Salmon Tract water prospects gloomy for '91

By N.S. Noldentved
Times-News writer

HOLLISTER — Mirror-bright plowshares flash through rich Salmon Tract soil as farmers prepare for another growing season. But they will likely be plowing less ground this year.

The Grange hall was packed to the rafters Monday night as farmers gathered to hear the anticipated bad news about the year's water supply.

Peter Palmer, director of the Soil Conservation Service's Snow Survey, explained the water forecast numbers that add up to .25 or .35 acre-foot of water per share in the Salmon Falls Canal Co.

An acre-foot is the amount of water necessary to cover one acre to the depth of one foot.

Most farmers will plant only one-quarter to one-third of their crop land this summer. There's no sense in planting crops you can't water, they say.

Looking at past records, 1991 shapes up to be the third-driest year in the Salmon Tract's 65-year history. The worst was 1934 when farmers got only one-tenth of an acre-foot per share. The maximum the company will deliver is 1.167 acre-feet per share.

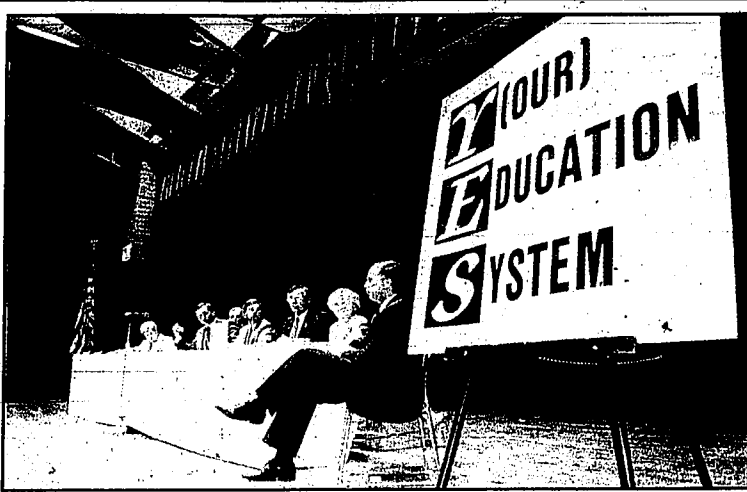

Only a few farmers remembered both those dry years, and look on the coming year with resignation.

"We lived through worse years," said Bill Lanting, who was born in Rogerson in 1918. He thought the '25 forecast was probably optimistic.

In 1934 Lanting remembers planting only 20 acres of barley.

"The grasshoppers ate half of that," he

Drive starts to pass $20 million bond issue for new high school

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If a proposed $20 million high school had already been built, the School Board might not have needed to expel three students Tuesday night. Times-News Publisher Stephen Hargen said.

Hargen made the comment, underscoring the potential impact the new school could have with students at a high school bond issue campaign kickoff Tuesday night.

The meeting of about 75 people, including teachers and members of the district-formed Long-Range Planning Committee, followed a regular School Board session in which board members voled to expel three students, whom they did not name.

Those students may have been diverted from truancy and mischief had they been able to participate in an expanded vocational program that would accompany the high school proposal, Hargen said.

Hargen, KMVT General Manager Lee Wagner and banker Curtis Eaton, who helped draft the bond issue proposal, repeatedly said that the new building would provide "enough space" for innovative new programs.

While solving overcrowding at the district's six elementary schools, two junior highs and the high school, the plan would allow the district to switch to the highly touted middle school system and to take advantage of facilities and instructor expertise at the College of Southern Idaho, Wagner said.

The sharing of teacher and space resources with CSI would be reciprocal, he said. High school students could earn college credits, Superintendent Terrell Doniet said.

Under the proposal, the high school would be built near CSI's Vera C. O'Leary Junior High School and the Twin Falls High School building would be converted into middle schools; and Robert Junior High School would become an elementary school.

The Long-Range Planning Committee has printed 25,000 pamphlets that describe the proposal.

Tests confirm oats' role in cutting cholesterol

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Oat bran and oatmeal have passed additional tests to prove they are effective agents in reducing cholesterol, according to a study published Tuesday in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The research is among several recent projects that took a second look at oats after a report last year criticized earlier findings as scientifically inadequate. The new study said people with high cholesterol experienced up to a 15 percent drop in their cholesterol level with a diet containing no more than 30 percent fat and including 2 ounces of oat bran daily.

This study determined the actual dose one needs to experience a drop in cholesterol, said Dr. Michael Davidson, medical director of the Chicago Center for Clinical Research.

He said it also showed that a person's cholesterol goes up again if he stops eating oat bran, even if he sticks with the low-fat diet.

"His study has all the adequate monitoring," said Dr. Joseph Keenan, of the University of Minnesota Medical School, who also studied the relationship of oat bran and oatmeal to cholesterol.

"What we've done is consolidate the evidence to show that it is a real finding," he said. "Using sophisticated monitoring, it still holds up."

The new studies used men and women aged 20 to 70. They were put on low-fat diets for six to eight weeks before the oat bran was introduced.

These studies show that oat bran works, said Keenan. "We have some interest in finding out how long it will work. These are relatively short-term studies."

Steven Ink, a nutritionist for the Quaker Oats Co., said scientists still don't know why oats affect the body's cholesterol level. "We need to know what actually is occurring in the body," he said.

The initial discovery of the cholesterol-lowering properties of oat bran made it the food of the year in 1989.

Woman fakes terminal cancer in bid for sympathy

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A woman jilted by her fiancée sought sympathy by faking terminal breast cancer for two years, shaving her head and dieting away 20 pounds or so, a psychiatrist says. She even fooled a cancer support group.

The woman, who also feigned listlessness and loss of appetite, built up a network of close friends among support-group members. That was gratifying for somebody who usually had trouble establishing relationships; and who faced the aftermath of the broken engagement.

"She felt that the process of rebuilding a social life for herself was simply overwhelming. She needed a shortcut," said Dr. Marc Feldman.

Feldman, a psychiatrist in Birmingham, Ala., is a co-author of a report on the case in the spring issue of the journal Psychosomatics.

The woman had what psychiatrists call a factitious disorder. In this condition, a person consciously fakes an illness for some psychological gain. A well-known variant is Munchausen syndrome, in which a person virtually makes a career of being a patient.

Nobody knows how common factitious disorder is, said Dr. David Folks, a professor in the department of psychiatry and behavioral neurobiology at the University of Alabama School of Medicine in Birmingham.

But, he said, "on any one day, you could probably go into your local hospital and find one patient who either had factitious disorder or was a Munchausen patient. So it's not rare by any stretch of the imagination."

Feldman treated the woman after her ruse was discovered and while he was director of psychosocial programming at the Duke University Medical Center's cancer center in Durham, N.C.

The woman, who by then was 35, began the charade while working as a corporate secretary. She told co-workers that the cancer had already spread and that her prognosis was grim. She modeled her symptoms on the genuine cancer of an acquaintance.

After experiencing a gratifying outpouring of warmth from co-workers, she joined a support group because it was a ready-made social network, Feldman said in a telephone interview.

"The groups there really work to be unconditionally supportive, very nurturing and warm. The very first day she showed up she was embraced and welcomed."

U.N. sets up force for Iraq

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. Security Council on Tuesday voted unanimously to establish a 1,440-member peacekeeping force to monitor the Iraq-Kuwait border and the withdrawal of allied forces from southern Iraq.

The 15-member council delayed its formal declaration of a cease-fire in the war until Iraq delivers a report of its National Assembly's acceptance of the onerous U.N. terms for a permanent cease-fire. A formal end to the war was expected to be announced Wednesday.

Under the permanent cease-fire resolution, adopted by the council last Wednesday, Iraq must scrap its weapons of mass destruction and pay heavy war reparations. Iraq sent a 23-page letter accepting the resolution Saturday.

The composition of the peacekeeping force has not been announced by the secretary-general, but it is expected to include U.S., British, Chinese, French and Soviet military officers as observers.

The deployment date was not set, but it is expected to be soon. The force is expected to cost $123 million in the first year. It will be financed with voluntary contributions.

The force will patrol a demilitarized zone six miles into Iraq and 3 1/2 miles into Kuwait.

Meanwhile, the council delayed until Wednesday discussion of humanitarian aid to Iraqi Kurds and European Community proposal to provide a haven for Kurds in northern Iraq.

Israel agrees to peace talks

The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel informed the United States on Tuesday that it was willing to hold peace talks with the Arab nations under American auspices and with the participation of the Soviet Union.

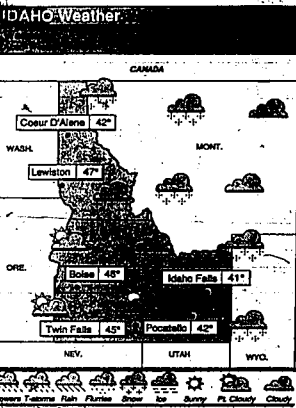

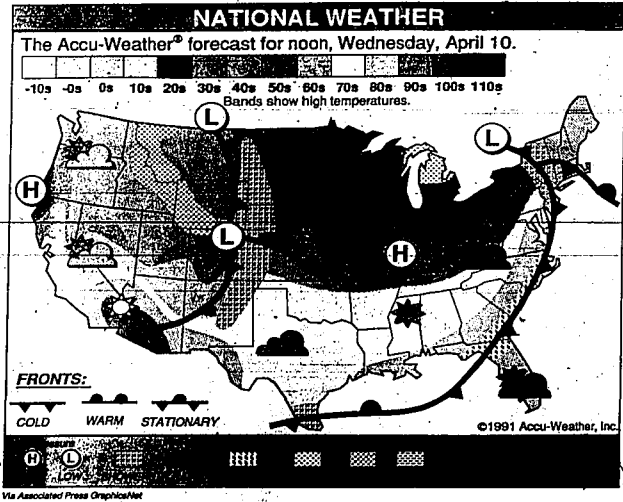

"I hope that the U.S. will succeed in getting agreement of the other parties," Foreign Minister David Levy said, underscoring that Israel's aim was to have direct talks with its neighbors on their 43-year conflict.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III welcomed the Israeli move, which came at the start of four days of talks with Mideast leaders, as "very constructive."

However, Baker added, "there is a long, long way to go. There are many, many parties involved. There are lots of questions before us that have to be addressed."

If Baker, who meets later in the week with Egyptian, Saudi, Syrian and Jordanian leaders, can gain their approval for regional peace talks, it would be a breakthrough on what he has called "the most intractable problem in diplomacy." — The Arab-Israeli dispute.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service in Boise issued a high wind warning for south-central and southeast Idaho late Tuesday afternoon.

The winds resulted from a strong cold front that moved through the northern part of the Gem State earlier.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were reported throughout Idaho Tuesday. The showers are expected to continue Wednesday along with continuing brisk winds.

Winds of 20 to 30 mph were blowing Tuesday afternoon in the north and southeast. Elsewhere, velocities of 10 to 20 mph were common. Rainfall amounts were generally less than a quarter of an inch in the valleys.

The afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 65 degrees at Emmett. Stanley reported the coldest at 14 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 94 degrees at Thermal, Calif. The lowest was 6 degrees at Pinedale, Wyo.

Thunderstorms rumble across wide section of nation

The Associated Press

Thunderstorms with tornadoes and large hail spread between the Mississippi River and the Appalachians Tuesday and nearly a foot of snow was possible on Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

A heat wave dwindled in the Northeast but there were still a few record highs in the 70s and 80s.

Thunderstorms created conditions in which tornadoes could form and watches were issued for parts of Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, West Virginia, and the western tips of North Carolina and Virginia.

Tornadoes were reported in the afternoon in western Kentucky and southeastern Indiana.

No deaths or injuries were reported in western Kentucky, where tornadoes and high wind damaged mobile homes, sheared roofs off stores and shopping centers, and downed trees and power lines in an area around Russellville, about 25 miles southwest of Bowling Green.

In Indiana, at least three tornadoes touched down in Harrison County west of Ramsey, in Clark County south of Henryville and in Switzerland County near Vevey. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms reached from eastern Upper Michigan across Lower Michigan, southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois; western Kentucky, western and central Tennessee, northwestern Alabama and northern Mississippi. Thunderstorms also occurred over Arkansas.

Hail 2 inches in diameter was reported near Ward, Ark.; as big as golf balls at Tolu, Ky., and Beebe and Little Rock, Ark.; and 1 inch in diameter at Sturgis, Ky., and Shawnee, Ark., the National Weather Service said.

Heavier rainfall during the six-hour up to 4 p.m. EDT included 2.21 inches at Little Rock, Ark.; and 1 inch at Valdosta, Ga.

Thunderstorm wind gusted to near 60 mph at Little Rock and south of Jonesboro, Ark., and to near 70 mph at Memphis, Tenn.

Pulitzer Prize-winning stories focus on nation's social ailments

NEW YORK (AP)— Stories that confronted such social ills as rape and child abuse were among the 1991 Pulitzer Prize winners in journalism Tuesday.

The Des Moines (Iowa) Register won the public service prize for a series about Nancy Ziegenmeyer, a courageous rape victim who volunteered to have her name made public.

Child abuse or neglect was examined by the Los Angeles Times, the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times and a Cabinet News-Service.

Pulitzer Prize winners in the arts included John Updike for "Rabbit, Rest," fiction; and Neil Simon for "Lost in Yonkers," drama.

This is the 75th year the prizes were given by Columbia University under a trust set up by the will of Publisher Joseph Pulitzer. The New York Times and The Washington Post each won two prizes. The Times now has 63 prizes, more than any other news organization; the Post has 2.

In Des Moines, Mrs. Ziegenmeyer was inspired to come forward after a Register column said that keeping rape victims' names secret reinforced the canard that somehow the victim is at fault.

The resulting series, reported by Jane Schorer, gave details of the rape and described its effect on Mrs. Ziegenmeyer's life. It prompted widespread reconsideration of the traditions, media practices and competing racial identities.

"It's a triumph of openness, and it's a triumph of fearless truth telling," Register Editor Geneva Overholser said.

The Los Angeles Times' David Shaw won for criticism for his examination of the way the media reported the McMartin preschool child molestation case.

The Pulitzer for feature writing went to Sheryl James of the St. Petersburg Times for stories about a mother who left her newborn in a box near a trash bin.

"I keep thinking this is happening to someone else and I'm going to wake up," said Mrs. James, 39.

Reporters Margie Lundstrom and Rochelle Sharpe of Cabinet News-Service won the national reporting prize for disclosing that hundreds of child-abuse-related deaths go undetected each year because of errors in medical examinations.

Children also captured the attention of William Snyder of The Dallas Morning News. He won the feature photography prize for pictures of ill and orphaned children, living in subhuman conditions in Romania.

In this country and abroad, human interest angles motivated writers and photographers — some of whom did their jobs at great risk.

The Associated Press' Greg Marinovich won the Pulitzer for spot news photography for pictures from South Africa showing supporters of the African National Congress killing a man they believed was a Zulu spy.

The Pulitzer Prize Board noted that some of the Pulitzer Prize dispatches were filed while he hid from Iraqi authorities in occupied Kuwait.

The Washington Post's Marge and The New York Times' Surgy

Schmemmann won the Pulitzer for international reporting. Schmemmann won for his coverage of the reunification of Germany.

In other categories:

The spot news reporting Pulitzer went to the staff of The Miami Herald for stories about a local cult leader.

Joseph T. Hallinan and Susan M. Hendrix of the Indianapolis Star won the Pulitzer for investigative reporting for a series on medical malpractice.

The Wall Street Journal's Susan C. Fatuni won for explanatory journalism for a report on the leveraged buyout of Safeway Stores Inc. that revealed the human costs of high finance.

The best reporting Pulitzer was awarded to Natalie Angier of The New York Times for her reports on scientific topics.

Jim Hoagland of The Washington Post won the Pulitzer for columns on events leading up to the Gulf War and the political problems of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Pulitzer for editorial writing was awarded to Ron Casey, Harold Jacobson and Jeffrey Kennedy of The Birmingham (Ala.) News for their editorial campaign analyzing inequities in Alabama's tax system and proposing reform.

Jim Borgman of The Cincinnati Enquirer won the Pulitzer for editorial cartooning.

Other arts winners:

"The Ants" by Bert Holldorfer and Edward G. Wilson for general non-fiction.

"Jackson Pollock: An American Saga," a biography by Steven Naifeh and Gregory White Smith.

"A Midwife's Tale: The Life of Martha Ballard, Based on Her Diary, 1783-1812," by Laurel Thatcher Ulrich, history.

"Mona Van Duyn for 'Near Changes' poem.

"Symphony," by Shulamit Ra'anan.

