Iraq denies reports it will withdraw from Kuwait

The Associated Press
Iraq on Saturday denied reports that it is engaged in secret contacts with Washington to avert war and might withdraw from Kuwait before the United Nations Jan. 15 deadline.
Iraq Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, meanwhile, held talks on a new effort by the world's non-aligned nations to defuse the buildup in the Persian Gulf.

ton late Saturday on a quick trip to Saudi Arabia to spend New Year's Day with American troops and to visit Saudi leaders and the exiled emir of Kuwait.
Iraq's information minister, Latif Nusayif Jassim, denied a report by Radio Monte Carlo that secret U.S.-Iraqi contacts were under way, the official Iraqi News Agency reported. The radio report quoted unidentified diplomatic sources in Egypt as saying Iraq was considering some ideas proposed by Washington.

The radio said these include an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait in exchange for assurances that it will not be attacked by the U.S.-led multinational force, which is expected to total more than half a million troops by the end of January.
Independent Radio Monte Carlo, which has an Arabic-language service widely listened in the Middle East, is generally reliable in its reporting on the Persian Gulf situation.

U.S. officials have also denied that secret talks are being held.
Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has sent an estimated 500,000 troops to southern Iraq and Kuwait since he seized the emirate on Aug. 2 in a dispute over oil, land and money. The statement by his ruling council reaffirmed Iraq's determination to hold on to the conquered emirate.

Family hasn't found gold in Elko

Editor's note: Elko's gold-fueled boom of the late 1980s has leveled off into a period of steady, if uneven growth for Twin Falls' neighbor to the south. Today The Times-News begins a two-part series on Elko County's economy and its substantial effect on the Magic Valley.

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

ELKO, Nev. — When Terry Maybe packed his belongings and hopes and moved to Elko in November, he was not looking for a pot of gold — just a job in a mine.

Rumors were rampant in Colorado that the gold mines near Elko were hiring, paying good wages. The chance to earn a gold miner's pay sounded too good, so Maybe, who was working as a corrections officer in Denver, loaded his car and drove west.

Terry Maybe, in his $786-a-month Elko motel room, hopes for work soon at one of the area's gold mines.

After the gold rush

A Times-News special report

But he didn't call the mines first to see if they were hiring. When Maybe arrived in Elko he learned the hard way that — at least for now — Elko's gold boom has ended.

The mines still are taking record amounts of gold from the high Nevada desert, but they have all the workers they need and more than enough applicants for jobs that come open.

Only one mining company with which Maybe applied wrote back to say it would keep his resume on file.

So he waits, hoping a job will come open.

He is not alone. His sister and her daughter and her daughter's 3-year-old son arrived in Elko a couple of weeks before Maybe. They too had hoped to find a better life. All they have found so far is a bleak one-bedroom furnished motel suite that costs $786 a month.

Maybe sleeps on a roll-out bed in the living room. His sister Sherry and her daughter Shannon sleep in the bedroom. Shannon's son Johnny Ray sleeps in a small bed in a walk-in closet.

ELKO, Nev. — Subzero temperatures with snow sliding in on an arctic wind can take the glitter and hope out of any gold boom if you are hungry and homeless.

Elko has prospered from its decade-long ride atop the gold boom; but the city has its problems too. People looking for work in the mines do not have money to buy food. Some of them sleep in unheated trailers in the foothills outside the city limits.

Some sleep on sidewalks. If they are lucky, the police come along and take them

Teens spend cold night in car, huddle in sleeping bags, clothes

By Kirk Mitchell

TWIN FALLS — Four teen-agers spent Friday night in their car after it became stuck in a snow drift and sheriff's deputies hurried from one ditch-stranded motorist to the next as the wind chill factors dipped to 50 below zero in the valley.

The four siblings, Robert Lipskoeh, 13; Tony, 15; Desiree, 17 and Les, 18, were returning home to Hagerman from a party in Buhl when they encountered a ground blizzard at the top of the Bell Rapids grade, Les said.

No one got what he or she wanted out of Nancy Cruzan's sad saga.

Joe Cruzan did get a court decision allowing for the removal of his daughter's feeding tube removed, but he said after her funeral Friday: "I would prefer to let my daughter die and let somebody else be this tailblazer. Our courage came from the young lady she just buried."

For him, there will be no more one-sided conversations with his 33-year-old daughter, who died Wednesday after spending nearly eight years in a vegetative state because of a devastating car crash.

MOSCOW — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Saturday ordered the creation of a development fund and a 5 percent national sales tax whose revenues would partly go to helping the poor and stabilizing the monetary system.

The latest decrees were not connected to the Soviet parliament vote Thursday that strengthened Gorbachev's power over a reorganized executive branch. That vote has

Argentina pardons former dictators
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Two former dictators who led the 1970s "dirty war" against a leftist insurgency and a rebel leader whose movement inspired the repression were freed Saturday by government pardons.

The onetime dictators, former army Gen. Jorge Videla and Roberto Viola, were among 10 former officers whose freedom was announced Thursday by President Carlos Menem. He also gave freedom to Mario Firmenich, co-founder of the Montonero guerrillas. President Carlos Menem said the pardons would "definitely close a sad and black stage of Argentine history."

ALGIERS, Algeria — Suspected Islamic fundamentalists who hijacked an Algerian airliner held about 50 hostages inside the plane Saturday as they negotiated with authorities for permission to fly to another country, officials said.

State-owned Air Algerie said there were 88 people, including six crew members, aboard the Air Algerie Boeing 737 when it was hijacked Friday night on a domestic flight from the Saharan resort of Ghardaia to the capital, Algiers.

He used to sit in Ms. Cruzan's quiet room at the Missouri Rehabilitation Center here, talking to her about legal action, updating family news, explaining why he wanted to help her life end.

Encouragement came from supportive letters.

"The letters have just been pouring in," Cruzan said. "The biggest part of the people support us. I'm thankful for all the support."

Now, the Cruzan family wants privacy and rest.

Their home telephone number has been changed. No longer will they make the drive from Cartersville to Mount Vernon that helped put 38,000 miles on a 2-year-old car. Cruzan says the vehicle is on its third tape deck, so often have his daughter's favorite songs been played during the drive.

"To the ones who maybe didn't understand or didn't agree, we did what we felt we had to do," Cruzan said. "We appreciate their prayers."

Those who didn't agree converged on Mount Vernon as Ms. Cruzan was dying. They camped at the state-run hospital, carrying signs urging the Cruzans to reconnect the feeding tube. Some spent days in custody after trying to enter Ms. Cruzan's room, identifying themselves only as "Nancy Cruzan."

Storm, alcohol involved in wrecks

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities blamed the first snowstorm of the season for an electrical fire that trapped four rush-hour trains in a smoke-filled subway tunnel, killing one person and injuring 150 others. A second rider died of her injuries today.

In Boston, authorities investigating a trolley accident that injured 33 people Friday said tests showed the trolley driver had high levels of alcohol in his system. It was the second rail accident this month in the city's Back Bay section.

The driver of the trolley, which rammied a streetcar that was unloading passengers, blamed faulty brakes for the collision, officials said. But investigators ruled that out as a possible cause, said Peter Dimond, spokesman for the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority.

The fire Friday morning in New York filled trains with smoke in a subway tunnel linking Manhattan and Brooklyn. Fire and transit officials said melting snow from a 7-inch snowfall overnight apparently caused an electrical short-circuit.

Passengers heard explosions and then saw smoke, first pouring into the tunnel and then into their trains.

"We really thought we were gone, that we wouldn't see New Year's," said Gertrude Hoyte, a 51-year-old Brooklyn resident trapped in the tunnel. Some people began vomiting into their newspapers, she said.

"People were screaming, 'We're going to die!'" and others prayed, loud, said 28-year-old Dana Sullivan.

Andrew Rea, 29, said that as smoke began filling the train, it "got so bad you couldn't see halfway down the car."

—Transit Authority spokeswoman Caren Gardner said the exact cause was unclear, but that snow may have fallen onto the electrified third rail and caused an electrical cable to short.

The driver was identified by Transit Authority spokesman Al O'Leary as Peter Hagen, 35, of Smithtown. The cause of death was under investigation.

have to move soon because the city needs the space.

More than 200 people were sleeping on the streets of Elko the week before Christmas as record-setting cold settled on the West, Waters said.

Why would anyone without a place to sleep at night stay in Elko for the winter, she wonders. Phoenix sounds like a lot nicer place to stay this time of year.

"Maybe I'm a dysfunctional person," Ron answers. Ron wears a navy peacoat. He's stocking up. Levi's and boots. He carries a duffel bag over his shoulder.

Waters goes through her records and sees FISH has helped Ron before. He was supposed to apply for food stamps but said he was thrown in jail before he could do it.

The police put him in jail for 10 days for disturbing the peace and because he was sleeping on the sidewalk, Ron said. He was drunk when they arrested him.

Waters urges him to go to Job Service to find a day-labor job. "Have you been looking for a job?" she asks. "I would urge you to be at Job Service at 7 a.m. to get a day-labor job."

Waters also suggests he apply for food stamps.

"I have been looking for a job. Are you lecturing me?" he asks. "You're making me feel bad."

Waters walks into the back room to get Ron some food.

"I was reading a story about a guy who won a quarter million dollars and killed himself. He'd been a loser—all his life—and I guess he didn't want to go through losing it all," Ron says.

After a few moments silence, he says: "It's a plot. Nevada doesn't want people who aren't wealthy." Waters returns with a sack of food. Ron slings the duffel bag over his shoulder, takes the food and walks out into the cold.

That is how this day will go for Waters.

People stream in and out, each with a story of hard-luck. Each will receive a package of food and Waters will wish she could help each one with a little more.

dentist in AIDS

case not truthful

FORT PIERCE, Fla. (AP) — A dentist gave a false name and occupation to doctors treating him for AIDS, contends a woman who says she contracted the deadly disease from him during dental surgery.

Attorney David Eaton, who represents 22-year-old Kimberly Bergalis, made the allegation Friday during a hearing in her suit against CIGNA Dental Health of Florida Inc.

The insurer put the late Dr. David Acer on its list of preferred dentists to be used by the company's clients. Bergalis claims Acer transmitted the disease to her during a September 1987 visit in which he removed two of her wisdom teeth.

Their four cats find room to sleep in the suite too.

Right now, Sherry brings in the only regular paycheck for the four of them. She earns minimum wage and tips as a waitress at the Stockmen's hotel and casino.

"We heard stories of waitresses making $7 an hour.... Everything I make is going to rent," Sherry said.

Terry has looked for work as a security guard at the Commercial Hotel and the Red Lian Inn but has not found a job yet. Shannon works 10 hours a week at the motel where they live but cannot work full time because she has to stay with Johnny Ray. Hiring a baby-sitter is out of the question.

There was little food in the refrigerator of the small kitchen in their suite a couple of days before Christmas. A local organization called Friends in Service Helping gave the Maybes a package of food — flour, corn meal, peanut butter, bread, doughnuts and butter. "But the supplies did not last long."

"Basically, everything is gone.... it's a day-to-day thing," Maybe said. They lived off their savings after getting to Elko, but the money is gone. They have applied for food stamps.

As he and Sherry spoke a storm blew into Elko. Snow skidded in the wind across the streets as an arctic cold descended. Motel and casino lights shined in the night.

The Maybes had a television to watch, books to read, and little else. A small Christmas tree stood in the corner of the living room. No presents were stacked under the tree.

"This is it," Sherry said. But after a few moments of silence she said their parents probably will send packages from Colorado — homemade presents.

The two cats the Maybes brought with them to Elko, a station wagon and a sedan, have rolled up a lot of miles and still run. But gasoline is so expensive that the Maybes seldom drive. Sherry had been walking to work before the winter cold spread like ice over Elko and the West.

For entertainment, the Maybes had been walking into town to see the sights. The cold weather likely ended that.

That means spending more time in the motel. But living in such close quarters gets tough. The stress of not working and not knowing how they will get food on the table wears at them.

"We can get on each other's nerves. We do have to let each other know what's going on and what our feelings are," Maybe said.

"We lean on each other. Support each other," Sherry said. "He's brought me up a couple of times when I was down."

They smiled and joked while talking, but an unmistakable worry hung about them. Not far from the city limits, others who came looking for work live in unheated trailers in the foothills. People even less fortunate live on the streets.

Dee Waters of Friends in Service Helping estimated 200 people were sleeping on the streets in Elko in mid-December. With that in mind, Sherry and Terry know life could be worse.

"We do count ourselves lucky," Sherry said.

Terry nodded in agreement. "We have a roof over our head and if we can keep that.... we're doing OK," he said.

And they keep a hopeful eye to the future.

"I'm optimistic about something coming through for us," Maybe said. He has 13 years' mining experience and expects to have a shot at a job when the mines start hiring again. Meanwhile, the Maybes wait and hope rumors of more hirings at the mines come true.

"Merry Christmas," he said as the interview ended.

2 sides of George Bush are named 'Man of Year'

NEW YORK (AP) — President Bush, Time magazine's 1990 Man of the Year, actually has two titles.

One is a leader whose foreign policy during the year "was a study in resoluteness and mastery," the magazine said Saturday. The other is a leader whose domestic track record was "just as strongly marked by wavering and confusion."

"We did something a little unusual this year, a little unorthodox," Time Managing Editor Henry Muller said at a news conference.

The magazine said Bush "raised a vision of a new world order" by taking the lead in a United Nations embargo against Iraq and a military buildup in the Persian Gulf after Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait in early August.

But domestically, Bush left "things alone until he could no longer avoid taking action," Time said.

Global diplomacy is what he has trained for and what absorbs him; domestic affairs are just not as much fun," Time said.

Bush narrowly defeated Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for the Man of the Year title, Muller said.

"Why didn't we pick Saddam? The answer in the end really is that invading a little country is not enough to make you man of the year," Muller said.

Resolute and wavering

Others cited in the Jan. 7 issue as some of the year's most important newsmakers were South African black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic.

Every president since Franklin D. Roosevelt has been selected by the magazine as its man of the year.

Japanese company to purchase MCA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pair of legal victories cleared the way for Japan's largest electronics company to complete the purchase of U.S. entertainment colossus MCA Inc.

The $6.6 billion deal, expected to close this weekend, would be the largest Japanese purchase of a U.S. company. Details of the landmark takeover were to be released Sunday, Matsushita spokeswoman Joelle Frank said from New York City.

Legal obstacles were removed Friday, when a federal judge in Los Angeles rejected a bid by MCA shareholders seeking to block the sale. The suit contended that MCA Chairman Lew Wasserman was violating Securities and Exchange Commission rules by receiving tax-free stock transfers.

Hundreds gather at Wounded Knee site

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Hundreds of American Indians arrived by foot and horseback at this massacre site to commemorate the 100th anniversary Saturday of one of the saddest days in their history.

Mother stabs her children

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — A nurse suspected of murdering her young son and critically injuring her two daughters by repeatedly stabbing them was killed Saturday when she opened several gas jets and started a fire.

The bodies of Lavelle Jernigan, 42, and Leonard Jernigan, 9, were found in their one-story house when firefighters arrived to put out the blaze at 7:15 a.m., Fire Marshal Bill Elliott said.

The nurse's 20-year-old daughter, Teresa Jernigan, who is pregnant, was found with multiple stab wounds about a block away from the house in a ditch, Elliott said. She apparently ran from the house after the mother began stabbing the three in their beds with a butcher knife, police Lt. Keith Fletcher said. Authorities said they had no idea what led the mother to violence. Lavelle Jernigan was an excellent nurse at Marshall Memorial Hospital for 22 years, hospital administrator Jim Pears said.

Her husband, L.B. Jernigan, is an orderly at the hospital and was working when the fire began, Pears said.

Teresa Jernigan was listed in critical condition in Schumpert Medical Center in Shreveport, La., nursing supervisor Cecilia Thornton said. Officials did not know when Ms. Jernigan's baby was due.

A 10-year-old daughter, Monique Jernigan, was found in the doorway of the burning house with 18 stab wounds, Elliott said.

Tribal leaders and Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs, were scheduled to join Mickelson for the ceremony.

The governor said he will keep trying to persuade federal officials to create a national monument at Wounded Knee. The site should be preserved according to the wishes of Wounded Knee descendants, Mickelson said.

Hundreds of Sioux men, women and children were killed by U.S. cavalry soldiers at Wounded Knee in an event that some historians said signified the end of the Indian wars. Nearly 300 horseback riders and others on foot endured wind-chill temperatures as low as 50 degrees below zero Friday on their way to the ceremony.

They ended what for some was a two-week, 220-mile horseback ride retracing the final journey of Chief Big Foot and his band before they were killed at Wounded Knee.

The riders assembled their horses in a circle at the massacre site Friday and prayed for peace within the Sioux Nation and throughout the world.

