Judge rejects lawsuit to bar attack by Bush

WASHINGTON — A federal judge refused Thursday to bar President Bush from attacking Iraq without the consent of Congress, saying the issue of war and peace in the Persian Gulf is not ripe for a constitutional verdict.

But U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene did affirm the power of Congress to declare war, and he rejected the Bush administration's contention that the president has sweeping, unilateral authority to conduct a military offensive.

In the end, however, 54 members of Congress, virtually all of them liberal Democrats, did not get the bottom-line ruling they sought: a court order preventing Bush from making the offensive in the Persian Gulf region without first obtaining a declaration of war from Congress.

In a 29-page opinion rejecting the lawmakers' request for a preliminary injunction, Greene said the lawsuit is premature because Congress as an institution hasn't declared its views. Bush has not yet brought the nation to the brink of war and there is no constitutional impasse between Congress and the president.

But Greene also indicated that, if those conditions are met, the members of Congress would have a sound legal case. He said that they have legal standing to sue and that the U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf region are "of such magnitude and significance" as to make it "clear that congressional approval is required if Congress desires to become involved."

Greene rejected the Justice Department's arguments that the president, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces, has sweeping powers to direct military actions and decide when a war begins without interference from Congress or the courts.

"If the Executive had the sole power to determine that any particular military operation, no matter how vast, does not constitute war-making but only an offensive military attack, the congressional power to declare war will be at the mercy of a semantic decision by the Executive," Greene wrote.

"Such an interpretation would evade the plain language of the Constitution, and it cannot stand."

Greene also said courts have "the power and the ability to make the factual and legal determination of whether this nation's military actions constitute war for the purposes of the constitutional war clause."

Local option tax opposition eases

The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Idaho's leading business association is dropping its opposition to the campaign of county and municipal leaders to secure legislative authority for local-option sales or income taxes.

"Because of limitations on property taxes and state income and sales taxes that are higher than the national average, we recognize that cities and counties have difficulty providing many of their traditional services," the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry said.

The association's membership, representing the bulk of Idaho's business community, also suggested support for some kind of scheme that would begin returning at least a portion of surplus revenues to taxpayers, apparently in the form of a rebate.

Twin Falls officials, like those in many other Idaho cities, would like to have to option taxes to fund municipal services.

In its annual statement of the policies it backs heading into the winter legislative session, the association urged local and state officials to look for other revenue-generating alternatives for cities and counties before settling on any local option tax plan.

"We encourage supporters of local option taxing authority to investigate amendments or inequities in the current tax structure, especially property taxes, before creating new authority for local option sales or income taxes," the policy statement said.

Local government leaders have facing increased demands for services, many mandated by the federal government, at a time when their primary source of income, the property tax, remains restricted. Although much of the anti-property tax One Percent Initiative has been eliminated, the 5 percent limit on annual property tax increases continues to hamper efforts to meet those demands.

National tax comparisons provided by the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho show that while state sales, personal and corporate income taxes rank in the middle among the 50 states, property tax burdens in Idaho ranked well into the bottom half of the states.

Sen. Cecil Andrus is proposing using about half the estimated $40 million state surplus for property tax relief, and government leaders have generally steered clear of efforts to loosen the constraints on local increases in property taxes. They all maintain that no matter what the comparative burden is, property taxes remain the most detested among Idahoans.

IACI said that if no changes in the current tax system can be made, any local option tax plan must be conditions on the authority being extended only to cities and counties and limited to general sales or personal income taxes. The plan should also require any local option tax to be approved by a majority vote of those affected, continue.

Secret leaks: American off to space station

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Somewhere in the United States, an unidentified company is sitting on what it had hoped would remain a big secret.

It has contracted with the Soviet Union to send an American to the space station Mir.

The secret is trickling out, but the company isn't ready to say much. It had hoped to make a big, splashy announcement in January.

"We executed a contract with NPO Energin, which is the manned part of the Soviet space program," said Art Dula, whose Space Commerce Corp. in Houston markets Soviet space services in the United States. "What company is paying for it and why?"

Dula wouldn't say, explaining that secrecy is part of the contract.

The Soviets — for a hefty price — have taken passengers of a variety of nationalities aboard their space station. They have included a Frenchman, a Cuban, an East German, and, this month, Japanese journalist Toyohiro Akiyama.

But there's never been an American.

The weekly newspaper Space News on Monday was the first to reveal the secret, but only the sliver of information that the unknown company's cost will be more than the $12 million the Tokyo Broadcasting Service paid to the Glavkosmos space agency. Other news accounts then repeated that information.

Dula's associate, Bill Wirin of Colorado Springs, Colo., said Space Commerce Corp. signed the deal in Moscow on Nov. 30.

Protection for snails step closer

By N.S. Nokken
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A group of small snails found in the Snake River has moved one step closer to protection under the federal Endangered Species Act.

The federal Interior Department has signed the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's order that proposes to list the species as endangered.

That means federal agencies must confer with Fish and Wildlife officials before approving projects that could harm the five species of mollusks.

But the listing won't necessarily stop all development, said Jay Gore of Fish and Wildlife's Boise field office, "if it's done with a mind to a snail."

The order will be published in the Federal Register, opening a 60-day public comment period. The service will consider the comments and issue a final listing within one year.

Fish and Wildlife wants endangered species listed. Four species of snails and one limpet. The mollusks are found only in the free-flowing waters of a 40-mile stretch of the Snake in the Thousand Springs area or large adjacent springs, according to biologists.

The species in the proposed listing include Blue Rapids snail, the Utah valvata snail, the Snake River physa snail, the Idaho spring snail or Lanx and the Banbury Springs limpet or Lanx n. sp. — a mollusk with a cone-shaped shell and a thick, fleshy foot.

Fish and Wildlife is looking for additional information.

EPA report to link cancer, magnetic fields

The Associated Press

An Environmental Protection Agency report linking electromagnetic fields to leukemia and brain cancer in children will be released next week after being held up by the White House science adviser, the EPA said Thursday.

Some EPA scientists said the White House was wrong to delay the report. But the White House science adviser's office told the agency it was concerned the report would alarm the public, EPA officials said.

Similar reservations were expressed by Assistant Secretary of Health James Mason, the EPA officials said.

"They were concerned not about the accuracy of the report," said Robert McGaughy, who supervised the report's preparation. "They were concerned about how people would react to the news. There is a concern that people will take too literally the suggestions that there may be some connection with cancer."

Neither White House science adviser D. Allan Bromley nor Mason were available for interviews Thursday, their offices said.

The report looked at all electromagnetic fields, from those produced by high-power electrical transmission lines to those from household appliances.

Agency tightens limits on nuclear radiation

The Associated Press

ROCKVILLE, Md. — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Thursday tightened radiation-exposure limits for nuclear plant workers and residents near atomic power facilities.

The revision was the first in more than 30 years.

The agency said the new regulations, by reflecting recent scientific studies, will provide an extra margin of safety.

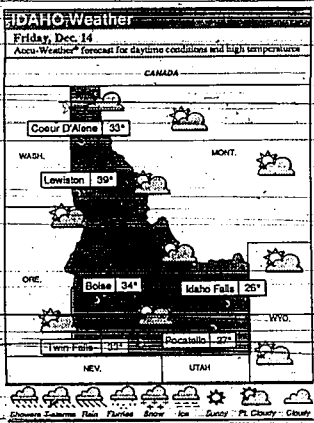

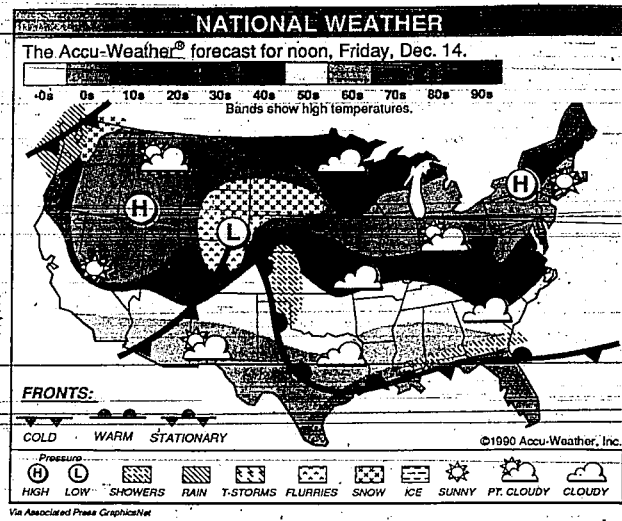

Yet the commission said the current standards do not put workers at risk.

"Anti-nuclear groups immediately criticized the new regulation, which does not take effect for two years. Critics argued that the tightened limits still put people at too high a risk of cancer and are based on outdated health information.

The new rules require that, by January 1993, the nuclear industry assure that:

- The maximum exposure to the general population from atomic facilities be no more than 100 millirems a year, a fifth of what is now allowed.
- Atomic workers be exposed to no more than 5 rems of radiation a year.
- Plant operators be required to adopt policies keeping radiation doses "as low as reasonably achievable" instead of merely being urged to do so.

Weather summary

Low clouds with light snow and fog prevailed through much of Thursday across the Gem State.

The fog and snow combination often reduced visibilities to one-half mile or less, mainly in the south and southeast during the afternoon.

Along the western border and north into the panhandle the clouds and fog were breaking up enough to show glimpses of blue sky by about midday.

Fairfield's 20 sky was the heaviest precipitation report listed. Ketchum reported an inch of new snow and Stanley reported two inches of fresh snow with four on the ground.

The widespread low clouds and snow cover held temperatures mostly in the 20s and 30s around Idaho Thursday.

The warmest temperature in the state Thursday was 40 degrees at Riggin; Stanley reported the coldest at 1 degree below zero.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the highest temperature was 84 degrees at Kingsville, Alice and McAllen, Texas. The lowest was 6 below zero at Wrenn, Minn.

Heavy snow blankets southern Rockies, spreads east.

The Associated Press

Heavy snow fell in the southern Rockies and in the high country to the west, with light rain and snow on the western Plains, and rain was scattered from Mississippi to Maine.

An upper-level weather disturbance produced heavy snow in the northern ski areas of New Mexico from Wednesday night into early Thursday. Totals ranged up to 10 inches at Angel Fire, with 8 inches at Red River and 7 inches at Chama and Eagle Nest.

Snow also blanketed parts of southeastern Colorado during the night with half a foot of new snow at Cuchara.

The same weather disturbance brought snow to the mountains of Arizona. Totals in the White Mountains ranged up to 6 inches at the Sunrise ski area. Flagstaff received 2 inches of snow.

The snow ended over Arizona by mid morning. Snow showers continued to produce some light snow in Colorado and New Mexico and a few rain showers extended over the southern high Plains.

A winter storm wave was passed through Friday for the mountains of southwestern Colorado, where up to a foot of new snow was possible.

Light showers also extended from western Kansas and southeastern Colorado to southeastern Kansas and northeastern Oklahoma at midday. Light snow was reported in southwestern Kansas, freezing drizzle was reported in southeastern Colorado, and sleet was reported in northern Oklahoma.

Showers developing along a cold front in the eastern part of the nation were scattered from northern Mississippi through West Virginia to northern Maine. Freezing rain was reported during the night in north-central and northwestern Vermont.

In the Northwest, snow showers developed along a cold front and were scattered from eastern Washington state and western Idaho into northeastern Idaho at midday.

Drunk driving fatalities down over 7 years

ATLANTA (AP) — Drunk driving deaths have decreased 12 percent in the last seven years, probably due to steeper state laws enforcement and public awareness, said a report released Thursday.

In 1989, 39.2 percent of traffic deaths involved at least one person who was legally drunk, down from 46.3 percent in 1982, the federal Centers for Disease Control said in the report.

In actual numbers, 17,849 Americans died in such accidents in 1989, down 12 percent from 20,356 in 1982.

Similarly, 24.2 percent of all the drivers who were involved in fatal crashes in 1989 were legally drunk, down from 30 percent in 1982. The numbers showed 14,644 drunken drivers involved in fatal crashes in 1989, down 13 percent from 16,793 in 1982.

Reasons for the improvement may include changes in state laws penalizing drunken driving, increased enforcement, higher drinking ages and increased public intolerance for drunken drivers, the Atlanta-based CDC concluded.

Groundwater has no effect on dump site

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two researchers who analyzed the chemistry of deposits at a proposed nuclear waste dump in Nevada said they believe the site hasn't been affected by rising ground water for more than 300,000 years.

Thure E. Cerling, a Utah geologist, said findings suggest Yucca Mountain would be a suitable site.

At biological information during the comment period but will accept comments on other issues as well. If no new biological information is uncovered during the comment period, the service will proceed with its plans to protect the species. But if data show the species are not threatened, the snails would not be listed, said Gore.

Returning Idaho Sen. James McClure tears listing the snails as endangered could hurt Idaho agriculture because Fish and Wildlife included water quality as a possible threat to the snails. But the reference to water quality was vague, McClure's natural resources specialist Carl Haywood has said.

Haywood could not be reached for comment Thursday and McClure was not in his Washington, D.C., office.

The Fish and Wildlife staff recommended listing the snails as endangered because of threats to the mollusks in the Thousand Springs stretch of the river, primarily from two proposed power plants and a trout hatchery.

The agency said two proposed hydroelectric projects are threatening the species — the A.J. Wiley Project proposed above Bliss and the smaller Dike project below Bliss.

The snails are remnants of what once was a diverse population of 90 mollusk species that lived in what was once Lake Idaho during the Pleistocene period some 12,000 years ago. The Banbury Springs limpet is believed to be the only representative of its genus left in the state. Others of that genus have been found only as fossils from Lake Idaho.

Lanx has been found only in Box Canyon Creek and Banbury Springs, biologists say.

Three of the species have been found in Box Canyon north of Buhl, where Boise developer Earl McHardy has proposed building a water diversion that would take much of the water in lower Box Canyon Creek and move it to a trout hatchery at the mouth of neighboring Blind Canyon.

List of the snails would probably forestall Idaho Power's plans for development at the Wiley site and perhaps also at Kanaka Rapids, Idaho Power spokesman Jim Taney said.

The utility plans to consult with Fish and Wildlife to find out what possible alternatives might be, he said.

ducted at a general election, with the projects to be financed by the tax and the period the tax will be in effect clearly spelled out.

