Panel targets Gem air base for extinction

By N.S. Niekirk
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Inclusion of Mountain Home Air Force Base on a list of bases being considered for closure caught state and Air Force officials off guard Friday.

The "Federal Base Closure and Realignment Commission," headed by Mountain Home among 36 bases that will be studied for possible closure. The commission, which acts independently of the Pentagon, added the 36 bases to the 43 installations Defense Secretary Dick Cheney recommended in April be closed, or scaled back.

Friday's announcement came as "somewhat of a surprise," Gov. Cecil Andrus said Friday. Andrus questioned the legality of the list of additional bases to be closed, suggesting that there was "a tad bit of politicking with the other 36 bases."

As recently as last week the Mountain Home base was heralded as the showpiece of the next generation of air force bases and was chosen in April by Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill McPeak as the site of the first "composite wing" — a new generation of air force base that would house several types of planes and personnel all in a single site.

Air Force officials were equally surprised by the announcement, said Lt. Col. Len Brady, an Air Force spokesman in the Pentagon press office.

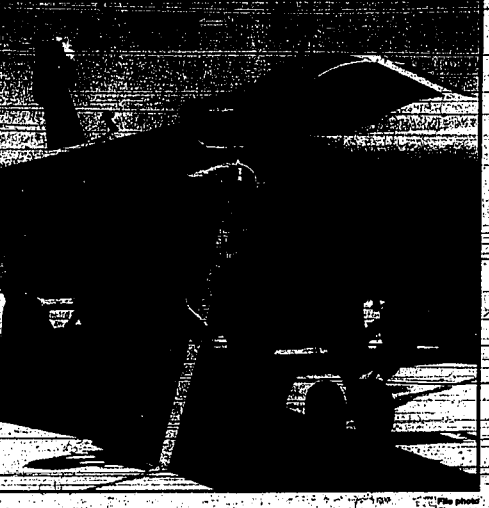

The Air Force has not decided if inclusion of Mountain Home on the list will change plans to complete an environmental impact statement on the proposed "composite wing" at the base, Brady said.

But the list is by no means final. "I think it's a little early to hang one's hat on it," said Andy Hines, Mountain Home's main street. "Andy Hines is a member of the commission."

The new list is a "menu of options" — not a list of proposed closures or realignments, said commission spokesman Cary Walker.

The commission will together with the new list after reviewing the 43 bases Defense Secretary Dick Cheney originally proposed for closure or cutback on April 12.

Elmore County Commission Chairman John Hiltner called the addition of Mountain Home to the list "a little bit of politicking, motivated because of complaints lodged by supporters of the base on the initial closure list. Many complained the Defense Department overlooked bases with less value to the national defense.

"Many of the bases are being studied as alternatives to those already cited in the Pentagon's report," Commission Chairman James Costas said. "I would be informed and independent judgments, we need to compare bases that are slated for closure or realignment with facilities that are not on the Pentagon's list."

The commission will pare down the combined list to 10 bases in Washington. At least one member of the seven-member commission would then visit the remaining candidate sites for closure before a recommendation is submitted to President Bush by July 1.

"Once he gets the commission's recommendations, Bush can either approve or reject the package in its entirety. If he approves, it will be submitted to Congress for the same consideration." Although either cost veto, it, neither the president nor Congress can modify the commission's final proposal.

Hearings also are planned later in June for base supporters to make their cases. Hiltner promised Idaho will be represented to make the case for retaining Mountain Home.

Medicare plan would revamp fees

Knights-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — In a proposal with dramatic implications for the way medicine is practiced, the federal government proposed Friday paying family doctors more and cutting Medicare fees to virtually all medical specialists.

If implemented as proposed next Jan. 1, family doctors, who typically spend more time talking to their patients about prevention of illness, could expect a 13 percent increase in Medicare fees.

But doctors who make their living in the operating room could expect sharp cuts in Medicare fees, averaging up to 5 percent for general surgeons, 6 percent for plastic surgeons and 8 percent for anesthesiologists.

Doctors criticized the fee cuts, adding that the proposal breaks a congressional promise that the new Medicare fees would create fairer payment levels and higher fees to rural doctors. Congress projected Medicare's fee schedule was revamped in 1989.

However, Medicare administrator Gail Wilensky said Friday the proposal would "correct what we all had regarded as historical inequities in what Medicare paid various physician specialties."

Call it the "single biggest change for physicians since the program began" in 1965, Wilensky said it should encourage rural medical students to opt for family medicine in a rural area over a big-city medical specialty.

Over the long term, that could result in "a shift away from surgical procedures," said Joseph Antone, director of Medicare's office of research and demonstration.

In the short term, however, the government expects physicians to try to recoup income by performing more procedures on Medicare patients. This anticipated "behavioral change" by doctors is expected to drive up the number of Medicare procedures by 3.3 percent next year, according to the Health Care Financing Administration, which administers Medicare.

Medicare will pay an estimated $32 billion in fees to physicians this year, a figure that is expected to escalate 65 percent to $50 billion by 1996. While not designed to cut costs, the new fee schedule is expected to lower that amount by $3 billion in 1996 compared to the current system.

The public has 60 days to comment on the proposed fees. A final regulation is expected to be published in October.

'Not guilty, your honor,' says Kennedy's nephew

The Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — William Kennedy Smith showed up at his arraignment Friday to look the judge in the eye and personally plead innocent to raping a woman at his family estate.

"I'm not guilty, your honor," said Smith as he faced Circuit Judge Mary Lupo. She accepted his plea on second-degree sexual battery and misdemeanor battery charges and set an Aug. 5 trial date.

"Florida law didn't require Smith to be present for the addition of charges," reporters here flew in from his Washington home because "obviously, this trial is the most important thing in my life."

"It was important for me to come down and look at the judge in the eye and tell her personally that I did that," said the 30-year-old nephew of Sen. Edward M.

Smith, Lupo, Lasch

Kennedy. He was accompanied by his brother, New York attorney Stephen Smith. An attorney for the 29-year-old woman who reported Smith assaulted her near the Kennedy estate swimming pool March 30 said she wouldn't comment on Smith's plea.

"I will tell you we're in daily contact with her, and her intention is to see that the process takes its course," said the attorney, David Roth.

Dressed in a gray business suit, Smith smiled at reporters — only one member of the public showed up as a spectator — and appeared to listen attentively during a 25-minute court session dominated by debate between Miami attorney, Mark Schnapp, and lead prosecutor Moira Lasch on various motions.

Schnapp said Smith's attorneys will seek dismissal of the case, but need more time to prepare their motion. Motions to dismiss normally must be filed before arraignment. Lupo gave them until June 14 and set a June 19 hearing for pending motions. She then will hear defense arguments for a modified gag order to halt what Smith's attorneys say are prejudicial and one-sided commentary by police and prosecutors that has damaged his rights to a fair trial.

Mrs. Lupo said Schnapp was at one point admonished by the judge to "talk to me, not each other" when they clashed over such issues as the alleged victim's request that Smith be tested for AIDS.

Schnapp told the judge that Smith gave blood samples to police nearly two months ago and agreed to have them tested. Ms. Lasch replied that state law required a court order, but Schnapp said Ms. Lasch's motion for the order was another prosecution effort to gain publicity.

Bush leans toward aiding Soviets

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Friday "we want to be helpful" in repairing an eroded Soviet economy and said he was impressed by Mikhail S. Gorbachev's blueprint for transforming his country into a free-market system.

Bush reserved judgment on Soviet pleas for billions of dollars in Western aid but, after reviewing Gorbachev's special envoy said "I'm feeling more positive on a wide array of specific questions." Still, he declined to say whether he favored accommodating Gorbachev's desire to address the July summit in London of the industrial democracies.

Soviet officials who met with Bush said later that they expect him to ease longtime trade restrictions on Moscow and perhaps approve $1.5 billion in credit guarantees allowing the Soviets to buy more U.S. grain.

"The move is in the right direction," declared Yevgeny Primakov, Gorbachev's special envoy, he met with Bush after spending 7 1/2 hours this week explaining Gorbachev's economic reform program to senior administration officials and representatives of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

"I liked what I heard and we have some decisions ahead of us, and I'm not going to prejudge those decisions," Bush told reporters during a brief appearance in the Rose Garden. He held 45 minutes of talks with Primakov and other Soviet officials in the Oval Office and then invited Primakov back for a private luncheon.

Bush's upbeat comments were in sharp contrast to doubts raised by other administration officials, who say Gorbachev's rescue plan is too vague and fails to recognize the major efforts needed to transform the centrally controlled Communist system into a market economy.

The administration, struggling with its own budget problems, also is seeking assurances of a cutoff of Soviet aid to Cuba, reductions in Soviet military spending and an end to harassment of the Baltic republics.

Bush expressed optimism that the Soviets were prepared to accept the painful aftermath of economic reform, which would entail the sale of state-owned enterprises to private buyers, liberalization of prices and unspecified monetary reforms.

"I think they made clear that they were prepared to do that, and all I'm saying is we need a more detailed," Bush said. "I had the impression that they are undertaking what, for them is, radical economic reforms."

"And when you've had a totally controlled economy and you try to move to a market economy, it's not easy," the president said. "They need help along the way."

Weak kin to AIDS virus in some cows

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A weak relative of the AIDS virus is "widely distributed" among cattle in the United States but does not pose a threat to human health, government researchers said Friday.

Bovine immunodeficiency-like virus seems to be prevalent among dairy cattle in the south, said Martin Van Der Maaten of the Agriculture Department's National Animal Disease Center in Ames, Iowa.

The researchers have not determined whether the virus actually impairs the immune defenses of cows, but some infected cattle have developed enlarged lymph nodes, excess white blood cells and mock aggressiveness.

Dr. Matthew Gondra, who has been leading BIV — AIDS research for the National Cancer Institute, said there was "absolutely no" risk of humans contracting the cow virus. He said the BIV is a safe model to work with in research.

Leading indicators post gain; analysts see summer recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's chief economic barometer posted a broadly based 0.6 percent gain in April, and analysts said the third straight monthly advance pointed toward a summer recovery from the recession.

The Commerce Department said Friday that six of the 11 contributors to its Index of Leading Economic Indicators turned up. One was unchanged.

In a second report, the department said orders to U.S. factories rose 1.8 percent in April, the first gain in six months. That suggested some easing in the hard-hit manufacturing sector.

"The data supports the view that the recession is nearly at an end and that the recovery is not too far away," said economist Gilbert Benz of the Swiss Bank Corp. of New York.

Surveyors show that most economic forecasters believe the recession will end this quarter, which ends June 30. The Bush administration also contends the economy will turn up by mid-summer.

July and the leading indicators did not begin to turn down until August.

Analysts noted that consumer spending, which is expected to fuel any recovery, remains weak. It held back by high unemployment and low incomes. Personal consumption represents two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Nevertheless, analysts were heartened by the extent of the index gains. The initial increases of 1.2 percent in February and 0.7 percent in March were centered in the financial sector of the economy including stock prices and the money supply.

The increase in April's factory orders suggested, to some analysts that the hard times in the manufacturing sector "already may be easing." The Commerce Department said the new bookings totaled a seasonally adjusted $236.5 billion, up from $226.4 billion in March.

