No vote on school construction plan

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A $9.5 million construction proposal won't go on the ballot, but the School Board hopes to have a new idea within a few months.

The board decided unanimously Friday that a ninth-grade center that formed the proposal's keystone was too controversial.

The decision was based on a survey and a recommendation from a committee formed to gauge public sentiment. Sixty-one percent of those responding to the survey opposed a plan to convert Robert St.

Junior High School into a school serving all the ninth-graders in Twin Falls.

Of 337 people responding to the survey, 191 (61-percent) opposed the ninth-grade school.

School Board members said, however, that they were encouraged that the proposal's other four components had as much as 84 percent support in the survey.

"I think it is fair to say that the responses to the survey represent a fair sampling of community sentiment," Twin Falls banker Curtis H. Eaton told the board. Eaton chaired that Community Committee that has examined the proposal over the past month.

Board Chairman Steve Tolman told Superintendent Terrell Donich to reconvene the Long-Range Planning Committee that wrote the original proposal and ask it to consider five alternatives suggested by the Community Committee.

The alternatives include year-round schooling, building a second high school and expanding the existing high school.

Tolman suggested replacing some committee members who have school ties, to eliminate the perception that committee findings are tainted. Nearly half the long-range committee members had a direct tie to the district, including three School Board members.

Donich noted that, if a new school is to open by the fall-of-1993, the board needs to hold a bond issue election by May or June 1991.

Donich also said he would hate to see a new committee formed and a new proposal reached, only to have that idea shut down by another segment of the community.

"How do you think we can gain consensus on any option that is brought forward?" he asked Eaton.

Eaton said that after the idea of middle

Blackouts, frozen pipes all adding to misery of region's record cold

The Times-News

A power outage threw 700 homes into darkness northwest of Twin Falls in the predawn hours Friday morning as the mercury dipped to a record minus 22 degrees.

Under clear skies, the third day of southern Idaho's record-breaking cold spell produced its lowest temperature yet: minus 19 in Jerome, minus 21 in Burley, minus 23 in Hatley and minus 22 in Fairfield.

The Magic Valley greeted the first day of winter with snarled travel, closed schools, postponed basketball games and a warning from the National Weather Service that south-central Idaho isn't likely to see above-freezing temperatures again this year.

Twin Falls' minus 22 smashed the previous record of 12 below for Dec. 21, set in 1928, and was only 8 degrees warmer than the all-time coldest temperature ever recorded at the Kimberly weather station.

The forecast high for Twin Falls today was 3 degrees after an overnight low of minus 18. It hasn't been above zero in Twin Falls since Thursday afternoon.

The extreme cold caused mechanical failures in Idaho Power equipment, including one of which turned off power to some 700 residential customers about 6 a.m. Friday. There were other blackouts of a shorter duration in Twin Falls at about the same time.

"The cold will point out any weak points you have in your system," Twin Falls Division Manager Steve Cooper said. "We have an adequate supply of energy, however."

The utility's system-wide peak load of 2,104 megawatt hours on Friday morning was 223 megawatt hours short of the record-of-2,327-megawatt-hour-set during a cold snap in February 1989.

Though the utility has the energy and the capacity to transmit it, some local areas may not be able to handle the peak loads. These areas have experienced periodic brownouts — the lights dim or go out for several seconds — caused by heavy demand tripping breakers.

Most children got an early start on Christmas vacation. Many schools were closed Friday for the second day in a row. But most roads were open, and officials predicted driving conditions wouldn't get much worse.

The glacial temperatures spurred plumbers into frenzied action thawing ice-bound water pipes.

"We quit accepting calls at 11 a.m. this morning because we had more work than we could handle," Magic Valley Plumbing and Heating Co. part-owner Linda Kieckhefer said.

Much of nation finds winter's arrival chill

The Associated Press

Winter arrived Friday on a sled of arctic air that slipped down across the western two-thirds of the nation, from frosty Seattle to snowy California to the deep-frozen Texas panhandle.

The cold-turned-diesel-fuel-to-jelly-in-broken-in many places, including Denver, where temperatures plunged to -50-degrees below-zero. It snarled power transmission lines, stopped Amtrak's "Empire Builder" in its snowy tracks and gave California citrus growers the shivers.

Low-temperature records were tied or broken in many places, including Denver, which matched a record at 21 below zero Casper, Wyo., where it was 41 below; and coastal Eureka, Calif., where it was 27 above. In Medford, Ore., the record of 4 below zero was 15 degrees below the old mark for the date.

It was 2 below in Amarillo, Texas, and 6 above in Lubbock.

Attack not automatic Jan. 15, security adviser to Bush says

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House raised doubts Friday that the United States would attack Iraq immediately if it fails to meet next month's deadline for withdrawing from Kuwait.

"Jan. 15 is not an attack day at all," a senior official said. "It's a deadline."

Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser to President Bush, said the Jan. 15 date was "an authorization date" that tells Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "he'd better get moving now. After the 15th of January, he is at risk."

Bush, meanwhile, underscored his determination to expel Iraq soon.

"I can't drag on with indecision and it can't stop short of the U.N. mandate that Saddam completely leave Kuwait," Bush said. "See, that argues very forcefully against some of these scenarios that call for somebody to compromise. We'll give him something for this, give him something so he saves face. That is not in the books."

Bush made his comments in an interview with U.S. News & World Report. On deciding whether to go to war, Bush said, "On this question, I've got it boiled down very clearly to good vs. evil. And it helps if you can be that clear in your own mind."

He said his view was reinforced by an Amnesty International report detailing human rights abuses in Kuwait. "It helps one come to a recognition that the right must prevail," the president said.

The Jan. 15 deadline was prescribed in a United Nations Security Council resolution authorizing all means necessary to expel Iraq from Kuwait unless it withdraws on its own by then.

"It doesn't say he is going to be attacked this date or that date or whatever," Scowcroft said in an interview.

Death with dignity for Cruzan unlikely

The Associated Press

MOUNT VERNON, Mo. — Three years after Joe and Joyce Cruzan asked the courts to let their severely brain-injured daughter die with dignity, her impending death has become a focus of protests and legal maneuvers by strangers.

Nineteen people were arrested Tuesday after they burst into the Missouri Rehabilitation Center and tried to reach Nancy Cruzan's room to reconnect her feeding tube, which was removed Dec. 14.

Anti-euthanasia activists had no success in asking various courts to force the state to resume feeding Ms. Cruzan. Their appeals were rejected Friday by the state Supreme Court, Cole County Court and the U.S. District Court. Missouri's highest courts rejected other appeals Thursday.

About 15 demonstrators continued a round-the-clock vigil on the hospital steps Friday, praying the doctors and holding signs that read "Please Feed Nancy Cruzan."

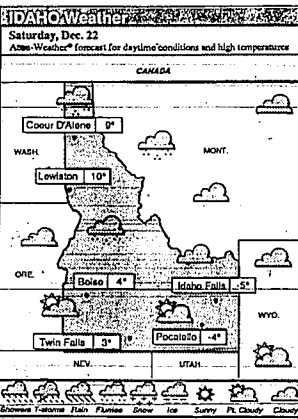

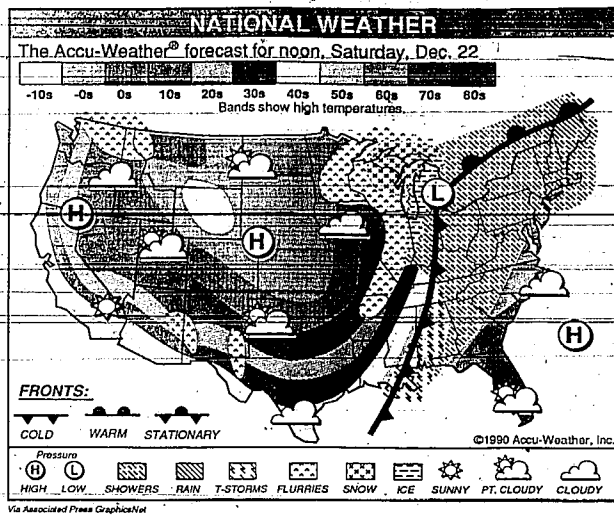

From their daughter's heavily tinted window on the second floor, Joe and Joyce Cruzan can see the demonstrators, but avoid contact with them.

"I would have thought the protests would have bothered them but they are in so much pain from what would cause us all pain, having a child die. Really, that is their focus," said the couple's attorney.

British leader warns that force may be necessary to free Kuwait

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Prime Minister John Major said Friday that Iraqi troops will have to be "forcibly removed from Kuwait if President Saddam Hussein does not agree to withdraw them peacefully. Major, just as unyielding in talking about Saddam as was his predecessor, Margaret Thatcher, rejected the notion that a partial Iraqi pull-back from Kuwait would help bring about a solution to the crisis.

Major

"A complete withdrawal is necessary, a partial withdrawal won't do," Major said in a display of solidarity with U.S. policy on the Persian Gulf. On the gulf issue at least, Major's remarks augured well for his talks Friday with President Bush later in the day at Camp David, the Maryland presidential retreat where the two leaders were planning an overnight stay.

Major, who arrived here Thursday night for a 40-hour visit, wasted no time in going on a rhetorical offensive against Saddam, using a succession of four television interviews aired shortly after dawn.

"If he stays in Kuwait, in a country which essentially at the moment is rather like a prison camp, a country that he's dismantling day after day, then he will have to be forcibly removed," Major said. "I hope it won't come to that — everyone hopes it won't come to that — but it could."

At the same time, Major demonstrated the kinder, gentler face he has brought to British politics since his accession, showing none of the abusiveness that was a Thatcher hallmark. In contrast to Mrs. Thatcher, he was polite to reporters questioning him.

Comparing Major and Mrs. Thatcher, one U.S. official said, "The biggest change is personal style."

Consistent with the U.S. view on the gulf, Major said "There is nothing whatsoever to negotiate about." Saddam, he said, "has to go."

Secretary of State James A. Baker III echoed that sentiment after meeting with Major in late morning at the State Department.

"Nobody that I know of is willing to negotiate backwards from the U.N. Security Council resolutions," Baker said. "We simply cannot appease aggression. If we really believe that there's an opportunity for a new world order, we can't start out by appeasing aggression."