On a state level, the organization continued to view the overall tax structure as one of the most equitable and balanced in the nation, making it clear that no attempt should be made to shift tax liability within it.

But with the booming state economy producing unanticipated tax revenue surpluses in the last three budgets and the likelihood of a fourth next spring, IACI expressed concern that the consistent cash windfall will eventually be used to underwrite continuing government expenses instead of limited to one-time, nonrecurring purchases.

"It therefore seems appropriate to consider adding to the usual fiscal policy a method of capping state revenues — and/or funneling those funds back to those that paid them," IACI said.

Credit could be golden harvest for farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $1-billion farm credit extended to the Soviet Union could buy most of the Kansas wheat crop this year. Or all the corn grown in Ohio. Or all the soybeans produced in Missouri and Mississippi.

And you can bet that producers of oats, barley, rice, dairy products and dozens of other farm goods will be clamoring for Moscow's attention, too.

"Wheat could be the majority of it, I would think," said Barry Jenkins of the National Association of Wheat Growers. "We may have something going for us because they need some flour real quick."

"But there's going to be people lined up along with us," he noted.

Citing the "tough times, difficult times" facing the Soviet people, President Bush announced Wednesday he was "waving" through "1991" long-standing trade restrictions and handed the Soviet Union credit lines of $1 billion for farm products and $300 million for manufactured goods.

Ironically, Bush's announcement provoked berish on the market, because the grain trade had expected the president to give the Soviets an even higher credit limit.

Grain futures opened sharply lower Thursday on the Chicago Board of Trade, and one analyst said the credit package was disappointing, that traders had expected a figure in the range of $1.5 billion to $3 billion, the level urged earlier by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The Agriculture Department will work with Soviet officials to work out details of the credit package, including schedules for financing and payment. The USDA underwrites the loans, which are made by private lenders under the department's export credit programs.

Theoretically, if a four-way split could be arranged, with each interest group getting a $250 million piece of the pie, it could mean Soviet purchases of:

- About 114 million bushels of corn at an average farm price of $2.19 per bushel.
- About 45 million bushels of soybeans at the recent average U.S. farm price of $5.51 per bushel.
- And miscellaneous purchases, with the remaining $250 million, of rice, oats, barley, dairy products, meat and various processed food items.

About 105 million bushels of wheat, based on a recent U.S. farm price average of $2.39 per bushel.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union will open a consulate in New York next month, in exchange for the United States opening a diplomatic office in Kiev in the Ukraine, the State Department said Thursday.

The announcement called the decision "an important step that will facilitate the growth of tourism and business contacts, as well as exchange and cooperation programs."

Galileo photographed the moon's dark side early this month.

Galileo provides new view of Earth, moon

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Pictures by the Galileo spacecraft as it zoomed past Earth on its way to Jupiter show icy Antarctica and a giant meteorite impact crater on the far side of the moon.

The first photos of the back side of the moon were made by Apollo astronauts two decades ago.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration released three photographs Thursday as Galileo sped away from Earth, snapping more pictures of its home planet from a distance of 2.33 million miles.

"It's a new perspective. It's a beautiful planet," said Andy Ingersoll, a California Institute of Technology researcher and member of Galileo's imaging team at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"This is the first time we've had a chance to use a spacecraft designed to explore another planet to come back and look at our own Earth and moon as if we were alien observers," said Terrence Johnson, Galileo's chief scientist.

"In the process, we're learning some new scientific things about our own world and its companion, but perhaps more importantly, it's providing us a different perspective on our own home planet as a fragile world."

miles above the southwest Atlantic Ocean, using Earth's gravity as a slingshot to help expand the spacecraft's orbit around the sun so it can reach Jupiter in 1995. If used Venus for the same purpose last February and will fly past Earth again in December 1992.

The planetary encounters are meant solely to help propel Galileo on its $1.4 billion mission to Jupiter, but scientists took the opportunity to use the spacecraft to study Venus and Earth in dress rehearsals for exploring Jupiter.

Flying past Earth made Galileo the first planetary craft to approach Earth from interplanetary space and the first spacecraft equipped with modern instruments to study the far side of the moon, which is always pointed away from Earth.

"We're going to learn a lot about the geology of the back side of the moon," said Clark Chapman, a Galileo researcher from the Planetary Science Institute in Tucson, Ariz. "It's been a fantastic lunar mission already."

One of Galileo's pictures shows Mare Orientale, a 550-mile-wide meteorite impact crater. Because of the way the moon orbits Earth, only five-eighths of its surface can be seen from Earth. Mare Orientale is on the moon's western edge.

Bennett: No to top GOP job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former drug policy director William Bennett on Thursday spurned President Bush's offer to be chairman of the Republican National Committee after White House lawyers told him he'd have to give up a book contract and other outside income.

"I didn't take a year of poverty," Bennett told reporters after giving Chief of Staff John Sununu his letter declining the offer just two weeks after he'd accepted it.

Bennett indicated he was initially told by the White House that his plans to write two books and accept payments for speeches would not present a problem.

However, Bennett said, "the administration and Republican sources said that Secretary of Transportation Samuel Skinner and defeated Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., were among those being considered."

vice changed." He said he was told by White House counsel Boyd Gray that accepting the outside income while serving as RNC chairman would violate the Ethics in Government Act.

The surprise development was an embarrassment to both Bush and Bennett and sent the White House scurrying in search for a new candidate to take "over" day-to-day operation of the party from the ailing Lee Atwater.

Administration and Republican sources said that Secretary of Transportation Samuel Skinner and defeated Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., were among those being considered.

Jolly season may miss retailers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales declined 0.1 percent last month, the government said Thursday in a report analysts said pointed to a bleak holiday shopping season. "I'm looking for a gloomy Christmas," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a New York securities dealer. "The consumer has become extremely selective, buying practical gifts such as clothing, and waiting for a bargain even on those."

The report "implies that consumers are being very cautious," agreed Sung Won Sohn, an economist with the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis. "People are not buying disposable goods."

Sales totaled a seasonally adjusted $151.6 billion, down from $151.8 billion in October and the first decline since a 0.1 percent drop in May, the Commerce Department reported.

Economist Rosalind Wells of the National Retail Federation in New York said she has not seen the reason to expect the Christmas shopping pace to pick up soon.

Analysts said retail activity would have been even more sluggish except for widespread promotions and other incentives to lure shoppers. While markdowns might not help sales in one month, they tend to depress them in following months.

"They're borrowing sales from the future," Sohn explained.

Gains were recorded in sales at grocery stores, up 0.5 percent; apparel stores, 0.8 percent; restaurants and bars, 0.4 percent, and drug stores, 0.2 percent.

Gasoline station sales, which have been driven up by rising oil prices following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, slowed to a 0.7 percent increase in November. They had risen 2.6 percent in October and 5.6 percent in September.

Sales of durable goods — usually expensive products expected to last more than three years — fell 1.4 percent after rising 0.6 percent in October.

Automobile sales plummeted 1.3 percent, reversing a 1.4 percent October increase that some analysts said had come largely from fleet sales. Excluding automobiles, sales inched up 0.2 percent last month.

While purchases of furniture and other home furnishings rose 0.3 percent, sales of building materials fell 2.6 percent.

Although purchases of non-durable goods increased 0.5 percent, general merchandise and department store sales dropped 0.5 percent.

Sandra Shaber, an economist with the Futures Group in Washington, said general merchandise sales are a good barometer of consumer sentiment "and it's telling us that it's weak." "It's interesting that department-store sales for the last three months over year-ago levels are up less than 2.0 percent," she said. "If it's adjusted for inflation, it's down for the year and that's ominous."

Brothers could have to pay for saving children in fire

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — An act of heroism could end up costing Jerry and Gary Robles $61,000.

The brothers put their lives on the line to save three young children from a fire last month and now they've been billed from the ambulance company that examined one of the two men.

"Why are they charging us?" asked Jerry Robles, 38. "We didn't use the ambulance. After you put your life on the line, you have to pay for it?"

The brothers spotted smoke coming from the second story window of a San Jose condominium on Nov. 4. Gary Robles, a Morgan Hill resident, struggled through the thick smoke to help lead the children, ages 14 months, 2 and 4 years, to safety.

The original bill from the SCV Paramedical Service was $109, with $61 for emergency response, $42 for oxygen and $6 for the nozzle of the oxygen mask.

The bill was reduced after the company realized that San Jose firefighters administered oxygen to one brother from their own truck.

The fire department is siding with the heroes.

"It's totally unfair," said Battalion Chief Dan Bourbon. "If it wasn't for them, we'd have three dead kids. They should forget the bill."

U.S. Ambassador Howell leaves Baghdad for flight home a hero

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nat Howell, U.S. ambassador to Kuwait, is being hailed as a hero, a symbol of America's resistance to a tyrant's coercion.

Meanwhile, Howell had to keep underground links open to the hundreds of Americans in Kuwait who were in hiding, afraid of being captured and used by the Iraqis as human shields.

His valorous performance was part of the basis for our continuing hopes of a peaceful solution," said Ted Wilkinson, president of the American Foreign Service Association.

Wilkinson said "it was the kind of discipline you'd expect" from an experienced field officer who was also posted to Egypt during the 1967 Six-Day War and to Beirut during Lebanon's mid-1970s civil war.

Howell left Kuwait only after being assured that all Americans who wanted to leave the country had been allowed to go.

Howell and his staff "performed courageously," said White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. They deserve to be taken out.

The ambassador, accompanied by Barbara Bodine, deputy chief of mission, and three other diplomats, were the last Americans to evacuate Kuwait City compound. They were to arrive in the United States on Friday.

Rinchart, the American engineer, described Howell as "a tremendous leader. I told him, 'I trusted my life to him.'"

Howell is reportedly thinking about retiring after 25 years in the foreign service, but if he decides to stay on, it's likely that his future will be bright.

"He performed with distinction and he should be recognized," Wilkinson said.

Glaspie, the first American woman ambassador to an Arab country, has been in the United States since the invasion. And in marked contrast to Howell's triumphant return home, Glaspie has faced criticism.

She met Saddam a week before the invasion and, according to transcripts released by Iraq, praised the Iraqi president for his "extraordinary efforts" to rebuild his country.

Glaspie reassured Saddam that the United States took no official position on Iraq's border dispute with Kuwait.

The transcripts, never challenged by the State Department, showed that Glaspie didn't respond directly to Saddam's threats of terrorism if the United States thwarted his aims.

She stressed that the Bush administration opposed economic sanctions against Iraq.

Howell was trapped in Kuwait when Iraq invaded the country Aug. 2. For three months, he defied Saddam Hussein's orders to close the diplomatic compound, which had been surrounded by Iraqi troops.

The Bush administration this week ordered Howell to evacuate the embassy, saying he had completed his job by helping U.S. citizens leave Kuwait.

The U.S. Embassy in Iraq remains open, but Ambassador April Glaspie had left the country on vacation three days before the surprise invasion. The charge d'affaires is running the embassy in her absence, and the administration says it will remain open and staffed.

Howell was packing his bags, closing out a three-year stint in Kuwait, when Iraqi troops stormed over the border. His wife had already left for home.

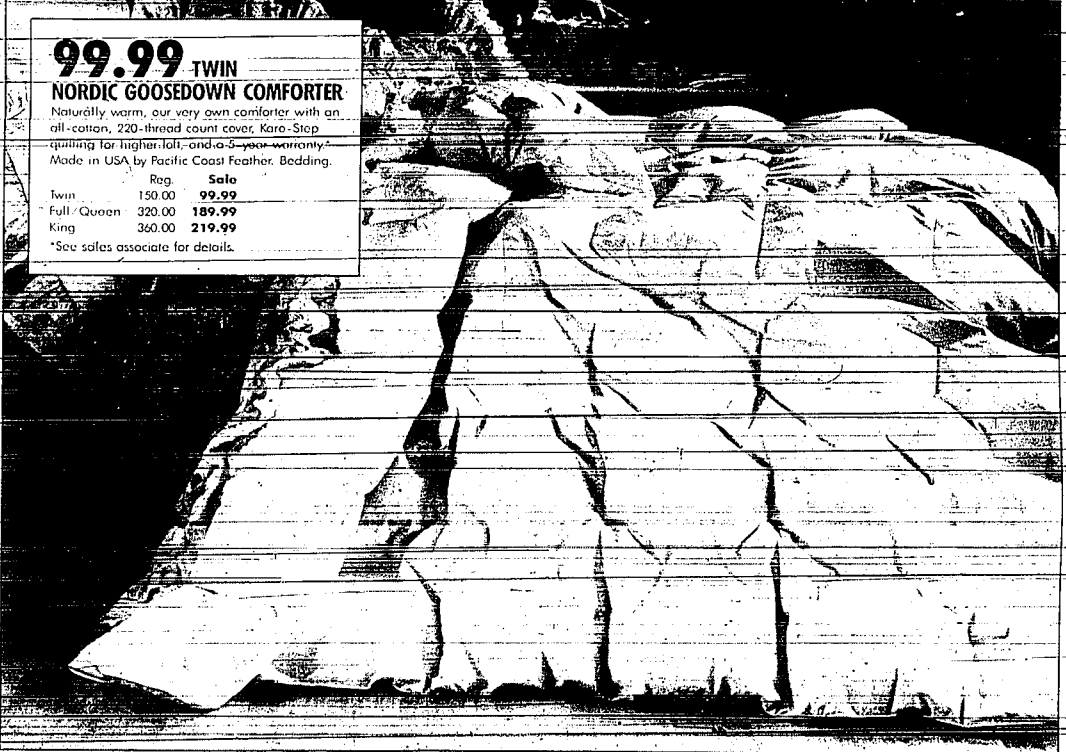

After Howell refused to leave the embassy, the compound was deprived of electricity and running water. The eight diplomats and 19 American civilians survived on canned tuna and rice.

They planted gardens and drank the water from the swimming pool.

The 50-year-old Howell, clad in an orange shirt and Virginia Tech shorts, helped shovel when the Americans dug a latrine trench and a well. When they struck water good enough for washing, they showed their defiance to the Iraqi guards by washing their cars.

Christmas can cheer, even in gulf

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — The only thing white about Christmas here is the desert sand.

Families and loved ones are far away for the American military personnel deployed in Operation Desert Shield.

Outward Christmas displays are barred so as not to offend the Islamic sensibilities of the Saudi Arabians.