But the Kammit-Baker, of Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass., said, "I wouldn't expect to see any sustained improvement until sometime in the fall. We'll see orders flip-flop for the next few months."

Still, the biggest source of strength in April's leading index was a jump in factory orders for consumer goods, which would bolster production and suggests businessmen foresee a comeback in consumer spending.

Other positive signs were a drop in weekly unemployment claims; a slower delivery times, indicating a pickup in orders; rising stock prices; a longer workweek; and an increase in building permits, suggesting growth in housing activity.

Neil Bush, other Silverado bank officials must pay 5 % of losses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers will cover most of the $1 billion in losses caused by the failure of a Colorado savings and loan with former owners including President Bush's son Neil paying about 5 percent.

The arrangement is drawing criticism from congressional Democrats, including Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., D-Mass., who called it "a real deal for ordinary citizens." He said Thursday, "This settlement demonstrates yet again that when it comes to prosecuting white collar crime, this administration would rather play paty-cake than hard ball."

Neil Bush, 10 other directors and officers of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association of Denver, and its law firm tentatively agreed Wednesday to pay the government $49.5 million to settle a $200 million lawsuit.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. filed the suit last September, alleging that the defendants showed "gross negligence" in allowing management to run Silverado into the ground and pay itself huge salaries and bonuses.

The only other source of relief comes from an accounting firm that sued Silverado before its 1988 collapse. Coopers and Lybrand officials have confirmed that they tentatively plan to pay $20 million.

David Nestor, a spokesman for Coopers and Lybrand, said this is the first settlement the accounting firm has negotiated in connection with its work for a failed savings and loan.

The firm, which not admitting fault, agreed to a cease-and-desist order intended to make certain the company's auditors "meet certain levels of technical competence."

The accounting firm had been named in the FDIC's actual lawsuit over Silverado's failure, but other defendants had threatened to bring the accounting firm into litigation if the lawsuit wasn't settled.

A billion dollars in losses was caused by $200 million that was blamed on Silverado directors, then that was reduced to $49.5 million — less than 5 cents on the dollar.

But some experts believe the government may not even recover the full settlement amount. Many of the defendants, including the 36-year-old Bush, have said they are broke or financially strapped. "It is unclear to what extent they are covered by liability insurance."

Bush, for one, is in "difficult financial condition because he doesn't have a job," said his attorney, James McInland. Bush has been seeking a new job since early April, when he left his second oil company, His $550,000 home near Denver's Glenmoor Country Club is still on the market.

Most analysts agree, however, that the recovery will be less than robust, dampened by a lack of government stimulus and high levels of both business and consumer debt.

"The recovery will be gradual and unspectacular," suggested economist Gordon Richards of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Surveyors note it designed to foretell economic activity six to nine months in advance.

"When you get three months of increases, it's a signal... that does show we're on the brink of a turn" in the economy, said Stephen S. Ruch, senior economist with Morgan Stanley in New York.

Economist Sung Won Sohn of the Norwest Corp. in Minneapolis agreed. "Three consecutive months of increase... indicates that the economy may be doing better than the market said, although he does not expect any upturn before summer's end."

The index is not infallible, however. "Three consecutive declines generally indicate a recession. For instance, but the current downturn started in the next few months."

But the biggest source of strength in April's leading index was a jump in factory orders for consumer goods, which would bolster production and suggests businessmen foresee a comeback in consumer spending.

Other positive signs were a drop in weekly unemployment claims; a slower delivery times, indicating a pickup in orders; rising stock prices; a longer workweek; and an increase in building permits, suggesting growth in housing activity.

Flight to study space effects on humans

CAPB CANAVERAL Fla. (AP) — The mission of space shuttle Columbia, set for launch Saturday, is a medical pathfinder for American plans to keep astronauts in space many months and eventually to send explorers to Mars.

Columbia was scheduled to blast off at 6 a.m. MDT on a nine-day mission with a crew of seven astronauts, 30 rats and 2,478 baby jelly fish. The flight is to be one of the most detailed studies ever of how the body responds to partial weightlessness, research that NASA says is essential if the United States ever is to attempt space voyages of months or years.

Four of the astronauts, all medical specialists, will spend the mission as human guinea pigs. One will be launched with a computer inserted into a vein, and resting near his heart. The astronauts will be stuck, probed, exercised and tested throughout the mission and for up to a week afterward.

"The key questions that need to be answered are about long-term spaceflight," said Dr. Arnauld Nico-gossian, director of NASA life sciences studies. The mission, he said, is a search for "the true story of how any living system responds to spaceflight."

Sununu says mixup caused late payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House Chief of Staff John Sununu's office on Friday blamed a billing mix-up for his late reimbursements for personal travel on military aircraft.

The bills were up to eight months old before Sununu paid them off in a lump sum of $3,768 in July.

An aide said the delay occurred because the bills were not sent to Sununu's office, apparently due to staff changes in the White House military office, which handles the House Chief of Staff's military bills.

"There was clearly something wrong. The bills hadn't been paid," Kennedy, noticed the problem, said the aide, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Bills sent to others who flew with Sununu were paid promptly, according to The Washington Post, which disclosed Sununu's delinquency in Friday's editions.

Scientist sentenced for conspiracy to sell secrets

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A former drug researcher was sentenced Friday to nine years in prison for conspiring to sell trade secrets in what prosecutors called one of the nation's largest industrial espionage cases.

Bernard Mayles was convicted in March of conspiring to sell formulas for ivemestin and interferon to an undercover FBI agent for $8 million. The drugs have taken in billions of dollars in sales.

"Whatever leniency you can give I'd certainly appreciate," Mayles told U.S. District Judge Alfred Lechner.

The judge had sharp words for Mayles, a former researcher for Merck & Co. and Schering-Plough.

"The fact that you committed your crime with your intellect is no more acceptable than if the crime had been committed with a gun," Lechner said.

In addition to the prison term, Mayles, 37, of Manalapan, was fined

$2,500. Federal sentencing guidelines call for a sentence of eight to 10 years. Mayles spent 11 years at Merck & Co. and five at Schering-Plough. He was convicted with Mario Misolo, 63, of Hazel, but Misolo's sentencing was postponed until June 13 while he awaits a plea agreement.

Testimony during his five-day trial, showed the companies spent hundreds of millions of dollars to develop each drug.

Shuttle director Robert Crippen said Friday equipment problems that caused the launch to be postponed last week have been corrected. "We're all ready to go," he said.

A medical manager of rias and immature jellyfish were to spend the night aboard Columbia, and the astronauts were to climb aboard three hours before the scheduled launch.

Capt. Mike Adams, an Air Force weather expert, said there was a 70 percent chance of favorable conditions Saturday morning.

Children orphaned by cyclone struggle to survive on own

ANDHARPARA, Bangladesh (AP) — Ansar Miah, 10, cradled his 2-year-old sister and clutched the hand of his 7-year-old brother — all that the killer cyclone in April left of his family.

Suddenly the man of the household, the soft-spoken boy with an injured left eye, had one overriding concern: He'd been going to school and had never worked. How was he going to keep his family alive?

In the devastation of southeast Bangladesh, where the cyclone left 139,000 dead, hundreds of orphans like the Meahs are struggling to survive.

With the three small orphans in the area full-and-no-special-government help, they and other orphans depend on the little help given by distant relatives, or whatever they can do on their own.

This village, where the Meahs live, less than a mile from the Bay of Bengal, once had 250 occupants who grew rice in lush paddyfields and occasionally took a minibus into the nearby town of Hilsa.

But their placid life was shattered when a 20-foot tidal wave spawned by the cyclone rolled over Andharpura, killing 135 villagers. The paddyfields were inundated with salt-water and every thatched hut, tin-roofed house — all concrete buildings in the wave's path was destroyed.

On Friday, the only way to get to Andharpura was to walk across a makeshift bamboo-pole bridge along the rutted remains of the embankment road. Five leaky government-leased tents provided the only shelter for the survivors.

There's not a single family that did not suffer a loss," said Farukh

Bangladeshi Ansar Miah, 10, tries to comfort his 2-year-old sister. The April 30, cyclone killed his family and left him alone to care for two younger siblings in the devastated village of Andharpura.

Ahmed, 39, whose wife and eldest son were killed. His only surviving child, 3-year-old Abdulmannan, wouldn't leave his side.

Ansar Miah, his brother Kaiser and sister Yasmeen seemed bewildered by their plight. Their father had died before the cyclone and their mother, older brother and aunt were swept away in the storm.

A cousin, Mahabul Alam, 30, who lost his father and daughter, said he had been taking care of the children and would try to keep them until they could support themselves.

The little girl was breast-feeding, but since her mother's death, there is no milk. "Off and on she cries. We have been giving her rice, and biscuits," he said.

Three other village children — Mohammed Hasan, 12, and his sisters — Shaheen Akhtar, 8, and Nilu Akhtar, 6 — lost their father in the cyclone and were abandoned by their stepmother who survived.

A distant cousin was temporarily caring for them and collecting relief on their behalf. "I don't have any plans. It all depends on my fate, whatever Allah wills," Mohammed said. But he said leaving the area was out of the question. "Where would we go?," he asked.

Angolan leaders sign peace accords

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The leaders of Angola's two warring factions signed a peace treaty Friday, ending a 16-year-old civil war that devastated their southern African nation.

The pact culminated more than a year of negotiations led by the Soviet Union, which had backed the leftist government, and by the United States, which had funded the UNITA rebels.

A provisional cease-fire has been in effect in Angola since May 15, and on Saturday the last Cuban troops left.

Angolan President Jose Eduardo dos Santos and UNITA leader Jonas Savimbi shook hands and signed the peace accord, flanked off applause and cheering among the people and officials witnessing the ceremony.

The plan sets elections for the fall of 1992. It also demands an internationally monitored cease-fire and freeze of the presence in the rest of 10-million people that is three times the size of France.

Angolan rebel leader Jonas Savimbi waves to supporters upon his arrival in Lisbon.

The Angola conflict, one of Africa's longest and bloodiest civil wars, grew out of the chaotic end to Portuguese rule in Africa in 1975.

On Thursday, the U.N. Security Council voted unanimously to increase from 60 to 350 the number of military observers who will begin next week to monitor the cease-fire.

Portugal, along with the United States and Soviet Union — who fueled the civil war with arms supplies to their Angolan proxies — will join representatives from the two sides on the U.N. verification committee.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh were among those attending the ceremony in the 18th-century Necessidades Palace in Lisbon, Portugal's foreign ministry.

"All of Africa and all the world bear witness to what we do here to

The United States says it will continue non-lethal assistance to UNITA until elections slated for late next year and its humanitarian assistance began several months ago to feed Angolans suffering from famine brought about by widespread drought.

Also attending the ceremony were U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and former Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Chester Crocker.

Crocker was the architect of the 1988 New York accords that paved the way for independence in Angola's last colony, Namibia, and established a framework for the withdrawal of about 50,000 Cuban troops from Angola, a major stumbling block to a peaceful solution of the civil war.

