USSR gains $1.5 billion in food credit

Knight-Ridder News Service
WASHINGTON — President Bush on Tuesday agreed to extend $1.5 billion in agricultural credits to the Soviet Union so it can buy U.S. grain and other farm goods to ease its crippling food shortage.
Bush, under pressure from farm-state lawmakers and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, coupled the move with an offer to send U.S. agricultural experts to Moscow to help reform the failing Soviet food distribution system.
"The president's decision reflects the administration's desire to promote a continued positive evolution in the U.S.-

Soviet relationship," said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater. "In particular, we hope that this assistance will help stabilize the food situation in that country."
Bush himself had raised questions about Soviet creditworthiness in light of its economic turmoil, but White House officials said Bush eventually concluded that it was more important to help the beleaguered Gorbachev.
The $1.5 billion will be available in three installments: $600 million this month, $500 million in October and $400 million in February.
Fitzwater said there were no conditions that the Soviets must meet to ensure the additional installments. He said the payments were staggered to meet the availability of funds in the Commodity Credit Corporation account.

The Soviets have assured the administration that the grain would be distributed fairly among the republics, including the Baltic states, Fitzwater said.
U.S. experts sent to Moscow last month concluded that the Soviet Union has an adequate food supply but that its convoluted distribution system is preventing goods from reaching the public.
Nevertheless, administration officials decided that food shortages could worsen without U.S. aid. Much of the grain bought with the credits is expected to be used for livestock and poultry.

Bush granted $1 billion in agricultural credits in December, but they were used up quickly. Under the credit system, the administration guarantees U.S. farmers that the government will pay for the grain purchases if the Soviets fail to do so.
Bush's move comes as the two superpowers are preparing for a Moscow summit, perhaps in late July, that is expected to focus on economic cooperation.
Bush is expected soon to recommend granting the Soviet Union most-favored-nation trade status.

Senator's ex-wife Fran battles back, makes new life in Boise

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer
BOISE — She moved from the Washington Beltway to the Boise Greenbelt and traded the National Symphony for the Boise Philharmonic.
Fran Symms, divorced last year from Republican U.S. Sen. Steve Symms, quietly has built a new life. Now, with the senator about to reappear in the public eye, she finds herself once again in the public eye.
In a pair of interviews recently, she talked about herself, about her marriage and about persistent questions regarding circumstances behind the breakup.
"There are a lot of women in my generation who find themselves in this position," the 53-year-old Symms said over a cup of tea at her kitchen table. "A lot of us find ourselves, pretty much after we've raised our children, charting a new course."
"In a way, it's kind of exciting, after you get over the shock of it. It's not the traditional way you thought it would be, but yet you have to be open and make the best of it."

'She figured out what she wanted to do and handled it. She's a very strong person.'
— Bethine Church, widow of Sen. Frank Church

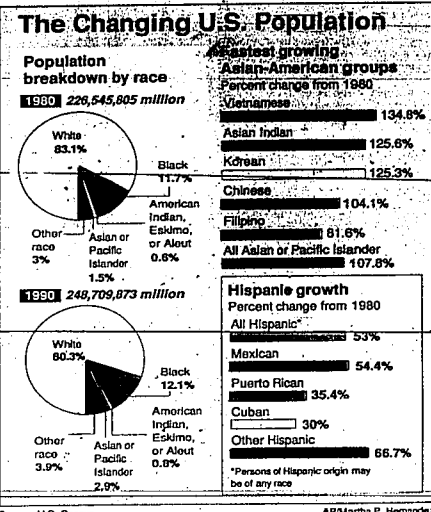

When Symms married her college sweetheart in 1959, she envisioned a life raising kids on the family fruit ranch near Caldwell. But in 1972, when Steve Symms was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, the couple joined the high society in the nation's capital.
"It was an exciting adventure," Fran Symms said. "I loved it. We just played tourist for the first few years. As long as I could convince the children to climb in the car on Saturdays, we'd go see something."
In Washington, she was a substitute teacher and private piano teacher and she participated in congressional wives' activities —

Asian-American numbers explode

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Chinese, Filipinos, Indians and Koreans led an explosive growth in the country's Asian-American population during the past decade, the Census Bureau said Tuesday.
A survey of the Chinese community more than doubled in size during the decade — to 1.6 million. The number of Filipinos grew by more than 80 percent, to 1.4 million.
The smaller Indian, Korean and Vietnamese communities each grew more than 125 percent.
Asians and Pacific Islanders were the nation's fastest-growing racial group in the 1980s, more than doubling their 1980 numbers. But at 7.3 million, they still make up only 3 percent of the national population of 248.7 million.
Most of the growth came from immigrants. And most of those immigrants settled in California, Hawaii and New York.
Along with the rapid increase in numbers have come rising expectations.
Tom Hsieh, a member of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, is campaigning to become the first Asian-American mayor of a major city. As Hsieh sees it, the time has come for the Americans of Asian descent to join the nation's leadership.
Daphne Kwok, executive director of the Organization of Chinese-Americans, said Hsieh's candidacy is an important step in getting Asians involved in politics.
Up to now, they haven't flocked to politics.

War payments create surplus

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — The United States posted its first quarterly trade surplus in nearly nine years during the first three months of the year, but only because of $27.7 billion in foreign payments for the Persian Gulf War, the government said Tuesday.
The Commerce Department said the rare $1.6 billion surplus in the current account, the broadest measure of the country's trading performance, would not have occurred without the contributions from Saudi Arabia, Japan and other countries.
However, the government noted that country's trade performance also was aided by an all-time high in U.S. export sales and a drop in imports stemming from the recession.
The Bush administration said the trade report supported its belief that strength in exports will help the country pull out of the recession.
President Bush said Tuesday that while the recession has lasted longer than he expected "a turnaround in the economy appears in the making" even though some sectors remain sluggish.
The $10.2 billion surplus in the current account followed a $23.4 billion deficit in the October-December quarter.

Navy investigates charge surrendering Iraqi troops were shot

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The U.S. Navy has launched a formal investigation into allegations that U.S. servicemen, on the second day of the Persian Gulf war, shot Iraqi soldiers as they tried to surrender to a naval combat team, Navy officials said Tuesday.
It is the first major, publicly acknowledged inquiry that the military has launched into charges of wrongdoing by U.S. military personnel serving in the Persian Gulf. International law governing the conduct of war forbids any attack on troops attempting to surrender.

According to an anonymous letter received by the Navy, U.S. troops opened fire on Iraqi soldiers occupying some of the 11 Kuwaiti-owned oil platforms in the waters of the Persian Gulf, even though the Iraqis had raised white flags of surrender as choppers and speed boats from the U.S. warship Nicholas bore down on them.

Department of Defense sources said the letter is believed to have been written by a sailor aboard the American frigate.
The Navy conducted a preliminary investigation of the allegations and found sufficient grounds June 4 to initiate a formal probe, Navy spokesman Capt. Kendall Pease said Tuesday.
The inquiry by a three-member board is to be headed by Rear Adm. Douglas J. Katz, commander of the U.S. Atlantic Command's Cruiser-Destroyer Group 2 based in Charleston, S.C.

Findings by the board "could certainly lead to recommendations for further action," Pease said. That action could include court martial proceedings against U.S. military personnel.
Five Iraqi soldiers were killed and three were wounded in the Jan. 18 raid.

Panel suggests colonizing the moon, heading for Mars

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential panel advocated on Tuesday that the United States develop nuclear-powered rockets to carry out President Bush's goal of sending astronauts to Mars early in the 21st Century.

The panel submitted four proposals to accommodate different priorities and made 14 recommendations for technological breakthroughs to carry them out.

Each proposal calls for astronauts to land on the moon in 12 to 14 years and on Mars in the years 2014 to 2016. The report did not address the costs of the various proposals.

Administration sources have put the price tag for sending eight astronauts to Mars at $400 billion to $500 billion.

"As Americans, we must ask ourselves what our role will be in man's expansion into the solar system: to lead, follow or just step aside," said Thomas P. Stafford, a four-time space traveler and retired Air Force lieutenant general, who headed the panel.

The 130-page report is the latest in a rash of studies on the future of the space program, some by NASA and others by blue-ribbon panels.

"The time has come to take action on the recommendations that are being echoed in an ever-growing volume of space studies," Stafford said.

Vice President Dan Quayle was asked what made the new study different.

"I don't think anybody's taken a serious look in terms of architecture of how to fulfill the president's stated objective in space, the moon and Mars mission," said Quayle, head of the National Space Council and the administration's point man on space.

Bush set the goal of colonizing the moon and sending an expedition to Mars in a speech on the 20th anniversary of the July 1969 Apollo landing on moon.

Stafford called building a space station a precursor to long-term planetary missions, "critical to exploration and our future in space." He said the station can "represent the transition within the U.S. space effort to a sustained presence in low Earth orbit."

A station, which would focus on how humans react to zero gravity, "would be critical to a Mars mission," said the report. But, it added, recent down sizing of the station calls the availability of such life science data into question.

"It is therefore logical to consider the concept of utilizing the moon as a preparatory environment for a Mars mission to integrate a number of key life science and operational requirements," the report said.

Stafford, however, said the station could supply "the first generation" measurements of human space physiology.

The panel, called the Synthesis Group, solicited ideas from industry and the public since it was formed 10 months ago.

Education, civil rights groups oppose national testing idea

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of national education, civil rights and advocacy groups Tuesday called on Congress to reject President Bush's plan for national testing of all American school children.

In a letter mailed to each member of Congress, the Campaign for Genuine Accountability in Education said, "We cannot simply mandate new tests and expect positive change."

"We already know the results of most tests," said Monty Neill of the National Center for Fair & Open Testing, FairTest, which initiated the letter.

On average, poor inner-city children, particularly African-American and Latino students score the lowest. The South, which remains the nation's poorest region, scores lower than other regions. Upper-income, predominantly white areas score the highest.

"We have known this for a long time, but our nation has yet to act on this knowledge."

Most of the knowledge Neill mentioned came from testing a sample of students. The administration hopes that testing every child will stimulate parents in laggard districts to demand improved performance.

Group claims Kennedy broke Senate rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservative political group Tuesday filed an ethics complaint against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., alleging that he violated Senate rules by his actions related to an investigation of a rape charge against his nephew.

The sworn complaint, which also asserted that Kennedy had failed to assist the purported victim as she screamed outside the family's Florida home, was lodged with the Senate Ethics Committee by the Conservative Campaign Fund.

Calling for appointment of an outside counsel to conduct the probe, the complaint said Kennedy may have violated: a rule prohibiting improper conduct which may reflect upon the Senate; and the Code of Ethics for Government Service, which states that government officials must uphold laws and regulations, and never be a party to their evasion.

If the committee determines the complaint meets technical requirements, the panel must notify the senator that an initial review will be conducted and invite him to respond.

