runs on the Warm Springs side of the mountain for skiers.

Dozens of snow-making 'guns' blast clouds of water along a ski run on Bald Mountain.

And if there still hasn't been a snowfall by Jan. 1, Sun Valley Co. could have all the major runs on the mountain covered.

With the addition of the new system, one-third of the mountain's 1,300 skiable acres can be covered with man-made snow.

The York Automated System pumps 1,100 gallons of water per minute from Warm Springs Creek to a control building at the top of the Lower Warm Springs Run, on Bald's north slope.

From there, the water passes through a system of cooling towers, is mixed with outside air and then piped up or down the mountain to explode through "guns" as snow.

From temperature and water readings, the computer system can analyze how much water and air should flow through the guns to produce the desired dryness or wetness of the snow.

The new system sports 100 stationary hydrants, some with two guns per station. This is in addition to 50 other guns from the old system which can be moved to different locations on the ski hill.

In all, Sun Valley Co. has pumped $5.5 million into its snow-making capacities on Bald Mountain, McKinnon said.

Sun Valley officials will wait to see how well the new system operates before deciding whether the automated snow making should spread to other parts of the mountain in future years. The new system currently operates only on the Middle and Lower Warm Springs runs and on all of Greyhawk. New this season as far as runs is the Upper Greyhawk Run, an extension of Greyhawk and listed for experts only.

West Magic taxpayers are invited to meeting

WEST MAGIC — Any person owning property at West Magic is invited to a property owners' meeting at 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 1 — not Dec. 9 as previously reported — at West Magic Resort.

The proposed annexation of West Magic by Camas County will be discussed.

The area currently is part of Blaine County.

If unable to attend, property owners are encouraged to write an opinion about the annexation and mail it to John Peace, spokesperson, West Magic Property Owners, P.O. Box 277, Shoshone, 83352.

Woodpile fire causes damage to home on Fourth Avenue

TWIN FALLS — A small blaze in a woodpile damaged a house at 310 Fourth Ave. N. Tuesday morning.

City firefighters responded to a caller from a neighboring law office who said flames could be seen in the window of the house next door. Battalion Chief Fred Webb said.

Firefighters arrived at 10:59 a.m. and returned to the station 30 minutes later, but the fire did burn the carpet and part of a wall. Webb estimated fire and smoke damage at $5,000.

Tim Livingston, who lives in the small white house, removed the ashes from the fireplace earlier in the day. Webb said. Lacking a metal container, Livingston put the ashes — which he thought were cold — into a cardboard box and left it near his woodpile by the fireplace. Webb said.

After Livingston left for work, the ashes apparently ignited the cardboard box and flames spread to the woodpile, the carpet and the wall, the battalion chief said.

Magic Valley residents urged to attend meeting on waste

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents interested in learning about solid-waste planning and options available in this area are urged to attend eight meetings Monday through Dec. 6.

The meetings, presented by the South Central District Health Department, will be held throughout the Magic Valley.

Impending federal regulations about solid-waste disposal probably will make it necessary to build landfills that do not leak contaminants into ground water. Options such as regional or individual county landfills, methods of transferring waste, recycling and reducing waste will be discussed at the meetings.

The schedule for the meetings follows:

Monday, 4 p.m. at the courthouse in Shoshone, district courtroom, and again at 7 p.m. at the Jerome High School auditorium.

Tuesday, 2 p.m. at the Cassia County Law Enforcement Building in Burley — access assistance for the handicapped will be provided — and at 7 p.m. at the courthouse in Rupert, district courtroom.

Dec. 5, 2 p.m. at the Legion Hall in Fairfield and again at 7 p.m. at the courthouse hearing room in Hailu.

Dec. 6, 2 p.m. at the Gooding district health office, 202 14th Ave. E. and at 7 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho, Shields Building, Room 117.

American Agriculture group will discuss legislative actions

TWIN FALLS — The American Agricultural Movement will hold meetings around the Magic Valley this week to discuss new legislative activities now that the 1990 Farm Bill is awaiting President Bush's signature.

The AAM fears that the bill will damage U.S. agriculture. The group wants House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, replaced.

The meetings will be held at:

- 7 p.m. today at the Ramona Restaurant and Lounge, 113 Broadway Ave. S., in Buhl.
- 7 p.m. Friday at Cavazos, 2096 Kimberly Road, in Twin Falls.

Jerome Optimist Octagons to be honored at Rialto meeting

JEROME — Members of Octagon, a Jerome Optimist Club youth group, will be honored tonight.

The event is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. at the Rialto Inn. The group of 18 school-aged youngsters, which has been in existence about two months, has helped with a variety of school and civic projects.

Twin Falls area businessmen think bond issue needs work

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A state legislator and several Twin Falls businessmen say the Twin Falls School Board should take a proposed $9.5 million bond issue proposal back to the drawing board.

"I do not think it's going to pass," said Lauri Woolworth, agency manager for Obenchain Insurance Inc. "I don't like the whole concept at all."

About 10 other people also expressed opposition to the bond issue Tuesday during two meetings intended in part to educate the public about the proposal.

The School Board is considering holding a bond issue election in February or March. Such a proposal would take a two-thirds majority to pass.

The Tuesday meetings were sponsored by members of the Community Committee, which is charged with explaining the proposal to different business and government groups and soliciting opinions from them.

Other subcommittees are holding several meetings in the next few weeks with other groups, including educators, farmers and professionals.

Under the proposal, the district would build a $6.5 million middle school, convert Robert Stuart Junior High School into a ninth-grade center and build $3 million in improvements at the high school including 10 classrooms, a performing arts center and a gymnasium.

At the Tuesday meetings, comments came back in a flood.

"From what I hear, it's doomed to failure," said state Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls.

He recommended that the School Board forge about the existing proposal and start considering other options.

Black and several others favored building a vocational-technical center as a satellite of the existing high school on property the district recently purchased north of the College of Southern Idaho campus. The district could easily tap CSI resources, Black said.

Others said they would prefer a second high school.

The ninth-grade center was the focus of much of the criticism.

Doug Burks Jr. of Burks Tractor said he is all for building new facilities to meet educational needs, but added that he would vote against the bond issue because of the ninth-grade center.

Ninth-graders would be better off moving to the high school rather than being placed in their own school as a "stop-gap" measure, he said.

A second high school or a satellite vocational center could possibly accommodate them, he added.

Sue Ann Jones, marketing director of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, said she has some reservations about the ninth-grade center, but overall favors the bond issue proposal and would vote for it.

Woolworth said the ninth-grade center is a "devastating idea" for children at a vulnerable age. She suggested the district "bite the bullet" and build a second high school.

School officials say a second high school could be built, but operational costs of up to $1.4 million a year make it an infeasible option.

Business leaders suggested that the satellite high school facility would solve the problem, because the district would not have to duplicate as many classes.

But School Board Chairman Steve Tolman said the problem with a satellite vocational center, which students would attend voluntarily, is that the district could not accurately predict how many kids would be interested.

The district could spend up to $12 million on a new building and not have enough interested students to fill the classrooms, he said.

'Crisis' exists in Filer schools

By Bertilla Rodfern
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Teachers have declared a "crisis in the Filer School District."

Jim Krunich, Filer Education Association president, said in a telephone interview that 90 percent of the district's teachers turned out for a special meeting after school Monday.

Krunich said the association is trying to get the School Board's Washington-based negotiating team of Jerry Gales and Randy Bohanan back to Filer to work toward a settlement. Krunich has also contacted the federal mediator, but said he is having difficulty scheduling a meeting that suits all parties involved.

Krunich said teacher negotiators are prepared to work out a contract and want to settle with the board.

The School Board, meanwhile, met in a special meeting Tuesday afternoon with two items on the agenda, including teacher negotiations, which was discussed in executive session.

Board members declined to comment on the outcome of the closed-door session.

The board did, however, approve plans for a multi-purpose room in Hollister.

The approximate cost is $83,743 and the room is expected to be ready for physical education programs and community activities in the spring of 1991.

Construction trial postponed

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Construction Co.'s day in court over the Victory Bridge contract has been postponed.

The Kimberly company's attorney, William Hollifield, evidently had not amended the complaint against the city of Twin Falls to include the bridge contractor as a judge had ordered, court clerk Camille Jones said Tuesday.

The trial was scheduled for Wednesday. Idaho Construction is suing the city for letting the bridge contractor, Ralph L. Wadsworth Construction Co. of Salt Lake City, correct its bid on the bridge contract because of a clerical error.

Wadsworth had submitted the low bid. But after all the bids were opened Sept. 28, Wadsworth told the city its bid undervalued the price of concrete by $60,000 because of a clerical error.

The City Council balked at first, but when the company documented the error, it was allowed to correct the bid.

After the correction upward, Wadsworth's bid still was $20,000 lower than the second lowest bid — that of Idaho Construction.

Idaho Construction claimed that by letting Wadsworth correct its bid, the city had violated Idaho's competitive bidding laws.

The suit asks the city, but on Nov. 12, Mechl ordered Idaho Construction to include Wadsworth in the suit.

City Attorney Fritz Wonderlich asked Mechl to dismiss the suit that day, but also argued that any suit against the city should include Wadsworth because the company was part of the contract. Hollifield argued that the city, not Wadsworth, had wronged Idaho Construction and the suit should only include the city.

Mechl refused to dismiss the suit but ordered Idaho Construction to include Wadsworth in the complaint.

The suit asks Mechl to void the contract and order the city to either award the job to Idaho Construction or rebid the project.

Wonderlich said since that he probably would ask Mechl to dismiss the suit once Wadsworth is included in it.

The Times-News was unable to reach Hollifield on Tuesday and could not verify when the trial might be rescheduled.

Christmas in City Park offers series of festive weekly programs

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Come snow or shine, the sixth Annual Christmas in City Park begins Sunday and runs through Dec. 23.

The four programs take place each Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at the park bandshell. This Sunday's program is "Christmas is ... memories."

The Golden Moments Trio will perform.

For the third year, the Soroptimist Club International of Twin Falls is handling the programs. The club supervised putting lights on the park trees and will sell hot chocolate, coffee and cider before the programs each Sunday.

"We checked every lightbulb in every string of lights," said Soroptimist President Jody Hall. The club, with about 35 active members in Twin Falls, began the project in September, she said. Mary McClusky is chairman of the project this year. Dennis McCracken is in charge of the programs.

The city pays for the lighting bill, which runs about $850 for the four to six weeks the trees are lit, said Donna Brizec of the City Parks and Recreation Board. Otherwise, the Soroptimists are in charge of the program.

Vandalism of the lights has been a problem in years past, Brizec said. Also, squirrels tend to eat the wires of the light strings. Money collected from selling the hot drinks helps replace lights and light strings, she said. The Memorial Tree will be lit again this year in honor of deceased loved ones. Those wanting their loved ones' names read from the book can contact Mary McClusky, said Hall.

On Sunday, Dec. 9, "Christmas is youth" will be the program theme. The Twin Falls High School Chamber Singers will perform.

Sunday, Dec. 16, Larry Christensen's Bavarian Band will perform to the theme "Christmas is ... international customs."

The final program, "Christmas is ... traditions," will be performed by the Magicians on Sunday, Dec. 23. Brizec urged residents to attend the programs. "They're starting to become family traditions," she said.

Whittle: Channel One business is booming

Chicago Tribune and The Times-News

Whittle Communications, which ignited a firestorm of protest from education associations, launched the Channel One classroom television news service with commercials, says business is booming.

The company, which gives schools free television sets and videocassette recorders as an inducement to take its advertising-supported programming, said this week that 6,000 schools will have the system by Christmas, and that it expects to have 8,600 signed up by June.

The Cassia County and Minidoka County districts in the Magic Valley voted to Channel One. Other Magic Valley districts, including Twin Falls and Murtaugh, have turned down Whittle's offer.

Company president Ed Winter launched in 1989 over objections from groups ranging from state school boards and legislators to such activist groups as Action for Children's Television, profits have jumped from $9 million to $65 million in the current school term, and he predicted that by next spring they will stand at $110 million.

"By comparison, that equals the third-year revenue of CNN (Cable News Network) and TNT (Turner Network Television) combined," he said.

Chairman Christopher Whittle said growth has been so much greater than initially was expected that the company is running out of television sets and VCRs and will have no more to distribute by spring.

"Our task now is to find other ways of using this superstructure for additional channels," Whittle said, "to provide for the demand, we have to go out into the advertising market and find new ad revenues."

At present, Channel One is supported by 13 national advertisers who are guaranteed a percentage of the 3.8 million teenagers who presently watch the channel as part of their school curricula. Whittle charges $150,000 per 30-second spot, but the company is limited by contract with the schools to four spots per day, so the frequency rate cannot be increased.

"It sounds too good to be true," said Norman Hurst, superintendent of Cassia County schools. Hurst said Channel One has allowed his district access to several different types of televised educational programs.

"It appears that the kids tune out the commercials," Hurst said, adding that students are expected to be exposed to advertising on TV at home that the ads are no big deal.

Hurst said that the Channel One program "helps to expose the students to geography and world events as well as environmental issues."

The equipment that is provided through the Channel One program has allowed Cassia County students to take advantage of the other educational programs that cable providers, Hurst said. Hurst also said that the Channel One has enhanced school libraries because programs are being videotaped and can be shown over and over again.

Minidoka County Assistant Superintendent Darwin Anderson declined to comment for the record on whether or not his district is satisfied with the Channel One service.

Whittle said he will seek additional advertising and to shorten the frequency somewhat for those already on board. He said he also hopes to develop at least five specials a year and expand his curricula into after-school hours with such specialized programs as a career channel, a national events channel, a club channel for school organizations and a sports channel for coaches and teams.

On Friday, Whittle will launch a noncommercial Educational Network for teachers on which Judy Woodruff of public television's "MacNeil/Lehrer NewsHour" and "Frontline" will host an "American Classroom" to bring teachers into closer contact with new developments in education. He said there are 300,000 teachers in the Channel One system.

Whittle has not achieved success without opposition. At the outset, Channel One was banned in schools in California, New York and Rhode Island where educators and lawmakers objected to the intrusion of commercials into classroom time. California since has reversed its policy.

Shortly after the launch of Channel One, the Cable News Network weighed in competitively with its free, unsponsored CNN Classroom. The 15-minute-per-day CNN program claims more than 13,000 schools nationwide, and last month, became part of CNN International.

Whittle, whose company, based in Knoxville, Tenn., is 50 percent owned by Time-Warner, also produces a video channel for physical training rooms and several magazines and books.

Moscow policeman accused of taking money from purse

MOSCOW (AP) — An eight-year veteran of the Moscow Department has been formally charged with grand theft in connection with the theft of $180 from a purse brought to the police station for safe keeping.

Cpl. Ronald Vitelmer was accused on Tuesday of removing the cash from the purse after it had been deposited in the department's lost and found area on Oct. 28.

Vitelmer has been on administrative leave without pay since Nov. 15.

Detective David Walker told Magistrate Bill Hamlett that a woman found the purse inside a diaper bag and dropped both off at the station last month, advising police that the purse contained at least $70.

An inexperienced dispatcher who did not know how to fill out the proper paperwork turned the matter over to Vitelmer, Walker said. Vitelmer took the bag and locked it in the property room, he said, but did not complete the paperwork as procedure required.

When the owner appeared to claim the purse and bag, she said that cash had been taken from the purse.

Between $180 and $190 was in the purse when she lost it, she said, but only five $1 bills, crumpled-up to look like more money, were in the bag when she reclaimed it.

degree murder. He was believed to be driving a green 1975 four-door Mercury with Idaho plates 1A 8882.

At least four people were in the apartment when the shooting occurred at about 7 p.m. Monday. Three men and one woman were taken to Boise Police headquarters for interviews.

Braddock said police found the dead man with multiple gunshot wounds. The identity of the victim was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

"The deceased apparently absorbed multiple rounds," Sgt. Dan Miller said.

Suspect sought in slaying

BOISE (AP) — Boise police continued their search Tuesday for a suspect in the shooting death of a 32-year-old man in a North End apartment.

"We have a suspect," Lt. William Braddock said. "We don't know what the motive was, but it was some kind of altercation."