Major's tough line came as no surprise to U.S. officials, who see the British government as being in the vanguard of the anti-Iraq coalition. About 40,000 British soldiers have been sent to the gulf.

Asked about the impact of Thursday's resignation by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, Major was cautiously optimistic that President Mikhail Gorbachev's choice of a successor will also be a reformist.

Cabinet argues over fuel efficiency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials at odds over energy conservation met Friday with President Bush, trying to sway him on alternative car fuels and other possible ingredients of his national energy strategy.

Energy Secretary James Watkins, who made a presentation Friday at the meeting of Bush's Economic Policy Council, is recommending that the strategy include both increased fuel efficiency standards and a requirement for greater use of non-gasoline fuels.

Those proposals are supported by the Agriculture Department, and by Environmental Protection Agency Administrator William Reilly.

But other advisers, including White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and chief White House economist Michael Boskin, are fighting the proposals on grounds that they would be costly and involve excessive government regulation.

Others siding with Sununu, according to officials who spoke on condition of anonymity, include Bush's domestic policy adviser Roger Porter and budget director Richard Darman.

After Watkins spoke Friday, Porter and Boskin "pounded away" at what they consider the unreasonable options, one participant said.

Many planks of the proposed strategy have received consensus approval from the various government agencies involved in the talks. Members of the Cabinet-level council agreed to meet again with Bush on the sticky issues remaining after he returns Jan. 1 from his holiday stay at Camp David, Md., officials said.

Considerable discussion—Friday centered on whether auto manufacturers should be required to increase production of cars that can use alternative fuels, said one official. He characterized the debate, with Bush present, as a "healthy discussion" that did not reach the acrimonious levels of a council meeting on the subject last week.

The strategy contains 45 different measures dealing with the nation's future energy needs and how to avoid reliance on foreign oil.

The document, expected to be finished early next year, comes at a sensitive time on the international front in light of the crisis in the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Navy tries to save A-12 reputation

WASHINGTON — Navy officials, hoping to overcome a wave of damaging revelations about its A-12 stealth attack plane, launched a public campaign Friday to rescue the $50 billion program.

Navy officials went public with arguments for continuing the development program, which is classified secret, just two weeks before Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's target date for deciding whether to cancel it.

Capt. Mike Currie, who is responsible for ensuring that the A-12 now on the drawing boards is produced according to the Navy's specifications, told the Association of Naval Aviation on Friday that the plane is vital to U.S. security interests.

Author claims intimidation by Trump

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Developer Donald Trump isn't waiting for the publication of a book exposing the underbelly of his casino empire to try to squash the story, the author says.

The book, "Trumpped: The Decline and Fall of Donald Trump" was written by former Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino President Jack O'Donnell. It is due to be published May 1.

O'Donnell, the chief operating officer at rival Merv Griffin's Resorts Casino Hotel, said Trump attorneys barged into his Resorts office unannounced on Wednesday and tried to intimidate him.

Pan Am is close to acquisition deal

NEW YORK — Cash-strapped Pan Am Corp. said Friday it has tentatively agreed to a $375 million acquisition by rival Trans World Airlines but needs an interim loan before the deal could be completed. "Under the circumstances, it would be futile to enter into a transaction without any provision for bridge financing, especially if TWA were not to commit to close the transaction regardless of our financial situation," Pan Am Chairman Thomas G. Plasket wrote in a letter to TWA Chairman Carl C. Icahn.

The acquisition would combine two of the U.S. airline industry's weakest carriers and would mark the end of independence by Pan Am, which pioneered overseas air travel but has lost staggering amounts of money over the past decade, unable to cope with the intense competition of deregulation.

FDA approves drug to treat disorder

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration on Friday approved a new genetically engineered drug to treat a rare, life-threatening immune disorder that strikes mostly boys.

People with chronic granulomatous disease, or CGD, are missing a key element of the immune system, leaving them susceptible to bacterial and fungal infections and reliant on high doses of antibiotics.

The FDA said the new therapy is the first approved genetically engineered form of gamma interferon, a naturally occurring, infection-fighting protein produced by certain types of white blood cells.

Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco, Calif., will market the drug under the brand name Actimmune.

No clouds on this parade in Boston

BOSTON — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis couldn't stop clouds from blocking the sun over historic Boston Common Friday, but he signed into law a bill to prevent new buildings from shadowing the common for more than one hour a day.

"The good Lord is casting a shadow over us all here, even as I speak," Dukakis said before he signed the bill, standing at the edge of the park.

Commons are found in many New England towns. Boston Common was established in 1634, when the city's first settler, a hermit named William Blackstone, agreed to sell 45 acres to the town of Boston.

Boston Common was first used as a pasture for citizens' animals. Later, it was a training site for the militia and the site of public hangings.

Government's red ink is higher than ever

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government ran up a $48.1 billion deficit in November, a 62 percent increase over a year ago, due in part to the Persian Gulf buildup and a falling economy, the Treasury Department reported Friday.

Combined with the October deficit, the imbalance for the first two months of fiscal 1991 totaled $79.5 billion, up 42.5 percent from the comparable period of fiscal 1990.

—Economist Michael K. Evans

head of a Washington forecasting firm, said the weakening economy is resulting in declining tax revenues. "It's really getting to the point where the deficit is starting to balloon because both personal and corporate taxes are starting to fall off," he said. "Receipts in November were $6 billion less than they should have been in a normal economy."

The government collected $27.2 billion in individual income taxes last month, a 21 percent decline from November 1989. At the same time, corporate income taxes were down 46 percent to $1.3 billion.

At the same time, defense spending increased 18 percent from a year ago, to $29 billion, reflecting the military buildup in the Middle East. Aid spending on the savings and loan bailout jumped to $2.8 billion, up 220 percent from the $879 million outlay in November 1989.

Overall, receipts totaled $72.8 billion in November, up 2.3 percent from the same month last year. Spending, however, jumped 20 percent, from $100.9 billion in 1989 to $120.9 billion last month. The deficit is the difference between the two.

The Bush administration already has conceded the fiscal 1991 deficit will set a new record. Budget director Richard Darman has projected the imbalance at between $250 billion and $300 billion.

The Congressional Budget Office, on the other hand, forecasts a $320 billion gap this year.

The deficit in fiscal 1990 was $220.4 billion, just shy of the $221.2

billion record set in 1986. As usual, the biggest spending categories were the military, Social Security and other programs of the Department of Health and Human Services and interest on the national debt.

Military spending totaled $53.1 billion so far this year. It is projected to total $292.2 billion for the entire fiscal year.

Social Security payments amounted to $21.5 billion for the month and $41.0 billion for the year.

Judges at work to be televised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' first televised look at federal judges at work likely will occur next year in appeals courts in New York or San Francisco or a trial court in one of six states, court officials said Friday.

"The courts have been selected. Now, it's a matter of the news media requesting coverage in particular cases," said David Sellers, a spokesman for the policymaking U.S. Judicial Conference.

The conference, composed of 27 federal judges and headed by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, approved the three-year experiment last September. Individual courts then were invited to volunteer.

Those selected are federal appellate courts based in San Francisco and New York City, and U.S. District Courts in Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania and Washington.

Beginning in July, broadcast and photographic access will be allowed in civil cases in the selected courts. Judges will have broad discretion to reject requests for coverage.

*SNOW BUILD-UP****

During the last few days of continued snowfall and snow build-up the City Street Crews have had an increasing problem with snow being pushed out into streets and alleys from private property. City Code Section 8-2-9 (D) prohibits the obstruction of public ways except by special permit. Those who block or partially block streets, alleys, and sidewalks with snow removed from private property are violating the law. They are also increasing their personal liability exposure by creating hazardous driving conditions for the traveling public. Property owners should pile snow on their own property, to stay legal. Citations will be issued if continued violations occur.

Cheney, Powell give tough pep talks, say war grows more likely

IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Friday a U.S. attack against Iraqi forces is growing increasingly likely.

He promised cheering troops they won't sit indefinitely in the desert and "absolute, total victory" is the only option if war begins.

Joining Cheney "in hawkish" pep rallies with troops in the northeast Saudi desert was Gen. Colin Powell, the Joint Chiefs-of-Staff chairman, who said he still hoped for resolution of the Persian Gulf crisis without war but then drew roars of applause when he pledged:

"When we launch it, we will launch it violently, we will launch it in a way that will make it decisive so we can get it over as quickly as possible and there's no question who won."

Cheney said he was not optimistic Washington and Iraq would hold top-level talks on the crisis, let alone resolve it, by the Jan. 15 U.N. deadline for Saddam Hussein to withdraw his army from Kuwait.

President Bush has threatened to attack if that deadline isn't met, and the two sides have been unable to agree on dates for talks in Baghdad and Washington.

"It increasingly looks like he's not getting the message and we'll have to use force," Cheney said of Saddam.

Cheney and Powell, fresh from three days of strategy sessions with field commanders in Saudi Arabia, were asked by troops whether American ground forces would be ready to fight by the Jan. 15 U.N. deadline for Saddam to withdraw from Kuwait. The troops apparently were well aware of the controversy stirred by the deputy commander of Operation Desert Shield, Lt. Gen. Calvin A.H. Waller, who said Wednesday that still-arriving ground troops might not be combat ready until well into February.

the deadline passed without an Iraqi withdrawal, Cheney said:

"While I can't tell you a specific date, for obvious reasons, when that would happen, I can say that we are eager to get this wrapped up as quickly as possible. ... We do not think that waiting indefinitely is going to solve the problem."

Powell said at one point, "I think we're ready now," only to say seconds later that some forces were still arriving and would not be combat ready for some time.

At their first two stops at a sprawling installation that includes huge Air Force and Army camps, Cheney promised the troops that if fighting begins, "there will be the freedom and flexibility to run a first-class military operation all the way." In an apparent reference to Vietnam, he said U.S. forces "won't have their hands tied behind their backs."

Suez Canal security stepped up against possible Iraqi sabotage

SUEZ, Egypt (AP) — Security has been increased in the Suez Canal to thwart a possible Iraqi attempt to sink a vessel and block the strategic waterway, canal officials said Friday.