Paul Donovan, spokesman for the Massachusetts Democrat, said Kennedy had no immediate comment.

Group seeks government abortion aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Planned Parenthood launched its largest campaign ever Tuesday, trying to reverse the Supreme Court's ruling upholding a government ban on abortion counseling in federally financed family planning clinics.

The campaign, estimated to cost in the range of $3 million to $5 million, is aimed at members of Congress, which is considering legislation to lift the so-called "gag rule."

"We consider this an emergency," said Faye Watleton, president of Planned Parenthood Federation of America Inc.

Pollster Louis Harris said a nationwide survey found that 78 percent of those polled support legislation to overturn the abortion counseling ban. The poll also found 92 percent "say that a doctor should tell a woman patient exactly the same information in a private office or a public clinic, and not tell her something different in each place," he said.

Watleton said the poll results "suggest that members of Congress who vote to uphold the 'gag rule' will do so at considerable risk to their political futures."

Under the rule upheld by the Supreme Court last month, physicians in federally-financed family planning clinics cannot provide counseling or referral for abortion services.

The Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee last week approved a bill that would lift the ban.

The House Energy and Commerce health subcommittee postponed its scheduled vote on a similar measure Tuesday.

Committee aides said the delay was necessary to give members time to go over an amendment that would be offered by Rep. Thomas Bliley Jr., R-Va. It would require written parental notification for girls under 18 seeking an abortion.

Cosmetic treatment dangers cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pharmaceutical companies are pushing drugs and injections to erase wrinkles and for other unapproved uses that may leave people sick and disfigured, a House panel was told Tuesday.

A House Government Operations subcommittee heard testimony from several women who said they suffered severe adverse reactions and illness from cosmetic treatments intended to make them look better.

The subcommittee on human resources focused on the use of three products — Retin A, collagen and liquid silicone — that Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said are among hundreds of drugs and medical devices that have been promoted for unapproved purposes.

Weiss, who chairs the subcommittee, said widespread use of the three products "has resulted from illegal and improper promotion" and has led to life-threatening diseases and disfigurement.

"While these risks may be acceptable if we are treating life threatening diseases like AIDS or cancer, it is much harder to justify those risks if the potential benefits are cosmetic," he said.

It is illegal for manufacturers to promote drugs for purposes other than those the Food and Drug Administration has approved for the label. However, doctors are free to use drugs for purposes beyond those on the label.

FDA Commissioner David Keiser told the subcommittee he was moving to crack down on the marketing of unapproved drug uses, such as promotional material disguised as medical literature. "We need to stop the escalation of inappropriate promotional activities and make sure that consumers, as well as health professionals, are not misled," he said.

Keiser said:

- Retin A is approved for treating acne but not for preventing wrinkles. The FDA is concerned that chronic use of Retin A "could potentially increase the risk of skin cancer."
- Collagen has been approved for certain cosmetic purposes, such as treating acne scars, but has been marketed for unapproved uses such as lip augmentation. Collagen Corp. has agreed to stop promoting this unapproved use.

Study: AIDS status may affect choices of treatments in infants

CHICAGO (AP) — Some infants with AIDS or at risk for the disease are likely being deprived of life-prolonging treatment for unrelated ailments, say researchers who surveyed 247 neonatal specialists.

One of the more disturbing findings was the number of specialists who said they would withhold certain treatments for unrelated ailments at risk for AIDS because the mothers had the disease, said lead author Betty Wolter Levin, an anthropologist with Brooklyn College in New York City.

"Some respondents said that children born to women with AIDS would have a poor quality of life whether they were infected or not, because the infant's mother would die and because the infant would have a poor social environment," Levin and colleagues wrote in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"For a health care provider to make decisions on what they perceive to be a social situation for the baby is very dangerous," Levin said. A baby whose mother is dying of AIDS may have other relatives who can provide a loving environment, she said.

"These are life-and-death decisions," she said. "Because people can live so long with HIV, they may have better quality-of-life if they do receive treatment for other conditions."

Because the survey posed hypothetical questions, there's no proof that in practice AIDS infants are not receiving appropriate treatment, Levin said.

"It suggests that it's a way that people are thinking about this, and it's likely that in fact decisions are being made this way," she said.

"The results indicate that there is indeed a potential risk," said Dr. Nancy Dickey, an AMA trustee and former member of an AMA ethics council.

Previous studies involving older AIDS patients found similar results, but this is the first survey of its kind that examined treatment choices in infants, Levin said.

Levin and two neonatologists described hypothetical situations in questionnaires given to physicians and other professionals at six New York hospitals in 1989.

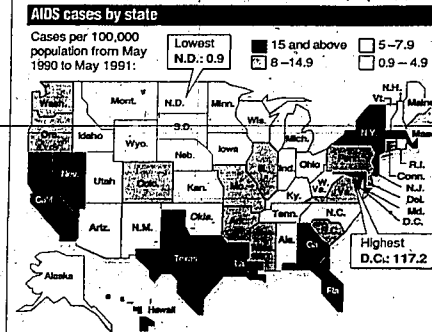

For example, participants were asked whether they would recommend cardiac surgery for an infant with a heart defect.

Ninety-seven percent said they would recommend surgery if the infant had no known AIDS risk; 77 percent would choose surgery if the infant's mother had AIDS; and only 42 percent would make the recommendation for an AIDS-infected infant.

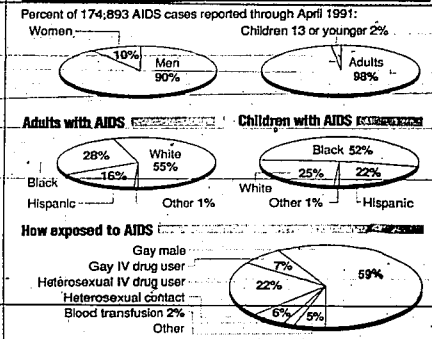

Respondents did not recommend withholding invasive treatment because they were afraid of getting AIDS, Levin said. In most cases, respondents said their recommendations were based on concerns for the infant's potential quality of life, she said.

Dr. John Lantos, associate director of the University of Chicago's Center for Clinical and Medical Ethics, said there are legitimate reasons for withholding treatment in infants facing a fatal disease.

But when the circumstances involve AIDS, the issues are more problematic, he said.

"If you had a child who at birth you knew had AIDS, and its average life expectancy was three years, and during that time they were likely to have multiple hospitalizations, you could argue that it might be in the child's best interest not to have their life prolonged," he said.

On the other hand, he said, most AIDS-infected infants got the disease from their mothers, and many end up in foster care because their parents are unable to care for them.

About one-third of infants whose mothers are infected will develop the disease, Lantos said.

In most cases involving fatal diseases, parents' wishes would play a role in treatment decisions — something this study did not address, Lantos said.

But if the parents are ill or have died from AIDS, the burden is placed on the physicians, he said.

Of the 174,893 U.S. AIDS cases reported, 3,028 have involved children, according to the CDC.

No change in military combat ban for women, says general

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's chief of staff said Tuesday he sees no reason for the military's largest service to quit banning women from combat, despite a move in Congress to lift the restriction for female pilots in the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force.

Gen. Carl Vuono, who is scheduled to retire next week after four years in the Army's top job, said he sees no "immediate change" in combat eligibility for Army women, despite the "tremendous job" they did in support roles in the Gulf War.

"I don't see any reason to recommend a change in policy," the four-star general told reporters when asked whether the congressional move regarding women pilots in the other services would prompt the Army to re-evaluate its restrictions.

"My personal view is, the exclusion of women from some specialties, based on the way we operate with those specialties, is right," Vuono said.

That position counters statements made by Army Secretary Michael Stone, who has said the Army could open combat aviator slots to hundreds of women if Congress approves the House-passed repeal of the statutory restriction applying to pilots in the other services.

The Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force barriers against combat are written into law, but the Army is governed by its own regulations on the subject. The pending legislation would leave the issue to the discretion of the services — and thus is no guarantee any would quickly change their policy.

But Pentagon officials, while reluctant to move without Congress taking the first step, have said they would "welcome" the authorization to change their policies on women. Meanwhile, support seems to be growing for the measure in the Senate.

Vuono cited "some of the physical aspects of ground combat" for keeping an all-male combat force, particularly in the infantry, field artillery and armor positions.

He said he didn't believe that "the bulk of women soldiers" would be able to deal with "some of the physical aspects of ground combat," but he declined to be more specific.

"I just think there are certain aspects of direct ground combat that, right now, I would not want to see women a part of. Not that some could not perform it," he said.

Aspin says B-2 better as conventional bomber

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said Tuesday the B-2 stealth aircraft is better suited to carrying conventional, not atomic, bombs.

But he gave little support to buying more than 15 planes.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., indicated that he might compromise on President Bush's military budget request to purchase four planes in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 and agree to two aircraft.

The service has said that the B-2 can serve as both a nuclear bomber to penetrate Soviet air defenses and a conventional bomber that can be used during a conflict such as the Persian Gulf War.

Aspin agreed that an argument can be made for the B-2 as a conventional weapon.

Aspin said a B-2 bomber, equipped with the right munitions, could conduct a raid similar to the U.S. attack on Libya in 1986. In that campaign, the United States used '84 combat aircraft and 35 support planes from two carrier battle groups and eight foreign bases.

Six B-2 bombers with the support of six tankers could carry out the same attack and be based in the United States, he said. The bombers also could be used to seek out well-defended, deep targets that the F-117A and B-52s were unable to get to in the early stages of the Gulf War, Aspin said.

Bush will fight for B-2

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (AP) — President Bush climbed into the cockpit of a B-2 bomber, inspected other stealth weaponry and then pledged on Tuesday to fight for congressional funding for more of the $864 million bombers.

"There now is no question: Stealth works and it's been proven in combat," Bush told 15 senators and other dignitaries who joined him for an inspection tour.

He also got into a single-seat F-117A, the small, angular stealth attack plane that wreaked havoc on selected targets in Baghdad during the Gulf War, as he added his words of praise to the Air Force's "stealth week" effort to build support for the radar-evading planes. The House last week voted to reject Bush's request for $3.2 billion to build four more B-2 bombers next year, though the Senate is expected to look with more favor on the planes. "I'll fight for them and I'll fight for the B-2," said Bush, who also viewed a 20-foot-long stealth cruise missile and an engineless prototype of the F-22 fighter.

Reservists head home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most military reservists in the Persian Gulf should be home by Nov. 1 at the latest, Defense Department officials said Tuesday.

About 20,000 of the 106,000 reservists and National Guardsmen who went to the gulf for Operation Desert Storm remain in the gulf, working in the demobilization.