"Twinkling lights don't go with military tents. It's enough to give the toughest troops the Christmas blues. But a psychologist says Desert Shield won't be completely barren of holiday cheer."

"There will be kind of a blue haze over everything. It's kind of a funk," said Capt. Frank Mullins, 54, of Mobile, Ala., a psychologist at the U.S. Navy's Fleet No. 5 Hospital.

"But the average person will find a lot of solace being among friends, sharing Christmas dinner, singing a couple of carols," he said.

What helps people get through the holidays are "personal" things sent from home: a card, a trinket, a snapshot, Christmas music, yule decorations, Mullins said.

Army Maj. Doug Bilde of Chicago received a candy cane house complete with fake snow and an artificial tree from his wife.

Navy Petty Officer Diane Escobar of Austin, Texas, has a nativity scene, and a participant in the Army's 82nd Airborne Division was mailed the artificial tree his father had in Vietnam. "The troops here should try to have as normal a Christmas as they can, with as many customs and rituals as they can get from home," Mullins said.

"People are upset, don't get me wrong. If you don't feel upset, maybe there's something wrong with you," he said. "They may get depressed. They may cry a little bit. But they'll be fine the next day."

"We don't expect to be over-flowing with psychiatric casualties on Christmas Day." What's also absent in Saudi Arabia is spiked eggnog and alcoholic spirits because liquor is banned in Saudi Arabia.

Idaho Driver sent to dry out strikes couple head-on LEWISTON (AP) — An attorney for Bonner County insists county jail officials were only doing their duty when they permitted an alcoholic inmate to drive himself to the Alcohol Treatment Unit at Orofino.

Larry Dawson detoured on his way to Orofino from Sandpoint, and his pickup hit head-on a vehicle occupied by Grangeville couple Floyd and Betty Litchfield, court records say.

All three survived the March 3, 1988 crash, but received serious injuries. Dawson had a blood-alcohol content of 0.34, more than triple the legal limit of 0.10, according to court documents.

The Litchfields sued Bonner County, alleging officials violated their duty to the public by not ensuring Dawson did not drive while under their control. A Lewiston jury trial began Tuesday, with 2nd District Judge E. B. Ponack presiding.

"There were two people who could have prevented those injuries from occurring. First of those was Larry Dawson," said Boise attorney James Davis, representing Bonner County, in opening remarks.

"The second person who has responsibility is Judge Heise," Judge Heise released Larry Dawson on the morning of March 3, 1988. That was the previous day.

He was returning to Bonner County Magistrate Debra Heise, who ordered Dawson to attend a one-month alcohol treatment program at Orofino as part of his sentence. Dawson was to be given credit against his 60-day jail term for attending the program.

Davis said evidence shows the judge does not order Bonner County Jail personnel to transport people to Orofino because she believes county residents should not have to pay for it.

"The only way it (Bonner County) could have been responsible for this accident is if it disregarded Judge Heise's order," Davis said. "We conclude that we had no choice but to release Larry Dawson. We conclude that we couldn't transport Larry Dawson."

But Darrel Aherin, representing the Litchfields, said the county should take the responsibility, and said the wreck was foreseeable.

Dawson was serving a jail term for driving while intoxicated. This was his fourth or fifth offense, he said.

Aherin said Dawson checked out of the jail at 6:30 a.m. on March 3. No one even called the Orofino treatment unit to say when Dawson had left, Aherin added. The wreck occurred at 3:30 p.m. near Lapwai.

"If you send an alcoholic to a place to dry out for 30 days, some 200 miles, unsupervised in his own vehicle, he is going to consume alcohol," Aherin said. "It's foreseeable that he is going to drink and drive, and he is going to have a wreck."

Some alternatives are taking a bus or having deputies or another person drive them he said.

Attorney named Bannock prosecutor

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello attorney Bill Bacon will succeed Larry EchoHawk as Bannock County prosecutor.

The Bannock County Commission on Wednesday picked Bacon for the $43,000 per year job, over the recommendation of the Democratic Party Central Committee.

EchoHawk was elected attorney general last month. He said earlier he expected to resign around the first of the year.

He will be sworn in Jan. 7 to start a four-year term.

The attorney general pay goes to $67,500 per year effective with the new terms.

Police have missing ornaments at station

TWIN FALLS - People who have had their vehicles' hood ornaments stolen during a recent spate of thefts might find their missing emblems at the Twin Falls police department.

Buhl police recently recovered about 30 of the expensive ornaments - many from Cadillacs - and turned over 15 of them to the Twin Falls police department to be returned to their owners, Buhl police Lt. Dick Floyd said.

Many of the hood ornaments cost more than $100 each to replace. Police questioned nine boys at a Buhl school and discovered the ornaments were being stolen and turned into jewelry, Floyd said. A box was placed in the school and students returned the ornaments anonymously, he said.

Most of the ornaments stolen in Twin Falls were taken from shopping center parking lots, Twin Falls police Lt. Bill Stonemetz said, adding that reports of stolen hood ornaments continue to come in.

"It's not just Cadillacs," he said. "We've got name cars, Mercedes (emblems), everything being taken."

Auditor tells Eden council finances are in good shape

EDEN - Representatives from the Evans & Beck offices in Burley attended the City Council meeting this week to give the city's annual financial report and told the council the city is in good shape financially.

After hearing the report, the council voted to have Evans & Beck perform the city's audit for next year as well.

In addition, the City Council approved liquor licenses for L&L Market and the Trophy Club.

The council also approved a catering permit for a Dec. 15 party at the Legion Hall. Since the hall has no liquor license, the individuals planning or catering a party there must obtain this type of permit.

State looking for antique leather items from Idaho

BOISE - The Idaho State Historical Society is looking for antique harnesses, chaps, and other leather goods known to have been made in Idaho during the past 160 years.

The search is a preliminary step to identify items for possible use in a future exhibit at the Idaho State Historical Museum in Boise.

Recent research has "discovered" the names of numerous saddlemakers who have worked in the state over the years, from Territorial days to the present.

"We plan to focus on the work of Idaho saddlemakers by showing examples from our permanent collection, and with the loan of items around the state. We hope to include the work of Native Americans as well," said Ken Swanson, museum administrator.

To report Idaho-made items or for further information, contact Linda Morton-Keitchley at 334-3863 or Ken Swanson at 334-2120.

School reforms looming

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - After challenges to the state's educational funding formula are decided in court, Idaho will have the opportunity to become a national leader in educational reform.

So said Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, vice chairman of the House Education committee, at a Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce breakfast Thursday at which seven legislators fielded questions from the business and civic community leaders.

Year-round schooling, longer school days and consolidation are some of the reforms that could follow court rulings on two suits filed by school districts concerned with the uniformity and fairness of the existing state funding formula for public schools.

"I don't know how many of those changes will take place, but there will be a real window of opportunity there," Jones said.

Jones predicted that the courts will find the formula unfair and instruct the Legislature to fix it, with some or no guidelines. When that happens, at least a year from now, change will happen.

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, said educational reform takes more than "fiddling with structure." It takes a change in perception by the public that "education comes first."

"If teachers are paid to keep students after school a couple of hours for athletics, why not pay them to keep students two more hours to teach them to become productive citizens, Noh asked.

"Those are the kinds of things that have to happen and I think will happen," Noh said.

Jones cautioned that a change in the funding formula will cost "big money." In Montana, he said, change to that state's formula meant a $100 million increase in education's budget, and in Kentucky, the price tag is $1.2 billion over two years, Jones said.

"And folks, that's new taxes out of your pockets," Jones said.

An expanded, unified and more efficient community college system is also in the works, Noh said. An interim legislative committee studying the system wants to see a college formed in Idaho Falls, followed by one in the Treasure Valley, he said.

Fairfield ski resort sold

The Times-News

FAIRFIELD - A California-based company has bought Soldier Mountain Ski Area and will take possession of the Camas County resort on Wednesday.

The Smoky Dome Ski Corp. has completed purchase of the resort from Karen and Claude Hinkle of Fairfield, who have owned the ski area since January 1988. The resort will be managed by Phil Edholm, formerly of Lake Tahoe, Calif., who has served as general manager of two other ski resorts.

The purchase price was not disclosed.

The new management has scheduled Soldier's opening date for Friday, Dec. 21. Soldier has suffered financially from poor snow conditions for several years, and opened for only six weeks during the winter of 1987-1988. The Hinkles bought the resort from Karen Hinkle's father, Wallace Wheeler of Indio, Calif., who

3 officers under investigation

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Three city police officers were placed on administrative leave Dec. 7 and two remain out of uniform pending completion of an investigation by the state Attorney General's office.

An early-morning incident Dec. 7 prompted a call to the Idaho Bureau of Investigation to look into the actions of three off-duty officers, Paul Du Presne, public safety director, said.

The bureau has completed its investigation and forwarded the information to the state Attorney General's office, which will determine whether criminal charges against the officers are warranted, said Jim Whitehead, chief of the state Bureau of Investigation.

Officers would not comment on the nature of the incident, although Whitehead said citizens were involved.

Gooding teachers sign contract, end 3 months at bargaining table

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - School trustees voted this week to ratify a new contract agreement with Gooding teachers.

The contract has a base salary of $16,900 and will cost the district $200,000 more this year than last year for certified teacher salaries, Superintendent James Cobble said.

After three months of negotiations, teachers voted in November to accept this salary offer from the district. The vote was 60 in favor and four against.

In related business, Cobble said the Gooding School District can expect to receive about $54,000 less than anticipated in state funding.

This will have a substantial negative impact on the district's $3,015,885 budget, he said.

Public school enrollment statewide has increased, so there is less money available per student, Cobble said.

Most of the Gooding budget is for fixed costs, so it will be very difficult to find where to cut $54,000, he said.

"You don't turn the thermostat down, you don't eliminate contracts you're obligated to and you don't stop the yellow buses from moving," Cobble said. "We may have to make the cuts in next year's budget."

He added that there may be some emergency appropriations from the Legislature to give school districts the funding they expected when setting their budgets last spring.

Cobble said the district made its salary offer to teachers before the state

Blaine schools have funding shortage

By Christopher S. Conroy
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - The Blaine County School District will have to come up with an estimated additional $200,000 to $300,000 to comply with a new law that requires a 20- to one student teacher ratio in kindergarten and grades one through three.

Superintendent Phil Homer gave the school board the bad news Tuesday night. Homer expressed concern that the other school districts received money to meet the letter of the law, but Blaine County did not.

The mandatory ratios come at a time when school districts across the state are in a financial quandary.

For fiscal year 1990-1991, the Education Department underscored growth in Idaho schools by close to 4,000 students, resulting in massive funding cuts.

The current class ratios in Blaine County elementary schools are Bellevue five "other" elementary, 20:17 students to one teacher; school districts received money to meet 19:17 to one.

Homer explained that these ratios are difficult because they are an average of the three grades rather than the actual number in each class. The law requires that each classroom must have no more than 20 students.

Homer indicated that the school district will ask for exemption from the state while other alternatives are explored.

Traffic comes to standstill after 5-vehicle pileup

The Times-News

BERLEY - Foul weather caused a pileup of four tractor-trailer trucks and a pickup Thursday afternoon, closing the westbound lanes of Interstate 84 at the Berley exit.

No serious injuries resulted from the accident, although several head of cattle being carried in one of the trailers were either killed or had to be destroyed, according to police officials.

Police dispatchers throughout the Magic Valley reported numerous minor accidents due to weather and road conditions Thursday evening.

The Berley accident closed the westbound lanes of the freeway from about 1:25 p.m. until late in the evening. Idaho State Police and the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department handled the accident.

The accident was touched off when Doris Penetecost, 45, of Sacramento, Calif., tried to stop along the side of the road, but was hit from behind by another truck when her truck's trailer tried to jackknife, according to an Idaho State Police dispatcher. Penetecost stopped because the windows on her truck were icing up, the dispatcher said.

The second truck, driven by John Anderson, 44, of Barley, slid into the Penetecost vehicle and stopped. A third semi-truck, driven by Charles Matlock, 43, of Denver, then struck the side of Anderson's trailer, the dispatcher said.

A fourth tractor-trailer rig, driven by Harold C. Windsor, 49, of Rathfrim, Idaho, struck the rear wheels of the Matlock truck and slid into the overpass columns, cracking a pillar, the dispatcher said.

Finally, a 1989 Mazda pickup driven by Jose Esquivel, 22, of Houston, Idaho, slid into the Penetecost and Matlock trucks. A fifth truck was taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital with head and leg injuries, where he remained in stable condition Thursday night. Anderson sustained hip and leg injuries, and transported himself to Cassia Memorial Hospital. The dispatcher said.

Radiation recipients meet with health officials

LEWISTON (AP) — It is too soon to develop health programs for people who may have been exposed to Hanford Nuclear Reservation radiation from Washington state, an Idaho health official says.

One of the problems with new federal legislation mandating development of those programs is that it assumes Idaho people were exposed, which may or may not be true, said Richard Schultz of Boise, chief of the Division of Health in the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

A scientific project reconstructing Hanford radiation doses is underway and should be done before health officials start looking at the effects on the population, Schultz on Wednesday told a group of people in Lewiston concerned they may be among those exposed.

and two lived in Whitman County, Wash. during the exposure times.

President Bush signed into law the National Defense Authorization Act for 1991, which requires the Department of Energy to establish a health program for Hanford "downwinders."

They are those east of Hanford possibly exposed to radiation releases between 1944 and 1972.

The states of Idaho, Washington and Oregon will use money appropriated through the Energy Department to develop and run health programs, Schultz explained, but that money may be a minimal amount unless Congress gets "a great deal of pressure" from the public.

Washington is supposed to receive $3 million and Oregon and Idaho are each to get $1 million, but Schultz said he will be "tickled pink" if he got $100,000 out of this.

Other assignments have included positions with the Annapolis-Roosevelt and the Angeles national forests in Colorado and California.

Shoshone schools facing budget crunch

By Cathryn Stephens Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The school district faces several funding losses this year, including $29,500 because of an IEA lawsuit over the issue of teacher-to-student ratios.

While the lawsuit requires a ratio of 20 students to one teacher, the district's funding problems don't always make it possible to keep this ratio.

Superintendent Stef Palaniuk said the district has filed for a hardship exemption from the ratio requirements.

The district also faces the loss of about $24,000 from the state unit funding program, which does not use state money based on each district's average daily attendance.

Palaniuk said the state has an additional 6,000 students in its public school system this year so the funding per student is spread thinner.

