Despite the recent wet weather this year could go down as one of the driest, but Charlie Marshall can recall worse droughts in the Magic Valley.

It's been drier in Magic Valley

By N.S. Norkentved
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Water forecasts for the coming irrigation season may be the gloomiest since 1977, but it's been worse.

Charlie J. Marshall, who will be 82 in May, bought a farm in Jerom in 1934. That year his irrigation water from the Northside Canal Co. ran out in July. Marshall was able to raise only 70 acres of potatoes on his 120-acre farm.

"We had to pick 'em by hand" because the dirt clods were so hard from lack of water, he said. Of course on those days, a guy could raise a potato crop for $30, he added.

The next year was only a little better. He was able to raise 20 acres of beans in addition to 10 acres of potatoes. But dry weather has never caused a crop failure in the Twin Falls or Northside areas, said Marshall, who was born in 1909 and raised on his parents' farm east of Twin Falls.

But rainfall in the lowlands is only part of the story. The irrigation water supply depends on how much snow falls in the mountains to melt and run into storage reservoirs, on the Snake River's natural flow from springs, on how quickly the snow melts and on how much water was left in reservoirs from the previous season.

In fact, during some of the driest years in the Magic Valley, snowmelt in the mountains melted to fill reservoirs and supply an ample flow in the river, providing adequate irrigation supplies.

According to National Weather Service, 1933 was the driest year on record in the Magic Valley with only 3.97 inches of precipitation for the year. But 1934 was a worse water year, with deliveries from the canal company somewhere around half the normal share, said company manager Ted Diehl.

Though 1933 was dry, it was not the worst water year. The lowest runoff on record came in 1977 with 2.6 million

Bush wants 'to move fast' to convert war's end into real Middle East peace

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- President Bush, trying to transform a six-week war into a permanent peace, said Friday "conditions are now better than ever" to settle deep and longstanding differences in the Middle East.

"I want to move fast," he said.

"I will work very hard for peace, just as hard as I have in the prosecution of the war," Bush said at a news conference two days after declaring a conditional cease-fire in the mostly one-sided conflict with Iraq.

Secretary of State James A. Baker will fly to the Middle East next week for talks that Bush said "will advance planning for the war's aftermath," including such issues as the fate of the Palestinians, the future of Libanon and Iraq's willingness to normalize relations with the rest of the world.

Bush will go before a joint session of Congress next Wednesday night to report on the war.

Friday, in a pointed message to Iraq's war-weary people, Bush called for the overthrow of President Saddam Hussein. "Put him aside," Bush said, and Iraq can "rejoin the Community of peace-loving nations."

Bush said Algeria had denied a report that Saddam was seeking asylum there. He refused to name Saddam as the target of an international manhunt but said, "Nobody can be absolved from the responsibilities under international law on the war crimes aspects" of Iraq's conduct.

The Pentagon said U.S. warplanes continue to fly over Iraq. American pilots would seek instructions from headquarters if they believed Saddam was trying to flee on a departing plane; said Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly.

However, he said, "We have airplanes flying over Baghdad not because of Saddam Hussein but because we want to let the people there to know we have the capability to reinstate combat should that become necessary."

Andrus vetoes indigent health care funding shift

The Associated Press

BOISE — As promised, Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has vetoed legislation shifting the responsibility for paying indigent health care costs from county property taxpayers to the state treasury.

"It costs much more than Idahoans can afford, and it provides fewer critical services for Idahoans than we should attempt and fewer than decency and compassion demand," Andrus said in his veto message on Friday. It was his first veto of the 1991 session.

The bill was returned to the Legislature, where the governor's rejection will likely be sustained in the Senate next week.

Democrats hold 21 of the 42 seats and only 15 votes are needed to defeat an override attempt.

Andrus urged lawmakers to adopt his less expensive proposal, but he immediately offered to sit down with legislative leaders to discuss a compromise. But even though the veto had been expected for more than a week, lawmakers said they wanted the weekend to assess the situation.

Truce session put off

The Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — U.S. officials said Friday the release of POWs and Kuwaiti hostages would be the top priority of truce talks with Iraq commanders.

Iraq later requested a postponement of the battlefield rendezvous.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the U.S.-led coalition, and Gen. Khalid bin Sultan, commander of Saudi and Joint Arab Forces, will lead the allied side at the meeting, to be held at a secret location near the Iraq-Kuwait border.

The encounter had been set for Saturday, but military spokesmen announced in Riyadh early Saturday that it had been delayed for at least 24 hours.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Iraq had requested a delay of "a day or two." He didn't say if the Iraqis gave an explanation for the delay, but said unspecified "technical details" of the talks had to be worked out before a specific meeting time was established.

The top priority of allied generals taking part in the meeting is to get the prisoners back, not only our prisoners of war, but the coalition prisoners of war, civilian hostages, a CBS news crew," Army Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly said at the Pentagon.

"Unless the Iraqi forces are willing to deal on that issue first we're not going to get very much further."

A U.S. military source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the allies might also demand that Baghdad turn over the officers or others responsible for atrocities against Kuwaiti citizens during Iraq's seven-month occupation.

Some allied sources predicted that Iraq would demand the immediate withdrawal of U.S. and French troops from Iraqi territory.

Iraqis' road turns into graveyard

Los Angeles Times

AL-MUTLA RIDGE, Kuwait — A bitter wind whipped the silent graveyard of the Iraqi army that occupied Kuwait city.

An occasional car-door rattle, and the engine-transmission whine of a truck. But all else was deathly still Friday on the road to escape, that became a highway to hell for the Iraqi soldiers who looted and sacked this tiny country's capital.

For almost two miles on the highway north to Iraq, and deep into the desert, hundreds of tanks, armored vehicles, rocket launchers, artillery pieces and trucks were burned, bombed out or just abandoned by troops who panicked and fled before attacking U.S. jets last Tuesday.

There were hundreds more stolen and hot-wired civilian vehicles, from a blue-and-white police car to a new Mercedes sedan with plastic on the seats. A fire truck had collided with a dump truck. A white ambulance was stuffed with wooden crates of rocket grenades, still wrapped in packing paper.

One gray-hired soldier sat slumped in a truck bed, rifle still in hand. Another corpse leaned crazily out of a truck, fists clenched. Still others rested in the cold sand, cut down from above.