The conflict broke out in 1975 on the eve of Angola's independence. It has left some 300,000 dead and crippled the economy of one of Africa's potentially richest nations.

The Cubans joined Angolan government forces pitted against South African troops that invaded Angola to back Savimbi's UNITA.

The thawing of the Cold War and increased superpower cooperation paved the way for an end to the fighting, as the Angolan government shed its Marxist ideology and accepted multiparty democracy.

Under the peace accords, UNITA and the governing Popular Movement will compete in Angola's first free election in the fall of 1992. The parties are expected to join the contest.

The accords also provide for the fusion of government and UNITA troops into a 40,000-strong united Angolan army.

By the end of July, all soldiers from both sides are to gather at 50 assembly points around the vast southern African nation three times the size of France.

Baker to meet Syrian foreign minister

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III will hold a hastily arranged meeting Saturday with Syria's foreign minister to discuss a possible cease-fire in the Arab-Israeli peace talks.

In making the surprise announcement Friday, Baker offered no hint that the meeting with Foreign Minister Feroz Khatami signaled a breakthrough in his 10-week quest to bring Arabs and Israelis together.

"I wouldn't want to preempt or prejudice the meeting," Baker said. "We'll have the meeting and then see what's next."

Baker came here to take part in a ceremony marking the end of 16 years of civil war in Angola. He made the announcement while posing for photographers with Angolan

President Jose Eduardo Dos Santos.

The Saturday meeting will take place after Baker confers with Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh. Among other issues, the two will compare notes on their joint efforts to set up Arab-Israeli peace talks co-sponsored by Washington and Moscow.

The meeting with Sharna will be Baker's fifth with Syrian officials since he began his peace overtures in early March. Baker has been unable to overcome procedural differences between Israel and Syria over the format for peace talks, but he nonetheless has indicated optimism that his efforts will bear fruit.

"We are hoping to continue to have conversations with the various prospective parties to a peace conference on the Middle East," Baker said. "Syria, of course, is very important to that process if you're going to have a comprehensive process or a comprehensive settlement."

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler called on the Foreign Ministry in Damascus on Thursday to ask if Sharna would be willing to fly to Lisbon for a Saturday meeting with Baker. Sharna agreed to the request.

Baker's goal is to set up direct talks between Arabs and Palestinians.

A second objective is face-to-face talks between Israel and Arab governments. Aside from Israel and Syria, Baker has also been conferring with Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

Fighting hampers aid relief efforts

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The provisional rebel government appealed Friday for a new infusion of aid for famine victims, but relief officials said looting and attacks had forced the suspension of aid deliveries to most areas.

Tens of thousands of refugees have fled to neighboring countries to escape famine and continued fighting. A top official in neighboring Sudan says 100,000 Ethiopians have fled to his country and that 150,000 more could be on their way.

Meanwhile, 100 soldiers of the military man who took over leadership of the country after President Mengistu Haile-Mariam fled on May 21 had been given refuge in the Italian Embassy in Addis Ababa. The foreign ministry in Rome said Lt. Gen. Tesfaye Gebre Kidan had been given shelter "for humanitarian reasons."

Tesfaye was in charge of the collapsing government for only one week before Mengistu's departure and the rebel takeover. His whereabouts had been unknown since Tuesday's rebel takeover.

On Friday, life in the capital showed signs of returning to normal following two days of demonstrations against the rebels and U.S. involvement in Tuesday's takeover. Traffic was back on the city's streets and businesses and shops were opening as usual.

At least 10 protesters have been killed in demonstrations beginning Wednesday outside the U.S. Embassy and other buildings. Authorities used gunfire to break up the protests.

The plea for renewed international aid efforts came from Tamrat Layne, vice chairman of the ruling Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front, the Tigrayan-dominated rebel group in control of the capital and most national services.

Tamrat told aid workers and donor government representatives that the Red Sea port of Assab was reopened and Abay Tesfaye, a member of the executive committee of the front, assured relief workers that the new government would provide security and facilities for aid distribution.

But Geneva's office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva said attacks and looting of supply convoys have forced the temporary suspension of U.N. efforts to get food to most of the famine-stricken regions.

The agency said many warehouses it operates have been emptied of their stocks, and a "large percentage" of the vehicles used by it and other humanitarian agencies have been stolen or destroyed.

Government slow to halt abuses against Palestinians

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — The Kuwaiti government has been slow to stop abuses against Palestinians ranging from petty harassment to a lack of garbage collection in their neighborhoods, Western diplomats and human rights groups say.

What has emerged as the most serious problem is the violence at the level of security forces in police stations," said Kenneth Roth, deputy director of the New York-based Human Rights Watch.

Crown Prince Saad Abdullah al-

Sabah condemned the torture in an unusually blunt speech this week, saying the continued use of police stations for torture is "unacceptable and could not continue."

But the torture hasn't stopped, and it has spawned a pervasive sense of fear among Palestinians who must also cope with the loss of their jobs and things like the piles of stinking trash left uncollected in Hawalli, the main Palestinian neighborhood.

"It's akin to slowly working an animal into a corner where it eventually has to snarl back," said a senior Western diplomatic source.

The most serious allegations to arise since Iraqi forces were driven out of Kuwait in late February involve Kuwaiti torturers and some time killing of those suspected of collaboration during the seven-month occupation.

Amnesty International and other human rights groups say hundreds of Palestinians and other foreigners have been arbitrarily detained and beaten in revenge attacks by vigilante groups and security forces.

Subway strike paralyzes capital

PARIS (AP) — A transportation strike paralyzed the capital's subway and bus system Friday, forcing hundreds of thousands of angry Parisians to go to work on foot.

The one-day strike by the Paris Regional Transport Authority closed all lines at 6:30 a.m. Metro lines by midday.

Service was cut back 50 to 90 percent on the others.

Napoleon's lucky chair is discovered

OSLO, Norway (AP) — A chair discovered in Oslo is believed to be a good luck charm that Napoleon left at home during his final defeat at the battle of Waterloo.

The mahogany, brass-adorned armchair, made around 1800, was found during an inventory of the stocks in the bankruptcy of Herlossen & Co., the business family DeGosson Naering reported Friday. Sigurd Herlossen, of the Oslo company, told the newspaper that the French emperor consulted the chair maker, he said.

Napoleon was believed to have used it during his European campaigns.

New principal beats out pack of 20 to win spot

RUPERT — West Minico Junior High School Principal Robert (Bob) Pavlock, 44, has been selected from 20 applicants to be the new assistant superintendent for the Mindoka-County School District.

At a press conference Friday, School Board Chairman Harold Short said Pavlock will begin his new job on July 1. Pavlock has been a principal in the district for the last two years.

He earned his bachelor's degree from the University of Pittsburgh and his masters degree and graduate work in education administration was accomplished at Pennsylvania State University.

He said he will miss working with the kids the most, which he leaves West Minico to take his new position at the district office.

"I have worked with kids for 21 years," Pavlock said. "I will miss working with them, especially when school begins in the fall."

Pavlock moved from Pennsylvania to the Mini-Cassia area two years ago. He is married and has three children.

Andrus receives Eagle Award from Northwest coalition

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus is one of four winners of the 1991 Northwest Conservation Eagle Award from the Northwest Conservation Act Coalition.

The Seattle, Wash.-based organization credits the Democratic governor with devising a plan to restore salmon fish runs. "When petitions were filed to protect Snake River salmon stocks under the Endangered Species Act, other regional officials ducked for cover."

But Gov. Andrus came forward with an ambitious plan not only to stabilize the fish runs, but to restore them. "NCAC executive director K.C. Golden said in a news release.

Andrus will receive the award at the Northwest Salmon Congress this week-end in Hood River, Ore.

The Northwest Conservation Act Coalition has 50 member organizations in Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia.

They include environmental, consumer and low-income advocacy groups and public utilities.

The organization monitors implementation of the Northwest Power Planning Act of 1980.

'Tiger Team' to put claws into INEL this summer

IDAHO FALLS — Federal inspectors will swarm over the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory this summer. A 100- to 150-member "Tiger Team" will scrutinize the eastern Idaho federal energy department site beginning June 17.

The inspection team will look at management, training and compliance relating to environment, safety and health regulations at facilities operated by INEL contractors including EG&G Idaho, Rockwell-INEL, Argonne National Laboratory West, Protection Technology Idaho and M-K Ferguson of Idaho.

Environmental assessments will be conducted at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant operated by Westinghouse, Idaho Nuclear Co.

During its visit the team will be accessible to the public. Once sponsored at the site and in Idaho Falls, the team will establish a 1-800 telephone number for the public to contact the team with questions and concerns.

Black powder shoot, dinner slated for Sunday in Buhi

BUHI. The North Valley Free Trappers have scheduled a black powder shoot and potluck dinner for Sunday afternoon.

Everyone is invited to either watch or participate in the shoot, in which marksmen will shoot at targets for fun and prizes.

The potluck is free, and it costs $1 to enter the contest. Each competitor takes a prize on a blanket and the winner takes all.

"Everyone dresses up like mountain men and it's a lot of fun," said organizer Claudia Robbins.

The shoot will be at the Lucerne gravel pit five miles west of Buhi on Highway 30 and begins at 1 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call Robbins at 543-5381.

Streets may not be lined with gold, but will get trees soon

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The major roads into Twin Falls may look a little better if the Chamber of Commerce and the City Council have their way.

The chamber and council announced Friday a beautification project that will encourage business owners to spruce up their property with landscaping — especially on the major streets leading into town.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce has formed a "Beautification Committee" that will recommend businesses that deserve recommendation to the council.

The council, in turn, will honor the businesses at a meeting. The project will include a little gentle arm twisting, too.

"Committee members will be talking with property owners that need to spruce up a little, encouraging them to do so and explaining the ordinances that deal with that topic," the chamber said in a prepared release.

The project started, appropriately, at the chamber's office at 858 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. with a ground-breaking Friday.

It was the third time the chamber's landlord, First Federal Savings Bank, had landscaping on the property.

Landscaping had been torn out twice before at the location because of street-widening projects.

The voluntary beautification project was officially started Friday with a hole broken through the asphalt beside the Chamber of Commerce building.

How counties can support the high-cost of dumps

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As Magic Valley counties scramble to plan new landfills they also must find ways to finance their projects — a task complicated by potential legal problems that can make loans for solid waste facilities risky ventures. Nonetheless, if the counties present potential lenders a well-thought proposal they can finance the landfills needed to meet coming federal regulations on solid waste disposal, said banker Jim Wrigley.

"There's always a way to get things financed ... but a lot of things have to be tied off for solid waste," said Wrigley, a vice president with First Security Bank in Boise. First the counties should assemble a team of experts — engineers, lawyers and bond experts — to put together a plan. Then, the counties must present potential lenders a high-quality feasibility study of the proposed solid waste plan, Wrigley said.

Symms says to seniors: There's no free lunch

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Steve Symms told graduating Twin Falls High School seniors Friday that if the collective intelligence of the world were compressed into one sentence it would be: "There is no free lunch."

He made his remarks to a TTFS class that has earned more scholarship money than any previous graduating class at the school.