The department announced early Tuesday that the suspect is George H. Kersey, 57, described as a white male, about 6 feet tall and 220 pounds, with brown hair and blue eyes.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of Kersey on a charge of first-degree murder. He was believed to be driving a green 1975 four-door Mercury with Idaho plates 1A 8882.

Students claim they are disadvantaged without resource center and library

LEVISTON (AP) — Some students in the University of Idaho's College of Art and Architecture are upset it has no library for its slide collection.

And they claim the college is not moving fast enough to develop a such a library, a charge officials reject. The slides show historical art and architecture.

Brooks Heard, a fifth-year architecture student from Hayden Lake, said students are angry UJ's catalog advertises it has a slide library when none exists "in any meaningful sense."

"What we have is a collection dispersed in faculty offices," he said. And that does not give students sufficient access to the slides for their studies, said Bragdon Shields, a fourth-year architecture student from Maine.

"We want (the library) done now," he said. "To us, a slide library is essential."

They said they surveyed seven Northwest institutions with art or architecture schools, and Idaho is the only one without a slide library. Both said they fear that could become an issue this year when a National Architecture Accrediting Board team visits the architecture department.

But Robert Baron, acting chairman of UJ's architecture department, said it has a historical architecture slide collection in the office, as well as dispersed among the faculty.

"Currently, we seem to be able to teach classes effectively with the current collection and want to build on them," he said. "I don't think students are being robbed of anything."

"We don't have a Cadillac system with a lot of apparatus... We have more like a Volkswagen with a few dents and bumps and it probably needs an oil change."

Architecture professor William McCroskey is assessing the slide collection and developing a computerized catalog, Baron said.

So far about 160 students have signed petitions calling for a resource center with a functioning slide library, a technical catalog library and a video and viewing facility.

"We are moving as fast as we can," Baron said. "I don't see how we can move any faster... If we could do something this year, that would be great."

Children kept home as parents fear earthquake

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Some Utah parents are considering keeping their children home from school next week when a New Mexico scientist has predicted a damaging earthquake will rattle North America.

But Utah school officials say they won't follow the lead of their colleagues in Arkansas, Missouri, Tennessee and Kentucky by closing schools Monday and Tuesday.

Instead, most Utah officials are reviewing their disaster plans and stepping up their earthquake preparedness efforts, heading climatologist Iben Browning's warning as a reminder that it's better to be safe than sorry.

"Earthquake predictions like this one have been made for years, and it seems to me like some people are going a little to the extreme about it," said spokeswoman Sherri Clark of the Salt Lake City School District.

"But then—again, you never know." Although his theory has been discounted by other scientists, Browning has predicted that an alignment of the Earth and moon in early December will trigger a destructive earthquake in the United States. His warning is primarily aimed at the New Madrid seismic zone in Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee, but latitudes mentioned in his prediction also include Utah, which has the Wasatch Fault.

Clark's district includes Washington Elementary School, which has been identified in an earthquake safety study to be located on at least one active fault line.

She said the district is working with a school committee to decide whether to retrofit or relocate the 13-year-old school, but such efforts are not completely reassuring to parents whose anxious children have heard Browning's earthquake prediction.

"My kids are really nervous and concerned, and I don't know if I'm going to send them to school on Monday or not," said Pauline Richards, whose three children attend Washington. "Once you have the knowledge that your child's school is unsafe, can you really in good conscience send them there?"

Sue Westenskow, a Weber School District spokeswoman, said her own children are anxious after having heard news reports about the prediction.

But she echoed comments made by Clark and spokeswoman for the Ogden and Davis districts when she said she believes most school officials are simply doing their best to calm fears and teach students how to act should an earthquake occur.

Westenskow thinks she and other parents are trying to help their children understand that the possibility of an earthquake occurring on any day is just part of living along the Wasatch Front.

Woman wins right to defend drug use for medical reason

BOISE (AP) — A Coeur d'Alene woman has won the right to challenge drug charges against her on grounds that she uses marijuana out of medical necessity.

The Idaho Supreme Court on Tuesday unanimously voided the drug conviction of Lynn Jane Hastings on grounds that she should have been allowed to use the so-called common law defense.

Hastings sought the opportunity to defend herself against the charges.

But the court stopped short of creating the special defense of medical necessity that is in effect in a number of other states. Justice Charles McDevitt, writing for the court, said Hastings should have the opportunity to convince the court that her apparent illegal use of marijuana was justified because it is the only substance that will relieve the pain and muscle spasms associated with rheumatoid arthritis.

Hastings said she used to relieve the pressure suffered by some victims of glaucoma.

In March 1989, police arrested Hastings after searching her home and finding about a dozen marijuana plants growing in the basement.

Third District Judge Gary Haman denied the use of a necessity defense on grounds that it was not valid.

Firefighters extinguish storage tank fire

DENVER (AP) — A huge jet fuel fire that burned unchecked for two days near Stapleton International Airport was extinguished Tuesday with help from a team of specialists flown in from Texas.

Mounting an all-out assault, firefighters put out the blazes in two storage tanks about 2:30 p.m., 53 hours after the fire began, said Fire Department spokesman Mike McNeill.

"Everybody is relieved. It's been a long ordeal," McNeill said. "There were a lot of smiles on a lot of faces."

A five-man team from Williams, Boots & Coats of Fort Worth, Texas, donned fireproof suits, intending to seal broken valves on an 800,000-gallon storage tank that was one-third to one-half full of jet fuel and a tank that held 350,000 gallons of fuel.

The two tanks had been on fire since Monday, ignited by a pair of 400,000-gallon tanks that caught fire Sunday. Two other tanks that caught on fire burned themselves out Monday. The four tanks, containing more than 2 million gallons of jet fuel, were part of a fuel storage farm for Stapleton airport that includes 12 tanks holding a total of about 12 million gallons of fuel.

The storage area is about one-half mile north of the Stapleton terminal. Several water and foam sprays were trained on the two still-burning tanks to cool them down so the train could move close enough to spray the leaking valves with potassium bicarbonate.

McNeill said the blasts of foam and water worked better than expected, they extinguished the flames. Denver fire officials had planned to let the fire burn itself out, but they changed their strategy Tuesday after a meeting with Williams, Boots & Coats executives. Continental Airlines, which owns four tanks at the fuel storage area, had flown in the company officials Monday night.

"We have $3.8 million worth of product on-site," said Continental spokesman Jim Monaghan.

The fire diminished markedly in intensity after the 400,000-gallon tanks finally burned themselves out Monday, leaving smoldering, crumpled metal shells. All four storage tanks destroyed in the fire belong to United Airlines. The airline experienced a severe fuel shortage Sunday that caused it to delay and reschedule flights, but resolved the problem Monday by employing tanker trucks and flying in fuel from outside Denver.

A snowstorm that dusted Denver with up to 2 inches of snow dropped temperatures below freezing and further hampered the efforts of more than 60 firefighters Tuesday morning. The snowstorm temporarily knocked out firefighters' pumps and froze water on their clothing and equipment. Warning tents were set up for the firefighters, who took turns on the fire line.

The snow later ended and the sun came out, but temperatures did not rise much above freezing. A broken valve on one of the 400,000-gallon tanks was thought to be what triggered the fire.

California woman tells police of abduction

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Donna Oh, who vanished for nearly a month, told police Tuesday she was released in Southern California four days after being abducted but "traveled around" because the kidnapers threatened to kill her daughters if she went home, the FBI said.

Much of what happened to Oh remained a mystery on Tuesday as authorities tried to piece together her story. The woman was reunited with overjoyed relatives after turning up in Salt Lake City and flying with an FBI escort to Oakland on Monday.

Oh told detectives two armed men kidnaped her in Berkeley the night of Nov. 2 but released her four days later in Huntington Beach, according to FBI spokesman Duke Diedrich.

Asked at an afternoon news conference about the credibility of Oh's story, Berkeley police Capt. Phil Down said: "At this point, we have no choice but to believe her." She is the only witness we've got and we do believe her.

Oh, a 35-year-old vocational nurse and mother of two, told investigators she was sexually assaulted during the ordeal, Diedrich said. Police declined to elaborate and would not comment on Oh's condition except to say she was in good physical health despite exhaustion.

Oh told police she traveled to Palm Springs, Las Vegas and wound up in Utah, staying in shelters along the way and living on money her captors handed her before her release. Investigators said they were unsure how Oh traveled from place to place.

"There's a lot of unanswered questions, and we're not sure what Donna's state of mind is because she's been through a very traumatic experience," Diedrich said.

Oh returned to Oakland after she was found safe at LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City.

"We talked to a very tired lady last night," Doran said. "It was well into the morning. I wouldn't want to tie myself to a sequence of events."

Oh described her abductors as two white men between the ages of 25 and 40. Doran said investigators will work with Oh to create composite drawings of the men.

"We don't sense there's any motive," but a random kidnapping," Doran said, adding that Oh's captors told her never to contact her family again and made "very specific threats on her two daughters" if Oh were to return home.

Although Oh's mother lives in Salt Lake City, there's "no indication" that Oh stayed with her, Diedrich said.

"All of a sudden she is alive and well. It is heard from me to believe," Lisa Fernandez, Oh's 19-year-old daughter, said Monday after hearing that her mother had been located. "It is so much more than relief I can't even believe."

Larry Fernandes, Oh's ex-husband, said police told him that authorities found Oh disoriented and that she appeared not to have eaten in days.

Salt Lake City officials told Berkeley police that Oh was using her full last name, Okoniewski, Diedrich said. Oh was last heard from Nov. 2, when she called her younger daughter from a pay phone in Berkeley, where she planned to see a movie, to say she was having car trouble.

Police found Oh's 1979 Honda Civic wagon with the keys in the ignition on Nov. 4. They were able to start the car on the first try.

Oh arrived at Oakland International Airport at 9:55 p.m. Monday aboard a commercial flight, wearing tan slacks and carrying a yellow ski jacket.

Her blond page-boy haircut appeared the same as in photos distributed by her family since her disappearance, but her face was not visible on the darkened runway.

Surrounded by FBI agents and police, Oh was taken in a police car to be reunited with her family at an undisclosed location.

Oh's other daughter, 12-year-old Almet Okoniewski, said she learned Monday afternoon from her friend's mother that her own mother had been found.

"I'm just excited. It's wonderful," Okoniewski said. "I didn't give up hope. I knew that she would be OK."

No ransom note was ever found, police said.

Department of Lands is unhappy about mud

SANDPOINT (AP) — Crews failed to use erosion control methods on new slopes and let mud wash into Schweitzer Creek during construction last summer at Schweitzer Mountain Resort, state officials contend.

"Schweitzer Creek is running chocolate brown," said Dennis Clark, an Idaho Department of Lands forest practices adviser in Sandpoint.

Clark inspected the resort Friday to see whether erosion control methods he ordered Nov. 1 were complete. He said Schweitzer officials "didn't do anything they were supposed to do."

Schweitzer crews had until Friday to mulch several steep, sandy ski slopes and place a culvert where Schweitzer Creek was diverted. What Clark found was the only mulched slope torn up to install pipe and an open ditch where the culvert was supposed to be placed.

Schweitzer has been given an extension until Friday to comply, Clark said. If repairs still are not complete, the department will order the resort to stop work on its development until the erosion problems are corrected.

Tim Hindeman, the resort's general manager, said he was aware of the erosion problems but blamed the muddy conditions on a wet October.

"We have been given a checklist and are working on a daily basis to get ground cover on," Hindeman said. Many areas that were replanted with vegetation earlier were washed out by last month's rains, he said, but those problems have been corrected.

But Scott McQuarrie, a state Division of Environmental Quality water quality specialist in Coeur d'Alene, said some of Schweitzer's erosion woeds might linger until spring.

"There are quite a number of problems up there," he said. McQuarrie's main concern is the heavy mud flow down Schweitzer Creek, which could harm fish populations and pollute drinking water.

Schweitzer Creek flows into Sand Creek, which supplies most of the city of Sandpoint's drinking water. Sand Creek flows into Lake Pend Oreille.

Samples taken from Schweitzer Creek Nov. 2 contained large amounts of sediment, likely from the lodge and hotel construction sites on the mountain, McQuarrie said.

Another problem is a section of the creek with a diversion not built to Idaho Department of Water Resources guidelines. The new creek bed was not lined with rock to stop erosion and had no settling ponds for filtering out dirt.

McQuarrie said if that work is not completed this year, Schweitzer Creek will dump large amounts of mud into Sand Creek and Lake Pend Oreille next spring.

"They have a major problem at the top where there is a hell of a lot of water and mud," he said.

Spending decreases do not equal recession

BOISE (AP) — The rate of increase in consumer spending in Idaho slowed in the third quarter, but experts feel there is little evidence the state is reeling from the nation's economic slump.

Retail sales statewide climbed 7.9 percent in the July-through-September period to $2.86 billion, up from $2.64 billion for the same three months of 1989; the Idaho Department of Revenue and Taxation reported Monday.

At the same time, Ada County's rate of increase was 6.9 percent for the quarter, with total retail sales of $399.4 million. For the first two quarters of this year, however, Idaho's growth rates were 16 percent and 12.6 percent, respectively, compared with the same two quarters a year ago.

Business people, economists and state officials were in general agreement Monday a 7.9 increase in retail spending still shows a healthy state economy and little cause for alarm.

"I don't think we can reasonably expect the percentage increases in sales we've had over the last year, year and a-half, to last," said Gene Schultz, economist for West One Bank.

"We're seeing a maturing of our rate of growth as opposed to a slowdown in our economy." Job and population growth, residential and commercial construction, per capita income, farm receipts and other indicators all remain strong, he said.

Although Idaho vehicle sales declined in the third quarter by nearly four percent, most other major categories of retail sales showed gains.

They include: building materials, up 13.1 percent; restaurants, up 18.7 percent; grocery stores, up 11.5 percent; retail dry goods (department stores), up 8.5 percent; and clothing, up 15.3 percent.

Through the first nine months of the year, Idaho's consumer spending is up 11.7 percent from the same period of 1989, to $7.53 billion.

The decline in vehicle sales might represent a more cautious attitude by consumers when it comes to big-ticket purchases, especially in light of the Middle East crisis and resultant jump in gasoline prices; said Larry Chetwood, president of the Idaho Association of Auto Dealers and owner of Meridian Ford.

"We just think the consumer is faced with a real dilemma. He doesn't know where gasoline prices will settle... and he's being told the economy is in a downward spiral," Chetwood said.

"Any time a consumer can put off making a decision on a major purchase, he will."

Saddam's aggression has familiar ring

Elizabeth Werner Reader Comment

"It's time to bring the American troops home," reads the Reader Comment by Richard Stoppel, which makes some good points but some with which I cannot agree.

The "rumble of war drums" sounds loud and clear indeed. American forces are arrayed in a standoff with many other nations effecting a needed blockade. The war drums are far from being sounded by America only - there is a disconcerting awareness in the world council of nations of naked aggression unleashed against the sovereign state of Kuwait, whose population is now under the bootheel of a foreign aggressor who rules with more than an iron hand.

For me, this is a second time around - as it is for many, many veterans and immigrants living in this, our country. We remember when prime ministers Chamberlain and Daladier set out on their peace mission to Munich, Germany - the entire family of nations praying that they might succeed. We also remember their return to Britain and France triumphantly waving the signed accord buying "peace for our time," just over a half century ago now. They had given in to the legitimate-sounding demand of their time, the Sudetenland - was to be German from then on. The war years were allyed.

How long did that peace last? Anyone alive and aware can answer that with "less than a year." After that, the aggressor, Germany, did not stop at any boundary any more. Will Saddam Hussein resist the impetus generated by his victory in Kuwait - including the reference so far and taking into account the things he has done, even to his own people?

True, the dispute with Kuwait involved some oil originally. Was the lightning attack following that of a born bully or not? His desired wish for peace now, however, is superceded by the naked fact of his aggression - as well as the ever-growing rhetoric of the hatred for Israel, so catering to Arab emotions, by the way.

Aggression is what most needs to be checked and brought to reverse, stopped dead in its track, preserved by all the nations working together to negate world peace - including America. It is time to ask some questions now, such as: Will the partial victory gained by a compromise peace via negotiations send a message of appeasement? Of fear? May the presently acquired gain by Iraq tempt its aggressive mood into more adventurism down the road away, converting that gain by appeasement to more and still better hardware of war, followed by more aggression as its appetite is whetted?