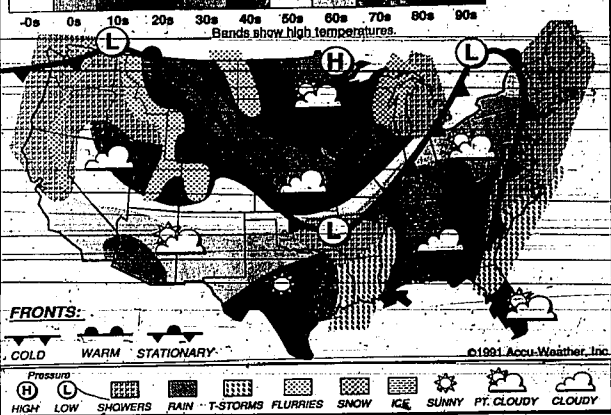

All that was recognizable of one charred body was an arm, stiff in death and raised

Algerian officials deny reports that Saddam seeking asylum

PARIS (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has sought asylum in Algeria and was told it would be granted under certain conditions, the French newspaper Le Monde reported Friday.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Algeria denied the report, saying it was "pure journalistic fiction."

An Algerian diplomat to Algiers also said the government had not received an asylum request from Saddam. But, he said, the Iraqi leader "would be welcome" like any other Arab "head of state." Both officials spoke on condition of anonymity.

Earlier Friday, President Bush said in Washington that the Algerian government had been asked by U.S. officials about the report and had denied it.

Saddam's leadership came down squarely on the side of Iraq in the conflict sparked by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait in August, and there have been widespread pro-Iraq demonstrations there.

In its front-page report, Le Monde said Saddam used unspecified channels on Wednesday to put forward the request to Algeria.

It said the Algerians agreed, providing two conditions would be met: the new Iraqi leadership must have no objection, and the coalition allied against Iraq must agree not to make Saddam accountable for war crimes or reparations.

Le Monde said Algeria received assistance from both points from the allies.

The major French daily quoted "good Algerian sources" on what had transpired. Algeria is a former colony of France.

Le Monde said the U.S.-led allies agreed to the conditions because they do not want to leave Saddam's future to the Iraqi people alone. It said they received the "active complicity" of Moscow, but did not elaborate.

Le Monde said Saddam was bitter over being "cut loose" by the Soviet Union, an apparent reference to Moscow's failure to persuade the allies to accept a peace plan that would have left Saddam in power with an unshattered military force.

In Washington, U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III said he knew nothing of the report. But, he said, "I don't think many fears would be shed if Saddam Hussein were to leave power in Iraq."

A State Department official speaking on condition of anonymity said it was unlikely the Bush administration would agree to Saddam taking safe haven in a country that demanded his immunity from prosecution for war crimes. He said, however, that Bush has not yet made a decision on the issue.

Another State Department official noted that should Saddam decide to leave Iraq, "Algeria is one of a handful of places that might be willing to take him."

Algeria is far from Israel, making it a better choice for exile than Yemen or Sudan, Le Monde noted. Iraq fired nearly 40 Scud missiles at Israel since the war broke out Jan. 17, and Israel has reportedly saved retaliation at a time and in a manner of its choosing.

CBS awaits news on crew

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News expressed hope Friday that the gulf war cease-fire and Saturday's conference of military leaders would hasten the release of its news crew, missing since Jan. 21.

"There's no new information," said CBS' Tom Goodman. "Obviously, though, we're very pleased that the release of this country's nationals have come up in a lot of discussions and the president's speech."

The "Mistfire" newsmen, believed captured by an Iraqi patrol in northern Saudi Arabia are Bob Simon, 49, the network's chief Middle East correspondent; London bureau chief Peter Bluff, 47, free-lance cameraman Roberto Alvarez, 37, and free-lance sound man Juan Calderin, 37, both of Miami.

Friday's events in the gulf

The Associated Press

Here are developments in the Persian Gulf War:

Around the gulf

British and American forces were manning checkpoints on the roads leading north from Kuwait in search of Iraqi soldiers responsible for the countless reported kidnappings, rapes, torture, and murders of Kuwaitis. The Iraqi officers in command of the reign-of-terror apparently fled Kuwait ahead of the advancing allied forces. But an American source said the Iraqis might be told at the desert meeting that they must respond up those officers and turn them over to face justice.

Friday morning, a three-person U.S. Army medical team driving a humvee vehicle inside Iraq saw some Iraqi soldiers surrendering, drove over to render assistance and hit an Iraqi land mine, the U.S. command reported. A medic doctor was killed by that blast, and a female medical specialist who got out of the vehicle, apparently to help him, was killed by a second mine explosion, the command said. The third American was unhurt.

Washington

In his news conference, President Bush said that American troops in the gulf — 537,000 strong — will begin coming home soon, but he did not say when or set a deadline to complete the withdrawal. Elsewhere, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said the pullout would begin "within the next couple of weeks."

Elsewhere

Delegates representing the five permanent members of the Security Council conferred privately Friday on a resolution to formalize the cease-fire under U.N. auspices. The document, expected to be voted on by Monday, renews calls for Iraq to accept liability for war reparations, to rescind its "annexation" of Kuwait, and to return property looted from Kuwait. It would maintain the worldwide economic embargo against Iraq, to ensure that no further arms are exported to Saddam's government.

The decisive trouncing of Iraq's military — armed and trained by the Soviets — caused some uneasiness in Moscow. Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov called for a sweeping review of Soviet air defenses in the wake of the coalition's swift victory, the state news agency Tass reported.

Iraqi command couldn't communicate with troops

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — When Iraqi troops failed to attack the exposed left flank of the U.S. 2nd Marine Division on the second day of ground combat, U.S. commanders knew the war would end quickly.

The Iraqis fell victim to a classic military problem—their battlefield communications were so devastated, by allied bombing and artillery fire that they couldn't send orders to their combat troops.

It was at that point that we recognized that he was not capable of conducting a coordinated counterattack... that we knew we had him," a senior U.S. military source said Friday.

Brig. Gen. Richard Neal, deputy chief of operations for U.S. Central Command, said there was clear evidence during the land battle that the bombing had crippled Saddam's ability to wage war and command his troops.

"One of the key aims of the six-week air war was to knock out communications centers and telephone lines that would enable Iraqi commanders to talk to their battlefield troops."

In many instances, said Neal, "the left didn't know what the right was doing or the center."

"I think that, probably more than anything, contributed to the disarray and sometimes the confusion where you had tanks coming at U.S. forces and other tanks going the wrong way," Neal said.

