School compromise ends session

The Associated Press

BOISE — The House compromised on the public school budget Friday afternoon, 43-40, removing the last major obstacle to adjournment of the 1991 legislative session. Schools will receive $3 million more than called for in the original budget, after a House vote that was so close that legislative leaders couldn't predict beforehand what would happen.

The action cleared the way for final adjournment, which came shortly after 9 p.m. in both houses. The vote means the state appropriation for public schools for next year will be $487.5 million, $3.2 million more than Gov. Cecil Andrus recommended. That's $2 million less than the version approved by the Senate Wednesday, but it was the amount recommended after a conference committee negotiated for nearly four years Thursday afternoon. Overall, it represents an 8.3 percent increase in the school budget.

"The hour of compromise is here," Rep. Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise, said. "We have labored long and hard over this for many weeks now."

The Senate's presiding officer, Republican Lt. Gov. Butch Otter, took an active role in hammering out the agreement on school funding, working to convince House members to accept it.

All 28 House Democrats voted for the funding bill, joined by 15 of the 55 House Republicans who voted. Rep. Don Loveland, R-Boise, was absent.

"I thought this was an auction," Newcomb said in debating the bill. "We had a bid of $5 million. I think we ought to stand by our original bid."

Implored the House to reject the bill because of uncertain economic times ahead and the specter of raising taxes to fund the appropriation, Newcomb said. "Let's not

Disinclination to the divine

Although most people don't require nearly as much prodding to go to church, Ronald Reagan gives his handlers a rough time Thursday night at First Church of the Nazarene in Twin Falls. The donkey is being used in the Easter production 'Breakfast in Galilee' at the church. Owner Joel Brady, left, and John Conrad work with the animal. The show began Friday and will be presented at 7 p.m. today and Easter morning at 9 and 11 a.m.

For 2nd straight Friday, Twin Falls bank becomes target for a robber

Investigators begin their work Friday following a bank robbery at the Magic Valley Mall.

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Police began investigating their second bank robbery in as many weeks Friday, after a man made off with an undisclosed amount of cash from the First Security Bank office at the Magic Valley Mall.

A man walked into the bank at about 11:20 a.m., handed the teller a note and told her he was robbing the bank, said Capt. Gary Corder, Twin Falls police detective. About five bank employees and three customers were in the bank during the holdup, but the customers likely weren't aware of the crime until the man walked out, Corder said.

The man never displayed a weapon. Police would not say how much money was taken. Security cameras recorded the theft, but police were unable to produce a still photograph of the robber Friday.

The robbery marked the second consecutive Friday on which a Twin Falls bank was robbed and was at least the fifth Idaho bank robbery in the past several days.

Key Bank on the corner of Main Avenue and Shoshone Street was robbed in similar fashion March 22. Although he would not rule out a connection between the two robberies, FBI Agent Jim Hilverda said that, based on eyewitness descriptions, Friday's robber is not the same man who robbed Key Bank a week ago.

The First Security Bank holdup was carried out by a white male in his twenties, 5 feet, 6 inches tall, 140-145 pounds with a four-day growth of beard. Police described him as "rough looking" and wore a blue sock hat, jeans, a white shirt and a turquoise jacket.

White House balks at assisting rebels in Iraq

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration refused on Friday to intervene to help Iraqi rebels fighting Saddam Hussein, even to the extent of trying to limit civilian bloodshed.

The U.S. decision to stand by is drawing increasing criticism, but administration officials said intervening could have the unwanted effect of leading to a protracted American occupation.

The United States has little to gain by siding either Kurdish rebels in the north or pro-Iran Shi'ite rebels in the South, despite President Bush's call for Iraqis to overthrow Saddam, said officials who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

U.S. analysts have concluded that a victory by either group would lead to an unstable, divided government in Baghdad and make it more likely substantial numbers of American troops would have to stay for a prolonged period, the officials said.

White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said Bush regrets the suffering from Saddam's violent efforts to put down the insurrections. However, he said, "the issue of internal unrest in Iraq is an issue that has to be settled between the government and the people of Iraq."

"We are operating in Iraq on the basis of the U.N. mandate," Popadiuk said. "Once that mandate is totally fulfilled, U.N. troops will be coming out. We have no plans for keeping our troops in Iraq or in the gulf region one day longer than necessary."

The U.S. decision merely to watch the carnage from the sidelines is being attacked by human-rights organizations.

Andrew Whitley, of Middle East Watch, said: "As the occupation of Iraq was an action authorized by the U.N.

Security Council, it is inappropriate for the United States to stand back on a temporary cease-fire line and to allow abuses on a widespread scale to take place a short distance away from them without intervening."

Whitley said the United States should do more to provide humanitarian aid to civilians and to protect them from abuse, both in Iraq and in Kuwait.

However, the administration on Friday made it clear it had no intention to provide assistance to rebels fighting Saddam, despite a direct appeal for help from the Kurdistan Front.

Tax truth bill may be issue in '92

The Associated Press

BOISE — Legislation, repealing the last vestige of the 1978 property tax revolt and replacing it with a so-called "Truth in Taxation" procedure won final legislative approval Friday, setting the stage for what could become the top issue of the 1992 political campaign.

The House, with little discussion, voted two-to-one for the measure repealing the 5 percent limit on annual property tax increases. The bill cleared the Senate only hours earlier by just two votes.

"The bill that one lawmaker said could be the most significant thing to happen in this decade" now goes to Gov. Cecil Andrus for his signature.

"This is legislation for local responsibility and local accountability," Sen. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, said.

But just the prospect of the legislation passing has prompted organizers of the original 1978 anti-property tax campaign to launch a new initiative to limit property taxes. Critics contend that without the cap, property taxation will skyrocket.

"It wasn't the intention of this bill to create another tax revolt," Sen. Jerry Thome, R-Nampa, said. "It's the first step in tax reform. Let's give it a chance to work."

The bill replaces the 12-year-old cap on annual property tax increases with a requirement that any time a local taxing district wants to change property tax rates, it must take at least a quarter-page, bold-type advertisement in the newspaper that circulates to the largest number of the property owners to be affected.

Suit charges Simplot with wage bias

The Associated Press

BOISE — In what is thought to be the first case of its kind in Idaho, eight women have sued R. Simplot, claiming hundreds of female employees have been paid millions less than their male counterparts.

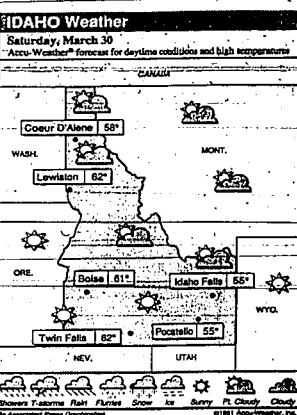

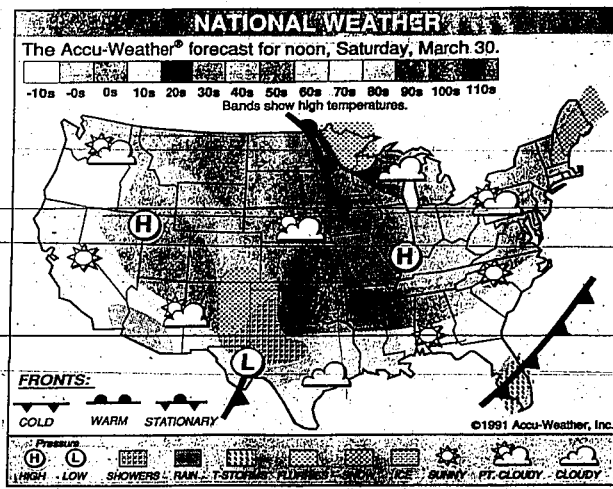

The class action lawsuit, filed Thursday in 4th district Court on behalf of more than 600 women employees of the Boise-based agricultural and chemical company, alleges female workers were routinely paid less salaries, bonuses and benefits than men doing the same or similar work.

The lawsuit also charges that the company regularly denied promotions and pay raises to female employees.

The complaint claims men in some jobs

Tornadoes, rain, hail hammer wide areas across South

The Associated Press
Thunderstorms spun off tornadoes, hail and torrential rain across the South Friday, causing widespread flooding and killing at least 14 people.
The storms pounded parts of Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas. Rain stretched from southern New Jersey across eastern Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and into parts of Kentucky.
Rain mixed with snow extended over western Kentucky, western Tennessee and southeast Missouri. Snow fell in north-central Arkansas, western New York state, parts of Michigan, Nebraska, Wyoming and the mountains of Colorado and southern Utah.
Three deaths were blamed on high wind in Alabama. In Arkansas, seven children and a driver died when a vehicle skidded off a rain-slicked dirt road. In Mississippi, one person was killed on a highway in blinding rain and two crewmen died when a tugboat capsized in high wind in the Biloxi ship channel.
Hail measuring up to one inch thick fell at Temple, Ga. and South Mills, N.C.
Rainfall of 2 to 5 inches since Thursday night caused widespread flooding in parts of North Carolina. There also was flooding at Columbia, S.C.
Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included more than 3 1/2 inches at Montgomery, Ala., and at least 2 1/2 inches at Erie, Rock, Ark., and Asheville, N.C. More than 1 inch fell during the same period in other portions of the Carolinas, Alabama, Georgia, and Virginia.
The morning low for the Lower 48 states Friday was 1 degree above zero at Warrod, Minn.
Temperatures across the nation at 3 p.m. ranged from 2 degrees at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., to 89 degrees at Orlando, Fla.

SEARCY, Ark. (AP) — A four-wheel-drive vehicle packed with young people turned over in a rain-swollen ditch, killing the adult driver and seven passengers ranging in age from 11 to 15 years, authorities said.
Two teenagers and a 6-year-old boy survived Thursday night's accident by crawling through a window, a relative said.

Commander agrees with policy

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said Friday that contrary to his comments in TV interviews, he agreed "100 percent" with President Bush's decision to halt the Gulf War.
The four-star commander apologized for his "poor choice of words" in questioning the president's judgment about calling a cease-fire.
Bush told reporters there was "no need for any apology" as he left the White House for the weekend.
"I got my full support," Bush said before boarding a helicopter for Camp David, Md.
Schwarzkopf told David Frost in a television interview broadcast Wednesday night that history would second-guess Bush's decision to call a cease-fire Feb. 27. He said the truce, which took effect the next day, had opened an escape route for retreating Iraqi forces.
"Why did we stop when we did, when we had them completely outed," he said in the interview. "Frankly, my recommendation had been to continue the fight to 'keep great destruction' on Iraq's army," he told Frost. But he added that Bush's decision to end the war was "very humane" and "courageous."

Schwarzkopf also blamed media "muddling" for trying to create a controversy over his figure while the national standing soared with the success of Operation Desert Storm, he moved quickly to make amends and held any political wounds.
The commander of allied forces in the gulf has been reported in line for a fifth star or the job of Army chief of staff. He has also been mentioned as a potential political candidate.
Schwarzkopf told reporters in a brief meeting arranged by his public affairs officers that, "I agreed 100 percent with the decision. I thought it was a correct decision then and I think it's a correct decision now."
He said the president telephoned him Thursday when he found out that "I felt very bad about it. As far as I was concerned, he knew exactly how the decisions were made. He had great confidence in me and he knew that I in no way intended to cast any aspersions or to even criticize him in any way and that made me feel great."

He said he apologized to Bush. "I said, 'I am extremely sorry for the poor choice of words on my part that in any way would result in dishonor cast upon you.'"
"He's my commander-in-chief and he said, 'I'm telling you, just forget it. It's not important. Since he's my boss and he told me to forget it, I'm going to forget it.'"