Symms, a Republican now serving his second term in the U.S. Senate, urged students to work hard for their futures. He said it was futile to pay back the support of parents, teachers and principals who helped them reach graduation day.

Instead, seniors should "pay forward" by contributing their efforts and talents to improve their communities, the state and the nation.

Following Symms' address, about 320 seniors received their diplomas during commencement exercises at the College of Southern Idaho.

Principal Carl Snow said the combined scholarship money earned by the class of '91 so far is $381,520 — a record — and the total will likely reach $500,000.

Eighty-one percent of the graduates plan to attend college; 5 percent will go to a vocational institute, 8 percent said they would immediately begin working, 2 percent were planning to get married and 4 percent said they would join the military, Snow said.

Of the graduates who plan to go to college, 226 said they would go to Idaho schools and 42 said they would attend colleges in other states, he said.

Twin Falls Superintendent of Schools Terrell Donicht said parents would greet graduation with mixed feelings: They would be happy their students achieved this pinnacle of success and said the college bells will come due next fall.

"This is a great milestone in your lives. I hope you make the best of it," School Board member Orriette Sinclair said before giving diplomas to students.

Symms reinforced his plea to students to work hard for their futures with an anecdote. A country preacher riding his horse into a sparsely populated area in Owyhee

County stopped to admire a farmer's well-manicured garden while the farmer tilled it in. He told the farmer what a wonderful garden the Lord had given. The farmer agreed, but added that the preacher should have seen it when the Lord was taking care of it alone. "Just remember it's not all roses in the world out there," Symms said. His speech turned political. Symms said if some of his congressional colleagues had their way, taxes would become an even larger burden. That is not the way to improve the economy, he said, but giving people the economic freedom to realize their dreams is. To put the current national debt of $4.2

Test scores at some Magic Valley schools slide

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

Some national achievement test scores in Magic Valley schools dropped this year.

Across the valley, administrators are receiving the scores from the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills, given earlier this year to sixth- and eighth-graders, and the Test of Achievement and Proficiency, used to evaluate 11th-graders.

Many area school administrators have not yet had time to digest their mail and report their scores. Among those who have is Norman Hurst, superintendent in the Cassia County School District.

Hurst reported that percentiles for the composite scores for sixth-, eighth- and 11th-graders are 57, 42 and 65, respectively. Last year's comparable scores were 56, 51 and 67.

lowed these kids all the way through school, and we cannot figure out a reason for this size drop," he said.

A score of 57 means that 57 percent of the sixth-graders tested nationwide did not do as well on the test. Jerome composite scores also dropped a few percentage points from a year ago. Sixth-graders went from 67 to 57, eighth-graders slipped from 69 to 57 and 11th-graders dropped from 79 to 57.

Another school district posting low composite scores against last year's figures was Dietrich.

The sixth-grade score went from 83 down to 40, the eighth-grade score dropped from 68 to 20 and the 11th grade score inched down from 57 to 52.

The Dietrich schools have only 151 students, however, and large fluctuations are common. Above national norms. Scores represent percentiles on the number of students who take the tests, according to Burley Junior High because we have fol-

Parents attend board meeting in support of Buhl principal

By Bortala L. Rodden
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Parents, teachers and others showed Buhl's district office at this week's school board meeting to show support for a principal and to discuss a set of advisory committees' recommendations regarding staffing and building needs and decision making.

Several parents voiced support for Popplewell Elementary School Principal Lawrence LaRue, whose contract was up for renewal. The parents, as well as teachers, said there might be a negative effect on the relationships between students, teachers and parents if LaRue's contract wasn't renewed.

The most critical needs are at the middle school, according to Board chair. Enrollment is up 15 percent while staffing is down considerably. Increases need to be made in science and math, and the counselor positions need to be maintained.

Board chair said these are only short-term, immediate needs, and said overworking will continue to "pod" along into high school.

At the elementary school, the counseling position should be increased from a half-time position to full-time. And at the high school, science and math teacher positions should be full time.

Bill Specht reported on the committee's building program/increased facilities recommendation to organize a fact finding committee to assess the needs of the district and community, survey the community, and determine the availability of grants and funding.

The fact finding committee would need members with a broad range of backgrounds. Teachers, local business people, senior citizens, students, parents, civic organizations, minorities, the School Board and agriculture need to be represented. And a consultant was recommended.

Specht said the special committee should be organized in 60 days and once organized, its mission could be completed within six months. He also said the committee would like to get started on this project as quickly as possible.

Lynn Popplewell gave the committee's recommendations on decision making to the board.

from making within the district. She recommended a staff senate be elected at each building. These staff officials could then coordinate with one another and assist in decision making and researching grants and funding.

Textbooks were discussed at the meeting as well. Karen Osman, an elementary school teacher, LaRue, and three other elementary teachers gave their recommendations for new text books.

The district currently is on a five-year cycle for replacing text books, reading, handwriting and health. The board adopted the recommendations presented by the group.

In other business, the board: Approved repairing a portion of the middle school roof. This portion of the roof was made with asbestos, which is quite expensive to remove. Instead of removal, a material called Duro-Last will be used which "safely encapsulates" the asbestos, according to a Duro-Last company representative.

Approved an agreement to participate in the alternative high school. Five spaces will be reserved for Buhl students to attend the alternative high school in Twin Falls for the 1991-92 school year.

Received a letter from Gerry Hill, expressing his disapproval of the adoption of the Channel One, 12-minute news program, which has two minutes of commercial time.

Approved an agreement to purchase the expense for the telecommunication equipment the school district received free, with this program.

trillion into perspective. Symms said that amount of money would pay for 9,200 McDonald's Big Macs for every person in the country.

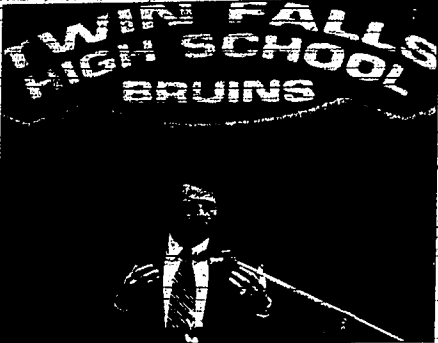

Symms' appearance sparked some debate last month among TEHS seniors.

Fourteen seniors ignited controversy when they wrote a letter to the editor in the Bruin News, the school's newspaper, requesting that class officers consider another commencement speaker.

The letter criticized Symms for what the authors called high-handed political tactics and exclusive loyalty to business interests.

The seniors said they would wear Richard Stallings campaign buttons and sleep during Symms' speech. Stallings, the Democratic 2nd-District congressman, has indicated he is leaning toward running against Symms in next year's Senate race, although Symms has not announced his re-election plans.

TFHS class President Ryan Courtney countered by saying it was an honor to have a U.S. senator as a speaker. He also said that the letter-writers were a small minority and did not reflect the feelings of the majority of the class.

TFHS valedictorians this year are Amanda Marie Allen, Heather Lee Gunn, Julie Ann Debeard, Brian David, Egbert, Jennifer White.

Lee Popplewell, School Board chairman, said that personnel matters are discussed only in executive session, but said the board would take the comments under advisement and thanked everyone for their interest. Following the executive session, LaRue's contract was renewed for another year.

In a telephone interview later, Superintendent Gene Pyles said the School Board had fully intended to renew LaRue's contract.

Also at the meeting, three patrons reported the recommendations of the superintendent's advisory committee, a committee created to give the superintendent comments on educational needs as seen through the eyes of the local community.

Because the success of the project will depend largely on how much refuse people bring to the landfills, the study should include a forecast of the amount of garbage expected and identify a rate structure showing how much city officials expect the facilities to charge a month.

Landfillers will want to know how the counties will generate money from the landfills to pay off the debt. For example, counties might use tipping fees when people bring garbage to the facilities, charge a monthly fee, such as a garbage collection bill, or send a yearly bill that comes with the property tax.

Presenting a solid feasibility study not only will help sell financing but also can lower the interest rate the counties pay. If lenders know the plan has been carefully thought out, they might view the venture as less risky, which can mean lower interest rates.

Lenders probably will not immediately commit to long-term financing for landfills but would prefer interim funds to start the different phases of the solid waste system.

The lender better knows the costs of the whole project, the financing could be converted to long-term, Wrigley said.

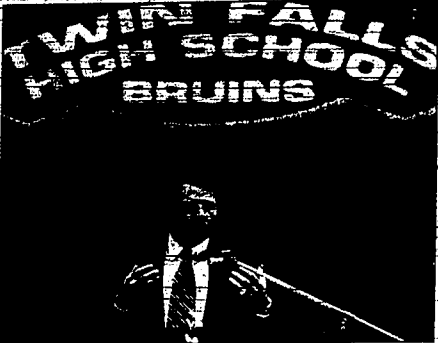

"I wouldn't envision any problem for interim financing," he said.

He described long-term as any debt that takes more than a year to pay off. A long-term package should not exceed 20 years to pay off and ideally would be completed in 15 years, he said.

In assessing ventures such as landfills, lenders want to know that the county or other entities involved in a venture have a binding enforceable obligation to each other so that the group will not fall apart and default on the loan.

Magic Valley counties have the roughest deal of such an agreement, but might be six months away from the completed document, said Terry Schultz, environmental director of the South-Central District Health Department.

Lenders also want to be sure that counties or solid waste districts can issue bonds on the project and then used by the Bureau of Land Management for about 10 years, Robinson said.

Jumpers don't back their own chutes, he said, and added that it hadn't been determined why the main chute didn't open.

Training with the wing-type chute has been suspended pending an investigation ordered by the regional forester, Robinson said, but training at the depot will continue with other types of chutes.

Robinson said only two other similar deaths have occurred during training jumps in Forest Service history, which includes more than 250,000 jumps.

Sierra Club sues over hazardous waste

DENVER (AP) — The Sierra Club on Friday filed an amended complaint in U.S. District Court, alleging that a restart of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant would violate state and federal hazardous-waste laws.

The Denver-based environmental group filed the Department of Energy of illegally storing hazardous and radioactive waste at the facility near Golden.

The Sierra Club contends that DOE lacks proper permits and its storage facilities are inadequate to handle hazardous waste.

By reopening the plant, DOE will be actually be creating more of this waste, which they have no authority to store or dispose of, said Sierra Club attorney Alan Weiss.

DOE halted plutonium operations at Rocky Flats in late 1989, after completing an investigation of environmental health and safety problems.

On Jan. 1, 1990, the previous operator, Rockwell, was replaced by EG&G, which revised safety procedures and retained plutonium with an aim toward restarting plutonium operations in mid-1994.

"Rocky Flats violates minimum safety standards set by Congress and the EPA to protect the public from toxic waste," said Sierra Club's Rocky Mountain Chapter chairman Glenn Dayton. "The risks are hazardous to the public even without further operations and is a greater risk if operations resume with the facility in its present condition."

We believe that DOE obtained funding for restart without telling Congress it would run the plant illegally.

The latest action follows a suit filed by the Sierra Club in February 1989. As a result of that suit, U.S. District Court Judge Lewis Babcock ruled in April 1990 that the storage of residue from the burning of plutonium-tipped rags, trash and solvent required a federal permit, which DOE failed to apply for.