The Carl Perkins Federal Act has also left the district with the possibility of no funding for vocational education as well.

The act eliminates vocational educational funding for schools receiving less than $15,000 per year for their vo-ed programs.

Palaniuk said one way around this is to form a consortium with other school districts to provide the vocational courses.

The board is currently looking into this.

The financial news isn't all bad, however. The district did receive about $15,000 in additional grant money from federal discretionary funds.

Intermountain regional forester leaves in February

The Associated Press and The Times-News

OGDEN, Utah — Intermountain Regional Forester Stan Tixier, whose decision to transfer a Twin Falls forest ranger resulted in a continuing controversy, is retiring from the Forest Service in February to become the 1991 president of the Society for Range Management.

Tixier, whose supervisory responsibility includes the Sawtooth National Forest, approved the transfer of Twin Falls District Ranger Don Oman last year after complaints from Oakley-area cattlemen over Oman's range management practices.

Oman filed a federal whistleblower complaint with the agency, and his transfer was put on hold. In August, an Oakley rancher was quoted by the New York Times as threatening to kill Oman, and in the wake of the ensuing national publicity the Forest Service decided against transferring Oman.

Tixier is the second Forest Service official to leave the Ogden area after making a decision about the controversial land swap with Snowbush ski resort, but agency spokesmen say that is coincidental.

Tixier will be replaced by Gray F. Reynolds, director of the Forest Service's Land Management Planning Program in Washington, D.C., and former director of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, Forest Service Chief Dale Robertson announced this week.

Tixier, who has been an agency worker for 31 years, has been regional forester in Ogden for the past eight years.

An agency spokesman said Tixier, who is out of town until next week, was emotional when he announced his retirement to the staff.

"He really enjoyed his job; he was a workaholic about it," spokesman Cindy Chojnacky said. "He was one of those who loved the Forest Service so much that it was joked about that he wore green underwear."

Tixier's retirement will come just days after Robertson is expected to either uphold or overrule appeals to Tixier's decision to trade 695 acres of national forest land to Snowbush owner Earl Hidding.

In October, Tixier overruled the decision of Wasatch Cache Forest Supervisor Dale Bosworth to trade only 220 acres. Bosworth left for a job with the Forest Service in Washington, D.C., just days after he made the original Snowbush decision.

Chojnacky said both exits are coincidental.

Tixier apparently decided at the last minute to take advantage of some early retirement incentives, as are a number of other regional Forest Service employees, she said.

Chojnacky said Robertson's decision on the Snowbush appeals is expected around Jan. 30. The three appeals that have been filed all request that no land be exchanged.

She said the Society for Range Management presidency, which the 50-year-old Tixier is assuming, is

Browning stays silent on forecast

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The man whose projection of an earthquake set off disaster drills and a media storm still refuses to talk about it.

Iben Browning's 50-50 projection of a quake along the Midwest's New Madrid Fault on near Dec. 2 was dismissed by scientists. But in some communities residents left town for the weekend, school districts canceled classes and police officials barred troopers from taking vacations that week.

He based the projection on unusually high tidal action.

The fault, running from Marked Tree, Ark., to southern Illinois, is capable of setting off major quakes in the early 1800s it rang church bells in Washington, D.C.

But nothing happened on Dec. 2.

Browning, 72, a science consultant for businesses, refused to be interviewed in Washington, appearing up twice on The Associated Press.

"No one is going to get a hold of me," Browning said from his Sandia Park home. "I'm not going to give any interviews at all."

Browning's wife, Florence, also said he wouldn't comment.

"It has not done any good in the past," she said.

Browning's daughter, Evelyn Garriss, had been speaking for him, but there was no answer at her home.

However, Mrs. Garriss said Tuesday in Missouri that tidal forces did not trigger a major quake in the New Madrid-Fault zone because—the quake wasn't located.

Mrs. Garriss, who spoke at the Missouri Governor's Conference on Agriculture in Osage Beach, Mo., said small earthquakes in the region during the fall apparently reduced the potential for a larger quake.

"Apparently everything that could be triggered didn't wait, so there was nothing there," she said.

None of the tremors caused any significant damage.

Browning's projection was dismissed in October by a group of scientists who evaluated it for the U.S. Geological Survey. They said it had no credibility and lacked scientific basis.

One Missouri scientist who was criticized because he refused to disassociate himself from Browning's projection has given up his job.

Dr. David Stewart said Tuesday he was stepping down as head of the Center for Earthquake Studies at Southeast Missouri State University to ensure that the criticism doesn't affect the center itself.

Pocatello officials back prison site

POCATELLO — Pocatello officials say they still like a site on Phillips Road west of the city for a new state women's prison, despite its environmental problems.

The state Department of Correction is looking for a site for a 160-bed women's prison, which is to include a 60-bed community work center. It will produce about 90 jobs and an estimated $2 million annual payroll.

Pocatello, which has been hit by economic setbacks in recent years, wants the facility and Board of Correction members said recently the community support is a major factor. The city offered three possible sites, but one is on a hillside, which would present construction problems, and another is too small, in a fairly dense light industrial area and sits atop an old auto wrecking yard.

LaRocco high on list for office choice

WASHINGTON — Democratic Rep. elect Larry LaRocco did not win the Megabucks in the congressional office lottery, but his ticket was not a throw-away, either.

LaRocco held ticket No. 13, giving him 13th choice out of a field of 42 new members of Congress who jockeyed for offices with the most space and best views.

Luck was with the man who helped spearhead Idaho's successful lottery campaign as he chose the office of Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., former chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

Located on the first floor of Capitol Hill's Longworth House Office building, LaRocco's new office has a view of a park with smokestacks in the background. LaRocco's office will be just down the hall from the new office of Rep. Richard Stallings, another Idaho Democrat.

Companies settle waste violation issues

BOISE — Two companies have agreed to pay a total of almost $6,000 to settle alleged hazardous waste violations cited by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Zilog, a computer chip manufacturer, has agreed to pay a fine of $3,950 to settle four violations cited by Health and Welfare, and American Trailer Manufacturing of Boise has agreed to pay $2,000 without admitting any violations.

Kerfoot top Gem school superintendent

BOISE — The Idaho School Superintendents' Association's board of directors has named the Fruitland School District's Ben Kerfoot its Idaho superintendent of the year.

The selection puts Kerfoot, who has been superintendent of Fruitland schools since 1968, in the running for the American Association of School Administrators national superintendent of the year award.

Firm has plan to clean up Silver Valley

COEUR D'ALENE — The mining companies held responsible for heavy metal contamination of Idaho's Silver Valley a decade ago have submitted a cleanup plan for cleaning up the pollution.

It was the first time all eight companies have agreed to work together to restore the Panhandle environment. John Meyer of the Environmental Protection Agency said, accelerating what is estimated to be a $120 million project on one of the nation's largest Superfund sites.

Coalition pushes dam management changes

BOISE (AP) — A new coalition of business, environmental and sportsman groups says it's going to work to change the way the Columbia and Snake rivers are managed, with the goal of protecting salmon.

Formation of the new Columbia-Snake Rivers Main-Stem Flow Coalition was announced at a Boise news conference on Thursday. Its goal is to force changes in federal-power dam operation to protect fish.

Coordinator Ed Cheney, Eagle, made it clear who should pay.

"He said it should be downstream utilities."

"They've enjoyed below-cost energy at the expense of fish for decades. Changes are going to have to be made."

"As beneficiaries of this welfare for all these years, it is appropriate that they bear a proportionate share of the cost," Cheney said.

"Basically, what we are going to do is call in some debts that have been owed for years," Cheney said.

Sportsman and environmental groups, some of which are involved in the new coalition, have requested endangered or threatened species protection for four strains of salmon that spawn in Idaho. Officials say the Idaho species are on the verge of extinction. Due to dwindling spawning runs, there has not been a general salmon season in Idaho since 1977.

The state on Wednesday released its response to those petitions, urging action to protect the fish instead of declaring them endangered species.

Gov. Cecil Andrus said the obvious answer is higher streamflows and higher water velocity at downstream federal dams, during the two months when fish are trying to get through the dams. But he said it should be a shared solution between Pacific Northwest states, because there isn't enough reservoir water in Idaho to do it.

The new coalition said in a news release it represents organizations with more than 30,000 members, although one speaker at the news conference said it was 40,000 members.

The coalition said the state Fish and Game Department estimates federal power dams on the Columbia and Snake are responsible for more than 90 percent of the deaths of man-killed migrating salmon. "The dams also annually kill millions of salmon and steelhead produced in Oregon and Washington," the coalition said.

Sheila Mills, an Idaho outfitter, said reestablishing salmon runs could be worth millions of dollars to outfitters and guides, because of the business they would bring in.

"There could be a reasonable solution if all sides could give a little," she said.

The coalition said its goals were:

- Expanding membership so it becomes "a major, grass-roots force in regional energy and fish policy-making."
- Implementing a regional information program to get people involved in the decisions.

Establishing regional advisory panels.

Preparing a business-like action plan to resolve the conflict between "the world's largest coordinated energy system (Bonneville Power Administration) and what once were the world's largest chinook-salmon and steelhead runs."

Coalition members include: The Wilderness Society, Southwest Washington Anglers, Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, Oregon Trout, Oregon Salmon Commission, Northwest Resource Information Center, Northwest Environmental Defense Center, Long Live the Kings, Idaho Wine Merchant, Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited and Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association.

Attorneys look at promoter of M.C. Hammer concert

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho attorney general's office is investigating whether the promoter of the M.C. Hammer concert knew well in advance the two opening acts advertised for the Boise shows would not appear at a state official's say.

"We're in the fact-finding process."

At the same time, private attorney Tom Malles said he is looking into a possible suit against the promoter, A.H. Inc., of Boston.

"There could be a viable class-action suit on behalf of the ticket holders," he said. "I'm reviewing the cause and the merits of a class action."

Rep. ART M.C. Hammer played at the Boise State University Pavilion on Monday and Tuesday. About 18,000 people bought tickets to the two shows, which were advertised as featuring En Vogue and Vanilla Ice.

But spokeswomen for both acts said En Vogue and Vanilla Ice were not contracted to play Boise, and that A.H. knew that, well before Monday.

Pavilion officials found out shortly before Monday's show that those two acts would be absent.

Fans were notified just prior to the show and given the chance to get a complete refund. Only about 400 people turned in $20 tickets at the two shows.

Hammer's act lasted 75 minutes. Pavilion administrative services manager George Manning would not say whether A.H. Inc. had collected the ticket receipts for the two concerts.

"We fulfilled our end of the contract," he said. "The only settling with the general public lies with A.H. We've taken ourselves out of the loop."

Food not the main task facing Gorbachev

By Bryan Brunley
The Associated Press

Analysis

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is asking the West, the KGB and the army to help solve his country's food shortages while he tackles the much tougher task of trying to keep the Soviet Union intact. All his efforts appear aimed at buying time through what promises to be a hard winter, and he has no guarantee of success.

Gorbachev got a boost this week from President Bush, who promised to back loans for the Kremlin to buy up to $1 billion in American farm products and $300 million in manufactured goods through June.

Other nations, fearing food riots that would jeopardize Gorbachev's reforms, also are rushing to help the Soviets.

At home, Gorbachev is trying both the carrot and the stick in his efforts to reassert central control over the nation's disintegrating political and economic structure. He says he will use force to prevent profiteering.

But neither threats nor force are likely to persuade the governments of the 15 republics to agree to his proposal that their economies remain under central control.

Both topics will be debated Monday when the national Congress of Peoples' Deputies convenes in the Kremlin for what promises to be a tumultuous session.

Conservative lawmakers are urging Gorbachev to declare a state of emergency, and he has partially obliged them by replacing the moderate interior minister with generals from the KGB and the army. Additionally, he has ordered the KGB, the army and the Interior Ministry to stop workers in the state distribution system from stealing food and selling it on the black market.

Deliveries of most food products are running from 13 to 24 percent below 1989 levels; according to figures released this week by the Council of Ministers, which blamed much of the drop on pilfering and profiteering.

Tough law enforcement is needed when "the old administrative system is being withdrawn and the new market is not in place to regulate supply and demand" and prices, KGB Maj. Gen. Alexander N. Karbainov told a news conference Thursday at the agency's Lubyanka headquarters.

He said the measures could last "six months, maybe a year," depending on the results.

The food shortages appears most acute in big Russian cities like Moscow and Leningrad, and much milder in the countryside and most of the 14 other republics. Times also seem lean in Armenia and Moldova, two republics beset by ethnic unrest.

To feed the cities, Gorbachev has announced that during the first three months of 1991, his government will spend 2.1 billion rubles ($3.57 billion) to import food.

Bottlenecks in ports and on-rail roads threaten to prevent that food from reaching the cities, however, say KGB and army officials mobilizing to solve the problem. Still, they pasture, threatening a vital ecosystem as well as the livelihood of rubber tappers.

He became a symbol of Brazil's poor and landless, and the trial in this Amazonian town near the Bolivian border has gripped this nation of 150 million people. His killing galvanized international efforts to save the rain forest.

The teen-age witness, Genecio Barbosa da Silva, was to take the stand late Thursday on the second day of the trial. The boy arrived in this remote jungle town Tuesday under escort by state troopers carrying submachine guns. He has been kept isolated in a back room of the tiny wooden courthouse guarded by a half-dozen heavily armed police.

say it is unlikely that people will starve.

"In this country, there is no such situation as we had in 1921, when there was famine," said Karbainov, referring to the Russian Civil War, in which millions died from lack of food.

Feeding the Soviet people this winter could be child's play compared to holding the Soviet Union together. All the republics, including the Russian Federation, have declared some form of economic and political autonomy.

In response, Gorbachev is proposing a Union Treaty that would form a new legal charter for the federation. His version would retain central control over defense and national security, as well as energy, transportation and other key industries.

Russian President Boris Yeltsin and 10 other republic leaders have agreed to join the treaty negotiations.

But they demand control of natural resources on their own soil, such as oil, natural gas and gold deposits in Russia; oil and coal of Kazakhstan; or rich wheat fields in the Ukraine.

The three Baltic republics of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia, plus Moldavia, which was part of Romania until World War II, have refused to join the talks. Gorbachev's chances of winning the republics' approval of his draft proposal appear slim.

