Speculation heats up about McClure, Energy job

States News Service

WASHINGTON — If James McClure is about to replace Secretary of Energy James D. Watkins, he's keeping his counsel. Washington publications, most recently the Washington Post, have been reporting for the last few weeks that Watkins is on his way out and that McClure, who retired in December after representing Idaho in the U.S. Senate for 18 years, heads the list of likely prospects to replace him.

"McClure has been a busy guy since he retired, but he may get busier," wrote nationally syndicated columnist Jack Anderson and Dale Van Atta earlier this month. "His name has surfaced repeatedly on the short list of candidates to replace Watkins, whose days are numbered in the cabinet. It might be some time before McClure has time to cast off the politics of Washington he finds so distasteful."

Though McClure, who was chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee from 1981 through 1987, denies knowledge of the possibility of the secretaryship coming open, the mere prospect of a McClure administration is tantalizing for Idaho.

A McClure-controlled Energy Department would likely give careful consideration to awarding to Idaho National Engineering Laboratory the New Production Reactor, a facility that South Carolina and Washington are also in the running to get. The NPR would manufacture tritium, which is used to enhance the explosive power of nuclear weapons.

Secretary pulls school into new era

By H.R. Weixal
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The boys' locker room at Central Elementary School is a little different than most of its kind. The adjacent shower is a lot different. Where once there were lockers, Commodore computers line the walls. A door leads to a supply room where three toilets without seats and an overhead shower head stand watch over boxes of paper, disassembled circuit boards, disassembled printers and other evidence that Central has entered the computer age.

Vicci Archer says it wasn't just her doing, but almost everybody at Central agrees she made it possible.

Archer, the secretary to Central Elementary principal Betty Hyder, figured out a way the 70-year-old, packed-to-the-rafters school could have a computer program.

All she had to do was clean out the locker room, round up the hardware, locate the software, find a way to pay for it all and talk her mother into helping.

Archer's mom, Jaquette Turner, is something of a computer whiz. Without compensation, she and her daughter, Vicci, doesn't get paid extra for her computer work — have led Central into the information age.

Well, not entirely without compensation.

Judge allows prayer

The Associated Press

BOISE — A federal judge has refused to block the prayer scheduled to be given at Grangeville High School's graduation ceremony Friday night.

But in refusing Tuesday afternoon to grant a preliminary injunction, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan did not rule whether it is unconstitutional to have the prayer.

Instead, Ryan said, that issue should wait for the U.S. Supreme Court to act in a related case — with similar constitutional questions.

Because the Supreme Court's decision in Wagoner (the Colorado case) will apply to the court will defer ruling on the constitutionality of prayer until the United States Supreme Court has considered the constitutionality of prayer in various states and situations at public school graduation ceremonies.

The action apparently means that three Idaho high schools will have prayer at graduation ceremonies this week. After the lawsuit was filed, Clearwater Valley High School and Salmon River High School intervened and the ruling applies to all three.

Salv Van Valkenberg, Idaho director for the American Civil Liberties Union, said after Ryan's decision was released that he planned no further effort to block the prayer Friday night. He said he hoped the issue could go before the Idaho Supreme Court.

The ACLU contended at last week's oral arguments that the Idaho Constitution is even more restrictive than the U.S. Constitution on separation of church and state.

But Ryan said it isn't that clear. "The debate among the framers of Idaho's Constitution apparently remained fixed on the issue of whether to allow Bible reading in the classroom, and if so, which text," he said. "The issue of prayer at such activities as school graduation ceremonies was not considered by the framers."

Phyllis Wright Harris filed the lawsuit against the school district and school officials. One of her three children, Beverly, is a member of the school's graduating class and the lawsuit contended that allowing prayer would violate the separation of church and state outlined in the state and federal constitutions.

Symms' son, business face false papers charge

The Associated Press

BOISE — The son of Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, was charged Tuesday with falsifying documents for alien farm workers but pleaded innocent in a preliminary court appearance.

Also charged was Symms Fruit Ranch, Inc., Caldwell, a fruit ranch owned by the Symms family. The senator was not charged, but he is on the board of directors for the fruit ranch and owns a substantial interest in the company.

The government listed Steve Symms among the 50 witnesses it plans to call in the case.

Daniel Symms, son of the senator and operations manager for Symms Fruit Ranch, appeared in U.S. District Court and pleaded innocent to the charges. He and another defendant, Patricia Melchor, a former employee of Symms Fruit Ranch, were released on personal recognizance. Trial was scheduled for June 27 before U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan. The federal charges carry penalties up to five years in prison on each count and fines up to $250,000.

Symms

Attorney Robert Koontz, representing Daniel Symms, issued a statement disputing the charges. He also filed a motion to dismiss the charges, alleging that the grand jury which returned a 74-count indictment was procedurally flawed.

Sen. Steve Symms and his former wife, Bev, attended the court hearing along with other family members. Symms did not comment, but issued a statement later that he was "saddened and distressed" by the charges against his son and family company.

Dam collapse damage may endure for decades

The Associated Press

BOISE — It could take 40 years to erase the damage to a prime fishing stream from the collapse of an old log bridge that sent some 90,000 cubic yards of sediment downstream, Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday.

The 86-year-old Kirby Dam on the Middle Fork of the Boise River collapsed Sunday night, unleashing tons of sediment. The Middle Fork is considered one of the state's top fishing streams.

Ken Norrie, deputy director of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said it would take some time to determine the impact on fishing and the Middle Fork's spawning beds. Some of the sediment is contaminated with heavy metals from decades of mining in the area, officials said.

Based on what happened to central

Idaho's Salmon River in a similar incident, Andrus said it could take 40 years for all the sediment to wash out from fish spawning beds.

Meanwhile, Andrus said he was asking Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan to join him in appointing a review panel to evaluate what led to the dam's failure.

"It is appropriate that all of the actions that were taken since last July when problems were first reported with the dam be reviewed," the governor said. "I believe an independent panel can study all the probable causes of failure, and provide a comprehensive report to both the state of Idaho and the federal government."

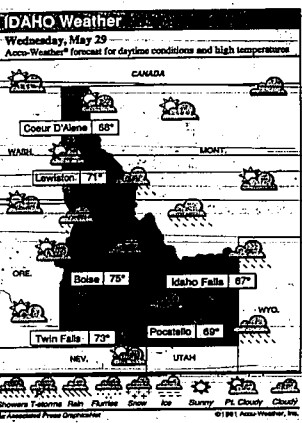

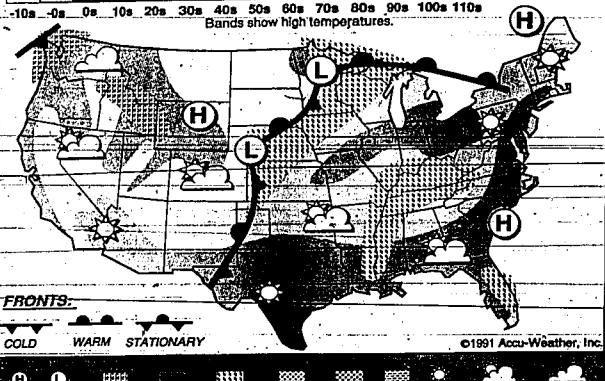

In Atlanta, it was not immediately clear what the 30 or so permanent residents would do for electricity since the failed dam was the only local Nevada - Partly cloudy today with isolated afternoon showers or thunderstorms east. Partly cloudy and breezy tonight. Cooler Thursday with isolated showers west and scattered showers or thunderstorms east. Lows tonight 40s and 50s, 35 to 45 east. Highs today, low to mid-70s and Thursday mid-60s to low 70s. Southwest winds 15 to 30 mph this afternoon.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says the trough of low pressure that brought cool, moist and unstable air to Idaho the past few days continued to produce showers Tuesday in the north.
The trough shows little movement and moisture feeding into it will make the weather for the rest of the week. While the north may get a dry Wednesday, the south can look for showers.
Tuesday afternoon skies were mostly sunny with widespread showers mainly over the mountain areas in the north. Significant winds were reported.
The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 81 degrees at Weiser and Emmett. Stanley reported the coldest at 19 degrees.
Elsewhere in the nation Tuesday, the highest temperature was 102 degrees at Presidio, Texas. The lowest was 19 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

Thunderstorms cause damage in upper Midwest

Rain and storms were scattered over the Midwest and parts of the South on Tuesday, with at least one tornado reported in Nebraska.
At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended across east-central and southeastern Minnesota into northern Iowa and northern and western Wisconsin.
The storms in southern Minnesota splintered farm buildings, downed power lines and uprooted trees.
In the Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan area, some streets were flooded by a late-morning downpour. More than 2 inches of rain fell in 45 minutes in Spring Lake Park in southern Anoka County, the National Weather Service said. Wind gusts to 50 mph also were reported over scattered sections of the metropolitan area.
The weather service also said storms produced hail as big as golf balls near Fulda, Minn., and an inch in diameter at Slayton, Minn., and that wind gusted to 63 mph at source. Most turned to generators for temporary power.

State and federal officials also faced the problem of what to do about a nearby Forest Service bridge weakened when the dam gave way.
The bridge was built in the early 1960s on pilings driven into the sediment. Since some of the sediment has washed away, the bridge's pilings had been exposed.
Boise National Forest officials said Tuesday afternoon they were exploring options for the bridge, including "the possibility the superstructure might be removed before it collapses."
"The only option not open now is to open the bridge," he said.
He said state, federal and forest officials planned a meeting in Boise Wednesday afternoon to discuss the bridge problem.
Foot traffic only has been allowed since Sunday. In a request to Andrus, the state declared the bridge the Elmore County Commission estimated 150 to 200 Memorial Day weekend visitors to Atlanta were stranded.

Andrus signed a proclamation declaring "a state of extreme emergency and disaster emergency" for Atlanta. It authorizes state aid.
"This failure of electricity, denies and threatens the use of Atlanta's only access bridge, has already contaminated the river downstream and likely will damage the state's fishery resource," the governor said.
Carroll said the Forest Service is proceeding with a "worst case" estimate the bridge has been seriously weakened.
Atlanta is an old mining community about 90 miles east of Boise, but about three hours drive down a forest road off Idaho Highway 21.
The old dam started failing last week, and the state and federal government and the private owners of the dam - Atlanta Power Co., pumped $450,000 into a new superstructure to strengthen it.

"But that effort went down the drain Sunday as the entire dam failed."
The state spent $216,000 and Atlanta Power Co. borrowed another $37,000.
"That $216,000 went down the creek, so to speak," Andrus said. But he defended last year's decision to try to save the dam.
"We didn't win, but you could not let that dam fail without the attempt," he said. "We'll work together and do whatever has to be done."
Joe Nagel, head of the state Division of Environmental Quality, said there was no danger of contamination of water used for domestic purposes.
Carroll says an estimated 90,000 cubic yards of sediment built up behind the dam speeded downriver when the dam failed. Another 200,000 cubic yards could gradually be washed into the stream, he said.

"It was worth it all to see the way those kids were so eager to learn and operate the computers," Turner said.
Today, 19 regular computer classes for grades 4 through 6, plus five classes for migrant students, are held each week. Archer gives basic instruction on computer operation with teachers in each class assisting and learning.
Turner also teaches basic computer selection and use of software programs and care of disks and equipment.
"Together, they also keep the whole system running."
"We're excited about the possibilities of the use of our computers," said Hyder. "It's an awareness program that will allow our students to advance quickly when they get to junior high. They learn a computer isn't a monster that's going to eat them. Many of them are very proficient in computer operation because they have a computer at home."
In Central's computer classes, 32 students working in pairs spend up to 10 minutes on a 45-minute session mastering typing. Programs for learning mathematics, reading, English and social studies are used to supplement regular classroom curriculum studies.
Eighty percent of the programs are academic, with some computer games used as rewards. The computer games require use of academic skills to "capture the princess" or to keep from getting "zapped."
Migrant students who speak little or no English are some of the best students, Turner said. They can't communicate verbally in English, but when they learn to operate a computer, they use it to solve problems and get their school work done.
The computer prints what they want to say in English, she said.
Turner, who has spent about 120 hours of her own time on computer instruction at Central since home to reformat and print manuals for teachers to use in the classroom.
For its well-oiled efficiency, Central's computer program started out as a seat-of-the-pants operation.
After Archer cleaned out the locker room, students started raising money from spell-a-thons and candy sales and the Jerome School District matched those funds to buy three new IBM computers.
Thirteen obsolete Commodores, not being used in various classrooms, were rounded up, and Central's computer lab was in business.
And the bottom line? Aside from the salaries of teachers and staff involved in making the project happen, and the matching funds for the IBMs, it's all been done without the taxpayers' money.

of responsibility at the ranch have acted responsibly and lawfully, and have done their level best to keep up with and abide by the unending flow of federal laws - rules and regulations," Symms said.
"I am confident that justice will prevail and Dan Symms will be proven innocent of the charges alleged against him. As a father, I intend to stand by Dan as he faces this horrible ordeal until he is exonerated of the allegations made against him," the statement said.
Symms, serving his second term in the Senate, has not announced whether he will run for a third term in 1992. He said the criminal charges against his family's fruit ranch will not be a factor.
"I see no reason that this situation should have any political ramifications at all," he said.
The criminal complaints against Daniel Symms, Melchor, Symms Fruit Ranch Inc. and a subsidiary, Sunny Slope Fruit Co., include alleged conspiracy, aiding and abetting the filing of false documents, filing false Special Agricultural Workers applications and creating false applications, an Immigration and Naturalization Service investigator said a study of more than 25,000 documents submitted by the company indicated Daniel Symms signed letters verifying employment of alien farm workers but containing false information.
A statement filed with the charges said INS agent J. Kent Nygaard was involved in a drug investigation when an informant told him that two Mexican nationals involved in drug trafficking in the Boise-Caldwell area had obtained false Special Agricultural Workers Act documents.
The federal government said a two-year study of worker records at the Symms companies showed that some of the records did not match information on applications submitted by the farm workers to obtain temporary resident alien status. It also said it has 40 videotaped interviews with farm workers saying they submitted false documents signed by Daniel Symms.