The canal is important for oil shipping as well as for the United States and other countries who are massing warships in the Persian Gulf region.

The new security measures include putting any cement carriers at the rear of canal convoys, so that if they are sunk they would not block other vessels. —Onco —sunk —cement —carriers are extremely difficult to clear because of the wet cement. The canal carries much of Western Europe's oil and an extended blockage would hit that region's economy hard. It could be almost ruinous to Egypt.

Texas college drops football due to cost

The Associated Press

CANYON, Texas — West Texas State dropped football from its intercollegiate program today, citing lack of funds and athletic program, including football. The school's new president, Barry B. Thompson, in making the announcement, left open the possibility that football could be revived later.
Thompson, who took over earlier this month as president from embattled Ed Knoch, said he believes in a well-rounded athletic program, including football, but he said unless enough money can be raised, the program will remain shut down.
All other West Texas State teams will compete as independents of the NCAA Division II level, Thompson said.

Former Bruin to play in college All-Star game

The last time Mike Pavelec played a game of football in the United States, he did so for the Twin Falls Bruins.
Pavelec's next appearance on a football field in the states will be in front of a national television audience in the 66th annual East-West Shrine game in Palo Alto, Calif.

Mike Maller
Sports Editor

He will be one of two Canadian players in the all-star game that features some of the best graduating seniors in college football. The game will be played at 2 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 26 at Stanford Stadium. ESPN will televise the game live.

"I'm nervous and excited, but I don't see this as something I can't do," Pavelec said. "I'll get the job done and have a good time doing it."
The 6-6, 275-pound offensive tackle adds the Shrine game to a football resume at the University of Calgary that includes a first-team All-Canadian selection in 1980 and second-team status in 1990. The scoring quarterback came from Pavelec missing two games this fall because of a sprained knee that he said is now as healthy as ever.
"As much as the Shrine selection is an honor, Pavelec looks at it as a tryout camp for the National Football League.
"They've been telling me that all the pro scouts go to this game and to the practices," Pavelec said. "It's a great opportunity because of the exposure."

He reports to Palo Alto Jan. 19 for practice with Head Coach Bill McCartney of Colorado and assistants LeVell Edwards of Brigham Young and Rich Brooks of Oregon.
With a chance to impress the scouts, Pavelec is not treating the game as a vacation. "He's working out like the regular season is about to begin."
"Actually, even a little bit harder," Pavelec said. "I got four weeks to prepare for the biggest game of my life sort of thing. So I'm already dieting, working on the...

Edwards' 24 puts Pistons past Atlanta

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — James Edwards scored 24 points, including eight in a key third-period surge, as the sputtering Detroit Pistons routed Atlanta 113-87 Friday night, snapping the Hawks' six-game winning streak.
Detroit was forced to play the second half without coach Chuck Daly, ejected by referee Mike Mathis with 3:36 left in the first half for arguing a technical foul call. Guard Isiah Thomas was ejected in the fourth quarter after picking up a technical foul for punching Rumeal Robinson.

Pro basketball

Detroit led 56-50 at halftime, but started the final 24 minutes with a 12-2 spurt. Detroit went on a seven-point run later in the period. The final points of the quarter came on the first 3-point basket of Edwards' 14-year career. He was 0-for-21.

Bulls 114, Lakers 103

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan scored 33 points and Scottie Pippen 28 as Chicago won for the 11th time in 14 games.
The Bulls led only 92-89 in the fourth quarter before a three-point play by Horace Grant and baskets by Pippen and Stacey King opened a 99-89 advantage. The Lakers got no closer than five down the stretch as Jordan and Pippen combined to score the last 15 points for Chicago.

The Lakers were led by James Worthy with 21 points and Sam Perkins with 20.
A.C. Green came off the bench in the first period to make all five of his shots and score 12 points. But the Bulls hit 68 percent of their shots en route to a 36-33 lead by the end of the period.

Pacers 137, Hornets 114

INDIANAPOLIS — Chuck Person scored 34 points and Vern Fleming 26 on perfect shooting from the field and free-throw line as Indiana won for new coach Bob Hill.
Hill was elevated from an assistant coaching position Thursday after the Pacers fired Dick Versace.

Reggie Miller scored 20 points for Indiana, which led by as many as 25 in the fourth period. Johnny Newman led Charlotte with 21 points.
Fleming made nine shots from the floor and eight free throws.

76ers 126, Heat 102

MIAMI — Philadelphia hit 39 of 43 free throws, including 14 of 14 in consecutive loss.
Philadelphia made its first 17 free throws, missed two in a row and then made 10.

Kentucky Wildcats surge for early lead, hold on to beat Western Kentucky

The Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Calbert Chaney scored 18 of his 29 points in the second half and teamed with Eric Anderson to lead a decisive 19-4 run that carried No. 6 Indiana past Iowa State 87-76 on Friday night.
Anderson added 18 points as Indiana (10-1) staved off Iowa State's upset bid after blowing a 10-point lead in the first half.

The Hoosiers took control of the game by making 12 of their first 17 shots in the second half in sending Iowa State to its ninth loss in 11 games.
Indiana shot 65.4 percent from the field in the second half and 58.6 percent for the game.

Victor Alexander led Iowa State with 23 points, and Doug Collins came off the bench to score 19.
Iowa State, down 38-37 at halftime, pulled ahead 41-39 on Norman Brown's dunk a minute into the second half. But Indiana quickly erased the lead by scoring 19 of the next 23 points.
Anderson had nine points during the run.

including a jumper from the left side and a reverse layup on a fast break to get the Hoosiers started. Chaney had five points in the spurt and Jamal Meeks capped it with a 3-pointer, giving Indiana a 58-45 lead with 12:01 to play.

Iowa State got within eight points three times down the stretch, but Indiana answered on each occasion — twice on baskets by Chaney and once on two free throws by Meeks.
Chris Reynolds' layup capped a 6-0 burst that extended Indiana's lead to 84-68 with 3:07 remaining, and Iowa State never got closer than the final margin after that.

Kentucky 84, W. Kentucky 70

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Richie Farmer scored nine points in a 14-2 run at the end of the first half that sparked No. 18 Kentucky to an 84-70 victory Friday night in its first regular-season game against Western Kentucky.
Farmer, who finished with a career-high 22 points, hit two 3-pointers and three free throws as Kentucky (6-2) broke from a 23-23 tie to a 37-25 lead over the final 3:02 of the half.
Western Kentucky (2-6) turned the ball over five times in the run and they resulted in six points for Kentucky.
Kentucky built its lead to 68-49 on John Pelphrey's 3-pointer with 7:01 remaining in the game. Western Kentucky could win no closer than 80-68 on a layup by Jack Jennings with 1:49 to play.
The schools had met only two other times, both in the NCAA tournament, with Western Kentucky winning 107-83 in 1971 and Kentucky prevailing 71-64 in 1986.
Kentucky made only nine of 36 3-point attempts, but its defensive effort resulted in 31 points for the Hoosiers.
Reggie Hanson and Jeff Brassow each had 14 points for Kentucky, while Jamal Mashburn had 13 and Pelphrey 12.

NCAA compliance is tricky process at best

By Hal Beck The Associated Press

How easy is it to violate the NCAA Manual, the bible of college athletics? About as easy as it is to jaywalk or pass a red light or park in an illegal space.
The difference with breaking those rules, however, is you're aware of them. With the Manual, it's hard to know when you're bending a rule until it snaps.

Texas A&M and UNLV are on the NCAA hotseat at present and Syracuse could be next on the spot.
At Texas A&M, there are allegations that Tony Scott, a transfer from Syracuse, arrived under shady circumstances. UNLV is leaning through a list of 29 violations, the latest allegations from the NCAA that the Vegas program is less than squeaky clean. And Syracuse is investigating a local newspaper's charges of payoffs from boosters, including pro basketball Hall of Famer Dave Bing.

According to one university compliance officer, though, getting in trouble is easy, no matter how hard you try not to. And, in fact, you can try so hard that you break the rules in the other direction.
"It is very difficult to follow the Manual because the rules are subject to interpretation and can be interpreted in many different ways," said Bo Bahnsen, assistant athletic director in charge of compliance at Louisiana State.

Twice a week, the NCAA Legislative Services Department meets to interpret the rules contained in the Manual and consider possible violations. Their decisions are not published. "It's difficult to keep up with," Bahnsen said. "You do your best. The push is toward institutional control in the area of compliance."
As for the Manual, which was reorgan-

NCAA charges cause trouble for UNLV, Syracuse

Despite attorneys' advice, Tarkanian talks

By Nancy Gay
Orlando Sentinel

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — His attorneys, as always, are advising Nevada-Las Vegas coach Jerry Tarkanian to keep his mouth shut. But he finds it difficult not to voice his frustration over the latest wave of allegations against the Rebels' beleaguered basketball team.

"I'm sick of it," Tarkanian said Friday. "When I'm ready, I'll talk. And when I'm ready, I'll raise some hell."

In the latest investigation into the defending national champion, an NCAA letter of inquiry, released Thursday, alleged 29 violations ranging from paying for living expenses for players to bribing a witness.

The names in the 43-page inquiry were marked out by Donald Klasic, university system general counsel. But many of the allegations are believed to involve the recruitment of Lloyd Daniels, a former New York City prep star who never enrolled at UNLV.

Among the allegations: UNLV provided Daniels — now playing in the Continental Basketball Association — money for automobile repairs, bought him a motorcycle, improperly paid for his tuition and paid for his living expenses, clothing, meals and a traffic ticket.

"It's unbelievable, that's what it is," said Tarkanian, the subject of a 13-year NCAA legal battle that recently was settled, allowing this year's team to defend its national title. "They're dogging us, no question about it. But I'm not supposed to say anything about it."

Tarkanian, who has coached the Rebels for 18 years, said he thought the latest round of allegations — and the timing of the letter's release — is tied in with the previous investigation, settled three weeks ago.

"Definitely, they're related," he said.

But the scrutiny that his current team — which is 4-0 and plays Florida State on Saturday — is enduring has not affected its play, he said, a point he is quick to make.