And while it may be possible to send the KGB and the army to ports, rail yards and warehouses to frighten food-industry workers, it is quite another thing to use force simultaneously against 15 republics in various stages of rebellion.

"In the long range, we must stick to democratic methods," said Karbainov, the KGB general. "Say we cracked down, returned to the methods of the past. Then in 10 years, we'd right back where we started."

Albanian military to help with unrest

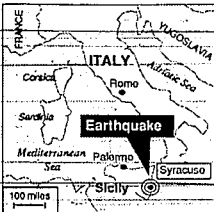

VIENNA, Austria — Communist Albania on Thursday ordered its soldiers to quell an attack on officials by buildings by "hooligans" armed with stones and iron bars, official media reported.

The attack in the northern city of Shkoder came one day after a peaceful rally by tens of thousands of people in the capital, Tirana, celebrating the founding of the country's first non-Communist party, the Democratic Party of Albania.

Journalists said Tirana remained calm Thursday.

Critical program Radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, said gangs were "throwing stones at the district party and government buildings, and committing acts of vandalism inside the local radio station." It said the district police chief, a policeman and one other person were hurt by people wielding iron bars.

Earthquake rumbles through Sicily

SYRACUSE, Sicily — A moderate earthquake shook eastern Sicily early Thursday, killing 18 people, panicking thousands and destroying part of a small town, officials said.

The disaster took the biggest toll in Carlini, a town of 10,000 people between Catania and Syracuse, where members of four families were killed when their homes crumbled on top of them as they slept.

The quake struck at about 1:30 a.m. (3:30 p.m. Wednesday MST) and registered 4.7 on the Richter scale, the Ministry of Civil Protection reported. It was followed by dozens of aftershocks during the day. "There was a huge roar all of a sudden. Everything shook," said Sebastiano Valvo, an employee at the Syracuse prefect's office. The bodies of 13 people were pulled from the rubble in Carlini. Five other people died of heart attacks, authorities said.

Soviet Army unloading stranded food

MOSCOW — The KGB said Thursday that thousands of tons of government-purchased food are stuck at ports and railway stations, and officials said the Red Army has been drafted to help unload foreign food aid.

Deputy Prime Minister Lev Voronin, who heads a government commission overseeing the aid distribution, warned that without measures "would be used against anyone caught diverting donated food to the black market."

KGB officials said more than 1.6 million metric tons of imported goods await unloading or shipment from Soviet ports, and about 7,000 railway cars need to be emptied at border stations.

Clash over elections kills 3 in Mexico

MEXICO CITY — Riot police and members of an opposition political party clashed in a town southeast of Mexico City, leaving at least three people dead and 50 injured, authorities said.

The clash on Wednesday followed four weeks of opposition protests that accused the long-governing Institutional Revolutionary Party of fraud in elections Nov. 11 in Mexico state.

Each side blamed the other for starting the disturbance, in which two of the three killed were police.

"I think this was planned by the state government to give us a violent image," Herberto Castillo, director of the left-leaning opposition Revolutionary Democratic Party, said in a telephone interview. Compiled from wire reports

ANC president welcomed home

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Oliver Tambo, president of the African National Congress, came home Thursday after 30 years in exile and was welcomed joyously by his supporters to a country far different from the one he left.

The arrival of the ailing Tambo brought the core of the ANC leadership together and free in South Africa for the first time since before the black opposition group was outlawed in April 1960.

His long-time ANC colleagues, Nelson Mandela and Walter Sisulu, both were freed from prison in the past 14 months as part of reforms that have eliminated major apartheid laws and led to talks with the white-ruled government. "The day for which we have all waited has come," Mandela told cheering supporters at an airport welcoming ceremony.

Shoppers in Moscow welcome U.S. economic aid with open arms

MOSCOW (AP) — Weary shoppers ending another day of scouring stores for food said Thursday they welcomed economic aid from the United States and did not feel ashamed, because it wasn't a hand-out.

"What humiliation?" said Nikolai Kropotov, as he bundled up against the chill of the Moscow night. "No one is humiliated."

The Bush administration has promised the Soviet Union up to $1 billion in loan guarantees to buy American wheat, corn and other farm products to stave off food shortages this winter.

"You are selling it quite fairly and we are buying it quite fairly," said Kropotov, 72. "There is no embarrassment."

As he adjusted a cloth sack to secure three loaves bought at Bread Store No. 159 in western Moscow, Kropotov said he was confident the food the Soviet government would buy from the United States would reach the people, despite the current problems in the nation's supply system.

Expressing similar confidence was Viktor Rozhkov, 55, who was waiting in the store while his wife bought bread.

"At present, I think the food will make it to the stores, what with the Interior Ministry, the KGB and the police all controlling its distribution," Rozhkov said.

He had some mixed feelings about the aid. "On the one hand, we need help, but on the other, you have to pay for any credit," Rozhkov said.

"If it was help simply free of charge, it would be humiliating," he said, "but as it's credit, it's not humiliating."

Asked what kind of goods he would like to see purchased with the loan guarantees, Rozhkov replied: "Basic food, canned goods, sausage, meat products. Nowadays, we have practically nothing."

Others questioned on the street said they would like to see more: ment, butter and milk in the stores.

"I want to see all those things (that were) freely available in the shops a year ago," said Muscovite Raisa L. Lebedinskaya.

"It is very good that our relationships are so close," she said of the current ties with the United States.

"If we receive the aid and make friends at such a difficult moment, that would be wonderful."

A 68-year-old woman who wanted to be identified only as Katya said the U.S. aid was only proper, because the Soviet Union had helped other nations for years.

"We have been helping other countries a lot, and that's why everything has disappeared," she said. "Why should we be embarrassed now? I don't think it's embarrassing."

'Nutcracker' returns after year away

By Julie Fanslow
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Three dozen Magic Valley children will take the stage with the American Festival Ballet's professional cast when "The Nutcracker" returns to Twin Falls next week.

After a year's absence from the holiday calendar, "The Nutcracker" has resumed its popular place among the season's festivities. Tickets for the ballet, set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the College of Southern Idaho, sold out early this month.

Audiences have thrilled to "The Nutcracker" for nearly a century. Peter Tchaikovsky received a commission for the work in 1891, and it was first presented a year later by the Russian Imperial Ballet in St. Petersburg.

Oddly enough, some early viewers of the ballet objected to the use of children. But, along with its familiar music, the presence of youngsters onstage is a big reason "The Nutcracker" remains such a hit.

The Boise-based American Festival Ballet has performed "The Nutcracker" more than 100 times. Local auditions for parts in this year's edition were held last month, and more than 75 kids tried out.

Of those, 36 received parts. They have practiced together with area dance teacher Beverly Jackson during the past month and will rehearse with the professional company next Wednesday and Thursday before the performance.

Playing the parts of Bon Bons will be

Magic Valley Chorale features holiday cantata

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS -- Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Hodie," a holiday cantata, will share the bill with a selection of favorite holiday songs when the Magic Valley Chorale presents its annual Christmas concert this weekend.

"Hodie," a celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ, was the last major choral work by Vaughan Williams. It was first performed in 1954.

Vaughan Williams was born in 1872, his father an Anglican priest and his mother a niece of Charles Darwin, the founder of evolutionary theory.

Throughout his career, Vaughan Williams was known for his adaptations of folk music. He wrote a wide variety of music, from symphonies to choral "works" to works for the stage. He died in 1958.

James Day, in his book about Vaughan Williams, noted the great cheer and vitality of "Hodie." "The solid rejoicing of the Prologue is the kind of music expected from a man of 22 rather than 82," he wrote.

Carson Wang will direct the choral presentation of "Hodie," and the singers will be accompanied by the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra and Phyllis Van Nest.

Four soloists also have been chosen for the work: baritone David Finsterler, soprano Martha Mead and Linda Stevenson; and tenor Jack Van Buren.

Concerts set for Saturday, Sunday

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS -- Magic Valley Chorale will perform its annual Christmas concert at 8 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium.

Admission will be $5 for adults and $3 for students or senior citizens. Tickets may be purchased from any chorale member, at Judi's Bookstore, 120 Main Ave. N., or at the door.

Finsterler has had lead roles in "Guys & Dolls" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat." He sang with ensembles from the University of Tampa in Florida and with the Tampa Chorale and Chamber Singers. He is now to the Magic Valley, having moved here in August.

Mead has played the lead roles in several Dilettante productions and has performed as soprano soloist in such works as "Carmine Burana," Mozart's "Requiem," "The Marriage of Figaro" and Handel's "Messiah." In addition to past solos with the Magic Valley Chorale, she has been a featured singer with the Sun Valley Symphony, the College of Idaho Chorale and the Boise Symphony.

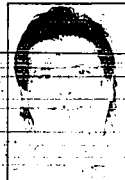

Stevenson was also soloist with the Magic Valley Chorale in its 1988 performance of "Messiah" and mezzo-soprano soloist in the 1989 presentation of Saint-Saens' "Christmas Oratorio." She has performed with the Lincoln County Players and the Northside Playhouse, plays second violin in the Magic Valley Symphony, and is choir director at First Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls.

Van Buren has performed tenor solos in Bach's "Magnificat," Haydn's "Creation," Mendelssohn's "Elijah," Mozart's "Requiem" and Handel's "Messiah." He also has worked with the Dilettantes and is a member of "Golden Moments," a well-known local vocal group. He teaches at Twin Falls High School.

After "Hodie," the concert will feature a collection of Christmas songs arranged by Ted Nichols. Nichols, along with Ralph Carmichael in the 1950s and went on to a career scoring such Hanna-Barbera cartoon classics as "The Flintstones" and "Scooby-Doo." Despite his Hollywood success, he continued to work as a church music director.

Nutcracker

Sarah Dean, Erin Lee Deitweiler, Shannon Lambeth, Kimberly Krall, Morgan Lovings, Megan Spitzer, Jessica Takac, Tiffany Venemo, Amber Wayment and Alisha Wayment, all of Twin Falls, as well as Beth Greenwood and Hillary Johnson of Jerome and Creola Wiggins of Arco.

Katie Williamson - of Buhl - and Kassie Hadley of Arco will play mice. Chosen to portray angels were Shanelle Barth, Rachel Bauer, Paula Hezlar, Kara Ann James, Alyson Krall, Meghann Lesley, Jessica Leachinger, Tiah Denise Stark, Allison Redman and Kirtin Boyd, all of Twin Falls; Kent Gott, Danielle Thomason - and Teresa Thomason, Jerome; Corny Huddleston and Diana C. Peterson, Buhl; and Heather Vawser, Gooding.

The children will be played by Anna Nicole Krueger, Heidi Leichter and Brady Martin, all of Twin Falls; Anna Gerrish, Filer, and Tamara Scott, Gooding.

The American Festival Ballet's cast, meanwhile, features Lisa Meade as Clara, Steve Kirby as the Nutcracker Prince and Rebecca Thomas as the Sugar Plum Fairy.

Ruth Turner, a Magic Valley Arts Council who helps coordinate the Arts on Tour season, notes that some people were disappointed at not being able to get tickets for the show.

"The odds that one ticket - a total of about 40 - was given to each local child who auditioned for the show was not selected. Each child paid $5 to try out, so the tickets were given as a good-will gesture."

In past years, there have often been two performances of "The Nutcracker" in Twin Falls.

"The only second show we could have done would have been a matinee performance," says Debra Paris, administrative assistant with the American Festival Ballet.

It was decided a second show wouldn't fire well since children will still be in school.

"There are 150 people out there that didn't get tickets; that doesn't pay for an extra performance," Turner says, but Arts on Tour officials are trying to find unused tickets for people who still need seats.

"This is a real good opportunity to say 'Next year, buy your season tickets,'" Turner adds. Arts on Tour season subscribers were guaranteed seats at "The Nutcracker."

Composer completes Mozart's unfinished requiem

TOKYO (AP) — An Austrian group has chosen a Japanese composer's arrangement of a requiem left unfinished by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart to mark the 200th anniversary of the composer's death, it was announced earlier in the week.

The International Stiftung Mozarteum, an organization devoted to Mozart research, chose Shigeki Saigusa's "Symphonic Concerto for Violin, Viola, Cello and Orchestra."

It is to be performed Dec. 5, 1991, the anniversary date.

Saigusa's composition is a completed version of Mozart's unfinished "Requiem Mass." Mozart was commissioned to write the work in the summer of 1791 but died before completing it.

One of his students, Franz Xaver Sussmayr, completed a version of the work after Mozart died later that year.

But, said Saigusa, "Sussmayr's version was written in a style too 'romantic' to suit Mozart's composition. ... The Stiftung Mozarteum asked me to write my own version."

"I tried to return to his state of mind," said Saigusa, one of Japan's foremost composers of classical music.

He said his composition will be recorded in May and released next August.

World War II music released

By Gregory Spears
Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Two things kept Clyde Bodin's spirits up through the cold, bitter fighting during the Battle of the Bulge: prayer and the songs that crackled over his Army-issue radio.

"We had it tuned to the BBC and Armed Forces Radio all the time. Just listening to the songs and tunes

... were good for our spirits," said Bodin, now 73 and a retired Army colonel living in Arlington, Va.

Many of the songs Bodin heard were big band and top vocalists who recorded for the military's V-DISC label (V as in Victory) for no pay, but with the promise that the music would never be played at home. A prolonged musician's strike had silenced the commercial recording industry during World War II.

Now some of the recordings, including Frank Sinatra's crooning and lilting Tommy Dorsey tunes, have been issued commercially here for the first time since they boosted the morale of troops overseas.

E.P. "Digi" DiGiannantonio, the Navy officer who recorded the songs in hotel ballrooms and movie sound stages, won permission from the American Federation of Musicians and the Pentagon to re-release some of the records intended to be heard overseas, then destroyed.

"We sent out approximately eight million records to every base, ship, hospital, and to the front lines throughout the world," DiGiannantonio recalled in a recent interview. "It brought music to them from their loved ones back home."

The military also sent 125,000 wind-up, victrolas equipped with steel needles to play the records.

Soldiers, sailors and Marines heard songs that became the signature sounds of the era: Glenn Miller's recordings of "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and "Little Brown Jug," "Stompin' at the Savoy" performed by Gene Krupa and Hoagy Carmichael's "Star Dust." "We went to Glenn Miller and said we need a popular song put in a march tempo," DiGiannantonio said. "And this resulted in the famous 'St. Louis Blues' number."