"Saturday, we pray for peace and unity and we look at it as global, because the whole world needs it," said Arvol Looking Horse, a Sioux spiritual leader.

Time to tell our legislators they don't need big raise

Idaho needs $12,000-a-year legislators like it needs another drought. At roughly $6,500 a year, our lawmakers have a noble calling to public service, for which they are modestly compensated—Double that, pay, and they'll have a job.

State legislators ought to keep that distinction in mind next month, when they climb the marble staircase to begin repaying the trust placed in them by Idaho's voters. One of the first things they should do after finding their seats is to kill the pay raise.

The raise is the idea of the citizens commission, that reviews legislative pay every two years. Under Idaho's Constitution, the commission's decision will go into effect unless legislators vote to reject it in the first 25 days of the session.

It's a good system, much better than the one Congress has. Idaho's procedure is designed to keep legislative salaries current, allowing modest, routine increases without a political battle. This way, theoretically, inflation doesn't force lawmakers to vote on a long-delayed pay raise that infuriates taxpayers and creates a temptation for grandstanding.

That's the theory. But the commission took a wrong turn this year. Only two years after boosting legislators' pay from $4,200 to $6,500, the commission wants to go for an even bigger jump.

The two increases work out to 186 percent in three years.

The familiar arguments have been trotted out: We need to keep up with neighboring states; lawmakers make economic sacrifices to serve; if we don't pay more, only the rich, the retired and the useless will run.

Let's look at those, one at a time: We have to keep up with the neighbors. For heaven's sake, why? Are we afraid our senators will move to Montana to make more money?

In any case, we're already keeping up with the neighbors. Of all of Idaho's neighboring states, only Oregon and Washington pay lawmakers more than we do now. If the pay raise takes effect, we'll be No. 2 in the region. But once again, such comparisons are irrelevant.

Lawmakers make sacrifices to serve. Yes, many of them do. But do you want to elect people who won't make sacrifices?

This question goes to the very nature of public service. We don't want lawmakers who think of themselves as state employees, being compensated for every hour they work on the state's behalf. Much of our lawmakers' service comes from the heart—and we mustn't lose that precious quality.

The present salary level keeps many people from running and risks making the Legislature unrepresentative. Well, take a look at the Magic Valley's current delegation. We have farmers, ranchers, business people, a homemaker or two, a couple of retirees—a lawyer, a surgeon, a teacher and a dentist. Hardly an exclusive club.

And those folk, by and large, are doing a good job for us. We need to ask ourselves: If we offered twice as much money, could we recruit a group twice as good?

This is not to say that legislative pay should never rise. Our leaders are entitled to keep up with expenses just like anyone else. But nearly doubling their pay in one year is a radical change that could have a radical effect.

Oh, $12,000 a year won't turn the Legislature into an assemblage of silk suits and alligator shoes. But that figure, together with housing and expense allowances, puts us within spitting distance of electing people whose primary job is legislating.

In other words, professional politicians.

Lawmakers need to hear from voters on this issue. At least one of them has said he'll decide how to vote based on his phone calls and mail. Let's make sure he and his colleagues get plenty.

Call or write your senators and representatives. Tell them: "I'm pretty satisfied with the value I'm getting for my $6,500. I don't think I need to move up to a higher-priced model just yet."

Air Quality Board should watch INEL

A new year brings new hope and new promises. Dare we look deeper and see the SOS (Same Old Sham)?

In Idaho, the Air "Quality" Board issued yet another INEL permit without truthfully respecting scientific proof that is public and verifiable. Why have public comment if you only go through the motions? Why did they give away Idaho's best bargaining chip and overlook NEPA violations and overlook the lack of complete answers from the INEL?

The new Transuranic Storage Area permit is a classic display of lack of logic. Like the NEPA law says, "before" the INEL outright digs up loose, open barrels of plutonium particles, a scientific analysis of alternatives and public comment should be consulted.

For example, their new ISV technique would melt and solidify the loose waste first, allowing nearly 100 percent less airborne plutonium particles for Idahoans to inhale.

But the Air "Quality" Board prefers to ignore the issues and instead "is pleased to issue the permit." Let's not check the efficiency of their HEPA filters, let's just trust them. NEPA, NEPA, go back to SLEEP 'A'.

In 1983, the DOE declassified a lot of radioactive waste. I've asked why standards were lowered by 10 times the concentration of how much plutonium particles per gram of soil would now be allowed to be labeled low-level waste instead of transuranic (TRU) waste. The INEL admitted, in writing, that they "do not know why the concentration requirements for plutonium particles were declassified." I think the reasons are obvious. Sometimes "spreading out" a problem does not solve the problem, but it looks better.

Peter Rickards Reader comment

In the 1990 permit, the INEL admits "approximately 1 million cubic feet (of the 2.3 million cubic feet of plutonium particle waste) is expected to be classified as mixed, low-level waste to be disposed of in an approved, low-level waste disposal facility." Low-level wastes, including plutonium particles, can be buried in trenches, in 1990 and the future, over the aquifer at the INEL.

That's what seems wrong—if the INEL uses its new techniques like incineration or crushing waste, then plutonium is more concentrated, called TRU waste and must go to the WIPP in New Mexico.

If the INEL does not treat the size of the waste and just removes the organic solvents, then it appears it can be reburied at the INEL and classified as low-level waste. The total number of plutonium particles remains the same, but the DOE statements that "there is not suitable geology at the INEL to bury these radionuclides" also remains true. The National Academy of Sciences' statement also remains true—"that a small isolated particle of plutonium emits appreciable radiation."

The reality of the situation is that the WIPP is presently 6.3 million cubic feet of storage—if it passes the five-year test period and really opens.

If Hanford and the INEL were not forced to keep or divert most of their plutonium waste, then the WIPP would be over-filled before it ever opens.

If the DOE succeeds in moving all the plutonium facilities into Idaho from other states, with their NPR and AVLIS, we could keep it all. The big booby prize—wasted not, wanted not. Who says Idaho's too great to litter?"

Our state legislators could stop this if they wanted to.

Wounded Knee recalled at centennial

As human beings rarely live past 100, centennials are special anniversaries. They note the movement of events from the contemporary to the historical, from the "real" to the semi-mythical.

This year the United States marked the 100th anniversary of the closing of its Western frontier. By 1890, three centuries of westward conquest and settlement had washed across the continent, putting an end to America's brawling, bloody, teen-age years.

The census report of 1890 notes our coming of age in dry, bureaucratic prose: "Up to and including 1880 the country had a frontier of settlement, but at present the unsettled area has been so broken into by isolated bodies of settlement that there can hardly be said to be a frontier line. ... Dec. 31, 1890, in Washington, the Great White Father is Benjamin Harrison, on the Great Plains, the Ghost Dance religion is sweeping the defeated tribes, promising the return of the buffalo and the end of the white man. Hate, hunger and despair simmer on the reservations, and war is in the air."

On the snow-blown plains of South Dakota, on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, Miniconjou Sioux under Big Foot are gathered along a creek called Wounded Knee.

Peter Kelagian

The 7th Cavalry, Custer's old regiment, has been sent to disarm them and has taken up positions surrounding the encampment. Women and children are with the band, and the Sioux are reluctant to give up their arms. Anger in the camp is high over Sitting Bull's death at the hands of reservation police a week earlier.

Some warriors dance the hypnotic, grueling ritual central to the Ghost Dance and prepare for battle. Some historians think the 7th Cavalry is looking for a fight, eager to avenge its defeat at Little Bighorn 14 years earlier.

Whoever begins it, the fighting is fierce and desperate. Many warriors are convinced that their special "ghost" shirts will protect them from the soldiers' bullets and charge headlong at the encircling wall of blue.

There is bloody, hand-to-hand fighting, and the Sioux breach the soldiers' lines, only to be cut down by the army's new, rapid-fire Hotchkiss guns.

At least 146 Sioux die, including 62 women and children. Twenty-five soldiers are killed. More on both sides die in the battle's aftermath, and troop strength on the reservation eventually swells to 3,500. It is a definitive show of strength, and Indian resistance dies quickly.

More than the battle against the elements, beasts and the unknown, the Indian was defined from the front in the popular imagination. As the last battle between red man and white recorded in official U.S. military history, Wounded Knee marked the final defeat of the continent's indigenous people at the hands of the invaders from Europe.

It has become the most powerful symbol of frontier's end. Astonishingly, it happened such a short time ago. Into the 1950s and '60s, even '70s, participants and observers of the battle were still living.

Today only a Methuselah or two among the Sioux, children at the time, may recall the haunting of brave warriors, the crack of rifle fire in the frozen air and the screams of the dying. Soon they too will be gone.

And so this year we commemorate not only the end of the Indian way of life and the passing of the Great West, but the passage of those times beyond the horizon of first-hand memory and into the maw of the all-consuming past.

Late spy plane designer deserves plenty of credit for his work

Ernest B. Furgurson

Soon after the Korean War, President Eisenhower was understandably curious about what the next might inspire next. The CIA couldn't tell him. To look for answers, he wanted an airplane that could safely overfly the Soviet Union.

The solution was obvious, but only one man could provide it. Into the president's office walked that man, Kelly Johnson.

"We're looking for an airplane that can fly so high no one can touch it," he said. "That's pretty high," said Johnson. "Can you do it?"

"With enough money, we can do anything."

"How about $30 million?"

"Maybe, Johnson said; but 'Who's going to be the boss? I don't like working with committees.'"

"It will be you, a few generals here and there; and the CIA."

"No dice, Mr. President. That's too many."

In two more sentences, the poker game was over. Johnson would be boss. Predictably, it got more complicated than that. But Kelly Johnson was chief designer and ramrod—and in a matter of months, the glider-like U-2 reconnaissance plane made its first flight.

Ernest K. Gann tells of this encounter between Eisenhower and Johnson in his book, "The Black Watch," about "the men who fly America's secret spy planes."

There is much more to tell about Johnson, who died the other day at the age of 80.

Nobody else had a hidden hand in as many of America's great adventures of the past half-century. Presidents made decisions; generals oversaw their execution; pilots flew the missions—but Kelly Johnson made the missions possible by designing the airplanes.

The U-2, which took detailed pictures of the Soviet heartland for four years before Moscow finally made a missile that could bring it down, was at the center of the historic 1960 showdown between Eisenhower and Nikita Khrushchev.

Soon afterward it provided the photos to prove Khrushchev was installing offensive missiles in Cuba.

That was merely Johnson's most publicized invention. He also designed the fork-tailed P-38 Lightning, one of the fastest fighters of World War II. It was the only fighter with enough range to reach out and shoot down Japanese Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, who masterminded the Pearl Harbor attack, after U.S. code-breakers found out that he was headed for the combat zone in 1943.

Johnson designed the F-80 Shooting Star, this country's first jet fighter, a great success against Soviet MiGs in Korea. He designed the F-104 Starfighter, first operational jet to fly twice the speed of sound.

He was behind the Hudson, a maritime patrol plane that watched the seas for submarines in World War II, and a series of increasingly sophisticated planes that have filled that role ever since. He designed the Lockheed Constellation transport, with its distinctive triple rudders.

Aircraft designers still have not surpassed the SR-71 Blackbird, the plane he built to succeed the U-2.

It flies higher than 70,000 feet at sustained speeds of over 3,000 mph. It was America's eye in the sky for a quarter century, on call for quick, precise intelligence on trouble spots off the orbital path of spy satellites. The Air Force said the Blackbird was honorably retired last year, but if a few are not flying around the Persian Gulf today, they should be.

Through cold war and hot, Johnson's planes have been everywhere. But their performance in flight may not be as remarkable as the way he brought some of them into being.

After another look on highly classified projects like the U-2, his famed "skunk works" plant at Lockheed. And one after another, he brought them in under budget, under deadline.

Johnson proved that "black" projects, so secret they were beyond bureaucratic and political meddling, could work. But since his heyday—the B-2 Stealth bomber has run far beyond budget, and the Navy's A-12 seems about to be canceled.

The obligatory conclusion is that "black" projects can indeed succeed—if there is a Kelly Johnson to run them.

With nine years to go before 2000, some eager list-makers are already in print with their top men and moments of the century. At the dignified extreme, those lists are dominated by politicians. At the other end, they might even include Elvis and the Beatles.

Some discerning list-maker will recognize this as the Century of Flight—from 1903, when man soared 852 feet at Kitty Hawk, near 1960, when he stepped onto the moon.

If Kelly Johnson is not on that list, there will be a big hole in the middle of the century.

Anti-hunting activists, go home

This letter is in regard to the article on the first page of the South Idaho Press on Dec. 14 concerning the anti-hunt sentiment growing in Idaho.

First of all, as Mr. Murrell stated, most of these anti-hunt activists have moved here from some other state — especially Californians. These people have come here to Idaho, built homes and a great deal of them have settled in the Ketchikan-Sun Valley area; and now they think they own the state. They have built their homes and blocked the roads to the hunting area. They then try to tell the hunter that the roads are private roads and that they are trespassing if they try to get to the draw-hunt areas. They are also the first ones to complain when the wild animals come down and start eating on their lawns and fields in the winter time.

If they are so much against the killing of animals, then they should go back where they came from. Come on, anti-hunt activists, wake up and smell the roses. Hunting is another way of bringing control of the over-population of these animals. Further, this is one of the rights that we as Idahoans fought for in World War II and they are our mountains and our streams. I am a native of Idaho, have lived here all my life and I resent someone from another state coming in here and telling us what we should do with it.

Another thing that gets under my skin is that not only have these people come here to build homes and settle down, our government has seen fit to appoint them to offices in our Idaho Fish and Game Department. Don't we have any qualified people in Idaho? Just because they have settled in Idaho for a better way of life doesn't mean that they own the state or should say of laws and what we should be doing with our laws.

If they like the way California does things concerning hunting, then let them go back to California. We like for tourists to come here and see our great state and would even welcome them coming here to live if they would accept our way of life. This is our state and our own Idaho. Let's keep it as free as possible and keep the outsider out of our business.

So, our feelings to the anti-hunting activists who have invaded our great state is to say, "Californians, go home!"

Snowman had rough Christmas

He was brutally murdered on the night of Dec. 25, Christmas. His body was slaughtered. He was decapitated, his arms were severed and his nose broken.

This snowman is not in reference to anything of flesh and blood, but rather a snowman of ice and snow. My story is likely much less appalling to the reader after having made that clarification, but it in no way lessens the offense as far as I am concerned.

This snowman was erected by the roadside so all the world could see in front of my grandparents home in Kimberly. For three-plus hours on Christmas Day, my younger sister and brother and I slaved in the freezing temperatures trying to get the snow to pack. It wasn't easy, but we were sure proud of the results. At nightfall, we came inside to that, vowing to complete the final touches of construction in the morning. The morning came, the snowman was gone, crushed. I don't think it is humorous in the least. I am appalled. One has to stoop pretty low to demolish a kid's snowman. I am sorry that someone is so hard up for entertainment. I pity those who lack the imagination and creativity to think of anything better to do.

U.S. government out of control

Americans, our government is completely out of control. Actually, our so-called sold-out elected officials have been out of control since the early 1920s. Our so-called president acts like a king with no restrictions. Has anybody ever asked, "Why are we in Saudi Arabia but defeat Iraq over Kuwait?" Our president has an army for sale; if he doesn't get a war started in Iraq, he might find some small tribe in Africa and make claims against them. Oh, yeah, he's gonna get a war started someplace, but his prime goal is to save Israel so the New World Order can take place in Jerusalem and to put our nation in deeper debt so they can raise our taxes to at least 50 percent of our earnings.

This New World Order will supersede the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Mr. Bush and Mr. Shultz have mentioned this, in three speeches. This year 1990, of course, their point is world rule and reduce the common people to a form of domesticated slavery.

Come on you, Americans! You are being led down the proverbial path and at record speed.

You might want to ask a few questions, like our national debt — ask who we owe it to, how much is interest and how much is principle. Another question — who controls the Federal Reserve and who controls the IRS? You will find it all goes back to our usury charging local banks. God has strict laws against usury mentioned many times in the Bible.

Oh, yes, we're in great shape. We import 80 percent of all our commodities used and export 20 percent. I challenge any business to be successful with the type of climate.

Our forefathers' dreams, hopes and even their identity is almost completely vanished. We now have nine different cultures in this country. Each culture is going to their own little corner.

Most of them are heavily supported by our government.

I hope this inspires comment because I don't claim to know everything. In fact, I wish I could be wise. I just know something is seriously wrong in America.

NEA agenda assures failure

Could it be that the National Education Association is partially responsible for our nation's faltering education system and drift toward socialism?

It proudly, the most famous of NEA leaders was John Dewey. It was this man who, two generations ago, introduced the new techniques to teach reading that have led to widespread illiteracy in America.

An admitted socialist, Dewey believed that the greatest enemy of socialism was the private consciousness that could exercise its own judgment. He actually set about to destroy proven educational programs in order to create a more controllable society. His goal has largely been accomplished.

