Wood River sales slump; Magic Valley holds own

By Craig Lincoln, Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Blaine County businesses are retrenching, cutting expenses and a few winter-in-tourism-dominated Blaine County. In sharp contrast to the Magic Valley, total sales reported during the first three months of 1991 plunged 26 percent in the Wood River Valley. It was a surprise. It was a lack of snow. "In the space of about 45 to 60 days, it turned around to completely negative in a major fashion," said Rob Santa, a partner in the Ketchum skiing-supply store, Sturtevant's. Sturtevant's sales in October were strong — even to the point of doubling past years' business, Santa said. "Then it didn't snow. A national recession gripped the nation. The United States went to war. By President's Day, Santa slashed Sturtevant's prices to move its inventory out the door. "That's just like throwing in the towel on the season," Santa said. "You don't recover. Some stores are going out of business, he said. Sturtevant is trimming payroll, advertising, and every other expense it can. Some of Blaine County's 26-percent decline may be caused by technical changes in how sales were reported to the Idaho Revenue and Taxation Department, Rae Wilson said. Please see SALES/A2

Air Force selects Mountain Home base for test role

By States News Service and The Times-News

WASHINGTON — Mountain Home Air Force Base will get up to $67.6 million in improvements and thousands of new jobs by 1996, according to documents obtained by an independent defense newspaper. According to the Air Force Times, the Elmore County base stands to get $42.1 million in new buildings and facilities and as much as $67.6 million if B-52 bombers are deployed to southern Idaho. That's a result of Mountain Home's selection on April 15 as the test site for the Air Force's new generation of bases. The figures were given to Gen. Merrill A. McPeak, the Air Force chief of staff, at an April 17 briefing, the Air Force Times reported. Mountain Home was one of 10 sites considered for the new type of base, housing what is called "composite wing, made up of a variety of fighters, bombers, tankers and transport aircraft. The uncrowded sky above the base was a factor in choosing Mountain Home, said Capt. Jack Giese, an Air Force spokesman. As the first composite wing, Mountain Home will become a model for other Air Force bases around the world, said Melodie Rydahl, an aide to Democratic Rep. Richard Stalling, D-Idaho, who was briefed by the Air Force on the composite wing several weeks ago. But a base spokesman cautioned Friday that the move isn't yet official. "Nothing's final till July 15," Air Force Capt. John Lahmon said. That's when a Defense Department commission reviewing a list of possible base closures will also consider the composite wing for Mountain Home. "We have our fingers crossed," Lahmon said. "It'd be a good financial move for the community and it means longevity for this facility. ... The fact that it could happen here is a marvelous statement of the community support." The push for the composite wing is McPeak's brainchild. In a composite wing, planes from the Tactical Air Command, the Strategic Air Command and the Military Air Force Command would be combined to work and train in concert, simulating wartime conditions. Operating together in a "war-fighting package" will make the forces easier to deploy, Giese said, and the composite wing plan will cut down on bureaucracy. One of the reasons the Air Force is considering the plan is that it must cut down its size in coming years and trim 102,000 employees, 19 percent of its total. Please see BASE/A2

3,700 troops on the way to protect jittery Kuwait

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has ordered 3,700 American soldiers now based in Germany to Kuwait. They will be assigned to protect the jittery population of the war-torn desert kingdom until at least September. "We have agreed as a temporary measure to leave forces there for now," Cheney said Friday in a statement announcing the U.S. forces to the region, since the fighting in the Gulf has not ended. The United States still intended to pull its military forces out of the region as quickly as possible. But the deployment could heighten concerns that the military presence in the region will be bigger and last longer — than either the Bush administration or the American public wants, defense and congressional aides said. The deployment recognizes the need for a continued U.S. military presence in the Gulf and the need for the government of Kuwait to reconstitute its own forces," a Pentagon statement said. In recent weeks, Western diplomats have said Kuwaiti leaders want a continued American military presence to deter any rebellion or to provide protection against any external threat. Fresh troops from the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment based in Fulda, Germany, will be sent to Kuwait by mid-June to replace troops with the 3rd Armored Division, Cheney said. "They will stay in Kuwait until Sept. 1, 1991," the Pentagon statement said. "The situation in Kuwait is still very unstable," Cheney told CNN's "Evans and Novak" show. "They are necessarily nervous, given what happened to them just last August, and we have agreed, as a temporary measure, to leave forces there for the next few months." Cheney, who recently returned from a trip to the Middle East, said the desire of the Kuwaitis and other U.S. allies in the region for a "close relationship with the United States is greater than it's ever been because of what we've just done."

Medicare woes loom

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Changes are needed "very soon" to prevent the Medicare trust fund that pays for hospital care from going bankrupt as early as 2001, federal officials said Friday. The Social Security Board of Trustees, in its annual report, said projected reserves and financing of the hospital insurance program will not keep up with greater demands that will be placed on the system by an aging population. "Corrective action will be needed very soon in order to avoid the need for potentially precipitous changes later," the report said. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said in releasing the report that it "underscores the urgency of our task in containing health care costs and spending our health care dollars more effectively." These are nearly the same words the secretary used last year when the trustees' annual report said the hospital insurance fund could run dry before the end of the century. Under the most likely economic and demographic assumptions, the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund will be depleted by 2005, according to the trustees report.

AIDS-infected donor supplied tissues

The Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — More than 50 transplant patients around the country received organs or tissues from an AIDS-infected donor six years ago and three have died of AIDS, health officials said Friday. An elderly Colorado woman who received a hip joint has tested positive for the AIDS virus, said Doug Wilson, a spokesman for LifeNet Transplantation Services of Virginia Beach, which supplied the tissues to 30 hospitals around the country. No other recipients have tested positive for AIDS, and most probably are not in danger because the tissues they received were sterilized, he said. The donor, a 22-year-old Virginia man, was shot to death during a robbery. His heart, kidneys, and liver were transplanted at Southside Regional Medical Center in Petersburg, Wilson said. The hospital declined to provide details about the patients' deaths. Wilson said officials did not detect the donor's infection until this week because AIDS testing was less sophisticated when the donor died in 1985. "It's tragic. It's unfortunate. Certainly we were not negligent. The science was simply not there," Wilson said. "The likelihood of this happening today is slim to zero." The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported the case Friday. LifeNet had a chance to announce its findings, Wilson said. He said the company had planned to wait until all the hospitals were notified. "We wanted to come forward with this. We have nothing to hide," he said.