Fats Waller even recorded a song called "Bouncing on a V-DISC" for the program in 1943.

Fats never got warmed up unless he had a bottle of V-69, recalled DiGiannantonio, who said he plied Waller with the scotch during an all-night recording session at RCA studios in New York. Although Waller recorded 22 tunes, only nine were usable; the others were considered too risqué for young GIs' ears, DiGiannantonio said.

The first volume of V-DISC music is available at $24.95 for three cassette tapes or $29.95 for compact discs, which includes postage and handling. To order, send a check or money order to: V-DISC P.O. Box 6, Springfield, Va. 22150.

More book signings set for area

The Times-News

The holiday parade of authors continues this weekend, with several more book signings set around the Magic Valley.

Betty Penson-Ward, a former Twin Falls resident known for a half-century of work as an Idaho journalist, will be on hand from 1 to 3 p.m. today at Judi's Bookstore, 120 Main Ave. N., Twin Falls.

Penson-Ward's new book is "Idaho Women's History," just released at $19.95 in paperback by Legend Publishing of Boise.

"By the time a girl is old enough to read, she learns two Idaho histories — the one written by men and the one lived by women," Penson-Ward wrote in her introduction. "Idaho has been slow to collect its women's histories, except for those of a few prominent leaders and philanthropists."

Penson-Ward sets about to rectify the lack of women's history in the state, and she does so gleefully. Her stories span the state's history, from pioneer days to the present.

Among the women she writes of are Dr. Emma Drake, who wrote sex and marriage manuals in the 1920s and was elected to the Idaho Legislature; Annie Pike Greenwood will Jerome, who washed dishes in a previous inch of water; and Arma Jacobson Steele, who acted in silent movies, alongside Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton.

Boise author and Idaho Statesman columnist Tim Woodward will make two Saturday appearances on behalf of "Tiger on the Road: The Life of Vardis Fisher," published earlier this year by The Caxton Printers of Caldwell.

Woodward will be at Judi's Bookstore in Twin Falls from 12:30 to 2 p.m. and at the Hagerman Museum from 3 to 4 p.m. Fisher, a prolific Idaho author, lived in Hagerman from 1940 to his death in 1968.

Woodward's book received the Idaho Library Association's Book Award for the best book of the year about Idaho. It costs $14.95 in paperback and $19.95 in cloth cover.

Four local people featured first in Idaho Public Television's recent series on Idaho history and now in a companion book to the series will be on hand from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday at the Blue Lakes Mall.

Set to appear are writers Penelope Reedy and William Studebaker, both of Twin Falls; Gene Titmus of Jerome, featured in the book for making a Clovis point; and John Enns of Castleford, director of the Southern Idaho Family-Farm Hotline.

"Conversations," the book, will be available for sale and autographing at $19.95 in soft cover or $29.95 in hard cover.

Wife's premarital past haunts husband

DEAR ABBY: I have been reading your articles for a long time, but I've never seen a problem like mine.

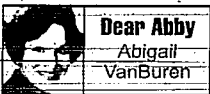

I've been married for 16 years. When I was married, I was 25 and my wife was 22. I was a virgin, but she wasn't. On our honeymoon she confessed that she had slept with four of her previous boyfriends. Now, every time we make love, I wonder who she's thinking of — and who she's comparing me with.

It also bothers me during the daytime when my co-workers talk about who's fooling around, because I wonder if they know about my wife's past.

Abby, please urge your readers to abstain from sex until marriage, because the most important gift a person can give is virginity. How do others deal with this? I have forgiven my wife, but I am still haunted by her past sins.

— STILL BOTHERED
DEAR BOTHERED: You can't rewrite history, so don't dwell on the past. Not to belittle the value of virginity, but one who is not able to give a spouse that very special gift is not necessarily a bad person. A far greater gift would be a lifetime of devotion.

DEAR ABBY: A reader wanted to

Dear Abby

know why joggers and runners run in the streets instead of on sidewalks. The reasons are varied: There may not be a sidewalk; the sidewalk may not be continuous; the sidewalk may be in poor repair; blocked by low branches, made hazardous by drivers who don't slow down when backing out of driveways, or be occupied by other pedestrians or small children playing. The sidewalk may be concrete, whereas the street may be asphalt — and therefore a softer surface upon which to run.

As for runners who run at night, these branches overhanging the sidewalks can be even more hazardous at night when they are obscured by the darkness than in the daytime when they are just an inconvenience.

If those who choose to run for aerobic exercise are to live in harmony with motorists, bicyclists and pedestrians, these suggestions should keep everyone safe and happy.

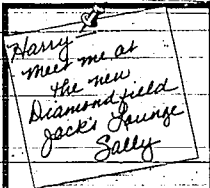

Runners should run on sidewalks or designated pathways whenever possible. They should always remember to wear bright or reflective pieces of clothing, always run on the left-hand side of the road in order to see oncoming traffic that's on the same side, always cross at corners and obey other traffic and pedestrian laws, and always carry identification.

— RUNNING SAFE IN DOWNER'S GROVE

DEAR RUNNING SAFE: Thank you for some useful tips for runners. According to the California Department of Motor Vehicles, walkers and joggers should always FACE oncoming traffic. Carrying identification is also important. A reader wrote to relate the tragedy of a loved one who was killed by a hit-and-run driver. And because he carried no identification, he remained unidentified until the bureau of missing persons located him in the county morgue.

'Home Alone' a funny Disney, Peckinpah mix

By Stephen Hunter
The Baltimore Sun

Review

Imagine Alfalfa starring in a Disney remake of that classic of psychotic-territoriality, Sam Peckinpah's ultraviolent "Straw Dogs," and you've got a fair approximation of "Home Alone."

In Peckinpah's bleak vision of the human condition, a mad liberator wimp hiding from reality on a Cornish farm finally freaked when some left burglars tried to break into his house: using everything from a bear trap to a shotgun to boiling water, he waged total war and snuffed them all.

In this version, a cute tyke played by Macaulay Culkin is accidentally left home over Christmas vacation, when the house is assailed by two less than brilliant thieves. But rather than play it for horror as the great Peckinpah did in his film, the writer-producer John Hughes and the director Chris Columbus play it for very mild suburban slapstick.

The movie has one sustained passage of brilliance that the previews and the TV ads make you think lasts an hour and a half; it lasts about 10 minutes. This is the assault itself, when the doubly moronic Joe Pesci and Daniel Stern walk into the clever and mean-spirited mesh of booby-traps the boy has sprung on them. Columbus keeps it a long way from horror, believe me. The humor is of the prattful variety, clearly inspired by the wun doubletakes in the face destruction pioneered by that great one-man self-demolition derby, Wile E. Coyote. Columbus loves to watch the dumb look of hopeless recognition that falls across the eyes of each of the victims before they get elbowed.

In this, there is an unsettlingly mean current running through it. The injuries aren't just the usual Willie-thumps-Willie of the movies; instead, they've been conceived for maximum sense of squeamishness. Feet are involved frequently, and one scene where the barefoot Daniel Stern plants his sole on a strategically emplaced roofing nail may have you cringing from the knees upward. But it's still quite funny. Columbus has put his stunts together neatly and Stern and Pesci manage to be threatening enough to enable you to enjoy their tumbling without being threatening enough to scare you.

They're housebreakers as clowns and never for a second do you believe they could or would slay the child; thus the whole drama plays in a kind of enchanted forest zone. And Culkin is a major find. He was one of the children-in-Hughes's "Uncle Buck" of last year, here promoted to major movie star. He's wonderful. He doesn't possess a shred of that horrid professional child actor's aplomb; he doesn't act like a 43-year-old tax accountant or a little Ethel Merman ready to belch out. He's all boy, vulnerable, captivating and exceptionally charming.

Also, the movie around him is not captivating or exceptionally charming — but it is vulnerable. It takes some doing to set up a scenario in which parents would forget one of their children, and "Home Alone" labors mightily. For the record, here's the gag: The McCallisters, a prosperous and large suburban Chicago family, are heading to Paris over Christmas vacation; one of dad's brothers with his large, prosperous family, is staying with them and will be making the flight on the night before the whole tribe four adults, fifteen kids — is to leave for the airport, a power shortage knocks out the alarm clocks. Everybody oversleeps. In the chaos of the last-second rush, no one remembers that the bad boy Kevin has been ordered to sleep in the attic as a disciplinary measure. It's marginally believable. What is wholly unbelievable is the contempt with which Kevin is treated by brother and sister, parent and uncle. If my brother called my son a "jerk" for accidentally spilling some milk on some pizza, I'd kick him out of the house in less than three seconds; in this big, unreal family circus, it's standard operating procedure.

Moving on, the movie's other half — chronicling the guilty parents' discovery and mom Catherine O'Hara's desperate attempt to return home — is dead on arrival. Dead as in not funny, not illuminating, not interesting, not ironic. Just dead. When the wasted O'Hara ends up riding in the back of a truck with a polka band fronted by avuncular John Candy, it's still dead. Nothing to laugh, no interest, boring time waste.

But those glorious 10 minutes — how they sing!

Kevin McCallister (Macaulay Culkin) defends his home against a pair of bumbling burglars while his family flies off on vacation.

10-year-old says film's success is 'pretty cool'

By Steven Rea
Knight-Ridder News Service

The star of one of the season's biggest box-office smashes is on the phone, conveying much happiness over his movie's near record-breaking opening weekend revenues. From Friday, Nov. 16, through Sunday, the 10th, the film made $17.1 million on some 1,200 screens — drubbing Sly Stallone's heavyweight favorite, "Rocky V," in the process.

Pakula's family drama "See You in the Morning" and John Hughes' filial farce, "Uncle Buck."

The blond Culkin also had a role in this fall's dark, hellish "Jacob's Ladder," playing Vietnam vet Tim Robbins' son. He has seen the R-rated movie — an intense, hallucinatory drama rife with images of demons and devils — and is not sure what to make of it.

"Yeah, it's pretty cool," says Macaulay Culkin, who knows big numbers when he sees them. You see, math is one of my favorite subjects."

Culkin, an elfish 10-year-old Manhattanite, is the central character in the latest John Hughes comedy rump, "Home Alone" — a sort of pre-pubescent "Straw Dogs" in which grade-schooler Kevin McCallister must defend his family's lavish suburban Chicago house against two numbskull burglars. Mom, Dad and a brood of snotty siblings have inadvertently flown off to Paris without him.

"Kind of weird," he offers. The diminutive thespian has worked the TV medium too, appearing in commercials (Apple Computers, Dr. Pepper), luxury ABC "Afternoon Specials" and a guest spot on "The Equalizer." All this, and school. "I keep up on everything," he says. "Math, science and gym are my favorite subjects. We do relay races in sports. I'm pretty fast..." And when he's out of class, working on a film, he has a tutor.

Was this role something he could bring personal experience to? Was he ever abandoned by his own parents — and his six brothers and sisters?

"No," Culkin says, explaining that he's been left alone "on purpose" a couple of times when his mom has had to do some quick shopping down at the corner store.

What did he make of some of the reviews, which panned the movie for its surfeit of cartoon violence (Culkin gorges Joe Pesci and Daniel Stern get trotted and feathered, bonked on the head, scalded with a clothes-iron, and cut with ground-up Christmas ornaments)?

"It didn't bother me," he reports. "It's funny farm violence. Fun and violence — what a combination!"

Culkin, a fifth grader at St. Joseph's School on New York's upper-side, is a stranger to Hollywood — although "Home Alone" marks the young actor's first starring role. He made his screen-debut playing one of Burt Lancaster's grandchildren in 1987's "Rocket Gibraltar." Last year, he appeared in Alan

Variety kidding about Japanese headline

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD Variety, the show-biz weekly, was "kidding a bit" with last week's splashy, Page 1 headline — written in Japanese characters. So says editor Peter Bart, who translates the headline: "Buyer Beware" — a reference to the recent purchase of MCA Inc. by the Osaka-based electronics company Matsushita.

Bart and executive editor Caroline Miller got the idea when they heard a reporter say she had dreamed that Variety, itself a subsidiary of a British company, was published all in Japanese.

Kiam consults lawyer about moving team

BOSTON — New England Patriots owner Victor Kiam, realizing his team's financial problems were not getting better, met three weeks ago with noted attorney Joseph Alito to discuss, among other things, the mechanics of moving a football team and the possibility of moving to Sacramento.

Kiam has not made his decision to move or sell the team, and he reportedly told Alito that he did not want to move the team out of New England but had to look at all options to move he had to do so.

Bob Romano, the Patriots' director of finance, Thursday denied any move to Sacramento. "I can categorically say that there have been no discussions by Victor or anybody representing Victor with a representative of Sacramento," Romano said. But two or three years down the road, moving or selling are options he will have to consider. Fellow owners were told in Dallas this past week at an NFL meeting (Kiam was not present because he was in Japan on business) that Kiam plans to meet with Massachusetts Gov.-elect William Weld soon to tell him the Patriots need a new stadium or they could be on the road.

Minor leagues OK 7-year contract with major leagues

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The minor leagues approved a seven-year contract with the major leagues by a 27-9 vote on Thursday.

The vote by the National Association of the Professional Baseball Leagues, the minor league governing body, was exactly the 75 percent minimum required for approval by the major league owners' ratified the Professional Baseball Agreement on Tuesday.

"The majors and the minors must work together to ensure the best, and most orderly, system of developing talent for big league play," National Association president Sal Antigna said. "Our vote is an endorsement of that view of a relationship that dates back to the turn of the century." On the other hand, many of our teams have told me they are still deeply concerned about the bargaining process.

Holtz reported looking hard at NFL spots

PHILADELPHIA — Despite his demerits, Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz has intensified his interest in head coaching positions with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and the Minnesota Vikings, according to a published report.

Columnist Paul Donowitch of the Philadelphia Daily News on Thursday quoted sources as saying the impetus for Holtz's job hunt is the NCAA's 2½-year investigation of the University of Minnesota, where Holtz coached in 1984 and 1985.

The Associated Press

findings to the school this week. A university spokesman told the newspaper Minnesota would make an announcement Friday.

However, a woman contacted at the Minnesota athletic department told The Associated Press on Thursday night that the report had not been received by late Thursday afternoon.

No news conference had been scheduled, she said.

The NCAA investigation focused on reports of payments to Minnesota athletes, including about a dozen football players, by Luther Durlive, the former athletic department administrator.