Must we yet learn and relearn history's lessons at the cost of every new, young brave blood after what two world wars have already taught us this century?

As members of the human race, we must - and will be - measured by our stand (and our stance) when dangers threaten all. I recall my parents' - and their contemporaries - fear for us, their signs of relief after the "Munich peace" was secured, but also their tears and preparations when the rubia ended and the made promises proved no more, no less, than steppingstones for the power-hungry then.

No warmer because of personal experience, I, too, abhor the violence of war - unless it is to forestall any appetite for further conquest. I am a great-grandmother twice now. My two oldest grandchildren, one a parent, are members of our armed forces and I am proud of them. Needless to say, I pray for them daily.

The last question I'm asking cannot be answered. I know, but might not aggressive Germany have been checked but for the two aforementioned gentlemen?

And also, what was the outcome in the end? It also seems prudent to ask ourselves: What if we were Kuwaiti? And would we rather divide and debate its ruin and win world peace?

Pre and con debate is good and must be. We're in a predicament not of our own making, Mr. Stoppel, so I disagree with you.

Cold War's end means opportunity, risk for Idaho

Saddam Hussein's annexation of Kuwait silenced this summer's talk about a "peace dividend" for the federal budget. Still, the Cold War's end offers an exciting opportunity for this nation to get out of the warhead business.

The opportunity is especially exciting for Idahoans. But there's a risk too.

Increasingly over the past couple of years, opponents of bomb factories have focused on need. Why build a plutonium separator in Idaho - or anywhere else - when we already have more than we can use?

Until now the people asking that question have been doves. But it can't be long until, even the most hard-line hawk, starts asking too.

The facts are plain:

- Economic and political upheavals in the Soviet Union are rapidly removing the only threat of large-scale nuclear war.
- Federal spending is swollen beyond our ability to support.
- Arms-control agreements that cut the overall number of warheads will scale back our need for the weapons' nuclear ingredients.
- All this means to Idaho is that temporarily dormant production proposals are decreasingly likely to be revived.
- With enough plutonium already on hand for 35,000 to 40,000 modern warheads, and with our current 20,000-warhead stockpile likely to shrink rather than grow, justification for the Special Isotope Separator will be ever more elusive. Cost factors may bring about a permanent end to plutonium production, a goal that has eluded anti-nuclear activists.

The same goes for tritium. Although this crucial warhead component decays rapidly (5.5 percent a year), the new global situation makes a new production facility a questionable expense.

The Nuclear Control Institute, an arms-control group, has suggested that tritium production would reduce U.S. and Soviet arsenals by 5.5 percent a year. That number begins to look realistic.

If bomb-related projects evaporate, the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory can refocus its attention toward what many Idahoans believe should be INEL's priority: 40 years' radioactive waste and cleanups of civilian nuclear research.

The risk for Idaho is Energy Secretary James D. Watkins' plan to centralizing nuclear production in one or two sites. This scenario could come about if mindless bomb-worship wins out over post-Cold War pragmatism.

It seems an unlikely prospect. But if it happens, it could turn INEL into the nation's warhead worksite - with all the attendant environmental hazards.

Idahoans have cause for optimism, but they have cause for vigilance as well.

A new generation must not be sent to die by the thousands

Randolph Ryan

The question most asked about the impending Middle East catastrophe will be: "What did you do in the war, Daddy?"

Rather, thousands will ask as they look in their mirrors: "Why didn't I do more to stop it when there was still time?"

Sore, especially in Congress and in the media, have been slow to find their voice out of fear. This one hesitates to turn in an alarm for fear of crying wolf and looking seen as a player on the home team.

The most adroit position themselves with delicacy so that they can dissociate themselves later. After all, the course this president took, in the end, was not precisely what they had had in mind.

The fact is President Bush's policy was a game of chicken. Unless the other player flinches - and a few knowledgeable people believe Saddam Hussein will - this sport will have devastating human consequences.

Meanwhile, the geopolitical gain the administration seeks is illusory. American businessmen and travelers - and political moderates among the Arabs and the Israelis alike - will find the Middle East to be far more a hostile terrain for years after the war.

The resolution sought this week at the United Nations aims at a free-fire endorsement by January. This will then be used to circumvent Congress.

The chance is close to zero that Saddam Hussein will vacate Kuwait before Jan. 1 or

Feb. 1. The chance is high and climbing that the administration will do something faithful to prove it is still a potent player on the world stage.

Meanwhile, the administration is engaged in a shifty propaganda campaign - one half-truth after another - to get Americans to consent to an attack. It has test-marketed "clarion calls" for war: cheap oil, aggression, way-of-life. Jobs. The latest call - Iraqi nuclear weapons - is as pathetic as the others.

All nuclear weapons are a long-term problem. Iraq's would be more disturbing than some others. There is no short-term threat from Iraq, however, that would justify preemptive war. Economic attrition, technology restriction, and an arms-controlled and job-focused push for arms control will do the job.

As for the president's "offensive option," there are essentially two choices. Digging Iraqi soldiers out of Kuwait trenches is the style of Iwo Jima and the Marne. Or trying out the concept of "discriminate deterrence" - standing off at a distance and throwing high-technology explosives at targets in Iraq. Once committed, the administration would probably decide to do both.

Arms-length bombardment may sound attractive, but Americans must not estimate the human cost merely in shattered American lives. They must also tally the human cost of hundreds of thousands of Iraqis and other Middle Eastern civilians.

There is urgent work ahead. Congress must jealously guard its constitutional right, clarifying the distinction between the commander in chief's "options" in an emergency and a premeditated decision to war.

The media must give more attention to subjects glossed over until now - above all, the human costs of a war on both sides. And they must examine the "new world order" apparently glimpsed by Bush and his advisers. Is it really collective security? Or is it America rampant on a Heian shield?

It is urgent that every American who has an opinion on this incipient tragedy speak up.

A new generation must not be sent to die by the thousands or tens of thousands - and to kill by the tens or hundreds of thousands - because an unsure president in search of stature lost his patience and threw peace away.

Marine appreciates support

My son, Lance Cpl. Shawn T. Manker, was deployed to Saudi Arabia from Okinawa in August and I wrote this note to put in the paper and I thought your readers would appreciate hearing what he has to say.

"I would like to thank the whole team of Fairfield for all the support I've heard about. It makes me feel good that the moral is high back in the states. All the Marines we well as the other forces, are working so hard over here and it is hard sometimes not to think about just dropping from exhaustion. Hearing of all the support back home really helps. It gives our hearts something to hold on to. Please don't stop thinking about us and thanks again."

Music not what needs banning

I am an eighth-grader attending East Minico Junior High. I like to play guitar and listen to heavy metal music. I would like to be in a band someday.

There is one thing that bothers me - criticism of rock music. People think that some of this music is satanic. Because of that the record says backwards.

I have recently viewed a video cassette titled, "Hell's Bells." It is supposed to be about sublimely message and satanic verses in music. In the video, music was played backwards and there was supposed to be praises to Satan, but I hear none. Anyone who hears satanic praises in that mumbled noise must have their brain on backwards, or are they possessed themselves.

Recently, the rock group, "Guns and Roses," fired their drummer because he was on drugs. That was equal to about a thousand anti-drug commercials as far as getting kids to say no to drugs.

People should not try to ban music. They should ban world hunger. They should ban homelessness, disease, pollution and war. Those things are evil - not music.

Thanks for all 17,000 votes

Elaine McLain says thanks for the 17,000 votes from constituents. Those votes represent education for our children, a clean environment for our future, and an economy that encourages fairness and family. Although I did not win, the state and women made advances.

Thanks especially to my husband, Jerry, who worked side by side with me daily for the nine months, campaigning, singing, driving and giving advice.

Thanks to our daughter, Jolene, for continued positive encouragement.

Thanks to JoAnne Smith (treasurer), Blaine County for Choice, Magic Valley for Choice and many women; we now have 34 women (out of 126) more people involved.

Thanks to those who wrote letters to the editor; that takes a special effort.

If I have forgotten someone, please forgive me. "To forgive" is divine.

In the coming months, our family will focus on peace in the Middle East. We hope a lot of Idaho people get actively involved by calling media, as well as Congress.

We the people must become more involved in seeking a peaceful solution to the Middle East Crisis because it is our sons and daughters who are in danger of war - not the sons and daughters of the wealthy and influential.

From Kanaga Rapids to Kuwait; from Hanford to Hanoi; to the INEL to Iraq; from Malad Gorge to Managua; from Saylor-Greek to Saudi Arabia; from Big Mountain to Baghdad; from Box Canyon to Beirut; from the Malignant Mall to Mercury, Nev.; from Jerome County to Jerusalem; from the courthouse to Capitol Hill, ours is a legacy, a trail of wasted lives, corrupt and inept leadership, greed, arrogance, stupidity; a gross over-consumption lifestyle; a scorched-earth policy.

We proclaim ourselves a nation under God, yet we defile all that is sacred. The basic principles of our foreign, domestic and environmental policies are money, materialism and mediocrity. All signs and symptoms point to the collapse of our social, spiritual and biological environments; yet, we push recklessly and willfully forward, paying homage to the forces of "economic growth" and environmental, intellectual and spiritual destruction.

The bulk of our institutions serve not the honorable goals of intellectual and spiritual development, health and healing, freedom and justice, but rather the perpetuation of an unjust, unethical, immoral and insane status quo - the aggrandizement of man's ego; his illusion of separateness and superiority over nature.

Bottom-line, folks, we are addicted to materialism. We consume too much and we will squander the lives, talents and futures of our children to ensure our plump-rump, pea-brained lifestyle. It is really quite pathetic; we could not be truly better. It might do us well to remember that "a WILLIAM K. CHISHOLM

Put Charboneau in an outlaw of misery

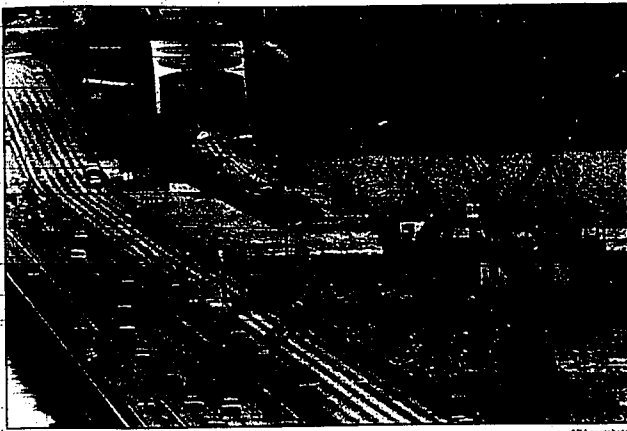

My first remark is an answer to Karen Bachel of Kimberly. Agree with you about Jaime Charboneau. They need to put him out of his misery. In other words, pull the plug. That man had no business being anywhere near his ex-wife's place anyway. When you part company, you definitely leave each other alone. Each goes their own way. So if he didn't have the brains to stay away, by the laws of the land and the law of our Heavenly Father, he has conformed to him just what the jury gave - to die.

If the family don't like it, put them in with him and pull the plug on them; then they will be too quiet.

There are too many of them that we are feeding now and there is not enough money. We can't even do for ourselves. Those people gave up all rights when they committed whatever crime they did. Their rights are gone forever. They need to all away with all of them. They're nothing but blood suckers and they're draining us all.

Engineers reopened the westbound lanes of the new I-90 floating bridge over Lake Washington for Seattle commuter traffic Tuesday. Book opponents urge textbook selection panel to ban 1 series

BOISE (AP) — Opponents of the "Impressions" reading series urged an Idaho Department of Education textbook selection committee on Tuesday to reject the books they say indoctrinate children in violence and the occult.

"We are not on a crusade," the Rev. Ron Hunter of Coeur d'Alene's Church of the Nazarene told the 15-member panel. "We are not here to advocate any form of censorship nor to request that our own religion be propagated or even protected beyond the terms of the Constitution of the United States."

But Hunter and others, citing a number of examples from the books for students in kindergarten through sixth grade, said the "Impressions" series contains illustrations and segments of text that are psychologically negative, frightening for the age level of the children involved, violent and replete with subliminal and symbolic references to the occult.

Jan Spalding, director of sales support services for series publisher Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Inc. and its subsidiary, Holt, Rinehart and Winston of Canada Ltd., said Hunter and Brenda Oliveria, co-chairwoman of a Coeur d'Alene group called Citizens for Quality Education, misled the committee by citing examples out of context.

"Good literature is open to many interpretations," she said, citing selections by such authors as Martin Luther King Jr., C.S. Lewis, Laura Ingalls Wilder and A.A. Milne.

Ms. Spalding defended the use of "scary stories" and other devices as natural and instructive forms of language play. She said among the positive values taught through the series' selections are friendship, cooperation, responsibility, courtesy, kindness and family love.

The Department of Education panel was meeting in Boise through Friday to decide which reading textbooks to recommend to the state Board of Education for use in Idaho public schools.

Can smelter facing air quality fines

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A can-smelting company has asked to meet with state Department of Environmental Quality officials over alleged air-quality violations at its Hausers plant.

John Ledger, state Air Quality Bureau chief, said Monday from Boise that the Insamet Inc. plant manager has asked for a compliance meeting, which will take place next month.

Insamet faces $168,000 in penalties for air-quality and other violations, Ledger said.

The plant operated by the Pennsylvania-based company is violating emission standards for fluorides, particulates and organic gases, he said. The company also aggravated the emission levels by modifying a piece of equipment and changing an operational procedure, Ledger said.

None of the alleged violations are considered an imminent threat to human health, he said.

Insamet received written notification of the violations Monday from the state Division of Environmental Quality.

Plant manager Job Wojciechowski declined to comment on the state's action.

"We don't know why the state has delayed so long in sending this notice," Insamet spokeswoman Kim Longacre said by telephone from Philadelphia, Pa.

"Everybody will deny it, but we have our suspicions that this is politically motivated," Longacre did not elaborate.

State officials based their findings on stack emission tests conducted in 1989 by Insamet engineers, Ledger said.

He said his department didn't have the manpower to address the violations until now.

Teacher sues over sexual behavior tests

PRESTON (AP) — A former Preston sixth-grade teacher has filed a $4.5 million federal lawsuit against the Preston School Board, district administrators and officials intended to maintain Sexual Abuse Treatment Center.

Larry Winger, 54, contends in the complaint filed in U.S. District Court that his constitutional rights to "liberty, privacy and due process were denied when he was forced to undergo testing at the Salt Lake City center for deviant sexual behavior. The suit alleges the testing caused Winger severe, traumatic psychological and emotional distress.

It seeks $2.5 million in compensatory damages and $2 million in punitive damages, contending Winger has been unable to find a job because of the incident.

"The case is certainly unique in my experience, because I have never seen a teacher who was subjected to this kind of physical and psychological evaluation on almost virtually no evidence," said Kathy Brooks, Winger's attorney in Boise.

The Preston School Board, Superintendent Orson Bowler and Oakwood Elementary School Principal Jerry Waddams deny Winger was ever involved in taking the tests. They contend he participated voluntarily and any damage Winger suffered was due to his own negligence.

Republican debate vexes Ayre

BOISE (AP) — With the Nov. 6 election giving Idaho's Democrats their greatest gains in years, some Republican heavyweights are expressing interest in state GOP Chairman Randy Ayre's job.

Ayre is growing frustrated by the debate.

The big-name possibilities to succeed Ayre are former Lt. Gov. Phil Batt, retiring state Sen. Rachel Gilbert and former Senate President Pro Tem Jim Risch.

All three said they may seek the job should Ayre quit before the Jan. 24 GOP Central Committee meeting. His term runs through 1992.

At least three other potential candidates — retiring U.S. Sen. Jim McClure, former state party chairman Blake Hall, and party vice chairman Cindy Moyle — have been approached about the job, but declined to pursue it.

Ayre said Monday he was unaware of any move to replace him.

"I'm willing to serve," he said. "If there is a groundswell or a consensus that others could do a better job, then I certainly would defer to them. I'm not trying to hang on. I've got better things to do."

Ayre, who last spring took money out of his own pocket to make the party's payroll, said, "Is there somebody out after my head?"

This year, the Idaho GOP suffered its worst election defeat since 1958.

Ayre said after the election that he would not "fall upon my sword" and resign the unpaid post. "Are people saying I'm responsible for this? They never say that to my face," he said.

