

Gem prayer ruling due in week

The Associated Press

BOISE — The American Civil Liberties Union clashed with attorneys for a north-central Idaho school district Friday in the state's latest battle over whether prayers will be a part of this spring's high school graduation ceremonies.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan promised a decision early next week on whether to order the Grangeville School District to prohibit a prayer during the May 31 graduation ceremonies.

"We're not saying you people can't pray," ACLU attorney Steven Pevar said.

"What we are saying is you people can't pray here. ... It's about governmental prayer," Pevar, representing Phyllis Wright Harris and her three children, said at the ceremony. He also said that the separation of church and state that is even more strongly stated in the Idaho Constitution than it is in the U.S. Constitution.

But Kim Naylor, representing the school district, and Stanley Crow, representing a number of the students who want prayer at their graduation, argued that the government in the form of the school district has stepped out of the picture by turning the ceremony over to the 66 seniors as an open forum. Only a dozen of those students opposed having a prayer.

That effectively undermines the separation argument, Crow said, because those constitutional provisions apply only to government, not individuals. In fact, he said, the school district has issued a written disclaimer to show it was not endorsing the content of the ceremony.

The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to review the issue in a Rhode Island case, but since that ruling will not come in time for the Grangeville graduation, the ACLU pressed Ryan to enjoin the district from allowing the prayer so his clients would not be injured. Naylor argued the students who want the prayer stand to be injured as well if it is barred.

He and Crow extended the ACLU and the Harris case to the court to endorse "their own religious intolerance," arguing that the constitution does not guarantee anyone protection from hearing something they don't agree with.

"If the government can allow various political and philosophical expressions without endorsing it, why can't the government allow various religious expressions without endorsing it," Crow said.

Paul family learning of son's battle death from varied sources

By Phil Salm
Times-News writer

PAUL — A desert storm had descended, cutting visibility amid the swirling sand.

At times during the day, the troops could not see more than 50 yards in front of them, but by evening the storm had slackened somewhat.

Crouched behind a gun in a Bradley Fighting Vehicle, his hand on the trigger, Army Sgt. Nels Andrew Moller heard an Iraqi tank shell glance off the vehicle and explode.

"What was that?" he asked.

His question was answered a moment later when another shell struck the Bradley's gun turret — this one a direct hit, sending out a shower of sparks.

Friend, nephew, brother, son — 23 years young — Moller died instantly.

"He was just like somebody hit us with a sledgehammer," Spec. Patrick Bledsoe, the driver of the Bradley, told Stars and Stripes, a newspaper for military personnel.

Bledsoe scrambled, injured, from the Bradley after the second shell hit.

Two other soldiers in the Bradley survived their injuries as well.

In Paul this week, Moller's father, Nels, talked about the Stars and Stripes story from which he learned details of Andrew's death and from which the above information was gathered.

Andrew Moller pieces together how his son died.

"The survivors all come home with stories of what happened. We don't have that, so we're building a story of what happened," Moller said.

Letters of condolence came, one from Andrew's troop commander and one from a colonel, both stating that Andrew died instantly, honorably and did not suffer.

For that, Moller is grateful.

The letters told how Andrew died. They along with the Stars and Stripes story and a kind woman in Georgia who seen above a Bradley in the Iraq desert, took Moller's main source of information.

But the Army did not investigate Andrew's death, something Moller thought a pamphlet called "A Guide for the Survivors of Deceased Army Member" said would be done.

The guide states that a Line of Duty Report of Investigation will provide facts and circumstances surrounding the death of a soldier. When a soldier's death is owing to combat, Moller wrote the Army on March 2 asking for a copy of the report. On April 3, he received a short reply from the chief of Army Mortuary Affairs and Casualty Support Division.

Bush gets trade pact tool

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress on Friday extended President Bush's authority to make trade agreements free of amendment, providing the strengthened hand he said he needed to tear down barriers with Mexico and other trading partners.

By a 59-36 vote, the Senate followed the House's lead in extending Bush's "fast-track" authority for two years, despite opponents' arguments that it could eventually cost American jobs.

Bush, who had made the issue a centerpiece of his 1991 legislative program, lauded the action as "the best economic news in months."

"I am very, very happy indeed," he said in Boston, where he spoke to a business group en route to a Memorial Day weekend vacation in Maine. After the vote, Bush telephoned congratulations to Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari, who hopes a free-trade agreement with the United States will spur economic recovery and modernization in Mexico.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said trade negotiations with Mexico would begin soon, perhaps as early as the week of June 11.

Bush had argued that without fast-track, America's trading partners would be reluctant to negotiate tariff reductions, fearing the agreements would later be changed by Congress.

Under the fast-track concept, trade negotiators complete agreements with foreign countries and submit the full package to Congress. Lawmakers have one vote; changes are prohibited.

Vegas may resemble Venice

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The man who brought a volcano to the Las Vegas Strip now wants to add a touch of Venice to this desert town's Glitter Gulch.

With farmers battling the booming-gambling meat over rural water rights and local residents on an imposed conservation kick, Mirage Hotel Chairman Steve Wynn has unveiled a $25 million plan to build a network of canals downtown.

The idea would initially require about 1 million gallons of water, which would be constantly recirculated. More would be added to make up for evaporation.

For a desert city that uses 200 million gallons of water daily and is known for its fancy golf courses and home developments with their own lakes, 1 million gallons might not seem like much.

"But don't tell that to rural residents in central Nevada, who are waging a classic water battle between ranchers and big city interests."

And don't tell it to Patricia Mulroy, the general manager of the Las Vegas Valley Water District.

"The district has imposed water conservation measures on the area's 800,000 residents, cut back on allocating water for new building projects, and is in the middle of a battle over unallocated rural water."

"My biggest concern is a perception concern," Ms. Mulroy said Friday.

Abortion decisions pit high court against Congress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court's recent abortion decisions have pitted the court — like the executive branch — against Congress, where a modest majority of abortion-rights advocates are trying against the odds to strengthen reproductive choice opportunities.

The justices' 5-4 decision Thursday upholding a regulatory ban on abortion counseling and referrals at federally subsidized family planning clinics came a day after the House voted to allow U.S.

servicewomen and their dependents to get abortions at military hospitals overseas at their own expense.

"I think it's clear ... that the Supreme Court and the Congress are definitely headed toward a train wreck," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who is sponsoring legislation to repeal what is known as the abortion "gag rule." Similar legislation is pending in the Senate.

But in the shorter run, the arbiter is likely to be President Bush, since Congress has not demonstrated a pro-choice majority strong enough to override a veto on any abortion-related legislation.

"You can't downplay the sometimes decisive role of the executive branch," said Rachel Pine, senior staff attorney for the American Civil Liberty Union's Reproductive Freedom Project. "When you've got three branches of government and two are at odds, that gives tremendous power to the third."

Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right-to-Life Committee, said it's too early in the 102nd Congress to tell whether Wednesday's House vote was a bellwether. The amendment to the 1992 military budget passed on a 220-208 vote.

"It may be that some pro-abortion measure might squeeze through (Congress) this year, but the president has vetoed every bill that relaxed protection for unborn children and we have every reason to believe he will continue to do so," Johnson said.

Last year, he said, an abortion-related bill got through Congress. In 1989, he said, four bills did, and Bush vetoed all of them, including two to let the District of Columbia use its own money to provide

World cooling, climatologist Browning says

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A climatologist who triggered near-panic last year when he said there was a 50-50 chance of a major earthquake in the Midwest now says the world is getting colder rather than warmer.

"There is a rumor that it is getting warmer," said Ben Browning. "It is a false rumor. We are getting colder."

Browning, 73, a biophysicist and business consultant, told a Rotary Club luncheon on Thursday that atmospheric cooling will result from volcanic eruptions and ocean acids.

'Kid out of school' off to Maine after meeting former shipmates

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush, "like a kid getting out of school," escaped the capital Friday for an "extended weekend holiday after a nostalgic reunion with World War II crewmates."

Stopping in Boston on his way to Maine, he was cheered by onlookers and declared their reception "gives me one helluva sendoff for what's going to be a great Memorial Day weekend."

After arriving in Kennebunkport, he quickly went out on his speedboat, taking off his shirt to bask in afternoon sunshine.

Bush, still recuperating from a thyroid problem, met in Boston with the Export Council, gave a pep talk to a group of business leaders and sang the praises of a Republican congressional candidate who had inadvertently figured in an incident that had embarrassed Bush.

President Bush, former shipmates from aircraft carrier San Jacinto watch Avenger torpedo bombers fly past reunion.

Then he flew by helicopter to Andrews Air Force Base, where 250 crewmates and families from the San Jacinto, the carrier he flew bombing missions from in World War II, were waiting, dwarfed by two new jumbo jets — Air Force One and its backup.

"This is the best thing that's happened to my thyroid in weeks," said Bush. "I just want to say how nostalgic this is for me."

"I feel like a kid getting out of school going off [here] to Maine, he said."

His crewmates showered him with presents, including a blue model of the TBF Avenger torpedo bomber that Bush flew 56 missions aboard in 1943-44, including the one on Sept. 2, 1944, when he was shot down by a U.S. submarine, the Finback, plucked him from the Pacific four hours later.

Four of the stocky Avengers flew overhead in a salute as Bush called down the old flight signal officer, Ralph Bagwell, out of the crowd.

"You saved my life plenty of times," Bush said, throwing his arm around Bagwell. "I was a rank amateur when this guy got a hold of me. All he did was get the torpedo squadron, and he made us into aviators."

Bush met in Boston with the President's Export Council and addressed 250 business leaders at a conference sponsored by the Commerce Department to encourage small and medium-sized businesses to seek markets abroad.

Bush planned to spend five nights at Walker's Point, the rustic seaside home his grandfather built after the turn of the century on a spit of land a mile from Dock Square in the old lobstering town of Kennebunkport.

Although the White House still has not confirmed it, sources in New Haven, Conn., said Bush will return to Yale University, his alma mater, on Monday to receive an honorary degree and address the graduates.

For Bush, a 1948 hit, it will be his first trip back as president to his alma mater.

He will fly from Maine to Colorado Springs, Colo., on Wednesday to deliver a major address on defense and the Middle East at the U.S. Air Force Academy commencement before returning to Washington.

Abortion

Pro-choice advocates now see their task as strengthening their support in Congress.

Wyden said that based on the House vote, "it's clear we're picking up support for a bill that would change the gag rule and the House vote on abortions in military hospitals can't be compared directly. While the court case involved administrative constitutional right to abortion, the legal arguments focused on the Constitution's free speech rights.

Since abortion was the center of the case, pro-choice advocates believe that bolsters their chance of attaining a veto-proof margin in Congress to lift the gag rule.

But the court's decision was a "dramatic sign that the Supreme Court cannot be counted on" to uphold its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that said women have a constitutional right to abortion, said Marcia Greenberger, managing attorney at the National Women's Law Center.

"That means Congress has to step into the breach and enact the protections of Roe vs. Wade into law," she said. "American women have no place to turn but the political arena."

But that makes the ACLU's Pincus uncomfortable about the future.

"It seems to me that on the issues we have majority support in Congress, whether it's civil rights restoration or overturning the gag rule," she said.

require an investigation since there is no question concerning benefits and entitlements. Line of Duty investigations were not conducted for combat-related deaths occurring during Desert Storm, therefore, no Line of Duty Investigation is available," the letter stated.