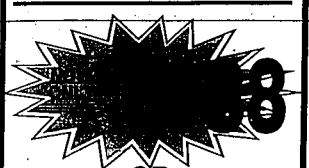

Altogether, about 228,000 reservists were called up for the war. About half went to the gulf while the rest remained in the United States or were dispatched to Europe and Asia as logistics support.

The pace of demobilization and the Pentagon's inability to give reservists dates for their return home after the war prompted a barrage of complaints to Congress. Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said reservists — and their employers — needed information so they and their families could plan their lives. Speaking of reservists in the gulf, Stephen Duncan, assistant secretary of Defense, said Tuesday that "most, if not all, should be aware of the date" for their return.

El Salvador leader seeks military aid

WASHINGTON — El Salvador President Alfredo Cristiani is opening a state visit here to press for continued U.S. military aid even though his country is closer to peace than at any time in more than a decade.

Cristiani, who was due to arrive here Tuesday evening, will discuss the peace process Wednesday morning with President Bush after a breakfast with congressional leaders.

Cristiani's government and the leftist rebels have made long strides towards a settlement, partly as a result of the guerrillas' decision to scrap their previous goal of a one-party, Marxist state. They have no quarrel with the government that multi-party democracy is the most appropriate system for El Salvador.

Columbia crew takes some time off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia's busy but chilly astronauts took some time off Tuesday to relax and gaze at the world 174 miles above Earth. Mission Control told the crew as the space shuttle flew over the Pacific Ocean toward the southern California coast on the seventh day of their biomedical research mission.

"That sounds great to us," said astronaut Tamara Jernigan. The astronauts spent much of the day doing minor repairs. They tracked down the source of the cold temperature inside the Spacelab module — a valve was in the wrong position — and fixed a pin connector on a rotating dome needed for space motion sickness tests.

Medical certification exams stolen

MILWAUKEE — Copies of a national medical certification exam were stolen from the Medical College of Wisconsin, prompting the school to cancel the test there today and possibly affecting the test nationwide, authorities said.

The exam, which is the first step to certify students to become doctors, is being given throughout the country now, said Janet Carson, general counsel for the National Board of Medical Examiners.

The test was canceled only at the Medical College site, she said, but results throughout the country could be invalidated if investigation shows the tests were distributed out of state.

Rangers find body of drowning victim

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Rangers have recovered the body of a 5-year-old boy, one of three family members who drowned in Yosemite National Park during Memorial Day weekend.

A park worker spotted the body of Lance Thomas Jr. on Monday about two miles below where the family car went into the Merced River, the National Park Service reported.

Lance, his 3-year-old brother, Mano, and their aunt Elaine Watson, 41, died after their car went into the icy Merced River. A sister and grandmother were rescued.

Probe uncovers judges' stash of cash

MIAMI — A corruption probe uncovered wads of $100 bills in the homes and offices of five present and former judges, and some of the bills had been handed out by undercover agents for judicial favors, authorities said.

The money was in sealed and initialed envelopes, tied with rubber bands, hidden in bureau drawers and even stuffed in a bathroom safe, search warrants unsealed Monday.

The 22-month investigation by Operation Crack Boom, has targeted judges who allegedly were bribed for bond reductions, suppression of evidence and disclosure of confidential police information, U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said.

Additional suspect arraigned in beating

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.Y. — A fifth suspect was arraigned Tuesday in the beating of a black teenager by a group of bat-wielding white men.

David Donahue, 18, of New York City, pleaded innocent and was held on $100,000 bail pending a June 14 hearing, said Ed Grilli, a spokesman for the Nassau County District Attorney.

Donahue, a University of Michigan student, surrendered Monday, said county police spokesman Officer Bruce Benson. He was charged with second-degree attempted murder, first-degree assault, and criminal possession of a weapon, Benson said.

Alfred Jermaine Ewell, 17, a popular high school athlete, was beaten unconscious June 1 after he talked with a white female classmate on the Atlantic Beach boardwalk.

Abortions performed without consent

ANDERSON, Ind. — A physician seduced three women and ruthlessly aborted or tried to abort their pregnancies without obtaining their consent, a prosecutor said in closing arguments Tuesday.

One of the fetuses was in its eighth-month of development when it was aborted by Dr. Pravin Thakkar, according to trial testimony.

Thakkar's actions violated a state law requiring doctors to explain an abortion and obtain a patient's written consent, said Jim Nave, a Madison County deputy prosecutor.

EPA eases radium limits in drinking water

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — More than 15 years ago, the federal government told hundreds of cities they had too much radium in their drinking water.

Now environmental officials have decided it's not as dangerous as they thought when the limits were adopted in 1975. In the meantime, some cities have spent millions of dollars on remedies they may no longer need.

An Environmental Protection Agency proposal expected to be presented this week may ease the limit on radium levels to one-eighth the current standard, said Greg Helms, a regional manager in the agency's Office of Drinking Water in Washington. The proposal will go through a lengthy review process.

The EPA estimates that more than 1,000 water systems nationwide contain more radium than currently allowed, Helms said. If the new standard is adopted, about 100 water systems would be in violation, he said.

The reduction is based on scientific studies that show radium, a natural byproduct of radioactive materials that has been linked to bone cancer, is less dangerous in drinking water than previously believed.

But that doesn't satisfy local government officials who spent money to comply with the existing standard.

"We just poured $600,000 down a rat hole," said Mayor James R. Washburn of Morris, a city of 8,800 people about 60 miles southwest of Chicago.

The city's drinking water has twice as much radium as the current EPA standard allows, but only half of what is expected to be permitted under the new regulations.

If new limits are adopted, the mayor said Morris will close its 6-week-old treatment plant addition rather than spend $40,000 a year to run it.

In Illinois alone, anti-radium projects worth an estimated $31.9 million have been completed or are being built. Projects worth an additional $10 million are planned.

Local officials have known since 1986 that the regulations with which they were asked to comply would be supplanted eventually by new rules.

But EPA officials have continued to enforce the current standards. The Morris water system was placed under restrictions that essentially shut down new-home construction until radium levels were cut.

Helms said the EPA can't stop updating its regulations, even if some towns sacrificed to meet the current rules.

"The science and information on some of these contaminants does change sometimes," he said.

EPA proposes clean gas rules for cities with pollution woes

Gasoline Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency on Tuesday proposed rules requiring cleaner-burning gasoline in cities with the worst air pollution problems.

The regulations set out detailed guidelines for a program adopted in last year's Clean Air Act to fight pollution in areas that do not meet national air-quality standards for carbon monoxide and ozone.

The ozone rules will apply in nine metropolitan areas with the worst problems: Baltimore, Chicago, Hartford, Houston, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, New York City, Philadelphia and San Diego. Other areas with high ozone levels can ask to be included.

Beginning in January 1995, retailers in those districts will be required to sell gasoline with a minimum of 2 percent oxygen, a maximum of 1 percent benzene and no heavy metals, such as lead.

Ozone, known for its protective function blocking the sun's rays in the upper atmosphere, is a pollutant at ground level, damaging lung tissue and aggravating respiratory disease.

EPA's second proposal applies to 41 metropolitan areas where carbon monoxide levels are too high. In most cases, the rules will apply only in the winter when the problem is worst. Gasoline sold in those regions must have at least 2.7 percent oxygen content on average, reducing carbon monoxide emissions by promoting more complete combustion.

Several cities, including Denver and Phoenix, have had oxygenated fuels programs for several years.

The areas affected by the carbon monoxide rules are Albuquerque, N.M., Anchorage, Alaska, Baltimore, Md., Boston-Lawrence-Salem, Mass., Chicago, Calif., Cleveland-Akron-Lorain, Ohio, Colorado Springs, Colo., Denver-Boulder, Colo., Duluth, Minn., El Paso, Texas, Fairbanks, Alaska, Fort Collins-Loveland, Colo., Fresno, Calif., Greensboro-Winston Salem-High Point, N.C., Hartford-New Britain-Middletown, Conn., Josephine County, Ore., Klamath County, Ore., Las Vegas, Nev., Los Angeles-Anaheim-Riverside, Calif., Medford, Ore., Memphis, Tenn., Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minn., Missouri, Mont., Modesto, Calif., New York, N.Y., Oshkosh, Wis., Philadelphia, Pa., Birmingham-Del-Trenton, N.J., Phoenix, Ariz., Portland, Ore.-Vancouver, Wash., Provo-Orem, Utah, Raleigh-Durham, N.C., Reno, Nev., Sacramento, Calif., San Diego, Calif., San Francisco-Oakland-San Jose, Calif., Seattle-Tacoma, Wash., Steubenville, Ohio-Weirton, W.Va., Stockton, Calif., Syracuse, N.Y., and Washington, D.C.

Retail gas prices fall for first time in weeks

NEW YORK (AP) — The price of gasoline at the pump has fallen for the first time in nearly three months, the American Automobile Association reported.

The nationwide average price for a gallon of self-serve regular unleaded dropped 0.2 cent to $1.17 for the week ended Tuesday, the auto club found in its regular survey.

Prices were higher in the Southeast and the Mid-

Atlantic and Great Lakes regions, but fell elsewhere, said the survey, which is performed by Computer Petroleum Corp. of St. Paul, Minn.

The price of gasoline had last fallen in the March 26 survey, when the self-serve regular unleaded was going for $1.089 a gallon.

Wholesale prices for gasoline have been falling since May, but so far that weakness has yet to trickle down to retail gasoline prices.

Bank to donate funds for rain forests

WASHINGTON (AP) — BankAmerica Corp. said Tuesday it plans to donate $6 million of loans to Latin American countries to be used in debt swaps for rain forest conservation.

The donations, to be made over three years, will be split between two major environmental organizations, the World Wildlife Fund and Conservation International.

This is the first time a major bank in our country has made a significant contribution of debt," said

Peter Seligmann, chairman of Conservation International.

Seligmann said his organization's first project will use $250,000 in debt owed by the Mexican government to help save Mexico's Selva Lacandona, which he also described as being "North America's largest and most threatened tropical rain forests."

In each case, the environmental organization will negotiate with the debtor country for a commitment to local currency in exchange for the debt, possibly at a discount to the debt's face value. The first projects are in Mexico and Ecuador, but other countries are likely to be involved later.

The World Wildlife Fund plans to use its first $250,000 in debt to help the Mexican states of Chiapas and Oaxaca enforce environmental laws.

Richard M. Rosenberg, chairman of BankAmerica, said the donation was "part of our commitment to specific conservation and environmental principles."

Canada, United States, Mexico open free-trade and tariff talks

TORONTO (AP) — Negotiations to create a vast, three-way North American market free of tariffs and other trade barriers open here Wednesday.

Canadian Trade Minister Michael Wilson, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills, and Mexico's secretary of commerce, Jaime Serra Puche, kick off what is expected to be a long series of negotiations to open up a market containing 360 million people with a combined output of nearly $6 trillion.