Arab in auto falls Marines with gunshots

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Three Marines were shot and wounded by an Arab motorist as his sedan passed their vehicle on a highway near Al-Ula in eastern Saudi Arabia, the U.S. Command said Friday.
It was the second reported shooting of U.S. servicemen in Saudi Arabia since American troops were expelled last fall during the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2.
In a separate incident, a U.S. sailor collapsed and died on the pier Thursday night as he returned to the USS Jumeau in Port Rashid, Dubai, after evening out with friends, the command said.
The U.S. Command said the Marines were traveling to their living quarters in an Army vehicle when the lone Arab opened fire at about 10:20 p.m. Thursday. Two other vehicles in the vehicle were uninjured.
The injured Marines were taken to a nearby military medical facility for treatment, the command said. One was released and the two others were transferred to a military hospital where they were reported in good condition Friday.

Sailors face trial on sabotage charges

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The U.S. Navy on Friday ordered two sailors to stand trial for allegedly trying to lead a mutiny on a carrier in the Persian Gulf to support Saddam Hussein's call for a Muslim holy war against the United States.
A Navy spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Kevin Mukri, would not say whether the two were Muslims.
The Navy identified the two as Airman Apprentice Abdul H. Shaheed, 27, of St. George, N.C., and Seaman Apprentice James L. Moss, 21, of Columbus, Ohio. There were conflicting reports over Moss' hometown.
Shaheed and Moss are accused of "urging disloyalty, mutiny, or refusal of duty" while aboard the USS Ranger in January, according to a statement issued at the U.S.-run Subic Bay naval base.
In Washington, there was no immediate comment on the case Friday from the Pentagon.

The two allegedly encouraged fellow sailors to sabotage the Ranger's aircraft launch system and kidnap the skipper, Capt. Ernest Christensen, the Navy said.
No date for the court-martial has been set, but it will probably be held at Subic Bay, 50 miles west of Manila, the Navy said.
Mukri said an investigation found that Shaheed and Moss encouraged sabotage to support Saddam's call for a worldwide holy war against the United States for its military moves against Baghdad after Iraq invaded Kuwait in August.
If convicted, the sailors could receive dishonorable discharges, 10 years' imprisonment, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and reduction to the lowest rank.

Boise attorney Robert Huntley, a former Supreme Court justice representing the women, said on Friday a "low, conservative" estimate in the difference in pay alone amounted to $1 million a year for the past eight years.
The suit also has with regard to wage and sex discrimination that Simplot, compared to other companies, has a very bad record," Huntley said.
Simplot spokesman Fred Zerza said the company denies the charges.

Rep. Tom Loertscher, R-Idaho Falls, gave the key speech. He said as a matter of practicality, the House should accept the compromise.
Otherwise, he said it would be a matter of more negotiations and it was his experience that it would accomplish little.
"Compromises always go up, not down," he said. If the Legislature continues to disagree, he said, "We will be in no different position than we are in today."

After the man followed officers to the Twin Falls police station, tellers from the bank said he was not the robber and he was released, Corder said.
He said from the robber's description, investigators say they have little to go on. The man walked out of the bank, but no one reported seeing which way he went or whether or not he got into a car, Corder said.
The description of the robber and the style of Friday's holdup are similar to a recent bank robbery in Pocatello, Hilderda said, noting that another bank robbery was reported in Idaho Falls in recent days.
On Wednesday, a man claiming to have a bomb robbed a Boise bank. Hilderda said he doesn't know whether the robberies are connected.
Both Twin Falls bank robberies remain unsolved, and police are encouraging anyone with information to call the police department at 736-2200 or the FBI at 733-5720 or 801-355-7521.

Tax

The cap was imposed by lawmakers after government officials said the 1978 voter initiative to limit property taxes to 1 percent of assessed value would not work. But the cap has served to financially hamstring local governments, school districts and other governmental entities that rely heavily on property taxes for their operations.
Eliminating the cap and forcing local officials to find other ways to justify to the public proposed increases in tax rates will give cities, counties and other taxing districts flexibility and accountability in handling their financial affairs.

Analysts say recession's end in sight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Friday its chief economic forecasting gauge registered a slight uptick in February. It is doing so, it says, upward by 1.1 percent, the biggest gain in nearly three years.

Private economists called the rise in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators the clearest signal yet that better days are ahead for the U.S. economy, although there was disagreement about just how soon the recession will be over.

Some analysts said they believed the downturn is already over. They noted a second government report Friday showing that sales of new homes jumped 16.2 percent in February, the biggest advance in nearly five years.

As upturn in housing normally leads the economy out of a recession and many analysts said this recovery will be no different.

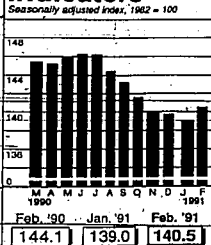

"All of our measurements of buyer confidence are moving in the right direction," said David Seiders, chief economist of the National Association of Home Builders.

"It is pretty clear that the housing market has started to move upward and that should give us an end to the recession by midyear," he said.

Lynn Reaser, senior economist at First Interstate Bancorp of Los Angeles, was even more optimistic, saying she believed there was a good chance that February will be marked as the month the recession ended.

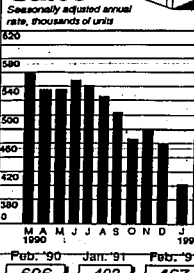

"This recession was caused by major imbalances, a tight monetary policy by the Federal Reserve and the Persian Gulf War which caused consumer confidence to plummet," she said. "Those two negatives have now been lifted and are seeing the signs of a turnaround."

But Richard Rahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, said he believed the current recession might well last into the fall. He noted that the leading index often turns up well ahead of an end to the recession.

It had started to rise a full nine months before the end of the last downturn in 1981-82.

"Although some parts of the economy, such as housing, are bouncing back, the overall economy continues to decline," he said.

Three-fourths of the February increase in the leading index came from a big jump in stock prices during the month and from a rise in consumer confidence.

Stock prices have backtracked slightly in March but still remain well above their lows of October. Consumer confidence took another big leap in March with the end of the war.

Other sources of strength in February were the first gain in home building permits in eight months, a pickup in growth in the nation's money supply, an increase in consumer goods orders, a rising backlog of unfilled manufacturing orders and changes in raw materials prices.

The faster growth in the money supply is something the Federal Reserve has been seeking since it began to aggressively push interest rates lower in late October to fight the downturn.

The 1.1 percent rise in the leading index, the biggest since a 1.6 percent jump in June 1988, was the first advance since a 0.1 percent rise in June 1989. After that gain, the index was unchanged in July and then fell for six straight months. It was down 0.5 percent in January.

Three of the 11 forward-pointing business statistics that compose the index held the forecasting gauge back in February and the business delivery time, was unchanged.

The biggest source of weakness came from a rise in new applications for unemployment benefits. Jobless claims have continued rising in March—topping half-million new applications each week—the highest level since early 1983.

Other sources of weakness in February were a decline in the length of the average workweek and a drop in orders for business capital equipment.

Even economists who are forecasting an end to the recession before midyear are worried that rising backlogs of inventory and depressed consumers' incomes will dampen the recovery and therefore severely limit the strength coming from consumer spending.

Many analysts are forecasting that economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, will be a sub-par 1 percent to 2 percent in the final three quarters of this year, far below the 6 percent average GNP growth rates for an economy emerging from a recession.

"The building blocks are all in place for a rebound, but I think the recovery will be rather anemic," said Samuel Kalian, chief economist of First Interstate Bancorp. "That is not held by the Bush administration, which is counting on a robust recovery and even stronger growth next year to keep the domestic economy from becoming an issue in the 1992 presidential campaign."

Study links Agent Orange to diabetes but not cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of airmen exposed to Agent Orange during the Vietnam War revealed links between the herbicide and some ailments such as diabetes, but no relationship with cancer, the Air Force said Friday.

The Air Force said its report, the fourth on Agent Orange and its dioxin contaminant, was the first large-scale scientific study to accurately measure the effects of the defoliant on health.

It comes two months after Congress voted unanimously to award permanent disability benefits to Vietnam War veterans suffering from two types of cancer they claim resulted from Agent Orange exposure.

The Air Force said it compared 866 airmen who sprayed Agent

Orange — known as the Ranch Hand group — with 804 veterans with less exposure to the herbicide and lower levels of dioxin in their blood.

The study, conducted at the Armstrong Laboratory of Brooks Army Base in Texas, said there was "no evidence of a relationship between dioxin and cancer of any kind, liver disease, heart disease, kidney disease, immune system disorders, psychological abnormalities or nervous system diseases."

But it said increased dioxin corresponded to increases in diabetes, body fat, non-cancerous growths, cholesterol and white blood cell counts.

"These results suggest that dioxin may affect levels of blood sugar and fat and act as an irritant to the body," it said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study of airmen exposed to Agent Orange during the Vietnam War revealed links between the herbicide and some ailments such as diabetes, but no relationship with cancer, the Air Force said Friday.

The Air Force said its report, the fourth on Agent Orange and its dioxin contaminant, was the first large-scale scientific study to accurately measure the effects of the defoliant on health.

It comes two months after Congress voted unanimously to award permanent disability benefits to Vietnam War veterans suffering from two types of cancer they claim resulted from Agent Orange exposure — non-Hodgkins' lymphoma and soft-tissue sarcoma.

Pro-choice group appeals ruling on abortion law

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Anti-abortion forces on Friday pushed a judge's decision upholding Michigan's law restricting minors' access to abortion. Pro-choice groups called the ruling cowardly and filed an immediate appeal.

Judge Philip Schoeder said his refusal to block the law was consistent with previous state court decisions against abortion rights.

"Michigan has a long tradition of opposition to abortion, of tenaciously defending state statutes in light of federal interpretations, and of halting the relationship between parents and children," he said. "While recent trends in California and Florida may demonstrate that states are willing to expand rights beyond the federal constitution through interpretations of state constitutions, it is equally clear that opponents of legislation of this type have an uphill battle (in Michigan) no matter how interesting or how challenging their claims may be," he wrote.

The decision coincidentally came on Good Friday, which every year provides a backdrop for anti-abortion protests such as a "Station of the Cross" demonstration in Brookline, Mass.

In Fargo, N.D., more than two dozen anti-abortion protesters were jailed on trespassing charges after a three-hour sit-in at the state's only abortion clinic.

Washington Post gets back on right Trail - after 40 days

WASHINGTON (AP) — The question that intrigued Washington Friday was this: What did Mark Trail mean when, appearing in The Washington Post after an absence of 40 weekdays, his first words were, "What's the meaning of this?"

When last seen on the Post's comic pages, on Feb. 9, Mark Trail was loggied by Bubba Jones, who was angry that Mark had broken up a staged fight among raccoons.

Then he disappeared.

The Post revamped its comic pages. Walking the plank were "Steve Roper and Mike-Nomad," "Gasoline Alley" and "Miss Peach" on weekdays and other strips on Sundays.

Ending Trail brought the greatest outcry.

When Benjamin Bradlee, the Post's executive editor, looked out his window one day, he saw a huge sign in a neighboring building: "BRING BACK MARK TRAIL."

Bradlee replied by holding up his own sign: "OKAY."

"WHEN?" asked the other building.

"SOON," scribbled Bradlee.

Suddenly on Friday Mark Trail came back, and the Post printed 40 strips his readers had missed in the interlude.

But no reminder of how Mark had gotten in his present troubles. Only readers with long memories or a stack of unrecycled papers would know.

"More of you missed Mark Trail than any other comic, and Mark Trail fans miss him furthest," the Post said in an object letter to "Our Comics Readers."