"I pay for the privilege of doing it and all I get is personal criticism," Ayre said. "It's not something that one would say is a gilded opportunity. I do it just because I feel a sense of duty, a loyalty to the party. I don't get any jollies out of this job."

But, he added, "There may be a groundswell I'm not sensing. I've been out of town for a couple of days."

He has begun a series of meetings to rebuild the party.

Hall, an Idaho Falls lawyer who preceded Ayre, said he turned down an overture to return to the post.

Asked if Ayre should resign, Hall said, "That's up to Randy. It depends on how much time and effort he can commit to the position. I certainly don't think it would be inappropriate for him to decide he's given it his best shot and let someone else try it. On the other hand, if he's got the energy to go forward, then so be it."

Said Vice Chairman Moyle: "Let's face it, Randy has gotten on-the-job training. He didn't see this (election) fiasco coming."

Moyle, a Burley milk rancher, said Risch and Gilbert were viable candidates. "I think we need a little more fire and guts," she said.

But Moyle, who said she tried to convince Hall to run, added, "I'm looking for someone that's not as controversial. I'm not looking for someone to go out and knock heads together."

3 Americans among 18 hostages freed by Iraq after relatives' visit

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Eighteen foreigners — three Americans, 10 Britons and five Germans — arrived in the Jordanian capital Tuesday after being freed by President Saddam Hussein of Iraq.

The Americans, waving Iraqi flags, and the Britons were released after their relatives went to Baghdad to plead for their freedom.

John Stevenson of Panama City, Fla.; Fred Harrington of Bellevue, Wash.; and Clyde Jesse of Buffalo Grove, Ill., complained they were ignored by the Bush administration. They said only their relatives helped free them.

The foreigners reached Amman aboard two Iraqi Airways flights.

The five Germans had been in hiding in Kuwait since Aug. 7, five days after Iraq seized control of the Persian Gulf emirate.

The Germans said they could not reach Baghdad in time to join 104 of their countrymen who flew out of the Iraqi capital on Sunday after Saddam ordered the release of all German nationals.

The Britons were freed after their wives or daughters flew to Baghdad and met with Saddam, who ordered their release in appreciation of "the women's visit and the role of women in general."

The Americans' relatives also met with Saddam.

The Americans and the Britons were accompanied by their relatives. The women in the British group carried flowers; the Americans waved the U.S. and Iraqi flags.

The Germans expressed concern for Westerners left behind.

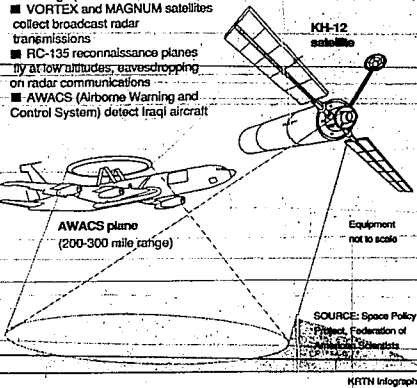

Hundreds of foreigners have been barred from leaving Iraq and Kuwait, and some are being held at strategic sites in hope of warding off any attack by the U.S.-led multinational force.

"There are a lot of people still hid-

Eyes in the sky: How U.S. spies on Iraq

The U.S. has various methods of spying on Iraq around-the-clock:

- Lacrosse satellites use radar to see in all weather, through clouds
- KH-11 and KH-12 satellites use high-resolution TVs to spot objects, such as grapefruit; KH means keyhole
- VORTEX and MAGNUM satellites collect broadcast radar transmissions
- RC-135 reconnaissance planes fly at low altitudes, snooping on radar communications
- AWACS (Airborne Warning and Control System) detect Iraqi aircraft

ing in various parts of Kuwait," Wruck Uwe, a German commercial photographer. "The telephone system in Kuwait is still good, and we kept in touch with a lot of others like us."

According to U.S. State Department figures, more than 900,000 of the estimated 3 million foreigners who were in Kuwait and Iraq on Aug. 2 have left.

The remaining 2 million, the vast majority Asian and Arab workers, are expected to try to depart.

Some foreigners, mostly women married to Iraqis or Kuwaitis, have elected to stay. Some governments and independent public figures have negotiated the release of their nationals. Saddam has offered to free foreigners in exchange for guarantees he will not be attacked. On Nov. 18, he offered to free all foreigners between Dec. 25 and March 25.

Guard units have been mobilized, said spokesman Maj. Bob Nelson. The company's mission "is to provide guards for prisoners of war and civilian internees and for U.S. military installations and facilities," he said.

Activated Utah National Guard units include the 120th Quartermaster Detachment, a cell of the 142 Military Intelligence Battalion and the 1144th Evacuation Hospital, whose last members left Utah early Sunday.

The longest period between an alert and activation was seven days; the shortest two days, Nelson said.

NOW calls for U.S. troop pullout

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Organization for Women called on Tuesday for the immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from the Persian Gulf, saying the "oppressive regimes of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are not worth the sacrifice of American lives."

The organization, in its first public stand on the Gulf crisis, condemned Saudi Arabia and Kuwait for human rights violations against women and protested the treatment of American servicewomen in the region.

"Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are despotic, clan-run monarchies," said NOW President Molly Yard. "Both ... systematically oppress women. This is gender apartheid in its purest, most brutal form, and should deeply offend all Americans."

Yard also objected to the restrictions imposed on military women serving in Saudi Arabia.

"We would be outraged if the administration sent American troops to defend South Africa from invasion, ordering black soldiers to 'respect the culture' by bowing their heads in the presence of white racists," she said at a press conference on the NOW resolution.

NOW complained female soldiers in Saudi Arabia must dress in full fatigues while male soldiers are allowed to sport T-shirts in the desert heat.

Military women are not allowed to drive while off-duty or run errands unescorted and must wear knee-length shorts while swimming — even in private pools.

Rep. Pat Schroeder, a senior member of the Armed Services Committee, agreed that the U.S. applies double standards toward Saudi Arabia.

Inspectors say Iraq not diverting nuclear fuel

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Two inspectors found no evidence that Baghdad is developing atomic weapons, the International Atomic Energy Agency said Tuesday.

A brief statement from the United Nations agency said "no change had taken place in the status of nuclear material under safeguards" at the four sites since the last routine inspection in April.

The agency inspects nuclear facilities in various countries every six months under the Non-Proliferation Treaty that prohibits the spread of nuclear technology for non-peaceful use.

The statement said all fissionable material was also accounted for during the April inspection, indicating none had been diverted to make nuclear weapons. A Nigerian and a Soviet inspector toured Iraq's two research reactors, a storage and a fuel-producing plant Nov. 19-22 at Baghdad's invitation, agency spokesman Hans-Friedrich Meyer said. The inspectors were accompanied by Iraqi officials as permitted under the Non-Proliferation Treaty, he said.

Iraqi troops put at 450,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon said Tuesday its latest estimates indicate Iraq has 450,000 troops in the Kuwaiti theater of operations, an increase of 20,000 over last week.

Pete Williams, the Pentagon spokesman, said half the troops are inside Kuwait itself. The troops are mainly defensive in nature, but "have the ability to go on the offensive" if necessary, he said.

According to the Pentagon's most recent estimate, Iraq has 3,600 tanks in the area, up from 3,500 last week; 2,200 armored personnel carriers; and 2,400 pieces of artillery, an increase of 100 pieces.

Williams said the latest estimates reflect the "fine-tuning" of U.S. figures as well as Iraqi troop movements.

Williams said the any Iraqi buildup in the Kuwaiti theater is a further indication that Saddam Hussein has no intention of complying with U.N. resolutions seeking to force his withdrawal from Kuwait.

While the Iraqis appear to be moving more people into the Kuwait region, the Defense Department has no evidence that Iraq has moved on its pledge of last week to activate new divisions and call up reservists.

"We haven't seen any sign of that yet," Williams said.

Tigers scratch Bruins late for 46-36 victory

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome Tigers took over the scoring in the fourth quarter, piling up the final margin at the foul line in beating the Twin Falls Bruins 46-36 Tuesday night.

The Tigers took the lead to stay in the closing seconds of the third quarter when Ginger Thompson made it 32-30. The Twin Falls offense, which had hit 10 points per quarter until then, went dead as Liz Gilbert and Holly Denton took Jerome out to a 37-30 lead with 4:23 left in the game. The Bruins never again challenged.

Jerome Coach Ken Wright credited a zone defense with shutting off Twin Falls in the second half.

"We went to the zone because we just weren't moving in man and they were breaking past us and getting the inside shot," Wright said.

"In the second half Twin Falls was getting great movement on the perimeter but they weren't getting it inside to challenge our defense," he said.

Jerome was whistled for just one foul in the second half because "we quit flying at people and getting ourselves into trouble," Wright said.

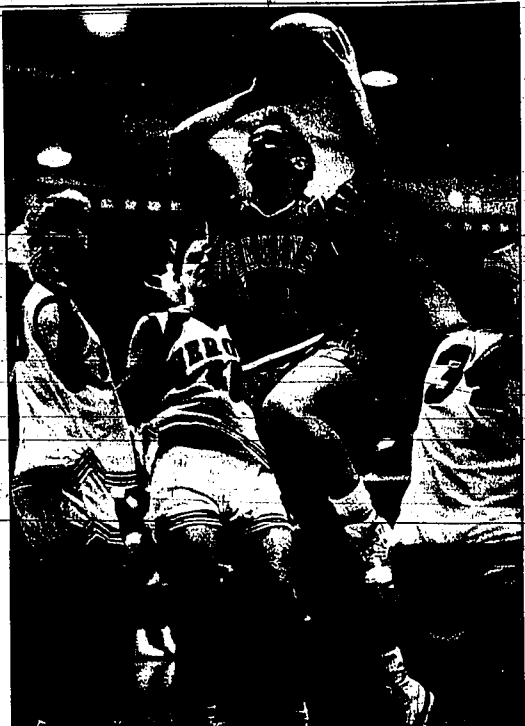

After falling behind 7-2 in the first four minutes, Jerome started coming back on buckets by Gilbert and Thompson. Julie James hit four free throws to send the Tigers ahead. She added two more charities and a field goal to go with a pair of Gilbert field goals to open up a 20-14 lead.

Stacy Butler hit twice for the Bruins and Ashley Mayes tied it at 20 from the line just before halftime.

Junior Jamie Esslinger hit six third-quarter points to keep the Bruins close before Jerome went on its final breakaway.

The teams were close in field goal shooting, Jerome hitting 15 of 39 against 15-42 for Twin Falls. But the Tigers had 16 of 23 free throws while Twin Falls was 6-12.

Italians suspend ex-NBA player

The Associated Press

ROME — Michael Ray Richardson is due back in Italy for an all-star game on Saturday, but the former NBA guard won't receive a warm welcome.

While Richardson was vacationing in the United States, the Italian basketball federation on Tuesday suspended him for five games for instigating a brawl leading to a record 19 ejections.

The all-star game, not covered by the ban but Italian sports dailies speculated Richardson might not show up in a defiant end to his Italian career.

"Sugar Flees to the United States," headlined Rome's Corriere dello Sport, which quoted him as telling American teammate Clemon Johnson of Knorr Bologna: "I'm not coming back."

A Knorr official, Roberto Baldazzi, said the team expected Richardson back in Italy on Friday. He said the team would file an appeal seeking a reduction of Richardson's suspension.

Clemon Johnson and two other Italian, American-Frank Johnson and Italian Stefano Rusconi, were each suspended for two games for their part in last Sunday's free-for-all.

"We can do without certain superstars," said Corriere dello Sport, while Gazzetta dello Sport summed up the brawl with the headline: "How Squalid."

3-pointer has enhanced role of college teams' backcourts

By M.G. Missenell
Knight-Ridder News Service

The purpose of the "innovation" the late Ed Steitz said at the time, was to bring the little man back into the picture. College basketball had become a game dominated by play in the post, a game in which only the big, bigger and biggest survived.

Steitz, then the chairman of the NCAA rules committee, reasoned that the three-inch — would open up the floor, allow the craftsmen with the ball a bit more freedom. With the guard restored as an integral cog, he felt, the college game would be even more exciting than it already was.

It may be an oversimplification to give the three-point shot all the credit — after all, the shot does have its critics — but there is little doubt that backcourts have never been more important in college basketball.

This past June, four of the first five picks in the National Basketball Association draft — and six of the first 10 — were guards. And this season, college basketball will have plenty of talented backcourts.

What are the qualifications for a good backcourt? First and foremost, the two guards must have played together for a spell — preferably for more than one year. For instance, Arkansas' Lee Mayberry and Todd Day are entering their third year together, with each attuned to the other's moves and idiosyncrasies.

The point guard must be a good penetrator and passer, with the ability to kick the ball to his open backcourt mate when he has spotted up for a jumper. In turn, the shooting guard must be able to stick the three-pointer with regularity. For example,

North Carolina State's Chris Corchiani went into this season needing just 222 assists to set an NCAA career record, and his backcourt mate, Rodney Monroe, is one of the country's finest long-range bombers.

But the point guard also must be able to make the jump shot if the defense is backing in on the low post. Good defense, too, is a requirement for a good backcourt, because by making steals, guards can create easy baskets. And it also is a great help if both members of a backcourt shoot free throws well, because they are the ones who will be doing the majority of the ball-handling down the stretch; protecting a lead or trying to rally their teams.

The following is one man's listing of the top 5 backcourts in college basketball this season:

TOP FIVE
—Arkansas, Lee Mayberry and Todd

Day. Great backcourts are a tradition at Arkansas. Anybody remember the "Triplets" — Marvin Delph, Ron Brewer and Sidney Moncrief?

—N.C. State. Chris Corchiani and Rodney Monroe. They are the celebrated "Fire and Ice" duo. Corchiani plays like a Tasmanian devil, while Monroe has the smooth style of say, Nat King Cole.

—UNLV. Greg Anthony and Anderson Hunt. How tough is Anthony? Last season, he played Nevada-Las Vegas' final 10 games, including the national championship game, with a broken jaw that made eating solid foods impossible.

Major leagues offer new deal to minor leagues

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major league baseball has submitted a new proposal to the National Association, hoping to end the deadlock that threatened to end the 87-year relationship between the major and minor leagues.

Representatives of the two sides met for five hours Tuesday and appeared to move closer to a resolution of their dispute over finances and control.

Bill Murray, director of baseball operations for the commissioner's office, and Mike Moore, chief administrative officer for the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, baseball's minor league network, both expressed satisfaction with the progress.

"We clarified a lot of issues and some misunderstandings," Moore said. "I thought it was a very congenial and informative meeting."

Murray said the two sides overcame much of the language that separated them from an agreement.

"I think there are fewer differences," Murray said. "To some degree, our meeting cleared up problems they had."

Murray said the two sides were able to bridge some important gaps.

Harassment of female reporter expensive for Kiam's Patriots

Patriots pay $50,000; 3 players another $22,500

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The alleged sexual harassment of reporter Lisa Olson will cost three players a total of $22,500 and the New England Patriots $50,000.

Zeko-Mowitz was fined $12,500 on Tuesday, while Michael Timponso and Robert Perryman were each fined $3,000 for their roles in a locker room incident involving Olson, of the Boston Herald. The Patriots were fined $25,000 because they "never vigorously sought the facts about what had happened," NFL commissioner

Paul Tagliabue wrote in a letter to Patriots owner Victor Kiam.

In addition to the team fine, the Patriots were ordered to pay $25,000 for counseling on how to deal with the media.

Tagliabue levied the fines after receiving a 60-page report on the incident by special counsel Phillip Heymann of the Harvard Law School. Tagliabue concluded that "a serious incident occurred on Sept. 17 while Ms. Lisa Olson of the Boston Herald was interviewing cornerback Maurice Hurst in the Patriots' locker room. The incident in-

Disciplined pair punish Mississippi College as Arkansas wins

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP)—Todd Day and Oliver Miller sat out the first half as a disciplinary measure then keyed a 27-2 run that carried third-ranked Arkansas to a 96-57 victory Tuesday night over Mississippi College.

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said earlier that he was unsure how he would discipline Day and Miller for picking up technical fouls last week in a 12-point loss to Arizona in a final-round game of the NIT.