"They're a great bunch of kids," Tarkanian said. "No one's been under the scrutiny we've been under. The latest one (investigation), hell, it's incredible how they're dogging us. They've gone through and gotten phone records from way back in 1984."

Syracuse officials mum on recruiting

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse officials were mum Friday on alleged improprieties in the school's basketball program as a newspaper questioned the recruitment of LeRon Ellis, the team's starting center, and former center George Papadakos.

And Papadakos, a 7-footer from Toronto, told the Post-Standard that he backed dated his letter of intent to attend Syracuse in 1982 and concocted a story to hide the alleged impropriety.

Friday's story followed by a day a lengthy report in the Post-Standard in which past and current players said they received cash from team boosters, free meals and merchandise — from community businessmen and cut-rate automobiles. A former player, Rodney Walker, said a grade was changed so he could play in a key Big East Conference game in 1987.

The school said it would forward the Post-Standard report to the NCAA and cooperate if the association launches an investigation.

The NCAA would not say whether it would take any action.

Syracuse coach Jim Boheim declined to discuss the allegations following the Orangemen's game Thursday night against Towson State.

Athletic officials referred telephone calls for comment Friday to university spokesman Robert Hill, who did not return calls.

Baseball players, owners end battle
NEW YORK — Baseball players and owners formally ended their five-year collusion battle when they signed a 399-page agreement Friday night.

The deal calls for the 26 clubs to give the Major League Baseball Players Association $280 million — $120 million on Jan. 2, 1991 and four payments of $40 million plus interest on July 15, 1991, Sept. 15, 1991, Nov. 15, 1991 and April 15, 1992. It also formalizes the now-loose free agency granted to 15 players on Dec. 7.

The deal was reached in a handshake agreement by lawyers for the two sides on Oct. 26, but took two months to draft because of tax complications.

Lauren Rich, a union lawyer, said she believes as many as 1,000 players may put in claims for the money. Rich said the agreement calls for the union to "get this money distributed within 24 months."

Denver's Woolridge undergoes surgery
DENVER — Denver Nuggets forward Orlando Woolridge, enjoying his finest NBA season and among the league's top scorers, underwent surgery Friday evening to repair a detached retina in his right eye that could sideline him as long as two months.

"The surgery went very well," team spokesman Jay Clark said after the operation, which lasted about two hours. "They drained the fluid from the area of the eye where the retina was detached. They secured the retina back in place by cryotherapy — a freezing technique. They put in some supporting material to prevent it happening again in the future ... like a silicone."

Chicago Bears mourn dead teammate
CHICAGO — Suddenly, winning a football game was the furthest thing from the Chicago Bears' minds.

As the players filed into Halas Hall for practice Friday morning, they were thinking instead about rookie defensive tackle Fred Washington, who had died in a one-car accident just six hours earlier. Some of the players first learned of the accident upon arriving. A spokeswoman from the Lake Forest Police Department said the accident had occurred at 2:38 a.m. Friday on Waukegan Road, north of Sherwood Road.

Court won't strike down all-star snub

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A teen's father has struck out in legal attempts to get revenge for his son's failure to make a baseball all-star team.

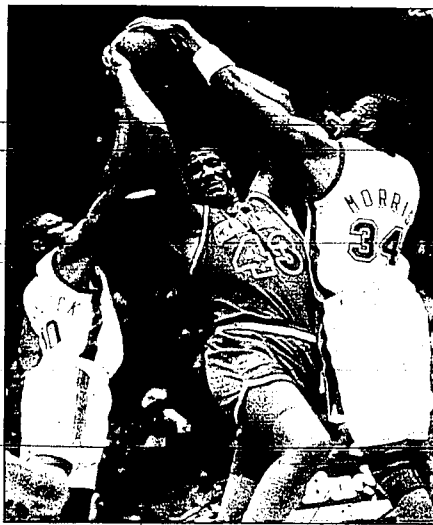

Three "Commonwealth" Court judges threw out an appeal filed on behalf of Matthew Kemmko, who didn't get picked for the 1989 all-star team when he was a 14-year-old catcher in the Washington County Youth Baseball League.

"It is unfortunate for Matthew that he has perhaps been a victim of circumstances," said the court's ruling, which was made Thursday.

But, it said, Matthew had no right to sue a non-profit organization. Then the judges cited the "sage advice" in a letter written to Matthew by Pony League president Roy Gillespie.

"Very-foe-of-us — if any — get all out of life that we want," the letter said.

"Most of us — if not all — will feel at various times along the way that we have been cheated a bit, or passed over, because someone didn't like us, liked someone else better, was related to someone, or was returning a favor to someone."

letter of inquiry sent to UNLV.

In the case of Syracuse, one allegation was that Derrick Coleman, co-captain of the basketball team last season and the No. 1 draft pick in the NBA, had sent $500 to ex-teammate Billy Owens before the Orangemen traveled to Hawaii last month for the Maui Invitational. If that was not the only violation, it would be shrugged off as a gesture from one friend to another.

"We restrict a lot of day-to-day activities by athletes because they are athletes," Bahnsen said. "Most students have some kind of part-time job. But an athlete can't play here or she is under scholarship. These are the rules of the NCAA. The position is it's a privilege to play and you play by the rules."

Bahnsen, determined to keep LSU's house clean, decided a couple of years ago that a swimmer who was transferring from Tulane after the sport was dropped there, would be ineligible for his first year at LSU.

The problem was that after leaving Tulane, the swimmer was too late to apply for a scholarship elsewhere and spent a semester at a junior-college before moving on to LSU.

To Bahnsen, this was a clear case of "the 4-2-4 rule," which requires transfers from a four-year program through a junior college to spend one year or earn 24 credits in the two-year program before eligibility can be restored. Otherwise, athletes must sit a year.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Derrick Coleman came off the bench with five fouls late in the fourth quarter and keyed a 9-0 run in the final 1:46 to rally New Jersey over stumbling Cleveland.

Coleman, who seemed reluctant to come off the bench when asked by coach Bill Fitch, had six of the Nets' final 13 points and contributed a key rebound and steal that led to two clinching free throws by Mookie Blaylock.

Pavelec has hired a lawyer and will present his petition to the CFL in January.

At the end of the month he'll know how his nationality stands in the CFL's eyes.

Now he also has the possibility of turning some NFL heads with his work. He could end up invited to an NFL camp this summer.

What seems strange to those of us used to NFL rules is that Pavelec can play one year in Calgary — whether or not he gets to go to an NFL camp.

That means an NFL team could bring Pavelec to camp, work with him and then let him go, asking that he not return next summer after another season in Calgary.

So Pavelec's future appears a little unclear after the 26th of January.

"I'm not content to wait, but I have to," he said. "Right now I'm just concentrating on the Shrine Bowl and getting ready for it."

Miami concedes Buffalo has edge in this week's game

Bills can clinch home field for playoffs with win

The Associated Press

Miami enters this week's AFC showdown at Buffalo with Dan Marino at quarterback. The Bills have Frank Reich.

So who do you think has the edge? Miami coach Don Shula thinks it's Buffalo, which beat the Dolphins 31-17 at Rich Stadium last year. With Frank Reich at quarterback...

"All we have to do is go back to the game there last year," Shula says. "They didn't have him and they completely handled us. It wasn't a contest."

If Buffalo (12-2) wins, it clinches both the AFC East title and the home field throughout the playoff, a big advantage considering the weather in Rich Stadium in January. But if the Bills lose, they fall into a tie with the 11-3 Dolphins and lose any tiebreaker because they lost the first meeting, 30-7, in Miami in September.

Moreover, the Bills have a tough closer at Washington while the Dolphins play host to the Colts.

Meanwhile, the final two weeks of the NFL's first 12-team playoff season begin with just four berths still to be decided — one in the NFC and three in the AFC.

In Saturday games, Detroit is at Green Bay, the Los Angeles Raiders at Minnesota and Washington at Indianapolis in a night game that would normally be played Monday but was moved to Saturday because Monday is Christmas Eve.

In Sunday games, Houston is at Cincinnati; Cleveland at Pittsburgh; Dallas at Philadelphia; New England at the New York Jets; the Los Angeles Rams at Atlanta; Tampa Bay at Chicago; Kansas City at San Diego; New Orleans at San Francisco; the New York Giants at Phoenix; and Denver at Seattle.

Pro football

Houston (8-6) at Cincinnati (7-7) Cleveland (3-11) at Pittsburgh (8-6) Just what everyone expected when the schedule was drawn up — the AFC Central head-to-head in the next-to-last week. Only Cleveland's demise detracts from the division showdown.

Houston and Pittsburgh have the most direct path. If each win this week, their game next week would be for the division title. Pittsburgh can also clinch a wild-card this week if it wins and Seattle and Cincinnati lose.

Cincinnati has been erratic and quarterback Boomer Esiason remains hobbled by a pulled hamstring, although that didn't keep Sam Wyche from playing him at wide receiver for a play in the 24-7 loss to the Raiders last week.

Pittsburgh, which lost to Cleveland 13-3 on opening day, is in position to make the playoffs despite going without an offensive touchdown in seven of its 14 games, including last week's 9-6 win over New Orleans, in which Gary Anderson's three field goals beat Morten Andersen's two.

Dallas (7-7) at Philadelphia (8-6) Normally, the schizophrenic Eagles would let down for this one after having clinched a playoff berth last week.

But Buddy Ryan and Jimmy Johnson aren't exactly best buddies so you can expect the Eagles to play like the Eagles instead of the sparrows they sometimes seem to be. Particularly since the Cowboys have won four straight and can make the playoffs with one win over Philadelphia or Atlanta and a loss by Green Bay.

New York Giants (11-3) at Phoenix (5-9) The beginning of the Jeff Hostetler era for the Giants, who need one win or a Chicago loss to ensure themselves a first-round bye and home-field in the second game. The Cards are the one team that knows Hostetler and vice-versa.

Tampa Bay (6-8) at Chicago (10-4) If Kansas City wins, it clinches a playoff berth. It also needs two wins plus a loss by the Raiders to win the AFC West — if the two teams tie, the Chiefs win because they won both games.