The editors said they'd received about 15,000 phone calls on a comics hotline and nearly 2,000 letters, most complaining about the changes: The shrinking of the Sunday comic pages, the gillotining of old favorites, the appearance of new comics.

"Garbage," "ghastly," "asinine" and "ugh!!!" were "some of the more printable reactions," wrote Post news media reporter Howard Kurtz, covering the controversy.

"The new ones stink," complained one reader, "but so do some old ones."

"Please fire the guy who screwed up the Sunday funnies," wrote Lyn Nofziger, the Republican consultant. Some old timers said they missed terribly "Gasoline Alley," a strip about the life and times of Skeezix Walleit which has been around since 1919.

Court backs tests of job seekers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's testing of new employees for illegal drug use was upheld Friday in an appellate court ruling that the dissenting judge said could allow checks of all federal job seekers.

The 2-1 ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia upheld a program under which people tentatively hired by the Justice Department must provide a urine sample that is tested for illegal drugs.

The split panel held that the Justice Department's interest in screening illegal drug users from the people it hires outweighed individual applicants' constitutional rights to privacy.

"Drug use among its employees would undermine the department's credibility as the nation's leading law enforcement agency," Circuit Judge A. Raymond Randolph wrote in the opinion joined by Circuit Judge Laurence Silberman.

"To the Justice Department, like any other employer, an applicant is a stranger," the court said. Drug testing is just another tool, like interviews or background checks, to gather information about an applicant's "suitability for employment."

The opinion by Randolph, appointed last year to the court by President Bush, drew a sharp dissent from another recent Bush appointee, Circuit Judge Karen Henderson.

"Simply applying for federal employment is too slim a reed to support mandatory drug testing," wrote Henderson.

Past court decisions have allowed testing of federal employees based on a "reasonable suspicion" of illegal drug use.

Other rulings also allow random testing of employees whose impairment by illegal drug use might endanger public safety or national security.

But Henderson said the other judges were ignoring a requirement of these rulings that "the testing be reasonably calculated to avert some harm that a drug-impaired employee is likely to cause."

Last of children swept into river found

STOCKTON, Calif. — Rescue crews Friday discovered the bodies of two young brothers who were swept into the gushing Calaveras River, the last of the four victims who drowned when they stumbled into the chilly water.

One body was recovered shortly after 11 a.m. The second body was found about a half hour later nearby, some hundred yards from where they entered the rain-swollen river Wednesday. Authorities made the discoveries after their all-night search continued through the morning. The bodies were identified as 9-year-old Herbert Pich and his 8-year-old brother, Danalee.

Teacher accused of sex crimes kills self

PORTLAND, Ore. — A middle-school teacher accused of child-sex charges slashed his wrists and neck and jumped off a bridge to his death, authorities said today.

James H. Regier, 48, was found dead Thursday night on the street beneath the Vista Bridge just west of downtown. Regier was suspended Thursday from his job teaching seventh- and eighth-grade English and social studies at Hauton B. Lee Middle School in suburban Gresham. He was arrested Monday on three counts of second-degree sexual abuse and 10 counts of dealing in child pornography. He was released Tuesday on $14,500 bail.

Quayle reverses position on Patriot

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle once voted to slash spending for a Patriot missile that he has enthusiastically praised since the Persian Gulf War. As a senator, Quayle was among several Republicans who voted to cut funds for the Patriot. Now the vice president is embracing the missile-defense system — an overall success in intercepting Iraqi Scud missiles aimed at Israel and Saudi Arabia. In 1983, while representing Indiana in the Senate, he joined other Republicans in opposing an effort to restore $177.6 million that was being cut from the Patriot program.

Mrs. Bush set to have lesion removed

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush has a lesion known as a papule in the middle of her forehead, that will be removed by doctors, her spokeswoman said Friday.

Papules are raised skin lesions that are usually benign and are removed by burning, freezing or excising and are then examined by a pathologist. They are common to people who have spent a lot of time in the sun. The papule was discovered during the 65-year-old first lady's routine physical examination Tuesday at Bethesda Naval Medical Center.

Residents of retirement home celebrate

LOS ANGELES — Settlement of a lawsuit that threatened the Sunset Hill retirement home has rekindled activism among residents of the facility that has been home to socialists, radicals, communists and liberal religious activists. Residents celebrated with champagne and shortcake Thursday to mark their victory over a developer who wanted to buy the property.

"This is a real victory for the progressive forces! We are setting an example here!" thundered 86-year-old John Day, a former union organizer and Communist Party member.

Bushes take in blossoms

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and his wife, Barbara, were up at dawn Friday to stroll among the city's most famous display of cherry blossoms.

The Bushes started others who trickled out early to see the blossoms, a prime spring attraction of the nation's capital. Several people came up to shake the president's hand.

"Think we're interfering with your morning walk?" Bush asked a couple as he and Mrs. Bush walked hand-in-hand along the Tidal Basin by the Jefferson Memorial.

Bush wasn't answering reporters' questions. Rather, he baffled them. When one asked if he had any news on the rebellion in Iraq, Bush replied, "Seven."

Reporters puzzled over that, unsure if the president was talking in code, joshing them or just being cryptic. His staff appeared equally mystified. Asked during a subsequent briefing to clarify the president's remark, White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk said he did not know what Bush had meant.

Panel looking into bank connection

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Banking Committee is investigating transactions between an Italian bank that lent billions of dollars to Iraq and another foreign bank that has secretly acquired part ownership of the capital-area's largest financial institution.

The inquiry, launched by the committee chairman, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, is the first examination into possible ties between two controversies involving foreign bank dealings in the United States.

In one, two former executives of the Atlanta branch of Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL) were indicted last month on charges they illegally arranged more than $4 billion in unauthorized loans to Iraq.

In the second, the Luxembourg-based Bank of Commerce and Credit International (BCCI) — acknowledged early this month that it had acquired at least a 25 percent share in First American Bankshares Inc. without permission from U.S. regulators at the Federal Reserve.

BCCI, owned by Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahyan, the ruler of the Persian Gulf state of Abu Dhabi, pleaded guilty in 1988 in federal court in Tampa, Fla., to laundering millions of dollars of drug money for deposed Panamanian dictator Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Christian pilgrims carry a cross along Jerusalem's Via Dolorosa during the Good Friday procession.

Lowest turnout in years marks Jerusalem Good Friday events

JERUSALEM (AP) — Black-robed Arab priests and a scattering of Christian pilgrims carried wooden crosses Friday along Jerusalem's Via Dolorosa, the path Christ followed to his death, and prayed at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher.

In the Philippines, a dozen people — including two men serving life sentences for murder — were nailed to crosses as thousands of tourists and religious devotees watched. Hundreds of others beat their backs bloody with bamboo whips.

Pope John Paul II heard the confessions of a dozen pilgrims from around the world in St. Peter's Basilica at the Vatican, while in Germany, hundreds of activists marked Good Friday by marching for peace and disarmament.

The traditional Good Friday observances in the winding streets of Jerusalem's Old City drew the poorest attendance in years. Western pilgrims stayed away because of Middle East tensions and Arab Christians from the occupied territories were barred from attending by army roadblocks and curfews.

Hundreds of paramilitary byder policemen flanked the Via Dolorosa, or Way of Sorrow, as small groups of Christians moved with their crosses. Security was stepped up sharply following a series of fatal stabbing attacks by Arabs against Jews.

Most of the pilgrims paused to pray and sing at the 14 stations marking Christ's route to Cavalry, ending at the Church of the Holy Sepulcher built on the spot where Christians believe he was crucified.

John Moore, a visiting businessman from Glen Burnie, Md., joined 15 black-robed Arab priests on the route. "The connection to the ancient is so strong here. You feel you have to whisper because it is such a holy place," Moore said.

About 40 American, Canadian and Colombian soldiers attached to the multinational peacekeeping force in the Egyptian Sinai also walked the route, as did a dozen Filipino nurses who work at Jerusalem's Hadassah-Ein Karem Hospital.

One of the nurses, who gave her name only as Laumi, said that attending Good Friday and Easter Sunday services in the Holy Land "brings home the real meaning" of Christianity.

Security measures, Friday also were intended to prevent any violence on Saturday, when Palestinians in the occupied territories have called a strike to commemorate "Land Day." The day marks the anniversary of 1976 riots in the Galilee in which six Arabs were killed protesting Israeli expropriation of Arab land.

The 1.7 million Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip were banned Friday from entering Israel, at least until Sunday. The army also imposed a curfew on all of the Gaza Strip and on several major towns in the West Bank, confining people to their homes.

Good Friday this year coincides with the start of the Jewish celebration of Passover and the second Friday of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

Nevertheless, Israel's Tourism Ministry estimated just 35,000 foreign visitors arrived in the Jewish state this month, down sharply from 148,000 last year.

Good Friday commemorations in the Philippines, by contrast, attracted thousands of pilgrims and tourists.

About 20,000 people watched six devotees nailed to crosses in groups of three in a rice field in Caid; 30 miles north of Manila. Among them was a 24-year-old fish vendor who wept and stared at the heavens as he was "crucified."

"This is my first time to be crucified," said Chito Sangalang. "I'm doing it because of my mother, who got sick and got well. I will continue this if God permits me to live on. I will go for another 25 years."

Kurds claim to recapture key oil city

AMADIYA, Iraq (AP) — Kurdish rebels claimed they recaptured the major oil center of Kirkuk on Friday, but the government said it was firmly in control of the city after two days of heavy fighting.

The U.S. State Department said fierce fighting continued in the north and that government forces appeared to be holding the city.

The Kurdish rebels pleaded for help from the United Nations and the United States.

The Bush administration has called for Iraqis to oust Saddam Hussein, but it also said it will stay out of the fight. It repeated its position Friday.

The rebels had held Kirkuk until government troops went on the offensive on Wednesday. The battle for the city reportedly sent tens of thousands of people fleeing for safety during two days of air, artillery and rocket attacks by Iraqi forces.

Western reporters in the rebel-held city of Dohuk, 30 miles southwest of the town near the Turkish border, said tens of thousands of civilians were fleeing into nearby mountains on Friday.

The rebels claimed they had retaken the city after a "strategic withdrawal" a day earlier and that government troops were fleeing down the road to Tikrit.

These are still fighting in the area, but I would say we are in control there," said Ibrahim Suleh, a senior spokesman for them, Kurdish from speaking by telephone from London with The Associated Press in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Bomb kills 4 near church in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A powerful car bomb exploded near an Armenian Orthodox church in Beirut's Christian suburb of Antelias on Friday, killing four people and wounding 22.

Police said the blast, the second car bombing in the northern suburb in 10 days, could have caused 100 casualties if it hadn't been for the Good Friday holiday, which reduced the number of people in the area.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for the 9 a.m. explosion, which was seen as a major challenge to efforts by President Elias Hrawi's government to end the nation's nearly 16 years of civil strife.

Japanese, Soviet foreign ministers meet

TOKYO — Foreign ministers Taro Nakayama of Japan and Alexander Bessmertnykh of the Soviet Union met Friday in initial talks to set the stage for next month's historic visit by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The April 16-19 visit will be the first trip to Japan by a Soviet leader. Officials on both sides have expressed hope it will lead to a breakthrough in chilly Japanese-Soviet relations.

But Bessmertnykh and Nakayama steered clear Friday of their main point of contention — disputed islands occupied by the Soviets since the end of World War II.

Nurses aides get life for 42 killings

VIENNA, Austria — Two nurses' aides were convicted of murder and sentenced to life in prison Friday to bring an end to a sordid case involving the killing of 42 elderly patients.