House panel approves Demo budget

WASHINGTON — The House Budget Committee approved a Democratic $1.46 trillion budget for 1992 Tuesday, but would reshuffle some of President Bush's domestic priorities and could set the tone for a year of confrontation between the White House and Congress.

Work on the budget came as lawmakers returned from their holiday recess and as Democrats and Republicans jostled to battle over a host of competing domestic issues, including child rights, crime legislation and parental leave.

The Budget Committee approved the Democratic plan on a voice vote after rejecting on another voice vote the Bush budget, which Republicans offered as an alternative.

House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., predicted the House would approve the committee's spending plan next week.

Judge rules GOP violated limits

WASHINGTON — The National Republican Senatorial Committee violated campaign finance limits in raising more than $2.3 million for 12 Senate candidates in 1986, a federal judge ruled Tuesday.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell rejected the Federal Election Commission's urging that the GOP committee be fined the maximum $4.6 million allowed under the law. Instead, he fined the committee $24,800.

Gesell ruled that the GOP committee exceeded the $17,500 per-candidate limit and also violated the law by failing to report to the FEC more than $2.3 million in contributions to the 12 candidates.

Winds batter North Idaho towns

PRIEST RIVER — High winds downed trees and damaged buildings Tuesday outside this northern Idaho town and caused power outages in nearby Sandpoint, authorities said.

The winds struck east of Priest River just after 5 p.m. on Tuesday, Mitchell said. There were no reports of injuries, he added. The winds died down after just a few minutes.

Mitchell said the winds caused extensive damage to two buildings, including a barn that lost its roof. The winds also hit areas south of Sandpoint, about 15 miles to the east, Bonner County sheriff's deputy John Murray said.

Colombia beefs up security forces

BOGOTÁ, Colombia — Facing the most intense rebel offensive in decades, the government Tuesday announced a $100 million plan to create new army units and hire thousands of additional police.

The Energy and Mines Ministry, meanwhile, announced an emergency plan to restrict use of private cars to conserve gasoline. Worker strike and rebel attacks on pipelines and refineries have cut oil and gas production.

The three-month wave of terror by Colombia's two main guerrilla groups has claimed about 600 lives and cost the Colombian economy an estimated $500 million, according to official estimates.

School

Also at the meeting, Design West architects, the company that will design the high school, gave board members a tentative description of what the high school would include.

Part of the plan is to have a "competition" gym and two practice gyms in an area covering 54,000 square feet. It would also have a 2,000-seat auditorium in 40,000 square feet.

The campaign pamphlet says that "it is not anticipated" that the new high school would have a track and football field, because the district already has modern facilities.

Hartgen said $2 million of the bond issue would help furnish and equip the high school with "state of the art" resources, including databases and laboratories.

The plans, however, may need to be scaled back to stay within a target size of 280,000 square feet, said Jim Coles, vice president of Design West.

Company representatives will be in the high school conference room today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Thursday from 9 p.m. to 4 p.m. to talk to anyone who has questions about the proposal or wants to make suggestions, he said.

In other business, the School Board approved a construction project of between $2,000 and $3,000 to refurbish the district office building to make room for two new offices.

Some may try to get the idle land into a government set-aside program.

Fewer beans will be planted, Lanting predicted. Beans don't take more water, just water in the season, he said.

"These guys are taking a little bit of a chance," he said. But if farmers cooperate on their bean planting, late-season delivery could be more efficient.

More farmers also are using sprinklers, which increase irrigation efficiency, Lanting said.

He remembers another very dry year—1961—his first as a farmer. He had rented land, but when it became evident that his water was not going to last long enough to get his crop harvested, he sold the water he had left and let the grain burn in the sun.

Farmers will plant fewer acres and crops such as barley or alfalfa that

Montana governor halts buffalo hunts

HELENA, Mont. — Gov. Stan Stephens on Tuesday signed a bill stopping the sale of buffalo hunting licenses, saying it should neutralize criticism stemming from the killing of bison for research.

"It was unfortunate that Montanans were portrayed as being more interested in simply shooting buffalo than they were in addressing a serious disease problem," he said.

On Monday, Yellowstone National Park rangers fatally shot three bison in Wyoming for disease research before a judge temporarily blocked them from killing 22 others. The kill was an attempt to determine how many Yellowstone bison are infected with the contagious disease brucellosis.

The 1985 Legislature authorized the sale of hunting licenses to shoot buffalo that move into Montana during the winter. It was an attempt to prevent the spread of brucellosis from infected park animals to Montana cattle herds.

Activist stages hunger strike in jail

TOLEDO, Ohio — An environmental activist arrested for chaining himself to a train hauling contaminated soil refused food Tuesday in a jail hunger strike, and officials said the train had left for another, unidentified state.

Thomas Adams, 29, chained himself to one of the 26 rail cars for three hours Monday at the CSX Transportation freight yard in suburban Walbridge.

Adams, a member of Stop Trashing Our Resources in Michigan, was protesting plans to dump the soil in a Toledo-area landfill. His group claims Michigan is deregulating some hazardous wastes so they can be shipped to out-of-state landfills.

Trump plans Plaza Hotel conversion

NEW YORK — Developer Donald Trump announced plans Tuesday to convert most of the Plaza Hotel into luxury condominiums, a move that could cost his ex-wife, Ivana, her job running the posh Fifth Avenue landmark.

A conversion would bring Trump about $750 million, nearly double the $390 million he paid for the hotel three years ago. That money would help in the flamboyant entrepreneur's efforts to reduce enormous debts on his collection of other properties, which range from Florida condos to Atlantic City casinos.

The plan must be approved by the state attorney general, who has not received any written proposal, a spokesman said.

Atlantis tests manual tracking system

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Atlantis zig-zagged in the wake of the huge Gamma Ray Observatory on Tuesday as its astronauts tried out a manual system for chasing down targets in orbit.

The crew also spotted fellow space travelers, two Soviet cosmonauts.

The astronauts bypassed the ship's rendezvous radar, used for space tracking in the past, and used the ancient mariner's way of steering by the stars.

"We are trying some experimental techniques we can use in the future should we run into a problem with the rendezvous radar," said flight director Wayne Hale.

The celestial game of tag and a brief conversation over ham radio with schoolboys in the Cleveland area were diversions for the five Atlantis astronauts from preparations for Wednesday's return to Earth after five days in space.

The landing, at Edwards Air Force Base in California, is scheduled for 10:33 a.m. EDT. The weather forecast was good.

First lady calls new book 'trash, fiction'

WASHINGTON — Barbara Bush said Tuesday that a racy new biography about her predecessor, Nancy Reagan, is "trash and fiction."

"Asks if she had read the book, Mrs. Bush said she hadn't and didn't intend to."

But she said the book's assertion that she gave Mrs. Reagan a sprayed white vine wreath one Christmas and that Mrs. Reagan promptly gave it to a friend is flat-out wrong.

"That's why I think the book's fiction," Mrs. Bush told reporters during a White House reception. "I did not give her a wreath for Christmas. Every window in this house has a wreath on it. If you're going to make up a story, you can certainly make up a better one than that."

The book, by Kitty Kelley, began appearing in book stores Monday.

71-year-old dies after misdiagnosis

WASHINGTON — A 71-year-old man complaining of abdominal pain died after government doctors misdiagnosed his ruptured aneurysm and sliced an artery, the Veterans' Affairs Department said Tuesday.

The agency is accepting responsibility for six deaths at its hospital in North Chicago, Ill. The case of the unidentified 71-year-old is one "that was clear cut," said VA spokesman Dave West.

"Despite this patient's symptoms and deteriorating condition, there is no documentation in the medical record to determine whether the staff fully appreciated the seriousness of his condition," VA investigators said.

Report calls for major college math reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Research Council on Tuesday urged universities and colleges to make radical changes in undergraduate math instruction, including making better use of computers and even developing new teaching methods.

Changes are needed, said the council's Committee on the Mathematical Sciences in the Year 2000, because college students' interest in majoring in math is at an all-time low, because few students take advanced courses and because fewer than 10 percent of those are minorities.

The report noted that women receive only one in five doctoral degrees in mathematics and that senior mathematics faculty members are retiring faster than they can be replaced.

"In the United States, we have achieved pre-eminent status in mathematics research," said the committee's chairman, William E. Kirwan, of Maryland at College Park, added, "we must develop mathematics education to a comparable level."

The report, entitled "Moving Beyond Myths," said undergraduate mathematics is the second largest discipline taught at colleges and universities. Each year 3.5 million students enroll in math courses.

But the report said that about two-thirds of all college mathematics enrollments are in high school courses — below the level of calculus.

While 3.6 million ninth graders enrolled in math courses in 1972, the report said the number dropped to 294,000 by the class' freshman year in college. Only 1,000 majored in math, 2,700 earned masters and 400 received doctoral degrees by 1986.

Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl F. Gates responds to supporters who greeted him Tuesday.

Police chief resumes command

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city's much-criticized police chief resumed command Tuesday after being briefly furloughed and said his critics are more concerned about whether he keeps his job than the police beating of a black motorist.

"I think a lot of people have forgotten about Rodney King. I don't think those people really care about Rodney King at all," Chief Daryl F. Gates said, referring to a handful of protesters outside police headquarters.

"Gates! Gates! Gates!" cheered about 200 police employees as a giant blue ribbon was lowered from the roof of police headquarters.

"It's nice to be back," the chief said. "Let's get all this behind us."

The Police Commission last week had placed Gates on a 60-day paid leave pending an investigation of the Police Department following the March 3 beating of King, which was videotaped by a witness and broadcast nationally.

Superior-Court Judge Ronald M. Sobigian issued a temporary restraining order Monday allowing Gates to return to work. However, the judge refused to approve a deal brokered by the City Council to reinstate Gates permanently, as scheduled a hearing on the matter for April 25.

Gates said Tuesday he could still work with the Police Commission.

"If they don't have a private agenda or a political agenda we'll do very well," he told reporters at City Hall.

Asked about his relationship with Mayor Tom Bradley, who urged him to resign, Gates said: "I don't know if there is a relationship. We need to restore that relationship."

Utility line failure blacks out Oahu

HONOLULU (AP) — A transmission-line failure knocked out power throughout Hawaii's main island of Oahu on Tuesday morning, stranding people in elevators, tangling traffic and disrupting some communications in the tourist mecca.

Lights went out at 8:34 a.m. (2:34 p.m. EDT) at Hawaiian Electric Co. said it would take several hours to restore service to the island, which has a population of 850,000.

Americans reluctant to change eating habits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national survey released Tuesday found impressive gains in Americans' knowledge and attitudes about the dangers of high blood cholesterol but little resulting change in their eating habits.

Researchers called the results puzzling and said they think people are doing more to improve the way they eat than the survey suggests. "It's not disappointing; we're just sort of befuddled," said Beth Schucker, who directed the study. "Everything else was moving along quite dramatically in a positive direction."

Overall, she said, two 1990 surveys by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute show that doctors and the public are becoming better informed about cholesterol and the importance of a good diet.

"Other studies indicate "Americans are changing their diet and are adopting components of a heart-healthy diet," she added.

The institute's 1990 survey of the public found that 65 percent of adults reported having their blood cholesterol level tested, up from 35 percent in 1983.

In addition, 74 percent of Americans said they believed that lowering high blood cholesterol would have a large effect on coronary heart disease, up from 64 percent in 1983.

At the same time, however, just 24 percent said they were trying to lower their cholesterol through dietary changes, virtually no change from 23 percent in 1986. Two percent were taking drugs to lower cholesterol, up from 1 percent in 1983.

Dr. James Cleeman, coordinator of the institute's National Cholesterol Education Program, agreed with Ms. Schucker that the survey understates what Americans are doing to improve their diets. Many people may be eating better without thinking of it as an effort to reduce their cholesterol levels, he said.

He added that more than 50 percent of those surveyed by the Food and Drug Administration in 1988 reported they had reduced their consumption of dietary fats.

FDA warns of vet drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials said Tuesday they are on the lookout for an illegal veterinary drug that last year sickened 135 people in Spain who ate liver from animals treated with the drug.

The Food and Drug Administration said it was investigating possible domestic use of the drug, clenbuterol, and that it has asked Customs officials to watch for attempts to bring it into the United States. The FDA said there were reports the drug may have been used to develop muscles in cattle, sheep and swine exhibited at livestock shows earlier this year in Fort Worth and San Antonio in Texas and Oklahoma City.

The Agriculture Department's Food Safety Inspection Service will conduct tests this month to determine if residues of the drug are present in tissues collected from suspect show animals, the FDA said. The agency also said it has asked state agriculture departments to help prevent use of the drug.

Clenbuterol is approved for use in Canada and in some European and South American nations to treat respiratory problems in horses.

Officials to negotiate tribal lake claims

BOISE — Two state officials have been appointed to negotiate with the Coeur d'Alene Indian Tribe over the tribe's claim to the bed and banks of most of Lake Coeur d'Alene.

The state Land Board was advised Tuesday that the tribes, through attorney Raymond Givens of Coeur d'Alene, claim that an 1873 executive order gave the tribe control of all of the lake except its northern tip-plus lake banks.

It was a claim first raised years ago, but never pursued. "I understand the state of Idaho claims ownership of these same waters," the letter from Givens said. "Various events now require that the Coeur d'Alene Tribe quiet its title to these waters. The Coeur d'Alene Tribe is prepared to file suit to do so."

The Land Board discussed the matter briefly, but appointed board member Auditor J.D. Williams to negotiate with tribal representatives, along with the state's top water expert, Deputy Attorney General Clive Strong, head of the Natural Resources Division of the attorney general's office.

State considers power company plan

BOISE — State regulators are reviewing Washington Water Power Co. proposals to extend for another year its rate rebate program and to implement an experimental competitive bidding plan for extra power beginning in 1992.

The Public Utilities Commission has indicated its support for extension of the rate rebate program, that would return about $2.3 million to Idaho customers over the next year. But it will not make a final decision until late this month.

The program was initiated last year with over $2.2 million being returned to customers from unexpected revenue increases or cost decreases related to water conditions, off-system power sales and changes in power supply contracts.

If formally approved, the new round of rate rebates would begin July 1, averaging about 2.5 percent.

High court hears murder case appeal

LEWISTON — The Idaho Supreme Court on Tuesday took under advisement the appeals of two Indians convicted in the 1987 slaying of a Coeur d'Alene man over a minor drug debt by a jury they contended was chosen from a population containing an unacceptably low number of Indians.

William Daulton and Thomas Gabbour maintained they were denied a fair trial before a jury of their peers because their trials were held in Kootenai County instead of Benewah County, which has a larger Indian population.

The issue has been raised in other cases, and in the mid-1980s, a district judge ordered selection procedures of potential jurors in Bingham County, where much of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes reservation is located, revamped to draw in a larger portion of the Indian population there.

Man spears $1,500 in low-tech caper

COEUR D'ALENE — The weapon was primitive, but police said the man who used a homemade spear to rob a Coeur d'Alene convenience store escaped with $1,500 to $1,600 in cash.

Coeur d'Alene Police Lt. Greg Surplus said the suspect was seen fleeing the Petro-Stop store shortly before 7 p.m. Sunday in a tan station wagon. The car was last seen heading north on U.S. Highway 95. Surplus said Monday that the spear had a wooden shaft and an attached blade. The suspect was described as white, about 30 years old, 6 feet tall with brown hair and a thin build.

Electric spark ignites mobile home fire

GARDEN CITY — A mobile home fire that critically burned a Garden City man apparently started when an electric spark ignited propane.

Larry Todd Flynn, 23, was in critical condition early Tuesday at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center in Salt Lake City with second- and third-degree burns over 65 percent of his body, a nursing supervisor said.

Cole-Collister Fire Marshal Neil Coburn said reports of an explosion, initial blue-colored flames, plus the remains of two propane bottles in the ruins of the mobile home indicated a gas explosion early Monday.

The mobile home itself was all-electric, and Coburn said investigators did not know why the two gas bottles were inside.

V.A. hospital eyes ward consolidation

BOISE — The Veterans Administration Medical Center in Boise is considering combining two wards but does not plan to turn away veterans who need help, a hospital spokesman says.

"We're not losing the beds," Bill Turner said Monday. "They're still going to be there." Rumors that the hospital would close beds because of a budget shortfall are unfounded, Turner said.

Andrus picks Ryals as employment chief

BOISE (AP) — Connie Ryals, an administrator in the state Department of Administration, will take over as director of the Department of Employment from fired director Julie Kilgrow.

"I do like a challenge," Ryals, 38, said Tuesday at a news conference to announce that Gov. Cecil Andrus appointed her to succeed Kilgrow. The assignment starts immediately.