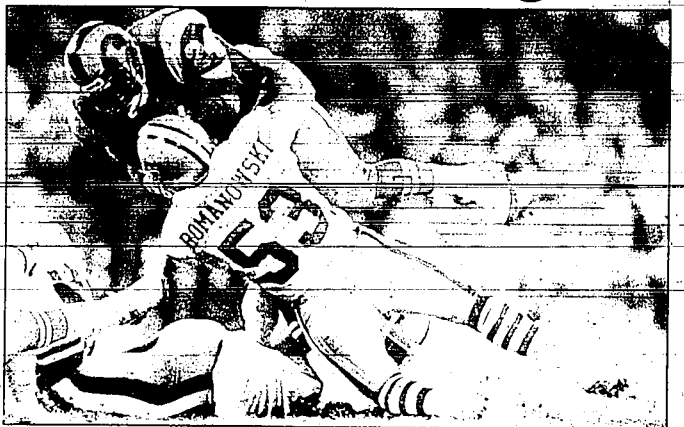

Still, the Bears more or less know their position — unless they win two and the Giants lose to Phoenix and 1-13 New England, they'll play a wild-card team at home the first week.

Kansas City (9-5) at San Diego (6-8) The Chiefs may not know until game time if their quarterback will be Steve DeBerg or Steve Pelluer — DeBerg broke a finger on his left hand in last week's 27-10 loss to Houston last week.

San Francisco (13-1) at San Francisco (13-1) George Seifert insists the 49ers will play hard, even though they've clinched home-field advantage for the playoffs.

"We can't be going into these games afraid somebody is going to get hurt," he says, although Steve Young will relieve Joe Montana some at quarterback in the last two games.

Denver (4-10) at Seattle (7-7) (Sunday night) The Seahawks remain in contention for a playoff berth, although they need to pass Pittsburgh and perhaps Houston to qualify. Denver is long gone, although they broke their six-game losing streak last week by beating San Diego 20-10.

Ironically, it might pay for the Broncos to lose — they could drop as much as seven places in next year's draft with two straight wins.

Los Angeles Rams (5-9) at Atlanta (3-10) Now that the Falcons are at their customary spot in the standings, Jerry Glanville isn't so cute any more.

Not only has Atlanta lost 18 straight on the road, but it's not doing very well at home either. With Chris Miller out and Scott Campbell a question, the Falcons may start Hugh Millen at quarterback and activate Gilbert Renfro, who's been cut four times this season. "One way or another, we have to have two quarterbacks ready," Glanville says.

New England (1-13) at New York Jets (4-10). If the NFL wanted, it probably could call off this game for lack of interest.

In fact, it may be Tommy Hodson against Troy Taylor at quarterback for at least part of the game — the Jets' Bruce Coslet says he may use his rookie for the first time.

One other note — if New England loses — it will wrap up the first pick in next year's draft.

Holiday football rush involves some physics

By Melvin Durslag
The Los Angeles Times

The subject times is football speed and how it may pertain to Bo Jackson, captain of American industry, and others who run with the ball and run.

It isn't known at this point how fast Bo runs. Nor is it known how fast anyone else with the Raiders runs.

The Raiders won't tell you how fast their players run. They won't even tell you how fast Virginia, the switchboard center, runs. Once the opponent learns the speed of Virginia, it can change its coverage and go stride for stride with her on long-distance calls, as well as local.

In football, remember, everything is match-up.

Schembechler popularity takes nose dive

The Associated Press

Bo Schembechler is only slightly more popular than Scrooge in Detroit this weekend.

Not unexpectedly, the Tigers have been deluged by criticism since announcing broadcaster Ernie Harwell will not be back after the 1991 season.

Schembechler, the former Michigan football coach and now Tiger president, made the decision and said it was something that was coming.

Harwell, 72, has been the voice of the Tigers for 31 years. In a 43 year career, he has missed only two broadcasts. Harwell was hoping for at least three more seasons with the Tigers.

There have been threats of boycotts and protests at Tiger Stadium if Harwell does not stay. But Schembechler has never been known to change his mind that much. Paul Carey, Harwell's broadcasting partner, said he would also leave following the 1991 season.

A Detroit Free Press poll of 500 Michiganders who said they regularly watched, listened or attended Tigers games, however, found 62 percent planned to listen to club radio broadcasts just as often when Harwell is gone. According to sources close to the club, a possible replacement for Harwell is Frank Beckmann of WJR, the Tigers' flagship station. Beckmann is an announcer for Michigan football.

Harwell's support for Detroit to remain in Tiger Stadium was apparently another strain on his relationship with Schembechler. Schembechler is pushing for Detroit to build a new stadium and was concerned Harwell's opinion might delay the move.

The decision not to renew Harwell's contract was actually made in mid October.

Analysis

So, once the Raiders record a time on Bo, Willie Gault, Tim Brown, Ron Brown, Sam Graddy, Mervyn Fernandez and others with more than usual speed, they move the information out of the country.

You have heard of guys with millions buried in Swiss banks? The Raiders hide their 40-yard clockings there.

It has been said that Bo has run 40 yards faster than 4.2 seconds. It probably isn't true, but even if it is, you aren't going to impress Jim Bush, track coach of USC, who has done extensive work helping professional teams develop speed.

In his time, Jim has tutored the Raiders, Dodgers, Lakers, even the hockey Kings.

And in football, he will tell you that clockings mean little unless a man is timed with (a) a ball tucked into his arm and (b) 16 pounds of equipment fastened to his body.

"Arm action is vital to sprinting," Bush explains. "Carrying a ball, one doesn't develop the fluid motion of one whose arms are moving free."

George Allen, coach of Patos Verdes, concurs that Bo, embarked on an 88-yard run against Cincinnati the other day, was caught by his pursuer, Rod Jones, mainly because Bo was packing a ball and Rod wasn't. "But Jones showed character," George says. "He chased Bo gamely for maybe 60 yards."

Jones is a former quarterback, he didn't try to catch Bo, who was running east in the Coliseum, until the two reached Figueroa Street. By the time they got to Broadway, Jones would have left him in the dust.

"What that chase also proved," says track coach Jim Bush, "is that both Jackson and Jones are able to carry their speed packing equipment. Like horses, certain guys pack weight better than others. Football people don't learn this at camp, where guys are usually clocked in shorts. Camp speed readings can be deceptive."

It is sometimes reported, but not to be believed, that players running 88 yards "turn on the jets" in the last stages.

"There is no greater fallacy," Bush says. "It is proved in track that a sprinter going 100 meters reaches his maximum speed by 60 meters. Trying to accelerate beyond 60, he will develop fatigue. The best a sprinter can hope for is to reach his maximum by 60 and sustain it. Same thing in football. Running full-out for 60 yards, Bo doesn't then accelerate. It would appear that way only if the guy chasing him gets tired and falls back."

For all the intrigue surrounding Jackson, for all the commotion he generates, most people lose sight of the fact he carried the ball last Sunday an average of only twice a quarter.

Big Oil's move to USSR might be slowed by politics

NEW YORK (AP) — The Soviet Union's most recent political turmoil has become another wild card faced by Western oil companies examining possible deals for exploring, drilling and exporting crude from the vast ...delays everything, said John Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

One of the problems they have with making deals over there is that they didn't know how reliable their partner was, who their partner was."

Texaco Inc., one of several major petroleum explorers interested in the Soviet Union, is puzzling to figure out who to negotiate with among the many layers of Soviet bureaucracy, spokesman David Dickson said.

"Is it the Soviet government?" Dickson said. "Is it the Russian republic? Is it the local authorities?" Apparently, none of the major oil companies has gone beyond signing agreements that commit them to exploring possible joint ventures, experts said.

"Our discussions are still too preliminary to make any judgments about possible outcomes," Exxon Corp. said in a statement.

Other oil companies interested in Soviet ventures include Chevron Corp., Amoco Corp., British Petroleum and ARCO.

Experts say Chevron might be the most advanced in getting a deal with the Soviets.

But, like the others, Chevron will say little about the status of its plans.

"We are in the final stages of negotiations on a joint venture," spokesman Larry Shushan said Friday. "We're not really in a position to speculate as to timing."

Chevron's deal would be in the large Tengiz oilfield in the north-east Caspian Sea region, which the Soviets have estimated could contain 25 billion barrels of oil. That would be enough to supply all the American oil needs for decades.

The uncertainties facing the oil giants were heightened this week, when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze quit, shocking President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and stirring concerns that a dictatorship could emerge or that more troubles could develop.

"It could be a detriment," Exxon spokesman Lance Lambertson said. "I can't quantify it."

The Soviet Union is the world's largest oil producer, but its industry has fallen on hard times after reaching 12.5 million barrels of crude oil a day in 1988.

The problem is technology. The Soviets have extracted much of the oil that was relatively easy to obtain and they are unable to get to some additional reserves, which will bring in needed hard currency, without help from the West.

Saddam predicts victory in gulf war

BERLIN (AP) — Saddam Hussein said in an interview broadcast Friday that U.S. forces would not be able to sustain a prolonged war with Iraq and President Bush would be forced to order a retreat after American casualties mounted to 5,000.

Saddam, in the interview on Germany's ZDF television network, refused again to pull out of Kuwait by the Jan. 15 deadline set by the United Nations for avoiding force.

But the Iraqi leader also claimed to be interested in holding talks with the U.S. government.

"From our side, the door for a dialogue still remains open," said the Iraqi president. "We are for a dialogue. Without it, there is no understanding."

ZDF broadcast the interview Friday evening, saying it had been conducted in Baghdad the day before.

"In the event of war, there will be great losses, not just in terms of human life. Those who now say 'yes to war will be responsible," Saddam said. "Allah is on our side, so we will defeat the aggressors."

The Iraqi leader made his comments in Arabic and they were translated into German by the television network. The Associated Press in turn translated the remarks into English.

Asked whether he would pull his troops out of Kuwait by the Jan. 15 deadline set by the United Nations, the Iraqi chief answered "no."

Brazil to clean up Rio's bay polluted with wastes

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The government on Friday announced a $500 million project to dredge and clean up Rio's picturesque Guanabara Bay, polluted by years of chemical waste-dumping.