Despite the ruling, Sierra Club contends, DOE has not brought the plant into compliance with the law.

Three months later, DOE agreed not to burn mixed plutonium and hazardous wastes in two incinerators at the plant without getting a permit from Colorado or EPA.

Eleventh-graders are tested on reading comprehension, math, written expression, using sources of information, science and social studies.

Nearly 13,000 high school juniors across the state took the Test of Achievement and Proficiency this year, while 15,800 eighth graders and 17,200 sixth-graders took the lower-level statewide exams.

Sixty-six percent of students scored 69, sixth-graders scored 52 and eighth-graders scored 55.

Test scores could not be obtained Friday from the Shoshone, Richfield, Glenn, Ferry, Murrumbidgee, Hagerman, Gooding, Wendell, Blaine County, Minidoka County, Buhl, Filer and Kimberly districts.

NPR still drawing criticism

MOSCOW (AP) — Critics and supporters of locating a multibillion-dollar nuclear weapons reactor in Idaho faced off for the sixth and final time Friday as two weeks of hearings on the controversial New Production Reactor came to a close.

And again in Moscow, situated between two of the three proposed sites for the tritium production facility, opponents outnumbered supporters by a large margin.

That strength of the opposition to locating the $5.6 billion reactor at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls has progressively increased as the hearings moved further away from eastern Idaho.

Hearings were also held in Portland, Ore., and Columbia, S.C. The government is considering the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in eastern Washington and the Savannah River complex in South Carolina for the reactor as well as the INEL.

Critics appearing before Energy Department officials during two days of testimony in Boise earlier this week outnumbered supporters by two to one, and during the initial session in Moscow on Friday opponents dwarfed backers by more than 10 to one.

As we moved away from Idaho Falls, the comments became more negative, admitted Peter Dirksen, manager of the reactor program at the INEL.

One of the few supporters of the reactor in Moscow was Tom LeClair, an aide to Republican Sen. Steve Symms who has clashed with Andrus over the waste issue.

The INEL has a "spectacular history" of radioactive research, LeClair said, and with the nation at a crossroads in defense needs, it must maintain its supply of tritium needed for nuclear weapons.

But Moscow farmer Joyce Frei countered that nuclear production will damage the environment before officials realize it. "It's very difficult to pay taxes to destroy the earth that sustains us," Frei said.

Truly environmental activist Chuck Brosious took the department to task over its priorities. Before creating more, the government should clean up nuclear waste, and attorney James M. Smith said a job he said the government has estimated will cost $155 billion. "National security is not threatened to the point where public safety should be jeopardized," Brosious said.

Gov. Cecil Andrus has given the project his qualified support, stressing that the government must come up with a permanent solution to the problem of radioactive waste before he endorses any significant construction in Idaho.

Shopping mall set for Rexburg

REXBURG (AP) — A Utah developer has won preliminary approval for a $3-million shopping center in Rexburg that officials hope will convince shoppers from the north to stop bypassing the community for Idaho Falls.

Westcap Land Holdings of Salt Lake City proposed a 10-store, 143,000-square-foot facility over 21 acres that will feature a new department store, a grocery store and eight smaller retail outlets.

"It's not just for Rexburg. We want people many miles north and west of Rexburg to shop here," development-spokesman Steve Dracott told the city planning commission Thursday. He said the plaza was targeted to open in the fall of 1992.

The commission agreed to annex the Madison County property and grant commercial zoning to the site as soon as Prater formally acquires the property.

Judge won't impose daily fines on reporter

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge Friday reversed his decision to impose daily $1,500 fines against a reporter who refuses to divulge the source of a secret police report about the videotaped beating of a black motorist.

"I don't want to be sucked into a political controversy with the Los Angeles Times," Superior Court Judge Bernard Kamins said. "I have great respect for them, and great respect for the press."

However, the judge ordered Times reporter Richard Serrano to pay a one-time $1,500 fine for refusing to disclose his source. Kamins, who originally ordered a $1,500 fine for every day that Serrano refused to disclose his source, said he researched the law overnight and reconsidered.

He said he also was swayed by a legal brief in which the Times' lawyers argued that the law prohibits multiple punishments for a single act.

"I don't want to be fooled into diverting my attention away from the issues at trial," said the judge, who is presiding in the assault case of four police officers accused of beating Rodney King. The trial is scheduled to begin June 19. The March 3 beating, videotaped by a amateur cameraman, led to a Justice Department review of police brutality nationwide.

Kamins stayed payment of the fine until June 10 to give the Times a chance to appeal. "This radically changes the nature of what's going on," Times lawyer Rex Heinke said.

Army Corps will increase flow of water in test to assist salmon

LEWISTON (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plans to boost the flow of the Snake River over Lower Granite Dam Saturday in a test whether that will help migrating salmon.

The agency said Thursday it will pass the river's entire flow through the dam's spillway and shut down its powerhouse for four hours as part of a test of ways to help the fish.

The river's flow is expected to be about 85,000 cubic feet of water per second during the test, the largest amount of water spilled since 1986, said L. Victor Armacost of the Corps.

Armacost, Walla Walla District Planning Division chief, said this weekend's test will differ from past operations because the dam has never spilled that much water while its powerhouse was not operating.

The test is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. PDT and end at 3 p.m. Armacost said the Corps estimates the four hours of idle generators could equal $100,000 in lost power production.

That will be a key part of the test. Gov. Cecil Andrus and others advocate spilling the Snake River's flow to help young salmon and steelhead migrating downstream. Backers of that plan say it would divert small fish away from turbines where 6 to 15 percent may die of each dam.

But fishery biologists say spilling the water could hamper the upriver migration of adult salmon and steelhead returning to their spawning grounds.

The entrances to the fish ladder at the dam are located along the powerhouse. The spill could change the currents and confuse the fish.

The test won't provide much information, however, about how the change would affect fish, Armacost added.

Sarah Wik, a Walla Walla District fishery biologist, said a few salmon bearing radio transmitters as part of a University of Idaho study may be in the area.

But in that short period of time, it would be difficult to predict what effect a spill pattern is having on fish, she said.

Craig: Judge made correct prayer ruling

LEWISTON (AP) — Sen. Larry Craig said a federal judge's decision to allow prayer at the Grangeville High School graduation was the right choice.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan on Tuesday refused to grant a preliminary injunction to block prayer at Friday night's graduation. The decision also applied to two other school districts which joined the lawsuit. The American Civil Liberties Union requested the injunction on behalf of a Grangeville mother who alleged her family's constitutional rights would be violated.

Ryan refused to grant the injunction, but also declined to rule whether school prayer is proper. That should wait until the U.S. Supreme Court decides the question in a Rhode Island case with similar issues, Ryan said.

Craig said he has no reservations. "I think it was an appropriate decision," Craig said. "I am one who believes that prayer is appropriate and I'm also one who believes that it is permissible," he said Thursday.

"I'm also one who believes it ought to rest with the majority of students involved. High schools have handled it that way. I find that a very acceptable way to do it. To arbitrarily deny the students that right to make their own decisions, I think is wrong," Craig offered to give the prayer at Madison High School at Rexburg, which is involved in its own school prayer dispute.

Lack of jurors cancels Bonneville cases

IDAHO FALLS — Bonneville County prosecutors had the cases to put before a grand jury this week. But court officials couldn't come up with enough people to serve.

Seventh District Judge Marvin Smith said 24 prospective jurors were called to serve, but so many were disqualified or didn't show up that the court could not be found to fill out the panel.

The judge says they'll try again on June 10, and this time officials are calling in 40 prospective jurors to make sure there are enough people to serve.

Students bring superintendent home

BLACKFOOT — Blackfoot Superintendent Steve Norton never thought he would make it to the school's graduation where the first of his nine children received her diploma.

Activated during the Persian Gulf Crisis, Norton was still stationed in Germany with his 157th Uah Army Engineers Reserve unit earlier this week.

But on Tuesday, his commanding officer relented and gave him the green light to return to Idaho after receiving a petition signed by 213 Blackfoot High School seniors.

Norton had to scramble for a flight and arrived just hours before Thursday night ceremonies. But while suffering from a lack of sleep and jet lag, he was the keynote speaker.

4-car pileup won't result in charges

BOISE — Ada County says it will not file charges against drivers involved in a four-car freeway accident May 2 that claimed the life of a Boise woman.

Investigating officers said the chain of collisions started when an Idaho State Police officer stopped to remove a dead dog from the freeway.

"I don't think we can prove beyond any reasonable doubt that any person committed a criminal act that caused the death," said Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Roger Bourne.

Jane Kay Watson, 46, died of internal injuries several hours after the accident, which occurred on Interstate 84 near the Meridian exit. Her vehicle was rear-ended by a car driven by Sharon Jerome, Nampa, investigating officers said.

Investigative reports said an ISP officer pulled over to remove a dead dog from the right-hand lane about 2:10 p.m. when the accident occurred.

Birds smashing into Boise building

BOISE — Birds are mistaking the mirrored sides of a state office building for the wide open spaces, and officials are trying to come up with a way to stop them from crashing into the sides of the building.

"Thirty birds hit the windows today, and I died," said Kelly Gray, a state employee. "This happens every year, but I've never noticed it like this before."

The birds are Western tanagers, 6 to 8-inch finches that are migrating north. The Joe Williams Office Building formerly was known as the Hall of Mirrors. It was built with mirror sides, to make it easier to heat and air condition. But birds apparently have been confused.

People Black Crowes singer cited for petty theft

DENVER (AP) — Singer Chris Robinson of the Black Crowes rock band walked out of a convenience store with two cases of beer and spat at a customer when a clerk refused to sell him beer because it was after midnight, police said.

Akihito

Benchley

Robinson, 24, was cited for petty theft and assault, both misdemeanors, when police went to his hotel after responding to a complaint of a disturbance at a 7-Eleven early Thursday. He faces a June 13 court appearance.

The band, which played in Denver on Wednesday night, has sold more than 2 million copies of its debut album, "Shake Your Money Maker."

Robinson became irate when the store clerk refused to sell him beer after midnight, an illegal act in Colorado, police said.

Elizabeth Juergens, a waitress, said she was in the store with a companion who pointed-out Robinson and told her, "...Who are The Black Crowes?"

"She said Robinson whirled around and began verbally abusing her."

"He spit ... at my hair, and his bouncers pulled him out," she said.

Robinson then walked out of the store with two cases of beer without paying for them, but a member of his entourage returned and gave the clerk $20, police said. Tresa Ráburn, the band's publicist in Los Angeles, declined comment.

Japanese royalty to make historic visit to countries

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko will tour Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia in September in what will be the first visit by a Japanese emperor to other Asian nations, a spokesman said.

The Imperial Household Agency declined to say whether he would address Japan's wartime role during the tour.

Anti-Japanese feelings—ingered in many Asian nations—brutalized by Japan's Imperial Army.

When South Korean President Roh Tae-woo visited Japan last year, Akihito, the son of the wartime emperor Hirohito, expressed regret for Japan's World War II occupation of Korea.