After Wednesday's opening meeting to set up the structure of the talks, actual negotiations will be conducted by chief U.S. negotiator Julius Katz, Canada's chief negotiator John Weekes, and Herminio Blanco of Mexico.

The Canadian government does not expect the benefits of a trilateral agreement to be as significant as those obtained in the bilateral deal with the United States that went into effect in January 1989. But it believes it will be a positive element and position Ottawa for future deals with a growing Mexico.

Canadian opponents of a North American free-trade agreement, foremost among them the labor movement, fear it could lead to a loss of jobs to Mexico where wages are lower. Canada's unemployment rate was 10.3 percent in May.

"Canada is building a strong North American continental base, not so that we can close out the world but so that we can compete with it across the board," Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said recently. "There will be no fortress America."

A recent Gallup poll showed 53 percent of Canadians felt that a North American free-trade agreement was not in Canada's interest. Only 28 percent thought it would be a good thing.

Toronto Star April 4 interviewed 1,039 people March 6-9. It had a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

Among the principal opponents to the U.S.-Canada deal and negotiations for a trilateral deal has been Canadian labor.

The Canadian Labor Congress estimates Canada has lost 229,000 manufacturing jobs — about 11 percent of all jobs in the industrial sector — since the Canada-U.S. agreement took effect.

The government, however, says opponents are confusing the effects of the free-trade agreement with the effects to the current recession. The Canada-U.S. free-trade agreement has cushioned the impact of the recession, Wilson says.

"I think the difficulty Canadians have is separating out the impact of the recession and the impact of free trade," the minister told reporters last month.

Court curbing EPA hazard report rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency overstepped its authority in deciding when releases of radioactive elements must be reported, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday.

Federal law requires the EPA to be notified when radioactive elements are released into the ground, water or air.

But the court said a rule enacted by the EPA went further, requiring the agency to be notified even when there is merely a threat of a release.

Smears of Yeltsin mark final day before Russians go to polls

MOSCOW (AP) — Hard-line forces opposed to the election of Boris N. Yeltsin as the first president of the Russian republic tried to implicate him Tuesday in a billion-dollar scandal on the eve of the voting.

The front-running Yeltsin, meanwhile, won the blessing of the patriarch of the Russian Orthodox Church, who urged the faithful to vote "for the man who is capable of saving Russia."

"May God grant you victory at the elections, Boris Nikolayevich," Russian Orthodox Patriarch Alexi II told Yeltsin, according to the pro-Yeltsin newspaper Rossiiskaya Gazeta. Yeltsin has pledged to return to the church all property and places of worship that were "unlawfully taken from it" during seven decades of Communist rule.

Russian television reported that former Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Yeltsin's victory "would be a step in the right direction."

Wednesday's balloting is the first time in the history of Russia that voters will elect a president for the vast territory that stretches from the Bering Sea in the east to the Baltic Sea in the west.

Other elections include the Moscow and Leningrad mayoral race, and a referendum proposing a name change from Leningrad to its original name of St. Petersburg.

The popular Yeltsin, 60, has led the largest Soviet republic as chairman of the legislature for a year. But he asked his parliament to create a more powerful post of president to help Russia exert more control over its economy, political structure and culture.

Muscovites pick up campaign literature manned by Boris Yeltsin supporters.

A Yeltsin victory would further challenge the authority of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has had a stormy relationship with the white-haired Siberian for three years.

The two have enjoyed a truce since April 23, when Gorbachev agreed to turn over central control of the nation's resources to those nine republics, including Russia, in exchange for signing the Union Treaty to hold the country together.

Yeltsin was challenged by five other candidates, the two strongest being former Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov and former Soviet Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin, both of whom enjoy the support of the Communist Party. Gorbachev has not endorsed a candidate.

Ryzhkov told a news conference he was confident the election would not be a "choice of personality but a choice of the path Russia will take."

He also denied that his supporters were offering bottles of vodka if they would vote for him.

Opinion polls predicted Yeltsin would be the top vote-getter, but he needs to win votes from more than 50 percent of Russia's 105 million eligible voters to avoid a runoff election.

The first polling places were scheduled to open at 7 a.m. Wednesday (3 p.m. EDT Tuesday) in Petropavlovsk-Kamchatskiy in the Soviet Far East. The last polls close at 10 p.m. Wednesday in Kaliningrad, on the Baltic coast. The paper ballots are hand-counted.

Communist Party newspapers Tuesday mounted a last-ditch effort to smear Yeltsin, trying to implicate him in a 140-billion-ruble scandal and link him to an alleged member of the Italian Mafia.

The hard-line newspaper Sovietkaya Rossiya (Soviet Russia) implied in a front-page article that Yeltsin has involved in the 5-month-old controversy over a British trading company, Dove Trading International. The then-deputy prime minister of Russia, Gennady Filashin, gave Dove permission to sell $7.5 billion in foreign goods for rubles, and then invest the expected 140 billion rubles of revenue in Russian businesses and real estate.

The deal was declared illegal by the Soviet state bank. Hard-line Soviet media said it was an example of Yeltsin's government selling off the republic. Filashin resigned, protesting that the KGB was attempting to discredit him and Yeltsin.

Yeltsin said last week that the investigation into the matter was closed. But Tuesday's Sovetskaya Rossiya, in a forward to an article on the matter by Soviet Prosecutor Nikolai Trubin, said the deal was an example of "the abyss into which Russia is being pushed by its present leaders."

Trubin said in the article, which is part of his report given to the national Supreme Soviet legislature on Tuesday, that Yeltsin and other Russian leaders had worked on questions involving such transfers of credit.

The article did not say that Yeltsin was charged with any wrongdoing.

"All we can say is this type of publication is lying and that the article was intended to discredit Yeltsin's candidacy for president," said Yuri Skorinnov, a spokesman for the campaign.

Trubin last week issued a report that exonerated the Soviet military in the Jan. 13 killings of unarmed demonstrators in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius and accused the Lithuanians of "the slayings." That report contradicted witness accounts of Western reporters.

Sovetskaya Rossiya also published a photo of a document signed by Yeltsin appointing an Italian man as an honorary consul of the Russian federation, and said the man was a member of the Mafia.

A look at today's Russian election

MOSCOW (AP) — A look at Wednesday's election in the Russian federation, the first direct presidential balloting in the history of Russia:

BACKGROUND: The parliament of the Russian federation, the largest of the 15 Soviet republics, in April elected a strong president. The move was another step by the republic to more control over its economy, political structure and culture.

CANDIDATES: Boris N. Yeltsin, the popular chairman of the Russian federation's legislature, is expected to be the top vote-getter, but he needs a simple majority to avoid a runoff. Yeltsin, 60, is the longtime rival of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, although they have enjoyed a political truce since April. His principal rivals are former Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov and former Soviet Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin, both of whom have the support of the Communist Party. Other minor candidates are Vladimir Zhirinovsky, Gen. Albert Makashov and Aman Tuleyev.

ELIGIBLE VOTERS: There are about 105 million eligible voters.

POLLS: Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. local time, meaning the first polls open in the Soviet Far East at 10 p.m. Tuesday Moscow time (2 p.m. MDT Tuesday) and last polls close at 11 p.m. Wednesday Moscow time (3 p.m. MDT Wednesday). Preliminary results won't be available before Thursday.

OTHER ISSUES: Residents of Leningrad will be asked in a referendum whether they want to change the name of the city. The question: "Do you wish to return our city to its original name St. Petersburg?" Members of the Communist Party, including Gorbachev, vehemently oppose removing the name of Vladimir Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, from the city.

The reformist mayors of Moscow and Leningrad, Gavriil Popov and Anatoly Sobchak, also are up for reelection.

County officials brace for 1 percent initiative

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Facing a largely unsympathetic public, Idaho county commissioners and clerks already fret about a ballot proposal to limit property taxes to 1 percent of market value. The initiative is more than a year away from being on the ballot, if backers collect enough signatures by July 1992, but the issue drew plenty of interest Tuesday when commissioners and clerks convened in Twin Falls for their annual state conference.

To some at the conference, passage of the initiative seemed almost a foregone conclusion. "We should spend at least as much time figuring out what were going to do after it passes as we spend trying to prevent it," Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn of Boise told the group. "The subject of the county officials' dread is a ballot proposal by a group of Kootenai County residents to limit all property taxes. If approved, county, school, highway, city and other taxing districts together could not tax more than 1 percent total of market property value. Organizers need about 32,000 signatures to get the initiative on the ballot in 1992; they're about one-fourth of the way there. It's an echo of the One Percent Initiative, passed by Idaho voters in 1978, which capped property taxes at 1 percent. But the Legislature found the plan unworkable and limited tax increases to 5 percent a year instead, igniting a second tax revolt. The separate taxing districts now tax at a combined value of greater than 1 percent, so if passed the initiative likely would mean a reduction in services from all districts, said Lincoln County Commissioner Jerry Nance of Dietrich. Until a few months ago, when he joined the Ada commission, Glenn saw things only from the perspective of a taxpayer, he said. Now he understands what counties face to provide services. "The taxpayers out there have little sympathy for the position we are in," Glenn said.

Injured siblings better day after car accident

BURLEY — Two Burley residents remained at Cassia Memorial Hospital Tuesday, one day after a traffic accident west of town. James Berkeley, 22, and his sister, Elizabeth Berkeley, 23, were reported in good condition after being moved from intensive care earlier in the day. The Berkeleys were injured Monday afternoon when a Jeep Wagoneer driven by their mother, Jane Berkeley, 43, was involved in an accident near the Ore-Ida Foods office two miles west of Burley, Cassia County Sheriff's deputy Bill Marsh said. The Berkeley vehicle was westbound on U.S. Highway 30 when it struck a van that was pulling out from the Ore-Ida driveway, Marsh said. The van was driven by Alvin Lowe, 42, of Oakley. The county's extrication team had to help remove the Berkeleys from their vehicle, Marsh said. Five-year-old Amber Berkeley received only minor injuries and was treated and released from the hospital Monday, he said. Jane Berkeley and Lowe were also released. An investigation into the accident is continuing and citations are pending.

Eden officials make request for large address numerals

EDEN — The city of Eden and its fire marshal want residents to post large address numerals on their houses so emergency crews can locate addresses. The numerals should be in place within 90 days, which will complete the first step of the conversion to the new E911 emergency telephone system. Residents will be sent in water bills.

Burley counselor Rodriguez stays on Idaho commission

BOISE — Burley school counselor Pete Rodriguez will serve another five-year term on the Idaho Commission for Pardons and Pardon. The Board of Correction held a telephone conference on Monday and Chairman Nick Miller said the chief item of business was to name Rodriguez to a new term on the five-person panel. The commission is appointed by the Board of Correction rather than the governor.