Col. Barry Stevens, the British military spokesman, said the Iraqis launched "few, if any, coordinated actions" against British forces who crossed the border in west-central Iraq, raced east, then north to the Basra area.

By the time commanders of two of Iraq's best-trained Republican Guard divisions recognized that the British were getting ready to turn north, the Iraqis "had Challenger tanks run over them," said the senior U.S. military source.

As a result of such difficulties, the Iraqis were never able to coordinate multiple artillery batteries to fire, their counterattack with a coordinated tank and infantry assault.

"The much vaunted and really quite feared Iraqi artillery was unable to coordinate its fire," Stevens said. "Unless it is able to coordinate its fire, it isn't a threat that it should have been with the thousands of guns that were there."

USS Nimitz, Forrestal carriers head for Middle East next week

SEATTLE (AP) — The aircraft carriers USS Nimitz and USS Forrestal are heading for the Middle East next week in support of Operation Desert Storm, officials said Friday.

The 078-foot Nimitz, based in Bremerton, and six escort warships are to set out Tuesday from Southern California, officials said.

The Forrestal and its battle group leave Thursday from the carrier's home base in Mayport, Fla.

Navy officials would not specify the carriers' mission, but indicated they likely will provide relief for the six Navy flattops off the Arabian Peninsula.

Published reports have said the ships will replace the carriers USS John F. Kennedy, based in Norfolk, Va., and the USS Saratoga, the Forrestal's sister ship, based in Mayport, Fla.

Those carriers and their battle groups have been in the Persian Gulf for more than seven months. The four other carriers in the region are the Midway, America, Roosevelt and Ranger. A return to home port would allow major maintenance and repairs.

Experts see indicator drop as hopeful sign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's forecasting "gauge" of future economic activity fell 0.4 percent in January, its sixth straight drop, but some analysts said the relatively moderate decline signalled a mild recession.

"It is telling us that the recession is going to be deep because the extent of the decline is not that great," economist Robert Brusca of Nikko Securities Co. International said of the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators. "It may be heralding a shallow recovery."

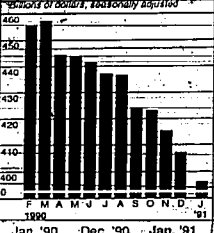

Gilbert Benz, an economist with the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York, concurred, saying that the index "does project a relatively mild recession."

Because the index is designed to forecast economic activity six to nine months in advance, however, Benz said, "we cannot expect any sustained improvement until May or perhaps June."

The Bush administration, which also projects a mild contraction, agreed. Chairman Michael Boskin of the president's Council of Economic Advisers told reporters after a congressional appearance Friday, "We expect the economy will be rebounding sometime toward the middle of the year."

The National Association of Purchasing Management said its monthly index of business activity indicated the recession was ebbing. Its index rose to 38.5 percent last month from 37.7 percent in January, but was still below the 44 percent level at which the association considers the overall economy to be in a decline.

In a second report Friday, the Commerce Department said construction spending fell 2.6 percent in January to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $396.6 billion, its lowest level in four years. It was the 10th consecutive monthly drop.

Still, Chairman L. William Seidman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and several housing industry trade groups have reported recent anecdotal evidence that the nation's real estate slump may be bottoming out.

The Commerce Department said the string of declines in the leading indicators, which included a revised 0.1 percent drop in December, matched the six consecutive drops from May through October 1984. The December index first was reported to have edged up 0.1 percent. The index has not advanced since an anemic 0.1 percent gain last June. It was unchanged in July.

Only five of the 11 forward-looking components were positive in January, including an index measuring consumer confidence. Analysts expect this index to improve even more following the outcome of the Persian Gulf war.

Nevertheless, many economists question whether improved confi-

Following decade of declines, medical applications soaring

NEW YORK (AP) — Applying for medical schools have more than doubled since 1984 — from 1,091 to 2,434.

What we see among Asian students is a great respect for medicine and the role of a physician. Plus, these are often students who have done very well in their science and related studies," said Raymond J. Brinn, assistant dean for admissions of New York University's School of Medicine.

Nationwide, the number of all applicants fell from 36,727 in 1981 to a low of 26,721 in 1988. The number increased in 1989 and 1990 — but nothing approaching the lofty gains being witnessed at many schools for next fall.

Founder of Polaroid dies at age 81

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Edwin H. Land, inventor of instant photography and founder of Polaroid Corp., died Friday after a long illness. He was 81.

Land, who founded Polaroid in 1937 and the Rowland Institute For Science Inc. in 1980, introduced the first instant camera in 1947, starting the era of 60-second photography.

In a familiar anecdote, the idea was said to have struck him on a family vacation when he took a picture of his 3-year-old daughter and she asked why she had to wait to see the picture.

During his tenure at Polaroid, the company introduced instant color photography in 1963 and made a major breakthrough in 1972 with the SX-70 system, which produced a vivid picture outside the camera. Instant X-rays, Polaroid sunglasses, and a 3D movie projector were among the more than 500 patents he collected in his lifetime.

The shy, scholarly Land broke his bonds with the company in 1982, giving up his seat on the board of directors and leaving his post as consulting director of basic research. He continued as honorary chairman.

Cocaine producers plan to cooperate

WASHINGTON — President Bush certified Friday that the three Andean countries producing most of the world's cocaine have cooperated sufficiently in anti-drug efforts to continue receiving U.S. foreign aid.

The three — Colombia, Bolivia and Peru — were certified last year. Their presidents met with Bush in Cartagena, Colombia, in February 1990 to sign an anti-drug cooperation agreement.

"The United States will continue to support efforts for increasing funds in fiscal 1992 for the Andean Initiative, which provides U.S. military and economic aid to the three countries. The aid is dependent on the recipients cooperating in drug-fighting efforts."

Regulators checking pesticide reports

WASHINGTON — Regulators and federal prosecutors are investigating allegations that a Texas company falsified data used to determine pesticide residues on food, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday.

The agency said it did not believe there was any risk to consumers or the environment.

The data were submitted to the EPA by pesticide manufacturers who had hired Craven Laboratories of Austin to determine how much pesticide remains on fruits, vegetables and grains in the marketplace.

These studies are used to help determine how much pesticide may be applied and how much may be allowed on the foods going to the consumer. They are a small part of the massive work on farmworker exposure, the toxicity of the pesticides, their persistence in the environment and other topics needed to determine pesticide safety.