In an interview with The Associated Press, the prime minister said he most fears post-Communist politicians who tell the public there is an easy "third way" to prosperity between Communism and capitalism.

"There is exactly a good 'third way' — to the Third World," scoffed the free-market enthusiast.

Official fears Poles expect quick fix

WARSAW, Poland — Jan Krzysztof Bielecki, catapulted to prime minister three months ago with what he called a Godfather-style job offer from Lech Walesa, said Friday he worries that Poles expect economic recovery to come too quickly.

In an interview with The Associated Press, the prime minister said he most fears post-Communist politicians who tell the public there is an easy "third way" to prosperity between Communism and capitalism.

"There is exactly a good 'third way' — to the Third World," scoffed the free-market enthusiast.

Yugoslavian premier may be ousted

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia's reformist federal premier could soon be forced from office by the same internal disputes that are wrecking the country, according to officials and news reports.

More than 300 Iraqis cross into Turkey

HAKKARI, Turkey — More than 300 Iraqis crossed into Turkey in an apparent attempt to escape intense fighting in Iraq, the semi-official Anatolia news agency said Friday.

Government officials in this southeastern city said 343 Iraqis crossed into Turkey from Dersik, a village on the Iraqi border, Anatolia reported. The agency gave no date.

Gunmen kill 3 in Catholic neighborhood

CRAIGAVON, Northern Ireland (AP) — Two masked gunmen opened fire on a van selling candy in a predominantly Catholic neighborhood and killed three people, including two teen-age girls, police said Friday.

The Ulster Volunteer Force, a paramilitary-Protestant group, today claimed responsibility for the attack on Thursday, the Press Association reported. The group said it was retaliation for the IRA slaying of a Protestant policeman's widow on March 21, according to the news agency.

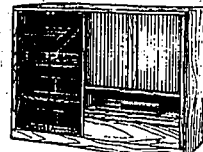

Police identified Thursday's victims as Eileen Mary Duffy, 19, who worked in the candy van; her friend, Katrina Kenne, 16; and Brian Fitzell, a 39-year-old plumber. All three were Roman Catholics from Craigavon.

Crowd pans Corps plan to flush Dworshak Dam to help salmon

AHSAHKA (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has run into a flood of discontent from residents near northern Idaho's Dworshak Dam on the agency's plans to release more water for dwindling salmon runs.

The crowd gathered Thursday to protest the corps' plans to earmark twice as much water for release from the reservoir this year to help beleaguered Snake River salmon. They charge Dworshak would supply more than its fair share, and the fish would be saved only to end up in commercial fishermen's gillnets in the Columbia River.

They in turn suggested everything from using corps barges to clear a path through Columbia gillnets to shutting off California's power supplies from the Northwest.

Nick Dodge, the corps divisional water management chief, suggested the effort to help the fish meant little real change in Dworshak's operations.

Corps officials planned to unleash 600,000 acre-feet of water from Dworshak, twice the amount typically released there for the fish runs. Gov. Cecil Andrus said that was far too much and would hurt local recreation.

Downriver interests, shippers, utilities and others had failed to give their share to help the fish, the governor said. Andrus has suggested drawing down four Lower Snake River reservoirs to create a current so the young smolts do not get lost behind the dams. The corps said more environmental study is needed and that idea could not be tested this spring.

Idaho Power Co. is also expected to provide about 100,000 acre-feet to help the fish this year. The drought-parched Snake's runoff at the company's Brownlee Dam is expected to be about 41 percent of normal this year.

Dodge also told the crowd of about 70 fishermen, businessmen and others that new predictions by the corps still gives Dworshak an 87 percent probability of refilling.

Orofino attorney Nicholas Chenoweth questioned why the corps had not responded to his request for a study of the economic effect the fish flush would have on Dworshak and Orofino.

Henry's fish still dying, officials say

LAST CHANCE (AP) — Trophy cutthroat, hybrid and brook trout are still dying in Henry's Lake.

Contrary to earlier reports from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said Friday, "As we open up new areas we're finding more dead fish."

Fish and Game officials reported earlier this week that the fish kill had "stabilized" at 5,000. But they said, "We're finding more dead fish every day and 1,200 more Thursday. The fate of thousands of other trout remained hidden beneath four feet of ice and snow."

Fish and Game has installed aerators along about three-quarters of a mile of the shoreline. The aerators have brought the level of dissolved oxygen in the area to between 4 and 6 parts per million. Trout need about 3 parts per million of dissolved oxygen to survive.

But in the rest of the lake, oxygen levels are believed to still be dangerously low. The rotten-egg smell of hydrogen sulfide was noticed in some areas where the ice was broken. Fish and Game said in a news release.

"It's impossible for us to treat the whole lake," Elle said.

Trout are congregating to spawn and eggs are being collected at a Fish and Game facility at Hatchery Creek.

So far, 1.5 million rainbow-cutthroat hybrids have been taken at the spawning facility, and officials said spawning of purebred cutthroat has been picking up.

Winter kills have occurred on Henry's Lake in the past. But officials have called this year's the worst on record.

Fish and Game biologists said the problem is due to a combination of factors including a long, cold winter and heavy ice pack, an increase in development and the installation of septic tanks around the lake that add phosphates and other nutrients.

The nutrients speed up the growth of plants that decay when the lake is covered in ice and snow and use oxygen instead of producing it, depleting the dissolved oxygen level in the water.

Henry's Lake is an internationally-known trophy fishery where fishermen harvest 50,000 to 100,000 fish a year.

Mom, son found dead off road

BOISE (AP) — An 81-year-old woman and her 59-year-old son have been found dead in the Owyhee desert, the apparent victims of an unfortunate set of circumstances.

A farmer discovered Charles Coe Thursday afternoon near the Snake River near Brunau, Elmore County Sheriff Rick Layher said. Police later found his mother, Faye Goularte, about a quarter-mile away in their Toyota sedan, he said.

Coe apparently ran off the road and was stuck in the dirt after he picked up his mother at the Cedar-crest nursing home in Mountain Home about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The reasons for the deaths have not been completely determined, but Layher said both suffered from serious health problems. Mrs. Goularte was a diabetic and needed insulin shots, while Coe had heart problems. Layher speculated they became stuck and Coe went to get assistance when he had a heart attack and died.

"His family said they liked to go out like that on drives," Layher said.

Authorities do not suspect foul play, Layher said, adding no other tire tracks were found near the car.

Utah group opposes bond issue election

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A proposed $7.7 million bond election for a special events center at Utah Valley Community College has drawn opposition from the Utah Taxpayers Association.

"We're concerned about the limited time voters have been given to consider this proposal," UTA President Howard Stephenson said, referring to the bond election's April 9 date. "Many taxpayers feel they have not been provided sufficient time to properly evaluate the potential impacts of the project," he added.

Astrological Forecasts

IF MARCH 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You have remarkable sense of humor, are versatile, tend to scatter your efforts. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are attracted to you. You're daring, sensual and seldom are satisfied with status quo. Current cyclic accents power, authority, responsibility, astounding comeback from debacle suffered last September. By contrast, September of 1991 will be your most significant period of this year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Full moon highlights mobility, partnership, publicity, marital status. Scenario features wider recognition, broader horizons, letting go of burden not your own. Libra figures prominently.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Make fresh start, find different ways of completing assignment. Excellent for experimenting with recipes, fixing things, renewing association with one who shares your interests. Leo involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your "re-creative cup" runsneth-over. Focus on style, exploration, innovation, physical attraction. Former teacher is back, will stand by and support your efforts. Aquarian plays key role.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You'll win more with humor than with threats. Focus on durability of goods, property, home, relationship with older family member. Questions that had evaded answers will find "authorities."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Full moon accent necessary for special care while driving-in-traffic. Check mechanical objects, be wary around electricity and be sure batteries are in order. Scorpio is a picture.

VIROGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money

What's what?

What's what?

Q: From first plan to finish, how long does it take to make a movie?
A: 18 to 20 months, typically.

Q: Slowest growing of all cancers is said to be that of the prostate.

Q: An efficiency expert contends executives waste about three hours a week just looking for things.

Q: If confronted by an alligator, slap it on the nose and keep backing up. That's the curious advice of one expert.

MEASURE

Q: What's the most accurate measurement science has yet devised?
A: Will quote you the answer. Good luck. "A second in time is the duration of 9,192,631,770 period of the radiation corresponding to the transition between two hyperfine levels of the ground state of the cesium-133 atom." Got it?

Q: Deal with your children in an aloof formal manner. "Not likely you'd think much of that advice, what? It's historical fact, though - that Puritan clergymen specifically urged parents not to become too close to their youngsters.

Q: What ended the age of knights in shining armor? Rust?
A: Arrows from Welsh longbows. They could pierce armor at 400 yards.

ever. No way. All of them in the Valley of the Kings, except Tut's, had been cleaned out by grave robbers before 1000 B.C.

County to keep park grant despite changes

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin-Falls County will keep a $57,000 state Waterways Improvement Fund grant despite banning water-skiing and jet-skiing at Centennial Park.

County commissioners received a letter from the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation Friday morning re-voicing the news. The department's decision might finally kill a long debate about what kind of boat use to allow in the park, planned for a 2 1/2-mile stretch of the Snake River from Pillar Falls to the Perrine Bridge.

Parks Department officials asked the commissioners on March 13 to withdraw their application for the grant and reapply next year. The commissioners refused.

State parks officials were concerned that the water- and jet-skiing ban, which was not presented in the county's original grant application, would change the park's intended use. But Friday's letter said that while the ban might affect the number of boaters using the park, it would not change the basic use proposed in the original grant application.

The county was awarded the grant last summer and will be reimbursed for money it spends as work on the park progresses.

"I was surprised (with 'the decision')," Commissioner Norma Blass said Friday afternoon. "I'm really satisfied with the way it turned out."

Parks officials had been adamant in asking the county to withdraw the application, she said.

"We stuck by our guns and persevered," Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

Twin Falls Rotary Club President Chuck Clifton was glad to see the issue settled. He expects the Rotary, which raised money to complete the park site, will transfer title of its seven acres to the county this spring.

Blaine Billman, chairman of a citizens committee that drafted a proposal of park regulations, called the decision a surprise.

"It's nice to see that public funds are going to serve the public.... People and the government are working hand in hand on this one," Billman said.

Pickup crashes into house, kills horse, dog

RUPERT — A Buick wagon remained in the hospital Friday after a pickup crash that killed a dog and a horse and destroyed a living room Thursday night.

Bonnie Stanley, 31, was arguing with a passenger when she lost control of the pickup she was driving southwest of Rupert, said Maria Galindo, records clerk for the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department.

The pickup crossed a driveway and through a corral, killing a horse, and came to rest after smashing into the northeast corner of a home owned by Kenneth and Francis Dick, Galindo said, adding that a golden-lab riding in the pickup bed also was killed.

Both the north and east walls of the Dicks' living room were destroyed, she said. The passenger and pickup owner, Timothy Bennett of Heybum, suffered minor injuries. Damage to Dicks' home was estimated at $30,000, Galindo said.

Charboneau vs. attorney suit dismissed by judge Friday

JEROME — A million-dollar suit filed by convicted murderer Jaimi Charboneau against his attorney, was dismissed by 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl Friday.

Meehl also granted an injunction sought by Charboneau's attorney, M. Lynn Dunlap of Twin Falls, to prevent Charboneau from filing frivolous lawsuits in the future.

Charboneau, 31, was sentenced to death in 1986 for fatally shooting his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh. The sentence was overturned, and he awaits resentencing.