Today, the NEA is the nation's most powerful labor union and a potent political activist group. A survey of recent stands taken by the NEA shows that it wants all schools and all teachers (not just those in government schools) brought under government control; it never criticizes the Soviet Union; it is uncompromisingly atheistic; it despises the free-enterprise system and loves socialism; it backs Marxist revolution in Central America and it advocates armistice on education in schools, abortion on demand, gun control and U.S. disarmament.

For all practical purposes, the NEA might be labeled "The Socialist Party in America." Its program is being given to America's children by many of its teachers. Christian parents must be made aware of what this organization and its affiliated state agencies are promoting. And all Christians have to be made aware that their taxes are supporting the schools into which the NEA's dangerously un-Christian and un-American agenda is being introduced.

Fortunately, not all members of the NEA agree with its positions and goals. Unfortunately, the dues and influences of all the members of the National Education Association are used to support its positions and goals.

Education in America will continue to fail regardless of the amount of money spent as long as the NEA agenda is followed.

Despite gulf crisis, there's still a chance for peace in the Mideast

At this late stage — with the deadline of Jan. 15 set approaching — there is much to be gained in revisiting the pro-war or pro-peace arguments. But it may still not be too late to give a last chance to a final effort at finding a non-violent solution. The case for such a minute-to-midnight undertaking emerges with greater force from a brief consideration of the possible alternatives that come to the continuing crisis and of their probable consequences.

Basically, one can envisage one of the following four outcomes emerging from President Bush's strategy of giving Saddam Hussein an uncompromising choice of either war or capitulation.

- 1) Bush persists in making his daily threats in vowing war and in demanding an unconditional surrender. At the last minute, Saddam Hussein caves in and capitulates abjectly. To good measure, he not only evacuates Kuwait but also offers to pay reparations and voluntarily dismantles his military machine and his industry. Bush is acclaimed for his toughness and skill.
- 2) Saddam is not intimidated, and not long after Jan. 15 Bush launches his military onslaught, "suddenly and decisively." Within just a few days, after massive air bombardment, with minimum American casualties (the Iraqi ones are not counted), the Iraqi army crumbles. Saddam is overthrown, and the result is the same as under 1 above. Bush is acclaimed as a hero.

3) Saddam does not yield, and the air assault does not give the United States an instant victory. Consequently, U.S. ground forces, with some limited British participation, get involved. Saddam is overthrown, and the result is the same as under 1 above. Bush is acclaimed as a hero.

4) The ground victory takes much more time (weeks or even months), and is very costly both in American blood and financially. An American backlash develops against those states that urged America to go to war. Europe privately scoffs at American naivete in volunteering to serve as the world's policeman. The Arab world seethes with hatred for America. The American public is bitterly split, with much recrimination directed at the president, at the pro-war advocates as well as their foreign friends and at the failure of the much oversized international coalition to share fairly in the burdens of war.

Since the president has ruled out the strategy of relying more patiently on the sanctions to achieve the attrition of Iraqi power and of Iraqi will, and since in the near future there is simply no prospect of a truly coalitionist war effort against Iraq, the above four alternatives pretty much cover the most likely post-Jan. 15 scenarios, barring some sudden change in either Bush's or Saddam's strategies.

For those who think that either alternative 1 or 2 is attainable, this should be no cause for worry. War is almost likely to be a matter of concern for those whose real agenda is the destruction of Iraq, no matter at what cost to the United States. That makes alternatives 3 and even 4 palatable to them. But for those who think that the latter two are in fact more probable than the first two, who fear the resulting geopolitical chaos in the region and who find the likely costs for America disproportionate to any possible gains, even alternative 3 and certainly 4 do not represent an acceptable outcome.

It follows that unless one expects — indeed, unless one is almost certain — of an easy victory, one should welcome a last-gasp effort for peace. A confidential discussion between the United States and Iraq would be preferable to the public Washington-Baghdad grandstanding that occurred this December. The Arabs presumably are conducting some quiet discussions, though one is justified in suspecting that Arab necessities make a purely Arab solution not very feasible.

Better still, the Europeans and the United Nations should get into the act, for the crisis should not be a purely American-Iraqi affair. The Europeans are very much an interested party. Not only are they much dependent on the Middle Eastern oil, but Europe's Mediterranean countries are highly sensitive to any instability in the Arab world. Hence European effort to find a formula for implementing the U.N. resolutions on Kuwait, including a comprehensive follow-up on related issues, would certainly be in order.

Similarly, the secretary general of the United Nations has the obligation to make a last effort to establish whether a non-violent path, based on the U.N. resolutions, can be contrived. Given the stakes as well as the possible dangers inherent in the conflict, surely no reasonable person should begrudge a personal mission by the principal officer of the world community designed to find some alternative beyond those outlined above.

Any such initiative might generate a little more time for reflection and provide a little more room for maneuver in the ominously narrow space into which both Bush and Saddam have managed to box themselves.

Zbigniew Brzezinski was national security adviser in the Carter administration. He wrote this article for the Washington Post.

Fundamental change needed to achieve science education goals

Nine years to go. That's how long U.S. students now have to become first in the world in mathematics and science achievement.

At their "education summit" last year (September 1989), President Bush and state governors set the year 2000 for students to accomplish this goal. Their challenge came as Americans have been debating educational reforms ranging from lengthening the school year to requiring better teacher-competency tests.

Yet, American students have little hope of catching — much less surpassing — their counterparts in Japan, Britain and elsewhere until something more fundamental happens. Our science classrooms must stop being so dreadfully boring and irrelevant.

I chaired a committee of the National Research Council that recently examined the most widely taught science subject — biology. We found that biology is taught so poorly in the United States that it frequently snuffs out student interest in all science.

Timothy H. Goldsmith

Four of every five students take biology in high school, but fewer than a third of them continue with science by studying chemistry. Less than half of chemistry students, in turn, take high school physics.

Dismal enrollment figures do not tell the whole story. A recent analysis found that fully half the students who should be taking biology do as well or better on biology tests than 40 percent of their peers who took and passed a biology class. In other words, many students learn almost nothing in these courses — except to dislike science. Biology classes should be helping students develop an interest in the world around them and an understanding of societal issues such as AIDS and the environment. But from the early grades to high school, biology education is hampered by poorly trained and supported teachers, irrelevant curricula, inappropriate standardized tests and textbooks that often are inaccurate or misleading. Considerable evidence suggests that the same problems exist in other science classrooms. Biology and the rest of science need to become an essential part of elementary school, while the curiosity of children is uninhibited.

What's needed is a curriculum that emphasizes science as a process of understanding. It should be an open-ended game of "What if...?" rather than a stupefying exercise in memorizing terminology reinforced by pedantic standardized tests. Students need to confront their beliefs about cause and effect and spend time experimenting with their own hands and eyes in simple laboratory settings.

Teachers need better training and should stop being so constrained by bureaucratic directives, non-educational duties and insufficient time to prepare class materials. From a national perspective, the most important need is to keep sight of these day-to-day realities in the classroom as we consider other reforms. Most of the "solutions" that have received attention lately are largely managerial or administrative. Few of these approaches specify or assure the kinds of fundamental change that are most necessary to improve learning — those that must take place in the classroom. Significant improvement among U.S. students in science cannot occur without better training for teachers, more relevant curricula and textbooks and tests that focus on concepts rather than terminology. These fundamental reforms are the first step to young Americans excelling in science — and in the complex world of the future.

Timothy H. Goldsmith Ph.D., a professor of biology at Yale University, chaired a committee of the National Research Council that examined the status of biology education in the nation's schools.

Resolve not to make New Year's resolutions

As a public service, we present this quick and handy guide to the making and unmaking of New Year's resolutions.

Steve Crump
Don't ask me

You might wish to take care of some of these this weekend to free up New Year's Eve for some serious procrastination.

• Never resolve to lose 20 pounds by Valentine's Day. Always resolve not to gain 20 pounds by Valentine's Day. Basically, you can't lose. But you and your Weight Watchers counselor already knew that.

• Never make a New Year's resolution to get more exercise. Keep in mind that on the first day of your resolution, you must watch six football games on TV.

• Don't resolve to stop drinking; resolve to stop having hangovers. You can start Jan. 2.

• Never resolve to never again sob and blubber during "It's a Wonderful Life." Can't be done.

• Never resolve to stop lending your brother-in-law your Ski Saw. Resolve to borrow it back this year.

• Don't resolve to get that elk next year. It'll only make it worse when you miss from 25 yards.

Despite a booming gaming industry centered around the Red Lion Inn, 80 percent of the Elko area's jobs are still tied to gold mining.

Elko's superheated economy levels off

Editor's note: Elko's gold-fueled boom of the late 1980s has leveled off into a period of steady, if uneven growth for Twin Falls' neighbor to the south. Today The Times-News begins a two-part series on Elko County's economy and its substantial effect on the Magic Valley.

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

ELKO, Nev. — By every measure, Elko's gold mining boom has leveled out. And that's not bad news for many Elko residents.

The mines have stopped hiring, except to replace current workers, and the construction jobs that brought thousands of workers to the mines are completed.

Mobile home parks that sprung up in-

A Times-News special report

and around Elko bulged at the seams for a couple of years, but they have vacancies now. Finding a house to rent was almost impossible a year ago, but there are vacancies now, although prices are steep, especially in town.

"The boom is gone," said Dennis Lattin, manager of the Elko Job Service office. "But that's not necessarily bad."

—From September 1987 through September 1990, about 70,000 people streamed into the Elko Job Service office looking for mining jobs. People still come looking, but the number of applicants "is nothing like it was," Lattin said.

At the height of the construction boom at the mines, people worked 24 hours a day every day. But in the past six to eight months, the construction jobs were completed and 1,000 construction workers have moved out, Lattin said.

Even so, 80 percent of the jobs in Elko County are still tied in one way or another to the gold mining industry.

While the boom has leveled out, the influx of millions of dollars has left Elko's economy glittering.

Gold mines in Eureka County southwest of Elko are paying 4,000 miners an average of $720 a week. Most of these miners live in Elko County and they have poured millions of dollars into the local economy.

—Taxable sales in Elko County more than doubled from $766.1 million in 1983-84 to $384.6 million in 1988-89.

New houses are being built in and around town. The Spring Creek subdivision south of Elko has more than 2,000 occupied lots, including a mobile home subdivision, real estate agent Christy Moore said.

"Most of the (subdivision) growth has come the last six years.... The last three years, is when it really started going crazy," she said.

—Almost all the homes are built on speculation and there is no problem selling them, Moore said. Most cost between $75,000 and $85,000 on one-acre minimum lots. The vast majority of buyers work in mining and businesses related to mining, she said.

Substance abuse by kids not just big-city problem

By Steve Crump
Times-News writer

Arinda Nauman of Moscow is the director of 4-H of Idaho, the second-largest non-church youth organization in the state (after the Boy Scouts) with local affiliates in virtually every town in the state.

4-H, which started as a vocational agriculture-oriented organization for farm youngsters, now includes chapters in cities and activities unrelated to agriculture. It has about 12,000 members statewide.

Nauman, a specialist in youth development and youth-at-risk issues, talked last week about growing up in rural Idaho today, small-town education, substance abuse and other subjects.

Q. How well are small schools in Idaho preparing students for careers, both on the farm and off the farm?

A. I think they're getting a pretty good education, but there are some disadvantages of going to a small school as well.

One of the biggest advantages is the local support work that exists in small towns. People who have grown up in a small town are often very supportive of the school and the kids. There are other advantages, too, like smaller class sizes.

But kids who go to small schools have fewer electives, fewer clubs. There's less opportunity to study things like foreign languages and get into advanced classes.

Q. Is substance abuse — alcoholism and drug abuse — as big a problem among small-town kids in Idaho as it is in the cities?

A. At least the studies I have seen show that there is higher alcohol consumption than drug abuse among kids in small towns. I think you can attribute that to boredom, and the fact that it's easier to have a keg party and not be detected in a rural area than it is in town.

Q & A on the News

While drugs are more of a problem in metropolitan areas, they're in rural areas as well.

A study that was done in (mostly rural) southeastern Idaho showed that 52 percent (of high-school age kids) used alcohol at least three times a week and that 32 percent used marijuana. The results from (heavily urban) Ada County showed that 82 percent used alcohol and 38 percent used marijuana.

One of the facts that there are fewer social services available in small towns than in cities is a factor in the high rate of alcohol use among kids there?

A. I don't know if you could draw that conclusion. Sort of my own impression is that keggers are more readily accepted in small towns and rural areas and that in many small towns there's a history of kids using alcohol.

November construction soothes recession fears

The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Idaho construction pushed full steam ahead in November, soothing fears the local industry is accompanying the nation into a recession, First Security Bank of Idaho officials say.

Idaho enjoyed a 22 percent increase in permits for single-family homes, 276 homes compared to 216 in November 1989, according to First Security figures released Thursday.

"Basically, we are working as much as we have calories for, (and) the guys I know are working as hard as they can," Boise builder Jerry Eddington said.

The value of single-family permits totaled $22.79 million last month. That was 28.6 percent higher than $17.72 million in the same period of 1989.

The value of all construction across Idaho during November reached $47.43 million, up 6 percent from $44.75 million in November 1989.

But the Nov. 1990 value was down 22.9 percent from October's $61.55 million.

First Security Corp. economist Kelly Matthews, who compiles the figures, said the month-to-month decline was explained by weather and was not as significant as the gains made in November over a year ago.

"I was really quite pleased with the overall November performance," Matthews said.

"Residential construction, particularly the single-family, was quite strong, and I think the lower interest rates will be beneficial in helping to sustain production and sales," Matthews said.

On Monday, the average interest charged by 10 banks and thrifts in Boise was 9.66 percent for a 30-year fixed-rate loan.

Year-to-date through November, single-family permits issued across the state reached 3,512, 27.8 percent more than 2,749 released during the first 11 months of last year.

Single-home construction values also were up 27.8 percent in the first 11 months, hitting $318.51 million. Last year, the figure was $249.27 million.

Commercial construction dipped 3.6 percent in November, slipping from $10.18 million last year to $9.82 million last month.

The biggest commercial project to receive a permit was in Burley, where Mayor Frank Bauman said work began on a $3.2 million county jail.

Matthews was uncertain about the meaning of the decline, noting year-to-date commercial construction, valued at $179 million, was 26.1 percent ahead of $142 million in 1989.

"One month doesn't make a trend. It's possible that it could bounce back as it has so many times before," he said.

Budget surplus money sought for non-game wildlife fund

By N.S. Nokkented
Times-News writer

BOISE — Some Idaho citizens are looking for a nest egg that would hatch into money for the state's non-game wildlife programs.

Mike Luque, chairman of the Region 3 citizens' non-game wildlife committee, said he would like to see a trust fund created to provide a secure source of money for non-game programs administered by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Lou Racine, chairman of the state Fish and Game Commission, asked Gov. Cecil Andrus for an $8 million endowment out of the state's budget surplus to establish a non-game wildlife trust fund.

The trust fund would be used to provide a steady and consistent source of money for non-game programs, which now are funded by donations, a voluntary check-off on state income tax forms and a small amount of state hunting and fishing license fees.

Great horned owls and peregrine falcons, warblers and waxwings, squirrels and gophers, grizzly bears and wolves all are non-game species, and all are important.

"They are a vital part of the whole ecosystem," Luque said.

About 80 percent of Idaho's wildlife are non-game animals, yet nearly all wildlife management money and manpower goes into game species, with precious little attention to the non-game species, Luque said.

Fish and Game is charged with managing all wildlife, but with the exception of about $45,000, all of its $30 million annual budget goes into managing game species.

Of the $600,000 budgeted to non-game management programs annually, Fish and Game can depend on only about $300,000, Luque said. About half of that comes from the tax form check-off. The rest comes from fish and game licenses and tags.

About $500,000 comes from Forest Service or U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service contracts.

The current budget pays for part of the state's natural heritage program, which employs six people.

"How do you manage 80 percent of Idaho's wildlife with six people?" Luque asked.

Luque said an annual budget of about $650,000 would fund a non-game biologist in each Fish and Game region. And it would pay for the state's natural heritage program, which gathers information on non-game animals in the state.

The biologists would conduct environmental assessments, comment on population surveys and education programs and generally the same sorts of things that game species biologists do.

"The program would include such things as placing bird feeders at nursing homes, setting up nesting boxes, developing habitat for birds of prey and helping preserve rare species."

"We don't want the species of special concern list to grow," Luque said. "We don't want a spotted owl in Idaho."

Anyone interested in the state's non-game programs may call Luque at 336-4088 or Stu Murrell of Fish and Game's Region 4 office at 324-4359.

Wendell chooses not to pay water line bill

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

east side of the street running north and south.