Darville was convicted in November 1989 of stealing almost $200,000 of university funds and giving it to athletes.

Holtz was implicated by a former school academic adviser, who said the coach once gave him money to give to a player.

Holtz is in the final year of his contract at Notre Dame.

He denied Wednesday that he is "looking to leave" the school.

But Donowitch speculated that Notre Dame probably would not want Holtz if he is tainted by the investigation.

Sources told Donowitch that Holtz has an intermediary in contact with both the Tampa Bay and Minnesota franchises about his interest.

The Tampa job became vacant two weeks ago when Ray Perkins was fired. Vikings coach Jerry Burns has hinted he will retire at the end of the season.

Bench leads Hawks to win over New Jersey

ATLANTA — Moses Malone and Sidney Moncrief came off the bench with 8 points each in the final quarter as the Atlanta Hawks pulled away to down the New Jersey Nets 106-97 Thursday night.

The Hawks, beating the Nets for the 13th time in a row at home, led 79-76 early in the fourth quarter when Moncrief started a 20-8 run that ended on his layup for a 99-84 lead with 4:50 to play. Malone had his 8 points and 5 rebounds during that surge and Moncrief also had two other driving layups.

Dominique Wilkins led the Hawks with 23 points and Kevin Willis added 18. Malone finished with 11, Moncrief with 11. Mookie Blaylock led the Nets with 22 points and Jack Haley added 17.

The Hawks, winning their third straight and fifth in six games, never trailed. Atlanta built an 11-point lead late in the first half before the Nets rallied for a tie at 60 on a driving layup by Blaylock.

Spud Webb then scored 5 of his 16 points in a two-minute span that built a 75-66 lead. The Nets got no closer than 79-76 on Reggie Theus' basket just before Moncrief and Malone led the decisive fourth-quarter run.

Knicks 87, Timberwolves 76

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Patrick Ewing and Charles Oakley dominated in the second half as the New York Knicks beat the Minnesota Timberwolves 87-76 Thursday night.

Ewing had 31 points and 15 rebounds and Oakley added 13 points and 17 rebounds as New York won its second straight game after an 0-3 start under new coach John MacLeod. Despite committing a season-high 27 turnovers, the Knicks snapped a five-game road losing streak.

New York built a 15-point third-quarter lead, then Ewing and Barkley sparked a 12-3 fourth-quarter run after the Timberwolves had pulled close.

Ewing scored 11 points as New York outscored Minnesota 13-5 over the final 5:02 of the second quarter for a 43-35 halftime lead. Ewing, averaging 30.3 points on 61.2 percent shooting in leading the Knicks in scoring the last six games, didn't score again until a 28 remained in the third quarter.

But Oakley had things under control with 11 points during a 19-12 spurt that gave the Knicks a 62-47 lead.

Paul Richardson almost singlehandedly rallied the Timberwolves, scoring 13 of his 22 points during a 15-2 run that cut New York's lead to 64-62 early in the final period.

Oakley then scored on a rebound and made two free throws and Ewing hit a short jumper, giving the Knicks a 70-62 lead. At free Minnesota's Tony Campbell made a free throw and Richardson hit a jumper, Gerald Wilkins, Ewing and Brian Quinnett each made a basket for a 76-65 lead and Minnesota never pulled closer than 9 points.

Sacramento 100, Portland 88
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Finally, they acted like Kings.

Sacramento, which is 4-15, the worst team in the NBA, handed Portland, the league's most successful team, its first road win, giving the Kings a 70-62 lead. At Kings held the high-powered Trail Blazers to their lowest point total Thursday night in a 100-88 victory.

Twenty points by Antoine Carr, 18 from Wayne Tinsdale and 16 by Anthony Bonner helped Sacramento come back from a 19-point deficit.

"Go ahead and say it," Tinsdale said. "The worst team in the NBA beat the best team in the NBA. We've been coming back on a lot of good teams lately."

"When we saw the look on their faces, we kept going. And when we saw the look in their eyes, we took it to them."

Detmer adds Maxwell to awards pile

PHILADELPHIA — As the awards pile up for Ty Detmer so do the stories about him.

The Maxwell Award was the BYU quarterback's latest piece of hardware and former college and NFL coach Dick Vermeil told the one about Detmer refusing to be turned down by the future school.

Vermeil conducted a telephone news conference with Detmer, the junior who has broken 42 NCAA passing and total offense records.

It is fairly well-known that Detmer, accompanied by his father, made an unscheduled visit to the Brigham Young campus to see coach LaVell Edwards when he was deciding which college to attend.

Vermeil said that what isn't generally known is that after the slim youngster told

Edwards that he wanted to go to Brigham Young, the coach and his staff weren't sure they wanted him.

"They weren't impressed with this scrawny, little guy," Vermeil said.

Vermeil said Edwards suggested to Detmer: "Go visit UCLA and Southern California and some other schools. Then make up your mind."

But Detmer rejected the suggestion and according to Vermeil told Edwards, "I've decided. I'm coming here."

"They were stuck with him," Vermeil said. "And look what happened."

Detmer, who was honored on Dec. 6 with the Heisman Trophy as the year's outstanding college player, beat the same competitor for the Maxwell Award.

In a vote of 878 coaches, members of the media and fans, Detmer finished with 1,993 points to 1,485 for Notre-Dame running back Raghib "Rocket" Ismail.

Colorado running back Eric Biemchy had 747 and Virginia quarterback Shawn Moore 431.

Detmer was named on 830 ballots and received 47 percent of the first-place ballots in the 3-2-1 voting.

Ballots are sent to members of the American Football Coaches Association, the Football Writers Association of America and the nearly 1,000 members of the Maxwell Football Club.

Detmer repeated his intention to return to Brigham Young for his senior year and let the NFL wait until after he graduates.

"First of all I made a commitment to the school and I believe in living up to that," Detmer said. "I'm just enjoying school right now. I don't think I'm ready to go on my own yet. There is no reason for me to leave right now."

Less is more for offenses this NFL year

BARTFORD, Conn. — The Buffalo Bills scoured the Philadelphia Eagles two weeks ago with three touchdown passes in the first quarter. Although they technically covered a total of 123 yards, Jim Kelly's throws probably traveled only 25 yards.

BSU concerned about Big Sky change

BOISE — A new Big Sky Conference policy regulating television rights could cost Boise State University thousands of dollars, athletic director Gene Bleyniaer contends.

But Big Sky Commissioner Ron Stephenson said the decision, which gives the league office control of live-television rights, actually for the equitable distribution of revenue from televised games, should benefit all nine schools.

The Big Sky athletic directors, at the league's annual fall meeting last week in Reno, voted 6-3 in favor of the measure. Bleyniaer voted against it. "Boise State is in the best position the most, so we stand to lose the most," he said. "We stand the potential of losing a lot of money."

But whether for or against the proposal, the parties involved agreed it is too early to know what impact it will have financially.

They also said the viewers will not notice much of a change.

"Basically, I don't think the average person on the street will notice the change at all," Stephenson said. "You might not see one television station doing all Boise State games back here, it might be one station would pick and choose on certain games."

The new policy means the league's newly formed television committee, not individual schools, will negotiate with stations for TV rights over current contracts expiring. The revenue from the broadcasts will be distributed to each school on an equitable basis," Stephenson said.

So once BSU's lucrative contract with KTVB-Channel 7 in Boise expires in 1995, the school no longer will have any say over who televises its games.

"I'm not exactly sure what's going to happen," KTVB sports director Larry Muehlen said.

"We would certainly plan to bid on the games."

I think (some schools) are trying to get money from other schools because they know they're not making any money," said Bleyniaer, who will join Idaho athletic director Gary Hunter and Montana State's Doug Fullerton on the TV committee.

Analysis

When New York Giants' quarterbacks Phil Simms and Jeff Hostetler sit around and watch game films, they laugh. "We just dump it to (running back David) Meacham and (wide receiver Hampton and let them do the rest," Simms says. "They make it so easy."

In San Francisco's 15th quarter, back Joe Montana may be having the best season of his career, yet he is averaging more than 1 yard less for each pass attempt than he did last season.

The Chicago Bears threw 25 interceptions last season, but Jim Harbaugh's total-through-13 games this season is six. Running backs are the team's two leading receivers.

All four teams — Buffalo, San Francisco, Chicago and the Giants — restricted their passing games this season. Those four teams, not coincidence.

Spartans need buzzer-beater for win

CINCINNATI (AP) — Steve Smith scored 34 points and converted an offensive rebound at the buzzer to give No. 21 Michigan State 65-63 victory Thursday night over Cincinnati.

Smith rallied Michigan State (3-2) from a 15-point halftime deficit by hitting four 3-pointers and scoring all of the Spartans' final nine points. Cincinnati (2-3) had led the entire game and Smith's layup brought Michigan State within 62-61 with 2:34 left.

Smith hit a 13-foot jumper to tie it 63-63 with four seconds left. Mark Montgomery stole an in-bounds pass and missed a 3-pointer, but Smith was in position to follow the miss with a layup at the buzzer.

The officials huddled for a few seconds before deciding Smith's shot counted.

Michigan State University's Matt Stoltenga, 35, and University of Cincinnati's Levertis Robinson fight for the ball.

Smith, the Spartans' leading scorer with a 27-point average and the main interest of the 19 NBA scouts in attendance, had trouble getting the ball. As a result, Michigan State never got closer than 23-16 the rest of the half.

Cincinnati came up with three steals in a 10-0 run over a 2-minute span that gave the Bearcats their biggest lead, 36-18, with 3:27 left in the half. Louis Banks completed the run with two free throws — two of his 16 first-half points.

Cincinnati had dominated the first half and took a 40-25 lead at halftime. Then Smith took charge.

Cincinnati opened the game with its customary half-court trapping defense, and found no need to switch. Michigan State fell into the trap by forcing passes and failing to find the open man.

The Spartans turned the ball over 12 times in the first half and Cincinnati had seven steals, most of them off forced passes inside.

A 3-pointer by center Keith Starke was his first attempt from that distance this season — sparked a 15-4 run that put Cincinnati ahead 23-10 midway through the first half.

Smith's fifth 3-pointer got it down to 62-59 with 3:19 remaining, and his layup 45 seconds later cut the lead to one point.

Michigan State missed four shots with a chance to take the lead, and Allen Jackson sank one free throw, with 27 seconds left for the Bearcats' 63-61 lead.

Utah St. 77, Weber St. 62

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Rich Jardine scored 19 points in leading the Utah State University Aggies to their first win of the season 77-62 over visiting Weber State Thursday night.

Kendall Youngblood added 15 points, including 11 in the first half, for the Aggies (1-4) of the Big West.

Weber State (2-3) of the Big Sky Conference got 14 points from David Baldwin and 13 from Aaron Jardine scored 13 points in the second half on 4-of-5 shooting from the field and 4-of-5 at the free-throw line.

USU scored the last 5 points of the first half to take a 38-31 lead at intermission, and hit 57 percent from the field in the second half compared to the Wildcats' 40 percent.

Leading 62-56 with 3:59 to play, USU went on a 13-0 run with Jardine scoring 5 points.

Weber State failed to score a field goal in the last 10 minutes and trailed 75-50 with 1:19 to play.

Jim DeGraffeneder scored two 3-pointers for the Wildcats for the final baskets of the game.

Defense helps Cardinals rebound from Indiana loss

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — It had to be one of the longest one-game losing streaks of the season.

With 11 days between defeat and victory came the usual chatter that Louisville was in for a rebound year under coach Denny Crum.

How else to explain a 72-52 loss to nationally ranked Indiana in the Big Four Classic at Indianapolis on Dec. 12? The consensus was that these Cardinals just didn't have the talent to compete.

A lot of people were getting down on us, guard James Brewer said. "We've known that from the talk on the streets and stuff."

On Wednesday night in Freedom

Hall, Louisville demolished DePaul 94-75 and looked like the Cards of old with their trapping defense forcing numerous turnovers.

"People are just so up and down," forward Erick Sullivan said. "You got your loyal fans, but you're not the fans who always want to be the coach and you can't listen to them."

Louisville's record speaks for itself. The Cardinals hold the NCAA record of 46 consecutive winning seasons.

Crum's 20-year record is 464-156, including six trips to the Final Four and national championships in 1980 and 1986.

So Crum knows not to judge a

Louisville season by one game.

"You can't take a bunch of rookies and guys that haven't played much and put them in a 40,000-seat arena and put them against a team like Indiana and expect them to play like Indiana," he said. "If the kids could do that, why, that would be amazing. They played about like I expected they would play. They didn't play as well as I hoped, but they played like I thought they probably would."

The players weren't overly concerned about their outing against the Hoosiers.

"That first game was a learning experience for us," Sullivan said. "We lost it but we're going to

UCLA in finals for volleyball

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Coming into the final Four of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's women's volleyball championships, UCLA felt it had something to prove.

In the previous two years, the Bruins had reached the national semifinals but lost in three straight games each time.

"This year, part of the scenario was the same, as UCLA went into Thursday night's semifinals at Cole Field House with a record of 34-1 and again ranked No. 1.

The outcome was the opposite, however, as the talented team started slowly, then picked up the tempo in rushing past Louisiana State University 15-13, 15-10, 15-6.

The victory, achieved before a crowd of 4,273, boosted the Bruins' ranking to No. 1, only to go out at the winning streak to 32 and raised their record to 35-1, leaving lost only to Nebraska in a Hawaii tournament in early September. The loss left LSU at 34-7.

UCLA moved to Saturday night's championship game against No. 5-ranked University of the Pacific (40-6). The two-time champions from Stockton, Calif., shut down second-ranked Nebraska, 15-13, 11-15, 15-9, 15-12.

Roseanne Barr, John Goodman

Still the big hit

'Roseanne' still on top, but silver lining has unpleasant cloud hovering nearby

By Frank Smello

For Roseanne Barr, the star of ABC's top-rated, Tuesday-night sitcom, it is the best of times and the worst of times.

"Roseanne" consistently hovers in the Olympian heights of the Nielsen Top 3. Her take is $100,000 per episode. When the show goes into syndication in 1992, it's estimated that she will earn $30 million more. She's so crazy about her new husband, comic Tom Arnold, that they can hardly keep their hands off each other when they are being interviewed. Arnold and Barr recently signed a lucrative production deal with ABC. They have a place at the beach in Malibu and a $4 million Tudor mansion in Brentwood.