In the suit filed in January, Charboneau said Dunlap was not providing adequate representation during resentencing proceedings, Dunlap said.

Twin Falls man hospitalized after being struck by car

TWIN FALLS — A 62-year-old Twin Falls man hit by a car while crossing the street Thursday remained in fair condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Friday night.

Edwin F. Bohm was crossing the street in the 300 block of Shoshone Street North at 9:14 p.m. Thursday when he was hit by a car driven by Alexis Maga, 21, of Twin Falls, a police report says.

Maga, who was driving south when the accident happened, told police she didn't see Bohm crossing the street, the report says. Bohm, 106 Buchanan St., was intoxicated at the time of the accident and did not cross at an intersection, the report says. Maga was cited for not wearing a seat belt.

3 Easter egg hunts planned for today around valley

Today is the day to hunt Easter eggs. Here are three hunts planned for children in the Magic Valley:

The annual Twin Falls City Park will begin at 10 a.m. The Twin Falls Optimist Club, sponsors of this year's event, will hide 250 dozen hard-boiled eggs and 12 golden eggs, each worth $1.

The Lynwood's annual event begins at 11 a.m. at the Lynwood Shopping Center. Lynnie the Elephant will make a special appearance. The Filer First Baptist Church's hunt begins at 10 a.m. at the church on Highway 30.

Jerome Industrial grant gets 1st approval from feds

JEROME — An $800,000 federal economic development grant for the Jerome Industrial Park has cleared another hurdle.

The federal Economic Development Administration's Seattle regional office approved the city's application and will forward it to Washington, D.C., City Administrator Larry Paine said.

City officials don't know when final approval will come, Paine said. Once received, the federal money will extend a road through the park, improve sewer lines to handle any light industry planning to locate in the park, and improve the 100 South road. The city will provide $684,279 in matching funds, including $36,000 in wastewater treatment reserve funds. The park is south of the city limits, but city sewer and water facilities are used by businesses in the park. No county funds would be required to make the improvements, Paine said.

Drawing water from Rock Creek and creating a rainbow, workers test the Filer Fire Department's new truck. The rebuilt pumper was purchased for $50,000 from American Fire Trucks and Equipment, a Twin Falls company. It has the capacity to pump 1,500 gallons of water a minute. Employee Rick Jerome, standing, assists Filer Fire Chief Bud Cooper.

Minimum sentence bill is killed by main backer

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

BOISE — The one bill Republican Sen. Denton Darrington wanted to pass most this session he had to slay with his own hand on the last day of the 1991 legislative session:

"I'm disappointed but I don't impugn the actions of the House," Darrington said.

Because he said a House amendment "gutted" the bill, Darrington sent his mandatory minimum sentence bill for repeat child sexual abusers back to a Senate committee instead of allowing it to be voted on.

The amended bill had passed the House earlier Friday on a 47-36 vote.

It had been amended earlier this week on a voice vote. The bulk of the bill was rewritten with language drafted by two opponents of the original bill, Republican Reps. Mike Simpson of Blackfoot and Celia Gould of Buhl.

"As rewritten, the bill calls for a 'fixed minimum sentence' of five years in prison for someone convicted of lewd and lascivious conduct for a second time. The first conviction, for lewd conduct or sexual abuse of a child, would have to be proven at trial and the second conviction would have to be for an offense that occurred after the first.

That prevents an earlier offense that is admitted to in therapy from being subject to the minimum sentence.

Unlike the original bill, the amended bill would allow judges to suspend, withhold, retain jurisdiction or commute a fixed minimum sentence when the court decides that "is in fact in the best interests of the victim."

The amended bill also calls for the Board of Correction to report to the 1992 Legislature on the evaluation and treatment programs for inmates and recommendations for improving programs to reduce recidivism.

Gould, who acted as co-sponsor of the bill in the House after the bill's original sponsor asked to be withdrawn, said the bill returned judicial discretion that the original bill had eliminated.

Simply locking offenders up for five years doesn't erase their threat after their release, she said. And she said the most important part of the amended bill is the report on treatment while in prison.

"Maybe it's time for you folks to belly-up to the bar because it's going to cost some money and it's going to take some time," Gould said.

Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise, the original House sponsor, said the new bill had too many flaws and urged the House, unsuccessfully, to "send it to that special place in heaven where dead bills go."

Bills for recycling of tires, batteries pass Legislature

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Legislature gave final approval Friday to two bills calling for recycling of tires and batteries.

"This bill is the beginning of a recycling project in the state of Idaho," Sen. Russ Newcomb, R-Twin Falls, told the state Senate as it approved of the battery recycling bill.

The bill then went back to the House, where amendments were approved and the bill was sent to the governor.

If signed into law, the bill would prohibit disposing of lead acid batteries in landfills, and would subject violators to a $500 fine.

Consumers would have to turn in old batteries when purchasing new ones or pay a $5 fee.

The fee would not apply to the purchase of new vehicles with new batteries in them.

Retailers and wholesalers would then recycle the batteries.

Sen. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, opposed the bill, saying it provided no way to implement the program and no enforcement.

Sen. Jerry Twigg, R-Blackfoot, also opposed it, saying that on his farm, batteries have long been recycled instead of tossed and he didn't want to impose a fee when there is no problem, he said.

The tire recycling bill passed the Senate a few minutes later, 26-16.

The bill is a "creative, market-driven solution to waste tire disposal," said Sen. Dennis Davis, D-Coeur d'Alene, and a sponsor of the bill.

The tire bill, which was sent to the governor, would place a $1 fee on new tires, and the money would fund a state account that would provide rebates when scrap tires are recycled.

The bill would require counties to report to the state by October 1992 on how they will properly dispose of their waste tires, and it prohibits disposal of waste tires in landfills after January 1, 1993. Violators would be subject to a $500 fine.

Hawkins also opposed the tire bill, saying all motor vehicle dealers would have to impose the $1 fee for each tire sold.

He argued that the law would "require tremendous auditing and enforcement" that is not provided in the legislation.

And in one of its final votes of the day, the Senate with a 22-20 vote killed a House bill that would have required the state to purchase recycled paper.

Man facing charges after woman reports attack

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 31-year-old Twin Falls man has been charged with first-degree burglary and battery with the intent to commit a serious felony after a woman reported being attacked in her home Friday morning.

Lane R. Williams, 31, 127 Seventh St. N., was arrested at about 4 a.m. Friday and remained in the Twin Falls County jail in lieu of $20,000 bond Friday evening.

A woman living on Buchanan Street called police at about 3:40 a.m. and said she had been awakened by a man sitting on her bed who used pink cloth to tie her left wrist to the headboard, according to a city police report.

The woman told police she thought the attack was a joke until she saw the man was wearing a ski mask and rubber gloves. After a struggle, she freed her hand, but the attacker turned the woman onto her stomach and again tried to tie her wrist, this time with yellow nylon rope, the report said.

When she threatened to scream, the man pushed the woman's face into the mattress, she told police.

After a struggle, the woman turned over and pulled the man's mask off and then kicked him in the groin, the report said. The man fled and the woman went to call police. On her way to the telephone, she noticed an unfamiliar olive-colored flashlight on the kitchen counter.

While she was speaking with police, the man returned and grabbed the flashlight, the woman said in the report.

A police officer responding to the call spotted Williams riding a bicycle on Buchanan Street, according to a police affidavit entered in the court file. He matched the description of the attacker described by the woman and was taken to the woman's home, the affidavit said.

The woman identified Williams as the man who had been in her house, and he later admitted to police that he had entered her house, the affidavit said.

A small bag Williams carried on his bike contained a pair of yellow rubber gloves, an olive-colored flashlight, pink cloth and nylon rope. Police found matching cloth and rope in the woman's bedroom, the affidavit said.

The bag also contained "sexual paraphernalia," Detective Lt. Jim Kistler said.

Williams will have a preliminary hearing within three weeks. Kistler said he thinks other women may have undergone similar attacks and should contact the police department.

Argument breaks out in Blaine County meeting over setback ordinance

By Barbara Newwert
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A third draft of a controversial riparian management setback ordinance provoked bickering, finger pointing, and multiple threats of lawsuits.

The Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission tabled the ordinance after a two-hour session.

On Monday, the Blaine County commissioners extended a building moratorium placed on construction within 100 feet of all streams and rivers. It was due to expire April 1, but has been extended to May 15 to allow time for adoption of the riparian management ordinance.

County residents have expressed anger and been split in their stances over this issue. Few negate the need for some protection of river resources, but no one seems able to agree on a method to accomplish that goal.

"You're bringing L.A. to Blaine County and there's not one reason for it," said retired attorney Leo Amarel who complained the amendment would not allow someone to build a duck blind without getting arrested. The latest version of the proposal incorporates amendments to the floodplain management section of the zoning ordinance and adds regulations for protection of riparian areas.

A citizen's committee that originally developed the first two drafts of the legislation did not support this version, but the committee's technical assistance and research was incorporated into it.

The county's planning office, Planning and Zoning Commission and prosecuting attorney compiled the 18-page document. Criticized sharply during a public hearing in February for the 34-page second version of the proposed ordinance, the county has refined the proposal in an attempt to be more clear.

The new draft calls for a 75-foot riparian management setback for property along Class 1 streams, such as the Wood River, Silver Creek and the Salmon River. The prior draft identified these streams as Class 2 streams, which would require a 50-foot setback.

In the new draft, Class 2 streams would have the 50-foot setback and include Warm Springs Creek, East Fork Deer Creek, Trail Creek, Broadford Slough, Fish Creek, Grove Creek, Little Wood River, Smiley Creek, Rock Creek and Lovley Creek, among others.

Class 3 streams would require a 25-foot setback and would include smaller perennial or intermittent streams, such as Coy Creek and Eagle Creek.

Under all three classifications, a 15-foot buffer zone is required in addition to the setbacks. Decking or other structures are prohibited in this area, but not foundations. The ordinance amendment also outlines the procedure for obtaining site alteration permits for disturbance of stream banks. It also makes violations of the ordinance a criminal offense. The misdemeanor would be punishable by six months in jail and/or by paying a fine of $300 per day.

Several ranchers threatened that lawsuits amounting to millions of dollars would be filed against the county in what they considered a "taking" of property without due compensation.

Ralph Girton, who has formed the Coalition Against the Proposed River Ordinance, or CAPRO, said 185 out-of-state and in-state property owners would be behind a lawsuit if the county passes the ordinance without duly compensating owners for loss of use of their land.

Former County Commissioner Robert Gardner said he favors river protection, but does not feel this ordinance is the way to do it. Instead, Gardner suggested addressing such site alteration and planning criteria in the subdivision ordinance to handle the needs.

Others in the standing-room-only crowd commended the commission for their work, and agreed with the Class 1 classification for the Big Wood River.

Richard Gendley, a late 1970s Planning and Zoning Commission member, lambasted Planning and Zoning Commissioner Leonard Hartig while passing out photographs of Hartig's 15-year-old home.

The house sits 40 feet from the banks of the Big Wood River north of Ketchum and Gouley criticized Hartig for trying to pass a restrictive ordinance when he does not abide by his theories. After the meeting Hartig said he received all necessary conditional use permits from the county when the home was built, but admitted his "placement was done in ignorance."

Hartig said if he had been aware of the time of the effect of building close to the river, he would not have done so.

The commission closed the meeting without discussion of the amendment.

A public workshop is scheduled for April 11, from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Blaine County Courthouse and all interested parties are invited to give constructive comments.

A public hearing with the Planning and Zoning Commission will then be held at 7 p.m. April 18 to review the revised amendment. Hartig said it is not the commission's intent to affect agricultural property owners in the manner in which the amendment stipulates, and changes will likely be made exempting those uses from setback requirements. "My hope continues to be that we have an effective and workable ordinance, but we certainly don't have it yet," Hartig said.