He twice tested negative for the AIDS virus before his organs, corneas and various tissues were removed, Wilson said. He said the man may have been so recently infected that his body did not register any signs of the virus. An AIDS antibody test can usually detect an infection within several months after it occurs. Using improved testing that has been developed since 1985, LifeNet checked preserved cells from the donor and learned Thursday that he had been infected, Wilson said. The testing was done because Colorado health officials reported that the elderly woman had tested positive for the AIDS virus, he said. All 30 hospitals that received the tissues were notified of the AIDS risk by Thursday evening, Wilson said. But Jeff Nesbit, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration in Washington, said one hospital still had to be notified. Neither spokesman would identify the hospitals in which the transplants took place. Nesbit said the heart transplant patient died in August 1986 and the two kidney patients died in June 1988 and May 1990. "They all died of AIDS-related conditions," Nesbit said. The liver transplant patient died in 1985 of complications after surgery, he said. Bill Anderson, LifeNet's chief executive officer, said the pancreas was not used for a transplantation. Wilson said LifeNet retrieved 52 usable issue grafts from the donor, including a thigh bone, hip joints, tendons and a knee ligament. He said 44 of the 52 tissue grafts taken from the man were sterilized and were unlikely to spread the AIDS virus.

After the Storm, America salutes GIs with free rides, lunches

The Associated Press

From airlines to amusement parks, from baseball to breweries, the returning veterans of Desert Storm are being rewarded with an assortment of freebies and discounts.

Some of the outpouring is on a local scale: free lunches in small towns, free rides in Madison, Wis., and fishing trips for the 50-member Penn's Waters Bass Busters in Evans City, Pa.

Other largess comes from national entities such as Major League Baseball, the Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corp., Sears and Anheuser-Busch Companies Inc. No one disputes the promotional value of the give-aways. But the idea, participants say, is to recognize the 541,000 men and women who endured the heat, sand and desolation of desert duty to liberate Kuwait from Iraq.

"It sounds like everybody wants to be Santa Claus," said Bob Kirby, head of the Better Business Bureau in Mobile, Ala. Offers to men and women in uniform include one to get out of uniform. Pine Tree Associates Inc., a subcontracting camp for medics in Crownsville, Md., has invited retive troops, reservists and their families to spend a clothes-free Memorial Day weekend at no charge.

In more traditional recreation, service members can appreciate others in uniform baseball uniforms, that is - The 26 Major League teams are giving unused tickets to veterans.

A "Yellow Ribbon Summer" starts Saturday - Armed Forces Day - at the seven family entertainment parks owned by Anheuser-Busch, the world's largest brewer and second-largest operator of theme parks.

All active-duty military and their immediate dependents may visit the parks free of charge through Labor Day. The company owns four Sea World parks, Busch Gardens in Virginia and Florida and Cypress Gardens in Florida.

In addition, Anheuser-Busch has set up a $1.2 million college scholarship fund for the children and spouses of Americans killed in the war.

Mobil Corp. established a scholarship with a $100,000 grant at the University of Oklahoma for veterans and families.

The auto industry, enduring one of its worst slumps in recent times, is making a pitch. Veterans and their spouses can get up to $800 off the purchase of a new General Motors vehicle, or they can buy a Ford Mercury or Lincoln for 4 percent above dealer cost in the military recognition purchase program. Both offers run through the end of the year.

Tom Barton, a dealer in Virginia Beach, Va., is giving away a Ford Escort to a veteran in a July 2 drawing. "Everybody likes a winner but I think it's our opportunity to be just be thankful that we're Americans," Barton said.

At Sears, veterans can get a free oil change, a safety inspection for the family car, a family portrait plus five wallet-size pictures taken at the Sears photo studio and a 10 percent discount on purchases.

Several airlines are offering discounts for veterans.

New York City has Operation Desert Oasis - hundreds of free weekend meals stays plus Saturday dinner or Sunday brunch for Big Apple residents who served in the gulf. The rooms will be awarded at a raffle on Flag Day, June 14.

In San Diego, veterans are entitled to hotel discounts, free meals at some restaurants, plus free admission to the San Diego Zoo and Wild Animal Park.

Patriotism also pays off in the pocket-book.

In Fayetteville, N.C., home of the Army's 2nd Infantry Division and 7th Air Force Base, the Chamber of Commerce has organized Operation-Celebration, a Red, White and Blue sale from June 30 to July 4. Those with military ID cards get special discounts.

The event includes a free concert by the North Carolina Symphony and a People's Parade, in which the military watches while the community marches to honor them.

West Virginia National Guard members and reservists activated for the war are receiving discount cards, good at more than 300 businesses from Armed Forces Day through June 1. Discounts range from 10 percent to 20 percent at department stores, jewelers and electronics stores.

Any service member with a hankering to go fishing has an open invitation from Mike Bailey of the Penn's Waters Bass Busters Club in western Pennsylvania.

"These guys were stuck out in the desert. We figured we could take them out on the water," said Bailey.

Vietnam Veterans Chapter 5 in Madison,

Wis., has put together gift packs for returning soldiers that include free cab rides home from the airport and bus terminals.

What Murray made assigned to a Marine combat unit in Vietnam, wanted to make sure the Madison veterans were appreciated.

"We realize we didn't get the parades. We are not sorry. We are learning from past mistakes," Murray said. "These guys deserve recognition, and we are going to be in the forefront to be sure they get it."

Some Wisconsin banks have Operation Mortgage Shield, a break on payments for those on active duty. Arizona attorneys are volunteering their services to help returning troops deal with legal problems related to their absences.

Bonuses voted by state legislatures are pending in Pennsylvania, Montana and West Virginia. State tax breaks have been approved in Tennessee and Oregon. Connecticut is offering free tuition at state colleges.

"There's things happening all over," Capt. Scott Meske, a spokesman for the Wisconsin Department of Military Affairs. "It is more than a loyal trooper would expect."

Autonomy plan near for Kurds

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - A top Kurdish leader said Friday he has agreed with Saddam Hussein's government on key points of a plan for Kurdish autonomy and democracy throughout Iraq.

He urged Kurds to return to their homes.

Masoud Barzani, whose Kurdish Democratic Party is the largest guerrilla faction in the coalition against Saddam, also suggested the Kurds have dropped their demand for international guarantees for the accord.

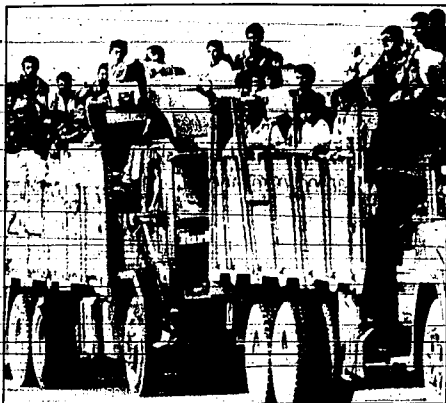

Barzani, who has been discussing autonomy and reforms with the government for two weeks, gave no details of the agreement, saying they would be outlined at a news conference on Saturday.