The federal project, to begin next month, includes the construction of underground drains, recycling plants and waste treatment facilities, said Eliana Farias, a spokeswoman in the Social Action Ministry.

Scientists say it will take until the year 2005 to finish the cleanup.

The bay, known worldwide for the picture-postcard Sugarloaf Mountain rising at its mouth, will also be dredged to halt a 50-year erosion of its banks, Farias said by telephone from Brasilia.

The cleanup will occur in conjunction with "Project Rio."

That $390 million campaign, financed by the World Bank, is underway to clean Rio's waterways and beaches and upgrade the city's sanitation department, Farias said.

Today, the bay receives an estimate of 100 tons of chemical waste from oil refineries daily.

Ocean tides carry some residue out to sea, but much of it washes up on the shores of Rio's famous beaches, including Copacabana and Ipanema.

Romanians rally on 1st anniversary

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Romanians rallied on the first anniversary of the revolution that toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, but the marches were tinged by frustrations over increasing economic hardships.

Rallies in Bucharest and Timisoara, the cradle of last year's revolution, capped a week of protests against Ceausescu's successors. Romanians are frustrated with the lack of improved living standards since 1989.

About 15,000 people gathered in Bucharest's University Square, chanting slogans against President Iliescu.

Another 15,000 workers rallied in Timisoara, 300 miles northwest of the capital.

The two weeks prior to the revolution's anniversary have been marked by strikes and protests against the National Salvation Front government.

The Front, which took power during the revolution and won subsequent May elections, faces sliding popularity over its plans to reform the economy that include raising prices on basic goods.

On University Square, where police shot and killed demonstrators last Dec. 21, crowds knelt and lit candles in memory of the uprising's 1,039 dead.

Shevardnadze meets with Gorbachev to discuss role in government

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev met with Eduard Shevardnadze Friday, a day after the foreign minister's dramatic resignation.

Aides said the two explored the possibility of keeping Shevardnadze in the government.

In parliament, reformers turned Shevardnadze's unexpected resignation into a rallying cry. A parade of speakers echoed the 62-year-old diplomat's warning that hard-liners were pushing the country toward dictatorship.

Gorbachev talked privately with Shevardnadze for two hours about the Persian Gulf crisis and conventional arms reductions in Europe, presidential spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko told reporters.

Ignatenko called the session "an ordinary meeting between the president and his foreign minister," the independent Interfax news agency said.

Presidential aide Georgi Shakhnazarov said Gorbachev also had planned to ask Shevardnadze why he resigned.

"Was it political motives, or personal answers, it would be possible to decide whether to ask him to continue working in that role, or in another role, or to agree on something else."

It was not clear whether Gorbachev intended to ask Shevardnadze to continue as foreign minister or to take another post. A Shevardnadze aide said Thursday the resignation was "irreversible."

Earlier Friday, Tass quoted Shakhnazarov as saying Shevardnadze would stay "on Gorbachev's team," but offered no other details.

There was no further word late Friday about the meeting, or whether Gorbachev had reached any decision about the foreign minister's job. Shevardnadze made no public comment Friday.

It also was not known whether Shevardnadze would take part in a Moscow arms control summit Feb. 11-13 between Gorbachev and President Bush.

On Thursday, Shevardnadze stunned Gorbachev, the parliament and the world community by resigning.

In what he called "the briefest and most difficult speech of my life," Shevardnadze said reformers had "gone and hidden in the bushes" and "dictatorship is coming."

"No one knows what kind of dictatorship it will be, what kind of dictator will come, and what other things will take," Shevardnadze said.

His resignation prompted worldwide concern over the future of reform in the Soviet Union.

Hard-liners have urged Gorbachev to impose a state of emergency in republics ridden by ethnic conflict and separatist movements. Gorbachev has asked the Congress to consider constitutional amendments to strengthen his power to deal with such trouble spots.

The hard-liners also had criticized Soviet endorsement of a U.N. resolution on the use of force in the Gulf, but their main criticism was over domestic issues.

An Ukrainian lawmaker shook up the 2,360-member Congress of People's Deputies on Friday afternoon by saying a "right-wing reactionary coup" was brewing.

"Reactionaries, centralists, and imperialists have united and are on the attack," lawmaker Vladimir Chernyak said. "At the head of the coup stands Gorbachev. It's possible he himself doesn't know it."

Earthquake injures 40, leaves 1 person dead

SALONICA, Greece (AP) — A strong earthquake shook the Balkan early Friday, killing a Greek woman, causing homes to collapse and injuring at least 40 people, authorities and news reports said.

The Salonica Seismological Institute said the tremor measured 5.5 on the Richter scale.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif., said it recorded the quake at 6.1.

Its epicenter was in the village of Goumenista, about 35 miles northwest of Salonica, the seismological institute said.

The quake was also felt in Yugoslavia, Romania and Bulgaria, according to news reports.

A spokesman at the Salonica institute said more than 30 aftershocks followed the main quake, the largest measuring 3.5 on the open-ended Richter scale.

The quake occurred in the Serbo-Macedonian zone, which begins in southern Bulgaria and winds into northern Greece, a seismologically active region.

The zone includes the Cressna fault.

A police spokesman in the town of Edessa, about 20 miles west of the epicenter, identified the dead woman as 69-year-old Anastasia Deltou.

The main regional hospital in Edessa reported that more than 25 people were treated for injuries and five of them were hospitalized.

A hospital spokeswoman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said area medical centers treated and released at least 15 other people.

According to police reports, 11 houses in towns and villages near the epicenter either collapsed or became uninhabitable.

Three fell down in Goumenista.

Government dictates Stalin symbols to go, opposition OK

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — The government Friday gave permission for the first legal opposition rally in Albania and said all statues and symbols bearing the name of Soviet dictator Josef Stalin should be removed.

Authorities also said enterprises and institutions bearing Stalin's name should receive new ones, the state ATA news agency reported. It said this was decided "taking into consideration that historic circumstances have changed."

Workers on agricultural cooperatives and residents in housing blocks named after Stalin should similarly decide on new names, the report said.

Clusters of Tirana residents watched all morning as workers toiled to dismantle the marble-covered pedestal in a central park on which a statue of Stalin had stood for decades. The statue itself came down at midnight.

A second Stalin statue at the Stalin Textile Combine in Tirana was also taken down overnight.

Stalin, who was born this day in 1879, was the father-figure of the harsh brand of communism that Albania's founder Enver Hoxha imposed on his country for 41 years.

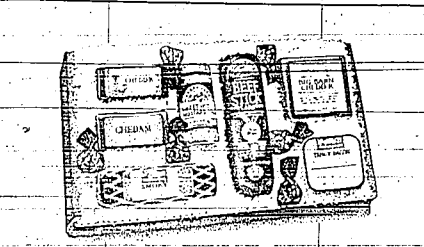

Antiquities director dies at 54

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Said Tawfik, Egypt's chief archaeologist and chairman of antiquities, has died of a heart attack at age 54, friends and newspapers reported Friday.

Tawfik, a former dean of archaeology and professor of Egyptology at Cairo University, was the author of a half-dozen books on Egyptian antiquities.

As chairman of the Egyptian Antiquities Organization, he was in charge of all restoration and conservation work on Egypt's vast legacy of pyramids, tombs, temples, and other relics threatened by time, pollution and the demands of an exploding population.

McClure takes final bow as senator Friday

WASHINGTON — Idaho Sen. James McClure flew out of Washington for the last time as senator Friday, and his Washington office closed.

Sen.-elect Larry Craig, who defeated Democrat Ron Twillegar in last month's general election, will formally take office when Congress convenes Jan. 7.

McClure's Twin Falls staff is making room for Craig's staffers; Craig's Magic Valley field office will open in Twin Falls next month.

McClure will join the Boise law firm of Givens, Pursley, Webb and Huntley as a counsel.

McClure, who has a home in McCall, is a member of the board of directors of several Idaho companies.

This lion 'hit the road, Jack' and didn't want back

RUPERT — Things got pretty wild on Interstate 84 one mile east of here Friday, as sheriff's officers and Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials had to track down a mountain lion who got loose as the result of a traffic accident.

Three adult mountain lions were being transported from a private game park in Florida to a park in Oregon when the driver Roger Lane of Indiana slid off the icy road at about 10:30 a.m. Friday, said Tom Whalen, conservation officer for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Two of the lions got out, Whalen said.

A three-year-old female lion ran onto Interstate 84 and was killed by a truck, he said. The other lion, a 200-pound male, was hiding in the weeds and had to be tranquilized by officials before he could be recaptured.

Cold temperatures prevented the full tranquilizer dosage from going into the lion, which provided quite a struggle before being taken to a Heyburn veterinarian, Whalen said.

Lane was treated for minor chest bruises at the Mt. Idaho County Hospital, Whalen said. The third lion did not escape and suffered a broken tooth, he said.

County clerk and district court only 2 to close Monday

The county clerk's office and District Court will be open, but all other county offices will be closed Monday, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

City and County offices will reopen on Wednesday.

Officials fear traffic fatalities may increase over holidays

BOISE — Last year saw the lowest number of traffic fatalities in Idaho since 1963, but state police fear bad driving conditions during this year's holidays may mean an increase in driving deaths.

"Snow has moved into the state just in time for the holidays," said Col. Rich Humphries, Idaho State Police superintendent.

"Combine that with the seasonal increases of traffic and drinking drivers and we have the potential for problems," he said.

Judge says city acted legally in awarding bridge contract

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judge Daniel Mechl on Friday denied Idaho Construction Co.'s request for an injunction to stop work on the Victory Bridge over Rock Creek.

Mechl ruled the city did not violate or undermine Idaho competitive bidding laws by letting Wadsworth Construction Co. correct its original bid on the bridge project.

The Sall-Lake City company was entitled to "separable relief" because its original bid contained a clerical error, he said.

Mechl's decision means Wadsworth will continue work on the $1.4 million bridge expected to be finished by next June.

Idaho Construction had asked the judge

To stop work on the bridge after the Twin Falls City Council let Wadsworth correct its original bid upward by $60,000 in October. Wadsworth was the project's low bidder, and after all the bids had been opened the company told city officials it had made a clerical error that understated the cost of concrete by $60,000.