"We regret we are unable to assist you," he concluded.

He shook his head, called the letter crass, blunt. The Veterans Administration managed to reduce Andrew's death to a matter of benefits and entitlements.

"Why pull a stupid pamphlet out if it's going to turn around and say you can't have the report?" he asked.

While the faceless names of the Pentagon have done little, Moller said the local casualty assistance officers Army Capt. Barry Kelly of Hill Falls, has helped the family as much as he could, Moller said.

2 edition of Stars and Stripes but had not read the newspaper. One day while she was doing housework the paper fell out of the magazine rack. She put the paper back and it fell on again.

"I opened it to the cover and the name Moller caught my eye," she wrote.

Hills sent a copy of the story to Moller and from this he learned the first details of Andrew's part in the battle. But the initial story mistakenly called Andrew "Lars" and said it was from "somewhere in Nebraska."

"I wrote the Stars and Stripes reporter who authored the article, Vince Crawley. Crawley wrote Moller and relayed another story."

"I was on another part of the battlefield, about five miles away, at the time of the battle (when Andrew died). The following morning I got lost and, instead of finding the people I was searching for, stumbled into Ghost Troop a few minutes before the soldiers had a memorial service for your son. It was noon, and he had died the evening before," Crawley wrote.

"I was so struck by the expressions and emotions on these men's faces that I stayed with them for several more days while they told me their stories of what had happened that night."

"We did not talk very much about your son. It had happened too recently, and the men were still very shaken," and said: "They gave me the impression he was a popular and well-liked man," Crawley wrote.

In fact, in Stars and Stripes a young soldier said Moller was the only sergeant he could talk with who treated him like a human being rather than a private.

Andrew was the gunner in his Bradley. He and the others in the vehicle went in to battle knowing their main anti-tank defense, a TOW missile launcher, was not working. They went anyway, the story said.

"He died like a soldier," a second lieutenant in Ghost Troop said in the article. "He didn't run and he didn't die for nothing."

"I'll never piece the story together with the help of people he's never met."

He remembers the busy signal when he called the Army casualty report line after learning Andrew was dead. He thinks of getting stonewalled "trying to find out if Andrew's body would be home in time for a memorial service. It wasn't."

He thinks of letters sent before Andrew died — letters that came back with "deceased" written above his son's name.

He thinks of rolls of film and tape recordings Andrew wanted to send home from the Persian Gulf. Do those pictures and recordings lie on an unmarked box somewhere, or did they perish with his son?

Last Feb. 28, the day after learning Andrew died, Moller said his son sent him a letter that way.

"For the country and its ideals, yes. For some of the politicians and a large number of the people, I'm not so sure."

Saddam Hussein still lives Iraq. The Kurds fight for their lives. The Kuwaiti government tortures people and holds kangaroo courts, Moller said.

Americans' enthusiasm over the victory seems to have diminished, leaving Moller to wonder if people have forgotten the sacrifice Andrew and others made. However, an invitation to join a national service honoring the war's soldiers and casualties in Washington D.C. on June 8 heartened Moller.

"Not everyone has forgotten. Three stormy months have passed since Andrew died. This Memorial Day will be like no other for Nels Moller."

"In some ways it's almost like a special duty. It's imperative that we pay attention to the memorial and put a lot of effort into it."

Andrew belonged to Ghost Troop, a cavalry unit in the Army's VII Corps that was part of the initial Allied assault into southeastern Iraq on Sunday, Feb. 24.

U.S. airlifts Jews from Ethiopia to Israel

WASHINGTON — The United States was instrumental in Friday's airlift of thousands of Jews from Ethiopia to Israel, interceding with the Ethiopian government and with the rebels marching on the country's capital, officials said.

But the administration told the Israeli government not to settle the immigrants on occupied Arab lands.

"We understand that the Ethiopian decision to allow the Falashas (Ethiopian Jews) to depart the country was taken in response to a letter from President Bush on May 22" to acting Ethiopian President Testaye Gebre-Kidan, said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater.

Testaye, formerly vice president, has been running Ethiopia since President Haile Mengistu Mariam fled the country earlier this week.

The meeting in Lisbon will be held June 1 by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh while they attend ceremonies in the Portuguese capital marking the end of a civil war in Angola.

Soviet Union, U.S. may settle treaty

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union may resolve their remaining differences over a treaty to cut non-nuclear armed forces in Europe at a meeting next week in Lisbon, administration officials said Friday.

That, in turn, would remove a roadblock to a long-postponed U.S.-Soviet summit meeting. But President Bush still would want another treaty to cut long-range nuclear missiles finished before he agreed to see President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the officials said.

The meeting in Lisbon will be held June 1 by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh while they attend ceremonies in the Portuguese capital marking the end of a civil war in Angola.

Chairman questions military jailing

WASHINGTON — The chairman of a House panel is questioning the Air Force's decision to jail for six months a pregnant captain found guilty by a military court of the wrongful use of left-over pain-relief pills from a two-year-old prescription.

"I am terribly concerned by the appearance of irregularity and possible vindictiveness in this case," Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, said in a letter to the Defense Department's inspector general, Susan Crawford.

The letter, dated May 22, was made public Friday.

The case involves Air Force Capt. Paula Lancaster, who was a staff nurse at the Wilford Hall medical center at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas.

Noriega crony gets 20-year sentence

MIAMI — A federal judge sent a tough message to Manuel Noriega's co-defendants Friday when he handed down a 20-year sentence to a man who spurned a plea bargain.

The message: cooperating with prosecutors may be the safest route. William Saldarriaga, 47, a Colombian businessman, was found guilty in March of two trafficking counts in a 1986 arms-for-cocaine deal that forms a small part of Noriega's broader indictment.

The 20 years levied by U.S. District Judge William Hoelveler contrasted with the 10-year maximum the U.S. attorney's office has promised defendants who help prosecutors with their case against the deposed Panamanian leader, Saldarriaga's attorney said.

World War II submarine hero dies

CORONADO, Calif. — Retired Rear Adm. Wreford G. "Moon" Chapple, whose World War II submarine heroics became material for books and a television series, had died at age 83.

Chapple died Monday at his home. The coroner's office said it had no file on his cause of death, and there was no answer at Chapple's home on Friday.

Chapple was a commander in the submarine service when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. His submarine, S-38, sank the second Japanese ship in the Pacific war, the transport Haru Maru.

He was once sent to pick up Gen. Douglas MacArthur, but never completed that mission because he sank a Japanese attack ship in Tyubias Bay, near Mindanao in the Philippines.

Reservists released from active duty

WASHINGTON — Nearly 10,000 members of the Army National Guard and Reserve were released from active duty and returned to reserve status this week, the Army said Friday.

The 9,832 soldiers were among more than 137,000 Army reservists called to active duty during the Persian Gulf crisis.

Still on active duty are 52,218 Army reservists, of which an estimated 8,200 are scheduled to be returned to reserve status in the coming week, the Army said.

Baker proposal could turn tide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret proposals by Secretary of State James A. Baker III could clear the final roadblocks to a Middle East peace conference, Israeli sources said Friday.

Described as "fall-back" positions, the proposals deal with a U.N. role in Arab-Israeli negotiations and whether the peace conference could be reconvened if there is a deadlock.

The sources, declining to be identified further, said that the proposals were acceptable to Jerusalem but that it was not known yet whether the Arab states would go along.

Baker, meanwhile, has no plans to resume his Middle East shuttle. Margaret D. Tutwiler, the State Department spokeswoman, said. However, she did not rule out a change in plans with little notice.

The sources declined to describe the proposals Baker left with the Israeli government a week ago. The trip, his fourth to the region in a little more than two months, did not produce an agreement on a peace conference.

But Baker and Israeli officials have said there were far more points of agreement among the parties than disagreement.

In a speech Baker isolated the issues of U.N. participation and a reconvening of the peace conference as the only remaining obstacles.

He told Congress this week it would be said if these issues prevented peace talks. "Those chances do not come along very often in the Middle East," he told a Senate operations subcommittee on Thursday.

Agreeing, the Israeli sources said Friday that "we do share the administration's cautious optimism the process has not come full stop."

Syrian President Hafez Assad is insisting that the United Nations play a meaningful role in the negotiations and that the conference be reconvened if Israel and the Arabs deadlock on terms for a settlement.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir is trying to block a U.N. role. Israel has lost several major fights in the United Nations, and in 1975 the General Assembly equated Zionism with racism.

Government efforts to wipe out the Hawaiian pot crop have been so successful that many growers have abandoned the lucrative business, or have taken to importing mainland marijuana and trying to peddle it as Hawaiian grass.

The retail price for top-grade Hawaiian marijuana has skyrocketed in the last three years, from about $150 an ounce up to $700 an ounce in Honolulu.

In other words, Hawaiian marijuana now costs twice as much as gold. The all-out assault on marijuana — a drug-war campaign that has even involved the military — has even a radical development in a state known as the producer of the world's best buds.

That is very significant, said Roger Christie of the Hawaiian Hemp Council, which promotes use of the hemp plant for more than its marijuana capabilities.

Using the military is a dramatic new turn, and a dark turn, in the war on marijuana.

Armed with helicopters, infrared sensors that can see inside homes and equipment that pinpoint herbicide spray onto marijuana patches, the government appears to have gained the upper hand.

"We are reducing the number of people growing," said Lt. Charles Chai, head of the Hawaii County Police Department's vice division. "We are having quite an impact."

The point is illustrated by the arrests last week of five Maui residents in Los Angeles for allegedly trying to buy 30 pounds of pot. The deal was for $165,000, more than $3,000 a pound. In December, an Arizona man was arrested for allegedly trying to smuggle 54 pounds of grass into Hawaii.

While the amounts aren't large, the arrests are significant because it shows that people are trying to import marijuana to Hawaii.

Carson says he'll leave show in '92

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Carson, the silver-haired king of late-night television, often has been ambiguous about when he'll step down as host of NBC's "Tonight" show.

Leno Carson

But no more.

The 65-year-old Carson told a convention of NBC affiliates at Carnegie Hall on Thursday: "This will be my last year — I'm doing the 'Tonight' show. My last show is going to be May 22, 1992."

Jay Leno, 41, the show's permanent substitute host since June 1987, is the most likely successor.

Carson sidickick Ed McMahon also will retire next year, the New York Post reported Friday.

"Obviously, the 'Tonight' show will continue and we'll be spending the immediate future reflecting on Johnny's announcement," NBC spokesman Curt Block said Friday. However, he said no announcement on a successor will be made immediately.

Carson first appeared as "Tonight" guest host in 1958, and took over from then-host Jack Paar on Oct. 1, 1962.

"I want to point out something, and this is just advice, not a suggestion," he told affiliate executives at the end of their three-hour meeting.

"I hope there's always a show like the 'Tonight' show on television. There are not many shows like that anymore, where new, young performers can come and have a platform and a place to get exposure on national television."

And, he said, "I think it's important to television to keep live shows, spontaneous shows, because I don't think any of us want to see networks end up being a gigantic tape recorder."