WENDELL—The City Council has decided not to pay an $876 bill for a water line repair.

The bill was received from Stanley Trenching Company of Twin Falls, who broke the line on Dec. 6 while boring a route to lay telephone lines for U.S. West.

"They broke the line and we helped them fix it," he said.

The council decided to deny the bill and will also to send a letter to U.S. West, showing the bill and stating the city's dissatisfaction with the Stanley company.

In other business:

The state Department of Commerce sent a letter to say Wendell will not receive funding for its $516,350 grant application to improve the city water system.

The primary reason for not being selected to receive part of the available $3.5 million is that Wendell's need is not as critical as the other cities applying for water improvements, the letter said.

Councilman Ron Finley said reapplication will be made because the city water storage capacity is inadequate, especially if a fire starts during a power outage.

Lionel Harris was appointed as city building inspector. He will be paid half of the city's building fees, based on construction costs.

Harris replaces Keith Hosack, who turned in his resignation, effective Dec. 31. Hosack did not comment on why he resigned.

However, the building inspector works under the supervision of the mayor and Hosack was involved in a recent controversy with Mayor Benson over a letter of reprimand from Benson to Hosack. The letter, never made public, was dealing with Hosack's work as fire chief.

Hosack is continuing his job as fire chief for the joint city-rural district.

The city selected Jerry Dodds, of Dadds-Strohbe Insurance Agency of Twin Falls, to be the city's insurance agent this fiscal year. Dodds' policy, including $2 million liability coverage, will cost $15,712. With doubled liability and added coverage of a boiler at the city's swimming pool, the cost is about $1,000 more than the previous year.

He added that the most serious problems will occur next spring, when the highway asphalt heaves because of the water that flooded the area while the waterline was broken. Much of that asphalt will have to be replaced, he predicted.

The Wendell city crew and the Stanley crew worked together for more than a day to repair the line on Idaho Street next to the grade school.

In its bill, the company charges $450 for backhoe service and $256 for labor at a rate of $16 an hour. Other charges are for dumping and use of the company's dump truck.

But City Superintendent Claude Strickland said the Stanley company owes the city $90 for repair supplies.

In refusing Standley's bill Thursday, Mayor George Benson said Strickland told the Stanley that there was a waterline on the side of the street running north and south.

Town meeting focuses on Mideast

The Times-News

The Hailey church, along with the Beyond War organization, is sponsoring the non-partisan meeting.

HAILEY—The possibility of war in the Middle East will be the topic of a town meeting slated for 7 p.m. Thursday at the old Blaine County Courthouse.

"This is the first time, at least in my memory, that we have had the opportunity to negotiate a war before it happens," Taylor said.

The purpose of the meeting is part of a nationwide effort to develop some sort of public opinion on the possibility of going to war to extricate Iraqi troops from Kuwait, said Father Bill Taylor of St. Charles Catholic Church in Hailey.

Middle East expert Tahmoore Sarraf, an Iranian native and professor of government and sociology at Idaho State University, will offer a historical and political perspective on the current crisis.

several candidates and West Point graduate who participated in last year's American invasion of Panama will give a military briefing, and former state department employee Tony Mahoney will moderate the discussion.

Public comments will be heard after the speakers, Taylor said.

Idaho's congressional delegation has been asked to provide information for the meeting, and written public comments taken at the meeting will be forwarded to Idaho's senators and representatives, Taylor said.

Kids

In Idaho do so in part because they see them as refugees from the problems that afflict kids in cities. Why are these problems showing up in rural areas?

you're finding them outside the major cities.

Q. What is 4-H doing to confront these problems?

A. Well, small towns are no longer isolated from the cities as they once were. And there are more people from cities moving into rural areas. Rural areas are among the fastest-growing parts of Idaho.

There are little pockets, clusters of newcomers all over Idaho, and

A. We're attempting to get more kids involved and to identify high-risk youth and get them involved at a younger age. We have three sites in Idaho where we're working with high-risk youth now. We're making a high-priority of younger, elementary aged kids.

We wish our friends a happy and healthy holiday season!

Ex-U of I president to direct school's economics center

MOSCOW (AP) — After guiding the University of Idaho, for more than a decade, former president Richard Gibb will become the part-time director of the school's Center for Economic Education.

"Academic Vice President Thomas Bell on Friday said he hopes Gibb will serve in the post as long as he is interested and affiliated with the school.

"He has a good background in economics and a strong interest in the public schools," he said.

The center housed in the College of Business and Economics is an effort to acquaint Idaho's public schools with market economics, in concert with education and agriculture. Similar centers are operating at Boise State University and Idaho State University to serve their areas.

"We tend to take our market economy for granted, and I think that's a mistake," Gibb said.

"With the dramatic developments that have caused Eastern European nations and the Soviet Union to start the tough change from controlled to market economies, we need to spend a bit more time understanding our own system and realizing that profit is not a dirty word."

Gibb said the center will work closely with the State Council for Economic Education. Designed to be self-sufficient, it is under the immediate supervision of the head of the Department of Economics, John Miller.

Air security police from Idaho called to duty

MOUNTAIN HOME AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — Wearing desert fatigues in the midst of a snowstorm, 13 airmen destined for Saudi Arabia were loaded into the green belly of a cargo plane at Mountain Home Air Force Base.

But those departure preparations became a dress rehearsal Friday because of the plane's mechanical problems. The C-130 and the squad were grounded until the expected arrival of spare parts or another plane Saturday.

Meanwhile, ten Navy reservists were called to active duty Friday and sent to McChord Air Force base near Tacoma, Wash. It is the first Navy reserve unit from Idaho to go.

Part of the U.S. Air Force 366 Security Police Squadron stationed at Mountain Home, the airmen will be assigned to an air base at an undisclosed location on the Arabian Peninsula.

"I won't miss Idaho weather," said Tech Sgt. Kenneth Adams, 30. The Florida native leads the squad of 13 security police who are trained to patrol and defend Air Force property and personnel.

The security police are joining 16,000 U.S. troops who received orders to leave for the region Friday, less than three weeks from a United Nations deadline for Iraq to leave Kuwait or face possible attack.

Staff Sgt. Carl Mayes, 27, said he was not surprised when he received his deployment orders. "At least I got to spend Christmas with my family," he said.

Chemical warfare and sandstorms were two concerns Staff Sgt. Harry Gomez voiced before he and the rest of the squad boarded the crippled plane, which was initially scheduled to fly to Bergstrom Air Force Base near Austin, Texas. They will join other units and head for Saudi Arabia in several days.

Up to 2,000 security police are usually stationed on a base to defend and protect it, said Master Sgt. Chris Aune, a base spokesman.

Gomez, 30, said the thought of Saddam Hussein introducing chemical warfare was frightening.

"If it comes down to chemical warfare," he said, "it will go nuclear."

Nine of the Navy detachment's members are from Idaho. The officer in charge is from Montana.

The Reserve Cargo Handling unit will join up with its battalion in Tacoma and then head for the Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines, said Lt. R.M. Smith, commanding officer of the Navy reserve center in Boise.

Smith said the unit, which has been activated for 90 days, will probably spend its entire tour at Subic Bay. They are responsible for the proper loading of cargo ships, he said.

Andrus will not pull Idaho member from wolf panel

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus says he will not pull Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley off a new wolf reintroduction committee to force the federal government to add more Idahoans to the panel.

Andrus' Friday announcement flew in the face of two requests to do so.

The Idaho Cattle Association and Republican Sen. Steve Symms both asked the Democratic governor to yank Conley from the 10-member committee to force Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan to give Idaho better representation.

"The governor has an opportunity to challenge the committee's makeup and call for our state to have adequate input on the panel," said ICA President Dan Hammond of American Falls. "If the wolf is reintroduced, it will be here in Idaho, not in Washington, D.C."

As it is now, Conley is the only Idahoan on the panel. Lujan overlooked Idahoans in appointing ranching, hunting and conservation representatives.

The committee is charged with devising a plan for reintroducing Rocky Mountain gray wolves, an endangered species, to central Idaho and Yellowstone National Park.

Andrus said he does not support the forced reintroduction of wolves to Idaho, and he agrees Idaho is under-represented on the panel. Even so, he said he wants Conley to remain on the panel so he can remain apprised of the committee's progress.

"I won't pull Conley off the committee," Andrus said. "It would be like the small child getting in a disagreement with his friends, taking his toys and going home. But it doesn't change my view about the re-entry of wolves to Idaho one iota."

Like Symms and the cattlemen, Andrus blasted Interior for appointing people from Washington, D.C., and Boulder, Colo., to the wolf panel.

"If they want to put people on the committee from Colorado, then let them reintroduce wolves in Colorado," the governor said.

Interior officials said legislation creating the committee directed them to select the people who were best qualified, not the best political choices.

Even so, Symms spokesman David Pearson said by omitting Idaho ranchers and conservationists from the panel, the final plan could be dead on arrival in Congress.

He noted Montana Gov. Stan Stevens and Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont., also have strongly objected to the panel's makeup, and that Ron Somerville, the hunting representative on the committee, has questioned his selection.

Somerville, director of national and international affairs for the Wildlife Fund of America, has suggested he would better represent conservation.

Pearson said, "If you've got two states crying foul, and one member questions his selection, then if you look at it from pure brass-knuckles politics, you begin to see the committee won't have much of a chance of success."

New state law enforcement director pledges no favoritism

BOISE (AP) — The state's new top cop says the selective enforcement controversy which rocked the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement is history.

Internal changes still need to be made in the agency, but quick action by Gov. Cecil Andrus has put to rest charges of favoritism, new director Richard Cade said.

"The department still has good credibility with the public," Cade said. "That situation has been dealt with by the governor. He did what he had to do and now that's been put to rest."

The department came under fire last month after revelations that former director Mack Richardson and state Police Superintendent Rich Humphreys ordered state police troopers to overlook traffic infractions by legislators and other officials. After a brief investigation, Andrus sacked both men.

Cade said Andrus made the right decision to choose their successors from within the department.

State Police Capt. Ronald Moore of Lewiston was Andrus' choice to succeed Humphreys. Cade had been Richardson's chief lieutenant.

Investigators conclude blaze probably was arson-caused

CALDWELL (AP) — Burn patterns and other clues have led investigators to believe the Dec. 19 blaze that destroyed Caldwell's historic Saratoga hotel and restaurant probably was arson-caused.

through the Saratoga's ruins Wednesday, and a demolition crew was close behind. Alcott said investigators found burn patterns and the possible presence of a liquid "accelerant," or fuel that might have been used to start the fire and spread the flames.

Some deserve the spotlight once again

One of the greatest things about my job as a features writer is the variety of wonderful, intriguing people I meet. I talked with and wrote about hundreds of people over the past 12 months, each with a worthy story to tell.

But a few continue to stick in my mind and my heart. Once again, they deserve a moment in the spotlight:

Julie Fanselow
Spotlight

- Kay Lynne Miley, who teaches learning-disabled students in Jerome and whose full life as an independent, smart, witty woman with cerebral palsy is an inspiration to all.
- Earth Day "heroes" including David Makings and Steve and Marcy Nielson, all of whom were heading their "green" conscience long before April's media event.
- The Revs. Rebecca Irelan of Filer United Methodist Church and Peggi Kephart Boyce of Jackpot Community Church, and the men of Ascension Priory in Jerome. In an era of crassly commercialized religion, they accept and walk humbly with their God. Perhaps it is no coincidence that their stories were among the best I heard all year.
- Gail Parish, an addictions counselor at Canyonview Hospital in Twin Falls, who has helped many people come to grips with the toll chemical dependency takes not just on the dependent person but on their families and friends, too.
- The Bagdasarov and Lorinez families, among the many people from around the world who are starting lives anew in Twin Falls and the United States. They remind me we are all citizens of one planet; they encourage my prayers that someday, the world's leaders will know we're all far more similar than we are different.

Several area students are the recipients of scholarships. Gayl Teschke, a senior from Twin Falls in food, nutrition and technology at Oregon State University, won a $1,000 Northwest Food Processors Association scholarship.

Pete Dias, an education major at Idaho State University, has received the first $500 Angie Valley Dairy Boys Scholarship from the Wendell Chamber of Commerce. He worked at the D&S Dairy - now known as the Neil DeWit Dairy - until enrolling in school full time.

At the College of Southern Idaho, three music majors have received awards. Marion J. Day of Twin Falls earned a $200 per semester grant, and Larry Jones and Tina A. Christensen, also of Twin Falls, will get $100 per semester.

Also at CSI, three students have received $375 awards from the Laura Moore Cunningham Scholarship Fund. They are Amanda Harko of Hinko Turabusha, Twin Falls; and Stephanie Hale, Oakley.

Julie May of Hansen has been awarded a Child Development Associate credential from the Council for Early Childhood Professional Recognition in Washington, D.C. The credential is the only major national effort to improve child care by evaluating and recognizing the skills of people providing care. May is employed at CSI's Child Development Center.

Dirk Kellum of Mountain Home and Knox Barclay of Ketchum were among the finalists in the 20th Annual Architectural Design Competition at the University of Idaho. The contest was sponsored by Volco Inc. of Twin Falls and Jerome and by other members of the Idaho Concrete Masonry Association.

An incorrect last name was given in last Sunday's listing of new inductees into Phi Theta Kappa, the scholastic honor society at the College of Southern Idaho. Chuck Fuller should have been listed among the honorees.

Also, $38,712.91 was the total amount raised by the 1990 Mini-Cassini Festival of Trees. A figure reported last Sunday included only the trees sold; not the other proceeds and donations.

Grandparents' roles hard to define

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - Although widely separated by years, grandparents and grandchildren share a special bond.

Bumper stickers proudly proclaim "HAPPINESS IS BEING A GRANDPARENT" and toddlers' T-shirts and bibs tell the world "I LOVE GRANDMA" or "I LOVE GRANDPA."

Twin Falls counselor Joan Dalton-Boyd says we are not taught how to be parents in the first place, but perhaps through being a parent to our children, we learn.

"So then that makes us good grandparents, because we have what it would take to be a good parent at that age," she says. "But we didn't have it when we were parenting."

Dalton-Boyd says that grandparents have learned they have to accept themselves for who they are, while parents are still trying to be perfect. And, she adds, parents often see the child as an extension of themselves, and what the child does as reflecting back on them.

"They want to look perfect, so they want the child to do perfect," she says.

When it comes to her 10-year-old granddaughter, Tricia, Dalton-Boyd says she tries to enjoy the girl's human beingness. They read stories together and Tricia writes stories of her own, which she reads to her grandmother.

Tricia lives in Arizona, so they are only able to do these things during visits once or twice a year. The rest of the time, Dalton-Boyd does the next best thing and reaches out to her by phone.

A grandparent needs to be a good friend to a grandchild, says psychiatric social worker Ruth Bondurant.

More grandparents being called upon to raise children's children

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - For some kids, grandmas' house is the only home they have.

Cyd Dillon, multi-county specialist for the South Central Community Action Agency, says there are quite a few people in Twin Falls who are raising their children's children.

The trend, she adds, is on the rise. "I think income has a lot to do with it," she says. "I think problems have gotten so big for them (the parents) to handle that they give a child or children to Grandma, to alleviate the financial burden."

Dillon says in some cases grandma is the only one who has a house. "And sometimes divorce is the reason grandparents are called upon to provide care. When a mother is left with a child she can't afford to feed, she might leave him with Grandma until her feet are back on the ground."

"I think there's some stability with grandparents," she says. "And with a family going through crisis, maybe grandparents can offer that kind of stability."

Nevertheless, she says such an arrangement presents many challenges for the grandparents, because the times are so different from what they were 30 or 40 years ago.

"I think there's a lot more freedom," Dillon says. "It wasn't as free maybe when they were raising their children."

The nation has seen a general relaxation of standards as far as dress, talk and attitudes, Dillon says. It is sometimes difficult for parents - especially some of the older folks - to cope with this.

Discipline is also harder for grandparents, Dillon says they are generally much more mellow in this role than they were as parents.

The challenges people face in raising grandchildren can depend on the ages of the kids, Dillon says.

If grandparents take in older children who are pretty well set in their ways, it could be a real problem for the grandparents, Dillon says.

"She adds that she hasn't heard many complaints from grandparents who are caring for their grandchildren. But she says it is hard on them having children again after their kids are gone.

"You think you and your husband are going to do things, but you've got little people underfoot," she says. "Or, older kids, and you're back into the P.T.O. and all that kind of thing."

Grandparents, she adds, can enjoy doing a lot of things with their grandchildren.

But this doesn't mean taking on the role of a parent authority with grandchildren, she says.

Grandparents are naturally concerned about their grandchildren's development and behavior, but "they must bite their tongues," Bondurant says.

Although grandparents may want to help, discipline of "decide" certain things should be done, they might not always know all the details of what's been happening in that youngster's life like the parents do, she adds.