Miller entered Tuesday night's game with 16:30 left in the second half and Day followed 75 seconds later. At that point, Arkansas (4-1) led the Division II Choctaws (1-2) 42-22.

Miller and Day sat back down with 4:46 remaining and Arkansas up 86-49.

Lee Mayberry started the spurt with a 3-pointer with 14:45 remaining. Five minutes later, it was 69-43.

Miller rebounded and Day led off and then a block by Day led to a basket by Mayberry. A steal and layup by Arlyn Bowers gave Arkansas a 10-point advantage — the Razorbacks' first double-digit lead of the game. Day made a steal, and a stuff before Ison Harris interrupted the string with a follow that cut it to 53-43 with 12:45 left.

A jumper by Ron Huey, a 3-pointer by Day, a follow slam by Miller and another 3-pointer by Day pushed the lead to 63-43. Two baskets by Mayberry, one of them after a steal by Day, and another basket by Day raised the lead to 26.

College basketball

Arkansas was unable to shake the Choctaws in the first half.

In fact, the Razorbacks scored only two baskets in the first seven minutes — both by Huey — and trailed 13-6. Ken Biley, a Pine Bluff freshman off the bench, started a 12-point Arkansas run with a short bank shot.

Isiah Morris put back a rebound and then picked up a fumbled pass and made one out of close in to cut the lead to 13-12. The Razorbacks took the lead for good on Mayberry's running bank shot with 10:15 remaining.

"Biley took a pass from Ernie Murray for a fast-break basket and Roosevelt Wallace hit from the baseline to make it 18-13.

North Carolina 104
Jacksonville 61
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Fourth-ranked North Carolina's 104-61 rout of Jacksonville Tuesday night didn't make the usually cautious Dean Smith change his ways.

"Overall, we just don't know," the Tar Heel coach said of his team's ability. "We played to the home crowd. We're playing a Sun Belt Conference team, but Jacksonville is new to a little bit. I'm not too excited."

Freshman Cliff Rozier scored 22 points for the Tar Heels, who were overpowering on defense as they handed Smith his 690th career victory.

"I was very pleased with our effort defensively. Another thing I was pleased with was they zoned us the whole game," Smith said.

The Tar Heels forced 29 turnovers by the Dolphins, 17 of them in the first half. It was that defensive pressure that helped North Carolina break from a 4-4 tie in the early stages with an eight-point run in a 20-minute span.

But Smith wasn't totally pleased with North Carolina's performance. "I see some good things. I see some things we need some work on," he said.

Smith said North Carolina (2-0) tried to wear down Jacksonville (1-1). And Jacksonville coach Rich Haddad said the strategy worked.

North Carolina's size was a problem for the Dolphins, he said.

"We're not used to playing against people this size," Haddad said. "And when we did get the ball inside, we did take some bad shots which in practice wouldn't be bad shots."

Ga. Tech 87, Morgan St. 65
ATLANTA (AP) — Sophomore forward Malcolm Mackley scored a career-high 33 points to lead 14th-ranked Georgia Tech to an 87-65 victory over Morgan State on Tuesday night.

Tech, 2-0, got off to a slow start as Morgan State, 0-3, took an 11-point lead with the help of forward Steve Haynes, who scored 8 points in the early drive and 24 points for the game.

All-America sophomore guard Kenny Anderson racked up 13 assists against the Bears, bringing his total assists to 309. Anderson became the seventh player in Tech's history to total more than 300 assists.

Matt Geiger had 21 points and Bury 15 for the Yellow Jackets. James McCoy added 20 for Morgan State.

A Florida guard drives on Texas senior Joey Wright as the Gators took on the Longhorns.

play after he was fouled by Guillermo Myers with the Gators trailing 75-74. Myers got the rebound and sank a foul shot to seal the Longhorns' victory.

A driving layup by Williams with 11:11 left gave Texas a 57-55 lead — first of the second period — and the teams traded the lead four times after that. Texas trailed 68-67 with 4:33 left when Wright hit a 3-pointer and was fouled by Brown. Wright hit the free throw to complete the four-point play for a 71-68 Texas lead. Florida's Brian Hogan responded with a 3-pointer with 2:35 left to tie the game 71.

Chatman scored 19 points and Poole added 13 for the Gators.

Connecticut 90, Hartford 63
STORRS, Conn. (AP) — After only two games, Connecticut's trapline defense appears to be in mid-season form.

The No. 15 Huskies (2-0) forced 20 turnovers and got 21 points from center Rod Sellers Tuesday night on the way to a 90-63 victory over Hartford.

Afterward, Hartford Coach Jack Pellan could not shake his head and use words like "intensity" and "relentless" to describe the Connecticut defense.

"They outwork you the whole night," he said.

Alabama 96, Wake Forest 95
TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — A steal by Gary Williams with 12 seconds remaining in overtime sealed No. 6 Alabama's 96-95 victory over Wake Forest Tuesday night after the Crimson Tide squandered a 17-point lead during regulation.

Rutgers 68, Missouri 60
PISCATAWAY, N.J. (AP) — The Scarlet Knights scored 11 of his 20 points in the final 3 1/2 minutes Tuesday night and Rutgers opened its season with a 68-60 victory over No. 23 Missouri.

Hughes, who played just seven minutes in the first half after picking up two quick fouls, gave the Scarlet Knights the lead for good at 54-52 with two free throws with 3:28 to play. His 3-pointer 28 seconds later gave Rutgers a 57-53 lead and he made a 10-foot jumper to seal the victory in the final 1:01 as the Scarlet Knights held on for the victory.

Monmouth 52, Army 49
WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Alex Blackwell scored 27 points — including the deciding basket with 12 seconds remaining — as Monmouth defeated Army 52-49 on Tuesday night. Dave Aradafyoff made two free throws with 37 seconds remaining to give Army a 49-48 lead, but Blackwell put Monmouth back in front with a layup.

Washington 78, Montana 62
SEATTLE (AP) — Dion Brown scored 19 of his 30 points in the second half Tuesday night to lead the Washington Huskies to a 78-62 basketball victory over the Montana Grizzlies.

Declo blasts Oakley

OAKLEY — Declo needed to a 21-7 first quarter lead and cruised to a 69-40 win over Oakley in nonconference boys basketball Tuesday.

Down by 13 at halftime, Oakley battled back to a five-point deficit, Declo led the game to a 21-4 run for the rest of the third period.

"They jumped on us, got way out," said Oakley coach Neal Wyatt. "The kids came back, but we got a good run, but we just don't have the depth to stay with them. Declo has a good team," he impressed.

Senior guard Travis Asher paced Declo with 17 points. Sophomore Corbin Knowles added 14 and Kurt Steadman 11. Todd Hale led Oakley with 15 points.

Camas County 42

Hagerman's Pirates extended their man-to-man defense out to midcourt in defeating a 5-2 second quarter rally, en route to a 46-42 non-conference boys' basketball triumph over Camas County on Tuesday.

Chris Watley's game-high 24 led Hagerman, which got 13 from John Thompson in their season opener.

Declo 39, Kimberly 29

KIMBERLY — Held to eight first-half points, senior guard Tim Kufert erupted for 13 after intermission to pace Declo to a 39-28 Canyon Conference victory over upset-minded Kimberly.

The Lady Bulldogs utilized an early foul to claim a technical foul that led them to 22-18 at the half. They were still tied after three quarters before finding themselves on the short end of a 13-2 fourth quarter.

Their initial foul into conference play left Declo unbeaten at 6-0. Kimberly stands 1-3 in the Canyon

Gooding 43, Wendell 41

WENDELL — A battle to escape the Canyon Conference cellar was decided at the free throw line Tuesday as Gooding held off Wendell 43-41.

The Senators, who were paced by Mandy Patterson's 18 points, wound up with three more field goals than the Trojans, but benefitted from Wendell's 11-32 effort from the charity stripe.

Friday's was Gooding's first Canyon win, their second of the season. Wendell, 0-3 in league, is now 1-5 in all contexts.

Bliss 44, Dietrich 40

DIETRICH — Tammy Owens and Alicia Ferreira split 28 points Tuesday to help the Bliss Bears rally from a one-point halftime deficit to a 44-40 Northside Conference girls' basketball win over Dietrich.

The Blue Devils, who slipped to 1-3 on the Northside and 1-5 in all games led by each at each of the first two breaks, but fell behind to stay as Bliss put together a 12-10 third period.

Both teams return to the Northside wars on Thursday with Carey visiting Bliss and Dietrich, which got 23 points from Heather Hubert on Tuesday, going to Richfield.

Coleman hits career high as Nets make it 3 in a row

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Rookie Derrick Coleman registered career highs with 28 points and an NBA season-high 23 rebounds and, the New Jersey Nets rebounded their first three-game winning streak Monday by defeating the red-hot Philadelphia 76ers 98-92 Tuesday night.

The Nets shot 60 percent in the first half in building a 14-point lead and withstood a late charge in snapping the 76ers' four-game winning streak. Philadelphia shot 47.2 percent in the third period but Coleman hit two free throws, a baseline jumper and a layup in a personal 6-2 burst.

Mookie Blaylock scored 20 points, Sam Bowie 19 and Chris Morris 16 for New Jersey. Charles Barkley topped Philadelphia with 22.

Pistons 120, Hawks 97
ATLANTA (AP) — Bill Laimbeer scored 25 points and Mark Aguirre 24 as Detroit's two-time NBA champions extended their winning streak to eight games and upped their record to 11-1, best in the history of the franchise.

The Pistons broke from a 38-38 tie late in the second quarter and surged to a 105-72 lead midway through the final period in handing Atlanta its eighth loss in a row — longest for the Hawks since 1981. Spud Webb and Kevin Willis each scored 16 points for the Hawks and Dominique Wilkins had 12, sitting out the final 17 minutes.

Cavaliers 107, Knicks 102
NEW YORK (AP) — Craig Ehlo scored 5 of his 21 points during a decisive 9-0 fourth-quarter run as Cleveland continued the Knicks' home court advantage. The loss was the third straight at Madison Square Garden for the Knicks, who are 2-5 at home. Last season, they did not lose their fifth home game until March 6.

Brad Daugherty scored 27 points for Cleveland but fouled out with 6:40 remaining. Kiki Vandeweghe scored 29 points, his high in two years with New York, and Patrick Ewing added 27.

Suns 123, Trail Blazers 109

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Tom Chambers scored 28 points and Edie Johnson had 21 of his 25 in the second period as Phoenix built and blew an 18-point halftime lead before ending previously unbeaten Portland's 11-game winning streak. Jeff Hambrick added 17 points and Kevin Duckworth and Jerome Kersey had 21 each for Portland, which played the entire second half without leading scorer Clyde Drexler, who was ejected with 3:11 left in the first half after committing a flagrant foul and then receiving a technical 24 seconds later.

Bullets 115, Warriors 113

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Bernard King scored 39 points, including the go-ahead basket with 1:36 left, as Washington won after blowing a 10-point lead. After the Warriors rallied from a 73-56 third-quarter deficit, King hit a jumper in the game to give the Bullets a 108-107 lead. Darrell Walker followed with an 18-footer, then stole the ball from Chris Mullin and was fouled. He made one of two free throws to make it 111-107 with 43.7 seconds left.

King, the NBA's leading scorer, signed a new multi-year contract hours before the game and then celebrated by making 16 of 28 field goal attempts. Mitch Richmond led Golden State with 28 points and Tim Hardaway had 26.

Bucks 112, Pacers 98

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ricky Pierce scored a 9-0 fourth-quarter run with 7 of his 37 points as Milwaukee posted its fifth straight victory. Pierce scored 29 points in the second half, 18 in the final quarter. Jack Sikma added 20 for the Bucks, who are 7-0 at home and 10-3 overall.

Indiana, 0-6 on the road, got 20 points from Detlef Schrempf and 16 from Rick Smith. Leading scorer Reggie Miller was held to 14 points, only 3 in the second half. He had been averaging 25.

Rockets 107, Clippers 102

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Oluajun scored 14 of his 34 points in the final 10 minutes and also had 20 rebounds. The Rockets' Vernon Maxwell had 20 points, followed by Kenny Smith with 18. Gary Grant led the Clippers with 24 points while Winston Garland had 21 and Brenton Benjamin had 16 points and 13 rebounds. Los Angeles opened the fourth quarter by outscoring Houston 9-2 and tying the game 87-87 with 9:40 left. But Oluajun scored Houston's next 10 points as the Rockets opened a 97-94 lead.

Nuggets 124, Magic 113

DENVER (AP) — Orlando Woolridge scored 28 points, Michael Adams had 18 assists and Denver outscored Orlando 29-12 in the final nine minutes of its second victory in 13 games. Terry Catledge scored 30 points for the Magic, who led 93-85 after three periods but suffered their fifth consecutive loss, all on the road.

Spurs 124, SuperSonics 111

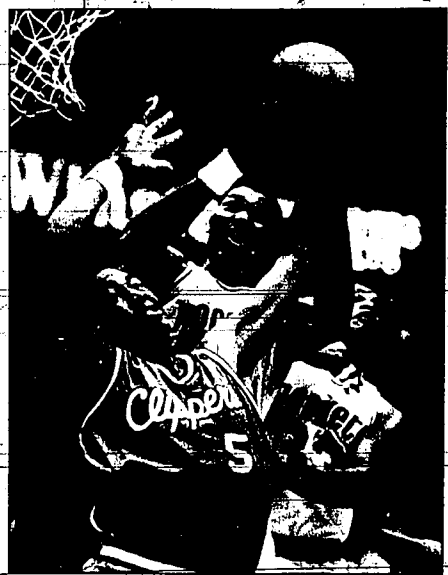

SEATTLE (AP) — San Antonio erased a 2-point deficit with a 3-2 run to open the fourth quarter. Rod Strickland's 3-point play capped the outburst and gave the Spurs a 108-99 lead with 6:52 left.

Sean Elliott led the Spurs with 28 points. David Robinson, the second-leading scorer in the NBA, had 25, and Terry Cummings 20. Quintin Dailey had 29 and Xavier McDaniel 20 for the Sonics.

Timberwolves 89, Kings 80

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Tyrone Corbin scored 17 points, Pooh Richardson 16 and Tony Campbell 13 as Minnesota handed Sacramento its 12th consecutive loss at home.

Wayman Tisdale paced Sacramento to 19 while Travis Mays added 18 and Lionel Simmons 16. The Kings are 1-11 and haven't won a home game since March 21 when they beat Minnesota 90-84.

Los Angeles Clippers Danny Manning (5) and Houston's Akeem Oluajun (34) battle for a rebound in the first quarter of play.

"There are areas where we need to finalize some language changes," he said to characterize them as minor. "I don't think there are major stumbling blocks there. In some of the key areas, both Mike and I felt we could find a way to resolve them that would be acceptable to both sides."

Wayman Tisdale said he would send a new proposal to the National Association convention in Los Angeles on Wednesday. "I don't think there are major stumbling blocks there," he said. "There will be changes in the new proposal that we hope will address the issues they have concerns about."

The two sides are still separated in four major areas — term of the agreement, number of games, money and the commissioner's role in the operation of the minor league teams. On term, the two sides are separated by one year. The majors want a reopener clause after two years, the minors want it after three years.

"We don't feel two years is adequate," Moore said. "It doesn't provide a clear picture of how teams are doing. We felt three years gives a better picture."

The majors have requested 136-game schedules at all minor-league levels. The minors want 144 at Triple A, 142 at Double A and 140 at Single A, arguing that the extra games would generate needed gate revenues.

"So we're between four and eight games apart on that," Moore said. The two sides had agreed on a $1.5 million payment by the minors to the majors covering 5 percent of gross ticket sales. The majors want that payment to begin in 1993 — increasing to $2 million and $2.5 million the next two years, according to Moore. The minors want to start the payment in 1992.

The fourth area of disagreement was the commissioner's role but Murray indicated that gap had been bridged.

"We never looked for complete control," he said. "The primary role for enforcement is with the National Association. They wanted no role for the commissioner."

Moore said the National Association was willing to accept the commissioner as the last stop in disputes, not the first. "We should have the chance first to obey the rules," he said. "If we don't, he has the right to step in and rule."

Moore sounded optimistic after the meeting. "I think the basis for agreement is there," he said. "We don't want a divorce and I don't think the owners do, either." Murray said much of the language needed for an agreement had been drafted in Tuesday's meeting.