Idaho Construction contended the city violated Idaho competitive bidding laws by letting Wadsworth correct its bid and asked that the contract between Wadsworth and the city be nullified.

The Kimberly company also asked that the project be rebid or awarded to the second-lowest bidder — Idaho Construction.

"This is not just a case of someone saying 'I've got over $100,000 to play with, so I'll find a way of upping my bid,'

Mechl said.

Evidence showed that the error was clerical and in good faith, the judge said. And Idaho law does not stop a city from letting a company correct a clerical error in its bid, Mechl said.

Wadsworth told the city of the bid error on Monday, Oct. 1, three days after it had won the contract. The city voted that night to accept Wadsworth's original bid, but the company said it would not perform on the contract.

On Oct. 9, City Engineer Gary Young met with Wadsworth representatives who showed him documents corroborating that the price of concrete had been figured in the bid at $5.20 a cubic yard instead of $5.2 a yard.

The company also showed Young docu-

Murder suspect still loose

BURLEY — A 72-year-old Burley woman who died of a gunshot wound Tuesday was not terminally ill before she was killed, the Cassia County sheriff said Friday.

While police across the country continued the search for 77-year-old Raymond Stanton Friday, Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said an autopsy revealed that Ellen Stanton was not terminally ill, but her husband may have believed she was.

Ellen Stanton had cancer removal surgery about six years ago, Crystal said. The scar tissue from that operation had built up and may have been causing some pain and leading the Stantons to believe she was terminally ill, he said.

But police won't know for sure until they can find Raymond Stanton, who disappeared Tuesday before a construction worker found Ellen Stanton in bed with a single gunshot wound in the head.

Stanton may be driving a brown 1986 Pontiac Sunbird with Idaho license plates 11 1121.

Stanton is wanted for questioning in the shooting, but neither he nor his car have been seen since Tuesday, Crystal said.

Fate of some sports up in the State's bank economic index turns up

air in Buhl

By Bertilia L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The school district will have to decide soon how it will fund baseball and track programs this year.

Buhl High School Principal Dennis Osman and Athletic Director Clark Muscat asked for guidance about the programs during the board's regular meeting this past week.

Both sports have been funded from money raised by the coaches rather than from the athletic fund. The athletic fund is already $1,400 over budget and has no money to spare this year.

Much of the baseball equipment has been borrowed in the past, but now has to be purchased at considerable cost. Traveling expenses are increasing also, due to the lack of participation by other schools in the Magic Valley.

Muscat expressed concern for the stress on a community that is always being asked to help fund activities, sport by sport. He suggested the high school begin an annual athletic fund-raising event for all sports.

Armond Eckert, board member, said with the increase in costs the only options are to cut back or raise the money. Eckert said the annual fund-raiser is a good idea.

"If a fund-raiser is agreed upon, Muscat would like to form some type of committee to help develop the event. This would probably be held in the spring so that money would be available in the fall when school begins.

Muscat gave the board statistical information on the two sports regarding expenses, participation and number of games.

He asked the School Board for some direction after the holidays.

The board also learned a grant application submitted by the Buhl School District has been accepted for the North Star Telecommunications distance learning program.

If it gets a grant, the district will receive several thousand dollars in equipment, including a satellite dish, a large television screen and telephone line hook-ups.

North Star provides two-way, interactive telecommunication between the classroom and an instructor out of the area. A variety of language courses are offered including German and Japanese. This will bring many other courses into the classroom as well, including teacher in-service programs.

TWIN FALLS — West One Bancorp's economic index turned up slightly in the third quarter, reversing the first decline the index saw since 1987.

The bank's Idaho Business Activity Index changed course when sales tax collection and building permits rebounded during the quarter. During the second quarter of 1990, the index posted its first decline since the fourth quarter of 1987.

West One's report and other recent economic reports describe a healthy state economy that is nonetheless experiencing slight pain from a weak national economy.

Idaho's housing market is one of the strongest in the nation, West One said, and retail sales remained strong except for automobile purchases.

Average single-family home prices increased nearly 11 percent in the first six months of 1990, and building permits and existing-home sales have posted some of the strongest performances in the nation.

But automobile sales are a cause of some concern.

"It is likely that uncertainty created by the Middle East crisis and by reports of impending national recession have made Idaho consumers leery of spending on big-ticket items," the bank reported.

Even though milk, wheat, barley and bean prices have slipped, cash receipts for farms were 14 percent ahead of last year's record pace after seven months.

But the bank said the national economy will shrink during the fourth quarter and resume slow growth in mid-1991. That prediction is what most national economists think will happen, although Idaho economists say the state shouldn't experience a downturn.

Another economic report indicated that Idaho's economy is experiencing some drag. General-account revenue collections weakened in November, the state's Division of Financial Management reported.

In its monthly report on tax collections — an indicator of income and profits — November tax collections fell $3.1 million behind expectations. But the only category behind expectations for the year to date is corporate income taxes.

Personal-income tax collections continued to outperform the state's expectations, a product of employment gains in the state.

Crater area grazing site snafu was just an oversight, Feds say

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Failure to inform a conservation group of a water development near Craters of the Moon National Monument was unintentional, says the Bureau of Land Management.

The Committee for Idaho's High Desert has not received information it requested about a proposed well and livestock water development in Laidlaw Park just outside the monument, but Monument Resource Area Manager Steve Ellis says that was merely an oversight.

"We've had just an awful time getting information on some pretty big projects," said Randy Morris, chairman of the Committee for Idaho's High Desert. "It seems to me the BLM is purposely not telling us about these water developments."

But Ellis insists the lack of information is not intentional. The BLM processes between 50 and 60 environmental assessments on various projects every year. Not all of them are sent out, he said, but all are available if specifically requested.

The assessments normally are sent only to those groups or individuals that have established themselves as affected interests, with the BLM. Although the Committee for Idaho's High Desert has expressed an ongoing interest in grazing issues, the BLM does not consider it an affected interest in every issue.

Morris' interest centers on the condition of the land, he said. In the monument area the vegetation is as poor as anywhere in Idaho, he said.

"It has been abused for more than 100 years," he said.

Less than 1 percent of the monument district has excellent grassland — fingers of high-quality grass among the lava flows — and it appears the pipeline is going into the 1 percent, Morris said.

"When pipelines go in, the BLM typically increases the number of AUMs, or animals it permits to graze on the land, he said. More cows go out on the land, but the vegetation never improves.

"We don't know where the pipeline is going," Morris said. "We don't know if it is going into rangeland areas. We don't know what impacts it will have on wildlife. We just don't have any information."

The proposal, however, does not include an increase in the number of animals, Ellis said.

The 1,400-foot well was proposed by the Laidlaw Park Cattle Association, which will fund part of the bill, he said. The rest of the money would come from funds supported by grazing fees.

The proposal includes a main pipeline heading south from the well, and several side pipes to animal watering troughs, he said.

Cattle normally are moved out of the primarily spring range by July-1.

But the water would be left on except in winter for antelope, deer, elk and other wildlife, which now use other existing livestock watering systems.

The water system will disperse cattle to areas that get little use now, Ellis said. Ranchers now haul water by truck to livestock troughs.

"The pipeline, however, has not gone without scrutiny."

The Idaho Conservation League filed an appeal on the project, public lands coordinator Mike Meubury said.

But the league has agreed to withdraw its appeal if a management plan for the grazing area is approved to consider effects on grazing management, recreation and wildlife, distribution in addition to livestock.

Meubury filed the appeal because he felt the new set of roads built to service the pipeline was being built without considering any interests other than the ranchers, he said.

Wesley Bell Ringers still making music after quarter century

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — For more than 25 years, Ed Duncan has been hearing bells.

From tiny silver melody bells to the biggest—a thunderous 22-pounder, he loves them all.

Even the answering machine at Duncan's home has a message telling callers they've reached the Wesley Bell Ringers, the nation's largest handbell choir.

It all began in 1965, when Duncan's pastor at the Christ United Methodist Church asked him to establish a group to give the congregation's teen-agers something to do.

"One day I was idly thumbing through a catalogue of church supplies and my eyes lit on this set of 25 bells you could buy," said Duncan, who plays organ and piano and teaches high school physics.

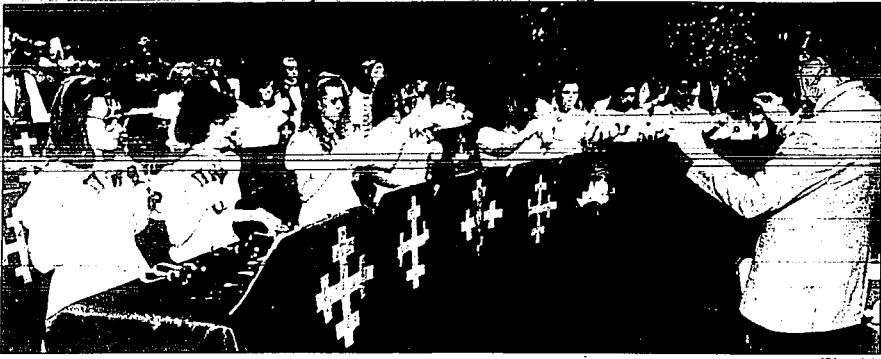

"I thought it seemed like something the kids could do right off the bat," he said.

Over the years, the group has had as few as nine players to its current 30, the numbers changing because Duncan never turns away a potential player.

"That may be the thing I'm the most proud of, anybody can play that wants to. They don't have to be musicians," he said.

Duncan arranges nearly all of the music for the group and said it's like scoring for three keyboard instruments and a percussion ensemble. There are several octaves of bells, and at least three sets are playing all the time.

"Each kid in the section has the same music, then we assign them a certain number of bells and teach them where the notes are located on the staff," he said.

Ed Duncan conducts a performance of the nation's largest bell choir at a meeting of the Mormon Church's Historical Society.

White-gloved, the bell-ringers perform in a complicated choreography that produces a rich sound sometimes reminiscent of a pipe organ.

"Spectacular!" one listener was heard to say at a recent performance. The group has played at Disneyland, Disney World, the U.S. Capitol, Yorktown Victory Center and in every state in the nation.