When there is more than one grandchild, a grandparent may have a variety of roles. Dalton-Boyd noticed this when she watched a video of the funeral of the mother of a friend.

Each of the deceased woman's grandchildren stood up and spoke of something different about her. "She was one grandparent," but she was really like five or six grandparents, because of the individual child who had individual needs," she recalls.

Maida Hanchey, 72, of Twin Falls, says she has noticed her grandchildren tend to have a closer relationship with her while they are young.

"Then as they grow up, it's 'Hello Grandma' and they kiss me when they see me, but they have their own lives now. But when they're small, they're just kind of right around your feet."

Experts offer grandparenting suggestions

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - In the day-to-day business of parenting, few people give much thought to the next stage of life: grandparenting.

Then one day a little bundle of joy is born to one of our children, and suddenly we have a whole new role.

How can we be the best possible grandparents? Area experts offer these suggestions:

- Although she does not recommend a grandparent try to be a parent, psychiatric social worker Ruth Bondurant says grandparents should bring behavior problems they notice to the parents' attention. When offering advice about the matter, it should be with a tactful "I recommend..." she adds.
- Do not overdo weekend visits from grandchildren or vacations with them. With two sets of standards - the parents' and grandparents' - the child-rearing process can run into conflict, Bondurant says.
- Be supportive. If the grown sons and daughters who are the parents of our grandchildren, Bondurant says,

- When buying for a grandchild, she says to use the rule of thumb of doing so as if the recipient were a good friend. "It tends to give them a guide in terms of how much to buy or what to buy," she says.
- Encourage the talents and abilities of grandchildren, says Twin Falls counselor Joan Dalton-Boyd.
- In acting as a good role model for a grandchild, Dalton-Boyd says you should be the kind of person you want to buy," she says.
- Have respect for the grandchild. Dalton-Boyd says one must give it in order to receive it.
- Be a good listener to the grandchild, Dalton-Boyd says. "Often times parents are too busy, or feel they're too busy, to do that," she adds.
- When grandparents notice something a son or daughter is doing that they would like to change, Dalton-Boyd says they can make suggestions with a phrase such as "from my experience..." Or grandparents can tell their own children about things they did while raising them and that they now see as dysfunctional, and how they would do things differently now.

great-grandchildren, Hanchey has had plenty of grandparenting experience. And because her grandchildren and the younger of her own 16 children continue to add to the family, she's assured of having little ones around - which she says is just the way she likes it.

"You still think you're needed," she says. "Some of them need you more than others in certain ways, so it works out beautifully."

To be a good grandmother, Hanchey says one should "love 'em and feed 'em." Her 18-year-old grandson, Scott Collins, agrees wholeheartedly.

"Grandmothers like cooking breakfast for you when you're hungry," he says. "I go over to Grandma Hanchey's, and she cooks grits and eggs all the time. I like that."

But it's not just the appetite that grandmothers satisfy. Collins says they are always there when you need them. "I love them, and I'm glad they're there," he says.

His 12-year-old sister, Teresa, says she can always talk to her Grandma Hanchey. "And she's nice and she likes children," she says. "So she's never mean or anything."

Teresa's friend, 12-year-old Kristin Cooper, says you can also confide in your grandparents. And she says, "They care a lot for you."

Kristin says her grandparents like to buy things for her. "Whenever I show them something I want, they always get it for me," she says.

Buying things for grandchildren is fun, says Sandy Harney of Kimberly. She says she doesn't think she is spoiling her 3½-year-old grandson, Andy, when she does so.

Harney says she and her husband, Larry, think their grandson Andy is the best thing that's ever happened to them. "He's an emotion I didn't know I was entitled to, and every time I see him, my heart goes flip-flop," she says.

William Brander of Twin Falls has nine grandchildren who all live nearby, so he sees them quite often. "I enjoy it. I get lots of attention. I love them," he says.

Brander handcrafts gifts for his grandchildren. He has constructed doll cribs, wooden wagons, Barbie houses, rocking chairs and a playhouse. One year he made nine sets of Lincoln Logs, each one large enough to cover a card table when built.

Brander says he remembers how much he loved his own grandparents, with whom he lived for a time on their farm in Montana.

He says he thinks grandparents used to have more time to give to their grandkids. There was always plenty of work for him to do, but in those days, nobody was in a hurry, he recalls.

"They gave us a lot of attention, even along with all of the work," he says. "We had no electricity and all the work we did: cutting wood, milking cows, feeding cattle and all those things. It seems different now in comparison, but I think it was a lot closer."

It's not 'God's will' when children are killed

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to your reply to the mother who had difficulty understanding why "God took her child" through an accident. My teen-age grandson was struck and killed by a car while crossing the street. The driver of the car had been drinking in a bar for three hours. He was driving a vehicle that was not his and was going at a speed estimated to be twice the legal limit. He did not stop after hitting my grandson.

When her minister told my daughter it was "God's will" and she would have to "bow" to it, she, too, had difficulty accepting it. I suggested that for a person to get into a "borrowed" vehicle, exceed the speed limit and leave the scene of an accident was not the will of God, but the will of Satan.

Is it not approaching blasphemy to blame God for something for which Satan is responsible?
 --- THE REV. AUTRY BROWN, BOLIVAR, MO.

DEAR MR. BROWN: Let us leave both God and Satan out of it; the blame rightfully belongs to the driver of the car.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you advised a reader not to fight fire with fire because it might create a bigger fire. In some instances, I suppose this is true. However, there are times when one has to take extreme measures.

Dear Abby
 Abigail
 VanBuren

For example, my husband of many years used to come to the table for meals with no shirt on. I repeatedly asked him not to do this because I did not like looking at all that flesh while I ate. But he continued to do so, saying that he "forgot."

Finally, one Sunday morning when I had prepared an especially nice breakfast, he came to the table wearing only his shorts. He was in his early 70s by this time and by no means attractive in his half-naked state. (I am 10 years younger.)

So, without saying a word, I left the table, took off my dress and bra and returned to the table and proceeded to eat my breakfast. My husband took one look at me, got up and went to his room, put on a shirt and returned to the breakfast table. Then he got up, went to my room again, redressed and returned to the table.

Neither my husband nor I said one word about the incident, but he never came to the table in a half-dressed state again.

DEAR FIREFIGHTER: How true that old saying: "Actions speak louder than words." No words could have been more effective.

DEAR ABBY: Antropos Henry Clay's famous words, "I'd rather be right than be president." Orlando B. Ficklin of Illinois was heard to quip: "The gentleman will probably never be either!"

--- JACK B. HORSLEY, MATTOON, ILL.

DEAR MR. HORSLEY: Mr. Ficklin must have had a crystal ball. Henry Clay, for all his brilliance, was a five-time loser having lost his bid for the presidency to John Quincy Adams, Andrew Jackson and James K. Polk, and his party's nomination to William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: To ensure a Happy New Year for you and everyone else - if you're driving, don't drink. And if you're drinking, please don't drive.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. # Girl frozen in snow recovers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 3-year-old girl who was revived after being found clinically dead in a snowdrift was well enough Thursday to sit up in her hospital bed and fuss at her nurses.

Doctors at Children's Hospital said Brittany Eichelberger was alert, suffering from frostbite of her hands and toes and congestion in her lungs.

"When we first took her to the hospital, I didn't think she had a chance because she just looked so bad," said Brittany's mother, Melinda Eichelberger. "Now, she's fighting with the nurses, telling them to get away."

The blond, blue-eyed toddler was found lifeless in a snowdrift early Monday, apparently several hours after she wandered outside her Elkins, W.Va., trailer home in her underwear.

Brittany's 20-year-old mother speculated the child was enchanted by the snow and ran outside to build a snowman for her grandfather.

In Rockford, Ill., doctors Thursday decided against amputating the frost-bitten legs of a 2½-year-old girl left in a relative's car for 17 hours on Christmas night in sub-zero weather.

Kandy Shoulders was in fair condition at Rockford Memorial Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Laurie Miller said.

The child's mother, Stephanie Shoulders, said she was left in her grandmother's car by accident.

"I thought she was in bed at my mother's house and my mother thought she was at my house," Ms. Shoulders said. "Everybody feels sick, but it was completely an accident."

Brittany is breathing and eating on her own, said Dr. Shekhar Venkataraman, the girl's doctor. Frostbite could cause her to lose the tips of her fingers and toes and it will be "some time" before doctors determine if there's been any brain damage, he said.

Doctors estimated Brittany had been outside for two to three hours, dressed only in a T-shirt and underwear.

Her temperature had dropped to 74 degrees, causing her heart to stop — apparently minutes before her mother found her, Venkataraman said.

In the absence of oxygen, the severe cold helped preserve her brain function, he said.

Ms. Eichelberger and her fiance found Brittany on her back about 10 yards from the home.

Dukakis manages to lighten up

BOSTON (AP) — After a 30-year political career, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is the same cool, unflappable technocrat and unflappable optimist. But if there's any change in Dukakis as he prepares to leave office Thursday, it may be that he finally managed to lighten up a little bit.

He has made spontaneous jokes beyond the canned lines provided by speech writers. He's used humor to take on old adversaries.

He's shaken hands and posed for photographs with anybody who asked. One day, he started whistling during a break in a press conference.

On a recent helicopter trip across the state, Dukakis refrained from emotional reminiscing with an accompanying reporter. But among old-political allies, nostalgia — and an uncommon lightheartedness — hung in the air.

Dukakis recalled, for example, a campaign trip in the early 1980s when the pants to his suit split.

"I'm walking around with my back to the wall trying to get the endorsement of the teachers," he said. "They said, 'Take your coat off and stay...'"

The memories span a political career that began as a town meeting member in his hometown of Brookline, the birthplace of John F. Kennedy.

Dukakis still lives there in a modest residential neighborhood.

Born to Greek immigrants Nov. 3, 1933, Dukakis went to Brookline High School, then Swarthmore College and Harvard University Law School. He was first elected to the Massachusetts House in 1962. In 1970, he lost a bid to become lieutenant governor.

He won the governor's seat in 1974, but, after raising taxes and cutting social spending, he lost the Democratic primary to Edward King in 1978. The resilient Dukakis came back in 1982, beating King in a rematch, and won a third term by a landslide in 1986.

Dukakis then became one of the so-called Seven Dwarfs seeking the Democratic nomination.

Jaguar dealer has great month

MURRAY, Utah (AP) — With new federal luxury taxes going into effect next month, a Jaguar dealer reports having an "unbelievable" December.

Don Bell, sales manager for Stephen Wade Jaguar, had two customers Friday who both wanted the Regency Red sedan sitting on the showroom floor with a sticker price of $51,029.

He hoped to talk one into buying a Diamond Blue model instead, and had a good selling point in the $2,100 higher cost in federal taxes if assessing a 10-percent tax on boat purchases above $100,000 next month, but Don Robertson, president of Robertson's Marine, said it would be foolish to buy now.

"We've got property taxes due in Utah. It'd be ridiculous," he said. "Property taxes would probably be more than the luxury tax."

Steve Ronniger, president of Corporate Wings, also isn't seeing more sales because of the taxes.

His customers buy jets and turboprops that start at $2 million.

Lawmakers break out in brawl

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — The parliament speaker ducked out under a barrage of fruit, wastepaper baskets and tea cups after passage of a clemency bill ignited the latest scuffle among lawmakers.

Police with shields protected Speaker Liang Su-jung, who fled the hall as opposition Democratic Progressive Party politicians tangled with Nationalist Party colleagues, many in their 80s or older, witnesses said.

No one was seriously hurt in the 10-minute skirmish late Friday, but Democratic Progressive lawmaker Hsieh Chang-shien suffered a bloody nose and dozens of other legislators' suits were stained with tea, officials reported.

They were elected in China before 1949, when the Nationalists lost a civil war to Communists and retreated to Taiwan.

Fights have been common among the 243 members of the lawmaking body, or Yuan, since opposition parties were legalized last year.

The Nationalist Party holds 215 seats and the Democratic Progressive Party has 13.

A member of the opposition Democratic Progressive Party holds his chair in anger over a bill to reduce jail sentences.

The latest brawl began when Democratic Progressive lawmakers organized a filibuster of a clemency bill, to reduce the jail sentences of dozens of its supporters convicted of beating policemen in demonstrations.

Nationalists opposed the change. Pandemonium erupted when Liang announced that 77 of the 84 legislators present voted to override the filibuster and passed the bill. The seven Democratic Progressive legislators refrained from voting.

Scattered violence leaves 13 dead

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — After a Christmas lull, political and tribal violence has killed 13 people, including 11 in Natal Province, police said Saturday.

The Inkatha Freedom Party, meanwhile, criticized plans by the rival African National Congress to intensify a mass action campaign in Natal, where virtual warfare between the black opposition groups has killed thousands.

A police unrest report that covered the previous 24 hours provided few details of the scattered violence.

Four people were killed and 11 houses set alight near Greytown, in Natal in what police described as a faction fight, which usually involves Zulus who support Inkatha against Xhosas and other blacks loyal to the ANC.

Another four people died of stab wounds near Port Shepstone, also in Natal, the police report said.

Fighting leaves 5 dead

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot and killed five Palestinians and wounded at least 90 people in clashes in the occupied Gaza Strip on Saturday, Israeli and Arab reports said.

The clashes were the bloodiest in Gaza since a wave of riots that swept through the seaside strip in May.

Estimates of the number of wounded Saturday ranged as high as 182.

Peruvian highland floods kill 6, 12 reported missing

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Floods in Peru's central highlands killed six people and left 12 missing and 500 families homeless, the civil defense chief said Saturday.

Radio reports put the death toll at 20 and said 50 were missing.

The head of civil defense, Gen. Jorge Ferreyros, said in a telephone interview that the number of deaths could climb as floodwaters rose.

The report on Radioprogramas said rescue workers were recovering bodies from the turbulent waters of the River Shullcas outside the central Andean city of Huancayo, a state capital 120 miles east of Lima.

Ferreyros said the river was already swollen by a week of heavy rains when a landslide Friday night shook loose a wall of mud, rock and ice from the Huaytapallana mountain, sending a wall of water down the river.

The floods washed away hundreds of ramshackle dwellings.

Iowa tackle might miss Rose Bowl game

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. — All-Big Ten defensive tackle Jim Johnson of Iowa might miss the Rose Bowl game with Washington on Tuesday because of a knee injury.

Johnson sprained a knee in practice earlier this week and is doubtful for the game, a source close to the team said Saturday.

The 6-foot-3, 270-pound senior from Forest City, Iowa, did not attend a news conference he had been scheduled to appear at a Newport Beach hotel Saturday afternoon. Coach Hayden Fry, who usually is secretive about injuries, left before reporters could ask him about Johnson.

Fry has said that on Sunday, he'll reveal the names of players who won't be available for the game. But he said he won't reveal the names of injured players who are being nursed along and might be able to play Tuesday.

Paterno irked by galloping intruder at Blockbuster Bowl

MIAMI — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno has nothing against horses, but Renegade, Florida State University's galloping mascot, is off Paterno's Christmas card list and so are the officials who let the horse dash across Joe Robbie Stadium on Friday night during halftime of FSU's 24-17 victory in the Blockbuster Bowl.

Paterno called the official "gutless" for not calling a 15-yard penalty when Renegade, ridden by Chief Oseola, ran across the field before the start of the second half.

"The horse wasn't supposed to be on the field," Paterno said Saturday. Compiled from wire reports

Consistent Bruins lose on the road

Boise Braves hand Twin Falls team its 5th straight loss

The Times-News

BOISE — Consistency is the thing most coaches look for in their teams.

Not Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia because the most consistent thing about his Bruins — the third quarter — is negative to say the least.

For the second game of the weekend and a continuing problem that started emerging a couple of years ago, the Bruins fell out of contact in the third period and absorbed their fifth straight loss at 70-57 at the hands of the Boise Braves.

"Unfortunately we again were consistent," said Astorquia who watched his Bruins fall 20 points behind Meridian Friday night and rally up to within three before falling by five. "We were down four at halftime and 17 at the end of the third quarter. I'm thinking about just trying to stall the third quarter away."

"If we could've taken care of that third quarter in four of our five losses, we had a very good chance of winning three or four," Astorquia said.

The good news is "we are becoming a pretty good second-quarter team. But our second quarters aren't as productive as our third quarters are expensive," the coach added.

Boise, ranked fourth in this week's state prep poll and standing at 5-1, broke away from the Bruins early. The Braves held a 10-point lead in the first quarter and pushed that to 13 in the second quarter before the Bruins showed signs of coming to life.

With Brent Swenson hitting 10 of his 11 points in the first half, the Bruins put together a run that crested when Swenson hit five straight points and Steve Black added a field goal that chopped the deficit to 31-29. Boise got the final two-pointer of the half to make it 33-29.