Carson, whose show once originated live from New York and is now taped in Burbank, Calif., has outlasted a score of late-night rivals. Among them: Joey Bishop and Dick Cavett on ABC and Carson's own former substitute, Joan Rivers, who had a short-lived show on the Fox network several years ago.

Report says OSHA flunks job followups

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government office responsible for eliminating safety hazards from the job site is missing violations because it does not require employers to show needed improvements have been made, a report says.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration relies on information voluntarily supplied by employers to confirm that hazards are being removed and rarely re-inspects targeted work sites, the General Accounting Office, a congressional investigative agency, said in a report seen Friday.

GAO also said OSHA for inadequate monitoring of the construction industry, saying the identifying of hazards at one site does not ensure that the same problem will not occur at another.

GAO said that because of a lack of resources only 6 percent of all OSHA inspections in fiscal year 1989 were follow-ups. In 24 percent of those follow-up inspections, it was found that the employer had not corrected known hazards.

In other cases, it said, the Labor Department agency never received requested documents from employers showing that action had been taken to eliminate problems, or accepted oral assurances without supporting evidence. GAO recommended that the secretary of Labor institute a regulation requiring employers to submit detailed evidence of how they have corrected health and safety problems.

Hearing on rural fire district is Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — A public hearing on the possible creation of a Twin Falls rural fire district will held next Wednesday. The session is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Shields Building of the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

The hearing, which will be conducted by the Twin Falls County Commission, is designed to determine whether there is enough interest to call an election to decide on the creation of a rural fire district outside the Twin Falls city limits.

Rural residents have asked the county to hold the election to create a rural fire district because of rising insurance rates and the high cost and limited availability of alternative fire protection.

Firewood-cutting season postponed because of weather

TWIN FALLS — Soft and wet road conditions restricting access to areas of the Sawtooth National Forest have prompted postponement of the beginning of the firewood cutting season.

According to John Robateck, Sawtooth National Forest timber management officer, snow-drifts and mud-spots are preventing travel to wood-cutting areas.

"As soon as conditions warrant, we will announce the beginning of this year's cutting season and start selling personal-use permits at our district offices," Robateck said.

Banking firm buys old Red Steer restaurant property

TWIN FALLS — D.L. Evans Bank has purchased the old Red Steer restaurant property on Blue Lakes. The bank plans to open a branch there in the future. But when the branch will open is "very indefinite," said John V. Evans Sr., president of the Burley-based bank and former governor. He said it is premature to anticipate an opening date.

D.L. Evans Bank currently has three branches, in Burley, Albion and Rupert. Though the bank had been working out of a trailer in Rupert, the official ribbon-cutting was held last week.

Municipal swimming pool opens for season today

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls municipal swimming pool will open for the season today. The pool will be open today, Sunday, and Monday from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Next Tuesday through Friday, high school parties and physical education classes will occupy the pool.

On Saturday, June 1, the pool will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Sunday, June 2. A private party will occupy the pool from 6 to 9 p.m. on June 2.

On Monday, June 3, through Wednesday, June 5, the pool will open from 3:30 to 6 p.m., weather permitting. Starting Thursday, June 6, the pool will open for regular weekday summer hours, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Sunday hours will be 1 to 6 p.m.

Admission prices for children 5 years old and younger are 30 cents, or $1.50 for a season pass. For children ages 6 to 12, or $30 for a season pass; $1.50 for those between 13 and 17; or $45 for a season pass, and $2 for adults, or $60 for a season pass, said Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Director Chad Browning.

Families of five or fewer members will pay $100 for a season pass. Families with more than five members will pay $25 for each additional family member.

3 Twin Falls County landfills will close part of weekend

TWIN FALLS — The three Twin Falls County landfills will close Sunday for the Memorial Day holiday and two of them will reopen Monday.

The landfills are located south of Twin Falls, in Bull and in Murto. The county said the Murto dump will remain open only on Friday, Saturdays and Sundays, and it will not be open Monday. The Bull and main county landfills will open Monday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Idaho gas prices soar as demand sizzles

By Denise Turber
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Memorial Day weekend travelers will find the average price of a gallon of self-service, unleaded gasoline has risen 15.4 cents since Easter, bringing Idaho's prices up to par with the national average.

The Idaho chapter of the American Automobile Association's state-wide Fuel Gauge Survey, this week showed the average price for a gallon of self-service, unleaded gas was $1.165. That's up 15.4 cents since mid-March and within two-tenths of a cent from the 1990 Memorial Day weekend average price.

The current national average price is $1.16 for a gallon of self-serve, unleaded regular.

On Feb. 27, the day the Gulf War ended, the same gallon of gas sold for $1.13.

Twin Falls prices shot up even higher. Self-service, unleaded regular was priced at $1.24 Friday at Blue Lakes Pump & Wash, station owner Bill Workman said that price should remain stable, at least through the rest of the holiday weekend.

James Lynch, who owns Lynch Oil Co. of Burley and several Mr. Gas service stations in the Magic Valley, agrees.

"Our price of $1.249 will not go up over the holiday, because we have plenty of gas in our plant," he said.

But Lynch said he's not so sure what will happen after that.

Lynch buys gasoline from six different suppliers, and only one — Amoco — has unleaded gas to sell right now, he said.

"Trucks are lined up to buy the gas, and, if it starts to run out, prices could go up," said Lynch. "We are simply selling more than they can ship in."

With Magic Valley gas prices topping out at $1.2999 Friday in Keetchum, Steve Stroud, who owns Steve's Quick Service in Gooding, is still managing to keep his down.

"Gas has been going up, but I think it's just the typical holiday rise," said Stroud, adding that he plans to keep his price at $1.18 through the weekend. "I'm not going to try to rob everyone," he said.

Trends in gas prices are hard to track, according to Dave Carlson, AAA's Idaho spokesman.

"The seven-cent difference in prices between the northern part of the state and southwest Idaho in late March has dissipated," he said, noting that prices are within a few cents regardless of the four geographic settings surveyed.

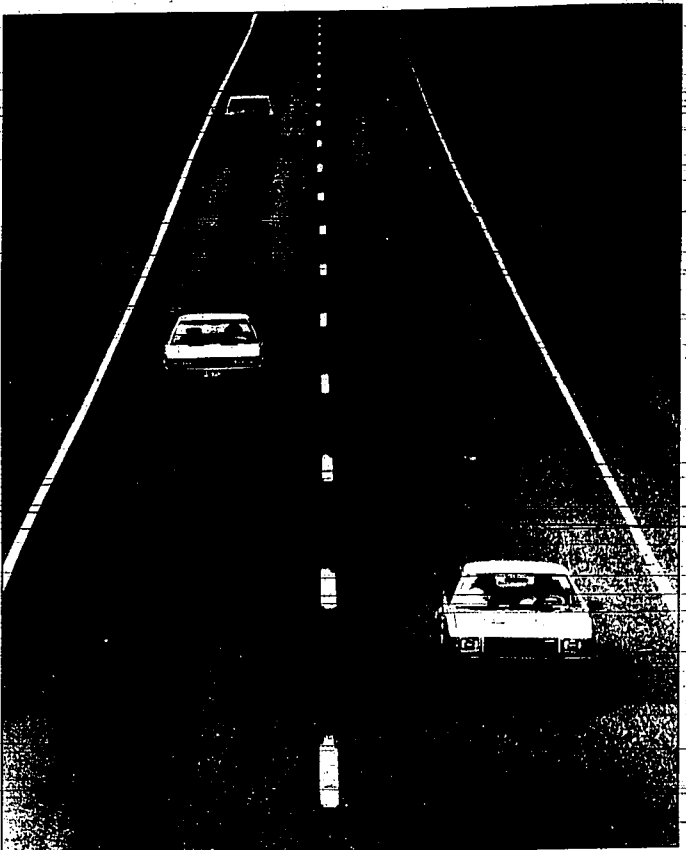

"The glut of oil on the world market that some analysts believed would result after the Iraqi war has never materialized," said Carlson. "A combination of factors, including tighter production by OPEC, growing seasonal demand and Kuwaiti refinery fires has kept the price of crude oil high."

Southwest Idaho motorists enjoyed gas prices under the dollar mark two months ago, well below the national average. Current prices are more reflective of those found elsewhere.

Three cents of the gasoline price increase in Idaho is attributed to the state's new gas tax that became effective April 1. The federal gas tax increased 5 cents last Dec. 1.

"Right now, the demand is up and the supply is down, which means gas prices are high," said Carlson. "But that could change, and, even a week from now, we don't know what will happen."

Nationally, AAA predicts more than 24 million Americans, 10 percent of the population, plan to travel over the Memorial Day holiday. Of that number, 21.5 million are expelled to travel by auto, light truck or recreational vehicle. Another 3 million will go by air, train or bus. Twenty-nine percent of the 91 gas stations surveyed in Idaho will be open 24 hours a day during the holiday, while 90 percent of those contacted will be open limited hours.

Officer patrols will be on the roads

TWIN FALLS — Every available Idaho State Police Officer will be on the road this holiday weekend.

The Magic Valley's accident death rate is much lower than it was at this time last year, and the state police want to keep it that way, said Lt. Glen Schwartz from the Twin Falls ISP station.

"We're going to try and be everywhere all the time," Schwartz said.

The 27 officers covering the Magic Valley will focus on the interstate and state highways, and shifts will be adjusted to put more officers on the road during peak travel times, he said.

Seven people have died on area roads so far this year, a big drop from the 18 killed by this time last year, Schwartz said.

Cassia County goes to bat again for levy

By Laurie Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Following the defeat of a $775,000 supplemental levy by a little more than 50 voters earlier this week, the Cassia County School District has decided to ask voters for a $575,000 supplemental levy on June 18.

Cassia voters turned down the request for the money to build eight elementary school classrooms and for other maintenance and operations by a six percent margin.

The trustees decided to try to get a $575,000 levy passed and put the needed classrooms on hold.

Superintendent Norman Hurst said that for 30 years patrons have voted for a levy, and this year's defeat was a surprise.

"Apparently, we did not educate the people to the fact that a bond, which had passed 20 years ago will be payed off this year, so whether they voted for a $775,000 or a $575,000 supplemental levy it would not have raised their taxes," said Board Chairman Kent Fletcher of Burley.

Fletcher said he thought the large property owners were sending a message that they were "sick and tired" of taxes.

"In the past three years we have passed a 10-year plant facilities levy, a bond for a new jail, and now I think the patrons feel they had just been taxed too much," he said.

Most Idaho farm groups fear fast-track trade agreement

By Matt Smith
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Senate's vote Friday for "fast-track" approval of foreign trade agreements could shut Idaho farmers out of trade negotiations, farm groups said.

"I think fast-track is a cop-out," said Dallen Reese of the Idaho Wheat Commission. "It eliminates input from voters and gives the administration the chance to cram something down our throats."

Congress waived its right to amend trade agreements negotiated with Mexico and other nations Friday, a move President Bush called "the best economic news in months."

But some Idaho farmers' organizations disagreed, saying the Senate's 59-36 vote to extend "fast-track" authority for two years could end up hurting area farmers.

"I guess I don't trust the son of a gurn," Reese said. "You will have people giving away things you or I would never give away because it doesn't affect them."

Fast-track calls for an up-or-down congressional vote on a trade agreement once it is signed. The House voted for fast-track Thursday, 231-192.