Kilgrow, who headed the 600-employee agency for four years under Andrus, was fired by the governor March 29. He cited management and morale problems within the agency. The new director said she didn't know much about the problems, but would set to work immediately to correct them.

"I don't have a whole lot of knowledge about what was going on," she said.

Ryals, a Nampa native, worked for Albertson's Inc., for 17 years, rising to manager of the sales audit department. In 1987, she joined the Andrus administrative team, heading the Division of Internal Operations.

She has served on the board of directors of United Way and the Boise YWCA and was chairman of the governor's Intergency Committee on Affirmative Action 1987-89. She was co-chairman of the Idaho State Employee Centennial Event in 1990 and was director of the Employee Assistance Program from 1990-91.

"She is a strong, capable leader who has a proven record as a manager and administrator in business and in government," Andrus said. "She understands how to build a team and make it function efficiently."

Kilgrow claimed she was fired by Andrus because she was a strong-minded administrator who was a woman. Andrus has refused to discuss the sexism-allegation, but acknowledged Tuesday that he went looking for a strong female administrator to succeed Kilgrow.

"I worked to replace the director with a woman," the governor said. "But it had to be a qualified woman. It was an important part of my decision-making process."

"I treat people the way I want to be treated," she said.

When asked about Kilgrow's criticism of Andrus, Ryals said, "I just don't share the opinions of Julie on this subject."

He used the words "shallow and petty" and "uninformed" to describe those who think he's against women in top management positions. "I don't plan to change," he said.

Referring to Ryals, Andrus said, "She has strength of character and the ability to deal with people."

Ryals said moving into the $61,900 per year job is a big step. But she said no other state agency fits her management policies so closely.

"I treat people the way I want to be treated," she said.

When asked about Kilgrow's criticism of Andrus, Ryals said, "I just don't share the opinions of Julie on this subject."

McClure discounts resignation rumors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Idaho Republican Sen. James McClure said Tuesday he has no reason to believe a published report that Energy Secretary James Watkins has submitted his resignation and he is in line for the job.

"I don't know a thing about it and I didn't know anything about it until it appeared in 'The Energy Daily,'" McClure said.

The Washington-based publication, in its Tuesday edition, said it had learned that Watkins, a retired Navy admiral, had submitted his resignation to the White House of effective July 1, and the letter had been forwarded from Chief of Staff John Sununu to President Bush.

A Watkins aide denied the energy secretary had any plans to leave.

The Energy Daily said a leading candidate to succeed Watkins was McClure, who retired from the Senate last year after three terms and is now associated with a Boise law firm and a partner in a Washington lobbying firm.

"I talked to Admiral Watkins today," McClure said. "He knows nothing of it. He's signed no letter of resignation... As far as we can tell, it's a total fabrication."

McClure, who was mentioned as a possible cabinet nominee for either the Energy or Interior departments when Bush took office, labeled as immaterial speculation about whether he would be interested in the Energy Department job should it open up. He served as chairman of the Senate Energy Committee when the Republicans controlled the chamber during the first half of the 1980s.

"The admiral is in the job, and I hope he stays there," McClure said. "I'm not seeking a job of any kind."

In Boise, Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, who served as interior secretary during the Carter administration, discounted the published report as an occupational hazard of a rumor-plagued national capital.

But after being at odds with the Energy Department for the past several years over nuclear waste, Andrus said McClure "would be a strong candidate if there was a vacancy... Jim McClure would be a good person for the state of Idaho's position and attitude and for the whole nation."

Mayor firmly against proposed incinerator

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — Armed with a new state law ratifying the moratorium on incinerator construction, Mayor Wayne Egan is confident a controversial commercial medical waste incinerator will not be built in his community.

But President Jack Woods of EnviroHealth, the company battling to build the $4.5 million project that could burn up to 50 tons of waste a day, notified American Falls officials he plans to go ahead with the project, moratorium or not.

"He called me," Egan said, "and asked for a conditional use permit application so he could start building the incinerator here."

The community, backed by Gov. Cecil Andrus and the Legislature, has been locked in a battle with EnviroHealth for a year over the incinerator. Local citizens claim it poses a health risk with tons of waste from out of state for disposal and will drastically undermine property values in American Falls.

The company contends the incinerator would meet the strictest anti-pollution standards and is needed to dispose of the medical waste generated in Idaho.

EnviroHealth spokeswoman Barbara Orr, who told lawmakers the company would go to court if legislation attempting to block the project was passed, declined to comment on advice of corporate attorneys.

But Egan said that as far as he is concerned the bill passed by lawmakers and signed by Andrus last week makes clear there will be no medical waste incinerator construction before July 1992.

"I would suggest he is not going to start building here," the mayor said.

While EnviroHealth received a state air quality permit a year ago before Andrus imposed the administrative moratorium, it has yet to obtain local planning and zoning approval for the incinerator. Its zoning application has been pending since October 1989, and Egan said the company has yet to respond to a series of questions posed by zoning officials last year.

Radon hazard drives agency from building

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation is moving out of its headquarters building, because a long-ago uranium processing operation left behind contaminated soil.

The agency said Tuesday it will start moving April 19 from the site on Warm Springs Ave., where it has been for the last 21 years, across Boise to Fairview Ave. The headquarters building will be torn down to facilitate cleanup of the contaminated soil.

The hazard involved is radon. The U.S. Department of Energy says small amounts of radon emitted from the soil may present a long-term health hazard. Radon is a colorless, odorless, tasteless radioactive gas formed through the radioactive decay of radium, an element found in uranium ore.

Radon can form particles that can attach themselves to smoke and dust particles and lodge in the lungs of humans.

The agency said its Warm Springs site was headquarters for a uranium processing operation in the late 1960s. Some of the ore from a mine at Lowman was processed at the Boise site. Spillage from that operation contaminated the soil.

The Department of Energy, which directed a cleanup of the Lowman site, and as part of the cleanup, contaminated soil at Boise must be removed.

Information director Rick Just said tests have shown low levels of radon gas at most of the headquarters site, but much of the contaminated soil is under the existing building.

"The buildings go, and so do we. The structures will be torn down, and the contaminated soil will be stripped off and hauled back to the mine at Lowman," Just said.

Once the site is decontaminated, it will be sold. The agency will use temporary facilities for the next two years.

Just said the agency expects to construct a permanent headquarters building by the Idaho Department of Agriculture building near the old state prison site.

Despite perceptions, Idaho doesn't meet its energy needs

Think Idaho's energy future is secured by the tumbling waters of the Snake River that have allowed Idahoans to enjoy cheap electricity all these years?

Think again. A new report from Idaho Power says more than 68 percent of the electricity generated by the utility in 1990 came from its plants outside Idaho.

And those are coal-fired plants, the kind that don't depend on the snowpack in the Wyoming Rockies. They are licensed by other states' public utilities commissions, partly owned by out-of-state utilities, run on Utah, Montana and Wyoming coal and absolutely outside the control of Idaho regulators, ratepayers and irrigators.

That sobering fact should make Idahoans think long and hard about the decisions they make in the next few years.

Idaho has been a net importer of energy for years, but that's not the perception. Most Idahoans still believe we still have power to burn.

In the fifth year of a drought that shows no signs of lifting, that's dangerous.

In 1985-86, the last good water year in Idaho, 6 million acre feet of water flowed into Brownlee Reservoir of the Snake River, the key storage facility in Idaho Power's hydroelectric system, between April through July. Last year, the volume was 2.85 million acre feet. Projections for this year are 2.2 million.

Reservoirs above Brownlee are 56 percent full, while the normal for this time of year is 70 percent.

That leaves the utility with a huge electricity deficit, which will be made up by the smokestacks in the high deserts of Oregon, Nevada and Wyoming.

Those three plants — Boardman, Valley and Jim Bridger — accounted for 5.9 million megawatt hours, or 49 percent of Idaho Power's generation last year. In a normal year, almost two-thirds of the power would have come from the utility's Snake River hydro plants.

But even in years with normal water conditions, more than half of Idaho Power's electricity is generated outside the state since two of the company's three largest hydro facilities, Oxbow and Hells Canyon dams, are in Oregon.

The hard truth is that even if the rains resume tomorrow, Idaho's energy future is outside the control of Idahoans.

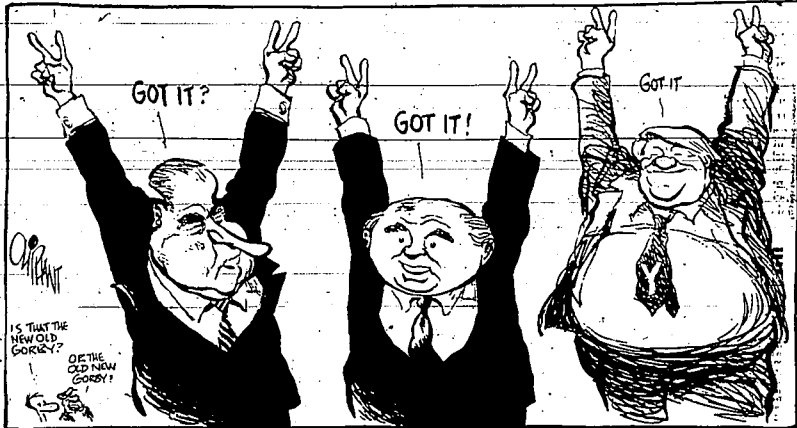

We need to take it back.

The best and cheapest way is through conservation, and that will require more than lip-service from the state and Idaho Power. We need realistic incentives to conserve electricity, more energy-efficient building standards and a fresh look at alternatives that can generate cheap energy in abundance in Idaho, such as solar and wind energy.

More importantly, we have to stop making the same assumptions about the future that we have made about the past.

The cost, and potentially the scarcity, of electricity should be a major part of our planning for the future.

The Snake River hydro system has served southern Idaho well for 100 years, but it is strained past its capacity. Idaho is no longer the Saudi Arabia of Northwest energy-producers; it's the America.

Consider year-round school 1st

The future of our community and our country rests largely on the quality of education that our children receive. The upcoming $20 million bond issue is designed to address the needs of Twin Falls public schools until well into the next decade. I would like to commend the Long-Range Planning Committee for their diligence and devotion to the task of planning for these needs.

However, I am not sure that they have adequately considered all the options available. At the public hearing at the high school a few months ago, there was considerable interest and discussion about "year-round" schools. (Year-round refers to schools being open all year, and students attend three of four quarters.) Yet it was abundantly clear during the meeting and afterwards in discussions with committee members that the committee had scarcely considered the concept of year-round education, a concept which is gaining in popularity, particularly in the Western United States.

The benefits of year-round schooling are several. It effectively increases the classroom space by 33 percent with only modest cost increases for utilities and janitorial services. Parents who cannot take vacations with their children during the summer because of work requirements would be able to do so during another season. Teachers might be able to earn their continuing education credits in certain college courses that they could not take during the summer, and it frees tax dollars for other community needs.

I have two children who would benefit directly from a new high school, and I must admit that the idea of a new school is appealing. However, I don't make financial decisions on the bond issue on a whim. The School Board has been challenged to publicly address the pros and cons of year-round schools, and until they do so and provide the public with the information they need to make an educated decision, I cannot support the bond issue.

Don't forget returning veterans

Last night my husband and I went to the airport to greet another serviceman coming home from the Persian Gulf. Each and every homecoming that we've attended has been thrilling and heartwarming. We look forward to greeting our own son soon.

When the war ended and our loved ones began returning, the news media, politicians, and general public were all there. Were the first few lucky ones to return more important than the last ones to come home? They all served their country equally and all deserve the same homecoming. Come on, Magic Valley, where that is love you know how to show? Come on, news media, let the public know when these homecomings happen, so everyone can be there. We do our best to let you know when they are coming, so you can be on it.

Spe. Jay Nielson came home last night to the loving arms of his wife and child, and I didn't even see a word about it in this morning's paper. Please don't let these wonderful men and women fall through the cracks of our love. They all deserve our appreciation, a hug, and a "job well done."

CSI student pursuing dream

I had some really good excuses why I couldn't go back to school and I used them for years. But then I started checking out CSI. You know, the little junior college in the town where I grew up. What could it possibly have for me, especially since I had attended a university? It certainly could not handle the problems and excuses that were keeping me out of school. Or could it?

Excuse No. 1 — No money. I soon had an application for a Pell Grant, assistance filling out the forms and then an award letter stating that my classes would all be covered by the grant. But then what about my books? I was given a job on campus in the business office making above minimum wage and my work hours were scheduled around my classes. I have been encouraged to take time off to study when a test has me stressed out.

Excuse No. 2 — Who was going to tend my 4-year-old? I was then shown the Child Care Center on campus at CSI. What an amazing place! Daniel loves Teacher Annette and has learned not only his ABC's, but how to play well with others. There is even a scholarship that pays for his care while I am in class.

Excuse No. 3 — I'm too old. All the other students will be right out of high school and high school was 15 years ago for me. I soon found out that the average age of the CSI student is 31. I have found wonderful friends and support with those of my own age and situation. There are also several clubs on campus to help re-entry students.

So the result of all this support? I am a full-time student at CSI and am finally obtaining my dream of being a nurse and this letter is my way of saying "thank you" to CSI.

Also endangered: Fishermen

As former fishing writer, Swen, for The Times-News, I wrote a column published April 5, 1981. In that column my subject was the Cavanaugh Rapids in Hagerman Valley. My fishing partner for the day was the outdoor writer for the Idaho State Journal, Jack Jorgensen. In the article I noted that in six casts, I had hooked five fish. Jack, who was the pro, hooked six fish in six casts.

Ten years later, April 6, 1991, same location, same fly pattern, same time of day, in three hours fishing only one trout was hooked. The area, featuring hundreds of small waterfalls, was filled with plant growth, and many of the holes were covered with a slime-type growth.

We have all read in the papers that over one acre foot per day of fish feces are put into the Middle Snake River daily. The government concern is for endangered species (snails). My concern is another endangered species ... the fisherman.

Man who shot suspect wronged

I am writing this letter in protest of the attitude taken by the authorities towards the action taken by John Harold Warren, known to his many friends and people he went to school with as Harold. I find that the general feeling, instead of the authorities checking to see if Harold could be charged with aggravated battery for shooting a burglarly suspect in the foot, they should be checking to see how much of a reward or medal they could give him for making possible the breaking up of a burglary ring that has possibly been opening for some time, and by catching the burglarly officers have not been able to catch up with. And without that shot in the foot, it could have kept on operating for an indefinite length of time.

We can see no reason for Sheriff Gold being upset over this so-called indiscriminate firing, as there was no other action that could have been taken that would have solved the case. It also saved his department a lot of time and trouble.

John Harold Warren is also a returning veteran, even though he returned 45 years ago, and is entitled to the honor and respect of the community. If any charges are brought against him, the county commissioners and all the chambers of commerce should take up a collection to pay for all his legal expenses.

This morning's paper lists 150 car burglaries reported in the last three months. It looks like the police could use all and any help they could get.

Stallings not representing Gem

Concerning "Stallings says flap between Andrus, DOE will cost INEL," Saturday, March 30:

I think Andrus, elected governor of Idaho, is right to stop storage of radioactive waste here, until it is proven safe to store in out soil types, which don't even hold water.

Stallings is also Idaho's elected official, probably with Israeli and big Eastern bank-supported PAC money. However, he should represent our interests and support our people, livestock, wildlife, etc. Our present generation may prosper to pay for an irresponsible government, just to have our prosperity rot away from this waste.

I would certainly hope he is wrong when he said "Federal courts probably will uphold the concept of federal supremacy over states' rights." I don't think we voted to give Stallings our constitutional rights to squander in Washington. We sent him to represent us.

IEA's effect in Idaho overblown

I can only assume that the writer of the incessant Times-News' jeremiads against the Idaho Educational Association was bitten by a unionized teacher at some point in his formative years.

It is perfectly legal for teachers to collect money voluntarily and contribute it to politicians whom the teachers believe will vote for laws the teachers want. Lawyers, doctors, ranchers, farmers and a host of other interest groups do the same thing.

And, given the fact that the Idaho Legislature is controlled by Republicans, the IEA's contributions don't give it a lock on favorable laws, but at most a hand up — which Idaho's teachers sorely need.

Why pick on teachers, who incidentally are poorly paid by comparison with other Western industrialized nations? (A secondary schoolteacher in West Germany, for example, earns $53,000 per year according to a broadcast I heard recently on PBS.)

Of course, teachers want more money, but then I never met a newspaper editor who believed he was paid enough, either. The same holds true for ditch diggers, baseball players, ministers and plumbers, by-the-by.

Your editorial of April 3 was truly awe-inspiring in its lack of logic — although no teachers have said what they want in any negotiations, you urge school board members not to agree with them.