No one comes to Bellevue meeting, but council members pleased anyway

By Deborah Shimkus
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — They opened the doors but nobody came. The council held a public hearing on a proposed ordinance regarding subdivisions Thursday night, and the attendance count was the same as that of the Planning and Zoning Commission's public hearing — no one came.

As the council went through the ordinance section by section, one resident, Walter Cochran, walked in and quietly took a seat in the corner. He is a candidate in the upcoming City Council election.

Though disappointed in the public turnout, the council was still pleased with the ordinance. The only significant change members made was to prohibit cut-de-sacs in any new developments. The original proposal was written to permit cut-de-sacs "only when necessary to the development."

Council members expressed their concerns regarding snow plowing and emergency access in cut-de-sacs.

"I don't think that anybody that has lived up here in the winter likes them (the cut-de-sacs) whether it's the person that lives there or the one that plows it," said Mayor Wayne Douthett.

"If there is an extreme case, a developer can apply for a variance," Councilman Steve Dick said.

In other business, the council accepted the recommendation to hire Kim Orchard as the new deputy marshal for Bellevue.

Orchard, from Jerome, was selected from 13 applicants to serve under Marshal Dale Biggs.

"We received outstanding applications for the job," said Biggs.

The city has done a lot of restructuring in terms of employees lately and Biggs is pleased with the results. "I think it shows by the quality of people we have applying for jobs here," he said. Biggs recommended Orchard to the City Council this week. Though the council typically interviews applicants, it unanimously approved the recommendation without meeting with the applicant.

The marshal's office has been without a deputy since March 6, when the previous deputy, Marshall Gene Monroe, was "let go" after a month of suspension.

Orchard, 23, is a 1986 graduate of Wood River High School in Hailey, and has completed all of the requirements for the state law enforcement certification through the College of Southern Idaho.

He served for 1 1/2 years as a patrol deputy for the Jerome County Sheriff's Office. His duties will include all aspects of general law enforcement.

Orchard, with his wife and two children, will relocate to Bellevue, where he will begin work Monday morning.

Park

The water- and jet-ski ban offered the widest use to the most boaters because the proposed park area was narrow and could handle only a few water-skiers at a time; he and other citizens committee members said. More boaters could use the area if water-skiing were banned, they said.

Gary Oliver, a citizens committee member who had been an outspoken critic of the group's recommendation, said Friday that the Parks Department made the right decision in letting the county take over the park.

A boat trip on the Snake a month ago convinced him that water-skiing would be much too dangerous in the area proposed for the park. Oliver has not boated that stretch of river for 12 or 13 years, he said. However, he had not changed his mind about allowing jet-skiers in the area.

Oliver still believes canoeists and others wanted powerboaters to buy into a stretch of river.

"But I'm glad to see the Parks Department let the county keep the money," he said.

The grant money comes from a 1-cent gas tax paid by recreational boaters into the state Waterways Improvement Fund. Jeff Hoodt, the boating program supervisor for the state's Parks Department, said on March 19 that he had been inundated with letters from area boaters protesting use of Waterways Improvement Fund money for a park where motorboating was restricted.

The water- and jet-skiing restrictions, as well as speed limits along the river in the park, came after the citizens committee and the county Parks and Recreation Authority Commission recommended different boating and speed regulations for the park. Both groups had recommended banning water-skiing, but the county Parks Commission wanted to allow jet-skiing. The citizens group recommended a 5 mph speed limit for the entire park, while the parks board wanted a 35 mph limit 600 feet above the boat launch.

The commissioners settled on a 30 mph limit 600 feet above the boat launch and 5 mph inside that boundary.

The county now must get a permit from the Bureau of Land Management to work down by the river because some of the proposed area for the park lies on land withdrawn for a hydroelectric project. The permit is from the Bureau of Reclamation.

The county is applying for a second grant. Money from this one, a Federal Land and Water Conservation Grant, would go toward building a grassy area in the park.

The county's application for that grant is due in early May.

"It gives them another loophole to stay out of prison where they belong and lets them out on the street where they can hurt our children," Rep. John Aldrich, Democrat, said of the revised bill. He charged that Simpson and Gould deliberately amended the bill so it would fail.

"What we've done is gutted a good bill," Alexander said. "But Gould said he wouldn't have sponsored the bill unless he wanted it to pass."

"There were other ways to kill the bill," said the bill's sponsor and Gov. Cecil Andrus' fourth unsuccessful attempt in four years to pass a mandatory minimum sentencing bill for child sexual abusers. Will the issue be revisited next year?

"I hope not," Darrington said.

Attacks on Mormons may be gulf-related

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attacks on Mormon missionaries and chapels in South America may be related to terrorists protesting the U.S. role in the Persian Gulf War, a Utah senator's aide says.

Two Peruvian natives, Manuel Hidalgo, 22, and Christian Ugarte, 21, were shot and killed March 22 in Batanyaqi while serving proselytizing missions for the Utah-based Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

A sign left by their bodies said in Spanish, "This is how imperialists supporters die."

At the same time, the United States was amassing its forces in the Persian Gulf, said Laura Snow-Turner, press secretary to Republican Sen. Jake Garn.

Snow-Turner said State Department officials have speculated that many of the attacks in Peru were done by terrorist groups who view the church as a symbol of U.S. imperialism and that were protesting the United States' leadership of a multinational coalition against Iraq.

Another missionary, Oscar Zapata,

20, Piura, Peru, was shot and killed March 6 in Tarma, but Snow-Turner said State Department officials do not know if war protests were a factor in that slaying.

Snow-Turner said the State Department told Garn's office that the bombings of 17 Mormon chapels in Peru this year apparently were protesting U.S. involvement, even though the church emphasizes it is a worldwide, apolitical organization.

The State Department also provided a translation of a flier distributed by a group claiming responsibility for such attacks—the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement, whose members are alleged to have killed Hidalgo and Ugarte.

It said that group's "anti-imperialist campaign against the establishment and premises of North American interests" attacked the church in reprisal "for one of the most bloody and infamous wars by which Yankee imperialism displayed its power."

The flier also accused the United States of waging war "without importance to the lives of the civilian population and solely to control the petroleum supplies and fix the world price of crude oil at a level in keeping with its interests."

The flier also warned, "There will be no peace for the Yankee imperialists. With the masses and arms far behind and death, we shall win."

State Department and other congressional sources have also said many of the same groups are upset with the United States over anti-communism activities.

State Department documents describe the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement as a "Marxist-Leninist terrorist group" formed in 1983, led by Nestor Cerpa, and trained in Cuba. Its "objective is to rid Peru of 'imperialist' influence and to establish (a) Marxist regime," the document said.

The State Department estimates its strength at several hundred and said the group has links to other terrorist groups, including the M-19 in Colombia and Alfaro Vive, Carajo! in Ecuador.

State Department reports said the group's activities are "often directed against U.S. and other foreign targets."

Another Peruvian group that has threatened Mormon targets is the Sendero Luminoso, or "Shining Path."

State Department documents describe the organization as an "extremely dangerous and unpredictable terrorist" group formed in the 1960s as an Indian-based rural insurgent organization.

Its "declared aim is to destroy existing Peruvian institutions and replace them with an Indian-based peasant revolutionary regime. Xenophobic in the extreme, (it) criticizes the USSR and China as well as the United States," State Department reports say. Its strength is estimated at between 4,000-5,000. It has no known foreign sponsors.

The reports said Sendero Luminoso's activities include intimidating the populace by executing civilians with government ties, but that

Stumped for sermons? Head for Sermonshop

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ministers no longer need wrack their brains for a Sunday sermon, thanks to a Baltimore reverend's computer bulletin board for clergy who are at a loss for what to preach from the pulpit.

Each week, up to 125 Christian clergy and laypeople in the United States and Canada use Sermonshop to share ideas about sermon topics, said the Rev. John Sharp, the service's founder and editor.

"Imagine you're a minister in some far-off rural area and you want to get to a theological library to research an idea," said Sharp, pastor of Gwynns Presbyterian Church in suburban Baltimore.

"It's just not a physically easy thing to do if you're in the boonies," he said. "Through Sermonshop, you can send out an SOS and get feedback from ministers of about 15 denominations in two large countries." Users of the service must subscribe to a Connecticut-based computer network called Networking World Information Services, which operates Sermonshop with Bizlink software. They pay about $7 an hour to use the service and must sign up for a minimum of 59 each month, said Sharp, who edits Sermonshop from his church office and home.

The Revs. Curtis and Kathleen Ackley, a husband-and-wife pastoring team at First Congregational United Church of Christ in Goring, N.Y., said they have used Sermonshop nearly every week since it was established in 1984.

"It's a very helpful tool," Curtis Ackley said. "We get ideas from it, and we give ideas back. We also like it because all the people from the U.S. and Canada give the service a strong cultural range."

Computer-age scholars work to speed up publication of Dead Sea Scrolls

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A leading editor of the Dead Sea Scrolls told a congress of scroll analysts that an expanded team of young scholars, working with computers, hope to publish all the scrolls by 1996.

There is a new orientation from the West, said the editor, as people involved in the edition of the scrolls who decipher, describe and publish the material, said Emanuel Tov of Jerusalem's Hebrew University.

As a member of the international editing committee, spoke at a news conference at the close of the International Congress on the Dead Sea Scrolls, in El Escorial, north of Madrid.

The congress drew the largest-ever concentration of scroll editors and analysts, who studied findings, including unpublished texts from different books of the Old Testament.

The leather scrolls were discovered by a Bedouin shepherd in a cave along the Dead Sea in 1947.

They chronicle the life of a splinter Jewish group, the Essenes, between the 3rd century B.C. and 70 A.D.

The documents contain a wealth of information on the persecution of Jews by Romans and the emergence of Christianity, and are considered among this century's greatest archaeological finds.

Most of the undamaged texts were published within 20 years of their discovery.

More, recently, scholars had accused some members of the editing committee of hoarding the remaining texts and delaying their publication.

The former lead editor of the scrolls, Harvard scholar John Strugnell, was replaced in December after making remarks to an Israeli newspaper that some construed as anti-Semitic.

The British-born Strugnell was quoted as saying that Judaism was a "racist religion—just like Hinduism."

Israeli Antiquities Authority said Strugnell left for health reasons.

Tov said the old editing team of "older generation" scholars had been expanded into a team of 25 scholars, "whose average age is 40." The editors program their interpretations from the scrolls into computers set to print the results. Publication of the final scrolls is expected to be finished by the year 1995.

The editing committee has rejected accusations of sluggishness in editing the texts, saying they require the utmost care.

But scholars not on the editing committee say more data on the texts is being shared with them, and international congresses are being held with greater frequency, after a period of stagnation from 1967 to 1987.

The 800 manuscripts, written by the Essenes record the lives of the tribe and its neighbors.

They offer a rare opportunity to study Biblical texts in their original languages, Hebrew and Aramaic, and to compare them with later translations—into Greek and other languages.

Some of the Hebrew and Aramaic texts, Tov says, are very different from the earlier Greek versions. "The first nine editions of the Dead Sea Scrolls, 'Discoveries in the Judean Desert,' were published by Oxford University Press, which also will publish the remaining scrolls."

Troubled public works bill on to Andrus

BOISE (AP) — There was some grumbling that it was a "pork barrel" bill, designed more to gather political support than to meet the real needs, but a public works package of nearly $20 billion has cleared the Legislature and is on its way to the governor's desk.