The Kurdish leader also urged refugees who fled the fighting to return to northern Iraq. Tens of thousands of Kurds fled to the mountains to escape government retribution after they failed uprising in the wake of the Persian Gulf War.

Up to 100,000 of those refugees are on their way home, and allied officials said Friday they intend to build several more camps near Zakho in northern Iraq. Officials said in a statement issued in Turkey that they plan to set up five new temporary tent villages, each housing 20,000 refugees.

Barzani told a news conference at a Baghdad hotel that he was optimistic an agreement with Saddam's government would be signed soon.

"We didn't reach full agreement, but we passed a very important step," Barzani said. "We agreed with the government about the main points of the democracy."

Trucks full of Kurdish refugees line up outside a camp in Silopi, Turkey, on their way home to security zones in northern Iraq.

A key demand of the Kurdish rebels has been wider participation of the Kurds in legislative and executive decisions. They have also called for democracy throughout Iraq. They want full autonomy in three northern provinces where most of the 3.5 million Iraqi Kurds live, and a share of the revenue from lucrative oil fields located in the Kurdish region.

The Kurds accuse Saddam of not honoring a 1970 agreement on autonomy. But asked whether the Kurdish people could trust Saddam now without international guarantees, Barzani said: "Why not?"

He added: "I think the democracy and the trust between each other are the biggest guarantees."

Mystery disease kills 26 children; many other refugees in jeopardy

ZAKHO, Iraq (AP) - An unidentified disease has killed at least 26 children returning from Iraq refugee camps on the Turkish border and many others are believed to be in jeopardy, officials said Friday.

Medical workers said the victims, most under 3 years old, appear to be dying of a blood infection. But they don't know exactly what type of infection, or how the children got it.

"We might lose a lot of kids before we get a grip on it, because we haven't even been able to identify what it is," said Gus Komura, a health specialist with the aid team sent by the U.S. Agency for International Development.

The outbreak comes as aid organizations and coalition military forces were succeeding in greatly reducing the mortality rate among the refugees.

Dr. Ron Waldman, a medical epidemiologist from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control, said children were apparently dying of the disease because malnutrition had severely weakened their defenses.

"These children become so depleted and unable to respond, they're just sitting ducks for any kind of opportunistic infection," he told reporters Friday.

He said officials were seeing "an emerging serious problem of malnutrition."

Oddly, the malnutrition is occurring even though there is adequate food for the refugees. It develops because sick children lose their appetites and refuse to eat, Waldman said.

When they recover, they are weak and more susceptible to new illnesses, which prompt them to stop eating again, he said.

"(Death) is a consequence of a vicious cycle that results in the breakdown of the child's immunity," he said.

The outbreak has prompted health officials to begin programs at refugee camps and "way stations" for returning Kurds to strengthen children with high-protein foods, he said.

So far, 30 to 50 cases of the unidentified disease have appeared, Waldman said. Authorities are calling it Gram Negative Sepsis, a term covering many blood infections.

In crowded rooms at the hospital in the northern city of Zakho, skin toddlers with the disease rub their stomachs and beg for water.

French doctors at the hospital say the victims of the disease have several symptoms in common. They generally have been treated for dehydration in recent weeks and suffer fevers followed by sudden plunges in temperature, they said.

CBS correspondent captured by Iraqis to return to Baghdad

NEW YORK (AP) - Newsman Bob Simon, who was captured and held by Iraq during the Persian Gulf War, will return to Baghdad on Monday to spend a week reporting for a July 4 special on the aftermath of the war, CBS said Friday.

"Iraqi officials gave him permission for the trip earlier this week.

He and three CBS colleagues were captured near the Kuwait-Saudi border on Jan. 20, less than a week after the war began. They were freed three days after President Bush ordered a cease-fire.

Simon, 49, also plans to visit Kuwait City to report on postwar life there. He'll be accompanied by CBS reporter Bob McKeown, one of the "news" correspondents to broadcast from the city after occupying Iraqi forces fled the city on Feb. 26.

Simon's one-hour special is called "Bob Simon: After the Storm." It has been with CBS for 25 years.

Bush finds 'real cause for optimism' about Mideast peace talks

President Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III meet with reporters to discuss Baker's recent trip to the Mideast.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Friday there is "real cause for optimism" about convening a Mideast peace conference, and pledged to keep trying despite hard-line differences between Israel and Syria.

A tired-looking Baker met with Bush over lunch to report on his fourth Middle East mission in two months and to discuss options for the future.

Later, during an exchange with reporters, Bush brushed aside speculation that he might invite Arab and Israeli leaders to Washington to see if the deadlock could be broken. "That's a detail I'm not discussing," he said.

The president said he would send Baker back to the Middle East "if there's a reason to go back."

Baker has flown 67,583 miles in the four rounds of shuttle diplomacy, Bush joked that another trip "might kill him."

The president and the secretary appeared determined to put the best face on developments despite apparent obstacles.

"My assessment after hearing the report from Secretary Baker is that there is real cause for optimism," Bush said, stopping briefly on the South Lawn as he headed to his helicopter and a weekend at Camp David. "And we will continue to work this process," the president said. "We're not about to stop... And when you're working a problem this complicated, you just keep on plugging away."

Like Baker, Bush refused to discuss any proposals put forward by the United States, saying that quiet diplomacy was in order.

While saying Baker was working with a "very difficult problem," Bush added that "there's reason for optimism, good reason for optimism."

He offered few details except to point to a declaration by Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf states that they would send an observer to a peace conference. Despite Bush's upbeat statements, Israel and Syria remained unalterably at odds over arrangements for a peace conference.

Syria wants the conference run by the United Nations and is an ongoing affair. Israel opposes any role for the United Nations and insists any conference be merely a ceremonial affair giving way to direct negotiations.

Jordan's King Hussein, another major player, has yet to agree to attend a peace conference with Israel until another Arab leader jumps in first. The dispute over procedural details demonstrates the immense difficulty that would confront any conference convened to resolve the problems of peace, territory and Palestinian rights.

Nevertheless, Bush said there continues to be a "window of opportunity" in the wake of the U.S.-led Persian Gulf War. "I think the credibility of the United States is higher in the Middle East than it's ever been," he said.

U.S. Navy uses bad data to close bases

WASHINGTON — The Navy used flawed data to select bases for closure or realignment, congressional investigators told a base-closing panel Friday, contending the service will end up with more space than it needs if the panel, lawmakers and President Bush go along.

Frank Conahan of the General Accounting Office told the panel that it should not simply revise the proposed list, despite what the agency said were inaccuracies in the information it was based on. Rather, he said, it is imperative that the Navy and Pentagon provide the Base Closure and Realignment Commission with specific details about how it arrived at its recommendation to close nine bases and realign 17.