Keq parties end in citations as deputies locate juveniles

JEROME — Jerome county sheriff's deputies issued citations to 11 juveniles for illegal consumption of alcohol and broke up two keq parties in the Devil's Cornal area over the weekend. A kegger with about 30 celebrants was reported by a Bureau of Land Management ranger Friday night in the Bowl area. Seven citations were issued, according to Sgt. Gerald Brant of the Jerome County Sheriff's office. Saturday night another small group of keggers were located in the Hole area and four citations issued to juveniles for illegal consumption, Brant said. Under the current policy, juveniles are detained at the site of the kegger, parents are called and must come to pick up the youngsters or decide if they will permit the juveniles to return home.

Gooding has 6 more months to plan center

The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — The city of Gooding still has hopes that it can put together a project to convert an unused state hospital building into a detention-center facility. The state Land Board on Tuesday granted the city another six-month option to convert the old state tuberculosis hospital on the outskirts of Gooding into a 400-bed medium-security prison. In a letter to the board, Mayor Gene Heiler said "some recent developments" indicate the project still is possible, although he didn't go into detail. The building, which sits on 6.6 acres, has been vacant since 1965 despite several attempts to turn it into something useful. The current bid to convert it to a men's prison began nearly two years ago. At that time, the city began scrambling to find a use for the building before the state went through with plans to tear it down. Demolition plans have since been put on hold. City officials have been talking to Westminster Corrections Group of Santa Fe, N.M.,

Ketchum P & Z criteria downs housing project

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Plans for a 28-unit affordable housing project have failed design review because they do not meet Ketchum Planning and Zoning Commission. Citing inadequate snow storage and substandard setbacks, the commission refused to approve developer Roger Bergdahl's plans for a project on Bird Drive. The commission made the same findings when it voted against Bergdahl's application for a planned unit development, or PUD, on the project two weeks ago. Bergdahl is expected to appeal the design review decision to the Ketchum City Council, which unanimously granted the PUD to the project at its June 3 meeting.

"I think it's our responsibility to make findings that are somewhat keeping terms whether projects meet approval. For instance, developments must have adequate space for parking. Commissioner Pam Ritau complained about Ketchum's snow storage standards, noting that the commission is getting mixed signals from the City Council. On Bergdahl's project the City Council expressed a willingness to compromise on the storage requirement, but on other projects the council has insisted on strict compliance," she said. "Somehow, we've got to get this snow storage thing resolved," Ritau said. Construction on the Bergdahl project is planned for this summer. Eleven two-bedroom units are to be completed by the end of 1991. The project's second phase, including another 17 apartments and a parking lot, is to be constructed in the summer of 1992 with completion by July 30, 1993. The commission asked that detailed landscaping plans showing public access to the city's bike path in the first phase of the project be included in any reapplications for design review. Ketchum's planning commission also got a sneak preview of plans for a new downtown theater complex during its June 10 meeting. Magic Lantern Cinema owner Rick Kessler and architect Jim Ruscitto presented preliminary plans for a four-screen theater to be built on two vacant lots at the corner of Second Street and First Avenue in Ketchum. "We don't want it to be an overwhelming quad theater complex," said Ruscitto, who presented drawings of the two-story project. Under the plans, a "family restaurant" occupies much of the ground floor space, with four theaters of varying sizes located on the second floor. In Ruscitto's drawings, the exterior of the building shows four different movie house facades, each with a separate motif.

"It's as if somebody built three or four apartment buildings over the years," Ruscitto explained. "Commissioners Chris Potters and Bernie Johnson were cautiously supportive of the concept. "When I first looked at it, it brought to mind Disneyland," said Potters. "But I'm really intrigued." Johnson told Ruscitto he would need a good sales pitch to gain approval from the commission. "There are a lot of different characters," Johnson said, referring to the exterior facades. "The commission will have to determine whether they're compatible with the townscape." Ruscitto said the city has no single townscape. "This is representative of Ketchum," he said. Design review on final plans for the new Magic Lantern Cinema is expected on July 8. Kessler said he and his partner, Jerry Kingen, plan to begin construction this summer and open the new theater before the end of the year.

Salary raise on tap in Buhl following 10-year dry spell

By Bertina L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — City Council members have voted unanimously to increase their salaries beginning Jan. 1. This is the first salary increase council members have received since 1982. As of January, council members will make $3,600 annually, up approximately 20 percent from the current annual wage of $3,000. The mayor's salary will increase from $3,600 to $6,000, a 66 percent raise in annual income. The combined salary increases will cost the city a total of $4,800 a year. Councilman Tom Tappen read the ordinance proposing the salary increases, made a motion to waive the second and third readings of the proposed ordinance and recommended it be passed at Monday evening's City Council meeting. Council members quickly approved Tappen's recommendation. "Council members weren't as quick to pass another ordinance that had its first reading Monday evening — an ordinance calling for a curfew for children under 18 years of age. Should it pass, this ordinance would make it a misdemeanor for anyone under 18 to be out from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. without a parent or guardian. The ordinance would encompass public highways, streets, lanes of amusement, eating establishments, vacant lots, and other locations within the city of Buhl. Parents could be subject to a $100 fine if their child broke the proposed curfew law. This ordinance would amend and repeal sections of an existing ordinance that is subject to interpretation, is too difficult to enforce, and much too vague, according to Mayor Ted Pence and city attorney Bill Nungesser. Police officer Dick Floyd said this ordinance clearly allows children to be out later for legitimate reasons — such as driving to and from work, school functions, sports activities, entertainment, etc. Floyd said the aim of this ordinance is not to pull every teen-ager off the streets at 10 p.m. He said it's the children that are loitering and vandalizing — and whose parents probably aren't even aware there is a problem — that would be effected, if this ordinance is passed. "You can't legislate morality," Councilman Chuck Geska said. He said 10 p.m. is too early for a curfew. He also said the comments he has heard so far from the community about the proposed curfew have been mostly negative. Councilman Tappen said he feels enforcement of the ordinance could be tricky, and he said some citizens have expressed concern to him regarding enforcement at eating establishments and convenience stores. Tappen also recommended a second and third hearing process before a decision is made. The mayor recommended council members support the police in their efforts to deal with youth-related problems by passing this ordinance. However, after a lengthy discussion, council members chose to have another reading of the ordinance at a special meeting at 7 p.m. June 24 at City Hall. They will make a decision later. At a special meeting earlier this month, the City Council approved some minor changes to the city's comprehensive plan for the area of impact — an area outside the city limits but still governed by the city. Areas of impact act as buffer zones for city growth. In other business: • The City Council approved the mayor's appointment of Keith Jensen to the Planning and Zoning Committee for a term of six years. This seven-member committee still needs three more members to be complete. • City engineer Scott Bybee reported the city's newest well will be on line and pumping later this week. It has been ready to operate for some time but its permit had not yet been granted. • Firework sales permits were granted to Sav-Mor Drug, King's, the Stesia Motel and R&B Grocery.

Composite wing coming to Mountain Home within year

By N.S. Norkentved

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday that the Air Force has told him elements of a "composite wing" will be coming to Mountain Home Air Force Base within 12 months. Critics, however, say the Air Force is being evasive and yague about its long-term plans, and question the governor's proposal to offer state lands in Owyhee County for the construction of a bombing range. Andrus told the state Land Board in Boise that assembling a parcel of federal, state and privately owned land for the proposed bombing range will take a while. "It's something that probably won't be done overnight," he said. "It probably will take a couple of years."

So far, composite wings fly only in the imaginations of Pentagon planners. The types and number of planes coming to Idaho will depend on the kind of composite wing the Air Force will assemble in Idaho, said Sgt. Norgren of the Mountain Home Air Force Base public affairs office. The composite wing — the brainchild of Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Merrill A. McPeak — is still in the planning stages, Norgren said. "We're not sure just what type of composite wing the Air Force plans to assemble at Mountain Home. Andrus calls a state proposal, known as the Big Springs Training Range, to provide the Air Force with a new 147,000-acre bombing range in southwestern Idaho a "win-win" project for the state.

Other Idahoans disagree. "If someone tried to pick the absolute worst location for an expanded bombing range capability for Mountain Home AFB, they have surely succeeded with the Big Springs proposal," said Bob Stevens of Ketchum, member of the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep. The foundation opposes the proposal, and it wants the state and the Air Force to look at all other reasonable alternative locations, he said. "There are other areas which do not have

State law to let Mormon pupils use 1 school class for seminary

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Mormon high school students next year can leave school for one class each day to attend seminary classes because of a new state law.

Superintendent Terrill Donicht told the School Board Tuesday night that the district does not have any choice but to allow students to attend the seminary classes.

The law permits students to leave the high school for any purpose for one hour with the permission of their parents if they are younger than 18.

"We're delighted about the law," said Monte Carlson, president of the Mormon Church's Twin Falls Stake. "We just want to work with the school district."

Up to 250 students will attend the classes at a seminary building at 421 Maurice N., about a block from the high school.

Although seminary includes ninth-grade students, they will continues to attend seminary class before school starts in the morning, Carlson said.

Classes will be dismissed in time for students to return to regular high school classes on time, he said.

Seminary classes would provide moral, spiritual, and character-building instruction, which are neglected in public schools, according to a letter from the Mormon Church to the school district.

Students of other faiths can also receive permission to leave for classes outside school.

In other business, the school board passed the 1991-92 budget of $17.8 million, which is $470,721, or 2.7 percent, more than last year's budget.

That is partially because the district will receive $474,667, or 2.1 percent, more in local property taxes than it did last year.

Newly elected board member David Sasa did not take his place on the board although he was prepared to, because outgoing board member Lenore McNeese was not formally signed a release stating her intentions to leave, Donicht said.

Therefore, technically she cannot be replaced.

Donicht said he has been trying to contact McNeese but has been unsuccessful.

Also, the Twin Falls Education Association has released its annual district report card on the school district.

The report card increased in five of 13 areas and decreased in only one.

The district received six Bs and eight Cs, with its highest mark, a B, for building administrator support of staff and employee morale.

The school board's role in education, district use of support staff, district's ability to meet student needs, professional development of staff, new educational technology, student attitudes and parental support all received a C.

The district office's impact on education received a C+ and the district's curricular offerings and discipline received B.

Monorail in Yellowstone too costly according to park service officials

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. - National Park Service officials say it probably would not be practical, or affordable, to replace Yellowstone National Park's aging road system with a monorail network.

While it currently costs the park an average of $1 million per mile to reconstruct roads, a monorail system could cost anywhere from $15 million to $50 million per mile, said Jim Straughan, chief of transportation at the Park Service's Denver office.

Sleep grants in Yellowstone also could limit a monorail network, he said.

And since it probably would not run year-round, such a network probably wouldn't pay for itself, the official said.