Would your sage advice apply even if teachers insisted on contracts which would attack the problems of "curriculum, competency and overcrowding" — matters you say should be addressed before teachers get raises?

If we treat teachers as second-class citizens, all of us will suffer — even newspaperists that presumably need reporters and editors who can spell.

Lawmakers ignored people

In case you have not noticed, the property tax initiative of 1978 passed by the majority of the people has now been totally passed over by some wiser senators and a few more in the state House. Their will and knowledge of what is proper for property taxation in the state is superior to the will of the people.

The so-called "Truth in Taxation" procedure passed and signed by the governor during the past legislative session in all practical terms returns property taxation in the state of Idaho to exactly as it was prior to the initiative. About the only change is the governments now have to notify on at least a quarter-page advertisement, not in the less read legal sections of the most widely circulated papers.

"Give it a chance to work" — I'm already believe if my memory serves me correctly, we gave it about 88 years to work previously.

For what it is worth, I would recommend everyone owning property in the state of Idaho follow this reconstructed procedure very closely. Perhaps it is time for another initiative, only this time more binding. Maybe better, still, try to retain a two-year memory when the next election rolls around.

Contractor for Bliss reputable

A recent article addressed problems with the ceiling insulation at the Bliss gym. While problems exist, several items warrant clarification.

In 1986, McClure Engineering and Jensen, Raizaff and Unrau (JRU), Architects, were retained to perform an energy audit on the gym.

Several conservation measures were identified with paybacks of less than 10 years and therefore qualified for matching funding under the DOE ICP conservation program.

Upon receipt of a grant, McClure Engineering and JRU, Architects were retained to prepare construction documents.

JRU designed window and vestibule modifications, while McClure Engineering prepared drawings and specifications for ceiling and light measures.

The project was bid and Hobco Construction won the contract for the architectural modifications.

The work Hobco accomplished with their own personnel was completed without problems.

The ceiling insulation was applied by an insulation subcontractor and did not proceed so smoothly. The spray-on cellulose insulation, similar to that present in the CSI gym and the ISU Holt Arena, is subject to separation if proper bonding is not achieved. Arrangements were made to have an inspector on the site when the material was applied. However, the subcontractor failed to show up on the day scheduled, but then went to work without notice several days later.

Subsequently, several patches of insulation have fallen to the floor. Initially those areas were repaired with the hope that the problem was limited.

As additional segments fell, it became clear that more extensive corrective measures were required.

The insulation subcontractor has indicated he is unwilling to perform the required work.

Hobco has elected to pursue corrective measures with their own personnel. McClure Engineering is working with Hobco to determine what solution is appropriate. That information will be provided to the school board in their April meeting.

Those who have been in the construction business realize the frustration of having a subcontractor fail to perform.

It has been my experience that Hobco is one of the more professional and conscientious contractors in southern Idaho. Hobco and McClure Engineering have stated their commitment to work with the Bliss School District until all problems are resolved.

We have appreciated the school board's cooperation and understanding in the past, and hope that that attitude will continue until this matter is resolved.

Japan wants Soviets to return islands

TOKYO — Parliament approved a resolution Tuesday demanding the return of four Soviet-held islands and expressing hope the dispute will be settled during Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's upcoming visit.

The resolution, which unanimously passed the lower house of Parliament, restated Japan's demand for the return of the islands of Shikotan, Kunashiri, Etorofu and Habomai. The islands have been occupied by the Soviet Union since Japan's defeat in World War II.

The lower house previously has adopted 14 similar measures.

The resolution said Japan "hoped strongly" that improved Japan-Soviet ties would be forged with a solution of the territorial issue during Gorbachev's visit April 16-19.

China says crackdown prevented chaos

BEIJING — Premier Li Peng on Tuesday defended China's crackdown on dissent in 1989, saying it had helped prevent the chaotic conditions prevailing in post-Communist East Europe.

"China today might be bogged down in economic chaos and decline and political instability, no less severely than what is happening in some countries that used to practice socialism," Li said during his annual news conference after the closing of the national legislature.

Soviet army begins leaving Poland

BORNE-SULINOWO, Poland — A train carried away Soviet missile launchers and 60 soldiers from a formerly top-secret military base Tuesday, beginning the Red Army's withdrawal from Poland.

But Polish and Soviet negotiators remained at odds over when the rest of the Soviet Union's 50,000 soldiers would leave. Their departure will end a deployment that started 47 years ago when the Red Army chased out the German occupiers and then stayed on to prop up a series of pro-Moscow governments.

During months of tense negotiations, Poland has demanded that all the Soviet troops be pulled out by the end of this year, as is planned for Hungary and Czechoslovakia. The Soviets say they will not vacate Poland before the end of 1993.

Salvadoran rebels claim victories

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — While peace negotiators held their sixth day of talks, rebels claimed Tuesday that they had killed or wounded 186 Salvadoran soldiers during government offensives this month.

"The armed forces maintain offensive actions against our territories," said a clandestine radio broadcast of the rebel Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front.

The army said it could not confirm the front's claims.

The guerrillas said the military is pushing offensives in the eastern provinces of Usulután and San Miguel, in the northern provinces of Chalatenango and Cabanas and on Guazapa Mountain 15 miles north of San Salvador.

"In response to these operations ... FMLN units took control last night of the town of Quetzaltepeque," the rebel broadcast said.

Gorbachev proposes halt to strikes, rallies

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, saying he was trying to avert a national "catastrophe," on Tuesday proposed a nationwide moratorium on strikes, rallies and demonstrations.

Gorbachev's proposal came as he grappled with growing challenges to his authority. Striking coal miners kept up demands for his resignation; Bystorians called for a general strike, and lawmakers in Georgia declared independence for their republic.

"We face the danger of economic collapse," Gorbachev told the Federation Council, consisting of top national officials and the leaders of the 15 Soviet republics.

"Today we have to act together, not separately, to unite all the forces of society, to forget about all disputes. We have to act so as not to allow our country to (fall into) a catastrophe," he said in an impassioned appeal that was broadcast in part on national television.

Gorbachev proposed the moratorium as part of a package of "anti-crisis measures," including a stepped-up effort to conclude a new Union Treaty to hold the republics together.

Presidential spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko said Gorbachev proposed "a moratorium on all strikes, demonstrations, public meetings and other political acts that may destabilize the situation in the country."

It was unclear, however, whether Gorbachev was urging the Supreme Soviet legislature to outlaw strikes and street protests, or seeking voluntary restraint from disgruntled workers.

Asked by reporters whether the president wanted a legal ban on such activities, Ignatenko said: "The mechanism for implementing the president's proposal has not been discussed."

Previous efforts to forbid strikes and demonstrations have been ignored. Despite a three-week ban on rallies in Moscow, an estimated 100,000 people marched through the city on March 28 in support of Gorbachev's rival, Russian leader Boris N. Yeltsin.

Soviet soldiers seize another building in Lithuania

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet soldiers on Tuesday seized a driving school in the Lithuanian capital, and President Vytautas Landsbergis expressed fears the seizure could mark a new round of Kremlin actions against his republic.

The Lithuanian parliament's information bureau said the school building, which was seized early Tuesday, belongs to the republic. It formerly belonged to a military youth organization, and the Soviet army plans to use it for training recruits.

The Lithuanian statement said Algimantas Norvilas, a member of the Supreme Council legislature and supervisor of the school, protested the takeover, "but was threatened with a gun" and forced to leave.

"The action was carried out by armed soldiers in camouflage uniforms and bulletproof vests under the command of a Soviet army major who refused to identify himself or present his documents," the statement said.

Landsbergis said a protest demanding the withdrawal of the Soviet soldiers from the building would be lodged with the Kremlin.

Public donates to help London Zoo

LONDON (AP) — The specter of slaughter hanging over baby baboons, jungle cats and other hard-to-place species has brought in floods of donations to the London Zoo, which says it faces closure.

Government officials, however, say the nation's oldest zoo hasn't spent all of its last grant, and say they won't be blackmailed into bailing it out for the second time in three years.

But there is nothing like the image of animals in pain to rally Britain's animal lovers. "We have had people handing in 10-pound (about $80) notes at the reception desk for the Save Our Zoo appeal," said Tony Elischer, development director of the Royal Zoological Society, the private charity which runs the 165-year-old zoo. "Children send 10-pence pieces (18 cents) taped to cards with long explanations of why they want the zoo kept open," Elischer said.

Police consider suicide

in Rupert shooting case
 - RUPERT -- Police are investigating the early-morning shooting death of a 22-year-old Rupert man.

Rogelio "Roy" Maldonado Jr. was found dead in his home Tuesday morning with a single gunshot wound to the head. Minidoka County Coroner Arvin Hansen said.

Police found a .40-caliber automatic pistol inside the home and are investigating the case as a suicide. Officer Lew Jones of the Rupert Police Department said.

Girl listed in stable condition after 80-foot fall into canyon

TWIN FALLS -- The 11-year-old girl who fell nearly 80 feet into the Snake River Canyon Monday was still listed in stable condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Tuesday evening.

Andrea Kay Dawn Carroll was flown to the hospital after a 2½-hour rescue effort. She suffered a broken leg and numerous cuts and bruises in the fall.

Carroll and six other friends and family members were moving from Kansas to Salem, Ore., when car trouble forced the group to stop at the scenic overlook at the Hansen Bridge. She was playing with some other children when she slipped and fell over the canyon rim. Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Dave Benefield said.

Canal company makes plans to begin delivery on Monday

TWIN FALLS -- The Twin Falls Canal Co. plans to begin water delivery on Monday, if the weather permits.

Delivery will start at .75 miner inch per share. But the company will keep a close eye on natural flow and storage supplies during this dry year. Deliveries may be reduced to extend the irrigation season into October.

18-year-old receives sentence for stealing his father's safe

TWIN FALLS -- An 18-year-old Twin Falls man was sentenced Monday to 12 months in jail for stealing his father's business.

Jeffrey Pierce will spend 120 days in a northern Idaho correctional facility after which 5th District Judge Daniel Meehl will review the sentence and decide if he should begin serving the two-year minimum prison sentence or be placed on probation.

The two-to-five year burglary sentence is the result of Pierce's taking a 500-pound safe from the Mail Room, a Lywood Mall business owned by his father.

The safe was found several days after the theft, dumped on a side street and emptied of its contents -- $4,300 in cash and $3,600 worth of gold coins.

Meehl also handed Pierce identical sentences to be served at the same time for two other cases -- a grand theft involving several tools stolen from a Jerome man last year, and three additional burglary counts stemming from burglaries in and around Twin Falls in August.

3 fire trucks respond to blaze, man rescued without injury

TWIN FALLS -- Firefighters rescued a Twin Falls man from a burning home in the city's northwest corner Monday night.

Flames had already spread through part of a two-story wood frame house at 736 Robbins Ave. when firefighters arrived at about 6:30 p.m., Battalion Chief Fred Webb said.

Firefighters pulled one of the home's residents, Tony Stafford, from a ground floor bedroom in an area of the house unaffected by the fire, Webb said. Stafford could barely walk, Webb said.

The extreme heat had already blown out several windows by the time firefighters arrived. Sixteen firefighters and three trucks battled the flames for three hours.

The home is owned by Walt Blaylock of Twin Falls who was out of state Monday, Webb said. He estimated damage to the house at $60,000.

The fire began near a fireplace insert which was being used at the time of the blaze, Webb said. The cause of the fire is still being investigated, he said.

Hagerman board considers overcrowding

By Suzanne Hurbold
 Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN -- Hagerman's school chief suggested Monday night that the Hagerman School District solve its grade-school overcrowding problem by less-purchasing a portable classroom.

Superintendent Kenneth Black asked the School Board for permission to lease with the intent to buy a 24-foot-by-38-foot, $35,000 mobile, modular classroom as an alternative to building a new classroom at Hagerman Elementary School.

The unit would cost the district about $1,100 a month in lease fees, Black said. If the district continues to "make the payments, it will eventually own the building. But the board could return the structure to its owner if enrollment in the district drops off.

The trustees told Black to further research the costs for the next school year of installing the modular building, including the additional expenses of skirting for the mobile structure, building sidewalks and a ramp and hooking up the classroom to the sewer system.

One new teacher would be hired to staff the classroom, which would be used by a kindergarten class, Black said.

The cost would be at least partially covered by state lottery money, which the school receives once a year, Black said.

He told the board the modular building would be substantially cheaper than a permanent addition to the main structure, and that it would free up two classrooms in the building.

Black said he was wary of stalling out money for something more permanent when he couldn't predict what future enrollment in the school would be.

"If I had my crystal ball," Black said, "it would sure be nice to know what's going to happen."

"I don't know where all these people live and where they work," said Black, referring to parents of new students in the school.

Hagerman's elementary school has been facing overcrowded conditions for four years, and one classroom currently houses a 40-student fourth grade.

Black said that class is "team-taught" by two teachers and an aide, and therefore qualifies for accreditation, but that he would prefer to split the group into separate classes.

Strategy the key as high schoolers lock brains in cerebral combat

By Kirk Mitchell
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS -- Answering questions at a high school quiz tournament can be like shooting last-second free throws to win or lose a basketball game.

A high school senior pushes the button, if she answers the question correctly, her team goes on to Boise for the state championships. If not, the seven-person team stays home.

Question: Which state along tornado alley has the highest number of tornados a year?
 Her answer: Arkansas.

Her team stays home. The correct answer is Texas. A regional tournament sponsored by the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in Twin Falls Tuesday had that kind of intensity.

Two teams, Buhl, the Class A champion and Gooding, the Class B champion, will compete at the state championship April 26 and 27 in Boise. The competitions will be televised over Idaho's Public Broadcasting System network.

Players from 20 Magic Valley schools on Tuesday tested the referees on the fine points of rules. Their protests sometimes paid dividends for them in corrected point tallies.

Buhl's improved waste-water facility on line soon

By Bertilia L. Redfern
 Times-News correspondent

BUHL -- The city's project to improve its waste-water treatment facility is 90 percent complete.

Pressure testing on new pipe will be done Thursday and Friday.

Costs for the project are running very close to budget and the project is expected to be completed in May. Gary Winn, public works director, gave the council an update on the project at this week's City Council meeting.

The new aeration should be in place by May 1 and the city has received documentation on the efficiency rating for the aerators from the manufacturer.

The city is still looking into obtaining some type of compensation from the company it purchased the old aerators from. The aerators previously used at the facility did not operate at the efficiency level guaranteed by its manufacturer.

Mayor Ted Pence said he will meet with Scott Bybee, city engineer, later in the week to examine the budget and compare it to community block development grant funds to make sure everything is in line. Mayor Pence said this project has been a "tight rope" as far as funding is concerned.

In other business: Council members Marie Maier and Tom Tappen gave the City Council an update on the comprehensive plan for the city. The plan, which defines the growth impact area for Buhl, is almost completed in written form and will be available for the council's review within a few weeks.

The corresponding map is undergoing changes but it should be complete soon. A master map could be used as supporting documentation for the written plan and would be subject to constant change as the plan evolves. Until the map is complete, it won't be known if another public hearing will be needed before the council can adopt the plan.

The address committee in Buhl has approved a method for addressing property in the impact area around the city and the surrounding area. Approximately $5,000 will be needed for street and highway signs, which is not in the current budget.

There are currently four open seats on the Planning and Zoning Committee. Mayor Pence said the seven-member committee needs one person that lives in the impact area and three that live within the city limits.

The Buhl Economic Council reported that four people recently attended a day-long training session in Boise on becoming certified grant writers and administrators for state grants. The goal of the group is to have people from Buhl able to write and administer Idaho Community Development Block Grants.

Dump's next-door neighbor irate over renegade garbage

By Terri McAfee
 Times-News correspondent

RUPERT -- The Minidoka County interim landfill came under fire from an adjacent property owner at the county commissioners' meeting on Monday.

"You don't contain your garbage," E.J. Wight, who owns property east of the landfill, said.

Wight complained about the amount of paper trash caught up in his property line fence after last week's strong wind storm.

"No paper and plastic in the landfill would help 90 percent of the problems out there," Commissioner Lyle Barton said.

The county will look into building a portable fence closer to the site where the county currently is dumping, which Commissioner Clarence Bellem says should solve the problem.

The Republican Central Committee sent three names -- Max Vaughn, Lucrecia Reicker and Allen McKee -- to the commissioners as suggestions to replace County Assessor Launy Hansen, who resigned March 31.

Hansen resigned to work for the state tax commission.

Commissioners will hold an interview with the three candidates Monday. If the commissioners are unable to agree upon a person, the Republican Central Committee will have five days in which to make the selection.

Prosecuting Attorney Charles Creason asked the commissioners to set an effective date for the livestock confinement ordinance.