The Navy and the Defense Department owe you people that information," Conahan testified before the commission at a Capitol Hill hearing. "The Navy had no immediate comment on the report, or the General Accounting Office testimony."

Libyan guerrillas to be resettled in U.S.

WASHINGTON — About 350 Libyan guerrillas trained by the United States to fight dictator Muammar Gadhafi have been scattered in 11 isolated locations in the United States to be resettled at government expense, officials said Friday.

The decision to accept the soldiers of the self-styled Libya National Army as refugees ended a six-month odyssey for the men who once served in Gadhafi's expeditionary force that invaded Chad, Libya's neighbor to the south, and later decided to attack their northern African homeland.

On Thursday, the guerrillas were quietly flown from Kenya to New York. From there, they were sent "to various destinations," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said.

He refused to say where they went or to identify the private agencies the government has retained to help the new arrivals.

Bush must act soon to save China trade

WASHINGTON — President Bush "will lose his battle with Congress over renewing favored trade status for China unless he takes quick and firm steps to show U.S. displeasure with Beijing's human rights and weapons policies, two senators predicted Friday.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he would introduce a resolution disapproving most-favored-nation trade status for China and forecast passage unless Bush can find a way to deal with China and calm Congress' anger.

Republican on Cranston's Foreign Relations subcommittee, Sen. Frank Murkowski of Alaska, agreed.

CIA assessed Saddam's intentions late

NEW YORK — CIA chief William Webster says the agency was late in evaluating Saddam Hussein's intention toward Kuwait.

But in an interview to be published Sunday in Parade magazine, Webster disagreed with Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren's assessment that the agency was still involved in fighting the Cold War and lacks "sufficient Arabic specialists, linguists."

Webster, who announced last week his decision to leave the agency, said an assessment was made 10 months before the invasion that Iraq was too exhausted after its eight-year war with Iran to start any new battles.

He said that opinion came not only from the CIA but from the Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency, allies in Western Europe, Israel's CIA equivalent the Mossad and intelligence agencies of friendly Islamic nations "which are not lacking in Arabic linguists."

Rock group dismissed from lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY — The rock band AC-DC has been dismissed from a wrongful-death lawsuit brought by the father of one of three teen-agers who were crushed to death during its Jan. 18 concert.

The lawsuit by the father of 14-year-old Curtis Child said the band, a security firm, arena managers and others were negligent in putting on the concert at the Salt Palace. The $8 million lawsuit filed Feb. 4 named the band, Spectator Management Group, concert promoter J.C. McNeil, security firm Contemporary Services Corp., the band's agent and manager, and sponsor KBER Radio.

U.S. trade deficit lowest in nearly 8 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit narrowed sharply to $4.05 billion in March, the lowest level in nearly eight years.

That occurred as the recession cut further into import demand while higher increases in aircraft and computer sales kept exports at near-record levels, the government said Friday.

The Commerce Department said the deficit shrank by 26.5 percent from an already low February level of $5.4 billion.

Imports fell 2.7 percent to a two-year low of $38.04 billion while exports edged up 1.2 percent to $33.99 billion, the third highest level on record.

The Bush administration said the new trade report bolstered its view that the demand for American products will help lift the country out of the recession.

"Exports are the engine of growth for the American economy," Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher told a trade conference in San Jose, Calif., one stop on a 30-city tour to encourage U.S. companies to trade more internationally.

"While economic growth overseas has slowed, American industry clearly is 'building market' share " abroad through renewed commitment to quality and to the expansion of international markets," Mosbacher commented on the trade statistics.

Some private economists were less optimistic, noting that while exports are staying near the record level reached in October, they have essentially been flat for the last six months.

Economists worried that the February and March increases in the dollar, by making U.S. goods more expensive, would hurt American sales at the very time demand is shrinking because of recessions in such major U.S. markets as Canada and Britain.

Even the administration has expressed concerns. Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisors, specifically listed weakness in Europe and Japan as a risk to the administration's forecast that the U.S. economy will begin growing again after mid-year.

President Bush and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady tried to convince U.S. allies last month to agree to a round of coordinated worldwide interest rate cuts to boost global demand, but Japan and Germany rejected the idea, citing inflationary risks in their countries.

The March deficit was the smallest monthly imbalance since a $3.96 billion trade gap in June 1983.

So far this year, the deficit has been running at an annual rate of $67.7 billion, far below last year's $101.8 billion deficit.

The administration released a new outlook Thursday projecting that this year's deficit will fall to around $90 billion.

If that happens, it would be the first time the deficit has been below the $100-million mark since 1983.

Some analysts said the administration's projection may prove too optimistic if export demand remains flat or even weakens while U.S. demand for imports picks up in the second half of this year.

The March drop in imports came despite the fact that America's foreign oil bill rose 1.6 percent to $3.76 billion. The volume of oil shipments was up a sharp 9.8 percent but this was partially offset by a drop in the price, which fell to $17.15 per barrel, down $1.43 from the February average.

Queen plans to knight Gen. Schwarzkopf

Knights-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf will be knighted by Queen Elizabeth II Monday when she visits his Central Command headquarters in Tampa, Fla., the British Foreign Office announced Friday.

The news came as the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, wrapped up her third state visit to the nation's capital with a 20-minute prayer service at the recently completed Washington National Cathedral.

The royals came as the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, wrapped up her third state visit to the nation's capital with a 20-minute prayer service at the recently completed Washington National Cathedral.

Monday's scheduled one-hour visit at Maxwell Air Force Base will be the third encounter between the monarch and the general in less than a week. Schwarzkopf attended the White House state dinner Tuesday and was scheduled to dine Friday night aboard the royal yacht Britannia, docked in Miami.

The Foreign Office said Schwarzkopf "was personally responsible for the master plan, affecting all the elements within the coalition forces which secured the outstanding military victory that was achieved in the Gulf War."

Schwarzkopf is the 58th American since World War II to receive the highest honor Britain can bestow on a foreigner. The most recent were former President Reagan and former Secretary of State Caspar Weinberger.

Schwarzkopf is getting the same rank of knighthood, Knight Commander, given to two American commanders in the Korean War — Gen. Mark Clark and Matthew Ridgway.

The knighthood's top rank, Knight Grand Cross, was bestowed on former president and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and five other U.S. commanders in World War II.

Castro's close associates reported to be in touch with exiles

MIAMI (AP) — Members of Fidel Castro's inner circle have secretly been in contact with a powerful Cuban-American group to plan for a transition to a market economy in the post-Castro era, an exile leader said Friday.