"I don't see us developing a (monorail) system extensive enough to replace the roads in Yellowstone," Straughan told the Casper Star-Tribune. "The monorail works well in Disney World because it's fairly compact. But when you get into larger areas it becomes a tougher question."

U.S. Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming has suggested that the Park Service consider a monorail for Yellowstone, where narrow roads built atop old stagecoach routes are chock-full of potholes and crumbling in many places. Wallop and Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., recently convinced the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee to authorize a $300,000 study of alternative, future modes of travel in Yellowstone, Yosemite, and Denali national parks. The funding was attached to the $105 billion national highway bill.

Despite his reservations about a monorail for Yellowstone, Straughan hopes Congress will authorize

'I don't see us developing a (monorail) system extensive enough to replace the roads in Yellowstone.'

Jim Straughan, chief of transportation the transportation study. Officials need to study alternative systems and we need to firm up a policy in these areas where we have such intensive use," he said.

One alternative that might work in Yellowstone is buses, Straughan said.

A bus fleet could cut down on both congestion and pollution in the park, he said. Park Service Director James Ridenour pointed to buses earlier this year when he wrote Wallop about alternative modes of transportation for Yellowstone.

"In most instances where alternative transport has been provided, buses have been the most economic and practical replacement for the monorail," Ridenour wrote. But Wallop said he hopes buses aren't the only alternative suggested for the park.

"Just hope we're not hooked on traditional means of transportation and not open to others," the Republican said.

"But if the study determines that buses are the only way to go, they need to justify it."

A 1979 transportation study of the greater Yellowstone region concluded that buses were the best solution for reducing traffic jams in the area. The study did not recommend a move entirely to buses, however, and its authors noted that any change in the status quo would require cooperation between state and local governments.

While Yellowstone officials say poor road conditions are the top concern of visitors, Park Service officials in Washington have said road reconstruction in the park stands 55 on a list of 195 construction priorities generated throughout the park system.

George Berkley, a Park Service spokesman in Washington, said Ridenour has requested $11 million for road construction and rehabilitation in Yellowstone for fiscal 1992, compared to about $4 million per year in each of the last five years.

Estimates made by the Federal Highway Administration in 1986 noted it would take almost $240 million to improve the 61 percent of Yellowstone roads considered to be in the worst shape in the park.

Sho-Bans push for reservation to be placed in single district

FORT HALL (AP) - Shoshone-Bannock tribal leaders want Idaho lawmakers to keep their "community of interest" in mind while drawing new legislative district lines.

The Fort Hall Business Council sent a letter to area legislators asking that the Fort Hall Indian Reservation be placed within a single legislative district when boundaries are redrawn this year.

That may be difficult. The 544,000-acre reservation includes parts of Bannock, Bingham, Caribou and Power counties and currently is divided into Legislative Districts 26, 27, 28 and 29.

But more importantly, the tribes' population is not large enough to warrant a separate legislative district encompassing only the reservation.

Preliminary census figures showed 5,060 people living on Indian land, including 3,512 enrolled tribal members. If the state's population were evenly divided into 35 districts, each would include approximately 28,700 people, according to census statistics.

The 1992 Idaho Legislature is charged with using 1990 U.S. Census figures to reduce the current 42 Senate seats to from 30 to 35 and to abolish the seven multi-county floterial districts. The House will be reduced from 84 seats to no more than 70 and as few as 60.

Keeping the votes of tribal members together would give them more clout in state politics, said Shoshone-Bannock attorney Janetta Wolfley said.

"Usually minority groups have common interests, the same socioeconomic status, the same educational status and a lot of the same discrimination that has been against them," she said. "It is usually a very cohesive bloc of voters."

State Sen. Patricia McDermott, D-Castello, an attorney on the 20-member committee developing reapportionment plans, said recent court decisions require states to keep racial minorities together in legislative districts.

"I think that's only fair," she said. McDermott said although the tribes do not have the numbers to elect their own senators and representatives, the population is large enough to impact an election. She said a potential district could include the reservation, Power County and northern Bannock County.

"They certainly could have a significant impact on any election," she said of Shoshone-Bannock members.

Ms. Wolfley said dividing a cohesive minority group like the Sho-Bans would amount to gerrymandering, and Chief Deputy Attorney General Jack McMahon warned the reapportionment committee earlier that splitting reservations could be grounds for a lawsuit against the state.

But communities of interest cross many lines, and the reapportionment committee already has approved guidelines prohibiting the division of counties whenever possible.

Whether the Shoshone-Bannock tribes, whose population increased 19 percent from 1980 to 1990, would challenge a plan splitting the reservation is uncertain, the tribal attorney said.

"I can't say we would at this point, but there is no doubt the tribe is very concerned about this," Ms. Wolfley said. "We've realized for a number of years it has been done, but we haven't had the population to say 'look, we shouldn't be divided like this.'" age was available for Slater. Killen was thrown under the horse trailer being pulled by the pickup. He died shortly after being transported by ambulance to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center. He was not wearing a helmet.

The next reapportionment committee meeting is tentatively scheduled for July 10 in Twin Falls.

The pickup driver was not injured. The accident is still under investigation.

Principal loses bet; spends day on roof

SPOKANE (AP) — An elementary school principal who promised to spend a day on the roof if students near his classroom intended to lose the bet, but found the payoff painful.

"I'm just cooking up here," said unburned Dave Nees, Lake Spokane Elementary principal. And that was after only 2½ hours on the tar roof Monday, when the high temperature in Spokane was 82 degrees.

"Look at the heat waves. It really surprised me there's so much heat up here," Nees said.

The winners of the wager offered little sympathy. "He should be up here every day," said second-grader Deja Rice. "It was kind of what it was raining," said fourth-grader Nate Maruca.

It was a bet Nees intended to lose, but he said students and even some parents through he lacked faith in the youngsters when the reading contest began in February.

"Some parents got kind of ticked off about it," he recalled, and some youngsters turned up with signs bearing such slogans as "We can do it" and "See you on the roof."

The school's 350 students, in grades one through six, took up the challenge.

Crickets, gypsy moths still pose problem, even after wet weather

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's cool, wet spring means different things to different pests.

Mosquitoes love it, Mormon crickets don't and gypsy moths are praying a waiting game.

Mormon crickets were expected to invade up to 14 areas of the state this summer, but inclement weather may have wiped out some of the least-chomping insects.

"When the cold and wet weather hit, that was really hard on their population," said Jay Kerran, Utah State University Extension entomology specialist.

Mormon crickets at higher elevations may be particularly vulnerable, Kerran said, citing weather promises fungal growth and other deadly parasites.

State entomologist Ed Bianco said he anticipates that the majority of the crickets will hatch as expected. "The only thing the cold weather did was slow their development," Bianco said.

Cold weather has also retarded the development of gypsy moths and postponed the gypsy moth eradication program conducted by the U.S. Forest Service and the Utah Department of Agriculture.

"We are on the average two weeks behind where we've been the previous two years because of the weather," said Nancy Wright, a spokeswoman for the Cooperative Gypsy Moth Eradication Program.

Leon LaMadeleine, field representative for the Oregon office of the U.S. Forest Service, said another concern is spraying crickets' have one-third more acreage to cover this year than last year. "We really have some catching up to do," he said.

But the crews have made progress as the weather has allowed.

"If the weather stays 'this way,' we'll be really clicking along now," LaMadeleine said.

Gypsy moths eat hundreds of species of plants and can literally defoliate full-grown trees. The species was brought to the United States in 1969 by a naturalist who attempted to cross the moths with silkworms.

Some of the insects escaped and reproduced in the wild. Entomologists believe the moths' egg masses were carried to Utah by people who have moved into the area from the Eastern states.

Mormon crickets belong to the same order of insects as grasshoppers but are not winged. They got their name last century when they ravaged the crops of an early group of Mormon settlers; only to be decimated upon by a flock of hungry seagulls.

Supplier of 'Black Death' vaccine would like to exit plague business

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Citing lack of business rather than some residents' fears of "Black Death," the nation's only maker of an anti-bubonic plague vaccine plans to halt production as soon as possible, a company spokesman said Monday.

Miles-Cutter Biological was under fire from activists upset that the lab houses bubonic plague virus, but a company official denied the shutdown had anything to do with the protests.

"We wanted to do it long before this happened," said R. J. "Bud" Modersbach, associate counsel for the biotech firm.

The vaccine represents less than 1 percent of the business of the privately-held company, Modersbach said. The biotech company has a $1.7 million contract with the Defense Department to provide 2.6 million doses of plague vaccine a year.

"We told the Defense Department in August of 1989 that we would like to halt production in three years and they should look for a new source," Modersbach said.

The Defense Department is the main purchaser of the vaccine but anyone going where there is a danger of plague can obtain it by prescription, Modersbach said.

"I'd say this vaccine has saved

R.J. 'Bud' Modersbach, a firm spokesman, displays a bottle of plague vaccine.

of the European population 650 years ago.

Cheryl Marie Wade of Oceanview Citizens for Cleanup and Restoration, an environmental group, told the San Francisco Examiner she plans to call a caucus and "see if there's something we can do."

"It's very frightening," she said. "If there was an accident we'd get it — all of Berkeley. Nobody is going to escape."

Wade did not return a telephone call from The Associated Press on Monday.

The laboratory is in an industrial area, and the nearest homes are half a mile away.

Laurie Bright of COPE, Citizens Opposing Polluted Environment, described a December incident during which four workers calibrating equipment got into an unauthorized area of the building where the virus was stored. City officials investigated and said none of the virus was released.

Modersbach said the company tightened its entry and identification procedures after the unauthorized entry.

"There is no secret about the vaccine," he said, wondering about the sudden interest in the product. "It's not classified or anything like that. It's in our catalog."

Utah chemical weapons depot drills for worst-case scenarios

TOOLEE ARMY DEPOT, Utah (AP) — Officials at Toolee Army Depot, home of more than 40 percent of America's chemical weapons, are drilling for the disaster they hope never happens.

On Monday, it was an explosion and fire at a storage igloo for mustard-gas munitions. Tuesday, another deadly scenario might unfold.

Regardless of the Army's Service Response Force Exercise-1991, known by the acronym SRFX-91, continues.

The drills, which end Friday, are among the most elaborate and extensive ever held in Utah.

Their aim: To contain a potential disaster of truly frightening proportions. The preparation are elaborate.

The drills will extend off-base to local medical facilities, care centers and possibly even traffic control points. Fake roadblocks will be put in place beside highways, said depot public affairs officer Susan Barrow.

Any type of response necessary can be simulated, ranging from couriers by firefighters to Army crews at the base itself, she said.

Another possible scenario the participants may have to deal with involves an earthquake rupturing a chemical storage igloo, sending a plume of deadly nerve gas drifting toward Toolee.

What happens next depends on the quick wits of the Army emergency response teams, county officials and state experts. In a real life, the teams readiness adds a layer of protection for nearby residents.