But the third-quarter blues set in immediately, Boise outscoring Twin Falls 9-1 in the first two minutes and pushing that on to 36-37 on John Rider's three-point goal late in the quarter.

Unlike other games, however, Twin Falls couldn't get control of the fourth quarter as early as usual.

The Braves never got to 20 points but they hung between 16 and 19 virtually the rest of the way.

"It was Twin Falls' fifth straight loss after a 3-0 start. The Bruins will return to Boise next week to meet the Borah Lions and made their 1991 debut at home against the Burley Bobcats next Saturday.

Texas A&M runs over BYU

Heisman winner Detmer receives 2 shoulder injuries

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Texas A&M's relentless defensive charge inflicted two shoulder separations on Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer, and the Aggies overpowered 13th-ranked Brigham Young 65-14 Saturday night in the Holiday Bowl.

The BYU defense was overmatched trying to counter the Aggies' rugged option attack. Texas A&M quarterback Bucky Richardson figured in four scores, running for two, including one when he lined up as a running back, throwing for one and catching a touchdown pass on an option from fullback Darren Lewis.

Down 30 points at the half, BYU (10-3) opened the third period by driving to the Texas A&M 11. On a third-and-6 play, Detmer was hit by linebacker Anthony Williams an instant after throwing a pass.

The BYU quarterback went to the ground hurt, cupping his right shoulder. He separated the left shoulder on a similar play in the first half.

The second injury finished Detmer for the game and he tossed and kicked his helmet in disgust on the sideline after being removed about three minutes into the third quarter.

BYU trainer George Curtis said no surgery was anticipated and that the injuries should heal naturally in 3-6 weeks. Before leaving, Detmer completed 11 of 23 passes for 120 yards with a touchdown and an interception.

The Aggies (9-3-1) have won four of five games against Heisman Trophy winners since 1985, losing only to Oklahoma State and 1988 winner Barry Sanders. The Aggies beat Auburn and 1985 winner Bo Jackson, Notre Dame and 1987 winner Tim Brown and Houston and 1989 winner Andre Ware.

BYU's Ty Detmer looks for a receiver in the Holiday Bowl Saturday.

Joe Evans replaced Detmer, and capped BYU's first possession of the second half by throwing a 1-yard touchdown pass to Brad Clark and pulling the Cougars to within 37-14, with 3:56 gone in the third quarter.

It was a score that didn't matter, however.

Richardson broke loose for a 27-yard scoring run followed by Darren Lewis' second scoring run of the game, a 3-yarder early in the fourth quarter, to build the Aggies' lead to 51-14. Backup quarterback Lance Pavlas added a 14-yard scoring pass to Cornelius Patterson with 8:06 remaining and a 9-yarder to Shane Krahl with 2:10 to play.

Texas A&M bolted to a 37-7 halftime lead as Richardson threw for a touchdown, caught a 22-yard scoring pass and ran six yards for a score while lined up at running back.

New Year's bowl games mean a good time

The Associated Press

Virginia quarterback Shawn Moore summed it up for all those OTHER New Year's Day Bowls.

"A bowl game's supposed to be a reward — You go to have a good time, even though there is a game to play," he said.

Of the eight bowl games on Tuesday, three will have a bearing on the national title — the Orange, Citrus and Cotton. The teams in the other five bowls are the ones having fun.

The so-called bowls are: Virginia (8-3) vs. No. 10 Tennessee (8-2-2) in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans; No. 8 Washington (9-2) vs. No. 17 Iowa (8-3) in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif.; No. 18 Louisville (9-1-1) vs. No. 25 Alabama (7-4) in the Fiesta Bowl at Tempe, Ariz.; No. 12 Michigan (8-3) vs. No. 15 Mississippi (9-2) in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla., and No. 14 Clemson (9-2) vs. No. 16 Illinois (8-3) in the Hall of Fame Bowl at Tampa, Fla.

No. 19 Nebraska (9-2) is the only team playing in the big three bowls that doesn't have a shot at the national championship, which will be decided by a nationwide ball-toss of Associated Press sports writers and broadcasters the next day.

The Cornhuskers play second-ranked Georgia Tech (10-0-1), the only unbeaten Division I-A team in the country, in the Citrus Bowl at Orlando, Fla. Top-ranked Colorado (10-1-1) takes on No. 5 Notre Dame (9-2) in the Orange Bowl at Miami, and third-ranked Texas (10-1) plays No. 4 Miami (9-2) in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

"It means everything in the world," Georgia Tech guard Joe Siffri said. "I can't think of anything I wouldn't do to win this game."

Monday's bowl games had No. 21 Southern Cal (8-3-1) vs. No. 22 Michigan State (7-3-1) in the John Hancock Bowl at El Paso, Texas, and California (6-4-1) vs. Wyoming (9-3) in the Copper Bowl at Tucson, Ariz.

Sugar Bowl

It was apparent from the onset that Virginia and Tennessee were having fun on Bourbon Street.

"I know our team is enjoying New Orleans," Tennessee coach Johnny Majors said. "I just don't know how much sleep they're getting. I do know they're alert at practice, and that's what really counts."

Sugar Bowl officials had visions of national championships running through their heads until Virginia lost three of its last four games and its No. 1 ranking; Tennessee also lost two in a three-week stretch.

Colorado State holds off Oregon in Freedom Bowl

The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Gimenez threw a 49-yard touchdown pass to Greg Primus and Todd Yert ran 52 yards for the deciding score, and Colorado State denied a last-minute Oregon conversion attempt to beat the Ducks 32-31 in the Freedom Bowl Saturday night.

Gimenez led the Rams (9-4) 75 yards in four plays early in the fourth quarter for the score that overcame a 25-19 Oregon lead. On the first play of the drive, an interception by Oregon's Rory Dairy was nullified by roughing-the-passer penalty.

On the scoring play, Primus went down, the left side on a fly pattern and hauled in the pass in front of Eric Castle, who fell down going for the ball.

Oregon (8-4) drove to the Colorado State 26 with 8:35 left, but Sean Burwell lost his second fumble of the game and Colorado State's Eric Tippecanoe recovered.

Seven plays later, Yert went up the middle, cut left and ran into the clear when two defenders collided, giving the Rams a 32-25 lead.

Bill Musgrave, whose third touchdown pass of the game was a 44-yarder to Michael McClellan that gave the Ducks a 25-19 lead, got Oregon within reach of victory in the final minute.

At the end of an 11-play, 79-yard drive, Burwell ran a yard to get the Ducks within a point with 61 seconds to play. Musgrave completed the conversion pass to McClellan, but officials ruled that McClellan failed to cross the goal line.

Musgrave completed 29 of 47 passes for 392 yards and three TDs.

Colorado State was making its first bowl appearance in 42 seasons. Its only other postseason appearance was a loss to Occidental in the Raisin Bowl on New Year's Day 1949.

The Ducks were making consecutive postseason appearances for the first time. Gimenez scored on a 1-yard run on the Rams' opening drive of the game, but Musgrave had the Ducks in front by halftime.

Idaho's Friesz starts for Chargers against Raiders

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — After the Raiders lost to Kansas City for the second time in November, they decided to start their own minicession.

"So far, so good — it's four straight wins with one to go. And if they beat the San Diego Chargers on Sunday, the Raiders will win the AFC West for the first time since 1985.

"The only reason we've won four in a row is we've concentrated on each game, one at a time." Raiders defensive tackle Bob Golic said. "Things are going well, we feel good about ourselves."

Golic wasn't feeling too good about himself Nov. 25 after the Raiders were beaten by the Chiefs 27-24 at the Los Angeles Coliseum. Three weeks earlier, the Chiefs topped the Raiders 9-7 at Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City.

Golic jumped offside twice during Kansas City's final touchdown drive in the second of Kansas-Chiefs games, and was injured afterwards.

But that game is nothing more than a distant memory these days.

The decision of Nov. 25 left both the Raiders and Chiefs with 7-4 records. However, Kansas City will win the AFC West if the teams finish with identical records by virtue of its sweep over Los Angeles.

The Raiders are 4-0 since Nov. 25 and 11-4 overall while the Chiefs are 4-1 after their 21-10 victory over the Chicago Bears Saturday, making them 11-5 overall.

With the Chiefs' victory on Saturday, the Raiders must beat or tie the Chargers or else face a wild-card playoff game.

"It's on us," Raiders quarterback Jay Schroeder said. "It goes back to what we said five weeks ago — if we win all five games, we'll have a very good chance to win the division. We've won four with one left. It's in our own hands."

The Chargers (6-9) will be trying to avoid a third straight 6-10 season. And they'll be doing it with a rookie quarterback.

John Friesz — who has never played in an NFL regular-season game. Chargers coach Dan Hennigan announced last Monday that Friesz, a sixth-round draft choice from Idaho, would replace Billy Joe Folliver as the team's starting quarterback against the Raiders.

"At this time, I don't know the difference between the Raiders and New England," said Friesz, an injured reserve all season with "a shoulder ailment." "It'll call the NFL to me."

Friesz passed for 10,697 yards at Idaho while setting 21 school, 18 conference and five NCAA Division I-AA records.

He had not taken a snap with the Chargers' first-team offense all season before this week.

He threw four passes in the preseason, completing one.

"We think it's mandatory to find out about this guy (Friesz)," Hennigan said.

"He'll be in there for as long as we can compete. If we're in the ballgame, he stands to play the whole game. Our objective is to go up to Los Angeles and beat the Raiders, no more, no less."

White leads Auburn to 27-23 Peach Bowl win over Indiana

Hoosiers take late lead only to see it slip away

ATLANTA (AP) — Stan White threw for 351 yards and scored on a 13-yard knockout with 39 seconds to play, lifting Auburn to a 27-23 victory Saturday over Indiana in the Peach Bowl.

The Hoosiers (6-5-1) had taken the lead moments earlier when their quarterback, Trent Green, scored on an 11-yard run with 2:26 to play for his third rushing touchdown of the game.

That gave Indiana a 23-20 lead, but with White throwing for 67 yards in the 72-yard drive, Auburn (8-3-1) got the game-winner on fourth-and-goal when the Freshman White sprinted left and routed into the corner of the end zone untouched.

Indiana went ahead after Auburn's Richie Nell fumbled the snap on a punt. The Hoosiers recovered on the Tigers 29, and, four plays later, Green gave the Hoosiers their first lead.

White, who connected on 31 of 48 passes, scored earlier on a short run and threw for another TD. His passing also set up field goals.

6 yards out. He threw an 11-yard TD pass to Alex Smith in the second quarter.

Jim Von Wyl added field goals of 26 and 43 yards for Auburn.

Indiana got touchdown runs from Green of 3 and 2 yards, the latter with 6:32 left to get the Hoosiers within 20-16. Green was sacked as Indiana attempted a 2-point conversion.

Indiana's other score came on a 42-yard field goal by Scott Bonnell midway in the second period.

A crowd of 38,962 was on hand for the game, played under an overcast sky and fog with temperatures in the mid-50s.

White's favorite receiver was Herbert Casey, who caught seven passes for 159 yards.

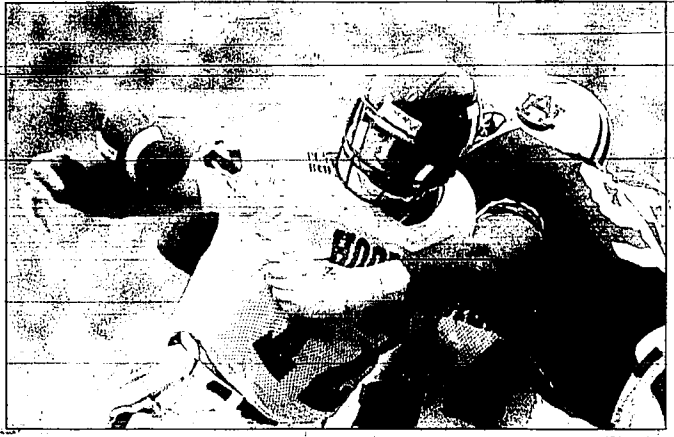

Indiana's tailback Vaughn Dunbar, who had 1,143 yards rushing during the regular season, had 81 yards on 21 carries.

White took Auburn 80 yards in 10 plays on the opening drive of the game, connecting on five of six passes for 52 yards.

Indiana tied it 7-7 when Green scored on a 3-yard run as time ran out in the first quarter. The Hoosiers went 73 yards in 12 plays on the drive.

White then hit Smith to end a 62-yard drive in six plays only 2:51 into the second quarter. He connected on all three of his passes for 66 yards in a drive that included a 10-yard Auburn holding penalty.

On the way to Von Wyl's first field goal, White threw for 61 yards in a 69-yard drive, and he completed four of five passes for 48 yards to set up Von Wyl's 43-yarder.

Indiana's Trent Green juggles the football as he is hit by Auburn's David Rocker (95).

1990 treats Hagerman Pirates right

By Jeff Hoskisson
Times-News writer

1990 has been a good year for the Hagerman Pirates.

In November they claimed their second straight A-4 football title and as January approaches their basketball team is off to a 6-1 start and may have the inside track to the Magic Valley Conference title and a possible trip to the state tournament.

"Things are going good for us considering the late start that we got," expressed Pirates coach Randy Clark.

The Pirates off to one of their best starts in recent years have achieved their success despite having had only seven practice sessions prior to the season starting.

"We have come around quicker this year than we did last year," says Clark. "Last year it took us two months to come down from winning the state football title. It was something new and exciting for both the kids and the community. This year it was just as nice but it didn't take us as long to come down this year. We are more focused. The seniors have never been to state in basketball and they would like to be there this year."

Leading the Pirates thus far has been senior

Boys basketball

Ryan Pharis, Pharis is the leading scorer in the conference and the No. 2 scorer in the valley with a 27 point per game average.

Pharis is not alone though as three of teammates are averaging in double figures and a fourth is just below that mark.

Starters Chris Weitzel, Cody McCammon, John Thompson, and Kirk Lindsay are averaging 13, 12, 11, and 9.8 ppg respectively.

"Ryan is tough on the inside and we are starting to get some scoring from the outside," said Clark of his balanced attack.

Despite the quick start and balanced scoring the Pirates have one big disadvantage that Clark sees as a possible problem that could keep all the other schools in the running for the conference title.

"We have to stay healthy. We don't have any depth on this team."

The Pirates, as well as everyone else, chances of winning the conference title were improved this year when the Shoshone Indians moved to the Northwest.

"It has to see them leave. They made all of us in the conference better teams. We all wanted to play up to their level," stated Clark.

Even with his Pirate team the only one above .500 at this point in the season Clark is not counting out the other teams in the conference.

"Nobody can be overlooked and in order for us to win we have to be ready to play every night."

The teams most likely to challenge the Pirates according to Clark are the Raft River Trojans, Hansen Huskies, and Oakley Hornets.

The Trojans are being paced by the valleys number nine scorer, Torrey Anderson, who is averaging 16.9 ppg.

Along with Anderson, Blake Smith is contributing to the tune of 12.6 ppg. Despite their 3-4 record the Trojans have the experience and talent to challenge the Pirates before the season ends. In Hansen, the Huskies are led by Eli Williams and his 15.3 ppg average. The Huskies are off to a slow start as a team, 2-5, but should be there at the end.

As for the Hornets, 1-5, they are led by Todd Hale who is averaging 13.2 points at this early juncture.

Not to be over looked though are the Murtaugh Red Devils and the Castleford Wolves.

The Devils are the only other team in the conference besides the Pirates to be playing at the .500 level at 3-3. The Wolves are 0-3.

Chiefs keep hopes alive

CHICAGO (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs kept alive their AFC West championship hopes Saturday, getting five field goals from Nick Lowery and 276 passing yards from Steve Deberg in a 21-10, season-ending victory over the Chicago Bears.

With both teams bound for the playoffs and the Bears around the NFC Central Division winners, the Chiefs (11-5) had the most at stake. Now, they need a San Diego victory over the Los Angeles Raiders on Sunday to win their division and avoid the wild-card round.

The Bears (11-5) play next weekend to the NFC's No. 3 wild-card team, either Dallas or New Orleans.

Eagles beat Cards, 23-21

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Randall Cunningham didn't get his rushing record, but the Philadelphia Eagles got what they wanted.

Cunningham threw three touchdown passes, two to Fred Barnett, as the Eagles beat the Phoenix Cardinals 23-21 Saturday to clinch the home-field advantage for their first-round playoff game.

The Eagles (10-6) will play host to the Washington Redskins in an NFC wild-card game next weekend.

"We got what we wanted and what we needed and that's the home-field advantage," Philadelphia coach Buddy Ryan said. "We know Washington well and they know us well. It'll be another tough game, like the other two this year."

Phoenix ended its season with its third consecutive loss and finished 5-11 for the second straight year.

"We're not proud of our record, but we've grown. We were in most of the ballgames," first-year Cardinal coach Joe Bugel said.