But Reese said the Idaho Wheat Growers supported fast-track approval.

"This is split 50-50 down the line for wheat growers," he said.

No representatives of the Idaho Wheat Growers be reached for comment Friday.

Wheat growers could lose government crop support programs in General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations, while a free trade agreement with Mexico could lead to increased grain exports, there, Mexico now imports 30 percent of its cereal grains.

Idaho Senators Larry Craig and Steve Symms both voted to approve fast-track Friday before flying home to Idaho for the Memorial Day weekend. The state's two congressmen, Richard Stallings and Larry LaRocco, both voted against it Thursday.

Fast-track will give the Bush administration a chance to open foreign markets to food exports, said Jim Yost, direc-

Bellevue residents may qualify for hookup assistance

By Deborah Shimkus
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — The Bellevue City Council will allow residents to determine if they are eligible for financial assistance in hooking up the city sewer system.

The city recently received a $375,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to enable low to moderate income households to hook up to the system. It is expected to be completed by next winter.

Residents may sign up for assistance at the city hall, according to Ted Hendricks, grant administrator.

Eligibility is based on number of people in a household and income. Each person will be able to look at the charts to determine if he is eligible, Hendricks said.

Ten percent of those applying for the funds will be selected at random to verify their eligibility, he said. "We don't want people to come and take advantage of the program if they don't need it," Hendricks said, adding everyone ought to have a chance to qualify for the financial assistance.

A public meeting will be scheduled to inform residents about the grant program.

"We would like to get everyone qualified by the end of next month," Hendricks said.

Also at Thursday's meeting, the council installed its newest member, Marsha Riemann, 49, was selected by Mayor Dennis Wright to fill the seat vacated by Brian Saska last month. Saska could no longer serve on the Bellevue council because of his job. Please see BELLEVUE/AS

Board hikes pay for agency heads, university presidents

BOISE (AP) — A divided state Board of Education has approved a 4-percent pay raise for agency directors and Idaho university presidents.

The 4 to 3 vote came Friday after board members Karl Shurtliff of Boise and Diane Biluey of Pocatello argued against the increases for education administrators, who already are among the state's highest paid employees.

"I feel very uncomfortable voting for an across-the-board 4-percent increase for everyone," Mrs. Biluey said. "When you get into the upper salaries, 4 percent is a huge amount."

She and Shurtliff joined Roy Meeman of Moscow in opposing the raises, which include $53,884 for Rayburn Barton, the board's executive director. His pay will jump to $87,978 in the budget year that starts July 1.

"I don't know why Rayburn Barton is worth more in the state of Idaho than Superintendent (Jerry) Evans," Shurtliff said.

Evans, who leads Idaho's public schools as head of the state Department of Education, is paid $62,500 a year in his constitutional office.

Other increases put University of Idaho President Elizabeth Sizer's pay at $108,671, Boise State University President John Keiser at $100,783 and Idaho State University President Richard Bowen at $101,605.

Lewis-Clark State College President Lee Yickers will be evaluated by board members at their June meeting in Moscow for a 4-percent raise on his current salary of $77,210. He was unable to attend Friday's meeting in Boise.

The directors of the state Division of Vocational Education, Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, Idaho Educational Public Broadcasting System and state School for the Deaf and Blind also will get 4-percent increases.

Shurtliff said his opposition to the raises was based not on the administrators' performance, but rather on the argument that the Legislature never intended for such top-level employees to receive the same percentage raise as that authorized for rank-and-file state workers.

Approving the increases, he said, "flies in the face of what the Legislature wanted us to do and what the economic realities are."

But Evans said the Legislature's continuing resolution authorizing pay raises for other state workers stated specifically that "except" employees should be treated in a similar manner.

And board member Roberta Fields of New Meadows said it would be wrong to deny them the raises recommended by Barton based on his evaluation of their performance.

"To say they deserve nothing is to say they've done nothing for us, in my mind," Mrs. Fields said.

Before the vote, Shurtliff predicted that next year's legislation authorizing state employee pay raises would include language specifying that employees not included under the standard salary scale need not receive comparable increases.

State puts off reform measures

BOISE (AP) — Wanting more time to review proposals, state Board of Education members put off deciding which of three contractors should develop a strategic plan for implementing reform measures for Idaho public schools.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans said it would be at least a week before he could arrange for representatives of each of the three organizations bidding for the job to attend a special board meeting in Boise.

A decision is expected before the eight-member panel's June 27-28 meeting in Moscow.

Members are not expected to attend the meeting, board President Colleen Mahoney of Lewiston said Friday.

In an analysis presented to the board, Department of Education officials ranked a contract proposal from Portland, Ore.-based Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory as the best of the three received.

Terrell Bell & Associates, a consulting firm based in Salt Lake City and Washington, D.C., and led by former U.S. Education Secretary Terrell Bell, ranked second.

A proposal from the Idaho Education Initiatives Consortium Inc., which includes Idaho educators, consultants and former House Education Committee Chairman Janet Hyatt of Nampa, was third.

Evans said all three plans meet at least the minimum requirements outlined in the Board of Education's formal request for proposals.

But according to the staff analysis, the Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory scored highest in addressing required responsibilities, staff expertise and the estimated cost and time required to complete the job.

Only in the area of access to research on reform measures in other states, agencies and institutions did Terrell Bell & Associates rank highest.

from throughout the nation. The former education secretary, an Idaho native, also established the National Commission on Excellence in the early 1980s that produced the landmark report "A Nation At Risk."

Meantime, the board on Friday approved appointment of an 11-member Steering and Evaluation Committee to work with the contractor in developing a strategic plan for public school reform and a 25-member Goals and Testing Commission to develop a "performance-based" evaluation system for public schools statewide.

Both panels were established by the board last month and members were recruited by Evans' office as part of an effort to implement school reforms recommended by the Education Project, a consortium of 25 Idaho businesses, the Task Force on the Future of Education in Idaho appointed by Evans and Gov. Cecil Andrus, and the board's own Task Force on Hispanic Education.

Fraternities working to polish images

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho's fraternities are increasing their public relations efforts among prospective members in the face of problems at three houses this year.

In the past school year, the university's fraternities have been rocked by a series of touchy incidents. Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Sigma fraternities chapters were found guilty of hazing pledges and stripped of UI's recognition.

The school has since reinstated its recognition of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Meanwhile, the Delta Tau Delta fraternity was placed on probation for two years for publishing a booklet containing sexual and racist remarks and drawings for a spring dance. Mark Jones, rush chairman for UI's 17 fraternities, said parents of students interested in joining the Greek houses during fall's rush weeks will receive letters next month that outline the systems and leadership training.

This year will be the first time that has ever been done at the University of Idaho, he said.

"We are trying to get away from the 'Animal House' image that has been portrayed for so many years," Jones said. "We are trying to get out more positive information than just the negative information that has been out this year."

Kappa Kappa Kappa fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, will send out a two-page newsletter to parents of prospective members about its benefits along with the names of members, their home towns and majors.

"The more positive information, the better," he said. Last fall, about 340 men went through rush at UI's 17 fraternities.

Jones said he said he hopes the same number will participate this year, although he is not expecting an increase.

Linda Wilson, UI's fraternity and sorority adviser, is optimistic. "I think there is an opportunity to have the same number of rushes as we have in past years, but it is going to take more of a concerted effort than in the past," she said.

Wilson said 205 women went through sorority rush last fall at Idaho.

Failed congressional candidate pays off debts

BOISE (AP) — Parma attorney Skip Smyser, the Republican who lost the race for Idaho's 1st Congressional District in the general election, paid off his $46,544 campaign debt.

Smyser, a former state senator, said Friday that he and his wife Melinda took out a $23,000 personal loan from West One Bank to clear the books with the last of his campaign creditors.

"With payment of these creditors, I can close the file on the 1990 election and begin to look to the future," Smyser said in a news release.

He also announced the payoff in a newsletter mailed to the nearly 3,000 people who helped finance his failed congressional campaign.

LaRocco, a Boise stockbroker, beat Smyser by 9,648 votes of more than 160,000 cast in November's election.

7 die in head-on collision near Utah border

WENDOVER (AP) — An Oregon woman believed driving the wrong way apparently triggered a head-on freeway collision near the Utah-Nevada border that killed her two children and five Japanese citizens.

Utah Highway Patrol spokesman Gary Whitney said Friday that investigators have "some conflicting eyewitness testimony, but we're reasonably sure" it was Ginger Davis, 25, of White City, Ore., who was traveling westbound in an eastbound lane at the time of the crash.

About 16 vehicles, including two cars, were found in both vehicles, but investigators have not determined if anyone involved was intoxicated, Sgt. Whitney said.

Davis was in critical condition Friday at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center in Salt Lake City, hospital spokeswoman Lanya Wright said.

Davis' daughter, Cheyenne Davis, 6, died at the scene. Her son, 6, died in a 1-2 year old, died early Friday morning at Salt Lake's Primary Children's Hospital, the UHP reported.

The accident occurred about 4:30 p.m. Thursday on Interstate 80, about 16 miles east of Wendover. Whitney said the two cars collided head-on at speeds of at least 65 mph.

All five occupants of the car the Japanese were in died at the scene of the crash, UHP said.

They were identified as the driver, Ryn Kaoki, 34, believed to have been living recently in Salt Lake City; his wife, Toshiko Kaoki, 32; their 10-month-old son, Teppy Kaoki, and two women relatives believed visiting from Japan, Ryo Oko Yamamoto and Emiko Yonezawa.

The UHP said it did not have specific hometowns or ages for the Japanese, but understood they may have come from the Osaka, Japan, area.

Investigators continued to probe the wreckage and accident site for clues, but little useful evidence was left, UHP Lt. Ron Oster said.

There was no evidence of braking prior to the collision, he said. "There's not much to go on."

The agency has received some new equipment to cover the state's highways. One item is a 1991 Chevrolet Camaro, painted in state police colors but without the light bar for less wind resistance.

Capable of accelerating from zero to 100 mph in little more than 17 seconds, police say the Camaro will allow them to catch up to speeders relatively quickly.

The State Police hope to have nine more on the road in the next few months.

The department has also acquired 46 1991 Chevrolet Caprices. The ISP has about 200 vehicles statewide, plus trailers about a third of its fleet each year.

Craig voted to extend fast-track to expand more Idaho agriculture, said his spokesman John Barclay.

"Craig and his agricultural staffers have done an extensive study of that and they're satisfied that you're not going to see a net export of technology or massive amounts of job loss," Barclay said.

Wool growers could be hurt if fast track-approved GATT negotiations expose them to unrestricted imports, said Brad Little.

"Australia and New Zealand, they're 100 percent behind their sheep industries in things like recent control, as breaks," Little said.

Also, there are drugs used on sheep we aren't allowed to use here. But a free trade agreement with Mexico could prove to sheep ranchers' benefit.

"As far as Mexico is concerned, we sell a ton of wools down there. Mexico is a great market for culled sheep no one wants to eat anymore," Little said, estimating that Idaho ranchers sell more than $500,000 in old wools to Mexico every year.

Eating "Barbacoa" — tacos made from slow-roasted sheep — is a Sunday-morning tradition for many Mexican families.