TAD is a likely place for disaster drills. It stores 10,575 tons of deadly chemical warfare arms, most of them within 15 miles of Toolee. The base houses more chemical stockpiles than other in the United States, with 42.3 percent of the country's stockpile.

About 200 TAD employees are expected to be involved in the drills. Another 289 contractors were expected from other posts to keep the project moving.

Toolee County and the state may contribute about 25 each, and 100 high-level Army officers and federal emergency management experts are expected on visitors' day.

The mock disasters are set up by the comptrollers and the players aren't privy to the scenario before it occurs, Barrow said. They are made to be as realistic as possible.

If the plan eventually includes an earthquake, a crack may be drawn on munitions igloo.

If an airplane were to crash into a storage site, this acted-out nightmare, controllers will bring the wreckage to the site. If a fire was to break out in the accident, it would be mimicked by smoke pots.

"They're going to have to do something if you will, really far-fetched," Barrow predicted last week. "The probability of a real chemical accident is very, very low."

The Utah Division of Comprehensive Emergency Management is participating in the exercise, activating its Emergency Operations Center.

The center is supposed to coordinate resources as agencies respond to the "emergency" with computer automation systems, public information and response and recovery crews.

Mother accused of plotting rape

LIVINGSTON, Mont. (AP) — A woman arranged to have her boyfriend rape her 11-year-old daughter in hopes that the girl would bear a child she could raise, authorities alleged Monday. The girl did become pregnant.

The 30-year-old mother of three was accused of rape by accountability in a complaint filed in Park County Justice Court.

Justice of the Peace Deanna Eganland set a $100,000 bond for the woman and said an arrest warrant was issued for her boyfriend. The woman was jailed.

Park County Attorney Nels Swand

dal said the woman wanted a child with her boyfriend but was unable to become pregnant again. The woman admitted asking her daughter to have sex with her boyfriend to become pregnant, he said.

The principal of an elementary school where the girl just completed the fifth grade said school officials learned June 4 she might be pregnant.

Swandal said that at first the girl was reluctant to say more than that she had been raped and was five months pregnant. Swandal said authorities arrested the girl's mother Friday after persuading the child to explain how she became pregnant.

Electricity valuable to Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta residents said they were willing to pay higher power rates — one of the highest rates in the nation — to keep the town's electricity turned on.

The town about 80 miles northeast of Boise on the western edge of the Sawtooth Wilderness lost its hydropower when Kirby Dam failed May 26.

Atlanta Power Co. has asked the state Public Utilities Commission to approve a 10.25-cent-per-kilowatt-hour surcharge to cover the increased cost of producing electricity with an aging, Army-surplus diesel generator. The generator gulps about 80 gallons of fuel a day to produce power from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

All 20 residents who attended a PUC hearing at the Atlanta Christian Chapel on Monday backed the surcharge, which would give the small community one of the highest electric rates in the nation. Two people who did not attend submitted statements opposing the charge.

"I've run a small generator of my own up here, and it's not feasible to generate our own power with any efficiency," said Sam Roeber, an 11-year Atlanta resident.

Karen Sayko, co-owner of the Whale's Stop Tavern, said, "Even at 10.25 cents, we can buy power cheaper than we can produce it ourselves. We need the conveniences that electricity provides."

If approved, the rate increase would mean between a $10 and a $50 hike in monthly power bills for residential customers, depending on power use. Atlantians also would rival other remote communities in Alaska and Hawaii for paying power rates near 20 cents per kwh, PUC officials said.

By comparison, Boise residents pay about five cents per kwh for electricity.

Atlanta Power Co. General Manager Lann Stevenson said, if the PUC does not approve the rate hike, the utility will shut down service to its 48 customers on July 1.

"We can't afford to operate the generator without it (the rate hike)," he said.

PUC President Joe Miller said the commission would rule in about 10 days.

With hydropower generation at the dam, full-time Atlanta residents used to pay $50 per month, regardless of consumption.

A 4.5-cent surcharge imposed by the PUC last fall has been suspended until September because of the dam's failure. The surcharge covered the expenses of building a new hydropower unit as part of a $500,000 emergency dam improvement project last fall.

Atlanta resident Dan Hogge not only supported the rate hike but urged Stevenson to get a second generator in case the old one fails.

"I've got a freezer full of food. If the power goes out for any length of time, we'd lose the whole thing," he said.

State makes land swap with BLM

BOISE (AP) — The state Land Board has completed a three-step land trade with the federal Bureau of Land Management, swapping 4,810 acres in Custer, Bingham, Blaine and Butte counties for 7,549 acres in the Twin Buttes area of Bingham County.

The state has been making land trades with the federal government for years, mainly to "block up" state holdings and make tracts that are easier to manage.

State Land Director Stan Hamilton said Tuesday's trade reduces state property boundaries by 26 miles and improves access.

The land is used for livestock grazing. Hamilton said the state lands supported 218 animal-unit months but the federal land had 524 active AUMs.

Of the eight tracts of state land traded to the federal government, three were not leased for grazing or any other purpose, he said.

Man returns to face Idaho drug charges

PULLMAN, WASH. (AP) — A Pullman man has been arrested in connection with a million-dollar marijuana-growing farm raided in northern Idaho.

Eric Gordon Sateren, 24, was arrested on a felony warrant Monday for investigation of a conspiracy to manufacture marijuana. Sgt. Don Mayupin of the Washington State University police department said.

Sateren was wanted by the Bonner-Boundary Narcotics Task Force for his alleged involvement in an indoor marijuana farm.

Walrath new state insurance director

BOISE — Harry Walrath, a Clearwater County Republican, is the new director of the Idaho Department of Insurance. Gov. Cecil Andrus announced the appointment at a news conference Tuesday. He said Walrath has a lot of respect in the insurance industry and will assume the job as soon as he can close down his Walrath Insurance Agency, Inc., at Orofino. Anthony Fagiano resigned as director to return to his actuary job with the agency. George Neumayer, deputy director of the Department of Transportation, has been serving as interim director for the last three months.

Rents rising for lease holders near lakes

BOISE — The 600-plus families holding leases for state-owned recreation property around Priest and Payette lakes will have to pay higher rents in the future. But the state Land Board decided Tuesday that the increases will not be as steep as originally recommended, and only a fraction of a property that would have pushed rental rates past $20,000 per year for some property.

The vote was 4-1. The dissenter, state schools superintendent Jerry Evans, complained that the action did nothing to move the board to its constitutional requirement to obtain the maximum return from the property. "All we effectively did was to put off serious consideration for another year," Evans said.

Boise man pleads innocent in deaths

BOISE — A 30-year-old Boise man accused of clubbing to death a man and woman in a tavern pleaded innocent in 4th District court to two counts of first-degree murder. Keith Wells is accused of beating to death John Justad and Brandi Rains in the Rose Pub tavern Dec. 20. Rains, a bartender, and Justad, a customer, were found by another customer. They died in a hospital several hours later from head injuries. Wells could face the death penalty if convicted. Judge Gerald Schroeder set the trial for Oct. 8.

Workers, Boise Cascade reach accord

BOISE — Boise Cascade Corp. and the Western Council of Industrial Workers have reached tentative agreement on a three-year contract covering 1,850 lumber mill workers in the Northwest, including 450 in Idaho. The contract would provide wage increases and benefit improvements, but neither side will release details until after union members in Idaho, Oregon and Washington ratify the agreement. Voting certification will begin Friday at 17 Boise Cascade mills, including Idaho operations in Emmett, Cascade and Council. Balloting ends June 24, and union officials are recommending that members approve the contract to replace a three-year pact that expired June 1. The contract does not cover employees at Boise Cascade's nonunion mill in Hershend Bend.

Estimates of Brownlee levels rise again

BOISE — Thanks to a cool, wet May, Idaho Power Co. once again has raised its estimate of how much water will flow into the Snake River-Brownlee Reservoir from this year's runoff. Utility hydrologist Tim Brewer now estimates 2.5 million acre-feet of water will enter Idaho Power's Key Snake River hydroelectric storage facility from April through July. That's a 13.6-percent improvement over last month's prediction, which itself was upgraded from the month before, but still well below a normal water year's inflow of 6.1 million acre-feet. Brewer said 200 percent of normal precipitation during May in large parts of southern Idaho and eastern Oregon delayed snowmelt in the mountains. It also delayed irrigating needs and quickly raised storage levels in upstream reservoirs.

Gem Democrats thank labor for support

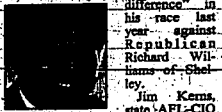

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho's top elected Democratic Party officials say they have organized labor to thank for winning elections last year.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, congressman Richard Stallings and Larry Laroco, Attorney General, Larry Echolfewk and Auditor J.D. Williams told the AFL-CIO's 33rd annual convention in Idaho Falls that their support played an important role in their election victories.

Williams, a top contender for the 2nd Congressional District seat that Stallings will vacate to run for the Senate next year, made a campaign pitch even though he hasn't announced whether he will run. He said Monday he hopes to decide this summer. "It's a great opportunity that I don't think we can pass up," he said, adding that he must first convince his wife, Rosemary. "I think I know what it takes to restore fiscal integrity to the federal government," Williams said, citing his experience as mayor of Preston, a rancher, statewide candidate and state auditor. He said union support "made the difference" in his race last year against Republican Richard Williams. Williams' statement was "about as close to an announcement as you can get without passing a list and asking for money." The Democrats, who received standing ovations, told the union members that they see a vital component of Idaho politics, the economy and the state's quality of life. "Both Richard (Stallings) and I realize that we couldn't have gotten there without your help," said Laroco, who last November broke the GOP's 26-year grip on the 1st Congressional District. "You took me to the dance, and I want to dance with you." Stallings attributed his 178-vote margin of victory in 1984 over ex-term Republican Rep. George Hansen to labor support. Workers are being undermined by the Republican Party and corporate managers, Stallings said. "What amazes me is they say unions have got to take cutbacks," he said.

Stallings

Idaho's union strength solid around INEL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Membership in the state's trade and labor unions has dwindled in the 5½ years since Idaho's right-to-work law was approved by voters, but eastern Idaho remains relatively strong.

Jim Kerns, president of the Idaho AFL-CIO, said at the union's 33rd annual convention Idaho Falls that the credit goes primarily to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. "Actually, Idaho Falls is the one place in the state with a pretty solid employment base," Kerns said Monday as more than 120 delegates gathered for the three-day convention.

He said about 9 percent of the state's work force is associated with a union. It was 15 percent before 1985 when voters passed a measure banning mandatory union membership or payment of union dues. Recent declines in natural resources-based industries are causing union numbers statewide to slip even more, Kerns said. "The timber and mining industries that used to have 4,000 members now have less than 800," he said. "Prices have really gone to hell and caused layoffs."