Judge reduces sentence of terrorist

NEWARK, N.J. — A federal judge on Friday reluctantly knocked more than eight years off the sentence of "the professional terrorist" accused while transporting explosives on the New Jersey Turnpike.

U.S. District Judge Alfred J. Lechner said he "disagreed very, very seriously" with the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which ruled that Lechner had exceeded sentencing guidelines in 1989 when he sentenced Yu Kikumura to 30 years in prison.

Kikumura, reputedly a member of the Japanese Red Army, a radical leftist bent on fomenting world revolution, was arrested in 1988 at a turnpike rest area with three homemade bombs in his car. Officials said he was nabbed two days before he planned to blow up a Navy recruiting center in New York City to avenge the U.S. bombing of Libya. Kikumura sat slumped in a chair when Lechner handed down the maximum sentence allowed by the appeals court: 21 years and 10 months.

New York court to hear begging case

NEW YORK — Advocates for the homeless, rebuffed by federal courts in an effort last year to have begging in the city's subways legalized as protected speech, moved their battle Friday to state court.

Richard Milin, a lawyer for the Legal Action Center for the Homeless, told a Superior Court judge that begging should be regulated, not banned. Attorneys for the Metropolitan Transportation Authority and the Port Authority, which are being sued, argued that a federal appeals court ruled subway begging was illegal and often "amounts to nothing less than an assault."

The judge reserved decision on granting a preliminary injunction, that would allow begging in the subway and in Port Authority's ferry and bus terminals.

Court backs family farm preservation

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — An appeals court upheld Nebraska's ban on corporate farming, which is intended to preserve family farms.

"The people of Nebraska have made a reasonable judgment in prohibiting non-family corporate farming," the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said this week. "It is not for the courts to second-guess the wisdom of this judgment."

The decision rejected an appeal filed by MSM Farms Inc., a farm corporation formed in 1988 in Platte County, said MSM Farms lawyer John DeCamp. His stockholders, Paul Meyer and Gerald Schleich, are unrelated and that violates the family farm provisions of the law, DeCamp said.

Meyer, of West Point, and Schleich, of Lincoln, own 10 acres near Columbus. They have acknowledged the sole purpose of their action was to test the constitutionality of the ban on corporate farms known as Initiative 300.

U.S. District Judge Warren Urbom ruled in January 1990 that Initiative 300, approved by voters in 1987, did not violate the equal protection or due process clauses of the U.S. Constitution.

The 8th Circuit ruling, dated Wednesday, said: "The equal protection clause is satisfied if the law, adopted through the initiative process, is rationally related to a legitimate state interest. The district court properly applied that."

"What the court is saying is that Nebraska doesn't have to have corporate farming if they don't want it," said a proponent of the law, Mary Stranges of the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill.

"That's the third time a court has said it [the friends of corporate farming] should lay down their checkbooks and surrender," Strange said Friday.

The law earlier was upheld in state Supreme Court.

DeCamp said it's too early to say if he'll appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court. "The impact has been made in Nebraska," he said. "The real rush now will be other states attempting to duplicate it."

Andrus orders flags at half-staff for Moller

BOISE - Gov. Cecil Andrus is ordering flags at state buildings to be flown at half-staff for three days to honor Army Sgt. Andrew Moller, possibly the only Idahoan killed in the Persian Gulf War.

Moller, 23, suffered injuries in a tank battle during the ground offensive with Iraq. Andrus issued the order Friday, to last through the weekend.

"There are certain moments when war's tragic turns grip you and deeply sadden you," the governor said. "We pray for his family and for his fellow soldiers as this terrible chapter in world history closes."

House votes to change bill to ease taxes on costlier items

BOISE - The Idaho House on Friday voted to change a bill so that communities could exempt big ticket items, such as cars, from a locally imposed sales tax.

"It would allow cities to craft the ordinance to fit their needs," said Rep. Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot, who proposed the change.

The House also rejected the provision in the bill that would have allowed cities to impose a vehicle registration fee to raise revenue for road construction and maintenance.

Any local option sales tax would have to be approved by 55 percent majority vote at a May 15 voter election.

The bill, supported by Twin Falls city officials, must still be voted on by the body.

The bill now resembles the resort cities tax law, under which the city of Ketchum has a local option sales tax that exempts a tourist car dealer, Simpson said.

Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg, opposed the bill with or without amendments.

"I think the only way we can improve it is to kill it," he said.

Committee approves funds to study parts of Snake River

BOISE - The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee on Friday approved of $175,000 for two studies of air and water quality along the Snake River.

A total of $75,000 was appropriated for a water quality study to determine the source of water pollution along a 20-mile stretch of the Middle Snake River where 118 fish hatcheries, 650 dairies and 150 livestock or feed lots are located.

Committee member Sen. Lynn Tomlinaga, R-Rupert.

The study is being conducted by the University of Idaho Agriculture Research and Extension Center in Kimberly.

Another $100,000 was appropriated for an air quality study of the Snake River Plain. That study began last year with a $40,000 appropriation and is being conducted through Ag Extension by a Boise firm.

Tomlinaga had earlier tried unsuccessfully to get the funding for the studies in the Department of Health and Welfare budget.

Kimberly man treated for burns after thrown into fire

WENDELL - A 21-year-old Kimberly man will be treated for burns he received when he was thrown into a fire during a fight in Wendell last weekend.

Timothy Allen Griffith was taken to the burn unit at University Hospital in Salt Lake City on Feb. 23 for treatment for severe burns on his hands and arms, Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja said.

Griffith was released from the burn unit Wednesday, but is still being treated on an outpatient basis, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Aja has not released the name of the person who allegedly threw Griffith into the fire, but charges are expected to be filed after the sheriff's office completes its investigation, he said.

The fight took place during a party at a Wendell home where Gooding County Sheriff's Office cited several people for under-age drinking.

Program for deaf awaits funding after Senate approval

BOISE - Legislation to create a state advisory Council for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing passed the Senate on Thursday, 33-9. But the $51,000 price tag of the program has yet to be funded.

The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee passed over the request in the Department of Health and Welfare budget.

The bill's co-sponsor, Republican Rep. Ron Black of Twin Falls, said he will still try to get the money, possibly by amending the bill and attaching the price tag when it comes to the House.

The gubernatorially appointed council would consist of nine people, mostly the hearing-impaired or their relatives.