"They are very important contacts, very high-level, and very serious requests — and we think honest requests — to think about the future," said Jorge Mas Canost, chairman of the Cuban American National Foundation.

He emphasized that the contacts with the foundation, which began two years ago and occur regularly, "are not a conspiracy against Castro, although he acknowledged the Cuban president was unaware of them.

Mas did not name any of the officials, but said they were members of Castro's inner circle who see him regularly. He later referred to a possible post-Castro government of Cuban bureaucrats and military officers.

The announcement came as Mas inaugurated a blue-ribbon commission that will draw up a plan for Cuba's transition to democracy and a free-market system. Former President Reagan was to address the commission Friday.

The commission's honorary chairman is publisher Malcolm Forbes Jr., and includes conservative economist Arthur Laffer, former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations Jeanne Kirkpatrick, former National Security Adviser William Clark, Sens. Bob Graham, D-Fla., Connie Mack, R-Fla., and Joseph I. Lieberman, D-Conn.

What's what?

The risky business
Just how risky is it to start up your own business? If the statistics have it right, only one new business in 10 survives long enough to celebrate its fifth anniversary. To get far better odds at the track, bet on the favorite.

Q. At sea, a tall sailor. I realize, can see farther than a short sailor. But how much farther?

A. A 6-footer, 32 miles. A 5-footer, 2.9 miles.

Q. What were the first wand ads?

A. Signs posted on walls. In ancient Egypt. About runaway slaves.

The "man who came up with the "In God We Trust" motto— Treasury Secretary Salmon P. Chase — is also the man who decided arbitrarily that our paper money ought to be green.

PIPE SMOKER
It's known that President Zachary Taylor's wife Margaret smoked a pipe. But I can't show you a picture of her smoking it. Aren't any pictures of her doing anything.

Price of tennis balls hasn't changed much in the last 10 years. But the price of tennis rackets has gone up up up.

More women than men go to dentist offices.

Q. Girls develop more cavities than boys do. Yet women over 60 have more teeth left than do men over 60. Explain that.

A. Clearly, the statistics come only from people who leave records in dentist offices.

More women than men go earlier and more regularly to dentists. Or have done so in the past.

NO SLEEP
To go too long without sleep can be fatal.

Everybody knows that. Now comes confirmation of what everybody suspects. Death by sleep-deprivation is always preceded by utter disorientation, or in legal lingo, insanity. So reports a medical researcher.

Q. The three most visited cities in Europe are London, Paris and Rome. What's the fourth?

A. Munich.

"Nepotism" comes from the Latin for "nepheW."

Explorers may have located lost 'Bermuda Triangle' squadron

The Associated Press

MIAMI—One of the Bermuda Triangle's deepest mysteries may be solved.

High-tech explorers have located what appear to be the wrecks of five Navy planes that vanished off Florida in 1945, a sailor said Thursday.

The five TBM Avengers, four of which appear to be in excellent condition, were spotted in 750 feet of water, about 10 miles off Fort Lauderdale, said Robert Cervoni, managing director of Scientific Search Project.

"It was incredible—we were filled with excitement," said Cervoni. "We rushed out to the library and tried to read everything we could about the Bermuda Triangle."

The exploration vessel Deep Sea, armed with sonar instruments and underwater cameras, made the discovery in early May while searching for sunken Spanish galleons. The company released the information Thursday after filing their salvage claim in Miami federal court.

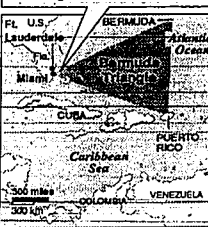

U.S. District Judge Kenneth Ryskamp granted the initial claim, although the Navy has been granted a chance to contest it, said Barbara Locke, an attorney for the company. Navy spokesmen in Washington, D.C., had no immediate reaction.

The team's first priority is to send

submersible robots down to the site to determine if the planes are indeed the so-called "Lost Squadron," which disappeared Dec. 5, 1945, during a training flight from the naval air station at Fort Lauderdale.

No trace of the planes or the pilots was found after they apparently became disoriented over the Atlantic.

The disappearance helped build the myth of the Bermuda Triangle, an area bounded by Bermuda, Miami and Puerto Rico where ships and planes seemed to vanish mysteriously.

The team's archeologist, Ted Darcy, of the Kailua, Hawaii-based aircraft recovery company Wreckfinders, said that while initial indications were positive, he cannot yet confirm the planes' identities with certainty. The Navy lost more than 100 TBM Avengers off Florida, he noted.

One link to the Lost Squadron is a number spotted on the sunken lead plane—28—the same as a number on Flight 19's lead plane, said Darcy. A second link is the letters FT visible on some of the planes, the Navy's designation for Fort Lauderdale-based aircraft.

Another positive indication is the number of aircraft. No other ditching of five Avengers was ever reported by the Navy, said Darcy.

"Four of the planes are in relatively good condition," said Cervoni. "All the glass is intact, there's not much damage. But the flight leader's was broken cleanly in two."

"That raises the possibility that the lead plane, which had a shorter range than the others, ran out of fuel, and the others then ditched behind it. No human remains were visible in the sunken planes, Cervoni said.

Flight 19 ran into trouble after the first leg of its training flight when the leader's compass failed and hazy weather disoriented the pilots. According to their final radio transmissions, they spotted islands they thought were the Florida Keys, and believed they were flying over the Gulf of Mexico, Darcy said.

From the position of the planes, Darcy said, they may have finally realized they were over the Atlantic. A student leader had taken over the flight and may have led them within 10 miles of their home base when they were forced to ditch.

Asked whether he believes in the Bermuda Triangle myth, Darcy was vehement.

"Hell, no," he said. "It's one of the most heavily navigated bodies of water in the world. You've got some tricky currents, the Gulf Stream—

Nebraska plans tongue-twister birthday bash

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - Nebraska will celebrate its 125th birthday bash next year, but many people already are in a quandary over how to pronounce "quasiquicentennial."

"People might mangle the word, but they rarely forget it," said Clark Kolterman of Seward, an organizer for the birthday party who researched the word.

Quasiquicentennial means a 125th anniversary. Kolterman pronounces it "kwis-kwa-centennial."

The Random House Dictionary of the English Language places a long "s" sound on the second syllable—"kwis-kwi-centennial."

"We don't care how you pronounce it as long as it becomes a household word by the end of 1992," Kolterman said.

It is expected that most people will use a shorter version of the word—Q125—to refer to the yearlong celebration planned to mark Nebraska's birthday.

The celebration starts Dec. 31 and will be highlighted by weeklong celebration around March 1, 1992, Statehood Day.

About 6,000 citizens, many carrying large banners, march down the street in downtown Kwangju, South Korea.