After interviewing about 80 Mexican nationals, INS agents concluded there was "substantial fraud" in the applications, court records said.
The investigative records said in 1985, Sunny Slope Fruit Co. employed 1,242 migrant farm workers and a substantial majority were illegal aliens. When the Immigration Reform and Control Act went into effect in 1986, it required documentation that alien farm workers were legally employed.
During the period when documentation was required to qualify for SAW status, the Symms companies issued 706 employment verification statements, alleging that 648 had been employed for at least 90 days. The INS investigators said 277 of the statements certified man-days that were not supported by Sunny Slope Fruit Co. records.
Koonits said the Symms family cooperated with the investigation for three years. "We have provided all the documentation to government agents," he said. "We have given the investigators carte blanche access to records and employees, even during the height of harvest season."
He said after seven grand jury sessions in Boise in April and this month, the 74-count indictment was returned.
"First, we have denied any wrongdoing. This is purely a document case," Koonits said. "During the 18-month SAW application period, Sunny Slope provided records for more than 700 aliens."

Energy

But McClure will have none of the speculation about his moving to the Energy Department.
"That's a hypothetical situation," McClure said in an interview recently in the spanking-new public relations and lobbying office he heads on Pennsylvania Avenue near the White House. "I'm not seeking any job. I don't know of any job that's open. I have not been offered any job. The bottom line is that I'm happy being where I'm doing. I'm not seeking anything."
"A lot of people around here find it impossible to believe that somebody doesn't want something," he continued. "I don't want anything. It's just speculation."
The Energy Department also denies the Watkins departure is imminent. "He hasn't said he was leaving," said DOE spokesman Tom Olson.

In the meantime, McClure is concentrating on developing the lobbying firm he opened earlier this year with two former aides, McClure, Gerard and Neuenchwander, Inc. began signing up clients on Jan. 3, McClure said, and now has between 12 and 20, he said.
Given his energy and natural resources background, McClure and his firm are working on relatively predictable causes, such as new mining laws, and some rather esoteric ones, like a foundation to raise money for the Northern Mariana Islands, a U.S. commonwealth in the Pacific. McClure worked on Northern Marianas affairs as the ranking Republican on the interior committee in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Bush ready for political combat with Congress on China trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's decision to extend renewal favorable trading terms for China has revived his most persistent foreign-policy dispute with Congress, and vote counters say Bush may need to make more concessions to win this round.

But Bush appeared ready on Tuesday to do combat on the issue, denouncing "some congressmen who did not listen to what I said before they were ready to hit their rebuttals."

Continued human rights abuses by Beijing, coupled with a growing trade imbalance in China's favor and the flow of weaponry from China, to world trouble spots combine to make the issue even tougher for Bush this year than it was in 1990, said lawmakers and senior aides.

"They are going to have to make concessions in order to protect the U.S. relationship with China," said Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., who led an unsuccessful fight last year to slam the door on normal trade relations with China.

"That would be too big a loss on foreign policy for the White House to risk," he said. "They are going to have to negotiate conditions that go much further than what they are talking about."

In pushing Monday for continuation of most-favored-nation trading status for China, Bush sought to mollify Congress by restricting computer and satellite exports to Beijing.

But those initiatives, a day later, dismissed the gestures as minor, noting that similar restrictions on technology exports had been in place since the government's armed assault on pro-democracy demonstrators at Tiananmen Square in 1989. The second anniversary of the crackdown is next week.

At least three bills have been introduced in Congress to deny Bush's request for an extension of most-favored-nation status for China, ranging from an immediate denial to bills that would impose conditions six months or a year in the future.

And three House Foreign Affairs subcommittees scheduled a hearing for Wednesday to begin examining the MFN issue.

But as it has been in previous fights, the real battleground over the coming three months will be the Senate, where Bush has a better chance of getting the 34 votes — one-third of the chamber — that he needs to uphold a veto.

Bush picked up important support this week from Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., one of the most listened-to voices on foreign policy in the Senate. Lugar said Bush's judgment was sound — that it is more important to remain engaged with China through trade — than to break-off those ties in anger over human-rights shortcomings.

To deny MFN status, Lugar said, would be "politically popular, but ultimately short-sighted."

Leading the Senate charge against preferred trade status for China is Democratic Leader George Mitchell of Maine.

The normally reserved Mitchell was quick to make the rounds of television talk shows on Tuesday, calling Bush's decision "without any moral or logical basis" and vowing to fight it.

"It's been a demonstrated failure," Mitchell said of Bush's policy on NBC's Today show.

"This is exactly what the president said a year ago when he asked that it be extended for one year, during which we were told China's government would reform itself. And of course not only has that not happened, it's gotten worse."

Experts are checking the water at the vice presidential residence at the Naval Observatory in Washington as well as the White House and Camp David.

Doctors order check of Bushes' drinking water for disease clue

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — Doctors seeking clues to the thyroid conditions afflicting both President Bush and his wife are checking the water at the White House, Camp David, Kennebunkport and the vice-presidential mansion where the Bushes spent eight years.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday that the White House also had asked a specialist to check whether there was any link between the Bushes' ailment — Graves' disease — and a lupus suffered by their dog, Millie.

"I can hardly believe this," an incredulous Bush told reporters who asked him about the water-checking while he was playing golf at his summer home. "But let them look into it."

The president's physicians want to see if the White House water contains two chemicals — iodine and lithium — that are sometimes associated with Graves' disease, the thyroid disorder suffered by both the president and his wife Barbara.

The water also was being checked at the vice president's residence at the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington, the presidential retreat in Camp David, Md., and at Bush's ocean-side vacation home here.

One of his physicians, Dr. Larry Mohr, who accompanied the president to the golf course, said, "That's something that is being checked, largely to answer the kind of speculation that is being propagated right now."

"We have no reason to suspect there is any problem," he added. "We did ask the Secret Service to check the water for lithium and iodine."

He said the Secret Service had expertise in testing drinking water for unusual substances.

Fitzwater said in a statement: "Because of the remarkable coincidence of the president and first lady both having Graves' disease, the president's physician is exploring any possible link to environmental or other causes."

"While the doctors feel it is highly unlikely that their thyroid condition could be related, or in any way related, to the lupus disease suffered by Millie, prudence dictates that all such possibilities be examined," Fitzwater's statement added.

Vice President Dan Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, reportedly have wondered if the Bushes' Graves' disease is linked to old plumbing and lead pipes in the vice presidential residence.

Bush said he had been told "it was impossible" that lead in the pipes had caused the thyroid disorder.

"He said a thyroid specialist told him the chance of two people in the same family having Graves' disease was "one in three million" and he guessed the odds of such a family having a dog with an autoimmune system disorder was probably "one in 20 million."

The water "tasted good to me," he said, adding that he was "not going to lose confidence in the water at the White House" until "we know more about this."

He said he still was tiring more easily than usual because of medication for the thyroid disorder but generally felt fine and "was regaining some of the weight" he had lost recently.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The U.S. Naval Academy has streamlined its curriculum to ease the strain on midshipmen overburdened by tough academic requirements, professional trainings and extracurricular activities.

Prompted by complaints from students, especially first-year plebes, military and civilian faculty members decided to drop some courses and change others from requirements to electives.

Faculty members and students had long complained that the academy's tough academic requirements, combined with professional training and sports, force midshipmen to learn only the basics in their courses.

"Their plate is so full, the kids are looking smaller and smaller bites from their academics," Academic Dean and Provost Robert H. Shapiro said.

Enquirer apologizes, settles with Taylor for bogus story

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor said Tuesday she has settled her $20 million lawsuit against the National Enquirer, receiving an apology and money for bogus stories portraying her as a boozier with a disfiguring disease.

Miss Taylor, who nearly died during a hospital stay last year, filed suit claiming she was tormented and libeled by the supermarket tabloid's front page headline, "Liz Does Furlough, She's Boozing It Up in the Hospital."

The June 12, 1990, issue also featured an inside headline, "While Doctors Battle to Save Her Life, Liz Boozes It Up in the Hospital."

The Superior Court lawsuit also targeted a Jan. 19 story titled, "Liz's Beautiful Face Ravaged by Killer Disease, Doctors Order Suicide Watch After They Finally Diagnose The Mystery Illness." The story said she had lupus, a chronic skin disorder.

The Enquirer gained access to all of Miss Taylor's medical records and is now satisfied that the articles reporting on her medical condition and the report that she was drinking were in error," Miss Taylor's publicist Chen Sam said in a statement announcing the settlement reached late last week.

"We regret the inaccuracies in the articles, but are pleased that this dispute has come to an amicable end," Enquirer Editor Iain Calder said in a statement released through Miss Sam.

Calder said from his Lantana, Fla., office Tuesday that he would not discuss the case beyond the statement.

The National Enquirer was notified about the inaccuracies in its stories and headlines four days before publication, Miss Taylor's lawsuit said.

"The Enquirer has made an appropriate monetary payment to Miss Taylor for the articles and apologized to her," Miss Sam said. Details of the settlement weren't disclosed as part of the agreement, said Miss Taylor's attorney, Neil Pappano.

Bush wants Reimer in high Army seat
WASHINGTON — President Bush has selected Lt. Gen. Dennis J. Reimer to be vice chief of staff of the Army, the second-highest uniformed position, Pentagon officials said Tuesday.

Reimer, whose assignment is subject to Senate approval, also was chosen for promotion to the rank of four-star general. He currently is deputy chief of staff for operations and plans.

Reimer, 51, would replace Gen. Gordon Sullivan, who has been nominated to move up to chief of staff to succeed the retiring Gen. Carl Vuono.

Army closing missile post in Germany
WASHINGTON — The Army said Tuesday it is dismantling the U.S. command post in Germany that operated Pershing nuclear missiles for the last 27 years.

The move caps a three-year withdrawal of Pershing and other U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe under the 1987 Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty, which banned missiles with a range from 310 to 3,410 miles.

Being disbanded are the 50th Field Artillery Command, the Mullen Missile Storage Area near Schweibach, Germany, and its subordinate battalions: the 1st Battalion, 9th Field Artillery Regiment; the 2nd Battalion, 4th Infantry Regiment; the 38th Signal Battalion, and the 55th Support Battalion.

Critics ready to smash Super Collider
WASHINGTON — Advocates of the Superconducting Super Collider face a stiff challenge this week from House critics, one of whom calls the $8.25 billion atom smasher "the Texas monster" and "one of the hungriest hogs at the federal trough."

Longtime opponents of the project have picked up the clout of Illinois' powerful delegation as the House nears a vote on the collider's 1992 spending bill.

Led by House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, Republican Leader Bob Michel and Rep. Sidney Yates, chairman of an Appropriations subcommittee, the Illinois lawmakers want to strip the SSC of at least $43.5 million and use the money for their own home-state physics project, the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory's Orbitron Chicago.

The Energy Department says that such a cut, on top of the $100 million already trimmed by the House Appropriations Committee from President Bush's $534 million request, could disrupt the construction schedule and wind up costing the taxpayers more in the long run.

Bush seeks to tighten loan controls
WASHINGTON — The Bush administration sent Congress on Tuesday a legislative package aimed at imposing tighter regulation on the government-backed companies that provide low-cost loans to home buyers, students and farmers.

The proposals would increase government oversight of the agencies, which had $281 billion in outstanding debt last year, the equivalent of the amount held by the savings and loan industry or one-third the amount held by commercial banks in the United States.

The administration has maintained that the various government-backed enterprises represent a growing taxpayer exposure to loss even though the various companies still have little risk of default.

Newton hospitalized

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Singer Wayne Newton has been hospitalized with what his spokeswoman said was "walking pneumonia."

The 49-year-old performer checked himself into a Las Vegas hospital Monday, a day after finishing a monthlong engagement at the Las Vegas Hilton, said spokeswoman Cheryl Kagen. She would not identify the hospital.

"He had been feeling badly for awhile, but he's been working for four months straight," Kagen said.

West Bank homes reported near 5,000

JERUSALEM — Housing Minister Ariel Sharon was quoted Tuesday as saying that in the past year construction has begun on nearly 4,500 housing units in the occupied West Bank.

The Bush administration opposes Jewish settlement building in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, saying the settlements are an obstacle to peace. Israel is seeking $10 billion in American aid to help settle new immigrants.

The daily Jerusalem Post quoted Sharon as telling Parliament that 4,468 new apartments had been started in the occupied lands since April 1990, including permanent housing, mobile homes and trailers. That was out of a total of 35,000 units begun in Israel and the occupied territories combined.

Most construction in the occupied territories is government authorized and subsidized. There was no breakdown available of which of the 4,468 units mentioned by Sharon were subsidized.

Korean students blockade Seoul streets

SEOUL, South Korea — About 7,000 students blocked downtown streets Tuesday and staged a boisterous evening sit-in demanding the ouster of President Roh Tae-wool.

The students marched through central Seoul from Sungkyunkwang University and crowded roads near a hospital that contains the body of Kim Kwil-jeong, a 25-year-old coed killed in street clashes.

"End the murderous regime!" the students chanted. Riot police watched but did not interfere. Evening traffic came to a standstill as the students, some wielding clubs and firebombs, rallied around the hospital. The march came after Roh vowed to crush violent protests but promised wider economic and social reforms.

North Korea wants into United Nations

SEOUL, South Korea — In a major diplomatic turnaround, Communist North Korea said Tuesday it would apply to join the United Nations simultaneously with longtime rival South Korea.

The surprise announcement is a breakthrough in four decades of bitterly-hostile relations between the two Koreas and could push forward dialogue on easing political and military tensions.

The statement from the North Korean foreign ministry is seen as North Korea's first major initiative toward expanding relations and opening its closed, exclusive society to the world. Observers see the North's opening as essential to securing lasting peace and security in the North Pacific.

NATO will develop rapid-action force

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and other NATO defense leaders Tuesday approved plans for an all-European, rapid-reaction force that could be sent to danger spots anywhere in Europe.

"We have accepted these recommendations," Belgian Defense Minister Guy Coeboom said at the end of the opening day of a two-day meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Coeboom said the ministers endorsed the new force "without problems."

The corps of up to 70,000 soldiers, led by a British commander, is part of the alliance's efforts to reshape its strategy with the end of the Cold War. NATO officials also discussed efforts by Western European nations to take on a greater role in defense, a move Washington supports, provided it does not weaken the 16-nation NATO alliance.

Japan nuclear plant will close for work

TOKYO — The plant where a broken tube triggered Japan's worst nuclear accident will be shut down for more than three years for investigation and repairs, its operator said Tuesday.

The replacement, expected to be approved by the Ministry of International Trade and Industry by fall, would be Japan's first replacement steam generator tubes in 19 years.

Japan has had nuclear capability for 25 years.

Gandhi funeral clears way for leader search

ALLAHABAD, India (AP) — Hindu funeral rites for Rajiv Gandhi were completed Tuesday in the waters of the Ganges and Yamuna rivers, allowing his leadership Congress Party to resume the search for his political heir.