Veterinarian to be tried in Twin Falls

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - When veterinarian David J. Stafford stands trial on a grand theft-by-deception charge stemming from a surgery he allegedly did not perform on a local dog, the court proceedings will remain right here in Twin Falls - at least for now.

"In denying a request by Stafford's attorneys to move the trial out of the Magic

Stafford

Valley, 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt left open the option of moving the trial if it becomes apparent that Stafford cannot get a fair trial in Twin Falls County.

"While it is the court's duty to take measures to ensure the defendant a fair trial, such measures at this time are prima-ture," Hurlbutt said in his written decision released Friday.

Stafford is accused of accepting payment for repairing a broken leg suffered by Twin Falls resident Gary Thietten's dog, Whitney. Prosecutors say the surgery never took place.

In oral arguments before Hurlbutt on Jan. 7, defense attorney Tim Williams argued that several newspaper articles regarding this and other cases in which Stafford has been involved will make it unlikely that Stafford can receive a fair trial locally.

The articles themselves are largely factual in nature and direct no prejudicial information against Stafford, Hurlbutt wrote.

"If it becomes apparent at the time of jury selection that an impartial jury cannot be found in Twin Falls County, the court will again consider moving the trial or selecting a jury from somewhere else, the judge said.

Buhl man convicted, could be deported

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Police had to clear the Twin Falls County Judicial Building late Friday night after a jury found Antonio Avelar of Buhl guilty of delivering cocaine.

A courtroom full of family members and neighbors supporting Avelar erupted in crying and screaming shortly after the verdict was read at 10:30 p.m., said Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter, standing to hear the verdict in place of deputy prosecutor Frank J. Nichols, who tried the case.

Avelar, 36, was taken into custody by U.S. Border Patrol agent Ted Bader, who said he will be deported to his native Portugal.

Avelar has a work permit which has allowed him to work at the family dairy near Buhl for the past 10 years.

Bader said Avelar cried as he was taken out of the courtroom to the Twin Falls County Jail but did not resist.

Avelar's wife and three children are in the United States legally and are free to stay in the country if they wish, Bader said.

The jury took seven hours to reach a verdict in the case, which began Tuesday but stemmed from a drug sale that took place nearly a year and a half ago.

On Sept. 26, 1989, Avelar was videotaped by state drug agents as he delivered a package to David Homolka of Kimberly.

That package turned out to be 3 ounces of cocaine, which Homolka informed later in the day.

Drug agents and police officers had been watching Homolka's house for several weeks after receiving a tip from a neighbor that Homolka might be selling drugs.

Police had installed a "pen register" on Homolka's telephone line, which revealed a deal struck between him and Avelar. Many of those calls preceded drug deals Homolka made to an undercover informant, Nichols told the jury Friday, as he summarized earlier testimony made by state narcotics agents.

"Many in the courtroom thought the state's case was in doubt after Nichols called Homolka to the witness stand Friday morning.

When asked if the package delivered by Avelar was the cocaine that he later tried to sell to a man working undercover for the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics, Homolka replied: "As far as I know."

"Could it have been any other cocaine?" Nichols asked.

"I can't honestly answer that 'cause I don't know," Homolka said.

Defense attorney Harry DeHaan focused on Homolka's indication.

"Did you know if it was powdered sugar or cocaine?" DeHaan asked.

"No, I don't," he never opened the packages," said Homolka, who is currently on probation after serving four months in prison for charges relating to the case.

Under DeHaan's cross-examination, Homolka said that after leaving his house with a package of what he thought to be cocaine, he left the package at a friend's house for a while.

He later retrieved the package and was arrested after trying to sell the cocaine to undercover agents.

After Homolka's testimony, DeHaan asked 5th District Judge Daniel Moch to dismiss the case.

"Obviously, the prosecution's witness dumped all over 'em," DeHaan said.

But Nichols certainly wasn't ready to throw in the towel.

"During his closing remarks to the jury, he said the prosecution is required to prove Avelar's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

"That's just what we did," Nichols said. He summarized the early phases of the trial, in which a series of narcotics agents described their investigation into Homolka's drug dealings.

Plenty of openings left in For Kids

By Deborah Shimkus
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE - There are still openings in the non-profit after-school program for Wood River Valley children in kindergarten through third grade.

After the telephone registration day, the newly formed "For Kids-Inc" reported that only nine children were signed up for the program's fullest day.

The group of residents that formed the For Kids Task Force was not discouraged, however. Noting that the successful after-school program at Hemingway school in Ketchum started out with just seven children five years ago.

The For Kids program is starting in the middle of the school semester, said For Kids Task Force member, Cindy Carrington.

"Most responsible parents have already found something for their children for this year," she said.

The after-school program will begin March 11 at Bellevue elementary school. Care will be provided from the time school lets out until 6 p.m.

The cost is $4 per day or $20 per week. Parents are encouraged to enroll their children on a part-time basis if daily care is not needed, said Carrington.

Scholarships are still available.

Carrington noted that the families who are probably most in need of the program are the ones that program coordinators will have seek out. Information regarding the program will be distributed through the Department of Health and Welfare and the school system, she said.

Thought coordinators hope more children will enroll in the program, they have a good group already set, according to Carrington.

The boys and girls are of varied incomes and backgrounds and it's enough kids to do some really good activities, she said.

A parent orientation and second registration will be held at 6 p.m. Thursday at Bellevue elementary school. All parents interested in the program should attend, or contact Deb Eisinger 788-3442.

Filer school grapples with voc-ed funding

By Bertina L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

FILER - The School Board gave its consent on two issues affecting funding at a special meeting Thursday afternoon.

The district will submit a letter of intent to participate in a federal funding program for vocational education under the Carl Perkins Vocational and Applied Technology Education Act.

The board also gave school officials permission to join with other districts in a consortium, if it will help obtain further funding.

The Filer School District barely meets requirements to obtain funding now.

Two or more districts can make up a consortium.

And one option being considered is called a "tech-prep" consortium. The state is broken into six regions, with the College of Southern Idaho being the focus of this region. In this consortium a four-year program could be developed, with two years involving CSI. Ten percent of the funding would go to the college.

Superintendent James Fisher said employers want a student with more experience than a two-year vocational college program. With a tech-prep consortium, CSI would be a continuation of the program already started at the high school level. A student in this program going to CSI would enter with a "freshman plus" status.