South Korean protests appear violent, while deaths are rare

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The scenes are dramatic and searing: black-helmeted riot police surrounded by orange flames, students with masks covering their faces, their arms raised to hurt rocks and firebombs.

South Korean protests frequently have the sound and ferocity of battle, but deaths are rare.

Afterwards, the air reeks of choking tear gas, often for days. Streets are littered with chunks of broken pavement, shattered glass, tree limbs, scorched bricks, damaged storefronts and sometimes, burned-out cars and police vehicles.

The fatal beating by police of a student protester on April 26 has triggered the most violent and widespread anti-government protests since 1987 and created a political crisis for the government of President Roh Tae-woo.

By killing the student, the riot police broke an unspoken taboo against using deadly force to quell riots. Blanks are sometimes fired in the air as a warning, but bullets are rarely used and riot troopers are not armed with guns.

The protests in South Korea are symbolic statements against authoritarianism.

They also are the product of an immature democracy still in the process of reform. Many Koreans say a new way of showing protest is needed. But they say, change is going to be difficult. The patterns are deeply ingrained.

"We need a new protest culture," said Information Minister Choi Chang-yun. "We have to have peaceful legal demonstrations and peaceful labor strikes. We have to learn."

Protests are taken seriously in South Korea, a nation with a history of violent and uncompromising political confrontation. Protesters have effectively challenged former government officials.

The last time security forces fired bullets at civilians was during the 1980 pro-democratic uprising in

High temperatures detected near nuclear facility

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea, Japan and the United States are investigating U.S. satellite data showing unusually high ground temperatures at a North Korean nuclear plant, officials said Friday.

Temperatures at North Korea's Yongbyon facility rose briefly from a normal 50 to 59 degrees to 95 degrees early Tuesday, South Korean officials said.

U.S. officials said Japanese sensors were monitoring the atmosphere for signs of a ground fire or an operational breakdown at the facility. Secrecy shrouds North Korea's nuclear activities, but the country reportedly has two small nuclear reactors and is building a third larger facility, plus a reprocessing plant and a uranium mine to be completed in 1992.

The reprocessing plant and uranium mine would allegedly make North Korea self-sufficient in nuclear fuel and allow it to produce atomic bombs.

The Yongbyon facility is located 60 miles north of the Communist capital, Pyongyang, and 165 miles northwest of South Korea's capital in Seoul. American satellite data first showed ground temperatures at the reactor shoot up before dawn on Tuesday, according to South Korea's Ministry of Science and Technology. It was not known how long the temperatures remained at elevated levels or whether they had returned to normal.

The U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the temperature increase probably was not caused by an underground test because no seismic activity was recorded.

U.S. relief effort in Bangladesh still not running at fullest speed

SANDWIP ISLAND, Bangladesh (AP) — U.S. helicopters and hovercraft on Friday ferried food and supplies to survivors of last month's killer cyclone, but the relief effort was still not running at full steam, a U.S. official said.

Meanwhile, officials said Friday that floods in the northeast — away from the cyclone-devastated area in the south — had killed at least 75 people.

The floods, which began Saturday, have swamped a major highway connecting the capital, Dhaka, with the northeastern district of Sylhet and submerged fields of crops.

At least 139,000 people were killed by the devastating cyclone of April 30, which hurled waves up to 20 feet high along a 250-mile coastal belt on the Bay of Bengal.

A giant U.S. Marine Sea Stallion helicopter brought the first bulk relief shipment Friday to the storm-ravaged Moghadda area of Sandwip Island, where the Bangladesh military had camped a landing pad near a local government building.

Local men, some in tattered shirts and sarongs which were the only clothes they owned, formed a human chain to unload 500 sacks of rice and were quickly joined by several American servicemen, including Navy Capt. John Downs, the task force's chief surgeon who was assessing medical needs.

"It's good, honest work," said Downs, a professor of surgery at Michigan State University, and a Navy reservist who was called up during the Persian Gulf War.

"What I'm striving to get are sanitary living conditions, clean water, and medicine," he said, "it's a tragedy, but it's a tragedy-every day here."

Mohammad Mustafa, a farmer whose house collapsed during the cyclone, killing his 2-year-old son, stood patiently on an embankment with several hundred local residents, hoping to get one of the sacks.

He said he had received only a few biscuits and a little rice and wheat two days ago, all from supplies dropped by helicopter.

The 7,000-member U.S. task force sent to Bangladesh by President Bush started arriving nearly a week ago, but special operations teams providing communications and key initial damage assessments, only made it into the field Thursday morning.

"We're about 75 percent being at maximum efficiency in terms of the application of all of our assets," Maj. Gen. Henry Stackpole told The Associated Press after arriving in the port city of Chittagong, where the relief operation is being coordinated.

Stackpole said an international coalition is forming to streamline and speed up the relief operation for hundreds of thousands of sick and hungry Bangladeshis.

The Americans hope to deliver the first water-purification unit into an outlying island on Saturday and step up hovercraft and helicopter operations over the weekend.

U.S. Army civil engineers and Navy port experts are still assessing cyclone damage.

ANC discusses next step with government

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bomb exploded Friday in a downtown shopping center, injuring six people, and two bombs were defused outside the city's main police station and a bank, police said.

There was no claim of responsibility for the explosives or for a restaurant bombing Thursday night that injured seven people.

Police Capt. Eugene Opperman said Friday the devices were all limpet mines, which can be stuck to objects and easily hidden. He said police were investigating whether one group or person planted them all.

"We have ... issued a warning to the public to be on the lookout for suspicious parcels left in the open," Opperman said, adding that police were scouring the city for other explosives. Police discovered the device at the downtown bank after being called-in to investigate a suspicious package.

"All school facilities at present are at full capacity. Projected student growth rate is a conservative 2%. A stop gap process of adding rooms is temporary and not satisfactory. Many communities fail miserably by not projecting future growth. Let us not fail. We must plan, provide, and motivate our young people so they are able to compete in the competitive struggle ahead."

Voters stay home; no one has filed for Hansen trustee

HANSEN—Voters won't have to go to the polls in Hansen Tuesday night to vote for a new school trustee. Because no one has filed to oppose incumbent Jeanne Gibson, a Hansen home maker, in Zone 1, Gibson will serve another term. And with nothing else on the ballot demanding the voters' attention, there will be no election.

Man charged with molesting child let go until arraignment

TWIN FALLS—A 32-year-old Twin Falls man charged with molesting a 6-year-old girl last month was released Friday until his arraignment in 5th District Court. Jimmy W. Troutoff, 354 Third Ave. W., was ordered to have no contact with young children or the girl's family. He faces two counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor. Troutoff, who sometimes goes by the name Elvis DeWayne Presley, waived a preliminary hearing scheduled for Friday. He was arrested more than a week ago. The girl told Twin Falls police on April 2 that she had been molested. She used a teddy bear to show officers where she had been touched, according to court documents.