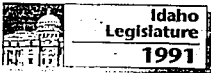

The House voted 57-26 for a budget that cleared the Senate overwhelmingly — two days earlier. Democrats repeated the objection raised earlier by Gov. Cecil Andrus that it over-commits the state in future years.

It was particularly concerned about the amount of general fund money going into these projects and the planning dollars," said Rep. Leanna Laussen, D-Mountain Home.

She said it appeared some of the projects on the list did not appear to be high priority and were put in just to gain votes.

"If we aren't going to put additional money into these projects, the question will be spending the planning money," she said.

The Senate-approved bill to put up $172,000 for computer equipment to aid in reappointment may have fallen victim to the construction package. It came up just before the public works projects and went down to defeat, 45-37. Lawmakers complained that the state didn't have to spend money for the equipment when there were other, pressing needs.

Rep. Kathleen Gunsey, R-Boise, chairman of the House Appropriations panel, said the public works package was practical politics.

"It's something for everybody," it would be politically tough to win approval of the spending plan, she said. "It's a Christmas tree bill, what we call a pork barrel bill. We try to reach around the state and do something for the various constituencies," Gunsey said.

Rep. John Appert, R-Montpelier, also complained that the Legislature was circumventing the system used "to make sure the most important buildings are built first. It appears that projects receive funding when higher priorities go waiting," he said.

Democratic Caucus Chairman John Peavey of Carey was the lone Senate Democrat vote against the legislation when it was approved and sent to the House. Sen. Atwell Parry, R-Melba, called "about as close to pork as you can get." Peavey echoed concerns voiced by Andrus earlier in the week that the projects simply being planned or only partially funded in 1992 will cost the state substantially more than it will have to complete in subsequent years.

"There's a disturbing trend in this bill," Peavey said.

In addition to the new construction, the bill includes $10 million for maintenance and $1 million for asbestos abatement.

In a letter to Republican leaders last week, Andrus maintained the state will have to spend $38 million to complete planned or partially financed projects in the next budget when it will only have about $13 million available.

Andrus said he would get public works spending back in line with revenues if the Legislature didn't do it.

The most controversial pieces of the construction package are $2.2 million for a classroom building for the Canyon County campus of Boise State University and $1.5 million to completion of the University of Idaho library.

The Canyon County facility was not even on the 64-project priority list, and the construction schedule for the University of Idaho library showed not even the $9.7 million the state provided for the project this year would be used by the end of the 1992 budgeting period.

In addition, the University of Idaho received $2 million in the general budget for higher education to refurbish its chemistry building.

The other major pieces of the public works package are:

- $5.3 million the first phase of the women's prison at Pocatello.
- $3.1 million for initial construction on a higher education center in Idaho Falls. Another $4.4 million will be needed to complete that project.
- $500,000 to plan new facilities at State Hospital North in Orofino. Another $6.8 million will be needed for construction.
- $150,000 for renovation plans for the old library at North Idaho College. More than $1.4 million will be needed for the work.

Stallings says flap between Andrus, DOE will cost INEL

POCATELLO (AP) — Congressman Richard Stallings, squeezed between support for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and "extortion" by Energy Secretary James Watkins, says no one wins in the continuing dispute over storing spent nuclear fuel at the INEL.

"I feel very strongly that we ought not to get into a political fight over something as important to the economy of southeast Idaho," the fourth-term Democrat told local businessmen Thursday in Pocatello.

Stallings said he expects the U.S. Department of Energy to win its court battles with Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus over whether it can ship radioactive waste from a mothballed Colorado reactor to the eastern Idaho site. Federal courts probably will uphold the concept of federal supremacy over state's rights, he said, but the ultimate loser will be the INEL.

Access to sex information draws fire

POCATELLO (AP) — A group of parents has asked the Pocatello School Board to reconsider distributing a booklet giving "anyone with a touch-tone telephone" access to information on sex, abortion and other topics.

The Youth Yellow Pages, published by Soroptimist International of Pocatello, was compiled by several educational entities in the community and prepared for distribution by the Bannock County Youth at Risk Committee. It offers emergency telephone numbers, back-to-school information, places to seek counseling, food, shelter or transportation, drug and alcohol agencies; information on types of abuse; pregnancy counseling; health services and other information of interest to teenagers.

But the book also contains the telephone number of the Idaho Facts of Life Line. The toll-free number offers recorded messages of birth control, abortion, pregnancy counseling, transmitted diseases, sexual fulfillment and puberty. It also has information about child sexual abuse, how to talk to parents about sex, how to say no to sex, date rape, breast self-examination and a number of other topics.

Grassroots group forming Idaho chapter

BOISE (AP) — It was standing in front of more than 200 teachers, loggers, miners and recreationists gathered in Salmon to form a new chapter of Grassroots Multiple Use, the organization originated in Montana's Bitterroot Valley to combat what supporters see as trends toward gradual elimination of multiple uses, such as grazing, logging, mining and off-road vehicle use, on national forest land. "It's time that we ... wake up and take a stand ...," Don Weeks of Salmon said in opening Thursday's meeting.

The Bitterroot chapter claims 1,500 members who raise money, have public education activities and contact legislators about laws and proposals with an impact on multiple use.

Virginia guard earns player-of-year honor

NEW ORLEANS — Virginia's Dawn Staley, described by Coach Debbie Ryan as "the glue" of a team favored to win the women's Final Four, was named Division I player of the year Friday by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association. Staley has 224 assists this season and averages five steals per game. Tracy Saunders of Norfolk State was named player of the year in Division II, and Ann Gilbert of Oberlin won it in Division III. Michelle Henry of Simon Fraser University is the NAIA player of the year. She led SFU to a 27-3 season. Staley averaged over 18 points through her first two seasons at Virginia, but dropped back to 14.3 this year. Her assists, however, climbed from 141 last season to 224 this year.

Metro Conference to add 3 Sun Belt Conference schools

NORFOLK, Va. — Three Sun Belt Conference teams have been approved for membership in the Metro Conference, according to published reports. The new Metro schools will be Virginia Commonwealth, North Carolina-Charlotte and South Florida, the Daily Press of Newport News and The Virginian-Pilot of Norfolk reported today. The newspapers were told by unnamed sources that Virginia Commonwealth was admitted Thursday during a telephone conference call of league athletic directors.

Philadelphia writer wins 1st media award from coaches

NEW ORLEANS — Mel Greenberg of The Philadelphia Inquirer received the first media award presented by the Women's Basketball Coaches' Association on Friday in recognition of his perseverance in creating and nurturing a poll to rank women's basketball teams. "He hung in there when hanging in wasn't cool," WBCA president Kay Yow said. Compiled from wire reports

Blue Devils test impossible dream

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Pity Mike Krzyzewski's problem. His Duke team could be 30 points better than last year and still not be improved enough to beat UNLV. Consider it this way: 30 points is more than a third better. That's a third better than not just any team, but last year's national runner-up. And that's a third better against not just any team, but the top-ranked and undefeated defending national champion—the same team that beat Duke last season in the most lopsided championship game ever. The numbers, in other words, are all on the side of Las Vegas in the second game of Saturday's semifinal doubleheader. Poor Coach K? Not to hear him tell it. "I believe we're better than last year," Krzyzewski said Friday. "I hope we're closer than 30 points. We even improved this week. I like this team a lot. We'll fight hard and play together."

UNLV's Larry Johnson meets the fans after practice at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis Friday.

Krzyzewski is not only upbeat but correct in saying this 30-7 Duke team is better than the 29-9 team which lost 103-73 last April in Denver. However, the Runnin' Rebels (34-0), who are on a 15-game winning streak, have done some improving themselves along the way to their shot at college basketball immortality. The last team to win consecutive titles was UCLA in 1973 and the last team to go undefeated was Indiana in 1976. UNLV's numbers might boggle NASA, not to mention the NCAA: • The Runnin' Rebels have led by or at least 15 points in every game this season. • They have trailed at halftime only once and they started that second half against Arkansas with a devastating run, one of the 54 they have this season of 9-0 or better. • Their average victory margin was 27.6,

2.7 shy of UCLA's record in 1972-73. • They have trailed by 10 points once this season (16-6 to Fresno State in the Big West championship game) and that lasted for 10 seconds. • They have trailed in the second half this season for a total of 1 minute, 20 seconds. • As a coach it's nice to have 15, 20-point leads in the last two minutes," Jerry Tarkanian said. "I haven't had to bite on my towel as much, and that's because this is a special team. We haven't had a bad game, maybe a couple of bad halves. Heck, we've had only one or two bad practices all season. Tarkanian doesn't believe that was the real Duke which his team handled with ease 12 months ago. "Duke's a great basketball team and I thought that last year," he said. "That team beat Arkansas quite handsly and people forget about that. They look at the 30-point story and say Duke was outclassed, but that's not true at all. If we played them 24 hours later, it would have been competitive."

Coaches in UNC-Kansas limelight Women end tournament on Sunday

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Contrary to popular belief, Dean Smith vs. Roy Williams won't be the only important matchup in Saturday's North Carolina-Kansas game in the Final Four.

Roy Williams, right, says he is 'awed' by his mentor North Carolina coach Dean Smith, middle, under whom he was an assistant for 10 years.

While most of the pregame publicity has focused on the coaching confrontation between Smith and his former assistant, both sides agree that player performance will play a bigger role in the outcome than sideline strategy. Coaches play a big part in preparation, but then it's up to the players, Kansas center Mark Randall said Friday. "They're both great coaches, but they can't come on the court and play," North Carolina's Rick Majerus said. Williams, who was an assistant under Smith for 10 years before going to Kansas in 1988, admits that he is "awed" by his mentor. But Williams claims he won't be intimidated when he coaches against Smith for the first time. "Dean Smith is the person I respect more than anybody in college basketball," he said. "But the second person I respect is Bobby Knight. And I would bet that if you ask him right now if he thought that took anything away from our preparation, he would say no."

Kansas upset Knight's Indiana team 83-65 in the Southeast Regional and went on to reach the Final Four for the third time in six seasons. North Carolina, the East Regional champ, is making its first Final Four appearance by winning the national championship in 1982. The teams share more than just a coaching connection. Their styles are a mirror image, featuring unselfish passing, pressure defense and frequent substitutions. The similarities extend all the way to the hand signals used by the coaches and players. "Everything we do, we basically got hawks (26-7) are quicker, make even better backdoor cuts and have a player (senior forward Mike Maddox) with Final Four experience. Guard Terry Brown is Kansas' top scorer with a 16.4 average, followed by Randall at 14.8, guard Adonis-Jordan at 12.4 and Jamison at 10.7. Like Kansas, North Carolina has four players scoring in double figures. Fox leads the way with a 17-point average while guard Hubert Davis, nephew of former Carolina star Walter Davis, is next at 13 per game. Forward George Lynch and center Pete Chilcutt each average just over 12 points. "We've had great chemistry this year," said Fox, one of three senior starters for the Tar Heels.

Women end tournament on Sunday

The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The women take their final step toward Sunday's NCAA championship game when Connecticut faces Virginia and Tennessee takes on defending champion Stanford on Saturday. "It's been a great week, but now it's time for what we came for," Stanford coach Tara VanDerveer said Friday. Connecticut (29-4) is the tournament darkhorse, although the Huskies have won three straight Big East titles. The Huskies feature Kerry-Bascom, a three-time Big East Player of the Year, and a group of overachievers full out the roster. Coach Geno Auriemma told his team in the pre-season that its goal was to win the regular season, the Big East Conference tournament and to get to the Final Four. "He really knows what we can do and he gets the best out of each of us," Meghan Patten said. Against Virginia (30-2), Auriemma said his team will have to be able to control the perimeter. Virginia coach Debbie Ryan said her team is used to playing Connecticut. Ayers, an assistant with the Buckeyes, said her team beat three in a row: Stephen F. Austin, Oklahoma and Lamar — to get to the Final Four. Stanford would like to become the first repeat women's champion since Southern Cal in 1983 and 1984. "We enjoyed it a lot," VanDerveer said. "We liked all the things that went with it. We would like a second time around, but we know it won't be easy."