Obituary

William W. Miller KETCHUM — William Wesley Miller, 59, of Ketchum, passed away at his home on May 22, 1991, following a courageous battle with cancer.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Monday, May 27, at the First West Presbyterian Church in Ketchum.

He was a unique individual who brought joy and laughter to those whose lives he touched.

Born January 25, 1932, Bill spent his boyhood in Ohio and then moved on to California where he met, then married Barbara Jean Langanie on September 28, 1951. He enlisted and served in the U.S. Marine Corps during the Korean War conflict. Known as a "right hand" man, Bill began his career at the Mountain Park Fire Dept. in 1952. In 1959 he began work at the Mountain View Fire Dept., serving as firefighter, engineer, fire protection marshal, captain and battalion chief. Following his retirement from Mountain View, Bill and his family moved to Ketchum, Idaho, where he served as chief of the Ketchum Fire Dept. until 1986.

Never being one to rest on his laurels, he acted as a fire protection consultant, formulating the protection planning for the National Park Service, Disney World and the Pontiac Motor Test Fire Dept. in Michigan.

He was a past president of the Sun Valley-Ketchum-Relay-Gilth and served as a member for 10 years. Bill was also a member of the National Fire Protection Association and the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation. Bill will be sorely missed by those who loved him and benefited from his knowledge and expertise. He was "captively" proud of the men and women in the fire service of Idaho with whom he trained and worked.

Our beloved Bill has gone to join our Father in Heaven and his father, mother and two brothers who preceded him in death. He is survived by his wife, Barbara of Ketchum; his daughter, Nancy Miller of Halcyon; daughters, Kathy Beacham of Hohnot Park, Calif., and Cynthia Williams and Kris Drussell, both of Boise; son, Randy Miller of Halcyon; daughter, Cathi Beacham of Hohnot Park, Calif., and Cynthia Williams and Kris Drussell, both of Boise; sisters, Wanda Webster and Jayne Smith, both of Anderson, Calif.; brother, Earl Miller of Copley, Ohio; four grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews. Goodbye, Bill. God bless you. We love you.

Bellevue

Continued from A4 cause he moved out of the city limits, Riemann has been a Bellevue resident since 1976.

"As the Chief Deputy for the Clerk at the Blaine County Recorder's office, Riemann works on the election process. Though interested in being on the city council, Riemann did not file for an April election because he said it would be a conflict of interest with his election work.

Riemann said she is interested in the completion of the city's new sewer system and "retiree benefits" to the project. Riemann has dedicated to the project. Riemann's term expires in one year.

The council also dispatched the following business: Approved a variance for the Blaine County School District to build an additional modular unit at the Bellevue Elementary School.

Officers

"We support eliminating food subsidies in the U.S. to get other countries to reduce subsidies at the same time," Yost said. "The Farm Bureau has a strong free enterprise philosophy. Other organizations look at production controls and supply management philosophy."

Bush, in Boston Friday to deliver a speech on trade, said that as a result of Senate ratification of the administration can move ahead on several very important trade initiatives now, including the Mexican trade pact and stalled GATT talks in Geneva.

F.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills has said international trade negotiations would be hampered without fast-track approval, but trade agreements have been effectively negotiated in the past without fast-track, Reese said.

"They could still sign a free trade agreement without fast-track," Reese said. "Twenty-three other trade agreements have been signed without fast-track. It takes away all impact."

Fast-track-approved trade agreements could damage the Idaho dairy and potato industries, the National Farmer's Union said.

"Fast-track for Idaho, where agriculture is an economic foundation, I'm not sure this will be a boon," said Bill Duthart, Northwest coordinator for the Farmer's Union.

"Symms said fast-track will expand markets for Idaho food exports, but you either expand trade, or you don't expand trade," Symms said. "You either give Idaho farmers and producers greater opportunities, or you don't."

A fast-track-approved free-trade agreement with Mexico could ruin U.S. sugar growers by allowing cheap Mexican potatoes and sugar to enter the country unimpeded, said Idaho sugar beet and potato growers.

"A Mexican free-trade agreement will entice major U.S. potato processors to move their operations to Mexico to take advantage of cheap labor, low overhead and non-unionized workers," said Jeff Raybold, president of the Potato Growers of Idaho.

"If this is conducted under fast-track, Mexico has the potential to flood the U.S. with low-cost sugar, said Jeff Reese, president of Amalgamated Sugar. "That could critically injure the sugar industry in Idaho."

Two temporary units are now located at the school. The new unit will encroach 11 feet into the 25-foot setback area from the property line.

Approved a request for a variance for Bob Jones to build on the lot between Norms Grocery and the antique shop in downtown Bellevue. The variance was required because of parking restrictions.

Barnes had requested permission to build a two-story building on the lot. The council followed the Bellevue Planning and Zoning Commission's recommendation to approve only a "one-story building with a basement, due to limited parking. Approved to hold a public hearing on the subdivision ordinance at the regular council meeting June 13. Since the last public hearing, the council has received 10 requests for subdivision ordinance to set alley widths at 25 feet and to disallow any cul-de-sacs in new subdivisions. Public comment will be taken at 7 p.m.

Astrological Forecasts

IF MAY 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are spiritual, psychic, sensitive, can be your own most severe critic. You possess intellectual curiosity, are fascinated with metaphysics, theater, "illusions." Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are restless, never satisfied with status quo, thirsty for knowledge withheld from most persons.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Powerful emotions dominate - feelings relate directly to current happenings. Concern exists for financial status of one close to you, including partner or mate. You receive recognition, money.

TALIRUS (April 20-May 20): Relationship tested, involves possible legal dilemma. Be wary concerning debts, statements that were to be kept "off the record." Element of deception, deliberate or otherwise, does exist.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You'll have more responsibility in connection with employment, basic issues, dependencies. Older individual says, "I'm willing to back you all the way!" Cancer, Capricorn persons play roles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Search for "true love" could be successfully completed. Focus on distance, language, encounter with urbane individual. Long-distance "communication" relates to assignment, romance and travel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasize daring, inventiveness, risk-taking. You'll be enlightened concerning property values, basic security, activities of older family members. New interest, including love, provides stimulation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family member, intent on taking trip, is not deci-

What's what?

Of surgery on the ears
Surgery to draw back ears that stick out too far is called "otoplasty." Not so unusual. About 10,000 Americans a year have it done.

Q. Do grasshoppers have ears with eardrums?
A. They do. One on each side of the abdomen.

Client writes: "Add 'vulgarita' to your list of words that come in handy when talking about the movies. It's the constant use of gutter language." All right. Thought the movies were letting up a bit on that of late, no?

ARTISTS
The American artist Charles-William Peale figured everybody could learn to paint. And should.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lunar aspect coincides with gymney, education, spiritual values, unique communication. Focus on positive, sensuality, strong love relationship. Individual at distance relates vital information.

He named four sons Rubens, Raphaelle, Rembrandt and Titon.

"Remember," writes an attorney, "if there were no bad people, there'd be no good lawyers."

Says a caretaker of chimpanzees, "When a male chimp gets dangerous, he shows it. Blinstering, then charging openly."

A female chimp often shows no sign of danger, but just waits until you're close enough, then attacks.

Females inflict 19 out of 20 injuries on caretakers.

TURNER TALK
It was Ted Turner who said, "Life is like a B-grade movie. You don't want to leave in the middle of it, but you don't want to see it again."

Q. Is "white chocolate" real chocolate?
A. Technically, no. It contains cocoa butter.

"That comes from cacao beans. But chocolate liquor is the only source of true chocolate. To get chocolate liquor, you have to put those cacao beans through quite a process. Roast, shatter, tumble, grind, melt. You wind up with a thick paste."

If the earth were the size of an apple, the earth's atmosphere would be only as thick as the apple's skin.

U.S. rejects Sho-Ban code redraft

PORT HALL — The U.S. Interior Department has rejected the redrafted tribal tax code of the Shoshone-Bannock Indians, and the decision could lead to negotiations on missing revenue from non-tribal members operating on the eastern Idaho reservation.

There was disagreement over whether the rejection was prompted by a technicality, but the revenue-raising process may be invalid for this year. The Interior Department said more hearings must be held.

Simplot firm to pay civil penalties

BOISE — The J.R. Simplot Land and Cattle Co. in southwestern Idaho has agreed to pay $42,000 in civil penalties to settle allegations by the Environmental Protection Agency that it illegally discharged animal waste into the High Line Canal. The penalty was paid under a consent decree in which the company did not admit any guilt. The government had originally sought a $50,000 penalty.

Student missing, feared drowned

LEWISTON — An Enterprise, Ore., High School senior is missing and feared drowned in the Snake River in the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area after he fell in while on a walk.

Jean Forest Partanier, 18, was on a school-sponsored rafting trip Wednesday when he apparently fell into the Snake about six miles upstream from Rush Creek Rapids, the Wallawa County sheriff's office reported.

Ada home tax appraisals will rise

BOISE — Tax appraisals of Ada County homes will jump an average of 10 percent this year to keep pace with rapidly rising property values, Assessor Bill Schroeder says. He noted Thursday the increase could hit 30 percent in some cases, although that does not necessarily translate into an increase in property taxes.

"If the taxing agencies reduce their levy requirements, the taxes could remain nearly the same as last year," he said. But supporters of a revived 1 Percent Initiative to limit tax hikes doubt levies or tax rates would be reduced to level out the bite among residents.

Prayer ban sparks bitterness

ROCKLAND (AP) — Seniors in the predominately Mormon Rockland School District graduated from high school without the benefit of a prayer this week, and it has many of the patrons fuming.

The district agreed to ban graduation prayer a year ago to settle a lawsuit brought by several of its students. But Joey Long, one of those students, transferred and graduated Thursday night from American Falls High School, where prayer was both opened and closed the ceremonies.

"It just frosts me," retired Rockland teacher Judy Dawson said. "She will participate in a graduation that has opening and closing prayer, and we can't have prayer at our graduation."

"It just doesn't seem fair somehow," Dawson said. "We held graduation at the church because there was more room. Usually one of the students gave the prayer. We were nondenominational. Now the ACLU has moved in, and we won't even be having a prayer — but she will."

Rockland was the first in a growing list of Idaho school districts being hit with legal action over prayers and other religion-related practices.

Team probes damage

ATLANTA (AP) — A U.S. Forest Service engineering team flew into the town of Atlanta Friday to assess problems with the Kirby Dam on the Boise River's Middle Fork.

Spokesman Frank Carroll said the dam, reinforced just last year with rock and concrete to halt deterioration, has started to erode again. "We don't believe there is any kind of imminent dam failure," Carroll said.

Nature-lovers defend stretch of Jordan River

DAUGHTERS OF JACOB BRIDGE, Israel (AP) — Polluted, rerouted, depleted — the Jordan is still a river, but only just.

Now, comes more news to chill the soul: a power station is being built on the only stretch of the biblical river that can still be called unspoiled.

"This is a gathering to say farewell to the Jordan River," said Doron Harry, of the Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel, as he ushered protesters onto a bus that would take them to a rally in defense of the Jordan.

"Old wives' tales," snorted Colin Primost, farm manager of Kfar Hanassal, the kibbutz that is building the power station. "We're changing the river, but we're not harming it. A year from now, nobody will even notice it."