Profits

There, there's a different story. You can't look at the overall industry profits and say, "Therefore, my team in Pittsburgh is in great shape" or "My team in Kansas City is in great shape."

O'Connor said that four clubs lost money in 1989 but the figure would become nine based on an apportioned share of the tentative $280 million collusion settlement. Baseball has hoped since the mid-1980s. According to figures released by the commissioner's office in the past, the 16 teams lost $66 million in 1983 on revenues of $521.6 million, then cut the losses to $41 million in 1984 and $7.1 million in 1985.

The teams made $11.5 million in 1986, the season after began shunning free agents. Two arbitrators found the conspiracy depressed player salaries and the profit soared to $103.3 million in 1987.

In the four years following the start of the conspiracy, the teams made a total operating profit of $450.9 million.

However, as part of the tentative settlement of the collusion cases, owners have agreed to give the Major League Baseball Players Association a payment that would amount to $280 million as of Jan. 2. Interest will be added if the payment is made after that date.

One source said that approximately 50 percent of the 1989 revenues came from tickets sales, parking and concessions. Approximately 20 percent came from national radio and television contracts, 20 percent from local broadcasting contracts and the remainder from postseason games, advertising and other baseball-related revenue.

Approximately 31.5 percent of the operating revenue was spent on player salaries, the source said.

Olson

The violated misconduct of certain Patriots' players that was degrading to Ms. Olson.

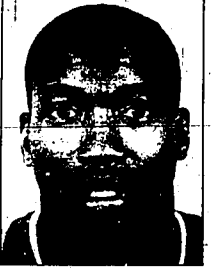

"Professor Heymann's report is thorough and balanced," Tagliabue said. "It treats the entire episode on a factual basis, not with speculation, rumor or rhetoric."

The report, in which 91 people were interviewed, some more than once, also said that Olson on three occasions presented the investigators with a clear and consistent account of sexual harassment. ... The Patriots pointed out to us that various accounts written by Olson or attributed to her by other reporters were exaggerated and not entirely consistent.

"On the other hand, it was obvious to us that players were extremely reluctant to speak frankly about their own activities and those of some of their teammates. Their accounts of the incident of Sept. 17 were also often inconsistent with the accounts provided by others present in the locker room that day."

"Still, direct conflicts remain between the account of Lisa Olson and the accounts of the Patriots ... some of those conflicts have proved unresolvable."

Olson, in a prepared statement, thanked Tagliabue and Heyman for the thorough and revealing report. "My satisfaction with the investigation and subsequent sanctions is surpassed only by my wish that the disgraceful incident had never occurred in the first place," Olson said. "It was not my choice to have this matter decided in a public forum, and it is unfortunate that Patriot management forced this to happen by not dealing with the guilty persons swiftly and decisively."

Zeke Mowatt

Fined $12,500 for incident stemmed from their slow reaction to the incident and for "too little regard for the proper enforcement of league policies."

Tagliabue also concluded, based on Heymann's report, that the team's management failed to comply with NFL policy on equal media access "in that the club did not adequately supervise its players, did not adequately investigate and resolve a serious incident of misconduct in the club's locker room and appeared to condone the misconduct of the Patriots' players."

In a letter to Kiam, Tagliabue said, "This entire episode was distasteful, unnecessary and damaging to the league and others."

He said it was his strong belief "that the Patriots' organization and its players have learned a hard lesson from this episode and that everyone involved will best be served if this controversy now comes to an end without further recrimination." Kiam had been quoted by two reporters as calling Olson "a classic bitch," a charge he denies and which two other witnesses dispute. Heymann's report makes no pronouncement on the subject.

son had been spending time in the locker room looking around, not writing. Sullivan observed her after that game and the report said, "It appeared to him that she was just waiting for someone and was involved in perfectly normal reporting actions."

But neither Sullivan nor James Oldham, Patriots director of media relations, who also had heard the players' complaints, "told the players ... that Olson's behavior was entirely appropriate."

"The Patriots management had made no effort to raise the problem with players to determine whether or not others had the same perception and, if so, to discuss whether the perception was correct and what should be done. Potentially incendiary rumors were left to explode in the locker room on Sept. 17."

That explosion came at Hurst's locker while Olson was interviewing him. Page after page of Heymann's report contained detailed dialogue of what was said in the locker room.

Olson said she could not identify the player whom she alleged stood at her side, naked, and "said in a loud voice, 'Here's what you want.' The report ... cannot conclusively identify the person."

But "moments later," the report said, "Olson saw Mowatt on the scene (by Hurst's locker, where she had been positioned). According to a number of players, he turned toward her and said, 'You're not writing, you're looking.'"

"He smiled and purposely displayed himself to her in a suggestive way. Laughter erupted and slurs from the players continued, especially, 'Is she looking?'"

THE ACES ON BRIDGE[®] BOBBY WOLFF

'Anything that is given can be taken away. We have to learn never to expect anything, and when it comes it's no more than a gift on loan.'

— John McGahern.

It's easy to count-up-to-10 winners in today's game. But that's only if dummy's club suit will run. How many tricks can you count if the clubs won't run?

Those who "put all their faith in the club suit get a big letdown. East holds off the club ace for two rounds, and by then it's too late for South to salvage something from the mess. The defenders force him to lead from his hand continually, and his maximum take is only eight tricks.

A frightened South hopes he can bring in the clubs, but he takes out a little insurance on the way. He wins his spade king and leads a low club to dummy's 10. However, instead of continuing clubs willy-nilly, he leads a diamond to his nine and West's queen. West continues in spades, and South leads a second club to dummy's queen. (It's cagey, but not cagey enough. West's high-low in clubs tells East where the jack is.) East ducks to isolate the clubs, but South falls back on this second line. He leads a diamond to his jack to win a finesse, and instead of eight tricks, he finds his way to nine.

Pie-making classes set for Jérôme Courthouse

JEROME — Harry Surplus will demonstrate the art of making pies with one night reserved for candy making. Demonstrations will include single and double crust pies, fruit, cream, custard and holiday specials such as nestlé and pecan. Classes will be held at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday evenings Dec. 3 through Dec. 11 (4 nights) at the Jérôme County Courthouse kitchen. The fee is $10 plus food cost reimbursement each night. Participants will sample the finished products. Pre-registration at the Jérôme Recreation District, 2444 S. Lincoln, is required.

Nabisco reportedly obtains patent for volcanic cookie

Nabisco is reported to have obtained a patent for a cookie that erupts like a volcano in the microwave, spewing a flavored filling out the top and down the sides. Is this the first of the new performing foods?

Restaurant chain donates used chopsticks to nursery

In Japan, vast amounts of wood are thrown away as disposable chopsticks. The Chopstick restaurant chain in Los Angeles is more eco-minded; it donates its used ones to Sheridan Garden Nursery, Inc., for recycling as garden stakes. (The alternative is for Chopstick to abandon the use of chopsticks altogether, but who'd want to eat at a restaurant called Fork?)

Company offers Complete Chocoholic-First Aid Kit

The Complete Chocoholic First Aid Kit is available from a company called the Chocolate Gallery: bite-sized chocolate bandages, "quick fix" chocolate tablets, chocolate "aspirins" and a chocolate "diet pill," which is rather large, we understand. Call (800) 426-4796 if this is your sort of emergency.

Gerber's baby food has an international flavor abroad

Gerber's baby food is strained prunes and carrots, right? No. It's strained prunes and carrots in the United States, but in Italy Gerber's bottles pasta and in France it sells strained artichoke. In the Far East you can buy Gerber's seaweed or rice with whole baby minnows.

Coke tops most familiar brand names in industrialized world

When consumers from the industrialized world were asked to rate brand names according to how familiar they were with them and how highly they thought of them, the biggest winner was Coke.

Coke was followed by Sony and Mercedes-Benz. The San Francisco-based Forbes magazine interviewed 10,000 people in the United States, Japan and Western Europe to see how familiar they were with about 6,000 brand names.

Also high on the ratings scale, according to Forbes magazine, were Kodak, Disney, Nestle, Toyota, McDonald's, IBM and Pepsi-Cola.

Wearable food jewelry ready just in time for the holidays

"If it's good enough to eat, it's good enough to wear."

Or so say the folks at the James Beard Collection, who have introduced a line of wearable food jewelry just in time for the holidays.

How about a sterling silver crab pin with African turquoise, a pickle-pin-cast from a real pickle slice, onyx and agate kitchen equipment, or a wine glass tack with an amethyst in place of your favorite red wine?

This jewelry for foodies is designed and manufactured by Jan Palmobio in Paterson, N.J., and sold by gem and jewelry expert David Brooks. Prices range from $9.95 for small lobster earrings to $129 for a stone crab pin with a henna-colored Jasper.

Ten percent of the revenues from sales of the jewelry will be given to the James Beard Foundation, a nonprofit educational organization established in 1985 by Julia Child shortly after Beard's death.

For a jewelry catalog and order form, write James Beard Collection, 14509 Falling Leaf Court, Darneston, Md. 20788.

Compiled from staff and wire reports

If the holiday season seems like a wild shopping spree, then it's time to reconsider your gift-giving strategy.

Though many people say they haven't time to make food gifts from scratch, it's really a matter of selecting the right recipes. Look for recipes that require a minimum of investment of time, but yield a maximum amount of flavor.

Maraschino cherries, raisins and almonds are perfect ingredients for time-saving recipes. Easy to use and readily available, each contributes vibrant flavor, pleasing texture and appealing color. They're also satisfying when eaten on their own. Combined in one of the following recipes, they're unbeatable.

Merry Cherry Coffee Bread is an example. Simply combine frozen bread dough, maraschino cherries, raisins and toasted, slivered almonds and form into a ring. Let rise, then bake for a fragrant loaf of bread.

Try baking Ginger-Raisin Bars as a fast and easy gift for office associates or favored neighbors. Simple to make with convenient raisins, each bar is a study in chewy texture and savory ginger flavor. These moist cookies, loaded with both sweet natural and tangy golden raisins, are certain to become holiday favorites.

Hungarian Almonds are a natural present to take to the host of your next holiday party. This recipe can be prepared in less than 30 minutes. Simply roast whole almonds with paprika, garlic salt and cayenne pepper. The toasty rich flavor of almonds with their spicy-hot coating complements cocktails.

Maraschino Chocolate Thumbprint Cookies combine two holiday favorites: cherries and chocolate. Unsweetened cocoa provides a dense chocolate flavor to the chewy cookie base, while a whole maraschino cherry lends a dash of color and fruity flavor.

Holiday Tea Bread and Almond Jubilee Sauce are two more recipes perfect for holiday gifts. Both showcase the delectable combination of maraschino cherries, raisins and almonds. Create a festive occasion — simply give a loaf of tea bread and a jar of Jubilee Sauce to a friend and then stay-over to savor the holiday spirit.

MERRY CHERRY COFFEE BREAD
2 loaves (1-pound each) frozen bread dough, thawed as package directs
1/3 to 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1 cup drained maraschino cherries, halved
1 cup raisins
1 cup blanched slivered almonds, toasted
1 cup powdered sugar
1 to 1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice (approximate)

additional cherries, raisins and toasted slivered almonds for garnish

On floured surface press bread dough leaves together, end to end. Pull and roll out to a rectangle about 24 inches long and 9 inches wide. Sprinkle evenly with brown sugar, cherries, raisins and almonds, leaving 1 inch along top edge uncovered. Starting at the long bottom edge, gently roll up as for a jelly roll. Pinch to seal edge completely. Gently lift and fit into greased, 10-inch tube pan. Pinch-ends together to seal completely. Cover and let rise in warm place until almost doubled, 45 minutes to 1 hour. Bake in middle of 350-degree oven 50 minutes to 1 hour until browned and hollow sounding when tapped. Turn out of pan and cool completely on rack, top side up.

In small bowl mix powdered sugar with enough lemon juice to make a glaze-of-thin spreading consistency; spread on top of cake, allowing glaze to drip down sides. Decorate with cherries, raisins and almonds. Slice to serve.

Homemade gifts bring special joy

Orange County Register

Homemade gifts from the kitchen seem to capture the spirit of the holidays. Somehow store-bought goodies just don't measure up.

Giving a simple jar of homemade jam or flavored vinegar brings pleasure to the giver and the recipient. A personalized gift of food has long been a gesture of good wishes and respect throughout the world, so why not make it a part of your own holiday tradition?

In the days ahead, free time is at a premium. Plan to prepare food gifts that don't require more time than you can comfortably afford. Many can be prepared now, thus avoiding the last-minute rush. Wrapped festively, they can be tucked safely away.

Some edible treasures can be prepared in as little as five minutes. Raspberry and White Chocolate Jam falls into this quick-to-fix category. No need to hunt for the canning kettle or cheesecloth: Simply combine a high-quality store-bought raspberry jam, a splash of raspberry liqueur and small pieces of white chocolate.

Place in an attractive jar, add a colorful bow and refrigerate. Spread on a hot English muffin or warm bread, the white chocolate melts and blends delectably with the raspberry flavor.

No doubt this treat will evoke visions of a nurturing figure past.

Cook's profile

Moss an expert at cutting the fat

By Joan Beem
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Exercise and a low-fat diet have been part of Carolyn Moss' lifestyle for many years. Her exercise program began about 20 years ago, and she's been cooking light for the last five.

"I'm just trying to use good sense," she says. "Cutting the fat has not meant doing without meat; however, she buys the leaner cuts and to reduce the fat in chicken, she removes the skin."

Wherever she can, Moss trims the fat out of her recipes and uses skim milk in her cooking. In place of butter on cooked vegetables, she uses a powdered substitute, called Molly McButter. The substitute also comes in sour cream and cheese flavors, which, along with lowfat cottage cheese, is nice on baked potatoes.

"It has the flavor, but no fat," she says. "But I'll admit butter tastes a lot better."

Moss uses no substitutes on bread or rolls, but eats them plain. She rarely makes cookies and cakes anymore, and satisfies her sweet tooth with frozen yogurt, fruit, Tiger's Milk bars (protein bars) and Fibars (high fiber bars).

A non-stick spray eliminates the need for shortening or oil in the frying pan. Once or twice a year she makes French fries, and for this she uses Canola oil.

Moss says the following recipe has only 150 calories per cup.

HOT AND SOUR SOUP

Serves 4 - 6
3 cans (14 ounces) chicken broth
1/2 cup mushrooms, thinly sliced
1/2 pound lean boneless pork (chicken may be used instead)

1/2 cup canned bamboo shoots
5 tablespoons vinegar
3 tablespoons soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 pound tofu
1/2 cup cold water
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 egg, beaten
2 teaspoons sesame oil
1/4 cup sliced green onions

In a 3-quart saucepan bring chicken broth to a boil. Add the mushrooms, pork, bamboo shoots, vinegar, soy sauce, red pepper flakes and pepper. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Add tofu. Bring to boil. In cold water dissolve the cornstarch. Stir in 1/2 cup hot soup. Add cornstarch mixture to soup and cook, stirring, 2 minutes. Slowly add beaten egg to hot soup. Stir gently once or twice. Sprinkle with sesame oil and green onions.

Serve with a green-palmed and sourdough bread. Moss says the recipe which originated in Thailand is "very oriental and very different."

CHICKEN A LA VIRGINIA

Serves 6
3 whole chicken breasts, split
1/2 cup rose wine
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup salad oil (Moss uses Canola)
2 tablespoons water

Letters of thanks

Seniors tourney a success thanks to Magic Bowl

I wish to thank the owners of Miller's Magic Bowl for their help in making the Idaho Seniors Bowling Tournament a success.

Without their help and donations of a ball, bag and shoes, as well as generous help, it would not have been the success it was.

I wish to thank Dot Van Hook for her help as hostess and thanks to all for the many nice things she donated for traveling prizes. I want to thank Mary Larkin for the time she gave to help hostess; also, Briscilla Fife, who gave up her weekends to help the seniors as a hostess and helper in general.

The people of the Magic Bowl were extra nice to the seniors, and we are looking forward to the tournament next year.

Congratulations to Dot Van Hook, Second Place, A Division, and to Bill Freeman, First Place, D Division. These were our only Twin Falls winners.