Akihito's tour is to begin Sept. 26 and last about 10 days. He visited the three countries while he was Crown Prince.

Kuniko Inoguchi, a professor of international politics at Sophia University, said that the symbolic nature of the trip, and the reactions of the Japanese people and a new direction in Japanese foreign relations.

"It is important to express sincerely toward Asian nations that have borne the burden of history," she said.

Radioactive cat may have been mouse

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Just because a cat box filler tripped a radiation alarm at a landfill doesn't mean there's a radioactive cat loose in Berkeley, a veterinarian and state health official said.

"Everyone's been cracking jokes and looking for a radioactive cat," said veterinarian Charles Berger. "But that's just an assumption. It's far more likely that the material came from some sort of lab that was using it on rodents, or who knows what."

"Just because the litter is often used for cats doesn't mean that it was a cat," he said.

Each of a city garbage truck that got off a radiation alarm last week turned up a pile of cat box filler with traces of the radioactive isotope iodine 131. It is used to treat overactive thyroids, common in older cats.

The initial theory that a radiated cat was at large became national news. The small amount of radiation would not endanger the public, but it had a certain irony since Berkeley is a hotbed of anti-nuclear activism. Johnny Carson quipped about it on his NBC show Wednesday night.

Berkeley City Manager Michael Brown was not laughing.

"The presence of that stuff in our garbage truck violates the national waste law and state law as well," Brown said. "We want to know who did it."

City and state health officials are looking into the possibility that an animal other than a cat may have excreted the radioactive material, said Ed Bailey, chief of the radiology division of the state Department of Health Services. But they haven't given up on looking for a cat, he said.

beaches, the author has created a fictional 100-foot-long squid that makes the great white shark seem relatively innocuous.

"This animal is off the scale," Benchley told USA Weekend about "Beast," a novel due out next month. "Squid live in deep water off the East Coast and can grow to 50 feet."

"Beast" raises environmental questions about out-of-balance oceans in which sperm whales, the giant squid's only predator, have been thinned by commercial whaling.

As the squid population grows, the food supply is depleted and begins to travel in search for food: human food, in Benchley's fertile mind.

Would a giant squid attack a beach the way a great white shark might? "The likelihood of being nibbled by a squid while swimming is, to say the least, slender," Benchley said.

Touring rock group hopes for aura of Woodstock

PHOENIX (AP) — Alternative rockers Jane's Addiction said their summer "Lollapalooza" concert series will begin July 18 in Phoenix and feature such backups as Ice-T and Sissie and the Banshees.

The tour, billed as a "caravaning summer festival," is the brainchild of lead singer Perry Farrell and drummer Stephen Perkins.

Other July dates include three shows in California and a concert in Seattle. The festival lineup includes Living Colour, Nine Inch Nails, Butthole Surfers and the Rollins Band.

Besides the music, the festival event will offer an art show, a concession stand serving exotic foods and boogie-dishing-up controversial and conflicting ideas, said Def American Recordings, which is representing the tour.

Promoters hope the concert can capture the spirit of Woodstock and counter-culture concerts of the past.

Perkins said in a recent edition of "Spin" magazine that the tour will probably be the last for his Los Angeles-based band.

Marilyn says Quayles not worried about the water

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Marilyn Quayle says she's not worried about the quality of drinking water at the vice president's residence in Washington.

"We don't drink bottled water," the wife of Vice President Dan Quayle said in an interview Thursday. "We drink from the tap."

Water at the White House and other residences of President Bush and his wife, Barbara, lived in over the years is being tested for toxins because of the unusual coincidence that the Bushes developed Graves' disease.

The couple lived in the vice presidential mansion when Bush was vice president during the Reagan administration. Mrs. Quayle said it was worth checking the water—and she assumed "it will be OK."

"We've had people calling us saying you'd better check your water," said Mrs. Quayle, who was in North Carolina to speak at the 20th annual convention of the National Association for Search and Rescue.

"I'm not worried about the president at all," she said. "He's doing great. I don't worry about Dan assuming the presidency. Of course, we don't want anything to happen to the president."

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

Retired drinkers
Q. What proportion of people over 60 are "problem drinkers"?

A. Maybe 10 percent. That's suggested by one study. Statistics are untrustworthy, though. So many retired people don't have to answer to anyone that heavy drinkers among them create a hidden group of unknown size.

Gets mighty hot in Siberia. More than 100 degrees F. sometime!

Q. Which is the fiercest fighter, the female tiger or the male?

A. Female, evidently. When she has a litter, the male often tries to kill the cubs. But can't. Not with her there.

You'll never guess who invented the mimeograph. Yes, you will. Thomas A. Edison.

WESTERN SUNRIS?
Fix that! "You said westbound jet pilots sometimes see the sunrise in the west. Please note, they only see it at the sun that way when they fly at a latitude above 65 degrees north, say over Alaska.

A giraffe will drink water about once a week. Remarkable how generations adjust to their environments. If the giraffe were native to rain country, it'd probably need 10 drinks a day, what?

Q. What was the name of that tavern in Deadwood, S.D., where Wild Bill Hickok was murdered?

A. "Number Ten Saloon."

An Irish expert named Brian Debruffin has contended the Irish generally have more English and French genes than Celtic.

Stock market continues week-long roll with record high close

NEW YORK—The stock market, on a week-long roll, climbed to record highs Friday amid increasing hopes for a turnaround in the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 27.05 points to 3,027.50, surpassing its closing peak of 3,004.46 it reached on April 17.

For the week the average gained 113.59 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 2 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, which closed up 1.06 up, 514 down and 459 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 232.05 million shares, against 234.44 million in the previous session. Nationwide, commercial volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 275.42 million shares.

Hopes were spread on Wall Street over the past week that a recovery from the recession might be gathering momentum.

The Commerce Department reported Friday that the index of leading economic indicators increased 0.6 percent in April, on top of an upward-revised 0.7 percent gain the month before.

That made it three months in a row of higher readings for the index, which is designed to detect future economic trends.

A separate report issued Friday showed a 1.8-percent rise in factory orders for April.

Analysts said the statistics lent new credence to talk of a recovery, which has been encouraged of late by signs of improving conditions in the housing market.

Stocks of industrial companies with close links to the ups and downs of the business cycle took a leading role in the advance for the third straight session.

Commercial Paper rose 2 to 7/8%; Georgia-Pacific 2 1/2 to 7/8%; General Motors 3/4 to 47/8; Ford Motor 3/4 to 5/8; DuPont 3/4 to 4 1/4; and Dow Chemical 1 to 5/8.

At the same time, money seemed to move away from consumer and pharmaceutical stocks that have long been popular as "recession-resistant."

Merck fell 1/8 to 11 1/8; Bristol-Myers Squibb 1/4 to 8 1/4; Kelllogg 3/4 to 9 1/4; Coca-Cola 3/4 to 5 1/4; and Campbell Soup 1/4 to 7 1/4; while Morris was unchanged at 6 1/4.

Among other perceived beneficiaries of improving economic conditions, airline stocks were broadly higher. United climbed 1/4 to 54 1/2; AMR 3/4 to 6 1/4; and Delta Air Lines 3/4 to 7 3/4.

As measured by the Wilshire Associates' Index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $25.99 billion, or 0.70 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all listed common stocks gained 1.49 to 111.92.

Standard & Poor's Industrial Index rose 3.77 to 464.98, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.87 at 389.83.

The NASDAQ composite index, for the over-the-counter market added 2.92 to 506.11.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 371.99, up 2.20.

Jason Guerrero, Boise, was awarded the verdict over George Knaup in the 60-pound class for 10-year-olds.

Vikings-Walker contract talk seems headed for arbitration

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Herschel Walker and the Minnesota Vikings are having more than a little problem in their contract negotiations. They're having 1,250,000 big problems — equaling the number of dollars the two sides are apart in determining the running back's base salary. And because they apparently won't get together, both sides say the issue is headed for arbitration. "That's the likely next course," Vikings vice president Jeff Diamond said Friday. Said Walker's agent, Peter Johnson: "We have tried for some time now to resolve our dispute. We were unable to do that. Both sides feel it's best to have an arbitrator do that." An arbitration hearing probably won't take place for at least a month. Diamond said he expects that a ruling would be made before training camp begins on July 22. # Riley's a Knick

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pat Riley, who found virtually nothing but success with the Los Angeles Lakers, will face a tougher challenge Friday as coach of the New York Knicks.

Dave Checketts, president of the Knicks, announced Riley's hiring after three weeks of speculation following the resignation of John MacLeod to go to Notre Dame. Sources said Riley, who worked as an analyst for NBC this season, was given a five-year contract for approximately $6 million, plus incentives.

"I missed the fire-down-on-the-floor," Riley said of his one-year hiatus from coaching. "I tried to get over it, but Dave made it too hard for me to get over."

Riley said he knew on Nov. 3, when he worked for NBC at a Spurs-Lakers game, that he would miss coaching too much to stay away from it.

"I realized in the last year, although I felt good about my job with NBC, that I would miss being down on the floor with a team. That desire put me here today."

Riley won four championships and made three other trips to the NBA Finals with the Lakers from 1982-1990.

He is the sixth coach in seven years to be the Knicks, who haven't advanced past the second round of the playoffs since winning the NBA title in 1973.

This year, they were 21-20 at Madison Square Garden and were swept by Chicago in the first round.

"Magic will return to the Garden, not the player, but the team," Checketts said. "Pat Riley is acknowledged as the coach of the '80s, and there is no better coach to lead the Knicks into the '90s."

Riley's regular-season percentage of .733 in nine years with the Lakers is the best in NBA history and he was the Red Auerbach won 99 playoff games in 20 seasons with the Boston Celtics.

Riley said he would have left NBC for no other coaching job.

"In my 23 years as a player with the Lakers and a coach, there never was a bigger game for me than when I came to the Garden," Riley said.

"I hope to create that environment in New York again. I've been in California for 23 years and it wasn't an easy decision for me to leave. But this is a great challenge for all of us."

Much of the speculation concerning the Knicks' search for a coach centered whether Riley would accept working under Checketts and Eric Grunfeld, the director of player personnel.

Three other coaches — Doug Collins, Tom Sanders of the University of Texas and Knicks assistant Paul Silas — were interviewed for the job, but Checketts left no doubt that it was Riley the Knicks wanted.

"Dave and Eric are in charge of the New York Knicks," Riley said. "This job isn't about power and influence. It's about fitting in with a system. We'll go ahead and make decisions, but we'll make the decision based on what is best for the Knicks."

Riley, who will continue to work for NBC during the NBA Finals, which start

Pat Riley, who took the Los Angeles Lakers to four NBA championships, says he missed 'the fire down on the floor' during his year as an NBC broadcaster.

Sunday said when he begins work for the Knicks, "we will start forming a philosophy and a system that will be successful."

"I said he was looking forward to working with Knicks center Patrick Ewing, who recently has been unhappy with his contract and the team's lack of success."

"I don't think Patrick is discontented," Riley said. "He's a warrior who wants to win. His competitiveness is the same as Magic Johnson's and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's."