Twin Falls man will stand trial on charges of shooting wife

TWIN FALLS—The man who prosecutors say shot his wife in the leg three weeks ago has been ordered to stand trial in district court after waiving his preliminary hearing set for Friday. James K. Medlock, 31, of Twin Falls is charged with a felony count of aggravated battery with the intent to commit a serious felony. Medlock was charged with shooting Frances Medlock outside her apartment on April 28 after an argument over the couple's child, James Medlock, who witnesses say shot himself in the chin during the incident, remained in the Twin Falls County jail in lieu of $35,000 bond.

Keya Collins studied the application of crayfish as consumers of fish farm waste.

U of I researcher says crawdads will eat hatchery waste

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—In southern Idaho's flourishing aquaculture business, the crawdad may be writer with a future. But there are a few problems. "Crayfish seem to prefer (eating) their mates to fish wastes," said Keya Collins, a University of Idaho graduate student who is doing master's degree work on crawdads. Collins was among the specialists who spoke to the research symposium at the second annual meeting of the Idaho Aquaculture Association Friday. She told the five dozen fish farmers and scientists in attendance that crayfish—actually freshwater crustaceans that are junior cousins of lobsters—are efficient underwater scavengers. "Crayfish consume fish wastes and excess fish food, which are converted into biomass," Collins said. "Their survival on fish wastes is about 30 percent, while their survival on fish food pellets runs about 60 percent." But as a thousand, barefoot schoolboys can attest, crawdads are slippery creatures disinclined to remain in captivity. And they don't reproduce particularly well once captured. "There was fertilization, and they did lay eggs," she said of her research. "But there was no reproduction of the crayfish who were consuming the fish wastes." Their survival generally depends upon size, density, feed, habitat and water quality, Collins said. The use of crayfish to consume fish waste is a relatively new idea. Most of them harvested commercially in the United States are taken from streams, ditches and canals in the Southeast and Scandinavia, which has a multi-million-dollar annual appetite for crawdads. "I'm not that familiar with southern Idaho, but I doubt very much if there is any commercial protection in the area," said Collins. "If there is, it's very limited and it's somebody going out and catching crayfish in the wild." Collins said the potential of commercial crayfish production in southern Idaho is "infy."

"Anybody who tried it would have to start on a small scale," she said. Collins said the U of I plans to produce a fact sheet on crayfish farming in the near future. The university will also be pursuing funding for research in constructed wetlands for wastewater treatment, she said. "May is wetlands month in the United States," said Collins, "and wetlands have many advantages." She spoke of using wetlands as natural filtration units and of their use for domestic sewage treatment. "Wetlands are low cost, low maintenance and they elevate the water table and habitat for wildlife," Collins said. They also have disadvantages as waste disposal mechanisms, she explained, but they could help some small fish farmers solve problems with effluents. "You would still need a settling basin for fish manure prior to the wetlands," she said. Collins said she didn't know the long-term effects of such practices on plants and animals that live in wetlands. "That is why we are going to study this," she said. The aquaculture conference will conclude today with committee reports and a water-quality review panel in Room 118 of the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

High schools come with steep price tags

Building plan would leave some rooms unused

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Building a high school is more expensive than building other kinds of schools. That factor is one of the reasons why Twin Falls School District voters will face a $20-million bond issue proposal on Tuesday, instead of a smaller one. Bond issue supporters say their plan is worth the cost, however, because it would solve district crowding, improve high school students' access to the College of Southern Idaho and allow the district to convert to a middle school system. Elementary schools and middle schools typically require less space per student than high schools, and the space is less costly too, said Jim Coles, vice president of Design West Coles' Boise architectural firm is designing the high school proposed in the bond issue election. The high school eventually could accommodate 2,000 students. Of that figure, $18.2 million is for construction and materials costs. Architect's fees come to $900,000, and furnishings and equipment will cost another $900,000. According to calculations based on estimates supplied by Coles, the same 2,000 seats would cost $13.6 million if they were in new middle schools, or $11.6 million in new elementary schools. The proposal would solve elementary-school crowding in a roundabout way. It would transform the current Twin Falls High School and O'Leary Junior High School into middle schools. Robert Stuart Junior High would become the district's seventh elementary school. Turning Stuart into an elementary school would create space for 800 elementary children. Moving all of the district's sixth-graders into middle schools would leave space for about 400 more students in the lower grades. So, of the 2,000-student capacity added to the district by building a new high school, the net gain in student capacity would be 1,200 at elementary schools, 500 at middle schools and 300 at the high school—including ninth-graders. Theoretically at least, those elementary and middle school students could be accommodated more cheaply. According to rough calculations based on Coles' figures:

- Elementary school construction costs $5,775 per student.
- Middle school construction costs $6,600 per student.
- High school construction costs $9,100 per student.

The difference is because older kids need more room and more expensive equipment, according to Coles. So, again theoretically, 1,200 seats in elementary schools and 500 seats in middle schools could cost $5.25 million less than putting the same number of seats at a new high school. But cost per student wasn't the only issue considered by district officials and citizens committee members.

KMVI General Manager Lee Wagner, a leading member of the long-range planning committee that drafted the proposal, said the group's assignment was not to find the least costly proposal, but the most educationally sound one.

Building plan would leave some rooms unused

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—The $20 million bond issue proposal on Tuesday's ballot could leave the Twin Falls School District with some unused facilities and empty classrooms. District officials say if the bond issue passes, the district would have excess classrooms in its elementary schools. Officials say they may close Bickel Elementary School, one of the district's oldest schools. They also might convert it to an alternate high school or put district offices there. School Board members have made no decision on Bickel. Another option the district may consider is closing off a wing at the current high school after it has been turned into a middle school. The building has room for 1,300 students. Superintendent Terrell Donich said, but the middle school would have only about 800. "The district has not decided how it will use that building's extra space. District maintenance personnel may use part of it, and the rest may become offices or storage space, Donich said. The district now spends $400 a month to rent storage space at Donich said. Putting middle school students in the current high school building also could leave many of the school's 900 parking spaces unused. Changes planned for the current high school, Robert Stuart and O'Leary Junior High would leave up some special facilities in those buildings. The district's plans call for Stuart to become an elementary school.

Schools of tomorrow

Beldon-Nelson, supervisor for support services for the Idaho State Department of Education, said resources such as locker rooms, shops or home economics rooms, sometimes go unused when younger students move into schools designed for older students. "If elementary students move into Stuart, they will be coming from schools with cafeteria that double as gyms to a school with a large cafeteria, two gyms and two locker rooms. Donich said the district could open one of the gyms for senior citizens during school hours and for community athletics in the evenings. "I'll bet they don't go unscheduled," he said. District officials say they do not consider making students' way to be a waste of resources. They regard the bond issue proposal as the best way to solve crowding and meet educational goals. Assistant Superintendent Ken Olson said.