Creason suggested a minimum of six months be allowed before implementing the new ordinance to give the county time to prepare forms that will be required and to begin the inspections. The commissioners set Jan. 1, 1992 as the effective date.

A fee schedule for livestock permits is still being developed and will be presented before the Planning and Zoning Board later this month.

In other business, the Youth Law Center, representing a John Doe youth against the county since December 1987 -- when the youth was held as a juvenile in the county jail near adults -- agreed to dismiss its suit.

The center, based in San Francisco, agreed to dismiss the suit if the county agrees to hold juveniles in a separate facility away from adults -- which it now does -- and pays the attorney fees.

The county insurance carrier has agreed to pay the attorney fees, totaling $20,000, after the $1,000 deductible is met.

Jerome schools bursting at seams, says superintendent

By H.R. Weitzel
 Times-News correspondent

JEROME -- The Jerome schools have 72 more students than a year ago, and most classrooms are overcrowded.

"That's the word from Superintendent Will Brown, who told the Jerome School Board Monday night the problem is especially acute in the lower grades despite the fact that there are 21 fewer kindergarten students in the district than a year ago.

A bond issue election is scheduled for May 7 for a $4,895-million building and school improvement plan. The district plans to run split sessions for junior high school and high school students next year to accommodate the classroom shortage.

In other business, the board:

• Heard the Jerome Historical Society turn down the district's offer of a house at the high school because of the cost of moving the structure. The district had offered the house to the society at no cost, but it would have required $4,500 to move it to the museum site, plus an additional $4,500 for a foundation.

• Heard a review of the actions of the Idaho Legislature affecting public school funding. The Jerome School District stands to lose about $20,000 because of new legislation.

• Accepted a revised policy for procedures to be followed in the school in case of emergencies, including bomb threats.

County, federal officials confer on Hansen probe

BOISE (AP) — The attorney general's office at Boise plans to coordinate investigations into alleged securities violations by George Hansen, former Idaho congressman, and business associate John Scoresey. County prosecutors, state officials and federal authorities met Monday in the office of Attorney General Larry Echohlavik. "We'll try to coordinate the whole thing," said Jean McNeil, spokesman for Echohlavik. She said the investigation, shared by several jurisdictions, is in the "information-sharing stage."

"I can tell you the matter is being investigated aggressively at the federal level — the FBI," said Bannock County Prosecutor William Bacon. Hansen is a former Pocatello resident, where he served on the City Council and as mayor of Alameda. McNeil said the state wants federal authorities to take the lead in the investigation because federal penalties for securities fraud are stiffer. State authorities say an $18 million securities fraud involving Hansen, who was Idaho's 2nd District congressman for seven terms ending in 1984, and Scoresey, former field representative, is the largest ever in Idaho.

Minidoka hospital panel sets public meeting

The Times-News
RUPERT — The Minidoka Memorial Hospital Planning Committee will hold a public meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday at East Minico Junior High School. Minidoka, Cassia and east Jerome county residents are invited. The meeting will be a community-wide health care goal setting meeting — all those who attend will have an opportunity to comment on the area's health care system. The group will work together to generate a list of changes residents would like to see, according to Ramona Erwin, planning committee chairwoman. "The potential for high quality health care in the area is unlimited, but we want to make sure we understand residents' interests and health care needs before we make decisions about the future of local health care," Erwin said in a prepared statement. The goal setting meeting is a part of a larger community involvement effort by the hospital, called Community Health Care Services Program, which is facilitated by the Idaho

Rural Health Education Center in Boise. The program is helping the hospital assess local opinion on the health care system. In addition to the meeting, it includes: conducting a household survey, interviewing local opinion leaders about health care, examining local physician services and organizational and financial reviews of Minidoka Memorial. For further information, contact Randy Holom, hospital administrator, at 438-5551.

also used a lot of strategy. Minico High School team members declined to answer the last question in their match against Twin Falls High School. When Twin Falls played on the question and Minico players were asked if they would play, they declined. "It was a stall tactic that worked. If Minico had passed, the quizmaster could have fired off another 10-point question, and if Twin Falls answered it they could have tied with a 5-point follow up question. The final seconds ticked away and the time clock buzzed. Minico won the semifinals 115 to 90. "All is fair in love and war," said

Minico team member Chris Nelson, a senior. The team placed second in the Class A tournament behind Buhl. Here's a sampling of the questions: Q: Perhaps the most poisonous of the shellfish toxins compounds is tetrahydrodibenzopyrro-dioxin. What was the common name of this substance used by U.S. military forces as a defoliant during the Vietnam War? A: Agent Orange. Q: What group of native people created the ornately carved meeting houses of New Zealand? A: Maori. Seventy-five percent of the questions probe student knowledge of math and science and the remainder deal with English, literature, history, geography, government and current affairs. Tournament organizers draw from 58,000 questions and answers, to challenge students from the 85 Idaho high schools that participate. "Class A" schools, participating in the tournament were Buhl, Minico, Jerome and Twin Falls. Class B tournament schools were Bliss, Camas County, Castleford, Declo, Filer, Glenns Ferry, Gooding, Hagerman, Hansen, Kimberly, Murtaugh, Oakley, Raft River, Richfield, Shoshone and Wendell.

Trustee John Mavencamp suggested moving sixth-graders from the elementary school to Hagerman High School, thereby opening up an extra classroom in the grade school building. But high school principal Wayne filed and trustee Jim Hendrick objected to that idea. Hendrick argued that there might be parental objections to exposing sixth-graders to the older youngsters at the high school. He said Mavencamp thought that the high school had no room for another class, and that as larger classes from the elementary school move on to high school he will be hard-pressed to accommodate them. He said the upcoming junior high school classes are bigger than any current high school classes.

Any other business:
The board approved a enrollment policy under which the Hagerman schools will accept out-of-district students as long as enrollment within the district does not exceed capacity. The policy gives preference to children of staff members who live outside the district. Any out-of-district student currently enrolled in the Hagerman system will be allowed to continue attending classes in Hagerman.
The trustees said the Zone 5

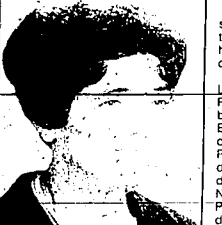

School Board elections will be held on May 21, with polls open from 2 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the high school gym. Nominating petitions must be submitted by May 3. Black said renomination for the Hagerman kindergarten will take place at the elementary school April 19 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Parents who want to enroll their children must present valid birth certificates proving that the children will be 5 years old by Aug. 15, along with records of immunization or signed waivers, and the children's Social Security numbers.

Owyhee ranchers get lease for state land, but pay a high price

BOISE (AP) — An association of Owyhee County ranchers has won a hotly contested lease for state grazing land for what Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa called an "astounding" premium bid of $165,252.

The Chipmunk Grazing Association, a group of 15 ranching families which has grazed cattle in an area south of Marsing for up to a century, was awarded a new 10-year lease on state grazing land at Tuesday's meeting of the state Land Board.

A day before, Chipmunk-Grazing engaged in a long bidding war with Mark McKenzie, Jordan Valley, Ore., who wanted to lease the same state land to graze sheep on it. It comprises four tracts totaling about 9,560 acres interspersed with federal and private land used by members of the Chipmunk association.

It was by far the most expensive premium ever paid to retain a state grazing lease. The state officials said in the last two years, about $45,000 was raised through conflict bidding. The Idaho Legislature considered two bills to end conflict bidding, one endorsed by the Land Board, but adjourned last month without taking final action on either one.

Sponsors said people who use state lands to graze cattle need to continue the leases to carry out range management plans and to make it worthwhile to improve the property.

Dave Tidwell, representing the association, said the ranching families felt it vital to keep the state land to make the cattle operations viable. He said the association was prepared to bid higher to keep the leases.

But he said the amount was so high that the land involved can't possibly produce enough revenue to pay for the leases.

Cenarrusa, a sheepman from Carey, said it was a situation where neither side could win. "I don't know how we are going to take care of these situations," he said.

"I think we should look toward avoiding these situations," Cenarrusa said. "That was an astounding amount. I didn't expect it to go that high."

Cenarrusa said he tried to get McKenzie and Chipmunk Grazing to strike "a business arrangement" so they both could be accommodated. He got nowhere.

"They both would have been better off," he said, but instead McKenzie has no grazing land and Chipmunk Grazing is stuck with a costly lease.

Tidwell said after the meeting he didn't feel McKenzie was making legitimate bids, because he would have no access to the property. But he said Chipmunk Grazing had to keep bidding, because McKenzie kept entering bids.

"You're blackmailed," he said. "There would have been a range war" if McKenzie won the bid and tried to move sheep over private land to the state land, Tidwell said.

"The state is the oldest associations in Idaho. Some of these families have been out there for 100 years," he said.

Revenue from state grazing land goes into the public school endowment fund. About 1.7 million acres is leased by the state under 10-year contracts. Don Hobbs, chief of the Bureau of Range Management, said only 5 percent of the leases receive conflicting bids.

Public-private task force begins scrutiny of rule-making process

BOISE (AP) — The Administrative Procedures Act, the system started 25 years ago for state agencies to adopt rules and regulations will come under review from two different directions this year.

The Idaho Legislature authorized an interim study on the subject. And Attorney General Larry EchoHawk on Tuesday announced formation of a public-private task force to review the APA and report to the legislative committee.

Lawmakers have noted for years that rules and regulations adopted by agencies have the force of law, even though the Legislature was supposed to make the laws. The Legislature won a major decision from the Idaho Supreme Court that it can reject or amend agency rules through concurrent resolution, not subject to veto by the governor.

"The APA is a highly technical but very important part of state government," EchoHawk said. "It lays out how state agencies will make and enforce their rules and since all of us...have to live by those rules, we need to make sure the law is operating in our best interest."

He said the task force was put together after several attempts to amend the law during this year's session. It said the current APA has never been overhauled since it was adopted 25 years ago.

Larry EchoHawk Rules have force of law

"We all recognize the need to update and streamline the APA, but piecemeal efforts often create more problems than they solve," he said. "What's needed is a comprehensive, cooperative effort."

The APA sets down requirements for agency rulemaking, including public notice and legislative review. The new hearing process for resolution of disputes arising from the rules, and a way for disputes to be taken to court.

Only the judiciary, the Legislature, the state militia and the Board of Corrections are exempt—from the APA.

The panel will include four legislators, Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise; Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Blackfoot; Sen. Dave Kerrick, Caldwell and Sen. Sue Keen, D-Boise.

Others are Mike DeAngelo, chief deputy attorney general for the Department of Health and Welfare; Park Garrard, president of the Idaho Motor Transport Association; Mike Gilmore, chief counsel for the Public Utilities Commission; Dale Goble, professor at the University of Idaho College of law and Jerry Mason, attorney for several cities and counties.

Others are Jack McMahon, chief deputy attorney general; Myran Schlecht, director of the Legislative Council; 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder; Jean -Uranga, commissioner for the Idaho State Bar Association and Hank Kenrick, U.S. West, representing the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry.

EPA worried mine flooding could contaminate drinking water

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Federal environmental officials are concerned that hazardous materials at the Bunker Hill Mine could contaminate drinking water if flooding of the mine is allowed by its cash-strapped owners.

"Our concern is that the company is not working quickly at getting out the hazardous material as it is getting out the equipment and cables," Nick Cato, an Environmental Protection Agency project manager, said Monday. "We're trying to get that (contaminated) stuff out of there before they abandon the mine."

Old electric transformers that may contain hazardous materials, such as polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, remain in the mine near Kellogg and could leak if the mine floods.

Bunker Hill Mining Co. officials say the company is working to safely remove such materials.

The company has filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws, and is removing equipment from the mine so creditors can sell it.

Bunker Hill's financial difficulties are prompting the concern about flooding.

Round-the-clock pumping is required to prevent flooding of the mine by water from area springs and groundwater.

But Bunker Hill soon may not be able to pay to for power needed to operate the pumps. Money set aside for electricity by the bankruptcy court will run out sometime this month.

The EPA is negotiating with Spokane, Wash.-based Washington

Water Power Co. to find another source to pay the mine's electricity bills and keep pumps operating.

Despite its lack of cash, the company is working to make sure all hazardous materials are removed from the mine. Bunker Hill president Alan Richardson said.

Bunker Hill is working to make sure all hazardous materials are removed safely from the mine before flooding begins, Richardson said.

"The company is doing everything it can to protect the environment," Richardson said. "Everything is very much on track and I'm delighted with the progress."

Less delighted is the EPA, which threatened Monday to ask past owners of the mine to pay for transformer removal should Bunker Hill Mining cease to exist.

"Right now, the mining company is liable because it is the one with possession of the mine," EPA attorney Alan Bakalian said from Seattle. "But if they can't do the work, we may look to one of these other companies."

EPA says former owners of the mine can be held accountable for cleanup expenses under Superfund guidelines. The mine is the center of the 21-square-mile Bunker Hill Superfund site, one of the largest such industrial cleanups in the nation.

Former owners include Gulf Resources & Chemical Corp., Limited Partnership and Minerals Corporation of Idaho. The latter two are controlled by area businessmen Duane Hagadone, Harry Magnusson and Jack Kendrick.

Board may create chancellor office

BOISE (AP) — In a move sure to spark stiff opposition from the schools, the state Board of Education is considering a proposal to elevate its executive director to chancellor with direct authority over the university and college presidents.

"We're considering this proposal as a way to free up the board's energy to focus on major issues and to forge a vision for the future of education in Idaho," Board President Gary Fay of Twin Falls said Tuesday after higher education officials were informed of the plan, proposed by Board member Keith Hinckley of Blackfoot.

"We're not looking to create a new layer of administration," Fay said in a statement.

The board's executive director is Rayburn Barton.

Although similar proposals have run into criticism in the past, Fay pointed out in an April 5 memorandum that of the four studies of higher education conducted in the past decade three "recommended the board place a strong chief executive at the helm of the higher education system."

Currently, the presidents of the three universities and Lewis-Clark State College report directly to the board. Under Hinckley's plan, solidly endorsed by Fay, they would report to the new chancellor, who would handle day-to-day operations of the system including relatively routine management decisions. The chancellor would also make recommendations to the board on compensation, campus master plans and the missions of the individual schools and oversee the board's legislative program.

Fay urged board members to adopt the proposal at their meeting next week in Coeur d'Alene.

"In recent years, we moved steadily toward a more unified system of higher education," Fay said in the memorandum. "A chancellor will have the ability to take that unification further, balancing regional concerns to best meet the needs of the entire state."

"A chancellor will also be able to take on a high profile and more effectively articulate the statewide vision established by the board," Fay said.

Widow triumphs in family land dispute

DENVER (AP) — Lawyers portrayed her as a money-grubbing former car hop, but the widow of a real estate baron had the last laugh. She won $750,000 after an 8-year-old dispute with her late husband's family company.

Best friend Van Schack-Dunkle, 72, claimed that the Van Schack family company cheated her out of millions of dollars through a shady land deal involving the site of the new Denver airport.

Her lawyer, District Court jury returned its verdict against the family Monday. It deliberated three hours.

"Van Schack-Dunkle inherited 750 shares in the Van Schack Corp. when her husband, Henry Van Schack Jr., died in 1974."

Her lawsuit called for $7 million in damages to make up for money she said she cheated out of when she sold the shares back to his family's real estate business.

The corporation bought her stock for $1.5 million in August 1983, just 17 months before it was announced that the new Denver International Airport would be built on the site.

Van Schack-Dunkle's attorney portrayed her as a victim of family jealousy that grew so intense that both her former husband's mother and son tried to contest Van Schack's will to gain access to his money.

The family corporation's principal asset was half-ownership of more than 15,000 acres known as the Box Elder Farm, a collection of small ranches bought during the Depression. The land, northeast of Denver, was half-owned by another of Denver's richest families, the Fulem-widowers.

The Van Schacks and Fulem-widowers sold the land to the city for $52 million in 1988.

Van Schack-Dunkle charged that the corporation had inside knowledge about the airport site and failed to disclose other important facts to the city. She says the shares worth, such as plans for a proposed freeway through the area.

The defense painted Van Schack-Dunkle as a money-grubbing former car-hop. She had met Van Schack at a barbecue restaurant in west Denver while working there as a car hop.

Rescued cover leaves hospital, heads for home

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — An expert cover rescued from the nation's deepest cave checked out of a hospital Tuesday with a leg in a cast and a good report from doctors. Emily Davis Mobley, 40, will need physical therapy to rehabilitate a broken leg, but should be able to walk again with ease, doctors said.

"She should have a leg that she can walk on without a limp, but carrying at her level certainly is a very strenuous effort, and whether or not the knee will allow her to do the things she did before is uncertain," said Dr. Jerry Bages, a surgeon at Guadalupe Medical Center.