Nature's defenders say the plant will slow the Jordan's flow by syphoning off up to one-third its waters to power the turbines. They fear it will damage the river's ecology and scar the landscape to produce a mere 0.5 percent of Israel's electricity supply.

"For a few pennies, a handful of kilowatts, the Jordan is being made extinct," laments the daily Yedioth Achronoth.

The Environment Ministry says the kibbutz has made strenuous efforts to avoid damaging the envipower to halt the project, but Police Minister Roni Milo says he is worried and will raise the issue in the Cabinet.

The 80-mile Jordan tumbles southward through the Galilee hills, via the Sea of Galilee to the Dead Sea.

Its northernmost segment has vanished in a network of canals and pipes for irrigation and drinking water. From the Sea of Galilee toward the river becomes a meandering, polluted trickle as well as a hostile, fenced-off frontier separating Israel from Jordan.

Only the fast-flowing eight miles from the Daughters-of-Jacob Bridge to the Sea of Galilee still remain a natural river, and it was here that about 3,000 protesters gathered Sunday under the slogan "Don't Stop the Jordan."

A nature society guide, who introduced himself as Timor, led them down a Galilee slope onto a rocky, riverside path, running through reeds, tamarisk and willow trees.

The Jordan rushed by, less than 30 feet wide. On its east bank, at the foot of the Golan Heights that Israel captured from Syria in 1967, campers dangled their feet in the water. A canoe knifed past, and the smell of barbecued chicken filled the air.

Timor asked her group to reflect on "Hayarden" — the Jordan — "so important to three religions, so famous, where pilgrims come from far away to dip in its waters."

"And the only place where you can dip your feet without having to hold your nose is this 13-kilometer (8-mile) stretch of the river."

Sitting in his garden at Kfar Hanassal, Primost dismissed the objections. Yes, the power station would take water from the Jordan, but it would put it back. It would not be visible from afar. All its pipes and wiring would be underground, and the artificial lake would attract tourism.

The $4 million plant will earn Kfar Hanassal about $500,000 a year from clean hydroelectricity, he said. It would also enable the gift-fired plant now supplying the northern Jordan Valley to cut output by up to 70 percent, thus reducing pollution, Primost said.

The English-born kibbutznik said he had originally opposed the idea, but changed his mind after studying the plans.

About 25 different committees have approved the blueprints, Primost said. He did not deny the power station would change the Jordan, but argued that humans were always changing the river. "The Jordan of today isn't the Jordan of 2,000 years ago or even 30 years ago," he said.

Gandhi cremated; party seeks leader

Mourners accompany a carriage bearing the remains of Rajiv Gandhi on route to the funeral Friday in New Delhi.

NEW DELHI, India (AP)— Hundreds upon hundreds of mourners wept and hurled rose petals onto the blazing funeral pyre of Rajiv Gandhi on Friday in India once again, paid tribute to a leader struck down by political hatred.

The widow and children of Gandhi, the former prime minister who was slain Tuesday by an apparent suicide bomber, consumed his body to fire in ancient Hindu rites, piling sandalwood on the white-shrouded corpse atop a flower-strewn brick platform.

The priest presiding over the ceremony had also oversaw the cremation of Gandhi's younger Prime Minister India Gandhi, after she was assassinated by her Sikh bodyguards in 1984.

About 250,000 people attended the nationally televised funeral of Gandhi in the nearly 10-mile procession that began at the home of Gandhi's grandfather, India's first prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru. Foreign dignitaries attending included Vice President Dan Quayle.

Gandhi's assassination likely ended the political dynasty that helped guide India to independence in 1947 and dominated its politics since.

The 46-year-old leader's death also deprived the dominant Congress Party of its leader, and left it groping for a successor less than three weeks before the interrupted general elections are to resume.

The party's 18-member leadership committee is to meet Saturday in what could become a divisive struggle for the mantle of leadership.

The leadership, hoping to avoid a fight and to draw a massive sympathy vote, had offered Gandhi's position as party leader to his Italian-born widow Sonia, 43, but she refused.

Mrs. Gandhi, who is Roman Catholic, broke with Hindu tradition and attended the funeral. Clad in white, India's color of mourning, she watched as her son, Rahul Gandhi, a 20-year-old sophomore at Harvard University, sprinkled holy water from the Ganges around his father's body.

In accordance with tradition, he added clarified butter to the wood to help spread the flames, sprinkled a mixture of herbs, grains and sweets that symbolize the necessities of life, and touched a torch to the pyre.

Mrs. Gandhi swayed slightly, then crumpled onto the supporting arm of her 21-year-old daughter, Priyanka, as the flames rose high. Rahul Gandhi took a 10-foot wooden staff and gave his father's skull a symbolic tap to release his soul to seek rebirth.

With the conclusion of the solemn rites, hundreds of Indians rushed to ward the funeral pyre, chanting the former prime minister's name and throwing rose petals on the leaping seven-foot flames.

The funeral ceremony was a mix of military ritual and 5,000-year-old Vedic tradition. The chanting of hymns in the ancient Sanskrit language was momentarily drowned out by a gun salute.

A helicopter circled overhead dropping rose petals. The pallbearers were the chiefs of the army, navy and air force, and 2,150 soldiers took part. Armed troops of the elite Black Cats commando unit, dressed in black jumpsuits, escorted the procession through the city center.

Troops arrive in Iraqi provincial capital

DOHUK, Iraq— The allied occupation of northern Iraq entered what the U.S. military hopes will be its final phase Friday when two dozen aid workers and American and British soldiers moved into Dohuk to begin rebuilding the provincial capital.

A dozen U.S. Army Humvees and several civilian vehicles cruised into Dohuk on Friday morning. Doctors, engineers and sanitation and health experts are set to work on the city, which was badly damaged in the Kurdish rebellion against Saddam Hussein.

All the soldiers were American except one British engineer. They were the only troops in the area, with Iraqi security forces barred from a 128-square-mile region around Dohuk. But allied officials said this did not mean an extension of their "security zone" in northern Iraq. Many Kurds said that while they welcomed the allied presence, they worried about what would happen once coalition forces withdrew.

Mother Teresa accepts invite from Iraq

GENEVA— Mother Teresa, who won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work on behalf of the Third World's sick and poor, is to travel to Baghdad at the invitation of Saddam Hussein's government, a U.N. official said Friday.

The U.N.'s relief coordinator for the Persian Gulf, Sadruddin Aga Khan, described Mother Teresa's visit to Iraq next week as "good news," but said he had no details of her itinerary. He said she was invited by the Iraqi Health Ministry.

British troops find remains of 2 bodies

LONDON— Royal Marines searching for a missing BBC news crew have found the remains of two bodies in northern Iraq, the Ministry of Defense said Friday.

A Ministry of Defense spokesman said the bodies were found Thursday. He said they had not been identified and were being flown back to Britain. The spokesman, who was not identified, said the Royal Marines had been dropping leaflets in northern Iraq asking for information about the three, who were last heard from on March 23.

Suicide assassin pinpointed on videotape of attack

MADRAS, India (AP)— Indian investigators used an amateur videotape to pinpoint the female suicide assassin who killed former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, but they have been unable to identify her officials said Friday.

Gandhi was killed Tuesday at an election rally in southern India by a woman who detonated a mix of plastic explosives and steel pellets strapped to her waist, said an official at the Interior Ministry in New Delhi.

The identity of the woman had not been determined, said the official, who receives reports from several investigating agencies. He said it was not known if she had any accomplices. Suspicion has centered on Tamil militants from neighboring Sri Lanka, police said, mainly because the woman appeared to have the dark complexion and facial features of a Tamil and the Sri Lanka rebels are known to have sought refuge in southern India.

Investigators say the Tigers are the only militants known to be in the area that could handle the sophisticated techniques used in the assassination. Police found an amateur camera man who made a videocassette recording of the rally, said authorities in Madras capital of Tamil Nadu state.

The tape showed a bespectacled, 5-foot-tall woman, wearing an orange and green salwar-kameez, a loose shirt and trouser combination, waiting for Gandhi with a sandalwood garland in her hand.

The dress matched the bits of cloth on a female body found with pieces of wire and a three-volt battery, apparently part of the detonator, police said.

A witness had told police the blast occurred soon after a woman handed the garland to Gandhi. A picture of the woman taken from the videotape was published Friday in The Hindu, a Madras-based daily.

Roh appointment portends more trouble

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)— President Roh Tae-woo appointed a hardliner Friday as his new prime minister, signaling his refusal to give in to five weeks of violent protests that have rocked South Korea.

In response, opposition forces threatened stepped-up anti-government demonstrations to press for wider democratic reforms.

The choice of Chung Won-shik, a conservative, is seen as aimed at reassuring middle-class Koreans weary of prolonged protests, could backfire by triggering broader demonstrations. Opponents had hoped for a moderate prime minister to replace Roh, In-jong, who resigned this week to appease the anti-government protesters.

The post of prime minister is largely ceremonial, but the job requires delicate inter-ministerial coordination on political and economic issues.

Chung's appointment came as militant demonstrators prepared for more nationwide protests on Saturday to call for the overthrow of the Roh government, which they condemn as repressive and anti-democratic.

The main opposition New Democratic Party (NDP), led by Kim Dae-jung, denounced the appointment as "an act of betrayal and challenge to the people who want an end to repressive rule."

"We will have to wage an all-out struggle unless the appointment is retracted," NDP spokesman Park Sang-chun said in a statement.

Opposition and dissident groups regard Chung, a former college professor, as a hardliner. While education minister from 1988 to 1990, he led a crackdown on an outlaws teachers union. More than 1,500 teachers were fired and hundreds

Gorbachev may attend summit

LONDON (AP)— The Group of Seven industrialized nations appears willing to allow Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to attend its economic summit so he can appeal for Western aid to rescue his nation's failing economy.

The nations were hesitant, however, on whether they would provide the huge amounts of aid Gorbachev is seeking.

They said they first had to see a formal proposal from the Soviet Union. They indicated the aid would have to be linked to political and economic reform, and that they should get something in return.

That position has not been met for large amounts of credits into a country where there is no clear game plan to reform an economy in a way that we think it would work," a British government source said Friday, speaking anonymously.

Residents flee volcano's lava

TOKYO (AP)— A volcano in southern Japan that is erupting for the first time in 198 years spilled lava to within a mile of a nearby residential area Friday, forcing thousands of people to leave their homes.

Officials said the city of Shimabara evacuated 203 people living directly in the path of the lava, which began flowing Friday morning from a crater atop Mount Unzen-dake, also known as Jigokuto, or "remains of hell."

Nearly 3,000 other people were ordered evacuated after the lava began filling a dry riverbed on the side of the mountain as heavy rain fell, raising the threat of floods and mudslides, said a spokesman for the Shimabara Fire Department.

Braves rally in 9th for Galvine's 7th win

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Ron Gant singled with two outs in the ninth inning to give the Atlanta Braves and streaking Tom Glavine a 3-2 victory Friday night over the San Francisco Giants, who lost their seventh straight game.

Glavine (7-2), matching a career-high with 10 strikeouts, got his fifth consecutive victory with his third complete game. He allowed six hits and no walks.

The streak is the longest the Giants have endured since dropping 10 in a row in 1985.

National League

It was their 11th loss in 13 games and 23rd in 29.