At least $2.4 million would be available to furnish high school

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Students may see daily television news broadcasts without commercials in every classroom of a new high school if voters approve construction of the facility. That's because the Twin Falls School District would have up to $2.4 million to spend for furnishings and equipment, such as a computerized book catalogue system in the library and TV sets for each classroom. It's part of a $20 million bond issue election Tuesday in which the district will ask voters to approve construction of a new high school to ease classroom overcrowding into the next century. The plan envisions using the present high school as a middle school, along with O'Leary Junior High, and turning Stuart Junior High into an elementary school. Twin Falls High Principal Carl Snow said the district may buy the TV sets so that students can watch commercial-free news broadcasts daily. Besides televisions, the new high school could have new chairs, computers, kilns and other equipment. About $900,000 of the $2.4 million would come out of the bond issue and about $1.5 million would be generated in investment earnings between the time bonds are sold and invested and when the project is completed and paid off. Part of the investment earnings depend on market conditions and will also cover unexpectedly high construction or materi-

Difficult to make comparisons with proposed school facilities

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Some aspects of the auditorium, athletic and gymnasium facilities at three new Idaho high schools are more elaborate than those at the proposed Twin Falls High School. In other respects, they're more modest. But in each case, they're different than those planned for the $20 million project on which Twin Falls will vote next Tuesday. Critics of the high school proposal have argued that too much money and space are being devoted to facilities for extracurricular activities. But the Twin Falls School District contends the plan is designed to meet the learning needs of students in music, drama and physical education. Idaho's three newest large high schools are Hillcrest High, now under construction for 1,200 students in the Bonneville School District in suburban Idaho Falls; 2,000-student Centennial High, completed in 1985 in Meridian, and Sandpoint High School, being built for 1,100 students to replace the old Sandpoint High, which is being transformed into a middle school. By comparison, Twin Falls' new high school would accommodate 2,000 students.

Gem court upholds conviction of 'sleeping' driver

BOISE (AP) — It is not required to prove intent when an intoxicated driver is found in the front seat of a vehicle with the engine running, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Friday upheld the misdemeanor drunken driving conviction of Kenneth L. Woolf in a Bingham County case, even though Woolf was pulled off the road across both front seats of the vehicle.

A State Police officer testified that he found Woolf's vehicle parked on a shoulder of Interstate 15 near Blackfoot, engine running and the brake lights on.

The officer said he found Woolf asleep or passed out, lying across both front seats with his foot on the brake pedal.

The Supreme Court held that a jury instruction dealing with the standard of care in medical malpractice cases was in error, but the court reversed the error by offering a jury instruction with similar language.

Hanford whistleblower claims harassment

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A chemist who complained about a co-worker smoking near Hanford nuclear reservation's most dangerous waste tank says her telephone was tapped and her apartment burglarized.

Paula Nathaniel filed a complaint of illegal harassment under new federal whistleblower laws against her employer, Westinghouse Hanford Co., which admitted her boss ordered her to destroy a memorandum she wrote on the incident.

Ms. Nathaniel said she complained to supervisors that a radiation protection technician smoked a cigarette in a no-spark zone near Tank 101-SV last Oct. 22.

The government Accountability Project, a watchdog group that is helping Ms. Nathaniel fight the company's appeal, accused Westinghouse of using surveillance equipment to spy on whistleblowers, including Ms. Nathaniel.

Ms. Nathaniel was to be a member of a chemistry team working on nuclear waste problems for the 30-year Hanford cleanup plan.

Chemist Paula Nathaniel filed a complaint under federal whistleblower laws.

Ms. Nathaniel said she complained to supervisors that a radiation protection technician smoked a cigarette in a no-spark zone near Tank 101-SV last Oct. 22.

Scientists were studying the buildup of hydrogen gas under a crust inside the 1.1 million-gallon tank. Workers were warned not to create any flames or sparks, which could trigger an explosion.

Ms. Nathaniel said the smelter was in an instrument shed well away from the buried tanks. The safety concern was a rule barring smoking, eating or drinking in a "radiation buffer zone" to avoid ingesting radioactive particles, she said.

BPA spends $1.5 billion on fish runs, plans more

ALMOTA, Wash. (AP) — The Bonneville Power Administration has spent $1 billion to restore salmon and steelhead runs in the Columbia River basin and is poised to allocate another $1.5 billion, an agency official says.

question is whether all that money will ensure the salmon prosper.

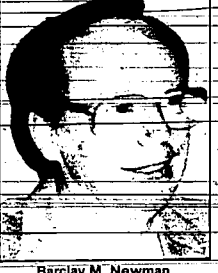

Gov. Cecil Andrus has suggested it on the Lower Snake River dam in the spring, creating a stronger current to direct the young salmon through the reservoirs.

The National Marine Fisheries Service has recommended the Snake River sockeye for that status and is slated to announce its decisions about the Columbia coho and Snake River chinook in several weeks.

Bible society issues anniversary version

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Bible Society, which in its 175 years of life has distributed more Bibles than the world's present population, came out this week with a new one. It's made for easy listening.

Barclay M. Newman

also introduced us to God's kindness on which we stand.

President Bush, in a message for the society's annual meeting Thursday night, said it "has helped to spread the Word of God to people throughout the nation and the world."

Founded in 1816, the American Bible Society has distributed 5.8 billion Bibles, Testaments and Scripture portions, more than the world's present 5.3-billion people.

It's even-handed mandate, clear of denominational differences, is simply to circulate Bibles "without doctrinal note or comment, and without profit."

By the time East reached the critical point in his defense, he knew four in his hand, and he knew that hand. What he didn't know was how to put this information to good use. Dummy's diamond queen covered West's jack, and South ruffed away East's ace. Trumps were drawn if the ace-king-queen-South-ordered his club king to East. On the king, West signalled with his eight to begin an echo (high-low shows an even number of cards in the suit), and East was careful to refuse his ace. South continued with his last club, and East was at the crossroads. What did he know of South's hand? He assumed that South had seven trumps, two clubs and a void in diamonds. Therefore, he must have four hearts-How should he put this information to use? East fell from grace by leading the heart king. Now whether West overlooked or not, the defence could get only two heart winners before having to lead to one of dummy's minor suits.

Since East knew that South had four hearts, he should have led his heart king instead of the king. The only hope to beat the game lay with West's holding the heart ace, and the unblocking maneuver held the key to winning three heart tricks.