Mobley, of Schenectady, N.Y., broke her left leg March 31 some 1,000 feet underground while mapping the rugged Lechuguilla Cave in Carlsbad Caverns National Park.

The injury happened two miles from the entrance of the cave in southeastern New Mexico. It took rescuers four days to carry, lift and pull her over gapping pits and narrow passageways.

The event, offering added money from the Oasis and Mike's Pro Shop, features two days of action and the annual dinner/banquet Saturday night.

Annual Oldsmobile Scramble set for May accepting entries

TWIN FALLS — Entries currently are being accepted at Twin Falls Municipal golf course for the annual Oldsmobile Scramble May 18. The five-person teams — men, women or mixed as participants choose — will be playing for $2,400 added money based on 120-player entry. The top five teams — based on a formula for establishing handicaps — will advance to the regional finals in Jackson Hole, Wyo., and the best two from that competition move on to the national finals in Orlando, Fla., where amateurs will be teamed with touring pros. Prizes are available in net and gross divisions. Next year's local qualifier is scheduled for Canyon Springs Golf Course.

Bruins outswim Tigers on diamond

By Jeff L. Hoakisson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Despite cold, misty weather and a rash of errors the Twin Falls Bruins manhandled the Mountain Home Tigers 12-3 in high school baseball action Tuesday afternoon at Harmon Park.

"A lot of the errors were throwing errors caused by the wet ball," said Bruins Coach Bill Ingram. "I'm not displeased with the win. We'll take it any way we can."

The Bruins committed eight errors on the afternoon but held the Tigers to three unearned runs.

Twin Falls atoned for the eight errors by pounding out eight hits, including two home runs by catcher Jim Horner.

"We were not very fired up when we came out," Ingram said, "but we were able to get things going."

The Tigers got the scoring started in the game's opening inning. David Cooke walked and was followed by an infield single by Paul Williams.

David Macy walked to load the bases before Randy Spies hit a shot that went off the glove of Jon Traveller at second and into right field scoring Cooke and Williams.

The Tigers added a third run in the second inning when Albert Longhurst singled and advanced to second when Matt Horner's pickoff attempt got away from Eric Mordhorst at first.

The next batter, Dan Markham brought Longhurst home from second when his grounder to third ended up in an over throw at first.

The Bruins struck back in the bottom half of the second. Jim Hyde led off the inning with a base on balls, stole second and scored on a Riley-Boyd single to right. Boyd moved to second on a steal.

Eric Mordhorst was walked by Mike

O'Conner. Andy Pierce brought both home with a shot to left to tie the game at 3-3.

Horner broke the deadlock in the third inning with a lead off homer and then followed that up with his second four-bagger in the fifth.

Twin Falls added three other runs in the fifth, including a round-tripper by Boyd, and four more in the sixth to close the door on the Tigers.

Brooks lifts Mets over Phillies in 10th inning

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hubie Brooks hit a solo home run with two outs in the 10th inning and the New York Mets, saved by Rick Carone's homer in the ninth, stung the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 Tuesday.

Pro baseball

The Mets, who led the National League with 172 home runs last season with Darryl Strawberry leading the way, had not come close to connecting this year until the sudden power surge.

Carone, in his first at-bat for the Mets, homered with one out off Roger McDowell. Brooks homered the next inning after Joe Boever retired the first two batters.

Both home-run heroes are new to the Mets, but not to New York. Carone, signed as a free agent, played for the Yankees and Brooks, popular with in the early 1980s, came in a trade with Los Angeles.

Doug Simons pitched two scoreless innings in his major-league debut for the victory. He followed Pete Schourek, who shut out the Phillies for 1-1-3 innings in his first big-league game.

The Mets beat Philadelphia 2-1 for the second straight day, but did it in a totally different manner. The Mets showed off their speed, including their first steal of home since 1985, in winning Monday's opener.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 1

CHICAGO (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals spoiled Danny Jackson's Cubs debut with three runs in the eighth inning, and beat Chicago 4-1 Tuesday in the season opener for both teams.

California's Lance Parrish congratulates new teammate Dave Parker for his second-inning homer off Seattle's Erik Hanson Tuesday in Seattle.

Jackson, one of the heroes for Cincinnati in the World Series sweep, signed a four-year deal for $10.5 million after the season. With the score tied 1-1, Felix Jose doubled with one out in the eighth off Jackson. Todd Zeile walked and Tom Pagnozzi singled to left to fill the bases and Paul Assenmacher replaced Jackson.

Jose grounded hit a roller to shortstop, but Shawon Dunston's throw to second was late as Jose scored the tie-breaking run on the fielder's choice. Pinch-hitter Craig Wilson singled off Assenmacher's glove as Zeile scored and Rex Hudler's fore-play grounder scored Pagnozzi. St. Louis starter and winner Bryn Smith gave up four hits in seven innings. Mike Perez pitched the eighth and former Cub Lee Smith retired the side in the ninth for the save.

Blue Jays 4, Red Sox 3

TORONTO (AP) — Newcomers Mark Whiten, a rookie who broke a tie with a run-scoring double in the sixth inning, Devon White and Joe Carter led the Toronto Blue Jays to a 4-3 victory Tuesday night over the Boston Red Sox.

Veteran players talk comebacks at Masters

The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — There were echoes of St. Andrews in 1984 as Tom Watson and Seve Ballesteros sat side-by-side at the Augusta National Golf Club course.

"I'm playing well enough to win," Watson said after a practice round for the 55th Masters.

"I feel good about my game, good about the week, good about my chances," Ballesteros said Tuesday with more than a touch of his old, long-missing confidence.

"I do not care about finishing second or third or fifth, like has been happening to me the last five or six years," Ballesteros said.

"I have a feeling my time must come soon."

The optimistic statements from both players were unsolicited and, in view of their recent performances, something of a surprise.

Each has been in a slump, Watson one of epic proportions and Ballesteros in something milder.

But each was sounding, and acting, very much as they did seven years ago when they hooked up in a stretch duel on the Old Course at St. Andrews, when Ballesteros denied Watson's bid for a third consecutive British Open title.

This time it is Nick Faldo of England who is going for three in a row, an unprecedented third consecutive Masters title.

And the tall Englishman with the elegant, repeating stroke is on Watson's short list of those likely to succeed on the difficult, undulating greens of Augusta National.

"You have to go with the players. Please see MASTERS/B5

Four-time Masters winner Arnold Palmer practices Tuesday.

Repairs complete at Augusta course

The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Six months after raging Rae's Creek destroyed the 11th green at Augusta National, the site of Nick Faldo's consecutive Masters victories has been declared almost perfectly repaired.

"It has a little more break at the front of the green but I can't tell the difference for the most part," Faldo said of the rebuilt green. "It's pretty amazing what they have done."

Faldo birdied the hole in 1989 to defeat Scott Hoch in a playoff, then two-putted the green for victory last year after Ray Floyd hit his second into the water. Four of the five playoffs in the 54-year history of the Masters have been decided at the green, including Larry Mize's 1987 chip-in to stunt Greg Norman.

Even Fuzzy Zoeller, who once complained that the green was like putting on a mirror, said he was impressed. "The texture of the green has changed but they did a pretty fabulous job," Zoeller said.

The flood along "Ames Corner" also damaged the 12th green and wiped out the members' tee on 13.

Sabres-Canadiens among 4 series tied 2-2

The Associated Press

The Buffalo Sabres got even in the Adams Division semifinals by beating the Montreal Canadiens at Pittsburgh.

The Sabres got more of the fortunate bounces today night as they beat the Canadiens 6-4 in a game that saw six of the 10 goals hit a defender's stick or skate before going into the net. Buffalo won its second straight home game to even the series after Montreal took the first two at The Forum.

Buffalo led 3-2 after one period, with each of the five goals going into the net off a defender. Tony Tanti and Rob Ray added second-period goals for a 5-3 lead and Dale Hawerchuk scored on a third-period power play.

Stephane Richer scored twice for the Canadiens.

The teams have combined for 40 goals in four games, 10 more than they had in the Canadiens' six-game victory last year.

The other Adams Division series is also even at two wins each. Hartford scored four times in the first 15:55 and held off Boston 4-3.

Both Patrick Division series are also tied 2-2. Washington edged the New York Rangers 3-2 and New Jersey whipped Pittsburgh 4-1.

ADAMS DIVISION

Sabres 6, Canadiens 4

Montreal took a 2-0 lead on deflected goals 16 seconds apart. But the breaks quickly evened out for the Sabres, who had three pucks hit Montreal defenders before going into the net.

Tanti scored the first "clean" goal, beating substitute goaltender Andre Racicot just 16 seconds into the second period with a wrist shot.

Buffalo fired 43 shots at starter Patrick

Roy and Racicot, who entered the game after Steve Yegorov's weak backhand deflected off Montreal defenseman Alain Cole and past Roy at 12:30 of the first period, then left after Ray's goal 1:44 into the second period when it is 2-2.

4-4, Bruins 3

Hanford, which fell apart in the third period in Game 3 on Sunday night, held on this time after scoring all four of its goals in less than 16 minutes at the Civic Center.

John Cullen had the Whalers' first goal and set up two by Mark Hunter for a 3-0 lead. After Devin Hunter's goal 1:31-Zarley Zatslavsky's goal at 15:55 completed Hartford's scoring.

Peter Skjikko added Boston's second goal late in the first period and Ken Hodge cut the deficit to one goal with 5:32 left, but Peter Sidorkiewicz made several key saves to preserve the win.

PATRICK DIVISION

Capitals 3, Rangers 2

With their scorers not producing, the Capitals got rare goals from defensive stopper Dave Tipton and enforcer Alan May to beat the Rangers at the Capital Center.

Tipton set up Kevin Hatcher's game-tying 25 seconds into the first period after Bernie Nicholls' first-period goal gave New York an early lead.

Tipton put the Capitals ahead to stay at 15:31 and May's goal at 9:27 of the final period — his first since December — proved to be the game-winner when Mark Janssens scored with 5:28 to play.

Devils 4, Penguins 1

New Jersey scored twice while totally dominating the first period, then held off Pittsburgh in the third at the Meadowlands.

Claude Lemieux and Peter Stastny scored in a 55-second span during the first period, when New Jersey outshot Pittsburgh 15-3. Lemieux cut the lead in half during a 5-on-3 power play at 4:41 of the third period, but Chris Tereri made 15 of his 28 saves in the final period. John MacLean and Claude Lemieux added late insurance goals.

Blazers down Rockets, run streak to 11 games

HOUSTON (AP) — Clyde Drexler scored 11 of his 26 points in a third-quarter turnaround as the Portland Trail Blazers stretched their winning streak to 11 games with a 100-90 victory over Houston on Tuesday night.

Portland, with the NBA's best record, has won eight straight games on the road. Houston lost for the first time in five games after winning 17 of their previous 18 outings to challenge for the Midwest Division lead after trailing by as many as 8½ games in January.

The Rockets came out hot in the third quarter and took a 66-54 lead before getting outdriven 29-9 in the rest of the period. Portland took an 83-75 lead into the fourth quarter.

Rockets coach Don Chaney and Larry Smith were called for technical fouls by referee Jack Madden

Bulls 108, Knicks 106

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago blew a 13-point lead in the fourth quarter and avoided its third consecutive home defeat as John Paxson's 18-footer with 22 seconds left beat New York.

Michael Jordan scored 28 points and Scottie Pippen 27 for the Bulls, who have won 33 of 39 games at Chicago Stadium but have dropped their previous two against San Antonio and Philadelphia.

Patrick Ewing had 21 points and Kiki Vandeweghe 19 for the Knicks.

Bucks 105, Pistons 95

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jay Humphries scored 19 second-half points and Adrian Danley led a fourth-quarter run as Milwaukee withstood 42 points from Joe Dumars and fell Detroit.

The Bucks moved to within one game of the Pistons for the No. 3 spot in the Eastern Conference playoffs and clinched the season series with their Central Division rivals 3-2. Head-to-head matchups were the first playoff tiebreaker to determine seeding positions.

Hawks 104, Cavaliers 98

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Glenn Rivers scored a critical three-point play with 1:34 left and Atlanta yielded just 13 fourth-quarter points against Cleveland.

The Hawks' third straight win ended a six-game road losing streak while stopping the Cavaliers' three-game winning streak.

Cleveland scored the last 10 points of the third period for an 85-77 lead. But Atlanta started the final willies with a 14-3 spurt, and Kevin Willis' dunk put the Hawks ahead for good at 89-88 with 6:54 to play.

Pacers 122, Hornets 120

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Reggie Miller's 20-footer with 7.2 seconds left gave Indiana a road victory over Charlotte, which never trailed in the second half until Miller's game-winning shot.

Detlef Schrempf led Indiana with 23 points, followed by Michael Williams with 21, and 20 apiece from Miller and Rick Smith.

Timberwolves 109, Nets 89

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tony Campbell scored 24 points and reserve center Felton Spencer had 17 points, 13 rebounds and 5 blocks as Minnesota extended New Jersey's road losing streak to 19.

The Nets, losers of six straight overall by a combined total of 122 points, have dropped their last three games by a total of 58 points.

Figures for this survey were obtained by the AP from several players and management sources and include salaries and pro-rated shares of signing bonuses.

The New York Mets had the second-highest payroll at $1,251,538, an increase of $492,963, as Los Angeles rose from eighth to third with an average of $1,248,212. The Dodgers' $562,432 increase was the most in the majors, and the increase exceeded the payrolls of Baltimore and Houston.

San Francisco rose from 12th to sixth at $1,117,619 and the New York Yankees dropped from fourth to ninth at $1,028,673.

The World Series champion Cincinnati Reds rose from 17th to 10th at $988,277, a figure which complies about salaries more than any other club, rose from 15th to 13th at $922,897, an increase of $330,507.

Jockey Shoemaker partially paralyzed

COVINA, Calif. (AP) — Bill Shoemaker, racing's winningest jockey, was in serious condition and partially paralyzed Tuesday following a car accident in which authorities said he was under the influence of alcohol.

Shoemaker

Shoemaker, whose career as a rider ended with his retirement last year, suffered a fracture dislocation of his neck and paralysis of undisclosed parts of his body in the Monday night accident, said Inter-Community Medical Center spokesman Dennis Richards, reading from a statement by Shoemaker's wife, Cindy.

Shoemaker, who earlier was listed in critical condition, was transferred Tuesday afternoon to Centinela Hospital Medical Center, a facility known for its expertise in sports medicine and orthopedic surgery. Richards said Shoemaker's family and personal physician requested the transfer but refused to release any further information about his injuries.

The 59-year-old Shoemaker, now a trainer at Santa Anita, underwent surgery at Glendon Community Hospital shortly after the crash and was transferred about 5:45 a.m. PDT to Inter-Community. He was alone in his 1990 Ford Bronco II when the vehicle suddenly veered to the right, careened over the side of State Route 30 and tumbled down a 50-foot embankment, said California Highway Patrol officer Joe Flores. Witnesses said the vehicle appeared to be traveling at about 55 mph. "It rolled over several times and landed on its wheels," Flores said. "It appears to have rolled over at least two times."

Authorities said the accident occurred about 8:30 p.m. PDT near San Dimas, about 30 miles northeast of downtown Los Angeles, on a connector road to the southbound 210 Freeway. The CHP issued a warrant for Shoemaker's arrest.

"We think he was under the influence of alcohol because there was an odor of alcohol on his person," said Flores, adding that results of a blood-alcohol test performed immediately after the accident won't be available for about two weeks.

The mood was somber at Santa Anita, the state's Art Deco-style racetrack at the base of the San Gabriel Mountains where a statue commemorates Shoemaker's racing feats. He won a record 2,544 rides there. "He's tough," said trainer Charlie Whittingham, whom Shoemaker gave a Kentucky Derby win in 1986 aboard Ferdinand. "He may be little, but he's very tough."

"As a jockey, the 4-foot-11 Shoemaker weighed 98 pounds. When he was born in 1931, he was given little chance of survival because of his size. "Right from the start, people said he wasn't going to make it," said Dan Smith, who co-authored Shoemaker's 1975 autobiography, "The Shoe."

"He's been fighting that all his life. That will assist him greatly in his recovery."

Shoemaker's riding career was remarkably injury-free. The last serious mishap he was involved in occurred in 1969, when he suffered a broken pelvis and ruptured spleen in a paddock accident at Hollywood Park. He was treated then at Centinela.

The final race of Shoemaker's 41-year career came at Santa Anita on Feb. 3, 1990, in an event billed as "The Legend's Last Ride."