But every silver lining comes with an unpleasant cloud, and Barr's cloud is more like a hurricane. Even the president of the United States took time out from the Persian Gulf crisis to condemn her singing talent on national television after she screeched her way through the national anthem at a San Diego Padres game. Barr's ex-husband is suing her for $15 million.

Her ex-manager wants another $15 million. She is currently estranged from her sister Geraldine, even though they were once so close that Barr started to weep while discussing the support that she got from her sister on a Barbara Walters special. Her husband is a recovering cocaine addict. And both of her daughters have been hospitalized — one for alcohol abuse and the other for psychological problems.

Yet, "I'm happier than I've ever been," Barr says in her production office in the San Fernando Valley.

Arnold agrees. "We have fun 24 hours a day."

Amid all this gooey sentiment, Barr quickly returns to her famous prickly persona when asked about all the touching and fondling that goes on in their interviews. "It's sickening; it's gross, but it's fun," she says. "If I saw anybody else carrying on like us, I'd throw up!"

Arnold adds, "No one else likes either one of us, so it's lucky we're so crazy about each other."

Arnold may not be exaggerating much. Barr's ex-husband is suing him for $3 million for causing the breakup of their marriage. At the beginning of the season, ABC executives were furious with Arnold, whom they blamed for "Roseanne"'s slippage in the ratings. (Since then, the show has climbed back near the top.)

Barr immediately defends her man. "Anybody who knows anything knows why the ratings dipped earlier this year," she says. "The other networks threw Jackie Collins and Danielle Steel and first-run movies up against us. They threw millions of dollars against us to knock us off the air. And it didn't work. Now that the special counter-programming is over, we're back on top."

Barr is even more optimistic about the future. When "Roseanne" finally goes off the air, she says she wants to direct, write and star in films.

ON THE COVER: Roseanne Barr and John Goodman star in "Roseanne." The hit ABC series airs Tuesdays.

Brando writing truth as catharsis

Q: With all his problems, why is Marlon Brando so intent on writing a book about himself? — U.G.

A: A good question. Brando is, after all, a major Hollywood personality and actor whose career spans four decades. Yes, he is distraught about the tragedies involving his son and daughter.

One longtime psychological catharsis is to write it down truthfully. Marlon says he will do that in his upcoming autobiography. No question that money is a factor, as well. Brando is being paid a bundle. But, I suspect the psychological imperatives of the venture are now more compelling.

Q: We hear that George Hamilton

Money is a factor has finally decided to give up his tan and let his hair go gray. What's going on? — B.S.

A: Hold on a minute. Yes, it's true that for a time — and what a grueling time it was — the perennially tan Hamilton was bereft of his facial color and his slick black hair. But it was strictly in the line of duty: Hamilton plays a sleazy movie lawyer.

in the upcoming "The Godfather, Part III" movie. The part called for a pallid complexion and white hair. George dutifully complied, shelved the sunlamp and let the dyeing go forward. That was a while ago. My L.A. spy spotted Hamilton in a Hollywood restaurant recently, and his hair was white only at the temples and his face was, again, radiantly tanned.

Q: Is Frances Bergen, Candice's mother, a professional actress? I recently saw "Eating" and she was outstanding in the film. — E.Z.

A: After spending a lifetime being known first as Edgar's wife (ventriloquist Edgar Bergen) and more recently as Candice's mother, Frances has at last been given the opportunity to display the acting and singing talent she had originally hoped would provide a career for herself. Off to a promising start, the great beauty was sidetracked at age 20 when she married Bergen and for the most part abandoned her own career plans. Over the years she has worked occasionally, most recently appearing on her daughter's hit television series "Murphy Brown."

Q: Has Anjelica Huston now taken to publicly criticizing Jack Nicholson? I wouldn't blame her since he jilted her for a younger woman with whom he had a child.

A: On the contrary! During a recent press junket for Huston's new film, "The Grifters," members of the press were cautioned not to bring up the subject of Nicholson when interviewing Huston. Quite unexpectedly, Huston herself volunteered information about the relationship and offered only the nicest comments about how much Nicholson had helped her in all areas of her life. Those hardened members of the press were shocked and surprised.

Q: We're big fans of Alan Rachins, the actor who plays attorney Douglas Brackman on "L.A. Law." Can you tell us something about him? — O.P.

A: The 48-year-old Rachins, a Massachusetts native, has done a lot of TV and stage work over a fairly lengthy career.

He's been married for the last 13 years to Joanna Frank; the couple has an 8-year-old son, Robbie. Alan is a fairly quiet fellow. When people first meet him, they think he's reserved. His personal heroes are James Dean and Lenny Bruce. If he could change anything about himself, Alan says he'd be "less anxious."

Q: The late Mary Martin is often credited with originating the role of Peter Pan. Is this claim accurate? — W.F.

A: Though frequently printed, it's totally wrong. The first famous actress to play Peter Pan, the boy who never grows up, was Maude Adams, who played the role back in 1905. Other well-known actresses who've flown through the part are Jean Arthur and Sandy Duncan.

For a while, rumors were flying that Michael Jackson saw himself in the part, but that hasn't come to fruition.

Q: What's this about Frank Sinatra lowering himself to do TV commercials? — J.M.

A: Sinatra is indeed making several TV commercials. But they won't be seen in the U.S. In fact, the only country where they will be aired on the tube is in Japan. The Japanese pay mucho bucks to big-time American celebrities — Paul Newman, Eddie Murphy, even Woody Allen and director Francis Coppola — to push products on TV in Japan only.

The celebrities maintain their professional image back home but collect lots of loot from the Japanese. Sinatra is the latest big name to take part — on behalf of a Japanese airline. As my Hollywood wag puts it,

Anjelica Huston
Nice words for Jack

the Japanese have always had a yen for Sinatra.

Q: Since Joanne Woodward makes her home (with husband Paul Newman) in Connecticut, does she keep up with the film industry by seeing most of the new movies? — H.O.

A: Woodward avoids most of the films coming out of Hollywood, preferring instead the more obscure and less commercial art films, such as the dark and tragic film, "The Music Teacher," which is one of her favorites. She admits that when she recently screened a video of "When Harry Met Sally..." she loved it.

Q: Is Bruce Willis really making a movie with a female porno star? — B.L.

A: A co-star in Bruce's latest flick is a Dutch-born actress by the name of Maruschka Detmers. She is slim, very attractive, and has performed in the altogether in several flicks. But these were art movies, often the work of world-class directors. No triple-X's, thank you. But one movie, a 1986 remake of the classic French film, "Devil in the Flesh," caused a stir.

In it, Detmers appeared to perform an oral sex act with her co-star. The co-star was not repeat — not Bruce Willis, who remains happily married to his now blond wife, Demi Moore.

Williams is taking it easy for a while

By John N. Goodas

It's holiday season, the only time of year the soaps go dark for two weeks. Forfeiting summer vacations, Christmas is the one chance the well-paid performers have for taking it easy and forgetting the trials and tribulations that plague their harried characters.

A fellow with TV's highest daytime TV-Q, meaning his audience appeal according to research, is Doug Davidson on "The Young and the Restless." For 13 years he has played the character Paul Williams and now he's at home playing with 11-month-old daughter Calyssa Rae, giving wife Cindy a break.

After almost a year-long storyline about murder, Davidson's Paul Williams has had an easy summer and fall.

The soap's top gun with fans dawdles with Cassandra, once his love and a murder suspect, but producer Bill Bell is clearly giving his ace a breather, careful not to overdo a good thing. The long haul counts and the show, still on top, doesn't miss a ratings beat. Unable to make headway against "Y & R," NBC cancelled "Generations." Bucking "Restless" was not a wise move for a beginner.

Yet kingpin of soaps "Restless" is continually ignored in the Daytime Emmy Awards. "Santa Barbara" collects Emmys like grapes, only to be drubbed daily, competing with "General Hospital."

"Our feelings are hurt," Doug Davidson admits. "We would like Emmy recognition." Davidson takes solace in the Emmy method of selecting winners. "The judges look at one or two scenes. That's hardly a clue to a year's work. I mean, I've seen 'Santa Barbara,' and watched some good episodes and some terrible ones. They're very uneven. But I don't worry much about it. The Emmys are a tough call."

Asked about the power that goes with being selected "Outstanding Hero" for 1990 by a soap magazine, and for the top TV-Q ranking, Davidson just laughs.

"It sounds great, but I don't know what it all means. In this town you can overestimate your own importance. I've been here 11 or 13 seasons depending on how you count some time off in '77 and '79, and I don't want to spoil things. I've had a good relationship with Bill Bell, and I intend to hang around. As for prime time, I don't know. Daytime is its own entity. The rules change when you move."

Doug Davidson, Paul Williams on "The Young and the Restless," has been involved in a long storyline about murder.

Perhaps being a father makes you think differently, but Doug Davidson isn't about to throw his weight around because of the TV-Q. Not during these uneasy times at CBS where management pressure to cut costs have the workers expecting the worse.

The good old days of riding high at CBS, when management and the work force were almost buddies, is long gone. CBS is not a happy place these days. You can smell it on stages and in offices. Another gift from a corporate takeover.

"We're in the black," says Doug. "So far, it's been hands-off. Columbia's two Bill Bell productions (the other is "The Bold and The Beautiful"). But who can say what's around the corner? Right now, I'm enjoying my baby daughter."

Spielberg's presence in the editing room where director Francis Coppola is rushing to ready "The Godfather, Part III" for release this month.

Q: Is it true that Lauren Bacall's sexy, low voice that has become such an identifiable part of her personality was originally much higher? — V.A.

A: Friends who recall Bacall as an ambitious young actress studying at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York, claim her vocal register was far higher than it is today.

When Lauren (then Betty) Bacall first met Howard Hawks, the famed producer/director who had her flown to the coast, he told her her voice was too high and nasal. The neophyte actress retreated for two weeks—and when she saw Hawks again, her tones had mysteriously become low, husky and very sexy—an attribute that she used to advantage in her first movie, "To Have and Have Not," helmed by Hawks. Among the stories circulating at the time was that Bacall had practiced by yelling into the wind atop a hill for hours on end in order to achieve her new sultriness.

Q: Is it true that Warren Beatty, one of Hollywood's perennially sexy men, was considered a real nerd in high school? — A.R.

A: A new book on the subject indicates otherwise. "Yearbook," a collection of high school photos of now famous people, claims that Beatty was hardly unpopular in high school, from which he graduated in 1955. He was voted the "best all around." No specific area of excellence was cited, an omission Beatty took care of with years of Hollywood womanizing.

Q: Is Lena Olin that good an actress or was there really something romantic going on off-camera between Olin and Robert Redford that made their love scenes in the film "Havana" so authentic looking? — G.D.

A: Unlike another very gifted Swedish actress, the late Ingrid Bergman who actually did become involved with her leading man during filming, Olin's on-screen-romantic trysts with Redford were all part of the job.

The lovely and talented Olin, who was so astounding in "The Unbearable Lightness of Being" and "Enemies — A Love Story," says she approaches a screen relationship as if they actually lived together. In Bergman's case, by the way, after the filming was over, her former leading men couldn't get her on the phone.

Q: Isn't Mickey Rourke, for all of his classiness as a big-time movie actor, a real slob in private who has a policy of never washing his hair? — M.R.

A: That's the reputation Mickey has been cultivating, setting off a fashion wave, of sorts, in Hollywood equating unwashed hair with sex appeal.

Mickey's manager told me that in reality, the actor washes his hair daily. He gets that unwashed, oily look by applying "a ton of gel" to his hair. There really is a move in Hollywood's young male circles that favors dirty hair. But Rourke is busy setting a new trend. He just got a crew cut.

IT'S CONVENTIONAL. Now that nightclubs are pretty much a thing of the past except in Las Vegas and Atlantic City, you may be wondering how top-notch performers make the big bucks.

It turns out that corporate bookings, such as conventions, are filling the void. Marvin Hamlisch, the creative composer and lyricist, gets as much as $50,000 a night, singing and playing his own material in a very funny act.

It's touchdown for Monday football as ABC topples NBC in ratings lists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Monday night football scored a ratings touchdown for ABC, putting the network in the No. 1 spot for only the second time in the 12-week-old season.

The National League Football showdown between the New York Giants and the San Francisco 49ers gave ABC its rare victory by grabbing a 27 average rating — the highest this season for Monday night's prime-time gridiron ritual.

Each ratings point in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey released Tuesday represents 931,000 homes.

ABC's only other win this fall came last month when the NFL match-up of the Los Angeles Raiders and the Miami Dolphins helped the network trounce its competitors with a 13.4 average.

Usually first place NBC fell to second last week with an 11.9. CBS was in its usual third place with an 11.1.

"60 Minutes" on CBS garnered its highest ratings of the season and finished second with a 23 average.

"Cheers" on NBC, the perennial No. 1 favorite of American television viewers, dropped to third.

Finishing fourth was ABC's "Roseanne," followed by NBC's "A

CBS late-night show gets ax

NEW YORK (AP) — "America Tonight," a late-night CBS News series, has been axed and will be succeeded next month by five action-adventure series airing Monday through Friday, CBS said Monday.

"America Tonight," begun as a series of specials after Iraq's Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait, became a regular late-night competitor of ABC News' "Nightline" and NBC's "Tonight Show" on Oct. 1.

Its final broadcast will be on Jan. 18, three days after the deadline the United Nations has given Iraq to get out of Kuwait.

The series replacing the show has the umbrella title of "CBS Late Night" and will start on Jan. 21.

Charles Kuralt, who co-anchored "America Tonight" with Lesley Stahl, said in an interview last month he expected the ax to fall because CBS had committed itself to entertainment fare at the 11:30 p.m. EST time period.

His half-hour series, whose national ratings generally put it third against its network rivals, had replaced entertainment programs that succeeded CBS' ill-fated late night talk-variety series, "The Pat Sajak Show."

CBS Entertainment President Jeff Sagansky said in a statement that the five new late-night series coming to CBS "represent programming of prime-time quality, with a more adult bite because of the late hour."

The shows ranged from "Fly-By-Night," a light-hearted series about an air charter service, to "Scene of the Crime," an anthology series of thrillers created by producer Stephen J. Cannell.

The new series and the night on which each one will appear are "Sweating Bullets" on Monday, "Fly By Night" on Tuesday, "Scene of the Crime" on Wednesday, "The Exile" on Thursday and "Dark Justice" on Friday.