In a blend of military honors, Hindu tradition and family grief, Gandhi's ashes were scattered at the point where the rivers meet.

Gandhi's 20-year-old son Rahul, dressed in the white color of mourning, emptied a copper urn containing the remains of his father into the muddy brown water. His mother Sonia sobbed and wiped tears with the end of her white sari, while her daughter Priyanka, 21, comforted her.

Thousands of mourners watched from shore as Rahul emptied the urn from a bamboo pier in mid-river, then knelt to wash it. A helicopter showered rose petals, and mourners cast red and yellow blossoms into the water. An Indian army band played a mournful song, "Flower of the Forest."

Hindus believe the ritual immersion of the ashes in the waters they consider sacred will assure the deceased a place in heaven until his soul is reborn.

Gandhi, 46, was assassinated May 21 by a woman who strapped explosives around her waist and blew herself up inches away from the former prime minister.

At least 16 other were killed in the blast at an election rally in the southern town of Sriperambudur near Madras, capital of Tamil Nadu state. Gandhi was cremated in New Delhi on Friday.

Most of the senior Congress Party leadership made the 21-hour trip on a special train from New Delhi to attend the last rites in Uttar Pradesh state, delaying until Wednesday the choice of a new party president.

The consensus candidate appeared to be P.V. Narasimha Rao, a former foreign minister and friend of the Gandhi family. But Rao is 69 and has a history of heart problems, and he is seen as a transition figure.

Congress is likely to split the functions held by Gandhi and the previous members of his family who had dominated the party and led the country for all but six of its 43 years. When he died, Gandhi was campaigning to regain the office he lost in 1989.

Traditionally, the party president also was the leader of the delegation in Parliament, which conferred the post of prime minister when Congress was in government.

Rao's appointment would defer the need to pick a candidate for parliamentary leader until after the elections are completed. The final stages of voting, which began the day before Gandhi was killed, have been postponed until June 12 and 15.

Gandhi's death appeared to end the political dynasty that began with his grandfather, India's first Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, and continued with his mother, Indira Gandhi. Gandhi's mother was prime minister when she was assassinated in 1984.

Hoping to keep the name alive in politics, the party invited Gandhi's widow to take its top position immediately after her husband was killed. But the Italian-born Mrs. Gandhi, quoted earlier as saying she detested politics, rejected the offer.

U.S. force heading home from Bangladesh

CHITTAGONG, Bangladesh (AP) — Thousands of U.S. servicemen and women who brought food, clothing and hope to Bangladeshis who survived a killer cyclone will resume their journey home from the Gulf War on Wednesday.

"Our mission was to save lives. I think we saved a lot — I wish we could have saved more," said Maj. Gen. Henry Stackpole, the commander of Operation Sea Angel.

A seven-ship U.S. amphibious task force was diverted to Bangladesh by President Bush to speed relief to an estimated 1.7 million survivors of the April 30 cyclone that claimed at least 139,000 lives.

The 7,500-member U.S. military contingent provided the backbone and logistics for an international relief effort that had been unable to get desperately needed supplies to cyclone survivors.

During an intensive two-week operation, Stackpole said, the U.S. task force delivered 3,300 tons of relief supplies to hard-hit coastal areas and lowlying islands in the Bay of Bengal by helicopter, boat and amphibious craft. "We have virtually, directly or indirectly, reached all of those 1.7 million," he said, noting government warehouses that had been full of supplies are now empty.

In addition, he said, U.S. military medical teams and engineers, working with their Bangladesh counterparts and international relief organizations, treated survivors and helped contain an outbreak of diarrhea caused by contaminated drinking water.

Many of the 4,000 Marines and 3,000 sailors due to leave Wednesday have been away from home more than six months. The Marines made an amphibious landing in Saudi Arabia at the start of the ground war Feb. 24 and moved into southern Kuwait, taking Iraqi prisoners and clearing pockets of resistance.

Shortly before their seven-ship flotilla departs, the supply ship USS St. Louis with about 250 Marines on board is scheduled to arrive to help with the American withdrawal.

The United States will keep about 500 military personnel and five Blackhawk helicopters from the original task force in Bangladesh to wind up relief operations to outlying districts and finish rebuilding some warehouses, the general said.

Israeli airline profits despite war in gulf

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's national El Al Airlines reported a $14.1 million profit for 1990 despite a tourist slump caused by the Gulf War, the firm announced.

An El Al statement said the company was one of few international carriers to show a profit last year when overseas travel declined after Iraq's August invasion of Kuwait.

The company said it had increased revenues by 10.4 percent in fiscal 1990, the fifth consecutive net annual profit for El Al. The figure, however, was down from 1989 when a $24.2 million profit was reported.

U.S. cool to overtures from Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Iran moved to end its commercial and diplomatic isolation, the State Department on Tuesday offered little encouragement to the leaders of the Persian Gulf country that was once one of America's best friends in the region.

Without a ripple of change in long-standing U.S. policy, the department insisted that Iran must exert its influence to gain the release of the six Americans held hostage in Lebanon and cease its support for terrorism.

"Iran wishes to re-emerge as a full member of the community of nations, it knows well what it is expected to do," Margaret D. Tutwiler, the State Department spokeswoman, said.

Tehran. The 52 Americans who were held hostage were released in January 1981 after 444 days and nights of captivity.

The internal view is that they desperately want to have better ties with the West," said a U.S. official who asked not to be identified. "They think they just open the door and we fall right in."

The overture came Monday in Isfahan at an oil and gas conference. President Hashemi Rafsanjani and three other senior officials used the occasion to call for vastly increased economic and political cooperation with the West.

It was part of a campaign to attract foreign investment as well as diplomatic recognition. Iran hopes to raise $27 billion for a five-year economic plan that began last year.

Three of America's best friends in the Arab world are responding to the beckoning call from Tehran. Saudi Arabia and Jordan have restored diplomatic relations, and Egypt is a step away, having established consular offices in Iran.

At the conference Iran announced its intention to cooperate with Saudi Arabia to seek stable oil prices. And yet, the U.S. official said the overture to the West: "We don't think there is anything new out there."

Kuwaiti fires spread smoke

BALTIMORE (AP) — Smoke and soot from more than 500 oil wells burning in Kuwait are affecting sunlight, crops and fisheries far east as far south as Ethiopia, a scientist said Tuesday.

In a report based on satellite studies, Robert R. Chase reported at a meeting of the American Geophysical Union that temperatures are dropping up to 59 degrees in areas under the densest part of the smoke plume erupting from the burning oil wells.

"The plume is very thick and very dense," he said. At its very worst, the smoke can so block the sunlight in midday that "it's like midnight on a moonless night."

The oil wells were set afire by the Iraq army during the Persian Gulf War.

They are burning out of control and Chase said it is now predicted it will take up to two years to put out all of the fires.

Rescuers tired after series of emergencies

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Rescue workers could use a break from a series of emergencies that have had them scrambling up Yosemite's rugged peaks and into its frigid streams.

"It's been going two weeks straight with rescues, etc.," said park Ranger John Dill, leader of the rescue team.

A team set out again Tuesday in the search for two young brothers who were swept down the Merced River on Saturday.

Searching the swift, snow-swollen Merced and its brush-covered banks for the boys wasn't the only task Yosemite's rescuers faced during the busy Memorial Day weekend. A helicopter crew was sent to the Nevada Falls area Sunday to retrieve a climber who broke his right leg in a fall. A hiker died of a heart attack Friday on Yosemite Falls trail.

The rash of emergencies began May 13 when a raft capsized on the Merced, in the same section where 3-year-old Mario and 5-year-old Lance Thomas Jr. of Copton were reported missing.

One man drowned in the earlier accident, and two others were trapped on rocks in midstream. Rescuers wearing protective headgear and wet suits went into the icy water and used ropes to pull the survivors to shore.

Dill said the man who drowned in the May 13 accident was found at almost the same spot where workers recovered the body of the Thomas boys' great-uncle on Saturday. The woman, Elaine Watson, 44, went into the water in an effort to save the boys after they jumped from the roof of a car that had veered into the river. The boys' grandmother and 7-year-old sister survived.

"From that our down-200 yards is one of the worst parts of the river," big-boiling cauldrons that can hold you down, lots of snags," Dill said. "What makes it most dangerous is when logs and branches form strainers. Water goes through, but objects don't."

In addition to the current, the water temperature was in the 40s.

"You chill up so fast," Dill said. "You get bashed against rocks. Cold water saps your strength even if you're a good swimmer."

Only Dill and another ranger work full time on rescues and training volunteers, said spokeswoman Kris Fischer. The crew numbered more than 50 during the first day's search for the Thomas boys, but the search was scaled back to just four to six people Tuesday.

The same day the raft capsized on May 13, a rock climber died in a fall, and other searchers went out to look for a missing hiker, Fister said Tuesday. The hiker was found safe two days later.

The rest of that week, the crew rescued a woman hit in the back by a rock, a man who went into cardiac arrest and a woman who had a seizure. They also found some over-zealous climbers.

Veterans plan trip to Hanoi

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Two Inland Northwest veterans say they have come to terms with their Vietnam war experience and now want to bring their Southern Asian country closer to the United States.

Sean Daly and Louis Block plan to join nearly 60 other American veterans this summer on a trip to Hanoi to join 60 Vietnamese veterans on a two-week peace march July 10 to Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

"I've always felt that until we meet with the Vietnamese people and talk with them, it won't be over," Daly said during a Memorial Day observance Monday.

Iran-Contra figure North to lecture at conference

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Convicted Iran-Contra figure Oliver North is scheduled to be the keynote speaker for a Spokane, Wash., corporation's stockholders meeting in October at The Coeur d'Alene Resort.

URM Stores President Steve Heribson said North will address the company's 100 stockholders Oct. 6 on patriotism and "the value of being an American."

The meeting will be closed to the public.

Heribson said he was impressed with the retired Marine lieutenant colonel's "ability to provide a message" when he heard him speak in Los Angeles in January, and later booked him for URM's annual meeting.

Dennis Horn, URM chief financial officer, said the company has been trying in recent years to attract compelling speakers to its stockholders meetings. But he said he expects that North will stick to his patriotic theme and will avoid commenting on the Iran-Contra case.

URM is a retailer-owned grocery distribution company. Horn said it has about 1,000 accounts with grocery, convenience and warehouse stores throughout the Inland Northwest.

The former Reagan White House national security aide was earning $25,000 a speech as one of the nation's most sought-after speakers following his Congress Iran-Contra hearings in 1987 and his subsequent criminal case.

North was found guilty of falsifying and destroying documents, abetting the obstruction of justice and accepting an illegal gratuity.

Police search for man who robbed gas station

BURLEY - Police are still looking for a man who used a gun to rob the Mr. Gas convenience store and gas station on the corner of Eighth Street and Overland Avenue in Burley Sunday night.

The man, described as Hispanic and 5 feet, 8 inches tall with a scruffy beard and mustache and wearing a white T-shirt, made off with an undetermined amount of money after pointing a pistol at the cashier and demanding that she hand over the contents of the store's till. Lt. Jim Higgins of the Cassia County Sheriff's Department said.

The man fled on foot and police are still investigating the robbery, Higgins said.

Castleford School District's budget takes 5 percent hike

CASTLEFORD - The Castleford School District's 1991-92 budget has increased about 5 percent from last year.

The $1,102,377 budget is up from last year's $1,052,026 budget, mostly because of inflation and rising electricity costs, said Superintendent Henry Kilmer.

Kilmer reported that teacher contract negotiations have been completed with a 3 percent across-the-board raise for teachers and all other employees, plus increments.

The district no longer will furnish insurance for each employee, but will provide each employee with $100 per month to use on a plan.

In other business, the Castleford School Board has hired a Szechui of Utah to coach boys' basketball and teach language arts and physical education.

Albertson's employee arrested on charges of stealing groceries

BURLEY - A man working for the Albertson's Food Center in Burley was arrested over the weekend and charged with stealing more than $600 in groceries from the store.

Darin K. Mangum, 26, of Burley, is charged with a felony count of grand theft. He was released from custody after appearing in Magistrate Court Tuesday.

Mangum was arrested early Monday morning after a Cassia County Sheriff's deputy spotted someone loading groceries into a vehicle near the store's rear entrance at about 4 a.m., said Lt. Jim Higgins of the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

The deputy watched the man for a while, then questioned him about the groceries, Higgins said. The store's manager was then called and Mangum was arrested, he said.

Mangum was a receiving clerk for the store and had worked there for about five years, store manager Don Swenson said. Mangum was fired after his arrest, Swenson said.

Police officers crash parties, cite juveniles for consumption

JEROME - A couple of post-graduation parties in Jerome drew attention of some union guests over the weekend, and more than three dozen juveniles were cited for drinking alcohol.

Four officers and a Bureau of Land Management official crashed a party 8 1/2 miles north and four miles east of town at 12:45 a.m. Sunday, said Kathleen Hanning, criminal records secretary for the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

The officers found about 50 revellers aged 15 to 22, an empty beer keg and some other alcohol, Hanning said. Parents were called to scene to pick up the 31 juveniles who were cited for illegal possession of alcohol, she said.

Jerome High School held its graduation exercises Saturday.

On Friday night, officers busted a party seven miles east and three miles south of town. Six juveniles, all 17 or 18 years old, were cited for illegal consumption or possession of alcohol, Hanning said.

"All of the juveniles involved in both parties are from Jerome, she said.

Heyburn resident faces charge of lewd conduct with a minor

RUPERT - A Heyburn woman charged with having sexual contact with a 15-year-old boy pleaded innocent in 5th District Court Tuesday.

Donna Schorzman, 38, faces a single count of lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under the age of 16. The case will now be set for trial.

She is accused of having sexual contact with the boy in September, the criminal complaint filed in Magistrate Court says.

The maximum sentence for lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under 16 is life in prison.

Crapo edges toward congressional race

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Would-be congressman Michael Crapo trekked through town on Tuesday, July 17, months away from the 1992 general election but much closer to announcing his candidacy.

The Idaho Falls Republican, currently the president pro tem of the state Senate, said he's in the process of forming an exploratory committee, a step toward formally announcing that he'll seek Democratic 2nd District Congressman Richard Stallings' seat.

"I need to be more familiar with national election rules before I start running out and raising money," Crapo said.

Stallings is exploring the possibility of a bid against Sen. Steve Symms, and a handful of Republican names are circulating to replace him, including state Rep. Mark Stubbs of Twin Falls-Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn and former Attorney General Jim Jones.