To Red's Trading Post and the Twin Falls Optimist Club:

I would like to thank everyone who participated in the Optimist Club Fund Raiser held Nov. 11 by shooting or purchasing tickets for this shotgun. I was fortunate enough to win the shotgun.

Thanks, Jerry and the gang at Red's Trading Post.

My dad has been a member of the Twin Falls Optimist Club for years and I'm aware of their support of the youth of our community. Without the support of this fund raiser, they would not be nearly as effective. Go Optimists!

Love made official gives romance life after death

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you advised a loving couple who had been living together for several years in a committed relationship to get married, since a baby was on the way (They didn't think "a piece of paper" was important.)

Our late daughter also insisted that living together was just as good as marriage and she didn't need a piece of paper. She had her "significant other" (I'll call him Paul) had a beautiful 5-year-old daughter. But when Paul died suddenly of a heart attack just 10 days before the birth of their son, how she wished that she had had that piece of paper! She was able to secure Social Security payments for her two children, but none for herself. When Paul's ashes were interred, she told us that when she died, she wanted her ashes to be buried next to Paul's. When we tried to respect her wishes, we were advised by the cemetery officials that "only married couples were accorded that privilege."

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

Abby, please print this for others who regard marriage as "just a piece of paper."

OLD-FASHIONED IN OREGON
DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: The "It's just a piece of paper" routine has been repeated.

A piece of paper is "just a piece of paper." So is a birth certificate, a driver's license, a last will and testament, a promissory note, an honorable discharge, a winning lottery ticket, etc. I could go on and on, but I think I've made my point.

Sometimes a piece of paper is essential for peace of mind.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Had Enough in Wisconsin" whose husband of 40 years introduced her with "Meet my wife - but please don't laugh."

My husband and I have also been married for 40 years, and when we were first married, he would tell everyone we met that he grew a mustache - but would look older than his wife! Everyone laughed (We are the same age.) Although I laughed along with the others, I was really hurt. One evening at a party, my husband made that remark, and a woman came over to me and said, "Why do you allow your husband to put you down that way?"

I then realized just by remaining silent I was giving him permission to insult me, so the next time he announced that he had grown a mustache (to look older than his wife, I said, "That's not why he grew a mustache, he grew it to break up the monotony of his face."

Well, I got a bigger laugh than he got, and I never heard that mistake crack again.

— ALSO HAD ENOUGH
DEAR ALSO: I don't recommend fighting fire with fire - it only makes for a bigger fire that could get out of control.

Married couples should speak frankly to each other. What's wrong with saying: "When you put me down, you hurt me, and you diminish yourself as well. Please do both of us a favor and leave the Henry Youngman routine."

Most teenagers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada). Dear Abby Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Wood carver died poor, but left wealth of figures

By Anita Gold
Chicago Tribune

Q. Can you give me any information on a wood carver named Wilhelm Schimmel? Were his carvings ever reproduced, and if so, how could one obtain an authentic Schimmel from a reproduction or copy? Also, did Schimmel carve any other birds?

A. Wilhelm Schimmel (whose carvings are represented in many prominent museums and private collections) was born in Germany in 1817 and came to America at the end of the Civil War. He settled in Pennsylvania, where he worked as a wood carver, producing "funny and folksy" figures of people, animals and birds, including eagles, parrots and woodpeckers. The local "saloon" Schimmel frequented had shelves filled with his carved creations, taken in trade.

When Schimmel died in August of 1890, the Carlisle (Pa.) Evening Sentinel ran this obituary: "Old Schimmel, the German who for many years transported through this and adjoining counties making his headquarters in jails and almshouses, died at the almshouse on Sunday. His only occupation was carving heads of animals out of soft pine wood. These he would sell for a few pennies each. He was generally a man of very sturdy disposition."

Perhaps Mr. Schimmel had been paid what his figures are selling for today, he would have been a very wealthy man with a sunny disposition. The best way to distinguish authentic Schimmel carvings is to study his creations on display in museums, including the Art Institute of Chicago, which has a charming painted eagle with outspread wings in its American Folk Art Gallery. Exact reproductions of Schimmel style eagles are carved by Jason Smith and are available in various sizes ranging from a 5-inch example for $55 to a 16-inch high eagle with a 24-inch wing span for $850 from the Workshops of David T. Smith, 3600 Shawhan Rd., Morrow, Ohio 45152. The copies are signed and dated underneath. Some of Schimmel's birds are pictured and described in "The Pennsylvania German Collection," available from the Workshops of David T. Smith for $25 postpaid.

Q. Where can I find information on brass rubbings and the early people they portray, such as Indians in deerskin robes and their ladies fair?

A. A very informative and fascinating 40-page book that pictures and describes such rubbings in great detail is "The Monumental Brasses of England - The Horowitz Collection," by Mark R. Horowitz, available for $4 postpaid from Portcullis Productions, Box 1472, Homewood, Ill. 60430.

Early people and their lifestyles in relation to modern times is among the 500 topics covered in "Stonehenge to Star Wars - Discovering the Present by Exploring the Past," by Mark R. Horowitz, available for $19.95 in bookstores, or phone the publisher, Dow Jones-Irwin at 800-534-3966 to order. The book provides a historic link between us and those who lived before us.

Q. I recently started to collect old jigsaw puzzles. Where can I find information on the various types and their values?

A. A terrific book that pictures, prices, describes and lists the manufacturers of Chicago's best-selling jigsaw puzzles along with their histories, types, dates and sources is "Jigsaw Puzzles - An Illustrated History and Price

Guide," by Anne D. Williams, available for $27.45 postpaid from Wallace-Homestead Book Co., One Chilton Way, Radnor, Pa. 19089-0230 (phone 800-345-1214). An unusual 3-D wooden jigsaw puzzle, hand-crafted by Monkeypuzzle Inc. of England, picturing George Seaton painting "Smoky" at Thompson's Island of La Grande Jatte" is available in a limited edition of 500 for $250 each plus $9.50 shipping, or $32 plus $4.50 postage for a smaller unlimited version, from the Art Institute of Chicago's Museum Store, Michigan Avenue at Adams St., Chicago, Ill. 60603, or send $1 for a 32-page catalog of collectible and gift items (phone 312-443-0849 or 800-621-9337).

Q. Is there a collectors club for old perfume bottles? Where can I find old-fashioned scents to bring back the past?

A. Write to the Perfume & Scent Bottle Collectors, c/o Joyce Geeser, Box 6965, Rockford, Ill. 61125, enclosing $10 for annual dues and quarterly newsletter.

Q. Who is the celebrity who collects antique English silver made by Paul Storr mentioned in one of your columns several ago? Also, where can Storr silver-covered servers be found?

A. Michael Landon told me he collects Paul Storr silver and that he has one of the biggest and best collections. To obtain Storr and other silver pieces, write to the Silver Vault, Box 422, Barrington, Ill. 60010 (phone 708-381-3101).

Readers can write to Anita Gold, Chicago Tribune, 435 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611. Selected questions will appear in her column. The volume of mail makes individual replies impossible.

Hundreds of walkers anticipated for Jingle Bell Walk for Arthritis

TWIN FALLS - With bells on their shoes, hundreds of walkers are expected to take part in the Foundation's Jingle Bell Walk for Arthritis.

The event is set for Dec. 15 at the Blue Lakes Mall. Registration will start at 7 a.m. and the walk will begin at 8 a.m. with an awards ceremony slated for 10 a.m.

Arthritis registration has already begun, and entry forms are available at the Blue Lakes Mall. Cost to enter is $10. For that fee, walkers will receive jingle bell shoelaces, entertainment and refreshments. Prizes will also be given for most laps walked, best holiday costume and pledges raised.

Mary Ann Reuter, Idaho coordinator for the three Jingle Bell walks throughout the state, says volunteers are needed to walk and to help with the event. For more information, call her at 1-800-444-7102.

The Arthritis Foundation is a source of help for an estimated 37 million Americans who have arthritis. The foundation supports research to find the causes for and prevention of arthritis diseases. It also seeks to improve the quality of life for those affected by arthritis.

Company produces videos to help families care for an older America

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) - A company has produced four videos to help aging Americans and those who care for them sort through the bewildering choices about insurance and health care.

Jeanette Vaughan studied health care in college, but couldn't think of a way to market her series of videos. "A character Arnold Becker peddle a video of himself giving advice on divorce, Vaughan plunged in.

She made the videos "All About Aging" and created AgeView Inc., which distributes them. The series sells for $195 and is marketed to hospitals, nursing homes and health care agencies. While the public can buy the series, Vaughan hopes agencies will buy it to show consumers for free.

By 2030, 21 percent of Americans will be over 65, Vaughan said. Most of the country hasn't considered the idea of an older America.

Food Gifts

tiently standing over a steaming jam pot. You'll earn lots of points for such an easy project. Homemade jams and jellies have long been symbolic of love and honey goodness.

Should you have more time to devote to the gift-making process, you might want to make Kiwi Jam. Jam seeds. The color combination of the green fruit contrasted with the black seeds creates a jewel-like substance that's a gift to the eyes as well as the palate.

You can either make a jam using only kiwi fruit, or combine it with raspberries for added flavor. Both recipes make unique and tangy presents.

Flavored vinegars are fast and easy to prepare. They can be as effortless as combining vinegar and a few spices or herbs in a beautiful bottle or jar. Using a colorful jar or bottle, there's a recipe using the flavored vinegar or a list of various serving ideas that use it.

So much for really cooking, time-efficient and practical. Now let's talk glamour and whimsy.

Meringue and chocolate cookies look remarkably like fresh mushrooms. Piled high in a basket, meringue mushrooms can easily pass for the real thing. No need to take a course at the Cordon Bleu to prepare these gems; simply allow about 30 minutes for each dozen. The recipe is a little less, if you're adept with a pastry bag, not including about one hour of baking time.

In fact, they can be baked several weeks in advance, stored loosely in a basket or bowl and assembled with melted chocolate just before gift-giving.

Having once helped a kindergarten class of 45 5-year-olds prepare these meringue morsels as a holiday gift to their parents, I am confident that success is within practically everyone's grasp.

Many of those same kids, now in their teens, still beg for meringue mushrooms upon crossing my threshold during the month-of-December. Holiday food traditions die hard.

The following recipes are arranged according to the amount of preparation time required to prepare, starting with the briefest. Decorating tips accompany each.

A circle of holiday-themed fabric can be tied around the lid of the jar with ribbon, yarn or colored string. Cut a circle of fabric, 4 inches larger in diameter than the diameter of the jar lid.

Include a tag that gives information on storage (refrigeration required) and uses.

RASPBERRY AND WHITE CHOCOLATE JAM

3 tablespoons black-raspberry liqueur, such as Creme de Cassis
1/2 cup finely chopped white chocolate

Procedure: In a medium bowl, combine all ingredients; stir until well blended. Place in 2 half-pint jars; refrigerate up to two months.

Use: Use on hot bread, crepes or English muffins. Can also be used on ice cream and plain yogurt.

Yield: Makes about 2 cups.

Cinnamon sticks and dried red chilies can be tied to the neck of the bottle containing this fragrant Aromatic Vinegar. Instructions for use can be written on attractive recipe cards bordered in holiday colors or embellished with holiday motifs.

AROMATIC VINEGAR

12 whole coriander seeds
6 whole cloves
6 whole allspice
1 cinnamon stick, approximately 3-inches long
1 small dried red chili
1 (1-inch) slice peeled fresh ginger
1 quart vinegar, either red-wine or cider

Procedure: Place all ingredients in a quart jar or bottle; seal. Store in dark, cool location for at least three weeks.

Yield: Makes 1 quart.

DRY HERB MARINADE

1/2 cup garlic powder
1/2 cup kosher salt, see cook's notes
1/2 cup herbs de Provence, see cook's notes
1 tablespoon paprika
1 tablespoon coarsely ground black pepper
2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes

Optional: 1/2 cup sugar

Cook's notes: Kosher salt is an additive-free coarse-grained salt. It is available at most supermarkets either in the kosher section or in the salt section.

Herbes de Provence is a combination of several dried herbs from the Provençal region of France. Salt is generally included, marjoram, oregano, thyme, summer savory and lavender.

Often available at stores that specialize in imported foods or in supermarkets with large "gourmet" sections, this mixture is generally packaged in small glass jars or small unglazed ceramic pots.

Procedure: Combine all ingredients in a blender or food processor fitted with the metal blade; process until finely ground, about 2 minutes. Pour into container and seal well; store up to one year.

Use: Use to flavor meat and poultry. Brush meat with vegetable or olive oil and rub on a generous amount of Dry Herb Marinade; grill, broil or sauté until desired degree of doneness is reached.

Yield: Makes about 1 1/2 cups.

Quick Tomato-Basil Pasta Sauce can be used to flavor soups and salad dressings, as well as cooked pasta. Spread it on French bread and grill or broil until lightly browned and crisp.

Include storage information in gift wrap. Prepare this sauce just before gift-giving because it keeps for only two weeks. Place in small jars (pint) so that recipients will use it up quickly.

QUICK TOMATO-BASIL PASTA SAUCE

1 cup fresh basil leaves
4 sun-dried tomatoes, packed in oil, drained, see cook's notes
1/2 cup olive oil
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt

Optional: 1 teaspoon drained capers

Cook's notes: Sun-dried tomatoes that come packaged in cellophane bags need to be hydrated. Submerge in boiling water for 1 to 2 minutes and drain. Store in jar, covered with either olive oil or vegetable oil; refrigerate.

Procedure: Peel ripe tomatoes (submerge in simmering water for 20 to 30 seconds; drain and slip off skins). Cut tomatoes in half horizontally and gently squeeze out seeds. Dice.

Place tomatoes in food processor fitted with the metal blade. Add basil and sun-dried tomatoes (see cook's notes); process until pureed, 2 to 3 minutes. Add oils and salt; process until well blended. Stir in capers, if desired.

Pour into half-pint jars and refrigerate up to two weeks. Whisk before using.

Use: Use to flavor

RASPBERRY LIQUEUR

2 small boxes fresh raspberries
2 cups sugar
5 cups vodka

Procedure: Place raspberries in a glass jar; add sugar and vodka. Do not shake. Allow to stand in a dark, cool location for 30 days (sugar should dissolve).

Yield: Makes 6 cups.

This dry herb mixture makes a marvelous dry marinade to flavor meat and poultry. Store in well-sealed jar or plastic container. Small glass apothecary jars or lead-free glazed pots make pretty presentations.

TORTELLINI SOUP

Serves 6-8

4 cans beef bouillon*
7 cups water
1 red onion, chopped fine
1 green pepper, chopped
1 zucchini, sliced
1/2 head cabbage, shredded
1 tomato, chopped (this time of year, a canned tomato might be preferable)
4 Italian sausages - hot or mild, sliced, uncooked*
2 packages fresh cheese tortellini
2 teaspoons dried basil (or to taste)

Stimmer for about 30-40 minutes. Serve with parmesan cheese and French bread.

GINGER-RAISIN BARS

1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup light molasses
1/2 cup flour
1 teaspoon each ground ginger and allspice

1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup each natural and golden raisins
1/4 cup chopped candied ginger*

In mixer bowl, cream butter and brown sugar until fluffy. Beat in egg one at a time, beating well after each addition. Reserve 1/4 cup of the flour. In another bowl, mix remaining flour, baking powder and salt to blend thoroughly. Mix dry ingredients into egg mixture alternately with milk. Toss cherries, raisins and almonds with reserved 1/4 cup flour to coat. Gently stir fruit-nut mixture into batter. Spoon batter into greased and floured 9- x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan.* Bake in 350-degree oven about 1 1/2 hours until pick inserted into center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Turn out onto rack to cool completely. Wrap in aluminum foil or plastic wrap.

Makes 1 loaf.

*Three 5/8- x 3- x 2 1/2-inch loaf pans may be substituted. Bake in 350-degree oven 40 to 50 minutes until pick inserted into centers comes out clean.