Riley was reluctant, however, to discuss the rest of the Knicks' players until he gets to know them.

"I have to understand the players and they have to understand me," he said.

"If a player wants to win, he will get into the spirit of what it takes to win. That's more powerful than anything they can get back from the game."

Asked what kind of team he wanted, he said, "I want to run and pick up at halfcourt, and I'll try to find players who fit into that."

Sports fixer sat behind UNLV bench

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Convicted sports fixer Richard Perry had seats directly behind the UNLV bench in the Rebels' basketball game with Florida State last December, a newspaper reported Friday.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal published a photo of Perry sitting behind the UNLV bench at the Florida State game, Dec. 22. The shot was one of 26 given to Nike shoe representative Sonny Vaccaro, who was not named in the newspaper report.

Vaccaro said Thursday he gave the seats to either UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian or the coach's friend, casino boss Mike Toney.

Tarkanian said he didn't know Perry was at the game, and that it would not be fair to link him to Perry's presence at the game because the seats were in Vaccaro's name.

Tarkanian said he was offended and was angry "I can't even see straight."

Sunday, the Review-Journal published two photos of Perry with former UNLV players Anderson Hunt, David Butler and Moses Scurry, who were members of the 1990 national championship team. The photos were believed to have been taken before that season.

Tarkanian noted he had warned his players since 1989 to stay away from Perry, and has told Perry not to associate with the players.

Meanwhile, the newspaper reported the University of Nevada Board of Regents would meet in an executive personnel session Monday to discuss the UNLV basketball program.

Recent revelations about Perry are expected to top the agenda.

Tarkanian's contract says he cannot be dismissed unless he knowingly commits a major NCAA violation. UNLV interim athletic director Dennis Finfleck said Thursday that school officials were unaware of any violations that would warrant the dismissal of Tarkanian, who has coached the Rebels since 1973.

Some regents expressed growing concern over Perry, who was convicted in

Detmer, BYU deny knowledge of football card

The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Although he has year of eligibility left, BYU's Heisman Trophy winning quarterback Ty Detmer had made his first appearance on a professional football card — much to his and his school's consternation.

Sports card collectors scurried to paid $8 to $9 for the card, the Desert News reported Friday.

The Pro Set card company, based in Dallas, announced the card in its November preview year's Heisman Trophy winner as part of its NFL set. In keeping with that tradition, this year's card No. 37 depicts Detmer.

The problem: most Heisman Trophy winners go right into the pro ranks. Detmer, who won the trophy as a junior, has another season in the collegiate ranks. Living Detmer appear in the commercial set, making money for a profitmaking venture, could be construed as a violation of NCAA rules, BYU officials say.

Chris Widmair, a New York-based public relations spokesman for Pro Set, said the company was using Detmer's image in the card set can be compared to his picture appearing in a newspaper or magazine.

"From what I understand, Pro Set has no plans to pull the cards," he told The Associated Press.

Widmair referred further questions to Lud Demery, Pro Set's president. Demery was in a meeting late Friday afternoon and did not immediately return a call.

Detmer and BYU say they knew nothing of Pro Set's plans to put out a Detmer card. Detmer said he got a letter some time ago from a card company, asking permission to include him in a set. He didn't remember the name of the company.

"I just threw it away because I didn't think they could do that," he said.

No baseball pros eligible for Olympics

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major-league baseball players will not be allowed to play in the Olympics for many years, officials said Friday during a conference on the international areas of the sport.

The International Baseball Association does not allow any players with professional baseball experience — including the minor leagues — to play on Olympic teams. Stephen Greenberg, the major leagues' deputy commissioner, and Bob Smith, president of the International Baseball Association, said they didn't think there would be a change soon.

"I don't see it in 1996, certainly, or on the immediate horizon," Greenberg said. "Over a period of time, there may be a groundswell for that."

The International Olympic Committee allows governing bodies to establish eligibility rules in their own sports. Baseball, a demonstration sport in 1984 and 1988, becomes a medal sport at the Barcelona Games in 1992.

The IBA, composed of amateur groups, spent many years lobbying for Olympic status. Smith said the amateur groups won't give up their control.

"I doubt very seriously if that will happen soon," Smith said. "The people who worked hard for their birthright are not going to give it up."

Both basketball and tennis have been opened up to professional players in the Olympics.

George Anderson, general manager of the Australian Baseball League, complained that Australian players in the minor leagues are ineligible for the Olympics.

"Currently we have eight players in the States, and in Australia we have another sixteen," with no experience, Anderson said. "One could argue that the best twenty players are not eligible for the Olympic team."

There will be eight countries at the Barcelona Games and baseball officials are pushing for 12 at the 1996 Games in Atlanta. Frank DeLeon, president of Major League Baseball International Partners, said he would personally lobby Billy Payne, the leader of Atlanta's Olympic effort.

John Feig, director of international relations for the Chinese-Taipei Baseball Association, said his federation had promised bonuses of $400,000 per player if they win the gold medal at Barcelona.

The two-day conference, which included officials from 14 countries, was held to discuss the international marketing of baseball with the assistance of the major leagues.

College football needs to tighten belt, panel says

The Associated Press

DALLAS — The College Football Association opened its 15th annual meeting Friday with a panel of presidents, athletic coaches and athletic directors that they face tightening budgets and stricter academic requirements in the 1990s.

Haskell Monroe, chancellor of the University of Missouri, told his audience that one certain trend is "tight money. Athletic departments have just about reached the point where it's difficult to raise any more money. Budgets will be tight."

Monroe said in the '90s there "will be more concern for balanced budgets and graduation rates."

A Kenneth Eise, president of Southern Methodist University, agreed, saying "there is concern for academic integrity. We shouldn't be admitting students unless they can graduate and stay on the academic eligibility path. We should put our horses in order."

Robert W. Lawless, president of Texas Tech University, and E. Roger Sayers, president of the University of Alabama, echoed their colleagues' thoughts.

Sutton maintains hot streak at Kemper Open

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — Hal Sutton shot a 65 on Friday to reach the halfway point of the Kemper Open at 11-under 131, a tournament record, and one strike ahead of Greg Norman and Billy Auld.

Sutton, tying for his first tournament victory since 1986, had three birdies and an eagle over the final seven holes. He has 10 birdies and just one bogey in two 36-hole rounds in the 6,904-yard TPC at Avalon course.

Norman, who started on the back nine, had eight birdies in a round of 65. But he missed a chance to share the lead when he hit into the rough on No. 7 and took a bogey.

Finishing around six hours after Sutton and Norman, Andrade shot a 64 to tie a tournament record held by several golfers. He had an eagle and two birdies over the first five holes, then returned after a 47-minute lightning delay to get four birdies over the last six holes.

Tyson promises to 'kill' Ruddock

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Donovan "Razor" Ruddock trained instead of fought Friday, which was OK with Mike Tyson.

"This has been the best thing for him is to stay in training and train hard," Tyson said. "I'm going to kill this guy."

Tyson got together with promoter Don King to hype his June 28 rematch with Ruddock, but Ruddock, training in Florida, was a no-show on his end of the scheduled satellite exchange.

King, as usual, wasn't at a loss for words, but Tyson toned down his rhetoric considerably from exchanges earlier this month when he called Ruddock a transvestite and questioned his sexual preferences.

Still, Tyson made it clear there was no love lost between the heavyweights.

"To be honest with you, I totally have no respect for Razor Ruddock as an individual," Tyson said.

The on-again, off-again, rematch is apparently on again, despite looming negotiations for a fight between Tyson and undisputed champion Evander Holyfield as well as newly Nevada boxing officials to bar Murad Muhammad, Ruddock's promoter, from the fight.

Evander Holyfield and his handlers don't want to fight Tyson, King claimed. "The deal is they don't want the fight."

In the next breath, however, King announced the World Boxing Council had set June 8 as a date for pure bide for the fight, and had agreed to give Holyfield a 60-40 cut in purse instead of the standard 75-25.

"Holyfield's drawing ability is virtually nil," King said. "Mike Tyson will be the attraction in that fight."

Mike Tyson

Tyson said his training for Ruddock was interrupted only briefly by King's announcement last week that the fight would be cancelled so Tyson could meet Holyfield.

King changed his mind a few days later, however, and the fight was back on.

"I took three days off," the former champion said. "I'm happy to take a couple of days off."

Tyson said he expected Ruddock to switch styles from what he displayed in their March 18 fight, which Tyson won when referee Richard Steele made a controversial call to stop the bout in the seventh round.

In that fight, Ruddock rocked Tyson on several occasions, although he took a beating to do so.

"I'm looking for him to run around with pitty-pat jobs?" Tyson said.

Man who beat Sugar Ray will defend title

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Terry Norris, the answer to a trivia question, is fighting for more recognition.

Norris, who is best known as the man who finally sent Sugar Ray Leonard into permanent retirement, defends his World Boxing Council super welterweight title Saturday night against former champion David Cunneen.

Their bout is also a title doubleheader that also features World Boxing Association welterweight champion Meldrick Taylor against unbeaten Luis Garcia.

Norris, 27, 3 with 14 knockouts, said the turning point of his career was in that third loss, when he was knocked out by Julian Jackson in the second round of their bout in July 1989. "That was one of the best learning experiences of my life," Norris recalled. "Everybody knows I should have beaten Julian Jackson, but I got cocky and took a shot and went down."

"I thought I was invincible, but that taught me that I could be hurt. I used to have a tendency to relax; now I don't let myself."

Norris comes from a boxing family. His father, Orlin Sr., was a semi-pro fighter in Texas in the late 1960s on a new works his son's corner. Norris' brother, Orlin Jr., is a promising heavyweight.

Although their father was a boxer, Terry said their mother, Emily, was actually the one who started both him and his brother in the ring. "She put us in a Boys Club program back in Lubbock, Texas," he said. "We lived in a rough neighborhood and she wanted to keep us out of trouble."

Norris is a big fan of his brother, who is one year older. Despite the fact he laughingly admits they had plenty of fights of their own when they were growing up.

"Those little scuffles made us the best of friends, actually brought us closer," he said. "I think he usually came out on top ... But since he may read this, I'll just say I usually beat him up."

Man who beat Sugar Ray will defend title

Norris, a 23-year-old from Lubbock, Texas, will be making the third defense of the crown he took with a first-round knockout of John Mugabi in March 1990.

Norris won a 12-round decision over Rene Jaquet of France last July, then decisively glided in 12 rounds, knocking Leonard down twice, in February. "That was one of the great moments of my life," said Norris, who handed Leonard only the second loss of his 18-month reign over the title.

"I knew beating him would make me one of the best in the world."

"A lot changed after that fight. I think people started to respect me as a champion after that. A lot of people still don't know who I am, but I'm getting there."

"I need to win this fight and I

Age catches up with Connors

PARIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors turned back the clock with a dramatic display of guts and gameness at the French Open Friday before surrendering to exhaustion and a player's half game.

With a packed center-court crowd roaring in glee, the 33-year-old warrior overcame a stiff back to tie his third-round match against Michael Chang at two sets apiece.

But then, drained of energy and playing only on instinct, Connors pulled out after just one point of the fifth set and habitat of the court.