The Carl Perkins Act has undergone major changes that aren't even available in written form yet. Superintendent Fisher attended a meeting earlier this week that addressed this subject and others.

Fisher is also expecting these changes to decrease the amount of funds the school will receive.

The letter of intent to participate must be submitted by Friday. The district must decide if it will enter into a consortium by March 25.

Forms explaining changes made to the Carl Perkins Act will be sent out to all districts on March 15. The district then has until April 30 to complete a three-year plan and will be notified by July 1 if it will be granted funds.

Senate committee throws out public access bill

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

BOISE - After state and local government officials said it would be too cumbersome, the Senate State Affairs Committee on Friday rejected a bill designed to allow the public greater access to government.

Instead, the committee told the Idaho Press Club to come back with a different open meetings bill that would beef up enforcement without asking governments to increase notification of meeting times and agendas.

Despite rejection of the bill, Craig Lincoln, press club president said Times-News business reporter was enthusiastic. "I'm excited," he said. "This is a big step forward. It's the biggest step forward we've had in 10 years."

Though most government bodies comply with the existing open meetings law, which simply requires their meetings be open to the public, enforcement is the greatest problem, Lincoln said.

The Press Club's bill called for notice of meeting times and agendas and would have limited executive sessions that involved consideration of litigation.

Informal phone conversations of discussion between officials driving to a meeting would not be considered meetings unless their intent was to circumvent the law, Lincoln said.

Sara Baker, Boise City Council president pro-tem, said the legislation would actually curtail public access.

The Boise City Council currently allows the public to address members at meetings. The legislation would require they be put on the agenda, she said.

"If it ain't broke, don't fix it. And in my opinion, it ain't broke," Baker said.

"It is broke. There are some problems and we're trying to address them," countered Jerry Brady, publisher of the Idaho Falls Post Register.

He cited cases of his City Council deciding in executive session to change the way they're elected and the Bonimville County Commission deciding to move the site of a proposed landfill without public notification or comment.

Religious restrictions ease in Saudi Arabia

AN AIR BASE IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) — Restrictions on the practice of non-Muslim religions apparently are being eased in Saudi Arabia.

A U.S. Army chaplain helped dedicate a new dining hall built by Saudi Arabia on a huge air base that's home to American, Saudi, Kuwaiti and British forces. But the Rev. Vincent Inghiltera of Paterson, N.J., was careful to make his blessing ecumenical in nature.

"Oh, God... Allah... the Roman Catholic priest began the prayer, then quickly switched into Arabic to conclude it by saying "May the God of all of us bless us all."

Alexander Inghiltera was asked if he felt uncomfortable as a priest in this Muslim country.

"He said he and the other 109 priests in Saudi Arabia had grown more accustomed to being in Saudi Arabia after several months. "I don't find it uncomfortable at all now," he said. "Some of my Saudi friends were surprised to learn that Americans pray. They thought we were a godless people, but now they know better."

He said he and the other chaplains were observing the customs and culture of Saudi Arabia. "We do respect the religious tradition of this country," he said.

There is a law against proselytizing in this country, so we don't proselytize. This is no way compromises our faith," he said. He celebrates Mass with the troops and gives Communion and other sacraments.

Organist ready

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dr. Richard L. Elliott III has been appointed as an organist for the Mormon Church's Tabernacle on Temple Square.

Elliott, whose appointment is effective April 15, joins three other full-time Tabernacle organists — Robert Cundick, John Longhurst and Clay Christensen.

Elliott, 34, is an assistant professor at the University of Brigham Young University in Provo.

The organists' responsibilities include daily recitals in the Tabernacle on Temple Square, solo performances and accompanying the Tabernacle Choir on weekly radio and television broadcasts of "Music and the Spoken Word" and performances with the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus.

Presbyterian committee favors ordination of gays

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharply divided special committee of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has recommended that homosexuals be admitted to the ordained ministry, it was learned Wednesday.

A report of the committee, released at denominational headquarters in Louisville, Ky., also does not specifically forbid sex relations outside marriage. The findings seemed bound to stir an uproar in the 3-million-member denomination.

"A lot of people were up in arms even before the results were out," said Marj Carpenter, the church's communications chief.

The report says there should be no automatic condemnation of "any sexual relations in which there is genuine equality and mutual respect," and advocates a church policy providing:

- That "gays and lesbians be received and accepted as full participating members in the life of the church."
- That "ordination to church office be open to all members... regardless of their sexual orientation and that celibacy not be a requirement for ordination."

The denomination's standing policy, similar to most major Protestant, Orthodox and Roman Catholic bodies, forbids ordination of known or self-avowed active homosexuals and limits gay or lesbian ministers.

However, several Presbytery denominations are grappling with the issue. Conclusions of the Presbyterian panel came after four years of work, including hearings and testimony by a wide range of experts.

"It is incumbent upon us to acknowledge how significant a gap now exists between official church teachings and the sexual practices of most people, including many church members," the 197-page report says.

The committee, headed by the Rev. John Carey of Atlanta, recommended that the church's governing assembly in Baltimore in June approve the proposal for a two-year churchwide study, with potential adoption two years hence. Church officers said the 17-member committee approved the report, six disapproved and one was absent.

Other denominations engaged in sexual-orientation studies include the Episcopal Church, the Evangelical Lutheran Church and United Methodist Church. One major Protestant body, the United Church of Christ, allows ordination of active homosexuals at the option of local church units. Reform Judaism approved ordination of active homosexuals as rabbis.

What's what?

Socks, no shoes, yes
"You don't have to wear socks with shoes," Albert Einstein said. Students of Deep believe he meant you don't have to do things the way they've always been done. I think he just meant you don't have to wear socks with shoes. He didn't, anyhow.

Insecticides get stronger as they age.
"Among Asians, that high regard for education goes way back. They have an ancient proverb: "Give a man a fish, and he'll eat for a day. Teach a man how to fish, and he'll eat for a lifetime."

Latah County not certain about center

MOSCOW — Latah County commissioners liken the push for a regional juvenile justice center to a runaway train and suspect they will try to use the state to slow it down.
Plans to build the detention facility in Nez Perce County in Lewiston are drawn up, land has been purchased and bids are being sought. But Latah County is the sole member in the area with cold feet.
A Friday meeting with state Youth Services officials did not help matters.