Crapo, a lawyer serving his fourth term in the state Legislature, said the public's general cynicism about Congress is, to a certain extent, justified.

"The bureaucracy is not working," he said.

Michael Crapo State can benefit from proposed NPR said. "There has to be some better solutions." But rather than rejecting the whole concept, he said, people should realize that individuals can make a difference.

"Although you're one of 435, in that situation you're in a position to have tremendous influence for good," Crapo said.

The successful candidate, he said, will demonstrate a political agenda, along with personal integrity, honesty and character, and will show the ability to be effective.

Crapo's agenda includes reducing the national deficit, strengthening the business climate, protecting the environment and improving education.

Addressing some of those concepts, Crapo said Idaho can benefit from a proposed New Production Reactor at Idaho National Engineering Laboratory without harm to the environment.

"I think that we can have a clean environment and we can have a strong INEL," he said.

The NPR would produce radioisotope tritium, used to increase the yield of nuclear bombs, and would be capable of producing plutonium. Idaho is one of three potential sites for the Department of Energy facility.

"I am a strong supporter of the INEL and I'm in favor of the NPR coming to Idaho," Crapo said.

Nuclear energy will be a key element in the country's future energy policy, he said, and it will be a clean source. And, Crapo said, "there's nothing wrong with a strong national defense. ... It's appropriate that Idaho participate in our national defense and it's appropriate that it participate at INEL."

But, he cautioned, waste already at the site needs to be cleaned up, and the federal government "has to put the money into the clean-up effort."

On other issues, Crapo said he supports Congress giving President Bush authority to negotiate a Mexican free trade agreement on the "fast track" and he trusts the president's assurances that he'll protect Idaho's agricultural industries.

The last-track provision, approved by Congress last week, is an agreement to consider any trade bill that comes out of the coming negotiations with a straight-up-or-down vote.

Crapo also said he opposes the Brady Bill which calls for a seven-day waiting period for the purchase of handguns and recently passed the House. The bill, he said, is not unconstitutional but "people here are entitled to the Constitution and beyond the spirit of the law."

Supporters disrupt NPR hearings

By N.S. Nokkenved
Times-News writer

BOISE - To the tune of "Stars and Stripes Forever," about 75 flag-waving union workers disrupted a hearing on the proposed New Production Reactor Tuesday.

The federal Energy Department's hearing on the NPR was halted for a few minutes by the display of support for the project, for which the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory is one of three potential sites.

Hearing officer Roy Eiguren asked the demonstrators to stop or leave the hearing room. They decided to stay and lined the walls of the room, all wearing white baseball caps proclaiming their support for INEL and the NPR.

But the workers, most of whom came from Boise, were a minority Tuesday.

Most of those testifying at the fourth of a series of public hearings on the NPR said Idaho doesn't want the facility and that the country doesn't need it.

The NPR would produce tritium, a radioactive form of hydrogen used to increase the yield of nuclear bombs.

Hearing officer Roy Eiguren asked the demonstrators to stop or leave the hearing room. They decided to stay and lined the walls of the room, all wearing white baseball caps proclaiming their support for INEL and the NPR.

The Energy Department's draft environmental impact statement, which is the subject of these hearings being held throughout Idaho, does not deal adequately with the waste the project would create, opponents say.

Instead, the document relies on waste treatment and disposal facilities that do not exist, said Dan Plouze, board member of the Snake River Alliance, a statewide anti-nuclear peace group.

The department has acknowledged that no waste repository exists, but says it sees

EchoHawk wants to take drug dealers to court

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

BURLEY - Idaho Attorney General Larry EchoHawk doesn't want crime to pay.

So he's planning to propose legislation next winter that would allow the state to use civil proceedings to seize the property of drug dealers.

"We have a criminal racketeering law I want to supplement it with civil law," EchoHawk told a lunchtime audience of the Burley Rotary Club and Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday.

The Democrat, who ended 16 years of Republican control here of the office last fall, also wants to help communities with child sexual abuse cases by expanding statewide a program he formed in Bannock County.

After seeing a 10-year-old girl break into tears on the witness stand and run out of the courtroom, the then-Bannock County prosecutor formed a task force that reached a "protocol agreement" on how different agencies would work together in abuse investigations and prosecution. And an informal room was set up for child interviews, which he said all counties need.

"The bottom line is finding the truth and we need these facilities throughout the state to find the truth," EchoHawk said.

Addressing other issues, EchoHawk said he will travel to Washington, D.C., next week to testify in favor of legislation to overturn a U.S. Supreme Court decision favoring federal authority to determine stream flows at federally licensed hydro-dropper facilities.

Traditionally that's a state's domain, and EchoHawk says it should remain so.

"The legislation will restore state control over these hydro sites," he said.

In other water-related matters, EchoHawk said three chinook salmon runs may be recommended for endangered species status this week, and he is working with Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus to protect both the threatened fish and Idaho's river water.

"We will monitor what goes on because it has tremendous impact on our economy," EchoHawk said.

Hearing addresses fire district

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A public hearing tonight will decide whether some Twin Falls County residents can vote to establish a fire district in the area outside the Twin Falls city limits.

"It's year-over-time," Twin Falls County Commissioner Martin Hempelman said Tuesday. "Two years ago, we held a public hearing, and the feeling was nay. But I have not heard one bad thing about this (latest proposal) so far," he said.

The hearing starts at 7 p.m. tonight in the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

If enough people support the plan, the County Commission can authorize an election in which residents of the proposed district would

Final meeting on park project set for tonight

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - City parks and recreation officials hope for a large turnout at tonight's public meeting on a master plan for Dierkes Lake and Shoshone Falls.

The meeting, scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Twin Falls City Council chambers, will be the third and final session designed to gather public comment on long-range improvements and plans for the two areas. The city hired a Boise landscape architecture firm, Back & Berman, to study the area.

An amphitheater, arboretum, hiking trails - accessible to the handicapped and with interpretive signs - archery facilities, picnic amenities, play equipment for children, a boat launch on the Snake River, a picnic launch on Dierkes Lake and another overlook for Shoshone Falls are among improvements and plans for the two

Astronomers link quasars, radio-bright galaxies

Boston Globe

SEATTLE — Astronomers reported Tuesday that quasars and radio-bright galaxies, which they thought were different kinds of distant objects, are one and the same, appearing different only because they are seen from different angles.

The finding is a major step toward what astronomers call a grand unified theory of the nature of quasars and galaxies, said astronomer Andrew Wilson of the University of Maryland and S. George Djorgovski of the California Institute of Technology.

The astronomers said they hoped their findings would lead to a better understanding of how galaxies and quasars form and evolve, and could eventually lead to the long-sought proof of the existence of supermassive black holes.

Radio galaxies, collections of stars that emit prodigious quantities of radio waves, were first discovered in the 1940s, and quasars, which emit more energy than any other known object, were first found in the 1960s. Descriptions of such objects and their relationships had begun to resemble a very complicated family tree. But the findings reported Tuesday at a meeting of the American Astronomical Society indicate that the two kinds of objects are the same.

Djorgovski said it was as though Martians had arrived and observed cars on a freeway and tried to understand them. Some would be seen from the front, with headlights and windshields, some from the top, some from the side. They would seem to be completely different kinds of objects, and "trying to understand how cars work from these observations" would be virtually impossible, he said.

New methods of observation give astronomers a way to "look under the hood" of these mysterious objects, Djorgovski said. Using earlier methods of observation, astronomers were only able to "see the decorations on the side," he said.

The new observations that led to Tuesday's announcement were made using an infrared telescope. Infrared light can penetrate through the obscuring dust better than light, but not as well as radio waves. Using telescopes in California and Hawaii, the astronomers found that at least five of the brightest radio-bright galaxies, including the brightest one known, harbor quasars that are "buried" at their centers, obscured by a ring of dust.

Both quasars and radio-bright galaxies, astronomers said, are probably supermassive black holes, the densest form of matter believed to exist, so massive that not even light can escape their gravitational pull. The black hole is surrounded by a huge torus, or doughnut-shaped area of dust.

When viewed from the side, the doughnut blocks all visible light emitted from the black hole, but radio waves penetrate the dust and can be observed from Earth. This is what astronomers have seen and called radio-bright galaxies.

But when viewed from above, looking straight into the hole of the donut, matter surrounding the central black hole can be seen clearly. Such objects, which spew out tremendous energy as matter is swept into the gravitational field of the black hole and becomes heated by a rapid swirling motion, have been known as quasars.

The astronomers hope that further observations may extend the unification to other kinds of active galaxies

Blazing shed downs power lines

The Times-News
WINNALS — A boy playing with matches ignited a fire that destroyed power lines in a residential neighborhood Tuesday afternoon.

Campbell said Campbell and his wife, who live in the home, were inside the shed when the fire broke out. The fire brought down some power lines which caused some homes without electricity.

Quakes rattle ocean near coastline

SAN SIMON, Calif. (AP) — A pair of mild earthquakes rattled the Pacific Ocean floor early Tuesday near Hearst Castle, the palatial home once occupied by publishing tycoon William Randolph Hearst.

of San Simeon, which is on the coast highway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

No one called the San Luis Obispo County sheriff's department to report the quakes, and they weren't felt by workers at the Hearst Castle visitor center or San Simeon State Park.

Hearst Castle was the majestic home of publisher Hearst. Orson Welles' classic film "Citizen Kane" was loosely based on Hearst's life and featured a castle called Xanadu, based on San Simeon.

Farm workers train to battle fires with U.S. Forest Service

ENTIAI, Wash. (AP) — For the first time in Washington state, farmworkers will join the U.S. Forest Service temporarily this year to fight fires.

The program, intended to increase the ranks of minorities in Forest Service firefighting efforts, is the first of its kind for the agency in the Pacific Northwest. Similar programs have been used by fire-management agencies in California and the Southwest.

Forest Service officials like the program because it boosts rural economies and saves the agency the cost of importing emergency fire crews from other states.

Agency firefighter Tom Fogata greets. "It provides opportunities for local people and provides us with help in emergency fire situations," said the 18-year veteran, who supervises crews of elite firefighters that travel from Entiat to major forest fires around the country.

Dierkes

About 30 people attended the first hearing in early April and a dozen or so were on hand at the second one in early May.

Tonight, Danny Sundell of Beck & Baird will discuss possible ways and places to fund money for the park plan.

The city probably will have to look to government and private grants as well as individual and business contributions to make improvements.

An entry fee on cars and buses to Shoshone Falls/Dierkes Lake park complex brings in around $70,000 a year. But Twin Falls City Parks and Recreation Director and Bowling Green at least half of that money goes to pay salaries and maintenance and operation costs for the two areas, so the city will need to find other funding sources.

Sundell also will give a breakdown in costs for improvements and possibly suggest a list of priorities for the projects according to cost.

One concept of a master plan for Dierkes Lake and Shoshone Falls shows improvements ranging from an amphitheater to botanical gardens and a canoe launch. A Boise firm is set to present a final plan tonight.

INEL

Continued from B2. No problem with storing the waste generated by the NPR at INEL for the 40-year life of the reactor, Pilotte said.

Herb Pember of Boise said it is ironic that the nation is investing billions of dollars in new weapons production capacity while it is negotiating with other world powers over nuclear disarmament.

"All that the NPR would say is that we've learned nothing over the last 45 years," said Kerry Cooke, executive director of the Snake River Alliance, speaking to a crowd gathered outside the meeting during the lunch recess.

"The only people who want it are the people who will make money from it," said Gary Hagen of Boise. Those who spoke in support of NPR said it would provide jobs and taxes for the state and local governments and help insure economic stability for eastern Idaho and the rest of the state.

Other projects at the site are winding down, and many will end in the next 10 years, said Jim Reed of Idaho Falls.

"It doesn't take a brain surgeon to figure out the tax base will shrink," he said.

The site needs to start new projects as soon as possible, he said. While not the only possible project in INEL's future, "NPR would be super," he said.

Meanwhile, Congressman Richard Stallings, an NPR supporter, was in Washington D.C., trying to convince Congress not to designate South Carolina as a preferred site for the reactor.

The Savannah River Site in South Carolina and the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington state are the two other potential sites for the NPR.

"I remain a strong supporter of the New Production Reactor and believe the INEL is a safe and logical place to build it," Stallings said in written testimony.

Richard Englehart, DOE representative, acknowledged that past weapons production practices "were not to today's standards."

"There's a lot to complain about," he said, noting that he understands the impatience of the department's critics.

But the department is working to correct those problems, and it is planning to take up the issue of waste treatment and disposal in a separate environmental impact statement, he said.

The state would like to see an Idaho representative on the committee that will review a seismic evaluation of the INEL site, said Steve Hill, manager of the state's INEL Oversight program.

Fire

Continued from B2. The county line on the Snake River-Land in the proposed area contains $100 million in improvements, Bieri said recently.

Only residents of the area within the proposed district would vote on the plan and pay for the services. Funding the district most likely would come from property taxes, a way to form a district without issuing a bond or going deeply in debt, Bieri said.

He recently estimated the average cost would be $150 to $160 a year per household. The highest possible tax would be $240 a year on a $100,000 home, he said. Living in the district might lower fire insurance premiums on those houses if the district contracts with the Twin Falls fire department.

Contracting with the city for fire services would be the best way for the district to provide services, Bieri said. Money raised by the district could go toward buying equipment and hiring firefighters for the city department, while making all of the city's services available to the district.

Unlike the proposal of a couple of years ago, this plan would tax only structures, not land. At tonight's hearing, Bieri and Steve Swope will show a map of the proposed district and give estimated costs and other information.

Crews plant millions of trees in ravaged Boise National Forest

BANNER RIDGE (AP) — Energetic tree-planters are busy on the slopes of the Boise National Forest, "jump-starting" Mother Nature's recovery from 1989's wildfires.

Scalpers dust off the tree-planting sites to mark the location. Men toting power augers move in next, punching 4-inch holes for the 2-year-old trees. Then planters finish the job, popping seedlings into the holes in about 15 seconds.

To make sure the soil is compact around the trees, planters pound the soil with their fists.

At the 105-acre Gold Fork planting unit, the 20-member crew from Caldwell will plant about 36,000 ponderosa pine, Douglas fir, Engelman spruce and lodgepole pine seedlings, said Leonard Roeber, a Boise National Forest technician supervising the job.

Crews like A&L Reforestation from Caldwell are busy planting about 2 million trees this month across the forest, which lost nearly 100,000 acres to wildfire two years ago. Tree-planting will continue in burned areas near Cascade, Garden Valley, Warm Lake, Idaho City and Leman until the end of May.