Gant, batting with the bases loaded against Dave Righetti (2-3), bounced the ball over the head of leaping third baseman Matt Williams to score pinch-runner Mark Lemke.

Dodgers 11, Reds 3.
CINCINNATI (AP) — Ramon Martinez became the first eight-game winner in the majors as Eddie Murray drove in four runs to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to an 11-3 victory Friday night over the Cincinnati Reds.

It was the seventh straight victory for Martinez (8-1), who allowed eight hits in 6 2-3 innings. He struck out three and walked one.

Los Angeles collected 13 hits, batting around in a three-run first against Chris Hammond (3-2), and sending 11 to the plate in a five-run fifth.

The victory put the Dodgers, first in the National League West, six games over .500 for the first time this season. The loss snapped Cincinnati's three-game winning streak, all at the expense of the San Francisco Giants.

New AL managers fare poorly in openers

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Hal McRae's managerial debut was unsuccessful Friday night as the Minnesota Twins beat the Kansas City Royals 3-2 behind four hits from Chili Davis.

McRae, named earlier in the day as the replacement for John Wathan, was managing a major league game for the first time. He had been Montreal's hitting coach, but was quickly hired by the Royals after they fired Wathan on Wednesday.

American League

Jack Morris (4-5) allowed five hits in 8 1-3 innings as the Twins ended a four-game losing streak. Morris, who gave up eight runs in four innings last Sunday, struck out four and walked four. He is 4-1 in the Metrolink season and 12-3 in 16 career starts.

Rick Aguilera finished for his eighth save in 11 opportunities, striking out both batters he faced.

George Brett, activated from the disabled list Friday afternoon, hit his first homer of the season for the Royals.

Storm Davis (2-5) gave up eight hits in 5 2-3 innings and remained winless in six starts since April 23, when he beat Cleveland 6-0 on a five-hitter.

Yankees 7, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles had a new manager but experienced the same old results Friday night, as the New York Yankees spoiled Johnny Oates' debut with a 7-1 victory.

Scott Sanderson (5-2) threw five no-hit innings before leaving with a stiff right shoulder.

Greg Cadaret kept the Orioles hitless until Cleveland's Felix Fañfan tags out Milwaukee's B.J. Surhoff at second base.

He pitched a four-hitter for his second career shutout and Robin Yount singled home the only run Friday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0.

Navarro (4-2), whose previous best was a seven-hitter against Baltimore on Sept. 26, 1989, struck out six and walked none in his second complete game this season and the sixth of his career.

Rod Nichols (0-3) pitched a five-hitter for the Indians, his first complete game this season.

He struck out three and walked one.

Navarro retired the first 11 batters before Carlos Baerga singled in the fourth, Baerga also singled in the seventh; Turner Ward and Brook Jacoby had Cleveland's other hits.

Rose seeks no change in Hall vote

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pete Rose has asked baseball writers not to vote the Hall of Fame induction ceremonies in July as a vehicle for protesting changes in the balloting procedure.

In a letter to Jack Lang, secretary of the Baseball Writers Association of America, Rose also asked the writers not to boycott the voting. "Election to the Hall of Fame is the ultimate honor a baseball player can receive," Rose wrote in a letter dated May 17 and received by Lang on Friday.

"I would hate to see the action taken by the Board of the Hall of Fame because of me somehow damage the induction festivities in July for my friends Gaylor Perry, Rod Carew and Ferguson Jenkins.

"Likewise, it would be just awful if any sort of voting protest by baseball writers because of the American League's decision to vote directly or indirectly affect the voting for my former teammates and good friends Tony Perez, Tom Seaver and Rolie Fingers and all of the other eligible candidates this year."

The Hall of Fame's board of directors voted last February over the objection of Lang and many of his colleagues, to remove from the ballot any player banned for life from baseball. Rose was barred in 1989 for betting on baseball games and subsequently served prison time.

McRae says he needs time with Royals

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Hal McRae has wanted a lifetime to be in his position as a manager, if he doesn't have a game plan.

McRae, who personified Kansas City baseball during its glory years with his hard-nosed style of play, was named the Royals' manager on Friday.

"First off, I'd like to kind of observe, and reserve my thoughts and opinions," the former Expos hitting coach said at a news conference before the Royals' game against the Minnesota Twins. "Without seeing the ballclub it's kind of difficult to determine what it needs. I was trying to find out what the Montreal club needed and I didn't follow this club at all."

McRae will manage an injury-ridden team that is 15-22, in last place in the AL West despite a $33 million free-agent spending spree and bearing little resemblance to the team he led in 1987. With George Brett, McRae led the Royals to five division titles, and a pennant and the 1985 World Series championship.

Record against Pistons rebounding from 2-0 deficit

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The Chicago Bulls have won two games on their homecourt. Now the Detroit Pistons must do the same to stay in the hunt for a third straight NBA title.

"They have to win four of five now," Chicago coach Phil Satterwhite said of Detroit's task in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference final.

"But we know that's not an overwhelming thing for them because they've come back against us before.

"But never from this deficit. The Pistons have trailed in 11 of their seven times, and lost all seven series. Game 3 will be played Saturday at The Palace, with Game 4 at the same site on Monday. If a fifth game is needed, it will be next Wednesday in Chicago.

Michael Jordan, for one, knows what to expect this weekend.

"We know they're going to fight and scratch now," he said. "So we just have to maintain that pressure on them."

And so far, Chicago has been doing that with the help of its bench.

"The job of B.J. Armstrong, Cliff Livingston, Craig Hodges and Will Perdue is generally to give the starters a rest. But in this series they've been doing more, even if it doesn't show up on the score sheet.

Detroit's bench has outscored Chicago's reserves in both games — 46-30 in Game 1 and 53-21 in Game 2 — but the Bulls have the two game lead.

"It seems like everybody talks about the difference between the teams being in the benches," Perdue said. "It's not the minutes you put up, it's how you play those minutes."

And except for Vinnie Johnson and Mark Aguirre, Detroit's bench hasn't played in that well. Johnson has done the bulk of the scoring for the reserves, hitting for 50 points in the two games, while Aguirre has scored 41.

"We got to get some other people playing well," Johnson said. "We are playing a little soft. We got to play a lot harder."

John Salley has done only one point for Detroit, and starters Bill Lamber and James Edwards have just 15 points between them.

"I wouldn't say I'm the only guy, but there aren't too many other guys," Johnson said. "We need that inside play and post-up play. Right now, we got to get some people involved."

Meanwhile, Jackson has involved almost everyone, saving significant minutes for Armstrong, Livingston, Hodges and Perdue. Of the starters, only Horace Grant in Game 1 and Scottie Pippen in Game 2 have played more than 40 minutes.

"Sometimes you have to go with your instincts," Jackson said.

Armstrong's first guard off the bench, has averaged 20 minutes and 8.5 points against the Pistons.

"It is a big statement for us, especially the guys off the bench," Armstrong said. "When I'm in the game, I try to do the job defensively. That's our bread and butter, and that's where everything else comes from."

Penguins must treat North Stars with care

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Even as they visualize themselves skating with and drinking champagne from the Stanley Cup, the Pittsburgh Penguins must be careful.

After all, their championship series opponents — the Minnesota North Stars, may have gotten themselves in trouble because of too much visualization.

"We are so close, we can almost reach out and touch it," Pittsburgh's Kevin Stevens said. "We just want to grab the Cup and skate around the rink with it, but we know we have to win more."

The North Stars admit they might have been planning victory celebrations prematurely. Since taking a 2-1 series lead, they have dropped two of the final three games and face the prospect of losing the final Saturday in Game 6 at their own ice center.

"We may have gotten a little ahead of ourselves," Basil McRae said.

Added Stewart Gavan: "You can get wrapped up in it. A lot of guys are in for the first time. You try to get pumped up to play. I don't think we were overconfident. But who knows?"

All the North Stars know is that they can't afford another loss.

"Someone says, 'Enjoy it. Enjoy it!' I don't enjoy it," Gavan said. "I have a big knot in my stomach before the games. You're scared to lose, real scared to lose."

Still, some confidence remains in the Minnesota camp. A victory Saturday would force the series back to Pittsburgh for Game 7 on Tuesday.

"If we had won (Thursday), we would not have gone back home thinking the series was over," Gavan Duchene said. "We lost ... and we don't think it's over the other way."

With their fans chanting "Bring back the Cup! Bring back the Cup!" the Penguins won 6-4 on Thursday.

For the second straight game, Pittsburgh's goalie, Ed Snider, held off the Stars' offense.

And now the Penguins are within one victory of exorcising the demons of their devilishly dreadful past.

One of the main reasons is superstar Mario Lemieux, who is in the playoffs for only the second time in his six-year career.

"He's dominating," said Mark Rocchi, a 113-point scorer during a regular season who on Thursday parlayed assists from Lemieux into his first two goals of the finals. "You can see how badly he wants it."

Pittsburgh has been able to do what none of Minnesota's other playoff opponents had — make the North Stars play catch-up.

In their first 16 games, the North Stars had a 32-16 first-period advantage. But in the last four — three of them Pittsburgh victories — Minnesota has been outscored 9-2 in the first. The North Stars' eight-game winning streak was snapped in Game 4 when Pittsburgh scored three times in the first 2:58. And Thursday, they fell behind, 4-0, at the 13:41 mark. "We were able to do the same thing, especially in our building," Bobby Smith said. "It had been a good formula for us in the playoffs."

Each opponent established a goal of making Minnesota play from behind. Only the Penguins have pulled it off.

The last two first periods, we've played well," Rocchi said. "We want to skate and go at them. We are an effective team when we do that."

Said Minnesota's Dave Gagner: "I don't know what's going on. We are not reacting well enough in the first period. We obviously need a better start."

This is also the first time the Stars have had to play from behind at this stage of a series. The league's 16th-ranked regular-season team, Minnesota dispatched No. 1 Chicago and No. 2 St. Louis in six games each and defending champion Edmonton in five.

Perry takes advice to top of Colonial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Chris Perry took a tip from a non-religious source and moved to the top of the leaderboard at the halfway point of the Colonial tournament.

"It just reinforced what I knew I should be doing," Perry said Friday. "I had a conversation with Kenny Perry, the winner of last week's Memorial tournament. The talk helped Chris to a 5-under 65 in the second round, a 36-hole total of 131, and a one-shot lead over Wayne Levi, Stan Utley, Gene Sauers and former Colonial winner Keith Clearwater.

However, the chat with Kenny didn't begin as a lesson in the mental aspects of winning, explained Chris.

"I congratulated him early this week," Chris said. "I told him how much I envy him and how I'd like to win this tournament, a tournament in my home town (Dublin, Ohio)."

"And I asked him how he ever got to 15 under on that golf course," Chris Perry said.

"He said he just tried to birdie every hole. And I just said, 'oh.'"

"But it made me think I need to be more aggressive," said Chris, the son of former major league pitcher Jim Perry but no relation to Kenny.

It produced a new mental attitude, Chris said.

"I decided I was going to be more confident, more positive, because I was aggressive," said Chris, who has yet to win in eight seasons on the PGA Tour.

That attitude produced birdies on the last three holes Thursday. Levi, a four-time winner last year, had a 65 that, he said, "could have been very, very low."