LSU sophomore O'Neal named top college player

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Shaquille O'Neal picked up another trophy Friday, but not the one he wants before picking up millions in the pros. The best player in college, according to a nationwide vote of sports writers and broadcasters, wants to stay put for a while. "I still have some flaws in my game. I'm not ready for the NBA," said O'Neal, the 7-foot-11, 290-pound sophomore who led the nation in rebounding this season for LSU. "For starters, he said, he needs to develop a hook shot and an outside jumper. "I'm not leaving. I'm returning," he said. "That's my intention. I've been here for 10 years of my life. I think I can hold out two more years. So far, I've had a high school championship, an Olympic Festival championship... why not an NCAA championship?" The Adolph Rupp Trophy as The Associated Press player of the year was presented to O'Neal in conjunction with the NCAA Final Four at the Hoosier Dome. LSU lost to Connecticut in the first round of the tourney two weeks ago. "I don't feel embarrassed, but kind of wrong. We should have been here," said O'Neal, who missed two games late in the season with a hairline fracture in his leg. "Everybody would like to win the national championship, so I feel kind of down." O'Neal is only the fourth sophomore to win the Rupp Trophy, named for the late University of Kentucky coach. The others were Bill Walton of UCLA in 1972, DePaul's Mark Aguirre in 1980 and Virginia's Ralph Sampson in 1981.

Ayers, AP's coach of year, prefers 'winning' adjective

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Randy Ayers doesn't want to be known as black coach or a young coach — just a winning coach. "I don't put a lot of significance on me being black," the Ohio State coach said Friday after being named The Associated Press' coach of the year. "I hope people will judge me as being a good coach." Ayers guided the Buckeyes to a 27-4 mark and the co-championship of the Big Ten in his second season as coach. Ohio State was beaten by St. John's in the Midwest regional semifinals. He received 191 of 582 votes in a nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters, conducted before the NCAA tournament. Kentucky's Rick Pitino was second with 94 votes, followed by Utah's Rick Majerus with 89½ and Nebraska's Danny Nee with 65. Ayers, an assistant with the Buckeyes for six years before being elevated to the top position, is 44-17 in two seasons. "After the first year people started judging me as a coach, not whether I was young or whether I was black," said Ayers. "I've liked all the things that went with it. We would like a second time around, but we know it won't be easy."

War could be planes' saving grace

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Two prototype Joint Stars surveillance planes performed so well in the Persian Gulf that the Pentagon may ask Congress to build even more than had been planned.

Just last fall, Congress had seemed ready to kill the program. Flying "behind friendly lines," the Air Force planes use two types of sophisticated radars and sensors to find and track enemy concentrations, day or night, more than 150 miles beyond the battle front. The information is relayed to Army ground stations, giving field commanders an almost instantaneous picture of enemy rear-echelon troop, tank and artillery movements.

In the war, officials say, the planes had a hand in directing air strikes on Iraqi tank formations, finding Scud missile launchers and aiding the allied counterattack on the Saudi border town of Khafji. Joint Stars' radar images also helped allied commanders assess the extent of bomb damage to Iraqi targets.

On a single eight-hour mission, a Joint Stars plane can watch over 400,000 square miles. The system is meant to complement the work of "Air Force" AWACS planes, which detect and track aircraft.

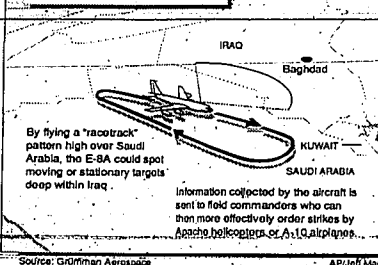

The Joint Stars planes, which home in on ground targets, play a key role in the military's AirLand Battle-war-fighting strategy, which depends on being able to "see" deep to the enemy's rear.

Two prototype Joint Stars planes — the only ones in the world — were deemed so important to the war that they were pulled from the fleet and sent to Saudi Arabia. They arrived a few days before the allied air offensive began and flew 54 missions — about one for each day they were in the gulf.

Their success seems to have brought about a drastic turn in fortunes for the plane.

Just last August, two days before Iraq invaded Kuwait, the House Armed Services Committee voted to cancel the program by deleting about $300 million for it from this year's budget.

The committee said in a report that because "Joint Stars was designed for a threat no longer considered credible — a Soviet land attack on Western Europe — the requirement for the surveillance system is no longer valid."

In October, as the U.S. Persian

Gulf build-up intensified, a House-Senate negotiating panel restored the money.

The plane's wartime performance may have disarmed its critics, says Baker Spring, a defense analyst at the Heritage Foundation. "A conservative think tank.

"It doesn't have to fit the straight-jacket of a strictly European role, Spring said.

The main Joint Stars contractor, Grumman Corp., is supposed to deliver 20 of the converted Boeing 707s over six years starting in 1992. The Bush administration is seeking $312 million for the program in the 1992 budget.

But in the aftermath of Joint Stars' gulf performance, the Pentagon is thinking about asking Congress to approve an expanded production program, according to Col. Harry Heimple, manager of the Air Force portion of the project. Speaking in an interview, Heimple declined to say how many more planes the Air Force might want.

There are discussions going on about that," he said, adding that there was no hurry to decide because the last of the 20 planes isn't due to be delivered until 2001.

Even if the program is not expanded, the gulf experience for Joint Stars is likely to make it less vulnerable to congressional budget cutters than in the past.

"The requirement for the system is clearly there now, after the Desert Storm activity has been completed," Col. Mendel Solomon, manager of the Army's portion of the Joint Stars project, said in an interview.

In recent news briefing on the allied air campaign, the Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Merrill McPeak, said Joint Stars played a key role in helping F-15Es ground-attack planes "punch out" on the "hot" air "targets" on Scud launchers.

The Army recently told Congress the system was instrumental in allowing the allied forces to block at least one important escape route for Iraqi armor. "The system was instrumental in allowing the allied forces to block at least one important escape route for Iraqi armor," he said. "The system was instrumental in allowing the allied forces to block at least one important escape route for Iraqi armor."

The information was passed to allied field commanders, who then directed air strikes against a causeway inside Iraq, knocking out the path of

Voice of Desert Storm hitting lecture circuit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Kelly, the Pentagon's witty and acerbic spokesman on the Persian Gulf War, retired Friday after 34 years in the Army.

Gen. Colin Powell's Staff Chairman Gen. Colin Powell said the 58-year-old Kelly was an "authentic American folk hero" who had shown the world a "reassuringly human" and "feeling Pentagon" during the war against Iraq.

The retirement ceremony in the Pentagon's Hall of Heroes combined high praise for the retiring three-star general with the quick wit Kelly came to be known for during his nationally televised war briefings.

"We weren't sure that he'd be able to fit in," Powell quipped, referring to Kelly's plans to go on well-paying speaking tours. "But we got the government rates. It's only going to cost us $20,000."

Kelly has signed with a New York-based speaking agency to represent him and "could command prices as high as $20,000 per speech."

Powell compared Kelly to Daniel Boone and Davy Crockett and said the general, a Philadelphia Irishman in Army green, with a "pre-church grin" and a "coarse tongue, has become an authentic American folk hero."

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney said Kelly had coached him in military operational matters during the build-up to the Gulf War and presented then him with a "commendation certificate" proclaiming Kelly "now fully qualified to serve as secretary of defense."

Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Kelly 'authentic' — folk hero

Kelly's voice faltered as he talked of the "deep honor" of being a soldier and said "to come to the end of the trail is a bummer, but we've all got to go through that."

But he also poked fun at himself, recalling his early days of being the first Cavalry out of Fort Knox, Ky., and noting that Gen. George Coster, another cavalryman, was "the stud" when he was assigned to his first unit "that even the other cavalrymen noticed."

Kelly was presented with the Defense Distinguished Service Medal in the ceremonies, also attended by Army Chief of Staff Carl Vuono and the retired chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William Crowe Jr. He was commended for his key part in U.S. support for the Cory Aquino government in putting down a coup attempt in the Philippines and in the military operation in Panama last year.

Saddam responsible for Iraqi air defeat, air commander says

The Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saddam Hussein has been the "main reason" for the Iraqi air force's defeat, an air commander said by maintaining an iron grip on the fleet from Baghdad, eliminating a large force in the field, the allied air commander said.

On paper, the air war shaped up as a potentially tough contest. Iraq's 700 warplanes, including top-of-the-line Mirage F-1s and Soviet Mig-29s, flew 1,500 sorties a day, while the allied air force had 540 fighters and bombers.

Key sites in Iraq bristled with radar-guided surface-to-air missiles and other anti-aircraft weaponry.

The key to the quick allied mastery of the skies, said U.S. Air Force Lt. Gen. Charles A. Horner, head of Central Command Air Forces, was the decision to attack Saddam's military command and communications network, which he needed to run the war from Baghdad.

— Gen. Charles A. Horner

"We exploited that weakness right at the start ... and he never had a chance," the 54-year-old general from Davenport, Iowa, said in an interview.

The Pentagon says the allies confirmed the destruction of 234 planes and 141 were believed destroyed in attacks on air shelters.

Another 137 planes took sanctuary in Iraq, which recently said it will not return the planes. Horner said he had heard other reports the planes would be returned.

Earlier this month, Gen. Merrill A. McPeak, the Air Force chief of staff, said the Iraqi air force was "a pretty good outfit," but it was "the second best" in the world.

Both McPeak and Horner said the opening minutes of the air war on Jan. 17 dramatically influenced its outcome.

While stealth fighters were attacking Iraq's early warning radar system and command centers, Horner said, U.S. F-15C fighters were shooting down Iraqi fighters that initially took to the skies.

"His air force attempted to fight and, in fact, I actually have a certain amount of respect for the guys who attempted to contest the flight of our fighters. They were really, they took off anyway and died," Horner said.

The initial attacks on Iraq's command and control system were not necessarily fatal, but indicated a "fatal weakness" in the Iraqi military structure, officers in the field could not improvise, he said.

Losing the ability to fly, Iraq was unable to pursue allied troops from the air. Perhaps that was the most important, if not the only, and thus allied commanders were able to conduct a massive ground sweep from the west that appeared to take Iraqi troops completely by surprise.

Horner said the Iraqi military's Soviet training, which tends to be highly structured, was "a parrot of the problem."

"You can't run a country the way he runs it and then expect people to be flexible," the general said. "When he created a system, it was 'You do it my way or that's it.'"

If the U.S. headquarters was ever cut off, he said, American pilots "would figure out some other way to do it."

"We'd have gone to independent dispersed operations. We would have fought decentralized until we could get our act together," Horner said.

After the first few days of the air war, Horner said, the Iraqis realized there was no chance of defeating the allies and attempted to regroup their remaining aircraft.

"The interim, we started blowing up his shelters which robbed him of the opportunity to sit and regroup," he said.

Saddam had two "options" and took both: He flew 137 aircraft to Iran to retain part of his air force and he moved other aircraft near housing areas and religious shrines, where there was less likelihood of bombing raids.

"I would imagine most of those airplanes were not in flyable condition, but I don't know that because he certainly made an effort to get most of (his planes) to Iran," the general said.