"I'm sorry, I did all I could. I just can't play anymore," Connors told umpire Bruno Rebeuh after 3 hours, 38 minutes of play. "Believe me, if I could stay out here and play, I would."

Connors, who has played sparingly in the last three years and is splitting his time here between the courts and the television booth, had to be helped up the stairs to the locker room by trainer Bill Norris.

Norris said he then gave Connors an intravenous solution of sodium, potassium and saline to prevent cramping.

"To be honest with you, I feel awful," Connors said at a postmatch news conference. "I was run ragged for four hours. My back is stiff. But it was fun."

Connors, who lost six straight games in the third set when his back started hurting, appeared to be finished when Chang broke his serve to tie the fourth set at 4-4.

But, stalking the court like a wounded bear, Connors broke right back for a 5-4 lead.

He wove his racket as if to say he was through and stumbled toward the umpire's chair. But he was greeted by a standing ovation and headed back on the court, appearing a bit disoriented after dumping some water on his head.

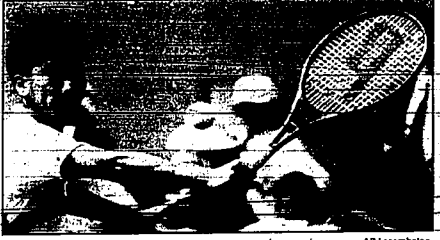

Somewhat, he won the next game to take the set 6-4. The game included several amazing shots, including a ball that hit the net and rolled over, as Connors seemed to be performing magic tricks.

"To play for the fun of it," he said. "To get the stadium rocking like that is a kick like you can't believe."

Chang, 19, who was not born when Connors won his first pro tournament in January 1972, was the French Open champion two years ago and is the 10th seed in this year's event.

"I had a great night going there and win the fourth set. He pulled that one out. That's Jimmy Connors," he said. "He gets all his energy from his gut."

While the Connors-Chang clash

At top, Jimmy Connors talks with the judge before abandoning his match at the beginning of the fifth set. Above, Michael Chang was his usual stoic self during the match.

I have ever played, the best I have ever hit the ball."

Among the women, second seed Steffi Graf, fourth seed Mary Joe Fernandez and fifth seed Arantxa Sanchez Vicario won in straight sets. Katerina Maleeva seeded 11th, lost to Elena Reinach of South Africa.

The Connors-Chang match was a dramatic contrast of styles and personalities. Connors, blistered with the crowd and clowned with ball boys, while the stoic Chang tried not to notice.

A panting Connors cajoled toward the stands after a long first set point, his tongue wagging in exhaustion. "Bonjour, Madame," he blurted out, handing a shocked woman the ball.

Connors continually joked with old rival Ion Tiriac, sitting in a corner box. He mimicked the ball boys and chided his racket after misses.

When a portable phone rang near the court, he instructed umpire Rebeuh: "Tell me, just why I'm being so excited."

Chang, meanwhile, went about the business of tennis.

"Sometimes it's difficult not to laugh when Jimmy does what he does," he said. "I was aware of it, but it didn't bother me."

The difference between the two players extended to the visitors' box, where Chang's parents sat in shock as Connors rallied to win the fourth set and the crowd around them rose in excitement.

Connors' friends drank beer and cheered wildly at his points. Chang's brother, Carl, Dreck Perrier and calmly said, "Nice shot, Michael."

The Connors set also helped buy time for the 20-year veteran, who missed stalling to new heights as he battled for a few extra seconds of rest between points.

Connors, moving Chang all over the court and jumping on the teenager's second serves, needed 45 minutes to win the first set 6-4. He then fought off two set points before Chang won the second set 7-5.

Connors took a 2-0 lead in the third set but a sore back and six games later, had lost it to Chang. He took a 2-0 lead again in the fourth set and held his serve until the eighth game, when the final drama began.

"I'm just out there trying to give the fans what they paid to come and see. That's the best tennis I can play," he said. "Unfortunately, I broke down."

"It's like a young gun. I've just been through about four engines, that's all."

San Diego sends Santiago to the bench

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Benito Santiago, the All-Star catcher who made headlines by himself throwing from his knees, was benched for not using his feet. Or his arm, for that matter.

San Diego Padres manager Greg Maddux yanked Santiago after four innings of Tuesday's game against the Houston Astros for lack of hustle, and said the catcher would sit out Friday night's game.

Santiago halfheartedly ran out a fourth-inning grounder, reaching base only because he started firing. Yelding's throwing error.

In the top half of the inning, Santiago didn't even challenge Yelding when he stole second.

Tom Lamkin, who replaced Santiago, has an RBI and a key three-run inning and the Padres went on to win 4-0.

Riddock said the benching was "an accumulation of incidents." "If you don't want to hustle, we put someone else in there," Riddock said. "It's just sending a message, that's all."

"We just won the game, let's talk about that," Riddock said, trying to change subjects. "Let's don't pick out the one little negative thing and dwell on that. We just won a ballgame."

Indeed, the victory snapped a four-game losing streak. But the incident, however small to Riddock, certainly doesn't help Santiago's assertion that the Padres erred by not giving him the four-year, $17-million contract he wanted.

Prior to his Feb. 8 arbitration hearing, Santiago rejected a four-year deal worth $11 million. He asked for $2.5 million for this season, but lost his arbitration case and will make $1.65 million.

Although he said he would leave the Padres when he is eligible to become a free agent after the 1992 season, Santiago seemed to put his contract squabble behind him. He worked hard during spring training and had a good start to the season.

But he has slumped to .232, with five homers and 23 RBIs.

his great, to tell you the truth," Melville said.

"If Benito doesn't want to hustle, then he should sit. I think Benito probably just had a lapse, and I think everyone has lapses."

Three weeks ago, Montreal Expos manager Buck Rodgers was asked to compare Santiago to the Expos' catcher, Gilberto Reyes.

Rodgers, a former major-league catcher, said he thought Santiago had become lazy behind the plate.

"He's living off his reputation," Rodgers said. "Ever since the guys in the media made a big deal about him throwing off his knees, he lost all his fundamentals. He would have to start all over again from A-B-C."

"He fell in love with his routine, reputation. I don't mind the media writing about it, but Santiago has to be smart enough to know it's just words written on paper."

Santiago started throwing from his knees in 1988. His percentage of throwing out baserunners, both over and under the knee, has declined ever since. This season he has thrown out 13 of 35 runners, 37 percent.

Charles puts glasses on, finds putting stroke

SCARBOROUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Bob Charles switched his putting fortunes on Friday at the NYNEX Commemorative.

Charles shot a 6-under 64, tying him with Rocky Thompson, the first of a small Texas crowd, for the major lead in the Seniors event.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, who leads with Senior Tour with four victories and $400,333, was a stroke behind at 65 along with Billy Casper, Bruce Crampton, Walt Zembriski, and Bob Belley.

Defending champion Lee Trevino had a 66 after arriving in New York at 3 a.m. Friday. He was in the Texas the night before to attend the high-school graduation of his daughter, Troy.

Trevino also, pushed his final putt on the 18th green to avoid the heavy rains which suspended play for 1 hour, 45 minutes on the par-70, 6,545-yard Sleepy Hollow Country Club. After a 66 by Ralph Terry, the New York Yankee pitcher, Chuck Workman, Bob Young, Dale Jack-

Estill follows tip to lead

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Rookie Michelle Estill not only made the cut, for a change, she held the second-round lead at the LPGA Rochester International.

Estill, who has missed the cut in nine of 12 tournaments this year, shot her second straight 4-under-par 68 Friday to lead veterans Chris Johnson, Beth Daniel and Colleen Walker by one stroke.

Estill, who joined the tour in October, had five birdies and one bogey over the 6,162-yard Locust Hill Country Club course.

The 28-year-old Scotsdale, Ariz. native was nine under after 16 holes, but three-putted for par on 17 and missed a 12-foot par putt on 18 after hitting into a bunker and barely getting on the green. Three-putting on 17 "was the biggest disappointment of the year," she said. "I got all excited about hitting a 66."

After missing the cut last week at the Corning Classic, Estill said she changed to a 19-finger grip and took some tips from a pro on concentrating on distance and speed. So far, it's working.

Daniel, Johnson and Walker were one stroke in front of Guy Rarick, Trish Johnson and Rosie Jones.

Commemorative in 1988 and 1989.

"Last week's tournament (Bell Atlantic Classic in Malvern, Pa.) was the worst by far of my career. I couldn't putt sideways, frontways, backwards, upways ... anyway at all."

Charles finished tied for 27th last week with rounds of 73-75-72—220, 10 over par.

"That was the end of the contact lenses."

Charles' problem has been aiming the putter on the green," said Charles, who's had 16 victories including one this year in five seasons on the Senior Tour.

"I have become more and more aware of the problem in recent months, but my eyes are not deteriorating as I thought they were."

"Still, it was disturbing, not to be able to line up your putter with the line you want to follow. So I went back to my glasses. I've been wearing them for 19 years and I still don't see a thing. I can't get a thing enough break to get used to contacts. That takes at least a month."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars."
 — Oscar Wilde.

Give today's hand to a duplicate player and it's odds-on that he will go down. Give it to a seasoned rubber-bridge player and the odds shift the other way.

Playing for the maximum number of tricks, the duplicate player wins the spade lead, draws trumps and takes a losing club finesse. Back comes a diamond and the result is poor. The defenders get two diamonds and two clubs for down one, all because of the importance of an overtrick.

At rubber bridge, it's a different story. Here's how Mary Williams of Leander, Texas, played safely for 10 tricks at the Houston Rubber Bridge Studio.

After winning the first spade with her queen, Mary cashed dummy's club ace, drew trumps and capped the king and ace of spades. Then she led a low club toward dummy, ducking completely when West played the jack. West was now employed.

If he led a spade, Mary would enjoy a ruff and discard. If he led diamonds, Mary's king would make.

Had East overtaken the club jack to shift to diamonds, West would have been saved from the endplay but only at the cost of the sitting club trick.

And what if West had started with K-J-10 of clubs? Then Mary would have lost a 30-point overtrick — a small price to pay for making the game.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"We are all in the gutter, but some of us are looking at the stars."
— Oscar Wilde.

Give today's hand to a duplicate player and it's odds-on that he will go down. Give it to a seasoned rubber-bridge player and the odds shift the other way.

Playing for the maximum number of tricks, the duplicate player wins the spade lead, draws trumps and takes a losing club finesse. Back comes a diamond and the result is poor. The defenders get two diamonds and two clubs for down one, all because of the importance of an overtrick.

At rubber bridge, it's a different story. Here's how Mary Williams of Leander, Texas, played safely for 10 tricks at the Houston Rubber Bridge Studio.

After winning the first spade with her queen, Mary cashed dummy's club ace, drew trumps and cashed the king and ace of spades. Then she led a low club toward dummy, ducking completely when West played the jack. West was now employed.

Had East overtaken the club jack to shift to diamonds, West would have been saved from the endplay but only at the cost of the setting club trick.

And what if West had started with K-J-10 of clubs? Then Mary would have lost a 30-point overtrick — a small price to pay for making the game.