Years earlier, Shoemaker emerged as the pre-eminent thoroughbred rider with four Kentucky Derby wins and five in the Belmont Stakes. His win with Ferdinand at age 54 made him the oldest Derby winner.

Earlier, he won aboard Swaps in 1955, Tony Lee in 1959 and Lucky Debonair in 1965.

A native of Faber, Texas, Shoemaker won 8,833 races and his mounts earned $123,375,524 — records which will be very difficult, if not impossible, to surpass. His lifetime mounts totaled 40,350.

He won his first race on April 20, 1949, at Golden Gate Fields aboard Shafer V. His final victory came on Jan. 20, 1990, at Gulfstream Park aboard Beau Genieus.

College coach resigns over reform concerns

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Ron Polk, who made baseball a big game on campus at Mississippi State, resigned Tuesday, saying he was doing so to fight the NCAA reforms he fears threaten the sport.

Polk will become executive director of the American Baseball Coaches Association on Sept. 1, after completing his 16th season at Mississippi State and coaching the U.S. team in this summer's Pan American Games.

"I am accepting this position with the complete knowledge and understanding that it might mean the end of my baseball coaching career," Polk, 47, said. "The challenge in my taking the position is due to the gray cloud hanging over all of the coaches and student-athletes in college baseball due to the NCAA presidents' commission reform movement."

"It is a decision based on what I might be able to do in the future to help save the coaches and student-athletes from this reform movement that could severely affect college baseball.

"Hopefully, I can make some difference heading up this 5,000-member organization that represents all of amateur baseball."

In January, the NCAA enacted a number of reforms, including limiting baseball staffs to two full-time coaches and one part-time assistant, reducing to 20 hours the total practice time a week and cutting the season — including fall works — from 26 to 22 weeks. "It's sad and happy time for all college baseball," Louisiana State coach Skip Bertman said. "We're going to miss him on the field. However, we are in such dire straits with the NCAA that only Ron Polk can help us. He's got a chance to save college baseball."

New coach vows better Aggie squad

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Tony Barone, pledging to guide the program toward national prominence, became Texas A&M's fourth head basketball coach in the past two seasons on Tuesday.

"There are very, very few sleeping giants in this business and I don't think there's any question... that this basketball job is a sleeping giant," said Barone, who led Creighton to three consecutive post-season appearances and 20-win seasons.

Barone, 44, said the next level for the A&M program was to be among the top 25 teams in the nation.

"I know you're going to jump on that in a statement, but I firmly believe that the potential of this club is in that particular realm," said Barone, who was given a five-year contract.

Barone replaces Kermit Davis Jr., who led the Aggies to an 8-21 record in one season as head coach. Longtime coach Shelby Metcalf was dismissed during the 1989-90 season and replaced by assistant John Thornton.

Davis considered a young coach on the rise after a successful stint at Idaho, replaced Thornton, but was forced to resign last month after a 3-month internal investigation uncovered eight NCAA rules violations.

Barone said he would have no comment on the program's recent history. "If you would just indulge me I'd like to look to the future. The past is one of those things I have no opinions about. I have no knowledge of anything that went on here. That's good for me."

Barone was the only one of five candidates interviewed by athletic director John Ezzard Crow.

Barone said he felt no added scrutiny about the possibility of an NCAA probation over the violations. "The NCAA rules are set up and there are no shading of the rules so I don't see that as any extra scrutiny," he said.

Commissioner halts Mino's bid to return

MIAMI (AP) — Minnie Mino's bid to play professional baseball in a sixth decade was blocked Tuesday when his contract with the Miami Miracle of the Florida State League was rejected by the commissioner's office.

The 68-year-old Mino, who last played in 1980 when he appeared in two games with the Chicago White Sox, had been working out at the White Sox spring training complex in Sarasota, Fla. He was scheduled to appear as a designated hitter or pinch hitter in Saturday night's game between Miami and the Fort Lauderdale Yankees.

Bill Murray, director of baseball operations in the commissioner's office, rejected Mino's contract. "The question is, 'Is he a competitive player for the league or not?'" Murray said in New York. "I'd say it was a relatively simple decision."

Mike Vesce, president of the Miracle, said he was told the contract had been turned down because baseball felt it would "trivialize the game."

Sal Arntiga, commissioner of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, did not have the authority to approve or reject the contract. "I expressed my views and concerns to Miami, as well," he said. "When I saw it, I was concerned about it, but the ultimate decision rests with the league."

Time to get your spring palates ready

Spring has sprung, the grass is showing. At least I think that's what it is, amidst all the blowing!

Oh, well, if the wind blows that just means spring is really here and we can get our palates ready for some fresh stuff like asparagus and leafy lettuce and asparagus and...well, you get the idea.

My herb garden is growing a bit, just a bit though, not enough to really make a salad, yet. But that day will come and I'll be ready. Here are a couple of special dressings that will awaken your taste buds.

Balsamic vinegar is in most big supermarkets. It's an interesting ingredient, sort of a musty, sweet vinegar. Its uses aren't just limited to what we usually try. Last summer I drizzled some over fresh raspberries and it made an elegant dessert.

BALSAMIC VINAIGRETTE DRESSING

- (makes 1/4 cups)
- 1/3 cup balsamic vinegar
- 1/4 cup orange juice
- 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
- 1 teaspoon sweet basil
- 1 large clove garlic (through garlic press)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper (preferably fresh ground)
- 2/3 cup olive-oil (preferably Extra-Virgin)
- 10-ounce package garden fresh spinach
- 1/3 wedge Gorgonzola cheese (crumbled into small pieces) this is sometimes hard to get here so crumbly goat cheese could be a substitute.
- 1/2 cup pecan pieces, dark roasted in oven

Mix the balsamic vinegar, orange juice, Dijon mustard, sweet basil, garlic and salt and pepper together in a bowl and whip until desired consistency is obtained. Refrigerate in a closed container.

Rinse and sort (and trim if necessary) the spinach. Spin or drain off water and pat dry with towels to dry. You could chill spinach at this point until time to serve. When ready to serve toss dressing with leaves then serve on individual salad plates.

Garnish by sprinkling crumbled Gorgonzola cheese and roasted pecans on top of each individual salad just before serving.

The next recipe calls for a different vinegar, rice wine vinegar. It's a soft vinegar taste and makes a big difference when dressing a salad. It and just a little oil make a perfect simple topping for the start of your meal.

ORIENTAL PEPPER DRESSING

- 1 cup rice wine vinegar
 - 1 cup salad oil
 - 5 teaspoons salt
 - 4 teaspoons MSG
 - 2 teaspoons coarse black pepper
 - 2 cloves minced garlic
- Combine above ingredients in a quart jar and shake well. Store in refrigerator and shake before each use. Using the rice wine vinegar again here's a quick sweet dressing. Use just a couple of table spoons for your salad. It also keeps in the refrigerator.

SWEET DRESSING

- 1/2 cup sugar
 - 1 cup rice wine vinegar
 - 1 teaspoon MSG
 - 1 teaspoon salt
- Boil these ingredients for a couple of minutes, then bottle and store in refrigerator.

Sometimes a special potato recipe comes along that is just different enough, just special enough to be put in your favorite file rack, this is one of them. It's a weekend dish (one that takes a bit longer but is worth it).

CHILI POTATO GRATIN

- 5 medium fresh chilies (poblano or Anaheim)
- 4 teaspoons unsalted butter
- 3 pounds fresh potatoes, peeled and sliced 1/4-inch thick (I used a 3 pound bag of frozen slices. These are available in some grocery stores as a food service package)
- 1/2 cup milk

About 99 percent of the dates produced in the United States are grown in California. In fact, the Coachella Valley, the area that runs from Palm Springs to the Salton Sea in Southern California is the major date growing region in the Western Hemisphere.

Production has grown from one million pounds in the early-1900s to present-day production of approximately 35.5 million pounds.

About 30 varieties of dates are grown in California, but one of these dominates the market. Deglet Noor, the semi-firm, medium-large, oblong and amber-colored date whose name means "date of light," accounts for more than 85 percent of the valley's production.

Date harvesting runs from August into February. As the fruit begins to ripen, each bunch is covered with a paper cover, akin to an umbrella or bag, which serves as natural protection from cloudburst, dust, insects and birds. A healthy date palm may produce 12 to 15 bunches for a total of 300 pounds of dates per tree each year.

Once for, ounce, dates have about the same amount of calories as raisins, with the additional benefit of iron, niacin, potassium, protein and fiber. Dates also lend natural sweetness to everything from salads and appetizers to casseroles, sautes, vegetable and grain dishes and desserts.

COACHELLA VALLEY ORANGE DATE SALAD

- 4 oranges
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/2 cup lettuce leaves
- 1/2 cup chopped dates
- 1 tablespoon chopped pistachios
- 1 teaspoon chopped mint
- 4 mint sprigs

Slice outer peel and pith from oranges; slice crosswise into 1/4-inch thick rounds. Combine black pepper, allspice and cinnamon. Line 4 salad plates with lettuce leaves. Arrange orange slices in a spiral on plates. Sprinkle with spice mixture. Spoon dates evenly in the center of the salads and sprinkle with pistachios and chopped mint. Garnish with mint sprigs before serving.

TABBOULEH POCKET SANDWICHES

- 3 cups boiling water
- 1/2 cup cracked wheat
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup dried black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon chopped mint
- 1 cup cubed, cooked chicken breast
- 1 cup chopped tomatoes
- 1/2 cup chopped dates
- 1/2 cup each chopped green onions and coarsely chopped peanuts
- 10 lettuce leaves

6 medium pita bread rounds, cut in half

In a large bowl, pour boiling water over cracked wheat and let stand for 30 minutes. Drain well and squeeze out excess water with a towel. Meanwhile, whisk together lemon juice, vegetable oil, salt, pepper and mint. Pour over drained cracked wheat and mix with remaining ingredients except lettuce leaves and pita bread. New products make lasagna preparation easier

By Gail Perrin

Boston Globe

I've always liked lasagna. But until recently I never liked to make lasagna.

Either I didn't have the time or energy to do the market called No-Boil Lasagna — water-thin, wavy, precooked dried lasagna sheets that contain half the calories of boiled regular dried lasagna. The precooked lasagna sheets — there are 14 to 15 in each 8-ounce box — are made from enriched semolina wheat flour and water. No eggs or additives. And they're certified kosher and pareve. We purchased our easy-to-spot red, white and green No-Boil boxes for $1.29.

Second, eggs are a number of bottled tomato-based spaghetti sauces on the market that are convenient and perfectly adequate substitutes for home-cooked numbers. If this strikes you as heresy, there are tasty sauces that can be made from canned tomatoes. Either way, one simply does not have to wait for fresh summer tomatoes to make a decent sauce.

Another bonus is the discovery that lasagna cooks beautifully in either a conventional oven or a microwave. It can be made ahead and either refrigerated (up to 3 days) or frozen without losing anything in the translation. However, if it's frozen, we recommend at least partially defrosting the lasagna in the refrigerator or microwave before cooking.

Finally, lasagna is an extremely forgiving dish. If you're in a hurry, you can use frozen precooked lasagna sheets. If you decide you want to substitute, add or leave out an ingredient. Within reason, that is. For instance, there's no need to use mushrooms if you don't like mushrooms. On the other hand, if you want to beef up your sauce, try adding cooked sliced mushrooms or sauteed ground meat. And just because a recipe calls for beef, sausage or pork doesn't mean you can't use leaner ground turkey instead.

Try tuna or chicken to add twist to lasagna

Some new recipes for lasagna:

TUNA OR CHICKEN LASAGNA

- 1 small onion, minced
- 1/2 cup minced celery, including a few celery leaves
- 1/2 cup soft butter or margarine
- 4 cups medium white sauce
- 1 tablespoon minced, drained capers (optional)
- 1 (15-ounce) carton ricotta cheese, drained
- 1 small-card cottage cheese
- 1 (10-ounce) package frozen peas, thawed and drained
- 1 red bell pepper, seeded and chopped fine
- 2 (8-ounce) packages shredded mozzarella, drained
- 1 egg (optional)
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 1 teaspoon larron or dill weed
- 1 1/2 pounds cooked chicken, cubed, or 2 (6- to 7-ounce) cans water-packed tuna, drained and flaked

9 to 12 lasagna noodles
Sauté onion and celery in butter until onion is limp. Add to white sauce along with capers, if used. Set aside. In a bowl combine ricotta and cottage cheeses, peas, bell pepper, 12 ounces of the mozzarella, egg, parsley and tarragon or dill.

Spread a quarter of the white sauce mixture on the bottom of a 9-by-13-by-2-inch glass baking dish and cover with 3 or 4 noodles. Spread another quarter of the white sauce over noodles, then sprinkle with half of chicken or tuna and cover with half of cheese mixture. Cover with another 3 to 4 noodles, another quarter of white sauce, the remaining chicken or tuna and the remainder of the cheese mixture. Top with remaining 3 to 4 noodles and the last of the white sauce. Sprinkle with remaining 4 ounces of mozzarella.

To cook in microwave, cover with plastic wrap and heat on high setting for 18 to 20 minutes, turning dish once or twice during heating. Let stand for 5 minutes before cutting and serving. To cook Please see TWIST/C7 sauces? Try doctoring up a basic medium white sauce with spices and herbs that complement the main filling.

In other words, no lasagna recipe is written in stone; cooked dried lasagna sheets, regular dried lasagna can be used, cooking only on the sheets as directed.

Note: For more information about No-Boil, call (800) 662-6451.

MEAT LASAGNA

- 1 (15-ounce) carton ricotta or cottage cheese, well drained
- 1 egg (optional)
- 1 teaspoon Italian seasonings (or pinch each of basil, oregano and thyme)
- 1 to 1 1/2 pounds ground beef (or pork, sausage or turkey), browned and drained
- 1 (28- to 32-ounce) jar prepared spaghetti sauce or 4 cups homemade spaghetti sauce
- 9 dry, precooked lasagna noodles
- 2 (8-ounce) packages shredded mozzarella cheese
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese (optional)

Combine ricotta cheese, egg and seasonings; set aside. Add browned meat to spaghetti sauce, mixing well. Evenly spread one quarter of the sauce (about 1 cup) on bottom of 9-by-13-by-2-inch glass baking dish. Cover with 3 dry precooked noodles, being careful that noodles do not touch outside edges of dish.

Spread another quarter of the sauce, covering noodles completely. Layer half the ricotta mixture and a third of mozzarella cheese on top of sauce. Repeat layers of noodles, sauce, ricotta mixture and mozzarella. Cover with last of noodles, remaining sauce and shredded mozzarella. Sprinkle with Parmesan, if desired. To cook in microwave, cover dish with plastic wrap. Cook on high power for 17 to 19 minutes, turning dish once or twice during heating. Let stand 5 minutes before cutting. To cook in conventional oven, preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cover dish with foil and bake for 30 to 40 minutes. To brown cheese, uncover dish during the last 10 to 15 minutes.

War means 2nd parenthood for some grandparents

ERIE, Pa. (AP) - Karen and James Jasunas were looking forward to a little time alone when their youngest daughter left home at 18, but their empty nest wasn't empty for long. The couple's son, Erick, and his wife, Jacqueline - both Army sergeants - were sent to Saudi Arabia in November. Their three children were left with their grandparents, and life in the Jasunas household hasn't been the same.

"When they first came here - the noise - I thought, 'My God, I'm in a little bit of a jam,'" Karen Jasunas said. "Now I know how to react to their cries, whether I can take any time or whether I have to run."

Karen Jasunas, 47, resumed an old habit - she reads "The War of Every Nail" the January night the war started.

Even though the war is over, life won't return to normal until the kids' parents return. Both expect to remain overseas for at least a couple of months.

"I love my grandchildren, and I'm so glad I've gotten to know them, but I did my time," she said. "I want to be a grandmother and spoil them and not send them home to mommy and daddy."

Four-year-old Hilene, 2-year-old Phillip and 1-year-old Stevan play with abandon in the house where the dad was raised, but they long for their parents is evident.

Karen Jasunas, right, and husband James try to get used to parenting again while taking care of their three grandchildren, from left Hilene, 4, Stevan, 1, and Phillip, 2.

The pace of Karen Jasunas's days is determined by her grandchildren's needs: cinnamon toast and cereal in the morning, peanut butter and jelly sandwiches at lunch, a nap, a hot dinner, a bath and diaper changes and a hundred other things in between.

Remodeling plans have been put on hold, while the Jasunas rise to the challenge of child-proofing a comfortable suburban home that hasn't housed children in years.

An office has been converted to a nursery, with a portable crib and beds made of cushions. Toys seem to reproduce on the living room floor. A glass-top table has been moved, and chairs block doors to forbidden rooms.