Using new tree-planting techniques developed in the Northwest, the crews are making a special effort to ensure survival, Roeber said. Those efforts include special mapping of tree-planting sites called "microsilting" and shading trees from hot sunlight with rocks and woody debris.

"The more shade we can provide for that seedling, the better its chances of survival," Roeber said. "We're trying to protect the soil and roots from drying out."

Even on a 70-degree day, temperatures on the ground can reach 100 degrees. "When you plant a tree on the south side of a stump, it's just like a little bakery," said Terry Sexton, timber management assistant.

Last year, trees planted in the aftermath of the King Gulch fire near Idaho City were protected with plastic "shade cards." Success rates ranged about 95 percent, Roeber said.

The drought has hampered seedling survival forest-wide, said Barry Stern, a Boise Forest silviculturist, said. "It's really difficult for a young tree to survive a long, hot summer without much moisture."

That is another reason why foresters are laying out tree plantations as if they were rebuilding the forest from scratch.

"They select particular species for each little nook and cranny in the mountains. On south slopes, they plant ponderosa pine. In 'frost pockets,' they place lodgepole pine. On north slopes, they use Douglas fir."

"We learned from the school of hard knocks that you can't just plant ponderosa pine wherever you want and expect it to survive," Roeber said.

Because the 40,000-acre Lowman burn was so hot, few mature, live trees remain in the planting unit. If crews did not plant trees there, shrubs and brush would overtake the area, precluding tree growth for decades, Roeber said.

Seedlings for this year's planting effort have been shipped from the Lucky-Bear Nursery, Wind River, Ore., and Coeur d'Alene.

Jennifer Cooper, an Idaho City District firefighter, supervises crews at the Gold Fork site. She makes sure the soil is properly compacted, and the right number of trees are planted per acre.

"If she finds mistakes, planting crews are docked a certain percentage of their pay."

"It's long days, but it's good exercise for getting in shape for fire season," Cooper said.

Coeur d'Alene scrambles to meet demand for labor

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Coeur d'Alene's chief building inspector has launched an all-out search for temporary help to keep pace with the city's ongoing construction boom.

Mike Jacobs' four-person staff has been struggling to handle a glut of paper-work and inspections since October.

During the first four months of 1991, Jacobs' division issued building permits for commercial and residential construction valued at $10.2 million. That's more than double the average value of construction during the same period for the previous four years.

In May, Jacobs said, he and his staff have issued permits for about $4 million worth of work, or four times the monthly average.

"This has been going on steady for seven months," Jacobs said.

Experts say the boom should continue for the rest of the season, and probably longer.

"I don't think you can shut it off in the short term," said Jack Gustavel, president of First National Bank of North Idaho. "The outlook is very good. We're being discovered."

Chris Driskill, president of the North Idaho Building Contractors Association, said his company was in "boom" mode for the best four months.

"That's pretty typical with construction companies around here," he said. "And I'm not as gung-ho as some of the others."

Driskill said half his business is from people moving into the area, and many customers are paying cash for their homes. After 26 years in the construction business, he predicted the local market would remain healthy until he retires in another 20 years — if the environment is protected.

But Gustavel predicted the explosion in commercial construction will slow down.

"We probably can't keep up with that kind of pace," Gustavel said.

The Coeur d'Alene City Council decided last week that city building inspectors need relief. Members approved hiring two full-time inspectors for the next six months at a cost of $26,054. Fees from building permits will pay for the two new employees.

Attorney: Sex offenders passed over for parole

BOISE (AP) — Convicted sex offenders in Idaho are being systematically and unfairly passed over for parole, a Boise criminal defense attorney contends.

"It's a very disturbing trend," Ada County Deputy Public Defender Amil Myshin said.

While the Commission for Pardons and Parole denies the allegation, district judges in Ada County say they are concerned about the low numbers of sex offenders being deemed fit for parole. But because of pending appeals, they decline to discuss the issue publicly.

The biggest question: Are rapists and molestators being made to serve longer terms behind bars than other violent criminals?

"That's not true," Olivia Craven West, Parole Commission executive director, said Friday.

"We're evaluating sex offenders and considering them for parole on each individual case, just like any other offender. Some sex offenders are getting parole. Some are, and some aren't."

In January and February, West said, 18 inmates with child molestation convictions were considered for parole. Six were granted. She said more comprehensive statistics are not immediately available.

In January and February, West told a different story at the annual judicial conference in Boise in January.

"My recollection is that the statement was made that as a matter of policy, all sex offenders would be topping out their sentences," 4th District Judge Duff McKee said.

"Topping out" means convicted felons must serve their fixed, or mandatory, prison term, plus the much longer indeterminate sentence that follows.

Well-behaved inmates usually are considered serious candidates for parole after completing the fixed portion of their sentences.

McKee declined further comment because, he said, the issue figures in at least two pending post-conviction appeals seeking abbreviated sentences.

Myshin appeared Friday before 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse, asking for reconsideration of a prison sentence of eight to 20 years handed down earlier this month in a Boise rape and kidnapping case.

Myshin says the Parole Commission now requires sex offenders to spend their entire sentences behind bars. For his client, that means 20 years, rather than eight.

Newhouse declined to reduce the sentence based on Myshin's contentions but said that if they are proven correct, a large number of sex-abuse sentences may have to be reconsidered.

West said she was aware of "false rumors" circulating in the legal community concerning the commission's stance on sex offenders.

"A minority of such inmates statewide, she insisted, are being released with years to go on their sentences."

"There aren't a lot getting paroled, but some are," she said.

The defense bar, however, is concerned that the Parole Commission has created a special class of inmate not subject to normal parole consideration.

The panel functions with virtual autonomy under the law and is largely exempt from judicial review.

Man who stole jet engines to receive new hearing

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A federal appellate court has ordered a new sentencing hearing for a Hill Air Force Base security policeman who confessed to stealing three F-16 jet fighter engines.

The 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver ruled that U.S. District Judge David Sam departed from federal sentencing guidelines in handing down a 10-year prison term to Brian Davis Roth, 24, of Chesterfield, Ohio.

In January 1990, Sam said the $10 million value of the engines prompted him to impose a heavier sentence than the 37 months recommended by the guidelines for a theft conviction.

Roth's co-defendant, Danny Joe Stroud, received a 37-month prison term on his guilty plea to the same theft indictment.

Prosecutor Bruce Lubek agreed with Sam's sentencing decision because Roth was the leader and the value of the engines "calls for a sentence above the normal theft case."

Lubek had not decided Tuesday whether to seek a rehearing before the Denver appellate court.

Roth and Stroud, 25, of Newton,

Kan., were arrested in July 1989 after they sold the three jet engines to FBI undercover agents. Prosecutors claimed the defendants had received only a $10,000 deposit on a promised $300,000.

Opinion split on proposed reactor for Hanford site

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Completing a mothballed reactor at the Hanford nuclear reservation to produce weapons material would boost the region's jobs while saving federal money, backers of such a project told a Department of Energy hearing Tuesday.

But opponents said building the new tritium production reactor at Hanford would only add more radioactive waste to the most contaminated site in the country.

Hanford is one of three sites being considered for a new federal reactor to produce tritium, which boosts the power of nuclear weapons. The other sites are in Idaho and South Carolina.

Completing the partially built reactor at Hanford "represents the safest, cheapest, quickest and most environmentally benign means of meeting our nation's tritium needs," Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said in a statement delivered by an aide at the public hearing.

But Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., said the Department of Energy should use new technologies that could produce or reclaim tritium without creating more waste.

"We need to be creating more jobs in waste disposal, not more waste to dispose," Adams said in prepared testimony.

The mothballed plant was being built by the Washington Public Power Supply system to produce civilian electricity. Construction stopped in the early 1980s because of financial problems and doubts about whether its electricity output would be needed.

Adams cautioned that converting a civilian nuclear plant to military use could send the wrong message to other countries.

"Hanford does not need to revert to generating nuclear weapons materials, and our country does not need to accelerate the proliferation of nuclear weapons because of a supposed tritium crisis," he said.

Rep. Sid Morrison, R-Wash., said some would see a conflict between Hanford's new mission of developing waste cleanup technologies and the production of more waste on site.

"But this reactor is an opportunity to show how environmentally safe it can be," said Morrison, whose district includes Hanford.

Morrison said power needs will exceed regional supplies in a few years, and that steam-generated electricity from the tritium reactor could help.

The Savannah River facility near Aiken, S.C., is the only site now capable of producing tritium. But that site's production plants have been shut down because of safety problems.

In 1988 the National Security Council determined that a new plant must be built to replace the aging Savannah River operation and maintain weapons stockpiles, since tritium decays relatively quickly.

Hanford, Savannah River and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory are the three sites being considered.

Hearing promised for Columbia plans

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, has won a commitment from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to conduct an additional hearing on the environmental impact statement for its 1992 Columbia River streamflow plans.

The Corps said Tuesday that it would conduct a "scoping meeting" June 11 in Boise on measures it plans to help migrating salmon pass through the Columbia to the Pacific Ocean next year.

Initially, no Idaho meetings were scheduled on the environmental impact statement. But in a letter last week, Stallings asked the agency to add hearings in Boise and Pocatello.

Salmon schools will try levy again

SALMON — In an effort to prevent layoffs, the Salmon School Board has decided to ask voters again to pass a two-year, $240,000-a-year supplemental levy.

An election was tentatively scheduled June 14. Voters last week rejected the levy 512-571. A simple majority was required for passage.

Failure of the levy prompted school officials to notify 11 teachers and 19 aides not to count on being rehired in the fall, even though layoffs would boost grade school student-teacher ratios and force cut-backs in programs such as art and music.

Education, alcoholism concern Indians

FORT HALL — High school dropouts and alcoholism are the top concerns of Shoshone-Bannock tribal officials trying to establish a steering committee to address Indian education in Idaho.

W. Buck Martin, task force director for the White House Conference on Indian Education, outlined plans Tuesday for a national conference to be conducted early next January on Indian education issues. Martin told about 20 educators and tribal officials on the Fort Hall-Indian Reservation that to be effective, the White House conference will need cooperation from Indians nationwide.

'Litter stickers' going on state vehicles

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus has directed state employees to put "Idaho is too great to litter" bumper stickers on all state-owned vehicles.

"Litter is a primary concern of all Idaho citizens, and the public needs to be more aware of this increasing problem," Andrus said in an executive order Tuesday to all state agencies.

Brownlee water levels looking better

BOISE — Brownlee Reservoir is expected to refill earlier than projected, thanks to lingering, stationary wet weather over much of the Lower Snake and Columbia river basins.

Idaho Power Co., which operates the dam creating Brownlee, said it now expects the reservoir to reach its 975,000-acre-foot capacity this week rather than mid- to late-June as earlier projected.

That means Idaho Power should be able to meet customers' peak summertime electricity needs with relatively inexpensive hydropower, rather than having to rely so much on coal-fired generators.

Caldwell printing firm's president dies

CALDWELL — James H. Gipson Jr., president of Caxton Printers, Ltd., and the son of the company's founder, died Sunday at age 78.

Gipson's father, James H. Gipson Sr., founded Caxton Printers, Ltd., in 1903. Today, Caxton Printers has about 60 full-time employees in a school and textbook printing business that serves much of the country.

Minister charges library with censorship

REXBURG (AP) — A retired St. Anthony minister is leveling charges of censorship against the Madison District Library in Rexburg, contending it won't put the anti-Mormon book he donated on its shelves for circulation.

"I just kinda fell into this by accident," said Stan Simpson, 66, a retired American Baptist Church minister. "I donated a book to them and they wouldn't put it on the shelves. ... It made me upset. One person in the library didn't like the book and the whole group (the library board) rubbed salt in the deal. ... There are non-LDS people who live in Rexburg and the Madison District," he said.

The book is Jerald and Sandra Tanner's "Mormonism: Shadow or Reality?" first written in 1964 and updated several times since then.

Simpson said Tuesday that he purchased the book three months ago and donated it to the Rexburg library.

After last week's library board meeting, the board reaffirmed the decision by librarian Cheryl Rescer not to put the book on the shelves.

Simpson said the board's latest letter listed several reasons for not stocking the book. One is a policy that the library won't stock books or literature attacking a particular race, religion, political or social point of view.

"There is an apparent lack of interest in anti-Mormon material in our community as evidenced by the circulation rate of the previous books you donated to the library in 1986," the letter said.

No one checked out three of the books and they were removed from circulation, the board said. One circulated twice in three years and remains on the shelf.

Simpson said the board's policy violates American freedoms. "This is a case of blatant, unwarranted censorship that must be corrected," he said.

He's assembling information on the case for a Christian legal firm, the Rutherford Institute. If he doesn't get anywhere with them, he said he may ask the American Civil Liberties Union to step in. The process could take months, he said.

"He calls it censorship, book banning," Rescer said. "We call it book selection." She said the library has received about 3,000 donated books this year. They are reviewed under guidelines including current usefulness or lasting value, authority and competency of presentation and other factors.

The district policy also says, "No books or other materials will be accepted that have as their primary purpose the defamations of a political, social, racial or religious view."

"I was hired as a professional and I make judgments based on my professional training," Rescer said. "I'm trained to know my community. The main reason for the interest was the content of the book and the lack of interest in the heavily Mormon community in that content."

Simpson said "Mormonism: Shadow or Reality?" was listed by a Mormon magazine, "Sunstone," as one of the 10 most important books written on the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Library officials said patrons can get anti-Mormon material from Ricks College or other libraries linked to Rexburg in an inter-library loan system.

Archivist Blaine Bales said the David O. McKay Library at Ricks has up to 300 anti-Mormon titles.

"As an academic institution, we have to deal with the pros and cons of issues," he said.

Commissioners seek tax help for Idaho counties

BOISE (AP) — Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn and Idaho County Commissioner George Enckling were traveling to Washington, D.C., this week to lobby for increased federal payments-in-lieu-of-taxes to Idaho counties.

The so-called PILT program, created by Congress in 1977, is how the government compensates counties for federal land holdings not subject to local property taxes.

Glenn said legislation cosponsored by all four members of Idaho's congressional delegation would, for the first time, adjust the original PILT payment amounts for inflation.

The bill also provides for annual inflation adjustments in the future.

Federal payments to Idaho counties would roughly double under the proposed legislation, he said, allowing county commissioners the option of passing on the additional revenue to property owners through tax relief.