Christmas programs are devoted mostly to carols, but the choir's repertoire includes popular, sacred and classical music.

Last year, the bell ringers were guests of the Mormon Tabernacle

Choir for a Christmas performance and recently were chosen to perform at a convention of bell choir directors.

"I really can't say with certainty, but as nearly as I know it's the biggest choir in sheer volume of bells and largest number of people. So I keep saying it's the biggest," Duncan said.

"And the bell manufacturers say it's true." For the players, the group has come to represent an important bond with other members of their faith.

Because of the Mormon Church's predominance in Utah, the group's teen-agers sometimes are the only Methodists in their school, and the choir offers a comforting sense of community.

"It's nice knowing you're not the only Methodist in town," said My Thomas, 19, who has played with the group for two years.

Jerry Moore, 18, a four-year veteran, said the ties run so deep between the players that he likens them to a big family.

"This definitely brings friends closer. You become lifelong friends," he said. "You meet people in this group and you'll always remember them."

Participation in the group means giving up at least three evenings a week for rehearsals and performances. In December, the group limits performances to two during the week and two on weekends and often have to turn down invitations to perform.

"If we minded the time commitment, we really wouldn't be here," Moore said.

"We really wouldn't rather be doing anything else." Every summer, the group tours for five weeks. Fund-raisers and proceeds from sales of their recordings help finance the trip. Linda Gross, a parent volunteer who handles publicity, said the church has a fund set aside to pay Duncan and help with the summer tours, but he never takes the money.

"He pays his assistant a little and uses the rest is used for scholarships to get everyone on tour," she said.

This summer the group will travel to the eastern United States and the tour will include a performance at the wedding of a former bell ringer.

In addition to daily performances, Duncan's wife, Trudy, a history teacher, makes sure the group sees the historical sights.

Duncan said he's willing to give countless hours to the group because he loves the music and the music makers.

"I think it really gives them something to be proud of," he said. "From year to year they get so much better, the old kids teach the new ones. Whenever we go someplace to play, I can almost stand around and do nothing."

"It's organized and controlled by the kids and they don't want anybody screwing it up," Duncan said. "I look at the leaders now and some of them were really goony as sophomores."

Duncan won't say how old he is, but says he rarely thinks about retirement.

"Once in a while I wonder what will happen when I don't do this anymore," he said. "But most of all, I just do it for fun."

Blind pastor will be back

ELLESDALE, Del. (AP) — A blind clergyman can return to the pulpit after a 10-week absence now that he's won permission to have his guide dog in church.

The decision was announced recently at Mount Zion AME church. The Rev. Le Roy Singleton, an associate pastor, was sitting in the fourth row with his wife, Emma, and their guide dog, Bigby. Singleton's vision had been failing for years because of glaucoma and diabetes.

He got the German shepherd-collie mixed breed in September, but he said the Rev. Ellsworth Coleman, the church's pastor, told him the dog was not welcome in the church. Singleton, who had been sitting in the pulpit, moved to the back pews with the dog, saying he did not want to cause any problems in the church. He also stopped performing ministerial duties.

Singleton blamed a church member, whom he did not identify, for causing the dispute.

Robbery a motive in beatings

BOISE (AP) — The fatal beatings of a Boise bartender and a tavern customer are not part of a violent pattern in the capital city, authorities say.

Brandy Rains, 20, a bartender, and John B. Justad, 22, a customer, died from head injuries suffered in the attack early Thursday at The Rose Pub, St. said Lt. Jim Spears.

The assailant apparently grabbed cash from the bar and fled out the door, leaving footprints in the snow, Boise police said Thursday.

Ms. Rains, of Boise, was engaged to be married. Justad, who worked for a local beer distributor, was recently discharged from the Idaho

Army National Guard.

Both victims were repeatedly hit on the head with a blunt instrument about midnight, Spears said.

"It was a robbery," he said. "That, at least, was one of the motives. We're following up on leads."

Police said they had no suspects in the case, but added they believe one person was involved. The killer took an undisclosed amount of money.

Both victims were taken to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center where they died shortly after. Ada County Coroner Erwin Sonnenberg said.

There was evidence Justad tried to defend himself, Sonnenberg said. He did not provide details.

Police followed footprints they believe were the killer's, but "lost them at a nearby intersection, Spears said."

The victims were found in a back room of the bar by a customer, he said. "A patron came into the bar and there was no one around to wait on him, so he checked around and found them," Spears said.

"It's a quiet, quiet, friendly bar," said Nancy Newby of Boise, who occasionally stops by after work. "It's the kind of bar where a girl can go and be at home. You could sit there quietly and not be bothered."

Zoning commission approves Simplot request

POCATELLO (AP) — The Bannock County Planning and Zoning Commission has approved the request of J.R. Simplot Co. for a conditional use permit for a proposed phosphate slurry line to the company's phosphate processing plant.

The eight-inch pipeline will carry a mixture of water and mineral slurry 60 miles from Simplot's Conda site in Caribou County, including about 26 miles through Bannock County. The company says the pipeline will eliminate a "fugitive dust" problem from other means of moving the phosphate.

Construction is expected to begin in April and be complete by next fall. Two small sections of the pipeline already have been built at the request of residents who did not want to delay their own development plans.

Approval from the Planning and Zoning Commission was only required for sections of the pipeline that will pass through Bannock County residential areas.

Simplot's plan already had been approved by the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service. Most of the pipeline will be built adjacent to county roads.

Where it crosses the Portneuf River, it will be placed in a 16-inch casing and suspended over the water.

The county will require Simplot to revegetate lands affected by construction, reduce the project's visual impact and have plans in place to quickly repair any pipeline breaks.

MacConnell named to post

BOISE (AP) — Newly appointed Idaho Department of Law Enforcement Director Richard Cade has named R. Monte MacConnell to be his deputy director, effective Jan. 1.

MacConnell will fill the position vacated when Gov. Cecil Andrus appointed Cade to the job of Law Enforcement director on Monday. Cade replaced Mack Richardson, who Andrus fired last month after it was learned the Idaho State Police had been instructed to overlook traffic violations by state lawmakers.

ISP Capt. Ronald Moore of Lewiston also was promoted to colonel Monday and appointed to succeed Col. Rich Humphreys as State Police superintendent. Andrus said Moore would have the title of Law Enforcement deputy director.

MacConnell has been the department's legal counsel since March 1987. Before that, the former Marine was in private law practice and served as a 4th District magistrate and deputy attorney general.

He is a 1966 graduate of the University of Illinois College of Law.

But 4,000 game farms there raise red deer. And sell $10 million worth of deer meat worldwide. Your market's deen, if any, is from there, probably. Idaho

Recovering bad loans major job for state

SANDPOINT (AP) — Officials are still trying to recover money loaned to Idaho businesses to create jobs in the early 1980s that was lost to default.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development-revolving loan program to finance new businesses was canceled in 1987, the officials said Thursday.

In Idaho, $5.8 million in loans were made and managed by councils of businessmen and county officials. The funds were supposed to grow when the loans were paid off, increasing the amount of money available to finance new businesses.

Statewide, about 20 percent of the revolving loan fund dollars were lost to default.

"We were taking the riskiest projects," said Jan H. Bickelstaff, the Idaho Department of Commerce staffer who oversaw funds statewide.

"If it had been a venture capital fund, we'd be well with a 20 percent rate (of default). As a commercial bank, we did lousy," Bickelstaff said.

In northern Idaho, the Panhandle Area Council sued seven firms to recover money lost in the early 1980s after about $500,000 of the $2.5 million in loans made between 1982 and 1986 were in default by 1989.

Panhandle Area Council executive director Jim Deffenbaugh said most of the money has either been recovered or is being repaid, although some loans had to be written off as losses.

Deffenbaugh noted that the early 1980s were days of low prices for grains and metals and low lumber demand. "These loans were made by local development corporations that were looking at the program as a means to save their economy," Deffenbaugh said.

Meanwhile, the Panhandle Area Council continues to manage the revolving loan fund, which now amounts to $4.5 million, Deffenbaugh said.

As of last week, $3 million was lent out in three-year loans to projects ranging from a golf course at Post Falls to a Hayden cabinetry shop in Hayden and a pulper supplier in St. Maries.

Blaze consumes school

BOISE (AP) — With a glow visible all over west Boise, a tower of flames has completely destroyed the town's Seventh-day Adventist elementary school.

The eight-grade building burned to the ground Thursday night, soon after the fire was reported at 6:28 p.m.

"It's unbelievable," said school secretary Erna Hoover, who has worked at the school for more than six years.

"It's just unreal. It's all gone, there's nothing left," Boise Fire Department officials said.

Temporary shutdown at mill

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The lowest timber market prices in eight years have forced the temporary shutdown of the Idaho Pine sawmill, idling about 65 employees.

Gary R. Cash, spokesman for Idaho Pine, said even though the planing section of the mill will remain open, the sawmill itself was shut down Friday and will remain closed until Jan. 20.

"It's just bad market conditions and we've got enough inventory to keep the planer going," said Cash, who added the overall outlook for the mill remains "reasonably good."

"There are a lot of 'ifs' down the road, depending on what the market does," he said.

The mill occasionally has been shut down for two weeks at a time for maintenance, but the last time Idaho Pine closed its operation for more than two weeks was 1982.

Micron fined for incorrect forms

BOISE (AP) — Boise's Micron Technology Inc. has been fined nearly $108,000 by the Environmental Protection Agency for incorrectly filling out forms on hazardous chemicals.

"None of it was toxic chemicals that would have been environmentally hazardous," said Klipp Bedard, spokesman for the computer chip manufacturer.

Micron was one of three companies fined this week under an EPA enforcement action. Seattle Steel was hit with a $93,300 citation and Boeing Co. in Seattle, $72,250.

Under the Toxic Release Inventory program, companies with more than 10 employees that handle any of 325 toxic chemicals must file annual reports disclosing air, land and water emissions.

Micron already was installing a sulfurizing acid recovery system and a solvent distillation system at a cost of $63,000, Bedard said. The EPA subtracted that amount from the fine, he said.