INEL union members in picket line

IDAHO FALLS — Ten Idaho National Engineering Laboratory union members are picketing in Idaho Falls, claiming contractor EG&G Idaho is bargaining unfairly with mechanics at the federal lab.
EG&G's big shop mechanics — who maintain buses, government vehicles and heavy equipment at the INEL — voted a year ago to join the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union.
Since then, OCAW says it has met more than 30 times with EG&G to hammer out a contract for these 31 mechanics, "but with minimal progress."

County suspends solid-waste director

COEUR D'ALENE — Kootenai County commissioners have suspended solid-waste director Kim Yerra for 10 days without pay and asked other county officials to investigate his spending and hiring practices.
Yerra on Wednesday met behind closed doors with the commissioners and county deputy prosecutors Lansing Haynes and Ted Rupp. After his departure, commission Chairman Kent Helmer made the motion to suspend Yerra and launch an investigation.
A Spokane newspaper reported Yerra routinely used county vehicles and equipment as though they were his own, hired friends and relatives for landfill jobs, and provided employees with expensive work clothing and other perks.

Legal opinion eases concern about raise

BOISE (AP) — House Speaker Tom Boyd says a private legal opinion he sought about how lawmakers breathe a little easier about the 82-percent pay raise they got at the recommendation of a citizens' commission last year.

The opinion concludes that even though three of the four commission members who voted for the pay raise were compensated public officials who should not have been serving, their decision is "valid and enforceable."
"My concern all along has been that if it was ever litigated, it's a substantial increase ... and some people might have some trouble paying it back," Boyd said Friday.
Hearing from attorneys that a lawsuit probably would not be successful in forcing lawmakers to return the raises, the speaker said, "relieves a great amount of pressure off our caucus."
The issue was raised by a published report a month ago that Donna Shepard, Howard Van Tassel, Jim Kerns and Timothy Hopkins all were ineligible to serve on the commission in March 1990 when it voted to increase legislative pay from about $6,600 to $12,000 per year.

Mrs. Shepard was working for the Idaho Centennial Commission, Van Tassel is on the Lewiston City Council, Kerns is on the Department of Employment Advisory Council and other state panels, and Hopkins is president of the Idaho State Bar.

All except Hopkins receive some form of state compensation, according to the 23-page opinion from Boise attorneys M. Allyn Dingel Jr. and Bobbi Dominick.

Idaho House grants approval to tuition savings account

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho House has approved a plan giving parents an incentive to save for their children's college expense, although opponents claimed it was unconstitutional and unnecessary.
The vote was 53-24 after nearly 90 minutes of debate Friday afternoon for legislation setting up the Advance-Fee Payment Account.

The legislation extends an exemption from state taxes for up to $1,000 per year deposited in the fund.
Co-sponsor Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise, said that could cost about $40,000 per year in lost tax revenue.

It would allow parents to sign a contract with a state university or college for future tuition charges for their children. The cost would depend on the age of the children, but the contract would guarantee against increases in tuition.

"It is designed for a person of modest means," Rep. Hod Pomeroy, R-Boise, said. He said a parent could put in as little as $25 or $50 per month.
This exemption of money deposited in the fund would not be available for students attending college in other states.

Notorious Nazi will stand trial

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Alleged Nazi war criminal Josef Schwammberger, who hid in Argentina for 40 years, has been charged in connection with the deaths of more than 3,400 Jews, a state prosecutor's office said Friday.

The trial of Schwammberger, 79, could be the last major Nazi war crimes hearing of its type, prosecutors said.

Nazi tried in recent years, Schwammberger is in frail health and has complained of heart problems.

The Baden-Wuerttemberg state prosecutor's office in Stuttgart issued a statement saying charges against Schwammberger had been filed.

Stuttgart's high-security prison, Stammheim, where the trial is also expected to take place.

During World War II, Schwammberger was a Nazi SS lieutenant who commanded forced labor camps in Poland, including concentration camps at Przemysl and Mielec where thousands of inmates, mostly Jews, were interned and died.

The prosecutor's statement said Schwammberger is suspected of personally killing at least 50 Jewish inmates, and assisting in the murders of at least 3,377 others from

Miners to sound off

MOSCOW (AP) — Hours after staging its first nationwide work stoppage, a new independent miners' union won agreement from the government Friday to discuss pay hikes and political changes.

It was the first time in seven decades of Communist rule that the government agreed to hold formal talks with a freely organized labor union.

It also indicated high-level fear that a miners' strike in eastern Soviet Union could spread and devastate the already rocky economy.

However, there was little sign that officials intended to meet the miners' radical demands that included a 100 percent pay hike and resignation of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. And there were reports many miners had refused to join the nationwide strike.

Gorbachev ordered his vice president, Gennady I. Yavluyev, to meet leaders of the 6-month-old Independent Union of Miners, said Sergei Grigoriev, deputy presidential spokesman.

The meeting will take place at a later date.

Croatian president boycotts discussions.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Leaders of Yugoslavia's seceding states met Friday in their sixth attempt to resolve deepening schisms in their federation, but the president of secessionist Croatia boycotted the talks.

Franjo Tudjman, president of the country's second-largest republic, said he could not attend because of "pressures" he's received for making an appeal to President Bush for support against Communist "murders."

Croatian and independence-seeking Slovenia are battling politically with Communist Serbia and Montenegro over the future of the nation.

Cardinals' left-hander will miss entire season to elbow injury

The Associated Press

The bad news for the St. Louis Cardinals didn't wait until opening day. Left-hander Joe Magrane found out Friday that he needs elbow surgery and will miss the entire season.

"His elbow got stuck," Cardinals physician Dr. Stan London said. "We ran through the examination and found pieces. On further examination, we found looseness. Just to have the chips removed wouldn't do it. He has to have the ligaments repaired."

Magrane, a 26-year-old left-hander who will make $1,025,000 this season, will be operated on by Dr. Stan Jobe, who also works with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Ken Dayley, John Tudor, Danny Cox, Greg Matthews and Todd Worrell all went through similar operations in recent years. Worrell is the only one still with the Cardinals.

"It's not good news, either from the personal standpoint of Joe Magrane or the ball club," Cardinals general manager Dal Maxvill said. "I guess when we started doing tests, it planted a little bug in my head. We'll just have to live with it."

While Magrane's injury dominated on-the-field news, boardroom battles continued at Wynn-AT&T. The Chicago Cubs made what they described as their "final" offer on a contract extension for Ryne Sandberg, but the second baseman's agent rejected it.