"The Eagles are one of the beasts of the East. We beat them earlier, this season and we almost beat them again here."

Phoenix trailed 23-7 early in the fourth quarter and closed to 23-21 on two touchdown passes by Timm Rosenbach — a 38-yarder to rookie Ricky Proehl with 5:56 remaining and a 45-yarder to J.T. Smith with 1:51 left.

Lady Pirates boast 5-0 conference slate

By Jeff Hoskisson
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — At the midpoint of the Magic Valley Conference girls basketball season the only thing that appears capable of slowing the Hagerman Pirates is the cold weather.

Opposing teams have found the Pirates as friendly as the freezing temperatures outside.

The Pirates enter their final five conference games with a 5-0 record and a 11-1 overall record.

The competition over the final part of the season looks like it will come from the Raft River Trojans, Oakley Hornets, or the Hansen Huskies.

Coming into the season the Pirates had a goal of returning to the state tournament, where they placed second last year.

Their only loss came at the hands of the Filer Wildcats in their second game of the year. On the win side they have plowed through all other opponents, including the Shoshone Indians, with relative ease.

Girls basketball

The Pirates are being led in their drive to state by 5'9" junior Tanya Eichelberger who is averaging 17.2 points per game.

Although Eichelberger is the team leader she is not the only one doing things for the Pirates. Keri Andrus is kicking in 13.3 ppg and Julie Thompson is adding another 7.1 while Kristi Babington is accounting for 5.3 ppg.

"I had to see them leave. They made all of us in the conference better teams. We all want-the second half of the season.

"The Trojans, 5-5 overall and 2-0 in the conference, are being led by the 14 point scoring average of Kim Whitaker. Whitaker is getting help in the scoring department from Amy Briggs, who is chipping in 11.4 ppg.

The Hornets, 5-5 and 2-1, are paced by one of the valley's top players in Cara Cranney.

Cranney is second only to DeClo's Thais Kidd in scoring with a 24.2 point average. The Hornets are also getting solid play from Anne Hale, 11.1 ppg, Charlotte, Hardy, and Kelly Strauss.

The Huskies, off to one of their best seasons in a while at 7-2 are 1-2 in the conference with their losses coming at the hands of the Pirates and the Trojans.

Hansen is led by Emily Butler and her 11.4 scoring average. Melissa Dowd, 7.4 ppg, is also a big contributor to the Huskies success.

Arkansas' Day goes easy on Jackson State

The Associated Press

Considering that he averaged five points per minute in one stretch of second-ranked Arkansas' blowout Saturday at Jackson State, it was surprising that Todd Day was unable to surpass his career-high scoring total.

But Day, by his own admission, blew it on his own, settling for 31 points — three below his high-water mark set last season against Texas in the Razorbacks' 122-88 victory.

"I was disappointed in not getting a career high," Day said. "I had a chance to get four more points at the end of the game, but I forced a lot of shots."

Still, Day lit a bit out of character.

"We came out and got our pressing game working more than we have in the past," he said. "Coach (Nolan Richardson) allowed me to roam around and double on the ball. I got my hands on a lot of passes."

Day scored 15 points during a 22-7 spurt. He broke a 25-25 tie with a layup with 8:56 left in the first half and his free throws closed the surge to break a 77-73 tie with 5:35 remaining.

"We had too many spurts for them," Richardson said. "We had a run of 42-12 or something like that in the first half and the game was over by half."

In other games involving ranked teams, it was No. 7 North Carolina

War seen as bad news for agriculture

By Mark Kind
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Only a "swift and peaceful" resolution to the Kuwait crisis can soften what otherwise appears to be an inevitable and severe agricultural recession.

That is the view of the agricultural economists at the University of Idaho and its sister institutions in Washington and Oregon, who have offered a bleak outlook in their annual forecast, the Pacific Northwest Agricultural Situation and Outlook. War would endanger oil wells and harbors in the Persian Gulf, pushing oil prices to $60 per barrel and dramatically cutting farmers' profitability as prices for their products fall due to lagging exports and excess supplies.

Increases in oil prices following the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq on Aug. 2 already have cut profits for the United States' oil-dependent farmers.

"Fuel prices were 10 percent higher in 1990 than 1989," the economists noted. "Prices of agricultural chemicals are expected to rise in 1991 as a result of higher crude oil prices."

Good news

Most, but not all, of the economists' predictions were gloomy. On the bright side:

• Some impoverished nations have enjoyed a windfall from higher oil prices during the Persian Gulf crisis and one of them, Mexico, might increase purchases of U.S. grocery beans.

• A weakening dollar may make other farm products more affordable for foreigners. Total tonnage of farm products shipped overseas may exceed the 1990 volume, but the total value will probably be less.

• Electricity prices should remain relatively constant for the next few years — good news to irrigators who pump water with electricity. If native salmon species are listed on the U.S. endangered species list and Northwest hydroelectric production is curtailed, new costs for electricity won't be felt by farmers until 1992.

• Higher fuel and chemical costs might encourage farmers to reduce tillage and employ other conservation techniques.

Bad news

But if war does break out in the Persian Gulf, things could get grim.

"This country should expect to experience a pronounced and protracted recession in 1991," the economists said. "The overall demand for farm machinery will decrease, while the price of new equipment will rise approximately 5 percent in 1991."

The Situation and Outlook Report further predicts that:

• Growers of small grains may not be able to find friendly lenders because low

Please see OUTLOOK/E3

Increases in oil prices already have cut profits for the United States' oil-dependent farmers.

Commodities outlook mixed

The Times-News

Dairy

Feed prices are expected to remain near 1990's levels, but on-farm milk prices will be lower — probably dropping $2 to $3 below the 1990 average of $14 per 100 pounds. Alfalfa may be scarce.

Potatoes

If the crisis in the Middle East worsens and oil prices escalate further, Pacific Northwest growers may have to accept lower prices in compensation for increased transportation costs.

But demand for french fries could increase as consumers pass up pricey sit-down restaurants for cheaper fast-food eateries.

Returns on the 1990 harvest will be lower than the 1989 harvest, but demand for good-quality potatoes will remain strong.

Wheat

Worldwide acreage of 1991 wheat is expected to be below 1990. A 19 percent dip in total U.S. wheat production is likely, but U.S. white wheat production will probably drop just 9 percent. As production drops off, wheat prices should recover from their current low levels. The season's average white wheat price at Portland, Ore., should be 40 cents higher than the 1990 average of $3 per bushel.

The 1990 Farm Bill is expected to play a major role in reducing wheat acres by giving farmers greater flexibility in what they can plant without losing eligibility for future subsidy payments when they return to wheat.

Hay

Demand for high-quality hay will remain strong.

Hay will command high prices through the winter, but prices will move lower next summer, ranging between $60 and $100 through the production year.

Demand for export hay in Japan and Korea is likely to increase.

Feed grains

Demand for feed grains remains high and prices should hold steady into 1991.

Total 1991 U.S. production will decline about 5 percent with reductions in corn

Wool growers oppose new 'check-off' promotion idea

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Wool Growers Association has passed a resolution opposing creation of a national "check-off" promotion program for lambs.

The association's resolution cited financial troubles in the industry and asserted that other national promotion programs have been "ineffective."

He will also teach how, when and where to deliver a message.

The workshop, sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho, the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and the Better Business Bureau of Idaho, will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Jan. 16 at CSI's Southern Idaho Development Center.

Stock broker sets seminar for mutual fund shareholders

TWIN FALLS — Edward D. Jones & Co. local representative Eugene H. Sturgill will host a live seminar for shareholders of American Fund's SMALLCAP mutual fund.

AAM to discuss importance of agriculture to economy

TWIN FALLS — The American Agriculture Movement will hold a special meeting for members of the business community at noon Jan. 7 at Addison West Restaurant, 348 Addison Ave., W.

The no-host luncheon will feature a presentation emphasizing the importance of agriculture to the economic health of the Magic Valley economy.

1990 frantic for agriculture, Yeutter says

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter says 1990 will go down as "the most hectic year for a secretary of agriculture in the history of the United States."

Yeutter noted the months of debate and negotiation as Congress wrote a new farm bill, the wrangling and eventual action on cutting the federal budget, and, of course, the multilateral trade negotiations.

Except for the trade talks that are still to be resolved, 1990 stacked up as a pretty solid chapter in Yeutter's book.

"We would make a few changes if we had an opportunity to do so," Yeutter said last week. "But considering the complexities of what's happening and the rapid pace of the world, I feel pretty good about the year."

Yeutter, a hard-driving 60-year-old, gave his year-end appraisal during a telephone interview with farm broadcasters and later with a group of news reporters here.

Despite Yeutter's enthusiasm for his job and accomplishments, there are critics who contend the new farm law is a blueprint for disaster. Yeutter disagrees.

"In my judgment, we emerged with a farm bill package that is certainly respectable and probably a lot more farmer-friendly than most of our farmers around the country now believe or realize," he said. "I think it'll turn out to be a bill that will serve American agriculture very well over the next five years."

A favorite bone cleaved by critics involves the budget-cutting plan approved by Congress in October, which will hold down federal spending by about $496 billion over five years. The Agriculture Department's share of the cut was $13.6 billion. Many farm interest groups, and some members of Congress, complained that agriculture was hit with too much.

Meanwhile, Congress finished a five-year farm bill that includes provisions to carry out the spending cuts assigned USDA, mostly in the commodity programs that provide price supports and deficiency payments to farmers.

The new farm law will mean smaller subsidies going to farmers in the next five years. Other provisions, including special assessments on some producers, tighten the outlook further.

Yeutter

Yeutter said. "And they make a simplistic evaluation of the bill that is not really an accurate reflection of a lot of its good features."

The deep-seated concern of Yeutter's is the Uruguay Round of trade negotiations launched four years ago under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Yeutter, who was U.S. trade representative in the Reagan administration, is a gun-ho advocate of liberalizing GATT rules so that countries can produce and trade to the fullest of their abilities.

The U.S. view on agricultural trade is for fewer protective import barriers, a reduction

Bevy of higher taxes go into effect this week

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — New federal taxes will raise the price of tobacco, beverage alcohol and some luxuries beginning Tuesday while "upper-income" Americans will have to pay higher income taxes to help reduce the nation's budget deficit.

The changes, combined with the 5.1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax increase that took effect Dec. 1, will raise the average household's federal tax bill by about $215 a year, Congress estimates. The average family making less than $50,000 will pay an extra $1 a week.

Those with incomes between $50,000 and $100,000 will pay about $278 a year more on the average. The increase for the $100,000-to-$200,000 group will average $323.

The richest 600,000 couples and individuals — with incomes over $200,000 — will pay an average of $8,598 more per year.

WASHINGTON — Here are estimates of how average annual federal tax liabilities will be affected by several changes taking effect Jan. 1 and the gasoline tax increase imposed a month earlier.

The estimates were made by the House Democratic Study Group based on data from the Joint Committee on Taxation. Each income category include families and single people. The new year also brings a major increase in the earned-income tax credit, which benefits low-income working families with children, and expanded tax incentives for energy investment.

Here are highlights of the changes:

• TOBACCO: Taxes are rising by 25 percent, meaning the 16-cent tax on a pack of cigarettes goes to 20 cents. Other levies: as much as $30 per 1,000 large cigars; $1.125 per 1,000 small cigars; chewing tobacco, 12 cents a pound; snuff, 36 cents a pound; pipe tobacco, 67¢ cents a pound.

• ALCOHOL: The liquor tax goes up $1 to $13.50 for a gallon of 100-proof (50 percent alcohol) an extra 20 cents a fifth for 100-proof; 16 cents for 80-proof. The beer tax is doubled to 32 cents a six-pack. The tax on wine is rising, depending on alcohol content. Table wine, now 17 cents a gallon, goes to $1.07; the levy on artificially carbonated wine, now $2.40, goes to $3.30 a gallon.

• LUXURIES: A new 10 percent tax applies to that portion of the price above $30,000 for cars, $100,000 for boats, $250,000 for aircraft and $10,000 for furs and jewelry. Vehicles, including taxis and cruise ships, used to transport people are hire are exempt.

The tax applies only to the first retail sale of an item. Hazzard, Coopers & Lybrand accountants note, for example, that if stones from an antique bracelet worth $10,000 were reset into a new piece of jewelry.

Business

Eastern Europe could compete

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trade analysts in the Agriculture Department say it is still unclear whether Eastern Europe will emerge as a long term, thriving market for U.S. farm products.

In fact, there is a possibility Eastern Europe will develop into a competitor of American grain producers.

Mike Dwyer of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said many people here hope these countries will experience rapid growth as they move toward market economies.

But it is possible that Eastern Europe may show economic decline in the short run. If so, he said, that could mean some U.S. export opportunities as the countries try to make up the gap between supply and demand.

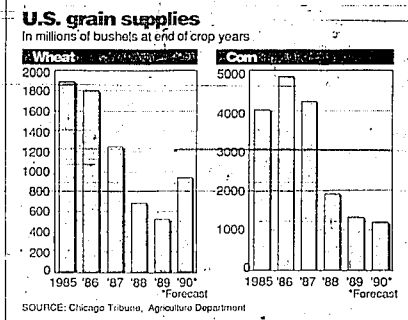

Dwyer, whose comments appeared in the January issue of Ag-Exporter magazine, said he was "less optimistic about U.S. exports to Eastern Europe over the long haul."

"Over the next five years, there is a real possibility that Eastern Europe (excluding the Soviet Union) could become a significant net exporter of some bulk agricultural products, such as grains, and thus emerge as a competitor with us," he said.

"Until recently, they have been only marginal net exporters of grain."

Dwyer said he thinks certain sectors will emerge sooner than others as the Eastern European countries retool their economies and global competitiveness.

"I believe agriculture, primarily grain and livestock, will be among the region's first sectors to emerge from this transition," he said. "Light industry, such as textiles and leather, also should do well."

Many of the countries already have fairly substantial farm economies and fertile land, Dwyer said. Consequently, some may emphasize grain and livestock products for export.

"While over the long run this does not bode well for expanding U.S. grain sales, it does offer opportunities for oil seeds (soybeans) and meat as a livestock feed for East European herds, which I expect will increase," he said. "Herd increases, in turn, may also boost sales of U.S. genetics."

But Eastern Europe's desire to export should also create some demand for U.S. cotton and cattle hides for the manufacture of textiles and leather.

"Over the very long term, as their economies really start to grow and their incomes rise, these East European countries may develop into markets for U.S. high-value products" that have already been processed, Dwyer said. "But that is going to take a while and we can expect intense competition from Eastern Europe itself as well as the European Community."

Wave goodbye to deductibility of personal interest payments

NEW YORK — When the New Year's clamor is over, consumer borrowers will face a somewhat harsher tax environment, one in which the helping hand of Uncle Sam will have been removed.

No longer will any part of personal interest payments be deductible on income tax returns.

It isn't a small matter. A total of $737.4 billion in such loans were outstanding in September, and the monthly totals were rising steadily since last March. Moreover, rates on these loans generally are the highest.

The demise of personal interest tax deductions has been little noted of late because, in a sense, it is old news. As late as the mid-1980s, all such interest was deductible, but then Congress changed the rules.

With the tax reform legislation of 1986, personal interest deductions were phased out, falling to only 10 percent of the total on consumption over production, which was a major issue of the 1980s.

That old emphasis, some critics say, led to the assumption of too much credit, cut into savings rates, defied industrial America domestic funds for expansion and improvement, and, even helped, worsen the foreign payments balance.

It was in such a mood that Congress decided on the phaseout. Lower the tax benefits, it was reasoned, and people will cut back on their use of credit. That faith was misplaced; personal loans continued to climb.

In fact, so strong have they been that banks and other lenders have seen little reason to seek customers by lowering interest rates. Today, with rates in general falling, most personal loan rates remain very high.

Some bank cards, for example, still charge close to 20 percent, even more. A finance company was accused in New York recently of deceptively promoting loans at an annual rate of close to 23 percent.

Of the total outstanding, commercial banks have about $350 billion and finance companies more than $140 billion, with the rest split among credit unions, retailers, savings institutions, gasoline companies and organizations that buy pools of loans from the original lenders.

Why did loan demand remain high in spite of the lost deductibility? The answer is, "No, but some students of consumer behavior say the penalty just wasn't enough to convince borrowers to adjust to simpler lifestyles."

Meanwhile, the home equity loan added to household debt burdens by allowing deduction of most interest on loans to $100,000 taken out after Oct. 13, 1987. The loans needn't be home-related; you can use the money to buy a car.

Thus, the intent of Congress in removing personal interest deductibility was largely undermined by the home equity provision, which allowed borrowers to simply transfer credit-card debt to deductible status.

One assumption made at the time was that homeowners, most of them good credit risks to begin with, would prudently avoid endangering their home ownership.