Elmore County, home to large federal land holdings such as Mountain Home Air Force Base, Saylor Creek Bombing Range and Bureau of Land Management grazing lands, would be the biggest beneficiary.

Glenn said it stands to see annual PILT payments increase from $591,697 to more than $1.2 million.

The Idaho Association of Counties is paying for the lobbying trip coordinated by the National Association of Counties. It was scheduled to include meetings Wednesday with Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., an original sponsor of the bill.

Blazers beat Lakers; stay alive

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Buck Williams knew his season wouldn't be over Tuesday night.

"I had my bags packed already," he said. "I knew we were going back to the Forum."

Williams said he was as ready to play as he'd ever been after his team's embarrassing blowouts over the weekend.

"I was just so disappointed in myself and disappointed in our team," he said. "We've a much better team than we've exhibited. We had to get back to playing Trail Blazer basketball."

Williams responded by pulling down 16 rebounds to lead a dominating Portland performance on the boards, and the Trail Blazers beat the Los Angeles Lakers 95-84 to stay alive in the Western Conference finals.

"Buck was unbelievable," Portland coach Rick Adelman said. "He was everywhere."

"Buck is an inspiration to this team," Jerome Kersey said. "You know he's always going to be around the ball. I just hope he saved some energy for Thursday in Los Angeles."

The Blazers had a 52-33 rebound advantage, 26-9 on the offensive boards, and Los Angeles committed 17 turnovers as Portland cut the Lakers' lead in the best-of-7 series to 3-2.

Los Angeles still can wrap up its eighth Western Conference title in 10 years and advance to an NBA final showdown against Chicago with a victory Thursday night at the Forum.

But they may have to do it without James Worthy, who sprained his left ankle in the first quarter. He tried to return to the game but finally sat down for good with 9:34 to play.

Worthy said his ankle is tender, but won't keep him out of Game 6. However, team doctor Stephen Lombardi said the severity of the injury won't be clear until Wednesday.

Kersey led five Blazers in double figures with 20 points and nine rebounds. Clyde Drexler added 19 points and Terry Porter 17, including 12 in the second half. Williams and reserve Cliff Robinson scored 13 apiece.

Magic Johnson scored 29 points and hit four 3-pointers, but he was only 3-for-14 from the field after making his first five shots. Wade Davis added 14 points.

Worthy, defaced by Williams most of the time he was on the court, finished with 12 points, as did Sam Perkins.

"It's not one person. Everybody got a bad grade," Johnson said of his team's performance. "We can't be looking at one another wondering whose man it was."

Portland, the defending conference champion and owner of the NBA's best regular-season record at 63-19, is attempting to become the fifth team in league history to come back from a 3-1 deficit.

Adelman went with a switching defense for the first time in the series.

"We just wanted to give them a different look," he said. "They had been so comfortable against us."

With the Blazers using different matchups and with Worthy hobbling, the Lakers struggled on offense.

The Blazers made it more difficult by setting a club playoff record for offensive rebounds.

Portland's Jerome Kersey attempts to block Lakers' James Worthy's shot in first-half action Tuesday in Portland.

"We have to do a better job on the boards and figure out more ways to manufacture more points," Lakers coach Mike Dunleavy said.

The Blazers, who trailed by as many as

It's not one person. Everybody got a bad grade.

— Magic Johnson

eight points in the first half, took control for good by outscoring the Lakers 28-18 in an intense third quarter that featured five ties and three lead changes.

Portland finished the quarter with a 11-4 run for a 75-68 lead. Five Blazers scored during the decisive spurt.

The Lakers got no closer than five in the final quarter as the Blazers finally began getting some of the easy shots that had been denied them through most of the series.

The Lakers took a seven-point lead in the first quarter as the Blazers started off with the same icy shooting that plagued them that weekend at Los Angeles.

The Lakers' biggest lead of the half was 45:27 after Worthy's 16-footer with 4:16 left in the second quarter.

The Blazers scored the next eight points, pulling even on Kersey's layup with 1:58 remaining. Los Angeles outscored Portland 5-2 the rest of the half.

Kevin Duckworth, who continued his miserable series with a 3-for-10 shooting half, missed two free throws with 2.6 seconds to go that would have cut the halftime margin to one.

The Blazers missed five of six free throws in the last five minutes of the half as the Lakers took a 50-47 lead at intermission.

There were 17 turnovers in the intense first 24 minutes, 10 by the Lakers.

Mario Andretti, here with son Michael before Sunday's race, said his stop on the track forcing a yellow flag was not planned.

Andretti says he didn't stall trying to help son

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Mario Andretti denies intentionally stalling his car to force a yellow caution flag and give his son Michael a final chance to catch Indianapolis 500 winner Rick Mears.

"All I did was warn Michael. I didn't create anything," Mario Andretti said Tuesday after reports quoted him as telling his pit crew he could create a yellow flag if his son needed one. "I didn't do anything that was in my control. All I did was warn the team that it was going to happen."

The controversy developed late in Sunday's Indy 500 when Mears took the lead from the younger Andretti on the 188th lap. He began to pull away before Mario stopped on the track near the entrance to the pits, forcing a yellow caution.

Under the yellow, Mears kept the lead, but

Michael was able to close the gap. When the track was cleared and the green flag displayed three laps later, Mears stayed in front and beat the younger Andretti by 3.1 seconds.

Several spectators and news photographers were monitoring scanner radios claimed to have heard Mario ask his crew whether they needed a yellow, supposedly to give his teammate a better chance to catch the leader.

The Cleveland Plain-Dealer reported that a staff member and several members of the press monitoring a scanner heard Andretti say to his crew: "Does Michael need a yellow? I can create one."

Photographers working for The Associated Press reported that Andretti asked his crew several times a lap before he stopped if they needed a yellow and was told to hold his position. On the next lap, they said, he asked again and was told yes.

Animosity between player, fan on rise in majors

Knight-Ridder News Service

SAN JOSE, Calif. — When Cleveland Indians outfielder Albert Belle fired a baseball at a heckler earlier this month, hitting him in the chest, it was a chilling indication of the deteriorating relationship between baseball players and their fans.

But even more chilling was the response from some players. When asked about the incident, Cincinnati Reds outfielder Eric Davis coldly replied: "Albert should have hit the guy in the head."

Major league baseball players have seen the enemy, and they think he's the guy sitting a few rows away, probably tanked up on courage in a can and taunting them about their drug addictions, their alcohol problems, their lousy marriages and the called third strike they took with runners on first and second back in the fourth inning.

And increasingly, the verbal assaults appear to be more than players are either willing or able to tolerate.

California Angels outfielder Luis Polonia stepped on fan last season. Cincinnati outfielder Ricky Henderson initiated a showdown with a 15-year-old heckler in the parking lot of Phoenix Municipal Stadium this spring. Belle, who spent 10 weeks in an alcohol rehabilitation center last summer, threw the ball at a fan who tauntingly invited him to a keg party.

Two days later, A's right fielder Jose Canseco confronted a heckler at Yankee Stadium.

"After a while, you can only take so much, no matter how much money you make, no matter what is going on, you can only take so much of people ribbing you every day," said A's outfielder Willie Wilson, who found taunts about a drug-related prison term almost unbearable while playing for Kansas City. "You have to break. It's just like someone being in a car. You want Albert Belle to die."

"After a while, you just can't take it no more. But in order to keep your family going and your money going, you have to."

Recent incidents have prompted questions about where baseball should draw the line to preserve the dignity and basic humanity of the game.

'Greene follows no-no with 3-hitter, downs Montreal

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Tommy Greene didn't pitch another no-hitter Tuesday night against Montreal. He did get another shutout, though, as Philadelphia beat the Expos 12-0. Any second Greener has pitched, including Johnny Vander Meer's record of consecutive no-hitters vanished when Delino DeShields led off the game with a single. Greene (4-0) tossed his no-hitter against the Expos last Thursday, winning 2-0, in only his 15th major-league start. He only got a chance to mope on the mound after a 2-1 lead was broken into the rotation because of an injury to Danny Cox. "That never entered my mind,"

Greene of Vander Meer's record. "My only thought is to go out there and win," he said. In three starts this season, including six scoreless innings May 1 against San Francisco, Greene has given up five hits and no runs. Greene struck out nine and, surprisingly, walked none, in his no-hitter. He fanned 10 but walked seven. Beating Cleveland to end a five-game losing streak. Clemens lost four games and nine innings since taking over for Frank Robinson, fired last Thursday. At game time, Oates weighed in with 1977 when he was a catcher with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Randy Milligan and Tim Lulleit haven't played for the Orioles, who came into the game having lost 10 of 12.

Red Sox 6, Yankees 2

NEW YORK (AP)—Boston's Roger Clemens broke out of a personal slump by giving up one run and three hits in eight innings for his first victory since May 8. Clemens struck out eight and walked one, allowing only Steve Sax's RBI double in the third inning and the Red Sox snapped a three-game losing streak. In his previous three starts, Clemens had given up 23 hits and 15 earned runs in 20 innings. He started the season 6-0, allowing four runs and 26 hits in 49 innings.

Mets 9, Cubs 8

CHICAGO (AP)—Dave Magadan's run-scoring double in the eighth inning snapped a tie and New York started another sloppy display to beat Chicago. "Pitch-hitter Tim Lulleit walked with one out in the eighth game-rewinning Atlanta Assembly Hall. The Mets won 9-8 after six innings, but the Cubs tied it in the seventh on Andre Dawson's two-run homer and Chico Walker's RBI-single. Pirates 9, Cardinals 8

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Barry Bonds won in three runs as Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis for its fifth straight victory. Bonds was 2-for-3 with a run-scoring single in the first inning and a two-run triple in the fifth. "I feel like I'm in a triple or Orlando Merced had an RBI double, walked three times and scored twice, but he broke open and scored with five runs in the bottom of the ninth to end consecutive games at home for the first time this season.

Twins 3, Rangers 0

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—The Texas Rangers' team record of 18 consecutive winning streak came to an end Tuesday night when Minnesota's streaking Scott Erickson silenced baseball's hottest pitcher club in a 3-0 victory by the Twins. The Rangers, who had no less than five runs and nine hits in any game during the streak, were trying to become the first team since the 1960 New York Yankees to win 15 in a row. Minnesota was for only the second time in nine games.

Orioles 5, Indians 2

BALTIMORE (AP)—Baltimore finally got manager Johnny Oates his first victory, beating Cleveland to end a five-game losing streak. Oates weighed in with 1977 when he was a catcher with the Los Angeles Dodgers. Randy Milligan and Tim Lulleit haven't played for the Orioles, who came into the game having lost 10 of 12.

Ryan ready to return to mound for Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Nolan Ryan is scheduled to start tonight against the Minnesota Twins after spending 15 days on the disabled list because of problems with his right shoulder. Ryan took himself out in the fifth inning of the Texas Rangers' May 13 game against Detroit, despite a 2-0 lead and giving up only one hit. He then traveled to California to visit long-time friend and California Angels orthopedic specialist Dr. Lewis Yocum.

He was given a magnetic resonance imaging test, which revealed a tear in the trapezius muscle and tendinitis in the right shoulder. The problem was not considered serious, but rest was recommended before Ryan threw again. Ryan, 3-3 with a 2.94 ERA in seven starts, started against the Twins' Jack Morris. Before going on the disabled list, Ryan led the American League with 36 strikeouts. He hit his seventh no-hitter on May 1 against the Toronto Blue Jays. The Rangers beat the Twins 11-4 Monday night to extend their winning streak to a team-record 17 games.

Ruling allows NFL players to sue for free agency

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A federal judge cleared the way Tuesday for NFL players to sue for free agency by throwing out the league's labor antitrust exemption.

The judge said it would appeal immediately, something the judge urged in his opinion.

The ruling, which recognizes the players' union as an antitrust plaintiff, is the latest in a series of decisions by U.S. District Judge David Doty stemming from the union's 24-day strike in 1987. It came in response to a motion by a group of players who sued the league more than a year ago seeking unlimited free agency.

Under the current free agency rules, which took effect in 1978, a team signing a free agent must compensate his former team with draft choices. Only two players have changed teams since that took effect. Norm Thompson went from the St. Louis Cardinals to the then-Baltimore Colts in 1978 and Wilber Marshall went in 1988 from Chicago to Washington.

"This proves the players made the right decision when they voted to end the union after the (appeals) decision," Gene Upshaw, the NFLPA's executive director, said. "As we've always said, the NFL can run, but it can't hide."

Doty's ruling held that because the union is no longer handling grievances for the players and regulates agents, it has abandoned its collective bargaining relationship with the league.

It was that relationship which the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals had cited in overruling Doty and continuing the NFL's antitrust exemption.

Doty also held that the players "paid a price" for their lack of representation when the NFL went to a 17-week schedule last season, giving each team a week off in the 16-game season.

"Because no ongoing collective bargaining relationship exists, the court determines that the nonstatutory labor exemption has ended," Doty wrote.

The suit, filed by Freeman McNeil of the New York Jets and seven other players, stems directly from the 8th Circuit ruling, which effectively ended the union's antitrust suit against the league. That suit was filed following the strike, which ended without a collective bargaining agreement.

As a result of that appeals decision, the union announced it would decertify. The league, however, insisted that the decertification wasn't real and continued to seek continued negotiations.

Doty wrote, however, "The NFLPA no longer engages in collective bargaining and has also refused every overture by the NFL defendants to bargain since November of 1989. The NFLPA further has abandoned its role in all grievance arbitrations and has ceased to regulate agents, leaving them free to represent individual players without NFLPA approval."

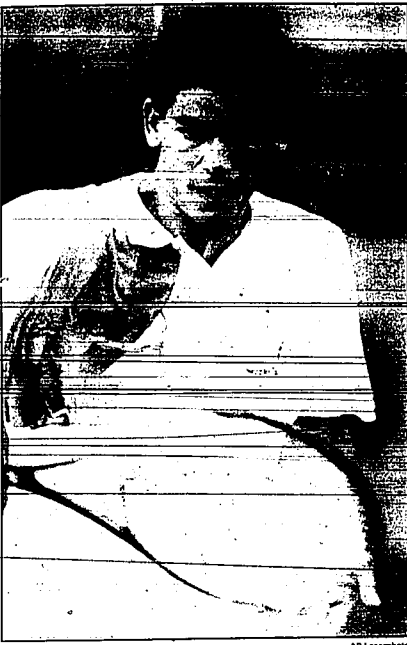

"The plaintiffs have also paid a price for the loss of their collective bargaining representation because the NFL defendants have unilaterally changed insurance benefits and lengthened the season without notifying the NFLPA."