Sandberg, who had set a Friday deadline, wants a five-year deal worth $24 million. The team is offering at least $6 million less, coach Ned Yost said.

Esasky, who missed most of last season because of vertigo, swung at 38 pitches, hit several line drives, fouled off only three pitches and didn't miss any.

Griffey Sr. is a Cub. Team president Don Greenko said. "It doesn't matter what they've requested, so I guess they're not pleased with it."

Back on the field, Atlanta first baseman Nick Esasky took batting practice against coach Ned Yost.

Pirates' outfielder has message for whiners

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—Andy Van Slyke thinks Ricky Henderson, Ryne Sandberg and any other player who wants to renegotiate his contract should read the Bible.

Specifically, Matthew 20:1-15.

"It's an awesome passage, and it's about stuff like this," Van Slyke said.

Henderson is unhappy with the four-year, $12 million contract he signed with Oakland after the 1989 season. Sandberg, who makes about $2 million a year, wants the Chicago Cubs to upgrade his contract so he can "break into the $3 million club."

Van Slyke feels Henderson and Sandberg are much like the vineyard workers in Matthew.

In that Biblical parable, a vineyard owner makes some fruit in early morning. After a silver coin each to work for his each day. He hires others workers at intervals later in the day.

At the end of the day, he tells his foreman to pay all the workers a silver coin each. "This doesn't seem fair," whine the workers hired first, who rail against the owner.

"The owner reminds them they agreed to work for a certain wage, and tells them he may pay his other workers as he sees fit."

"It's perfect," Van Slyke said.

Nicklaus storms to round of 63 at Doral Open

MIAMI (AP)—With Paul Azinger out of the way on the strength of a day-late disqualification, Jack Nicklaus shouldered his way into contention Friday in the Doral Open.

"The best round of golf I've had in a long, long time," Nicklaus said after a bogey-free, 9-under par 63 put him a stroke off Kenny Peppy's 36-hole lead at 134.

Azinger, winner of the Pebble Beach National Pro-Am, appeared to have the same total but was disqualified for the momentary infraction of a rule in Thursday's opening round.

As his name came off the leaderboards scattered around the course, Nicklaus began to make his run at Peppy.

And he did it with the power and precision that reminded his playing partners of a Nicklaus from decades back. It was, he said, probably his lowest competitive round since a 63 in the 1980 U.S. Open.

"He was putting in a bucket today, and he was filling it up," Buddy Garret said.

"That was the best round of golf I've ever seen him play, and I've seen him play a lot of golf," Andy Bean said.

"I told him he's like my father. He's mellowed."

Missing a birdie putt on the 9th green was only the start of Paul Azinger's problems as the Pebble Beach Pro-Am champion was later disqualified from the Doral Open.

"I think he missed only one shot all day," Bean said. "I don't think he even knew what the speed of the greens were outside of 15 feet."

Nicklaus' heroics on a breezy day overshadowed the career-best 64 that lifted Peppy into a one-stroke lead at 133.

With Azinger out, Russ Cochran, Mark O'Meara, Rocco Mediate and Ben Sneed took place at 136. The lefty Cochran moved up with a 67, Ben shot 68, O'Meara 69 and Mediate 70.

Azinger, who blew a chance to win this tournament a year ago when he bogeyed the 72nd hole, shot a 65 that put him in a television viewers' raised-a-question about his actions on the 18th hole Thursday, when he played a second shot out of the edge of a lake.

A review of the film showed Azinger, in taking his stance, twice made a pawing motion with his left foot, moving rocks or coral.

It is in violation of rule 13-4, moving a loose impediment in a hazard, and calls for a 2-stroke penalty.

Azinger, unaware of the infraction, did not assess himself the penalty and signed for a par-4 on that hole.

He was disqualified for signing an incorrect scorecard.

"It was not a bad decision. It was the correct decision. It's just hard to swallow," he said.

"I just feel terrible," said Mike Shea, the PGA Tour official who made the ruling and agreed that Azinger's action was inadvertent.

"Unfortunately, the rules of golf can be quite harsh at times," he said.

Reds owner worries for small-city teams

MIAMI (AP)—Cincinnati Reds majority partner Marge Schott is less worried about the impact of baseball's spending binge on other world champions' chances to repeat than on the long-term future of small-city baseball.

"The one thing we have to protect here in America is baseball. It's very frightening," she said at a breakfast speech hosted by Miami-Dade Community College.

"We will not have baseball in small towns like Cincinnati," Schott said.

Coming off the World Series sweep of Oakland, the Reds' salaries have jumped from an annual team total of $15 million to $28 million, she said. Yet the Reds lost starting pitcher Danny Jackson to Chicago and watched their chief West Division challenger, Los Angeles' and San Francisco, make a series of signings, topped by the Dodgers' $4 million-a-year acquisition of Darryl Strawberry.

"That's what's scary," Schott said. "Baseball was born in Cincinnati, but we can't compete with what New York gets from cable TV or the Dodgers, who own the stadium and the parking lot. It's going to be that baseball's only going to be in the big cities."

She told her audience of 300 businesspeople and students she hopes Miami gets an expansion franchise. But Schott said National League president Bill White told her because of increasing salaries, some prospective expansion owners may be having second thoughts.

"What can be done? Schott said she didn't know, adding she doesn't blame the players. But she called baseball's collusion settlement "nuts," saying there was no collusion to restrict free agents, only owners trying to keep salaries from getting out of hand.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - When Tyrrell Biggs steps into the ring today, he will look toward the opposite corner and see... Tyrrell Biggs. He will see himself, circa 1987, in the person of a 21-year-old man...

Biggs, the top contender for a brief period four years ago, fought for the world title in only his 15th pro fight - a heady moment for a fighter who had idolized Muhammad Ali.

The Olympic gold medalist, now a fighter, fought magnificently for one round, but he could not sustain the magic, going down in seven rounds to Mike Tyson, then the heavyweight champion.

Biggs went on to lose two more fights, both by technical knockout, before starting his current four-fight winning streak. "I wouldn't say the above fight is my highest since Tyson," Biggs said. "I'm at a stage where they're all Biggs. Bowe could come back from a loss and take the title away from me, and I've got to keep winning."

Bowe, who won a silver medal in the 1988 Olympics, keeps his mouth as busy outside the ring as he does inside, and he told Biggs all those other guys he's been fighting, because I know what it's like. I know what he's experiencing."