Whether they have been prudent is open to question. Fears exist that a recession with high unemployment could mean foreclosures. Aid declines in values could worsen the predicament for borrowers and lenders alike.

The brighter side of the picture is that some personal interest rates might decline. Might, that is, if consumer demand for loans slackens.

Medical, drug stocks thriving on otherwise ailing Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — In the antic environment that prevailed on Wall Street in 1990, medical and drug stocks proved to be the best prescription for financial health.

They did the same time share of bank and savings and loan holding companies dominated the market's sick list as the year drew to a close.

Most broad-based indicators of stock-price trends showed double-digit percentage losses for 1990 as of late December, turning in their poorest performances since the bear market of 1981-82.

Just 11 of 82 stock groups tracked by Dow Jones & Co.'s industry-group indexes posted gains for the year through the close of trading on Dec. 21.

Among the gainers, the medical and biotechnology group led the pack with an advance of better than 20 percent, followed by medical supplies, pharmaceutical manufacturers, health-care providers and retail drug chains.

The performance of these stocks testifies that health care remains a booming, though by no means trouble-free, business in the early 1990s.

While the nation debates what to do about soaring health costs and uneven distribution of medical services, many companies in the field continue to thrive as the population ages and seeks longer, healthier lives.

Technology and other innovation in the health-care field has encouraged investors to look for "defensive" issues that are insulated from the effects of a business slump.

As Value Line observed in its latest evaluation of the drug stocks, "pharmaceutical manufacturers have always been known for their defensive characteristics."

"They look particularly recession-resistant this time around, due to the elimination of many low-margined non-health care product lines over the course of the last several years."

A standout example of a winning health-care stock in 1990: U.S. Surgical, producer of a line of products used in surgical stapling, which soared from 24 1/2 in January to a record high just under 70 in December.

Turo U.S. Surgical's stock chart tipped upside down, and you would have a pretty fair representation of what happened to many bank and savings and loan issues over the past year.

Dow Jones's S&L index fell nearly 60 percent, its gauge of money-center banks dropped 37 percent, and its composite of regional banks from the various corners of the country lost 40 percent.

The story gets even more somber when you look at the behavior of many individual issues from the banking and S&L sector.

For example, Bank of New England, which fell from above 9 to less than 1, for a drop of about 93 percent.

First City Bancorp, Crossland Savings, Unioned Financial, Citytrust Bancorp and HomeFed all suffered declines of more than 80 percent.

In the last few weeks of 1990, many depressed financial issues have rallied a bit on buy orders from investors attracted by distress merchandise.

If the upswing in bank stocks were to continue, analysts say, it might start shaling up as a signal that the worst of the nation's spell of debt retrenchment and credit crunch were past.

But analysts say such hopes are warranted only if it remains to be determined in 1991.

Soviet pest research continues as new ag agreement is signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has signed a cooperative agreement with the Agriculture Department to continue looking for natural enemies of insect pests.

And Moscow sent along hundreds of parasitic wasp eggs to help issued by the pact.

Edward Soper of the department's Agricultural Research Service said the eggs — which were laid in larvae of the apple codling moth — were turned over to the agency recently by Nikolai Popov of Kishinev, Moldavia.

Popov is chief director of the All-Union Institute of Biological Methods in Plant Protection. He gave the larvae to the USDA agency on Dec.

20. The USDA scientists hope the infested larvae can help conquer the codling moth, a major pest of apples in the United States.

"This pest is the proverbial worm in the apple," Soper said in a report issued by the agency. "But parasitic wasps lay their eggs on or inside the worm. Young wasps that emerge from the eggs then feed on the worm." Soper said the wasps don't sting people or animals. He is the agency's national program leader for research on natural or biological pest control.

The new cooperative agreement, signed by Popov and USDA officials, calls for further scientific explorations next year in the Soviet Union and the United States.

On the move

Power forms non-engineering subsidiary

HAILEY — Power Engineers Inc. of Hailey recently formed a subsidiary to perform non-engineering activities.

Power, a consulting engineering firm, has formed Power Field Services, which will be dedicated to construction and field activities. Power Field is already involved in several Boise Cascade projects, and is starting up projects for two other companies. The fledgling company has also been involved in three Idaho projects.

Many of Power's clients often require extensive construction services for their projects," Power Field General Manager Andy Sanders said in a prepared release. "Now, with PFS and Power, we can offer a total package of services."

Fears of layoffs unfounded but times hard, says official

KELLOGG (AP) — Fears of additional layoffs at the historic Bunker Hill Mine are based on speculation, said an official who conceded the company has cash flow problems.

"These are very difficult times, but I'm not going to forecast one thing or the other," incoming Bunker Hill Mining Co. President Alan Richardson said Thursday.

"I've told everybody that we're going to have to do some things that aren't going to be too popular."

He said the company continues to seek additional investors to finance capital improvements at the mine.

Meanwhile, miners this morning expected to receive checks for bonus pay for work done in November.

Richardson criticized miners who fostered rumors that the bonuses wouldn't be paid because of the company's financial position. Miners never were promised when they would receive the bonuses, he said. Miners said the bonus checks were supposed to be distributed before Christmas.

The apparent delay in pay, combined with layoffs at the mine in previous weeks, spawned concerns among employees that more layoffs may be in the offing.

Richardson conceded that cash flow continues to be a problem at the mine, but added that talks of additional layoffs are rooted in speculation.

Reserves of food up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reserve stockpiles of frozen food going into the holiday season were generally larger than they were a year ago, according to an Agriculture Department report.

Frozen beef was up 17 percent on Nov. 30 from year-earlier levels. Other inventory increases from a year earlier were: corn, up 37 percent; cheese, 29 percent; eggs, 29 percent; fruit juices, 17 percent; chicken, 14 percent; turkey, 29 percent; vegetables, 18 percent; and potatoes, 7 percent.

Inventories of frozen fruit, however, were down by the end of the report said. Total red meat supplies were down 3 percent because of a sharp decline in pork inventories.

Removal plans delayed a while

HAYDEN LAKE (AP) — Key managers have given themselves an extra five months to work out plans that would remove all outstanding stock in Transtector Systems Inc. from public hands and return the company to private ownership.

The northern Idaho company set April 30 as its new deadline for completing the deal.

Last spring, a group of managers, led by Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Frank Honorof, proposed issuing debentures in exchange for all outstanding shares of common stock not already owned by the group.

Shareholders were scheduled to consider the in July, but so far that shareholders meeting has not been held.

Financial has new name

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Seeking to avoid confusion with the troubled savings and loan industry, S.N.L. Financial Corp. has changed its name to Security National Financial Corp.

The change, approved by stockholders at a meeting Thursday, also means the corporation's new NASDAQ stock symbol will be "SNFCA."

Geneva steel earnings take dip in first fiscal quarter reporting

OREM, Utah (AP) — Geneva Steel reported net income of $7.7 million for the first quarter ending Nov. 20, down sharply from the $11.8 million recorded during the same period of the previous fiscal year.

The company also saw its sales and tons of steel decline during the quarter, compared to the first quarter of last fiscal year — from $132.2 million and 344,000 tons to $124.3 million and 340,000 tons.

"Geneva, in tandem with the steel industry, has seen average selling prices which was the primary reason for the decrease in net income in the first fiscal quarter of 1991 as compared to the same fiscal quarter of 1990," said Geneva President Joseph A. Cunniff.

Net income also has held down by higher furnace fuel, labor and freight costs, he said.

Further production hiked off in September due to a mill downtime during furnace repairs.

Geneva operates the only integrated steel mill operating west of the Mississippi River.

The company makes hot-rolled sheet, plate and other steel products for sale primarily in the western and central United States.

Worries mount over damage to crops

LEWISTON (AP) - The recent cold snap may have damaged wheat on half the total acreage in Washington's Whitman and Garfield counties and about 40 percent of Idaho County across the border, extension agents warn.

And even worse news is the arctic front which arrived late this past week could cause even more devastation.

It is not known yet the extent of the damage in the affected areas. A clearer picture will be available in February or March.

One reason for the apprehension is that forecasts include high winds which can blow away the snow blanket which insulates the young plants.

Wheat begins to die without snow cover when the temperature falls to 10 degrees below zero. A blanket of 10 inches help keep the plant 20 degrees warmer than the ambient temperature. Whitman County extension agent

I am concerned because there was very little snow cover at the beginning of the cold. I suspect there is significant damage to wheat in parts of the county.

— David Bragg, Garfield County extension agent

John Burns said about 50 percent of the county's 400,000 acres under wheat was without snow cover.

Whitman is the largest wheat-producing county in the country.

Burns said about 15 percent of the crop in the area is on hilltops and does not have a good chance, even during milder winters. "You've kinda got to figure we've lost those," he said.

The hilltop wheat normally holds smaller yields, but Burns is unsure how badly frozen is the remaining 35 percent of affected acreage.

The temperature dropped about 30 degrees in a 12- to 24-hour period. This did not give enough time to the plants to "shut down" gradually.

Barley also is planted in the county, but it is a less hardy crop and if any was exposed it should be considered lost.

Burns said only about 20,000 acres are planted with winter barley in the county.

At least half of Garfield County's wheat crop was hurt, said extension agent David Bragg. It normally produces on about 150,000 acres.

"I am concerned because there was very little snow cover at the beginning of the cold," Bragg said. "I suspect there is significant damage to wheat in parts of the county."

Ben Barstow, extension agent for Idaho and Lewis counties in Idaho, said up to 40 percent of the Idaho County crop may have been damaged.

"From what I have seen, the Greencrest area was the worst. That's the heart of wheat production in Idaho County," Barstow said. Wheat planted around Cottonwood also was hit, although the effect in nearby Grangeville may have been lighter.

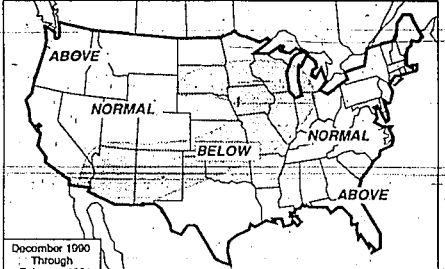

"I'd say Lewis County looks pretty good. I would guess that probably 10 to 20 percent of acreage will have some damage," he said.

Extension agents in Idaho's Nez Perce and Latah counties were not available for comment Thursday, but those large wheat-growing counties may have fared better.

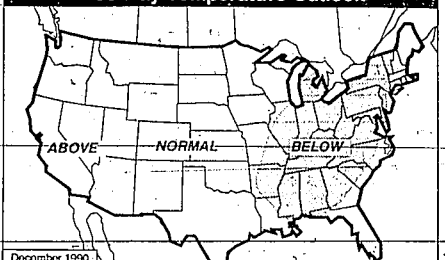

If a large amount of wheat is damaged by cold, farmers have the option of replanting in spring.

But this will give much lower yields than the winter wheat.

in domestic price supports and a phaseout of export subsidies. Many countries sided with the United States during what was supposed to be the wrap-up of talks in Brussels earlier this month.

But, the push wasn't enough to convince the European Community to compromise meaningfully on reducing farm subsidies, and the Brussels meeting collapsed. Another attempt may be made in mid-January.

Yeutter and other advocates of freer trade have painted optimistic pictures of long-range prosperity for farmers under liberalized GATT rules.

But there is a measure of ambivalence among U.S. farm organizations and individuals regarding the Uruguay Round.

A few condemn the talks outright as a sellout of longstanding protection for small farmers. Others favor parts of the package, while some go along entirely with the U.S. negotiators.

The National Family Farm Coalition, which represents about 40 farm and rural advocacy groups, joined thousands of European farmers who protested the GATT talks in Brussels on Dec. 3.

Randolph Nodland, president of the coalition, said the U.S. government "negotiated a deal behind closed doors that trades away American agriculture for what they hope will be gains in other sectors of the economy."

The European farmers objected proposals that would reduce EC subsidies and protection from imported commodities.

Harvey Joe Sanner, president of the American Agriculture Movement, a member of the coalition, said that "unleashed free market zealots" like Yeutter and Carla Hills, the U.S. trade representative, have misrepresented the needs of rural America.

Both Nodland and Sanner accused the Bush administration of trying to use the 1990 farm bill to eliminate federal farm programs.

The National Farmers Union, while not a member of the coalition, is asking the new Congress to change the 1990 farm law to prevent a decline in farm income when its provisions take effect.

"The 1990 farm bill is simply a disaster where rural America is concerned," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "We want a 1991 version of the bill that revitalizes rural America."

Yeutter said the NFU's campaign for another farm bill was "a big mistake" and that the next time around Congress might provide even less money.

The way it looks now, Yeutter will have a busy year in 1991, too.

plantings. Northwest barley prices should remain steady or increase slightly.

Beets are predicted to account for 44 percent of the sugar consumed in the United States, up from 33 percent in the 1980s.

Dry beans

For bean prices to improve, exports must accelerate and production will have to decrease.

Bean prices in the first quarter of 1991 will remain unchanged or decline slightly. U.S. production rose 33 percent in 1990.

Idaho's production increased by 3.4 percent and Washington's by 5.5 percent.

Grass seed

Due to the economic downturn, the demand for many types of turf grass seed appears likely to decline.

Meanwhile, production costs are rising and field burning may be curtailed in some parts of Idaho by the Legislature.

Bluegrass acres will probably decline, due to low open-market prices.

Sugar beets

With no changes planned in the government price support program, the Northwest sugar beet industry should remain strong.

Onions

Fewer onions will be planted because of low prices, resulting in a rebound in prices.

TELEPHONE SERVICE: The 3 percent tax on local and long-distance telephone service which had been scheduled to expire Dec. 31, was made permanent.

GAS GUZZLERS: The penalty tax on fuel-thirsty cars is doubled. Any new car bought in 1991 with an EPA rating under 22 1/2 miles per gallon is subject to a tax ranging from $1,000 (for a 21 1/2-mpg model) to $7,700 (less than 12 1/2 mpg).

TAX RATES: A quirk in the 1986 law that allowed some top-income people to pay a lower rate on part of their earnings than applied to those with slightly less income has been eliminated. This results in a new top rate of 31 percent, down from 33 percent. The majority of Americans will continue to pay a flat rate of 15 percent on their taxable income.

Because of the new law and the automatic inflation adjustments, the new rate structure looks like this:

• Single people will pay 15 percent of the first $20,350 of taxable income (after exemptions and deductions); 28 percent on the next $28,950 and 31 percent on everything over $49,300.

• Couples filing a joint return pay 15 percent of the first $34,000 of taxable income; 28 percent on the next $18,150 and 31 percent on everything over $82,150.

WASHINGTON — Here are estimates of how total federal tax liabilities are shifting among various income levels as a result of the latest deficit-reduction law.

Most of the tax changes take effect Jan. 1.

An increase in gasoline taxes went into effect Dec. 1.

The second column of figures shows the share of federal taxes paid by each income group under the old law. The third shows the share to correct a deformity arising from a birth defect, accident or disfiguring disease. Ego-boosting tummy tucks and facelifts are out; nobody can yet say for sure whether orthodontic braces will continue to be deductible.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES: The 10 million workers who earn more than $51,300 a year will pay a higher Social Security tax. The rate remains 6.2 percent but will apply to the first $53,400 earned in 1991 — up from the maximum $51,300 in 1990.

The 1.45 percent tax (generally lumped together on paycheck stubs with the Social Security tax) that finances Medicare hospital benefits will apply to the first $125,000 earned in 1991, up from $51,300 in 1990.

Workers' Social Security and Medicare taxes are matched by their employers.

CAPITAL GAINS: Although higher-income people will pay a tax rate of 31 percent on some of their income, the top rate applying to capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stock and other investments, is 28 percent.

MINIMUM TAX: This 21 percent levy aimed at ensuring that higher-income people pay some tax regardless of how many legitimate deductions they have, goes up to 24 percent.

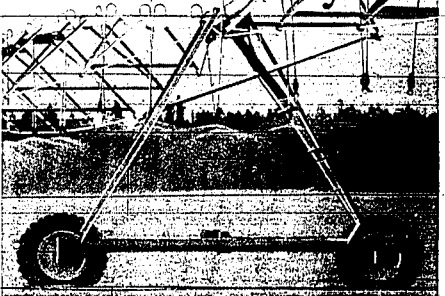

EARNED-INCOME CREDIT: The maximum credit rises to $1,192 for a one-child family and $1,235 for a family with two or more children.

There is a new supplemental credit of up to $357 if a child is under the age of 1, and another credit of up to $428 to help low-income families buy health insurance.

ENERGY: New tax incentives of about $500 million a year are designed to encourage investment in exploration and production of oil, gas and alternative fuels. These include a 15 percent tax credit for costs of expensive oil-recovery techniques and drilling when world oil prices drop.

ART CONTRIBUTIONS: For 1991 only, a high-income person who is subject to the minimum tax may donate an artwork to certain charities and deduct the full market value, rather than just the cost.