Sauers had 66 in the muggy heat that hung over the Colonial Country Club. Clearwater and Utley each shot 64 on a course robbed of its natural defenses by the absence of wind.

Mark Gagliavecca, seeking his first victory since the 1989 British Open, scrambled to a 68 despite what he called "ludicrous mistakes," and was at 133.

Bey of birdies advance Richard to Corning lead

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Deb Richard could have had 17 birdies on Friday. At least that's the way she saw it, according to birdie pal LPGA's Corning Classic.

"I was looking at birdie puts all the way around," Richard said. "I felt like for 17 holes, I had puts for birdie. Other than on 1, I just nailed them."

Richard wound up with seven birdies and a three-shot lead over first-round leader Martha Foyler and 1989 "Coming Champ" Ayako Okamoto of Japan.

Winner of this year's Kemper Open, Richard is a 9-under, 135, on the par-72, 6,070-yard Corning Country Club course.

Danielle Ammannaccane in third at 5-under.

Foyer started the day at 6-under. She carded two birdies and two bogeys.

Okamoto collected four birdies and one bogey.

Richard started the day at 4-under and promptly drove into the rough off the tee on the opening hole.

"The only bad drive I hit the whole tournament," she said.

She two-putted for bogey, but came back with birdies on the 2nd, 3rd, 5th, 10th, 11th and 12th to go 9-under, and just missed birdie puts that lipped the cup over the 4th and 6th.

After three-putting for bogey on the 13th, Richard hit a 9-iron off the 125-yard 15th tee within six inches of the pin and sank her putt for another birdie.

Divac erupts in 3rd quarter to pace Lakers over Blazers

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Vlade Divac, coming off two mediocre performances in the Western Conference finals, scored 10 points, in six minutes of play, to pace a 16-minute spurt of the third quarter as the Los Angeles Lakers took command Friday night for a 106-92 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Lakers were ahead 70-59 to begin the final period and the Trail Blazers didn't threaten again.

Divac finished with 16 points and seven rebounds. Magic Johnson scored 14 points, had 19 assists and seven rebounds for Los Angeles, and James Worthy scored 25 in the win-

Portland's lead was 43-40 at halftime, but the Lakers built their third-quarter advantage to 61-47 midway through the third period as Divac dominated on both ends of the court.

Officials worry about good fishing around Henry's Lake

STALEY SPRINGS (AP) — When resort owner Stan Horton heard fish were dying by the thousands on Henry's Lake in March he called all of his clients to deliver the bad news.

"I got two cancellations and they filled right up," said Horton, owner of Staley Springs Lodge on the lake.

But Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials do not expect the best year ever for Henry's Lake anglers.

Fish and Game employees' halted away more than 8,000 fish that died this spring when the dissolved oxygen content dropped to lethal levels.

How bad fishing will be remains unclear. But Fish and Game officials worried that over the Memorial Day weekend, traditionally the busiest fishing period of the year on Henry's Lake, it might be too good.

Ice left the lake only Friday, the last time it was so late in the season. Fish could be seen along the shoreline in a pre-spawning feeding frenzy.

"Fish and Game officials said a heavy weekend harvest could do further damage to the trout population. But they decided against closing the lake or going to catch-and-release

Conservative drivers among favorites at Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears and Arie Luyendyk have quite a bit in common. Both are quiet and workaholic, and both approach to racing. Both are winners. And both are among the favorites in Sunday's Indianapolis 500.

One thing they don't have in common, though, is where they will start.

Mears, the pole winner for a record sixth time at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, will lead the 33-car field on the inside of the front row. Luyendyk, the defending champion, will start in the middle of the fifth row — about 400 yards and a lot of traffic and turbulence behind three-time winner Mears.

"I give a lot of thought to the front row for the ninth time in the last 10 Indys and 11 of 14 overall. I take what's given to me. I don't believe in trying to overpower anything."

That's probably a good thing this year because he's joined in the front row by hard-charging, four-time winner A.J. Foyt and equally aggressive Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner.

One of those three will win the short and very fast drag race from the starting line to the first corner on the 2.4-mile oval, and it likely won't be the conservative Mears.

"The most important thing at the start of the race to me is that my car is working right," he said. "I want to get a feel for things, and their own rhythm. It's a long race — 500 miles."

"You don't win it at the start, so why take chances?"

Luyendyk has gone through the month of May quietly getting his preparation done and tuning consistently among the speed leaders.

He's a little more concerned about the opening laps because he'll be sandwiched between Gary's Bettenhausen, the fastest qualifier at 224,468 mph, and 1989 winner Emerson Fittipaldi.

"We've got some very fast cars in the fifth row and some of them want to get to the front in a hurry," Luyendyk said. "When you have so much traffic around you, things can happen. You just have to pick a lane and try to stay out of trouble until things get stretched out."

"If I can go to the front and lead the race, I will. If you can't lead, it's hard to say to yourself, 'I'm gonna sit here in second place.'"

Luyendyk said that a year ago, "I was gentle on the equipment at the beginning of the race. That's the strategy I'd like to follow this year. We feel good about our chances."

Bobby Rahal, the 1986 winner and brother of the quietly competitive guys on the Indy-car circuit, said flamboyance is not the way to win here.

"What you have to do is stay on the lead lap and be around at the end of the 200th (and last) lap," he said. "Mears has proven he can do that consistently, and Arie did it last year."

Rahal, who was the runner-up last year, added, "But there are a whole group of guys, including me. I hope, who can be right there with them Sunday. This is going to be one heck of a race."

Rick Mears is the Indy 500 pole winner for a record sixth time.

Racing's A.J. Foyt a bonafide legend

Knight-Ridder News Service

INDIANAPOLIS — Babe Ruth, Arnold Palmer, Will Chamberlain and Dick Butkus have this in common: All are sports legends. Each's impact on his sport has been significant and each is familiar to people who don't know a poppin from a non-poppin Yoko.

Foyt is another certified sports legend.

A record-tying four Indianapolis-500 victories top Foyt's racing credentials. But it has been Foyt's out-of-my-way, tires-squealing driving style and his outspoken, 2 x 4 between-the-eyes personality that have made him arguably the most popular American race car driver of all time.

Foyt is John Wayne in a racing helmet. The difference is, Foyt is real. He is as tough as cactus on the race track, but often can be as soft as a Slurpee away from it.

"Kinda' two weeks ago, Foyt slipped a new 222-mph entry into his legend's file. At age 56, and still recuperating from career-threatening leg and foot injuries sustained in a crash last September, Foyt recorded his fastest Indy qualifying time ever (222.443). He will start his record 34th consecutive Indy 500 on Row 1.

Following the crash at Elkhart Lake, Wis., he underwent surgery to repair his badly broken left leg and two other operations on his mangled feet. What followed were months of daily therapy.

After the crash, Foyt declared that 1991 would be his final racing season. Sunday's Indy 500 was his final driving appearance at Indianapolis Motor Speedway, though he'll show 'em style.

Can his tender feet last 500 miles? "I feel I can go the distance," he said, "or I wouldn't have qualified the car."

Still, though, Foyt says he feels tingling and burning in his right foot. "I used to laugh at people who cut the sides out of their shoes. I'll never say anything like that again," he said. "I didn't know feet could hurt so bad."

The deaths of his parents in the last decade and last year's crash have mellowed Foyt. He no longer threatens to punch out the headlights of drivers who have annoyed him on the track. Talking about his comeback, Foyt said, "It's been a long, hard fight. There are so many people I owe a great deal of thanks for. But I'm mainly doing it for my own health. I don't want to be a cripple the rest of my life."

The first 56 years of Foyt's life have been filled with unmatched racing success, including more Indy-car victories, 67, than any other driver (but since a 1981 win at Pocono when the driver finished sprained cars).

Looking back on his successful career, Foyt knows he is one of those lucky people who, at a young age, found what he wanted to do and totally dedicated himself to being the best.

The primary force behind Foyt was his father, Tony Sr., built his son's first race car as a boy in Houston and was the crew chief for Foyt's Indy car until shortly before he died in May 1983.

How long has Foyt been racing? Dwight D. Eisenhower was still president in 1958 when Foyt made his Indy debut (qualifying at 143.130 mph). Thirteen of the other 32 drivers in Sunday's starting field weren't even born in 1958 when rookie Foyt finished 16th at Indy. On a sad note, 13 of the drivers in that '58 Indy 500 have died in racing accidents.

New York Mets over the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2 Friday night.
The Mets ended the game having lost four of their previous five, and had some more turmoil when infielder Gregg Jefferies issued an open letter to counter recent criticism by some teammates about his play. Jefferies missed the game because of the flu.

The surprising Cardinals, who have won four straight series, took a 2-0 lead off Cone (4-3) — who felt a streaked short of his in career high — in the third inning on RBI singles by Ray Lankford and Pedro Guerrero.

Keith Miller, starting in place of Jefferies, at second base, directed home a Cone singled with the bases loaded in the fourth to give New York a 3-2 lead.

Smith's tie-breaking hit set off a six-run rally and he continued his dominance at home as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 9-1 Friday night.

Smith (6-2) doubled to break a 1-1 tie in a sixth-run fifth inning against Terry Mulholland (5-3).

Bobby Bonilla's sixth homer, a three-run shot, capped the inning as the Pirates won the first game this season between the two teams. Pittsburgh won the last six meetings between them in 1990.

Mulholland, who had won a career-best 333 to 332 on the last day of the season — will help him as his manager. "I don't intend to manage anyone. I intend to communicate with everyone," he said. "It will make it easier for me to communicate with George."

McRae becomes only the fifth black manager in major league history, joining Larry Doby, Maury Wills, Cito Gaston and Frank Robinson, who were also as Baltimore's manager Thursday.

Asked if the hiring of a black manager was no longer news, McRae said: "It's not spectacular news anymore."

Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the Montreal Expos on Friday.

The victory was the third straight for the Cubs, all since Jim Essian took over from Don Zimmer. The loss was the third straight for the Expos who were no-hit by Tommy Greene of Philadelphia on Thursday.

Scanlan, 2-0, went 7 2-3 innings, allowing three hits, walking none, and striking out three. Mark Gardner (0-3) was the loser, allowing six hits and all three runs over seven innings.

Delino DeShields led off the game with a bunt single, ending Montreal's hitless streak. But DeShields was thrown out attempting to steal and Scanlan did not allow another hit until Marquis Grissom singled in the fourth and scored on a triple by Dave Martinez.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"What we anticipate seldom occurs, what we least expected generally happens."
— Benjamin Disraeli.

"Always look at the card, not the player," cautions an old pro. "Too many bridge players are frustrated hand actors." Check this example played in a European Mixed Pairs Championship some years ago.

East took his diamond ace and returned the suit to give West his obvious ruff. Desperately trying to reach partner's hand for a second diamond ruff, West led a low heart, hoping that East would hold the jack.

East didn't have the jack but he did the next best thing. He played his nine with such confidence that South assumed East had played an honor. South followed low reflexively, and East had magically created an entry. It didn't take long to give West another diamond ruff for one down. Merely the defenders put the cards back into the boards quickly and left South in the dark about what had actually occurred.

Had South looked at East's card instead of his face, he would have won his heart jack. After drawing the trumps, he could have assured himself of a good score by making his game and a top score by dropping East's doubler club queen.