Sampras rallies for win

PARIS (AP) — Clay-court novice Pete Sampras pulled a role reversal as he rallied from two sets down to defeat Thomas Muster at the French Open Tuesday, returning to the baseline to win a heavy-weight slugfest.

The U.S. Open champion abandoned his serve-and-volley tactics after losing the first two sets. He then beat Muster, a 1990 French Open semifinalist who excels at pounding opponents with groundstrokes, at his own game.

It was the first time Sampras, who has little experience on clay, had recovered from a two-set deficit to win a match. The 4-6, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-4 victory took nearly 3½ hours. "Clay is obviously the toughest surface for me to play on," he said. "I would much rather be playing on grass, but we're not at Wimbledon."

Pete Sampras changed his tactics to defeat Thomas Muster.

While Sampras changed his style to adapt to the slow clay of Roland Garros, top seeds Stefan Edberg and Boris Becker won by sticking with what they do best — serving hard and rushing the net.

Edberg and Becker, victims of historic opening-round upsets last year at the French Open, won easily this time by turning the clay courts into their grass-court styles.

Defending women's champion Monica Seles defeated Radka Gabriela Sabatini was even more economical, eliminating Marianne Werdel 6-1, 6-1. Sabatini and Steffi Graf each could dethrone Seles as the No. 1 women's player by winning the French Open.

Eighth-seeded Zina Garrison became a first-round loser for the second straight year. Garrison, a Wimbledon finalist last year, was eliminated 6-4, 6-0 by Japanese teenager Naoko Sawamatsu.

"I was so nervous," Sawamatsu said. "But someone told me I had a chance."

Karel Novacek, the men's No. 14 seed, withdrew midway through his match with Magnus Gustafsson because of a twisted ankle, but all other seeds advanced without difficulty.

The winning men's seeds were No. 9 Jim Courier, who defeated American compatriot Derrick Decker 6-3, 6-3, 6-0, and No. 8

Goran Ivanisevic, who was fined $1,000 for spitting in the direction of opponent Frederic Fontang, of France.

"I didn't mean to spit in his direction," Ivanisevic said. "I can spit wherever I want. I didn't spit at him, but it was only 10 meters away."

Among the women's winners was 1989 champion Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, the fifth seed, who defeated Lori McNeil 6-2, 6-2.

Twenty-six of the 30 seeds who began play Monday have advanced to the second round that begins Wednesday.

There were 16 women's seeds but only 14 seeded men this year because Ivan Lendl and Jonas Svensson dropped out Sunday with injuries.

Sampras, who fell behind 4-1 in the final set but then won the final five games, said he was upset with his serving despite unloading 17 aces.

Robinson looks at front office job with Orioles — and beyond

BALTIMORE (AP) — Frank Robinson, fired as the Baltimore Orioles' manager last week, said Tuesday that he'll probably accept a job as the team's assistant general manager with the goal of becoming a major league GM.

"When he was fired as manager last Thursday, Robinson said he doubted if he would be happy working in the front office. But after meeting with team president Larry Lucchino and general manager Roland Hemond on Tuesday afternoon, Robinson seemed receptive toward the job.

"There were some very good discussions. I liked a lot of the things they talked about," Robinson said. "They thought some of the ideas I had were good, and it was very encouraging."

Robinson said he would discuss the job opportunity with his family before making his decision, which he said would come no later than Wednesday.

Robinson, 55, became Baltimore's manager after the team lost its first six games in 1988. The Orioles went on to lose 107 games that year, but nearly won the American League East in 1989, when Robinson was voted American League manager of the year.

However, the Orioles struggled last year and Robinson was replaced by Johnny Oates after the Orioles lost 24 of their first 37 games; this season.

In his first formal news conference since his firing, Robinson said he never intended to manage the Orioles forever — just until the end of the 1992 season.

"When I took the job, my thoughts were not to manage in the long term," he said. "The idea was to try to get this organization healthy, to get this club on the right track and then step aside. I would have liked to have left a good, talented ballclub. But that didn't happen."

Hecklers

man rights of players. But also at issue are the fans' rights to free speech and a bottom-line philosophy of American business: The customer is always right. And if the real question is whether your $15 ticket buys you the right to taunt Gansco to your heart's content, the answer is probably yes.

"I don't believe these episodes are really indicative of a serious problem. I hope not. And I think the message is, the fans are baseball. The fans are what makes baseball go," commissioner Fay Vincent said before a recent A's-Orioles game in Baltimore. "I think the players understand that. Fans can sometimes do things that are very annoying and very abusive and sometimes they go too far."

"And I think the players have to get umpires or security people involved. You cannot take the law into your own hands. I mean, the baseball park is not separate from the law of the land. Throwing a baseball at a fan is subject to criminal behavior, criminal prosecution, and it's not smart."

Hecklers are probably within their legal rights, says Alan Schlosser, staff counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union of Northern California. "My sense is people have a right to be both abusive and obnoxious to a certain degree," Schlosser said.

A's pitcher Dave Stewart had to be prevented from going into the stands after a heckler earlier in his career. Now he understands that: "Realisticly, fans can't be prevented from heckling."

"They're allowed to do anything that they want to. ... When a fan pays his money to come into the ballpark, he has the right to do whatever he wants to," he said.

Players say the abuse has worsened because their personal lives are laid bare for public consumption now and because there's resentment over the rapidly escalating salaries in the

There are emerging stereotypes at work here, too. While some fans view players as overpaid, unappreciative jerks who ignore the paying public's pleas for autographs and autographs, some players see their fans as jealous working stiffs unhappy because of their low-paying jobs.

"I've never met a witty heckler yet," Stewart said. "They're your basic idiots."

Bob Northrop, a middle-aged Oakland Coliseum regular considered by players to be one of the worst hecklers in the American League, doesn't fit neatly into their portrait of a heckler. "I'm not the typical guy, like they said in the paper, who turns hamburgers at Wendy's. I wear a Rolex," said Northrop, flicking back his sleeve to reveal the watch. "I drive a Mercedes."

Northrop heckles because he can.

"This is democracy. Where else can you come and get some millionaire agitated without being obscene or personal?" Northrop said.

ISU silent on why it suspended Kreps

POCATELLO (AP) — All-Big Sky Conference forward Alex Kreps has been suspended indefinitely from Idaho State University's basketball team for violating an unspecified team and university rule.

A statement released over the weekend by the Pocatello school's athletic department said the 6-foot-7, 210-pound senior from Springfield, Va., was suspended pending results of an administrative investigation.

Coch Herb Williams would not discuss the alleged infraction or expand on the athletic department statement Tuesday. He said Kreps had left the Idaho State campus for the summer.

Kreps transferred to Idaho State last year from Golden West College in Huntington, Calif. He was the Bengals' leading scorer and rebounder, averaging 16.4 points and 6.6 rebounds per game.

Kreps was the first Bengal since 1987 to be named first-team All-Big Sky.

Andretti

"He then slowed on the third turn and stopped at the head of the pits, where a tractor-towed him out of the way so racing could resume, however, when the car wouldn't budge, and Charles Robinson, AP photo editor in Indiana who was monitoring a U.S. Auto Club channel on the scanner, said he instructed to tell Andretti "to take his foot off the brake."

Mario Andretti gave his version of the incident.

"Here's exactly what happened," Nazzari, Pa., said. "I saw the engine just coming out of turn one. When that happens, of course, you knock it out of gear. On the backstretch, I wanted to double check whether it was the engine because there was no smoke, so I picked up another gear, and I saw the engine. So that slowed me down quite a bit."

"When I'm between three and four, coasting, I called the team and said, 'Wam-Michael. Whether he needs it or not, I'm going to be creating a yellow because I can't make the pit.'"

"So Michael knew I was coasting and it looked like I was going to be at the choke spot of the pit. I wasn't going to create a yellow because I was in a fast, so that's where I stopped."

Andretti said the people who heard the conversation on scanners "can make anything they want, but that's what I said."

The former Indy winner was penalized a lap earlier in the race for driving all four wheels below the yellow line that separates the track from the apron, and he finished seventh, 13 laps behind Meats and his son.

Andretti recalled a 1983 incident in which Al Unser Jr., then a rookie, appeared to be blocking Tom Sneva's attempt to pass Unser's father. Sneva eventually passed both Unsers and went on to victory.

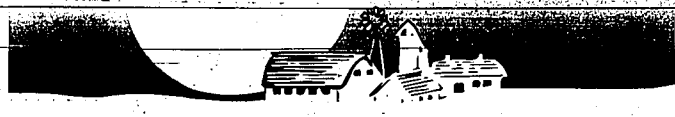

"We don't do these things," Mario said. "Michael and I play this straight. I saw the controversy. Little Al created it and we agreed we don't do these things."

Extension offices plan tests for canner lids

JEROME—With home canning season beginning, clinics have been scheduled to test the accuracy and adequacy of pressure canner lids.

Clinics are set for 9 a.m. to noon in the Jerome County Courthouse meeting room and from 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Twin Falls County Extension Office, 246 Third Ave. E., June 7.

Lid testing is necessary to assure canning equipment is working properly. A malfunctioning pressure canner could cause illness when food that has been under-processed is eaten, Barbara Morales, extension home economist, said.

Only the canner lid should be brought to the clinics for testing. A fee of $2.50 per lid is charged.

The testing is sponsored by the Jerome and Twin Falls University of Idaho Extension offices.

Americans increasingly prefer quick breakfasts, study finds

Americans love to eat breakfast, but there's no time for a leisurely meal of eggs, bacon and toast anymore, a study by the marketing firm the NPD Group shows.

In the study, members of 2,000 American households were asked to keep a diary on everything they prepared and ate: "Americans—Breakfast—Eating—Patterns from 1982-1990" shows that the most popular breakfast items are ones that can be prepared quickly and eaten on the run.

People are much more likely to eat breakfast than to skip it, and 80 percent of the time they eat at home. The most popular breakfast food is cold cereal, followed by toast, bagels and sandwiches are the fastest growing breakfast food items, followed by instant oatmeal, bananas, frozen waffles and muffins. The fastest declining foods are grapefruit, fried eggs, bacon and scrambled eggs.

The most-used appliances to make breakfast are the stove top (41 percent) and the toaster oven (25 percent). Their use has declined from 62 percent and 32 percent, respectively, since 1982. Microwave ovens are the only appliances whose use is still growing; they are used in almost 15 percent of all breakfast preparations.

In 1982, a doughnut and coffee were the top breakfast items ordered in restaurants; in 1990, the top items ordered were coffee and a breakfast sandwich.

1991 survey shows dieting levels off around country

After a sharp decline in the late '80s, the number of Americans who are dieting has leveled off, according to a 1991 survey by the Calorie Control Council, an association of manufacturers of low-calorie diet foods and beverages.

Previous surveys showed that the number of dieters dropped between 1986 and 1989 from 65 million to 48 million. Dieters were most likely to be female and between 35 and 49 years old. And in 1991, it's holding steady at 48 million.

However, another trend researchers uncovered is a declining number of dieters among a still-growing number of low-calorie foods and beverages. Five years ago, six out of 10 low-calorie product consumers said they were dieting; today, six out of 10 say there are not dieting. The Calorie Control Council attributed this trend to changed perception of dieting—instead of going on a low-calorie diet for a short period in and on-again/off-again fashion, people are starting to look at ways to permanently keep the calories they consume in check.

National Dairy Board offers tips to keep milk fresh longer

Dairy fresh—When the temperature climbs, so do the opportunities for food spoilage. The National Dairy Board has these tips for keeping your milk fresh longer.

• Return milk to the refrigerator immediately after each use. Even a few minutes exposure to warm air reduces its shelf life.

• Stop at the dairy case just before leaving the grocery store. Buy the amount of milk you'll need for 3 or 4 days, and make sure they're "sell by" date on the container hasn't expired.

• The temperature of the refrigerator should be between 40 and 45 degrees. If it's higher, the milk will keep for a shorter time.

Compiled from staff and wire reports

Legend has it that the first bridal shower took place in Holland after a father forbade his daughter's marriage to a poor miller because he didn't approve of her choice of husband. The daughter, determined to marry her true love, was "showered" with gifts by her friends so that she would be able to set up housekeeping despite the lack of a traditional dowry.

Today, bridal showers don't take place under such dire circumstances. Instead, a shower is a happy prenuptial festivity that often provides a welcome respite for the bride in the hectic weeks before the wedding.

If you are responsible for planning a bridal shower, try to make it a relaxing and leisurely occasion while retaining a special and elegant atmosphere. One way to do this is by designing the shower as an afternoon tea party. Here are some ideas to get you started.

Create the proper ambience; set out your finest china and prettiest table linens. An arrangement of fresh flowers provides the perfect centerpiece.

A typical menu includes something savory, something sweet and all delicious.

CREAMY RICE BAVARIAN WITH RASPBERRIES

- 1/2 cup uncooked long grain rice
- 2 cups cold water
- 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
- 1/2 cup cholesterol-free egg substitute
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 cups skim milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 2 cups (12 oz.) frozen whipped topping, thawed

In medium saucepan, combine rice with 1 1/2 cups water; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer covered 30 minutes or until very tender; cool.

In small saucepan, sprinkle unflavored gelatin over remaining 1/2 cup water; let stand 1 minute. Stir over low heat until gelatin is completely dissolved, about 3 minutes.

In blender or food processor, process egg substitute and sugar until sugar is dissolved, about 2 minutes. While processing, through feed cap, gradually add milk and gelatin mixture and process until blended. Pour into large bowl; stir in vanilla and nutmeg. Chill until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon, about 5 minutes. Fold in cooled rice, then whipped topping. Pour into 6 1/2-cup mold or bowl; chill until firm, about 3 hours.

Unmold and serve with Raspberry Sauce.

Summer picnic offers chance for all-American meals

Los Angeles Times

Summer is just around the corner, and that means the start of the picnic season. And what could be better than this all-American meal of fried chicken, coleslaw, potato salad and chocolate cake?

OLD-FASHIONED FRIED CHICKEN

- 1 (2 1/2- to 3-pound) chicken, cut up
- 1 cup flour
- Salt, pepper
- 2 cups shortening
- Rinse chicken parts and pat dry with paper towels. Combine flour, 2 teaspoons salt and 1 teaspoon pepper in paper bag. Add chicken parts, few at a time, and shake to coat thoroughly. Place chicken on paper towels and allow to dry 20 minutes.
- Melt shortening in heavy skillet over high heat. Heat until drop of water splatters when dropped in hot fat. Coat chicken parts again with seasoned flour. Place chicken in hot shortening, skin side down, and fry about 20 minutes* or until golden-brown, turning once.