HUNGARIAN ALMONDS

1 egg white
1 tablespoon paprika
2 teaspoons garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 cups whole natural almonds

In large bowl, beat egg white until frothy. Mix in paprika, garlic salt and cayenne pepper to blend thoroughly. Add almonds; toss to coat evenly. Spread in single layer on lightly oiled

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

Serves 6

Melt:
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1 cup chopped green onions
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 clove garlic, minced

Cook gently until tender. Stir in:
1/2 cup flour, until it is well moistened
Add:
2/3 cup milk

MARASCHINO CHOCOLATE THUMBPRINT COOKIES

48 maraschino cherries, about 2 jars (106-ounces each)
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1/2 teaspoon each salt, baking powder and baking soda
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup (6-ounces) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1/4 cup milk

Drain cherries, reserving 2 teaspoons syrup. In bowl combine flour, cocoa, salt, baking powder and soda; mix well. In mixer bowl cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and vanilla; mix well. Add dry ingredients; mix well. Heat chocolate and milk in small saucepan over low heat until chocolate melts. Stir in reserved 2 teaspoons cherry syrup. Mix until smooth. Shape dough into 48, 1-inch balls. Place on ungreased baking sheets. Push in centers with thumb, spoon about 1 teaspoon chocolate mixture into each thumbprint. Top each with cherry. Bake in 350-degree oven 10 to 12 minutes or until cookies are firm. Remove to racks to cool completely. Store in airtight container. Makes 4 dozen.

ALMOND JUBILEE SAUCE

1 cup raisins
1/2 cup dark rum
2 cups sugar
2/3 cup water
1/4 cup light corn syrup
1/2 cup whipping cream
1/2 cup blanching almonds, toasted
1/4 cup maraschino cherries
1 tablespoon grated orange peel

In small bowl steep raisins in rum until plump, about 1/2 hour. In large saucepan mix together sugar, water and corn syrup; stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Increase heat; cook without stirring until mixture is golden brown, being careful not to burn. Remove from heat. In another saucepan heat raisins and rum with cream and almonds. Slowly stir heated cream mixture into caramelized sugar, being careful as mixture may spatter. Remove from heat. Mix thoroughly. Stir in cherries and orange peel. Cool and pour into sterilized jars. Store in refrigerator.

Makes 3 to 3 1/2 cups.

To Toast Almonds: Spread almonds in single layer on baking sheet. Bake in 350-degree oven 9 to 11 minutes, stirring occasionally, until golden brown. Cool.

To Toast Almonds: Spread almonds in single layer on baking sheet. Bake in 350-degree oven 9 to 11 minutes, stirring occasionally, until golden brown. Cool.

TORTELLINI SOUP

Serves 6-8

4 cans beef bouillon*
7 cups water
1 red onion, chopped fine
1 green pepper, chopped
1 zucchini, sliced
1/2 head cabbage, shredded
1 tomato, chopped (this time of year, a canned tomato might be preferable)
4 Italian sausages - hot or mild, sliced, uncooked*
2 packages fresh cheese tortellini
2 teaspoons dried basil (or to taste)

Stimmer for about 30-40 minutes. Serve with parmesan cheese and French bread.

GINGER-RAISIN BARS

1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup light molasses
1/2 cup flour
1 teaspoon each ground ginger and allspice

1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup each natural and golden raisins
1/4 cup chopped candied ginger*

In mixer bowl, cream butter and brown sugar until fluffy. Beat in egg one at a time, beating well after each addition. Reserve 1/4 cup of the flour. In another bowl, mix remaining flour, baking powder and salt to blend thoroughly. Mix dry ingredients into egg mixture alternately with milk. Toss cherries, raisins and almonds with reserved 1/4 cup flour to coat. Gently stir fruit-nut mixture into batter. Spoon batter into greased and floured 9- x 5 x 3-inch loaf pan.* Bake in 350-degree oven about 1 1/2 hours until pick inserted into center comes out clean. Cool in pan 10 minutes. Turn out onto rack to cool completely. Wrap in aluminum foil or plastic wrap.

Makes 1 loaf.

*Three 5/8- x 3- x 2 1/2-inch loaf pans may be substituted. Bake in 350-degree oven 40 to 50 minutes until pick inserted into centers comes out clean.

HUNGARIAN ALMONDS

1 egg white
1 tablespoon paprika
2 teaspoons garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 cups whole natural almonds

In large bowl, beat egg white until frothy. Mix in paprika, garlic salt and cayenne pepper to blend thoroughly. Add almonds; toss to coat evenly. Spread in single layer on lightly oiled

GREEN BEAN CASSEROLE

Serves 6

Melt:
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1 cup chopped green onions
1/4 cup chopped parsley
1 clove garlic, minced

Cook gently until tender. Stir in:
1/2 cup flour, until it is well moistened
Add:
2/3 cup milk

MARASCHINO CHOCOLATE THUMBPRINT COOKIES

48 maraschino cherries, about 2 jars (106-ounces each)
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1/2 teaspoon each salt, baking powder and baking soda
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup (6-ounces) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1/4 cup milk

Drain cherries, reserving 2 teaspoons syrup. In bowl combine flour, cocoa, salt, baking powder and soda; mix well. In mixer bowl cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add egg and vanilla; mix well. Add dry ingredients; mix well. Heat chocolate and milk in small saucepan over low heat until chocolate melts. Stir in reserved 2 teaspoons cherry syrup. Mix until smooth. Shape dough into 48, 1-inch balls. Place on ungreased baking sheets. Push in centers with thumb, spoon about 1 teaspoon chocolate mixture into each thumbprint. Top each with cherry. Bake in 350-degree oven 10 to 12 minutes or until cookies are firm. Remove to racks to cool completely. Store in airtight container. Makes 4 dozen.

ALMOND JUBILEE SAUCE

1 cup raisins
1/2 cup dark rum
2 cups sugar
2/3 cup water
1/4 cup light corn syrup
1/2 cup whipping cream
1/2 cup blanching almonds, toasted
1/4 cup maraschino cherries
1 tablespoon grated orange peel

In small bowl steep raisins in rum until plump, about 1/2 hour. In large saucepan mix together sugar, water and corn syrup; stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Increase heat; cook without stirring until mixture is golden brown, being careful not to burn. Remove from heat. In another saucepan heat raisins and rum with cream and almonds. Slowly stir heated cream mixture into caramelized sugar, being careful as mixture may spatter. Remove from heat. Mix thoroughly. Stir in cherries and orange peel. Cool and pour into sterilized jars. Store in refrigerator.

Makes 3 to 3 1/2 cups.

To Toast Almonds: Spread almonds in single layer on baking sheet. Bake in 350-degree oven 9 to 11 minutes, stirring occasionally, until golden brown. Cool.

Tips to keep your Christmas tree from drying out

There is nothing like the smell and look of a real Christmas tree to put me in the mood for Christmas. In fact, it is hard for me to do any Christmas shopping until the tree is up.

Alan Wilson Gardening

Unfortunately, along with the wonderful smell of natural trees comes a tendency to drop needles. Sometimes trees become so dry that they actually become a fire hazard. However, there are several ways to reduce drying of natural cut Christmas trees.

When selecting a tree, get the freshest one you can find. It is too bad that there are not more nurseries and Christmas tree farms where you can cut your own tree. Locally, I know of only two nurseries where you can cut your own tree.

You can obtain a permit to cut a tree in some of the national forests. Forest trees are not as full as plantation-grown trees because they have not been sheared. Some years it takes a snowmobile to harvest a tree in the forest. With more limited snow, this may be a good year to harvest a fresh tree from the forest.

Cut trees can become dry even before you buy them if they have not been stored properly. Warm temperatures, very cold temperatures and wind can cause drying. The best storage is a cool area similar to the temperature of a refrigerator.

When buying a tree, check the needles to see if they are still flexible. Bounce the tree on the ground to see if a lot of loose needles fall off.

Most trees will have some brown, dry needles in the center, but make sure a lot of green ones don't fall off.

Trees should be recut just before placing them in a holder which contains a water reservoir. If freshly cut trees can absorb a lot of water which keeps the needles soft and moist. Check the container every day and refill. If it dries out, the trunk will quit absorbing water.

Trees can be dipped or sprayed with an "anti-drying" compound such as Will-Prut. This rubberlike coating on the needles keeps them from drying out so fast. Some nurseries will treat the tree for you or sell you a spray can so you can apply it yourself. Flocking will also reduce drying and help needles remain on the tree longer.

Heat ducts, TV sets and lights all cause Christmas trees to dry out. A location away from heat ducts and TV set is preferable. Turn lights off during the daytime and whenever there is no one around to enjoy them. Do not leave the tree on while you are gone from home.

Books for gardeners on your Christmas list

By Robert Smees Los Angeles Times

To give a book as a gift to a gardener, it is best to first find out what kind of gardener he or she is. They are not all alike.

If you are a gardener, you already know this and will instantly recognize the various types, and I hope you will forgive the caricatures that follow.

There are, of course, casual gardeners with no particular penchant for anything and no distinguishing marker. They grow marigolds, nasturtiums and don't mind at all the clash of colors and cultures.

Mostly they come out in the spring and then aren't seen again at the nursery until the following year. Their yearly purchase is a sack of fertilizer for the lawn, that flat of marigolds, plus some bug spray for the roses. They water, everything with thumb clamped over the end of the hose.

Gardeners who like nothing better than to get their hands dirty enjoy "Masters of the Victory Garden" by Jim Wilson (Little, Brown, $19.95, paper) because it is about really good gardeners and how they grow plants.

A growing group of gardeners sees the yard as part of the overall environment. They are interested in native plants and wildflowers, and would be thrilled to receive "Butterfly Gardening" by the Xerces Society (Sierra Club Books, $18.95). This is about butterflies and the plants they use for food, and how to set up a garden that is as attractive to butterflies as Westwood is to teen-agers.

Collectors are quite another group of gardeners and more common than you might think. You probably know one or two of them. To ferret them out, casually ask these simple questions when the opportunity arises: What is your favorite plant? What is your second-favorite plant? If the answer both times is African violets, or cactus, or bromeliads, or orchids, you have uncovered a collector.

As a rule, they like one group of plants and have absolutely no interest in any other. They are very difficult to buy books for because they probably already own every one of interest. If you happen to know an orchid collector, however, you might beat him to the bookstore for the brand-new edition of "Home Orchid Growing" by Rebecca Tyson Northern (Premier, Hall Press, $24), one of the more understandable of orchid books. Here is everything about orchids, from Acaulis to Zygostates.

Everybody loves roses, so books on roses have an almost universal appeal. Although there are certainly rose zealots who grow nothing else, they were clearly not the intended audience for "The Glory of Roses," with photographs by Christopher Baker (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, $50). Author Allen Lacy provides an interesting and amusing text and takes a stab at identifying the various roses in the gorgeous photographs by Baker. But be forewarned: There, often so unnamed, which on occasion is quite frustrating if you are looking at a rose you desperately want for your own garden. Never mind; in this case the pictures alone may be worth the price.

"The Pacific Horticulture Book of Western Gardening," edited by George Waters and Nora Harlow (David R. Godine, $30), is perhaps the most exciting book of the season, even though all of the material is from past issues of the magazine Pacific Horticulture. This is cutting-edge material, though, since this epicurean magazine is generally far in advance of current gardening trends.

Every avid West Coast gardener, not just transplants, should have this book; it will please anyone to the level of sophisticated horticulturist.

The most surprising book of the season is called "The Mediterranean Gardener" by Hugo Laymer (Barrows's, $35). This is the first book I have seen that tells how people garden around the Mediterranean sea, and what they grow.

Insulation may help prevent ice dams in gutters

Q. Dams of ice and snow form at the shaded roof-gutter area in the rear of our house. We have been advised to use heat tapes to melt the ice, but need more information. Are there any ideas to solve the problem? — R. Frye

A. The dams should be prevented if possible, because in severe cases they can force water back up the roof and under shingles, causing roof leaks and damage to ceilings and walls. A heating cable, which is installed in zigzag fashion along the outer edge or eave of the roof near the gutter and extends into the gutter and downspout, can help melt the ice and snow so it drains away through the gutter.

Heating cables are generally controlled by thermostat or inside switch, so they operate only in freezing weather or when it is actually snowing. The cables are sold at some home centers and hardware stores. Some experts don't consider cables an ideal solution, however, since they sometimes melt only part of the ice or snow and can cause secondary ice dams further up the roof.

A roof rake might be a more practical solution in this case, especially since the damming is only in a relatively small area. A roof rake is simply a lightweight metal rake with a long handle that can be used to pull snow off the edge of a roof before it has a chance to begin the freeze-thaw cycles that lead to ice dams. Obviously, the rake should be used only while you are standing on the ground. A rake with 16-foot reach is available for about $40 from Solution Box, 6878, Portland, Ore. 97228. An extension handle which adds an additional five feet is also available. Write for a free catalogue.

Severe ice-dam problems are often caused by poor attic insulation and venting or damaged or improperly installed insulation. Because of the insulation flaws, heat from the house penetrates the attic and warms the roof, causing snow to melt and then refreeze when it reaches the cold eaves.

The best bet is to carefully check the attic insulation and improve it where needed. Remove any wet or damaged insulation. Make sure attic vents are open and not blocked by insulation or other materials. A properly insulated and ventilated attic will keep heat from escaping from the living areas of the house and keep the roof cold so snow is removed by natural melting, which seldom causes dams.

Q. I am planning to insulate several walls of my home by fastening wood studs to the inside and filling the spaces with insulation. This is not practical for several other walls. Will it help to insulate only some of the walls? — B. Creighton

A: It will help if you insulate several walls, thereby reducing the area subject to high heat loss. However, keep in mind that the biggest sources of heat loss in walls are often windows and doors, which should be carefully checked for points where heat can escape and cold air can infiltrate. Use weatherstripping and caulking compound to seal any gaps. Storm windows can also help reduce heat loss and drafts through windows, and even inexpensive plastic storm windows installed on the inside are very effective.

Dining elegantly doesn't have to mean expensive furnishings

By Betty Lammond Knight-Ridder News Service

Want to present a pretty tabletop this holiday season? Dining well doesn't necessarily mean expensive furnishings. Interesting and pretty tables can be created with basic tableware and some imagination.

Sharon Dingoch, author of the newly revised Table Setting Guide, recommends using table pieces in other ways than their obvious purpose. For example, substitute wine glasses when you lack sherrytable glasses. Use less costly napkins as place mats.

She suggests these other money-saving ideas for an elegant table: For a formal look, dress up a card table or a flea market find with a floor-length tablecloth. Cover expensive folding chairs with boor dining fabric. You can purchase chair cover or make your own. Chair cover patterns are available from many dress-pattern companies.

Instead of acquiring a variety of stemmed glassware, choose one basic wine-glass size. A four-ounce stemmed glass will serve for almost any wine or juice beverage.

Trim your houseplants. Simple green leaves, nicely arranged, make an effective centerpiece. Select leaves that are different in size, shape, texture and shine. Don't forget the candles.

Alternate place settings when you have more guests than one dinnerware or flatware set can handle. To keep the table setting unified, use coordinating napkins and tablecloth. "Table Setting Guide" includes tips on how to buy tableware, table manners, flowers, wine service and table service. The book ($1.95, plus $2 shipping and handling) is available from Brighton Publications Inc., P.O. Box 12706, New Brighton, Minn. 55112. You'll also get a free copy of Twelve Tips to Save Tabletop Dollars.

A. A woman forsaken by an alcoholic husband.

An alligator's legs aren't much to brag about even on land. In water they're useless. The least just folds them close to its sides and propels with its tail.

TOUCH
Ivy responds to what it touches and to what touches it. That response — in plants, at least — is called "thaptotropism." Our Love and War man is researching what it's called in humans. Stand by.

Q. In the music world, what was "The Four-Bar Coincidence?"
A. Songwriter Mack David composed a tune called "Sunflower" in 1948. Songwriter Jerry Herman composed a tune called "Hello, Dolly!" in 1964. Both tunes had a similar four bar. David's friend Herman, Runic was an out of court settlement amounted to about $250,000.

About 160 years ago in New England, a young woman could make six times as much in a textile mill — what's new? — as she could earn as a school teacher.

Seasoned farmers cite this rule of corn planning: "One for the cutworm / one for the crow / one to rot / and two to grow."

ORPHANS
Q. Two U.S. presidents were orphans. Name them.
A. Andrew Jackson and Herbert Hoover.

Of the Wild West's Calamity Jane, it was written: "She swore, she drank, she wore men's clothing. She was 50 years ahead of her time."

A newborn black bear only weighs about as much as 10 shots of whiskey.

Q. Why is Easter Island called that?
A. Was discovered on Easter Sunday.