Still, James Jasunas, 48, a product manager in the oil transportation field, said the family is getting along.

"I wouldn't have it any other way," he said. "I'm glad we're able to do it."

Jasunas' own father was serving in the Korean War when he was born.

"I didn't know my father until I was 1½ years old," he said. "I think it makes it easier for me to understand the circumstance."

Free coffee and snacks will be provided. All play is open to the public.

Kidney transplant for chimpanzee is just a bunch of monkey business

DEAR ABBY: In a recent issue of Parade magazine, I saw a brief article (enclosed) that disturbed me greatly. It dealt with a parent who had permission for his 6-year-old child to donate a kidney to a CHIMPANZEE suffering from simian nephritis!

The item read, "The father of little Brandy Orendier visited the sibling prince in his cage at the Perkins Animal Clinic in Atlanta, bearing a large bunch of bananas."

"As a family, we are 100 percent committed to animal welfare," said the father, a "monkey-old" health-food store owner, "but sometimes it can be kind of frustrating. I heard about a laboratory rat out in California who needs a heart transplant. I'd really like to donate mine, but how would it fit into my little chest cavity?"

Abby, removing a kidney from a 6-year-old child for donation to a chimpanzee is outrageous! It's one thing for an adult to make an informed decision based on facts and potential risks to donate an organ, but this 6-year-old obviously does not understand the risks of surgery and going through life with only one kidney.

Unless this child were terminally ill with no hope for recovery, this is outright child abuse and should be stopped! If this were the case, there would be lots of parents or children on transplant waiting lists who would be disappointed and angry to hear of this situation.

"Although I'm not an expert on inter-species transplants, as a physician who has some knowledge of human-to-human transplants, I believe the chances for success are far greater in twins or siblings. Even the chimp would be better served if it were to receive a donor kidney from another chimp - and preferably a blood relative. Quite frankly, I am at a loss to understand why there are ANY transplants from human to animals at all!"

—JOE WEINSTEIN, M.D., SOMERVILLE, N.J.

DEAR DR. WEINSTEIN: As much as I love animals, I, too, was at a loss to understand why, when humans are on waiting lists for organ transplants, a chimpanzee would make preference over a child for a kidney transplant.

I telephoned information in Atlanta and asked for the telephone number of the Perkins Animal Clinic. I was told that there was no animal clinic listed under that name.

I then called the editorial department of Parade magazine and asked for the source of the item concerning the kidney transplant from child to chimp. I was told that that item was meant to be a joke!

Perhaps I've lost my sense of humor, but in my opinion no kind of organ transplant is a joke.

Old coffee containers in different sizes offer extra kick

By Anita Gold
Chicago Tribune

CHICAGO - It's amazing just how many brands of coffee were sold in the past with brand names and bright labels covering a multitude of subjects ranging from animals (such as Red Wolf brand) to Indians (such as Mohican brand).

Such containers, made of tin, either had paper labels pasted on or lithographed labels printed directly on the tin. Although most tin containers were round, others were shaped like dinner pails, cream cans, bins or rectangular trunks, while some others were made of cardboard with tin tops and bottoms. Others were glass jars with attached paper labels.

The value of such containers depends on their uniqueness, condition, completeness (being intact with covers, handles if any, and unmarred labels), subject matter pictured on the label, and rarity as well as size and shape.

The book "Food and Drink Containers and Their Prices," by Al Bergevin, pictures, describes and prices numerous coffee containers. It's available for $19.45 postpaid from Wallace-Homestead Book Co., 1 Chilton Way, Radnor, Pa. 19089-0230; phone 800-695-1214 to order. Madison Avenue hasn't aged with America, adman says

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Madison Avenue hasn't aged along with America — which has caused serious problems for some products designed to appeal to older people, says a man whose agency specializes in those products.

"Ad agency creative types are usually in their 20s and 30s. ... They sell youthfulness because that's what the public can personally relate to," said Morton Yulish, 51.

On the other hand, census data shows the average age in this country is rising, he told the audience in New Orleans for the American Society on Aging's convention.

"The big opportunity is in the 45-to-50-plus market. Not the youth market," said Yulish, whose clients include American Express, Metropolitan Life, Hyatt, and Hillhaven, a developer of retirement housing.

But corporations tend to move that "plus" out of their work force, he said. "There's a lot of pressure in companies to retire them out ... replaced by young eager beavers at half the pay."

The result sometimes is advertisements written out of a young person's fears about aging, he said.

An example, he said, is a lottery advertisement showing a woman in her 80s trying to bowl and knocking out a window with her bowling ball.

"I am personally distressed at the number of ads showing older people in condescending ways," Yulish said.

Another example is a hair dye that advertises itself as restoring hair's natural color. "As if grey is not a natural color," Yulish said. "What it implies is that getting old is not natural, that returning to something natural is returning youth."

And ads for products that deal seriously with the limitations sometimes brought by aging often fall flat by focusing on the problem rather than on the result, Yulish said.

He showed ads for two brands of pads for incontinent people. One went into clinical detail about the pad's design and use; the other showed a woman golfing.

Another pair advertised aspirin as a treatment for arthritis. One showed a woman trying to open a jar; the other showed a woman gardening with the caption, "Yes, you can!"

"I believe very strongly that the older consumer is getting a bum rap," Yulish said. "Many times (advertisers) lose sight of the young person trapped in an old skin. They do very, very little to appeal to the young person inside this reverse cocoon."

For that matter, it's a mistake to set one's sights too narrowly — products older people can use may also be useful for other people.

Letters of thanks

Arts on Tour made great night for Russian refugees

We at the College of Southern Idaho Refugee and Resettlement Center wish to thank Arts on Tour for making a very wonderful evening possible for the Russian refugees in our area.

The Tziganka Troupe brought memories of their heritage to their new homeland. The audience's obvious appreciation of Russian folk music and dance served to give the refugees warm welcome to the Magic Valley.

The reception following the performance was a social event rarely enjoyed by the newcomers. It was a very gracious and friendly gesture and we at the Refugee Center are deeply touched by the thoughtful generosity of those representing Arts on Tour.

Many thanks,

200 educators meet in Wood River Valley

SUN VALLEY — Idaho Attorney General Larry Echokaw will welcome 200 educators from eight western states to the Wood River Valley this week for the 1991 Mountain Plains Adult Education Association conference.

The conference begins is slated today through Saturday, and Echokaw will greet participants Thursday. The Idaho attorney general, a Panhandle native, is the nation's first Native American to hold statewide office.

The event's keynote speaker will be Jerold W. Apps, a professor of adult and continuing education at the University of Wisconsin. Other educators will speak on a variety of topics and lead many workshops tied to the conference theme, "Soar to New Heights through Leadership."

Participants will attend the conference from New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, Nevada, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho. Marge Sletten of Idaho State University's Resident Center in Twin Falls is conference chair.

Astrological Forecasts

IF APRIL 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are stubborn, original, sensual, will not take back seat even when others declare odds are against you. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You are daring, romantic, possess individual style and are not afraid to assume leadership. You'll travel in May, social activities will accelerate. You'll be more aware of fitness, popularity, wardrobe, body-image. Scheduled revamped in June.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Aspiration that appeared out of reach will become reality. Scenario highlights fulfillment, responsibility, challenge and reward. Older individual provides encouragement; possibly funding.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You're "running candidate" for exciting assignment. Stress independence, willingness to try something different. You'll get to heart of matters, creative endeavor, will succeed. Strive!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Obtain hint from Taurus message. You could be involved in "new mode of transportation." Focus on inventiveness, originality, daring. Love relationship stormy but stimulating. "Straight ahead!"

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Intuition provides answers. Much that has shrouded in mystery receives benefit of greater knowledge. Scenario highlights teaching, learning, access to confidential information. Alonah!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Good news received in connection with project, legal decision. Emphasis on partnership, image, celebration, marital status. Make inquiries, open lines of communication. Gemini plays role.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be aware of fine print, play game according to Hoyle, but do take advantage of every opportunity available. Job gets done with help from one who previously performed special services.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Exchange views, encourage clash of ideas. Emphasis on creative endeavors, challenge, physical attraction. Unique appeal comes from one who claims, "I love you!" Sagittarian in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You could receive "inside information" concerning land development, real estate. Focus on home, family, greater degree of financial security. Emphasis on reunion with loved one, music, flowers.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): See people, places in realistic light. Believe as sincere but could also be "sincerely misinformed." Answers are found by digging deep, research. Pisces, Virgo persons featured.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You have things your own way despite challenges, obstacles, skepticism. Individual in power position declares, "I selected you and I stick by you!" Cancer native figures prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You beat the odds! Emphasis on wide appeal, larger-audience, elements of timing and surprise. Rules bend to favor your efforts. Your judgment, intuition prove accurate. Arries reserved!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Answer to question: Affirmative, it is time for new direction. Relationship could develop into something new. New project destined to succeed. Aquarian will play dominant role.

Hardy trees, shrubs, perennial flowers can be planted early Spring weather gives many people the urge to plant. Although it is still too cool to plant many vegetables and annual flowers, now is an excellent time to plant hardy plants such as trees, shrubs, and perennial flowers. This is also an excellent time to move plants from one location to another in your own landscape.

Early planting is very desirable for woody plants. Cool weather allows roots to become established before there is a heavy demand upon them to provide water for rapid top growth. Bare root plants, in particular, need to be planted before the buds start to grow.

Allen Wilson
Gardening

early part of the spring. Plants available bare root include fruit trees, shade trees, flowering shrubs, roses, hedges and raspberry plants.

Trees and shrubs in containers or wrapped in burlap can also be planted early. They can also be planted throughout the summer.

Perennial flowers can be started either from plants or seeds. Perennial plants already growing in containers will usually de-bloom the first season. Most perennials started from seed will not bloom until the second year. Perennials are more cold tolerant than annuals and both seeds and plants can be planted outside earlier.

This is also a good time to divide or move summer or fall blooming perennials. Wait until after bloom to move established spring blooming perennials. Most perennials bloom better if they are divided every three to five years. Exceptions are peonies and bleeding heart, which bloom better in large clumps. I have a leaflet which describes almost 150 different perennial and annual flowers which are adapted to the Intermountain area.

It includes descriptions, preferred planting locations and how and when to seed or transplant them. If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with two stamps to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 343, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for flower variety leaflet.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Tank-to-bowl toilet leaks can be fixed

Q. Every few hours, my toilet seems to flush itself. I've replaced some parts, but the flushing continues. What's wrong? — P. O'Neill.

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

A. The flushing sound from the toilet is probably caused by the tank's refilling itself after the water has leaked from the tank into the toilet bowl. A leak of this type can waste thousands of gallons of water in a few weeks.

Most tank-to-bowl leaks are caused by a faulty flush valve. To check, remove the lid from the tank and watch the operation of the mechanism inside during several flushes.

The flush valve is at the bottom of the tank, near the center. In some toilets, it consists of a rubber-half ball on the end of a rod. When the toilet is flushed with the flush handle, the ball is raised from its seat, and water rushes through an opening into the bowl. Some toilets have a flapper type of valve hooked to a chain instead of a ball and rod, but the principle is the same. In either case, during a flush, the ball or flapper returns to its seat and plugs the opening after the tank empties. The empty tank automatically refills with water and is ready for another flush.

If the flush valve is malfunctioning, water from the tank leaks through the opening into the bowl and eventually lowers the water in the tank to the point where the tank refills again and the process starts over. If there is a very slow leak, the cycle can take several hours.

Watching how a flush works sometimes makes the cause of a flush-valve malfunction obvious. In a ball-and-rod mechanism, for example, a slightly bent rod might be causing the ball to hang up on the edge of the seat instead of closing completely. A slight adjustment to the rod can often correct this problem.

If the ball or flapper seems to be seating properly, the seal can still be poor because of dirt or corrosion on the valve or seat. Feel the mating surfaces and carefully wipe to remove any debris. If the metal seat is rough or corroded, it can sometimes be smoothed with steel wool or fine emery paper.

Flush-valve leaks can also be caused by holes or cracks in the ball or flapper. Replacements parts are available at many home centers and hardware stores.

If tank-to-bowl leaks continue after preliminary repairs, it is usually wise to replace the entire flush-valve mechanism. Kits such as Fluidmaster's Flusher Fixer are widely sold and not difficult to install. However, it is important to read and follow directions carefully and save them in case adjustments or more troubleshooting is needed.

Some tank-to-bowl leaks in toilets are so slow they can escape notice for years. One time-tested test is to put food dye in the tank and check the bowl in a few hours. If color shows up in the bowl, and the toilet wasn't flushed, there is a leak.

Readers' questions and comments are welcome and should be sent to Gene Austin, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Box 8263, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101. Questions cannot be answered personally.

Iraq balks at Kurd area

The Associated Press

IN NORTHERN IRAQ — Iraq's premier said Tuesday his nation will fight calls for establishing a Kurdish refuge in his country, but a Kurd leader said rebels favor a European plan for a U.N.-protected enclave in northern Iraq.

The United States, Britain and France, meanwhile, flew supply missions to the mile-long lines of refugees backed up along mountain ridges and passes near the Turkish and Iranian borders. About 1 million had reportedly already crossed the border to safety.

Prime Minister Sadaoum Hammadi said Iraq will oppose "by all means" any plan for a Kurdish enclave. He said in remarks carried by the official Iraqi News Agency that Western nations were guilty of "fabricating this (refugee) problem and exaggerating it."

Hammadi said Iraq had already taken steps to solve the problem, including offering amnesty to Kurdish rebels and transportation for refugees who want to return home. Hammadi's statement says everything about its contempt for human life.

Britain's Foreign Office said in response to the Iraqi remarks. International support grew Tuesday for the enclave proposed by British Prime Minister John Major. The plan was endorsed Monday by the European Community, backed by Turkey and Australia and is to be discussed Tuesday by the U.N. Security Council.

In related developments Tuesday: The White House said U.S. surveillance flights would continue over Iraq, even after American forces have been withdrawn, to make sure the U.N.-imposed ceasefire is being respected. The Bush administration did not say how long the flights would continue.

British Foreign Office minister Douglas Hogg told the British Broadcasting Corp. that the idea of a haven for the Kurds "might imply the prospect of some force or threat of force if the (Iraqi) attacks continue."

In Washington, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said there were no new reports of major fighting between Iraqi loyalist troops and retreating Kurds, only a "little bit of minor skirmishing."

A Turkish daily, Gundayin of Istanbul, quoted army Gen. Kamil Basar as saying Turkey already has some troops in northern Iraq to "guarantee the security of refugees."

Masoud Barzani, leader of the Kurdistan Democratic Party, termed the refugee plan "a big humanitarian and political step forward," and said the rebels would accept a ceasefire if an enclave is established.

Barzani said the rebels "support this proposal and urge all states to back it and implement it as soon as possible." He spoke to reporters at a temporary headquarters in the rebel-held mountains.

Thousands of trucks, cars and other vehicles were packed solid and were motionless for miles Tuesday along the suddenly crowded roads near the Iranian border.

Thousands of other refugees trudged, past, many barefoot, on a several-days trip to the border. Many refugees have been waiting near the borders for days with no shelter or food. A night-long storm of lightning, thunder and hail worsened their plight Tuesday.

Kurdish women seek water in refugee camp on Iraqi border.

Turks ask 23 nations to aid with refugees

The Associated Press

ANKARA, Turkey — Turkey on Tuesday said it had asked the United States and 22 other countries to admit some of the hundreds of thousands of Iraqi refugees who have massed at the Turkish border.

Meanwhile, Premier Yildirim Akbulut appealed to the world community to endorse a proposal for a U.N.-monitored enclave for Kurdish refugees in neighboring Iraq.

In another development, officials said about 1,700 American military personnel had been sent to Turkey's Incirlik base to help in the airdrop of food to the Iraqi refugees on the border.

Murat Sungar, the Foreign Ministry spokesman, told The Associated Press that Turkey sent messages through diplomats in the United States, Canada, Japan and European countries asking if they planned to accept some of the refugees.

Sungar said most of the Iraqis wanted to find a "civilized country."

NEEDED TLC I need a quality lady who is two to five in my mother's home. She is a companion & helper to a pleasant, alert lady of 80. Duties to be light housework and should have "comfortable interest" in the TV-entertainment area. Must be a nonsmoker & nondrinker. Interest in garage sales helpful. Putting private room, bath, cable TV plant or 2 for enjoyment only, no lawn care or hard work. Be responsible to keep an eye on diabolical etc. Be licensed to drive. Generally participate in making a couple of ladies lives happier & fuller by enjoying each other's support & company. The rewards are not large at this time. As listed above, plus private room, bath, cable TV & small salary. When & if the demands & duties would be made. Personal references are necessary.