Reduce heat to low. Cover skillet and cook 15 to 20 minutes longer, or until chicken is tender. Season to taste with additional salt and pepper. Turn heat to high and cook, uncovered, about 10 minutes longer or until chicken has become crisp again. Drain on paper towels. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

COLESLAW

- 8 cups finely shredded cabbage (combination red and green, if desired)
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons vinegar

- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1/2 cup minced red onion
- 1/4 teaspoon celery salt, optional
- Salt, pepper

Place cabbage in bowl. Combine mayonnaise, vinegar, sugar, horseradish, mustard, garlic, red onion and celery salt. Mix well. Add to cabbage mixture and toss well to blend. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Chill covered. Makes about 6 cups.

POTATO SALAD

- 9 cups cubed-cooked, unpeeled red-potatoes
- 2 cups chopped celery
- 1 cup mayonnaise

- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 1/2 cup finely minced onion
- 1/2 cup sweet pickle relish
- 6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- Salt, pepper
- Paprika

2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Combine potatoes, celery, mayonnaise, mustard, onion and pickle relish in large bowl. Toss to mix well. Gently toss in chopped hard-cooked eggs. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Cover and chill until serving time. Adjust seasonings to taste. Garnish with paprika and sliced hard-cooked eggs.

Variation: For crunch and color, stir in any of the following: 1 bunch red radish, thinly sliced; 1 cup broccoli florets or 1 cup lightly...

HAILEY—Until March of this year, Rochelle Heldenbrand hadn't taken time to write down any of her original recipes, and she hadn't entered any cooking contests. Then she decided to submit a recipe to the Idaho Beef Cook-off and took first prize for it.

Heldenbrand can thank the bug which made her sick enough to stay home from work for giving her the opportunity. She says if she had been working she wouldn't have had the time for it.

"That day she noticed the contest announcement in the local newspaper. "So I just jotted down the recipe and sent it in," she says. "I put it in an envelope, and stuck it in my purse, and mailed it off."

For the past seven years she's been making and improving upon the prize-winning dish, but it usually turned out a little different each time she made it. So she says she's glad to finally have it down on paper.

"Now it comes out exactly the same," she says. "I like the way it is now."

Heldenbrand says it is easy to make. The ingredients are a little on the exotic side, she says, but most can be found in any grocery store.

Here is the recipe for her winning dish:

SESAME SEED BEEF

- Serves 4-6
- 3 pounds sirloin steak, cut 1 inch thick
- MARINADE:
- 1 tablespoon sugar

The Last Generation lent time to benefit crisis center
On Friday, May 3, The Last Generation performed in concert at the Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls.
On behalf of the Pregnancy Hotline and Crisis Center, we thank The Last Generation for so generously lending their time and talent to benefit the center. They did a tremendous job and a good time was had by all. We would also like to thank the Assembly of God Church for allowing us the use of their building.
Because of the generosity of The Last Generation, Assembly of God and all who kindly gave from their pocketbooks, we will be able to continue to help women who find themselves in a crisis pregnancy.

Ground covers offer beauty and are less work than grass

Nobody appreciates the beauty of a well-kept lawn more than I do. However, there are some areas where a ground cover can be just as pretty without weekly mowing. Ground covers are perennial herbaceous plants which naturally grow up to the ground, they usually do not need more than occasional trimming to keep them looking neat. Some of them will remain green as much of the year as grass. Many are more shade-tolerant than grass and will grow under trees and other difficult areas. Many also have showy flowers for a few weeks.

Allen Wilson Gardening

They can add beauty to a landscape design by creating areas of contrasting color and texture. The most versatile ground cover for the Intermountain area is Creeping Potentilla. It is native to our mountains. It will grow in full sun to dense shade. It grows about two inches high and has yellow flowers intermittently during the summer. Some improved strains have larger or more abundant flowers. It is easy to propagate from cuttings. From one tray of plants you can take enough cuttings to start four or five more. Simply fill flats with potting soil, stick stem cuttings in the soil and place in a shaded area. They will form roots in three or four weeks with daily watering. Several Sedums make easy to grow ground covers. The most compact is Acre Sedum (often sold as Utah Sedum in our area). It only grows an inch high. It has bright yellow flowers in June. A close mowing with a rotary mower will remove the seed heads after blooming. Creeping Jenny is a bright green ground cover growing about four inches high which also has yellow flowers in June. Creeping Phlox has pink, lavender or white flowers in May and grows about three inches high. Rock Cress grows four to six inches high and has flowers in pink, lavender and white shades in late April and May. Perennial Candytuft is covered with white flowers in May-June growing about 8 to 10 inches high. Sweet Woodruff grows about four inches and has tiny fragrant white flowers in June. Snow-in-Summer or Cerastium is a tough, drought tolerant plant with silvery foliage and white flowers in June. It grows about 6 to 8 inches high. Several types of low growing Thyme make excellent ground covers. They hug the ground and have tiny pink to lavender flowers in mid-summer. They are also somewhat drought tolerant. Fleece Flower is a taller plant growing about a foot high with relatively inconspicuous pink flowers in mid-summer. These are some of the hardest and easy-to-grow ground covers for our area. Others are also available at some of the larger nurseries.

House sidings give home owners difficult choices

Q. My wife and I are nearing retirement and are concerned about the condition of the cedar siding on our house and the maintenance it needs. We'd like to install a new and possibly different siding that is easy to maintain. We'd like your opinion. My wife says she doesn't like vinyl siding because it "looks cheap." — J. Fruit

Do it yourself Gene Austin

A. Most modern sidings fit into five categories. The categories are: natural wood, including varieties such as cedar and redwood that are weather-resistant but might need periodic sealing and/or staining; wood products, including plywood and hardboard, which are sometimes prefinished; metal such as aluminum and steel, which is also usually prefinished; masonry such as stucco and bricks and veneers of brick and stone, which need no finish, and vinyl, which is precoated and needs no finish.

Each of these has some good qualities, even if only low cost and fast installation, and each has some disadvantages. A complete discussion of advantages and disadvantages would require much more space than is available here, but comparisons of siding can be found in some books on home construction and remodeling. These books are available at some libraries and bookstores. An example is "Visual Handbook of Building and Remodeling," by Charlie Wing ($39.95 hard cover, $19.95 paperback; Rodale Press), which includes an excellent chapter on several types of siding, including tips on their relative merits.

Personal preference and cost are among the important factors to be weighed, of course. In addition, if low maintenance is a goal, it is extremely important to get high-quality products and an expert installation. For example, some sidings such as stucco and vinyl are basically maintenance free except for cleaning, but can be troublesome if improperly installed.

In defense of vinyl, an expert installation of a good-quality product does not look cheap. In fact, from a short distance, it is difficult to distinguish vinyl from expertly painted wood. Vinyl is also relatively inexpensive, easy to install over existing siding, and easy to maintain because the color goes all the way through the vinyl. Vinyl can crack if there is a sudden impact in cold weather, the colors can fade somewhat in time, and it is not fire resistant (neither is wood). However, in my opinion, vinyl is a good choice for a retirement home or any other home where low cost and low maintenance are important.

Q. Our bathtub has chrome-plated safety bars that get very slippery when wet. Is there a paint or something I could apply to make them easier to grip? — B. Vogel

A. Midew, a fungus, will recur unless it is completely killed. Also, there might be special conditions affecting the fabrics that foster mildew growth, such as too much shade and/or moisture. To help cure the mildew, vents might need to be added in the gables or some trees trimmed to reduce shade. Washing before repainting is fine, but it is important to use a wash that will actually kill the mildew and leave the surface ready for repainting. One often-recommended product is Mildew Check, made by PPG Industries Inc. of Pittsburgh, which is applied with a garden sprayer and leaves a mildew-resistant film. For more information on this product or its use, call 1-800-441-9695.

Business Falling interest rates may not be the tonic

NEW YORK — The Federal Reserve's policy of lowering interest rates to battle the recession has caused it to worsen instead, according to one economic consulting firm.

"The rare, if not unprecedented, situation arises from the fact that millions of Americans now expect so heavily on interest income that when it is lowered, they lose more in buying power than is gained from reduced debt payments."

In the past, conventional wisdom held that lower interest rates assured an almost automatic improvement in the economy, and many economists still hold to that view.

The conundrum observed today, says economist John Williams, is a direct result of the steady growth of interest income as a percent of total income, rising from 6 percent in the 1960s to 15 percent today.

Using a model developed by his firm, American Business Economists Inc., Williams estimates that December through March was $7.6 billion, and that the sum will rise to $13.4 billion in September.

Worse, he says, is the projected fall where it might have been if the Fed had not begun easing the money supply in June 1989.

The research by Williams, whose Ridgewood, N.Y., company advises blue-chip corporations, documents what an economic and research firm, Sandler & Co., says it has been hearing in telephone interviews with households.

Sandler repeatedly has said the recession was deeper than had been thought, and that the recovery would be slow because — Americans — were stressed by rising expenses, as from taxes, and lower usable income, as from interest.

Williams explained that when interest income accounted for the third percent of per capita income in the 1960s, any drop in consumer interest rates had a net beneficial impact on personal income and economic activity.

John Cunniff

Based on Williams' model of personal income, net Fed easing since June 1989 stimulated enough economic activity to add $18 billion a year to salaries and wages. Still, he said, that amount is offset by $3.4 billion of lost interest income (to September), leaving a $16 billion a year net loss.

Moreover, he said, when interest rates drop, some investors shift funds into areas where they hope to obtain a better return. "The stock market is the usual target, with dividend income being sought along with capital gains."

However, Williams noted that dividend income also has been declining. While such dividend declines probably do not diminish prospects for capital gains, they do create an immediate shortfall in current income, he said.

Summarizing, Williams said: "In the current financial environment, the study finds that for every dollar of income gained in wages and salaries as a result of lower rates, two dollars are lost in interest income."

He documents the conclusions with figures from the Bureau of Economic Analysis showing personal interest income dropping from an annualized rate of $688.2 billion in December 1990 to $680.6 billion at the end of March and an estimated $674.9 billion in the September report.

Making the findings especially significant, Williams says, is that consumer spending is two-thirds of gross national product and that economic expansion depends on higher disposable and discretionary income.

Existing home sales rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes picked up for the third straight month in April, a 3.4 percent jump to the highest level since August, a real estate trade group said Tuesday in a report providing new evidence the housing recession has ended.

The National Association of Realtors said the sales pace was being driven by low mortgage interest rates, which are expected to remain in the single-digit range for the rest of the year.

"The favorable financing is driving the market," said Realtors President

Hartley E. Rouda. "Sales to first-time and repeat buyers are picking up across the board."

The Realtors said sales totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.34 million, up from 3.22 million in March and the highest level since a dip of 3.41 million eight months ago.

But the advancing sales also are being accompanied by rising prices, the Realtors' survey found. The median price of an existing home was $100,200 in April, up 2.0 percent from March and 4.7 percent from a year earlier.

Treasury bill rates decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Tuesday's auction.

The Treasury Department sold $10 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 5.46 percent, down from 5.50 percent last week. Another $10 billion was sold in six-month bills at a discount rate of 5.65 percent, down from 5.66 percent last week.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 5.12 percent on Oct. 26, 1987. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 5.63 percent on May 13, 1991.

The new discount rates understate the actual return to investors — 2.63 percent for three-month bills, with a $10,000 bill selling for $9,862.00, and 5.91 percent for a six-month bill selling for $9,712.80.

In a separate report, the Federal Reserve said Tuesday that the average yield for one-year Treasury bills, the most popular index for making changes in adjustable-rate mortgages, rose to 6.15 percent last week, up from 6.13 percent the previous week.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED ISSUANCE OF A PERMIT TO CONSTRUCT AND OPERATE AN ORE PROCESSING FACILITY BY CYANIDATION FACILITY IN IDAHO

SUBJECT: Proposed issuance of a Permit to Construct and Operate an Ore Processing by Cyanidation Facility in Burley, Idaho. Public Notice No. CN-2000-3.

ATTEST: In compliance with IDAPA 16.01.1600.01A, notice is hereby given; under Docket No. 100N-9101, that the Director of the Department of Health and Welfare, through the Director of Environmental Quality, has tentatively determined to issue a permit to construct and operate an ore processing by cyanidation facility.

SUMMARY/PURPOSE: The Pogoda Gold Corporation, Box 678, Burley, Idaho 83316, has submitted an application for a permit to build a cyanide heap leach operation for the Black Pine Project in Sections 25, 26, 27, 34, 35, and 36 of Township 15 South, Range 29 East, approximately 85 road miles southeast of Burley in Cassia County, Idaho. The existing permitted project CN-00010 includes three areas identified for open piling and the development of an initial smaller cyanide heap leach pad, and associated process facilities and expansion to a larger heap leach site. The modified plan proposes to use the three areas for open piling, to develop a single valley fill composite heap leach pad, and a carbon adsorption/absorption/recovery processing plant. The known cyanide heap leaches have been estimated to have approximately 7.5 million tons of ore to approximately 18.5 million tons. The additional tonnage represents reclassification of material which was previously considered waste permitted for disposal in waste dumps that is of low grade, leachable ore.

The application for a permit will be processed at the DHW Division of Environmental Quality Twin Falls Field Office. AVAILABILITY OF MATERIALS FOR PUBLIC REVIEW: Within the time limits indicated below, any person may review the application and related documents in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the following locations:

Persons may request that their names be placed on a mailing list for public notice of future cyanide permit notices, or for only the list pertaining to this application. All such requests shall be sent to the Division of Environmental Quality Central Office as indicated above.

SUBMISSION OF WRITTEN COMMENTS, ASSISTANCE ON TECHNICAL QUESTIONS: Persons who wish to submit comments or for technical determinations contained in the proposed permit may do so in writing, within the thirty (30) days of date of this public notice. All timely comments will be considered in the formulation of final determinations regarding the permit. All comments shall include the name, address and telephone number of the interested party(ies), a concise statement of the exact basis of any comment, and the relevant facts upon which the comment is based.

For assistance on technical questions concerning the draft permit, contact Greg Matbach, Senior Water Quality Engineer, Twin Falls Field Office, Division of Environmental Quality, Department of Health and Welfare, (208) 736-2190, Twin Falls, Idaho.

All written comments and data concerning the draft permit must be directed to the undersigned and must be postmarked or delivered on or before June 28, 1991, at the address above.