The Idaho AFL-CIO currently has 15,000 members, including nonunion affiliates. Before the union busting "right-to-work" measure, the organization had about 27,000 members.

But membership in Idaho Falls locals has increased about 6 percent in recent years, said Duane Allen, executive board member for the Idaho AFL-CIO's 6th district, which includes Bonneville County.

Unions in Idaho Falls currently have about 1,700 members. Of those, 1,130 are members of the Oil, Chemical & Atomic Workers Local No. 2-652.

International chocolate giant unveils heat-resistant candy

The Gulf War gave birth to a new candy: Hershey's Desert Bar. Designed to withstand temperatures of up to 140 degrees, the candy bar was manufactured for the U.S. Army and sent to the troops in Saudi Arabia during Operation Desert Shield and Storm.

The soldiers and customers at Hershey Park in Pennsylvania liked the candy so much, Hershey's has decided to release the candy nationally.

These candy bars, which contain milk chocolate along with an emulsifier, the artificial flavoring vanilla and egg whites, don't become fluid at 78 degrees like their non-military counterparts because of special processing. Instead, they just become slightly soft.

A 1-ounce bar contains 150 calories and has a suggested retail price of 45 cents. A regular Hershey's Milk Chocolate Bar is 55 ounces, has 240 calories and costs an average of 45 cents.

They should be available soon. Or call 1-800-544-1347 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Compiled from staff and wire reports

When summer evenings grow long, the lure of the outdoors is almost irresistible. All over the country people begin dusting off their barbecue grills.

In fact, a survey by the Barbecue Industry Association shows that Americans will host 1.7 billion barbecues this year. And the main reason for cooking outdoors, say respondents, is the great flavor of barbecued food.

This Southwestern-style barbecue features an innovative menu that is fun for everyone and easy on the chef.

Jalapeno-Glazed Turkey Breast is sure to whet eager appetites as it sizzles over hot coals. It's a turkey breast half that has been brushed with a hot and sweet jalapeno pepper sauce. A handful of mesquite chips can be added to the fire for that extra Southwestern flavor. Chicken-flavor bouillon offers just the right balance to the zesty seasonings.

Festive Southwestern Rice Salad is a delicious Mexican-style side dish idea that complements this grilled turkey. It's a traditional Mexican vegetable, and red and green bell peppers lend fresh crunch to the plump, lemon-seasoned rice and kidney bean combination.

Don't forget the Sizzled Butcher Sauce — perfect for brushing on grilled burger parts, vegetables or even crusty bread. So easy to prepare, just combine butter with ready-to-use chicken-flavor instant bouillon, garlic and cilantro.

This fiesta menu calls for a choice dessert. Refreshing Frozen Strawberry Margarita Pie is a twist on the popular restaurant drink. A creamy strawberry-lime juice filling sprinkled with a trace of tequila and triple sec is piled high in a crunchy pretzel crust. Relying on sweetened condensed milk guarantees the richest, smoothest pie filling ever.

Nowhere is the appeal of alfresco cooking stronger than in the Southwest, where outdoor living is a consuming passion. But no matter where you live, you can add these Southwestern dishes to your barbecue repertoire.

JALAPENO-GLAZED TURKEY BREAST
 1 (4- to 4½ pound) fresh bone-in turkey breast half
 ¼ cup water
 2 teaspoons cornstarch

2 teaspoons chicken-flavor instant bouillon
 ¼ cup jalapeno jelly or apple jelly
 1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh cilantro
 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
 ½ teaspoon ground cumin
 ½ teaspoon red pepper flakes, optional

Grill turkey according to manufacturer's directions, about 45 minutes to 2 hours or until meat thermometer reaches 170-180 degrees. In small saucepan, combine water, cornstarch and bouillon; stir in remaining ingredients. Cook on medium heat, cook and stir until slightly thickened. Brush turkey with 2 tablespoons sauce during last 5 to 10 minutes of cooking. Serve turkey with remaining sauce. Refrigerate leftovers.
 Makes 6 servings.

Helpful hints on grilling turkeys

Defrost turkey in refrigerator. Allow 24 hours for each 6 pounds of turkey.

Prepare covered charcoal cooker for indirect-heat cooking method. After coals are grey, bank them on two sides of cooker. Place a drip pan between coals on the bottom of the cooker. Place whole turkey on rack over drip pan. Turkey is cooked by heat reflected from the cover as well as the charcoal. This uniform, controlled heat cuts cooking time and seals in the turkey's natural juices and flavor.

Grill whole turkey approximately 11 to 15 minutes per pound. Insert meat thermometer into thickest part of inner thigh. Low-fat turkey is done when meat has lost its pinkness and the thermometer reaches 180 degrees. If turkey has an automatic cooking timer device to judge doneness, follow the manufacturer's cooking guidelines on label or use a meat thermometer to avoid overcooking.

Clockwise from top: Frozen Strawberry Margarita Pie, French Bread with Sizzled Butcher Sauce, Jalapeno-Glazed Turkey Breast, and Southwestern Rice Salad.

SOUTHWESTERN RICE SALAD

 1 cup uncooked long grain rice
 1 tablespoon chicken-flavor instant bouillon or 3 chicken-flavor bouillon cubes

 1 cup each coarsely chopped pimiento and red bell pepper

1 (4-ounce) can chopped green chilies, undrained
 1/3 cup bottled lemon juice

Decadent meal likely to please Dad on his day

By Sherrie Clinton
 The Baltimore Evening Sun

Give dad a taste of forbidden pleasures on Father's Day. Our decadent menu, for four to six people, includes ribs in a tasty homemade barbecue sauce, Mexican deviled eggs and individual Texas-style cheesecake.

Our two-side dishes, shredded zucchini salad and marinated cabbage salad, are guaranteed crowd pleasers. The tart cabbage salad is a delicious alternative to more traditional cole slaw recipes.

This menu serves four to six hungry people. The menu can be expanded to fit your guest list; just be sure to allow about three-quarters-pound-of-ribs-per-person.

Any kind of ribs can be used. Baby back ribs are great — but expensive. We used pre-rilled country-style spareribs.

The ribs can be served warm or cold. If they are cooked ahead of time, store them in the refrigerator; wrapped in foil or placed in a covered container. If you would like to reheat them, heat the foil-wrapped ribs in a 350-degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes to take the chill off.

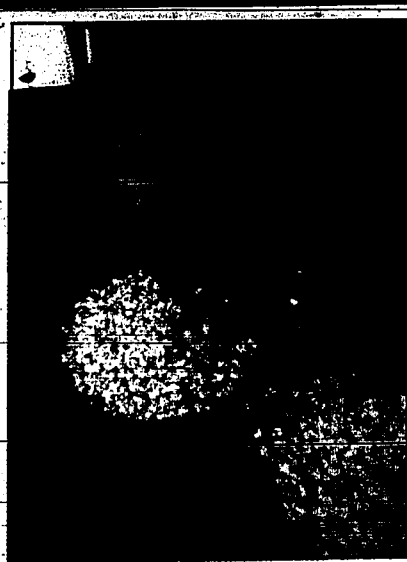

RIBS WITH BBQ SAUCE
 Salt
 Pinch of ground sage
 4½ to 5 pounds pork ribs, such as baby-back ribs

Barbecue Sauce:
 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
 3 tablespoons grated onion
 1 10½-ounce can tomato puree
 1/3 cup Worcestershire sauce
 1/3 cup honey
 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
 1 teaspoon dry mustard
 Pinch of cayenne pepper

Salt and freshly ground black pepper
 Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil. Add the sage and ribs and bring back to a boil. Reduce the heat and let the ribs simmer five minutes. Drain off the water and if you're going to do this ahead of time, store the meat in the refrigerator.

To make the barbecue sauce: place the vegetable oil in a saucepan over medium-low heat. Add the onion and cook gently until the onion is tender and light yellow.
 Add the puree, Worcestershire sauce,

Irene Leggett of Twin Falls developed a love for popcorn as a child eating kernels grown by her grandfather.

'Popcorn Lady' targets arsenal of corny treats at any event

By Joan Bean
 Times-News correspondent

"TWIN FALLS" — Irene Leggett's friends call her "the popcorn lady." She pops up a big batch of popcorn as a gift when someone is sick, or to give to a child who is having a birthday and for other occasions.

"And I've got a bunch of friends who are NBA fans, and we cheer for the same teams," she says. "When the games are on, I see to it they get some popcorn."

Leggett's love for popcorn began when she was a child. Her grandfather grew popcorn for the family's use, and stored it under the hay in his barn.

She says she can remember going to the barn for popcorn that was still on the cob.

"To get it started you rub two cobs together until you get a few kernels loose and take the rest of it off, with your thumbs," she says. "I remember how sore our thumbs got," she says.

Now, Leggett buys her popcorn in the store, usually selecting the yellow kind, because the kernels are bigger. She uses an air popper.

"It is so fast," she says. "I have some on hand all the time."

To store the corn before popping she removes it from the plastic bag, and puts it into a bottle with an airtight lid. When she puts candy on popped corn, she stores that in airtight containers, too.

"Then it will keep for weeks - if you can keep from eating it," she says.

Leggett says chocolate popcorn was her father's favorite. "And it is good," she says.

CHOCOLATE POPCORN
 Boil to firm ball stage while stirring (takes 10-15 minutes):
 1 cup sugar
 ¼ cup cocoa
 ¼ cup margarine
 ¼ cup milk
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 When mixture has reached firm ball stage, pour it over:
 3 hot air-poppersful or 25-30 handfuls of popped corn
 Stir until well-coated and dry.
 If this is cooked until the firm ball stage, it will not be sticky. If it has not cooked long enough and feels a little sticky, it can be put in the microwave on high for a minute or so or conventional oven at 250 for at least 20 minutes, until dry to touch.
 The popcorn recipe Leggett uses most often, because it is so quick to fix, is...
MICROWAVE POPCORN
 If the corn pops really big, producing a lot of volume, she uses:
 3 air poppers full of popcorn (This generally fills a large brown grocery bag 2/3 full.)
 Combine:
 1 cup sugar
 1 square margarine
 2 tablespoons syrup
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 Microwave on high about 1½ minutes. Then stir it and put back in on high about 30 seconds. Until mixture is really hot and margarine melted. Remove from microwave and add.

Care needed with flowering bulbs

Spring-flowering bulbs such as tulips, daffodils and hyacinths have recently completed their bloom.

What remains are leaves which will gradually turn brown and die. Those leaves are manufacturing the food to produce new bulbs for next year's bloom. As soon as the leaves start to turn brown, the new bulb is fully formed and they can be removed.

If the bulbs have become overgrown with shrubs or are too crowded to bloom well, they can be dug-and-replanted. It is not necessary to wait until fall to replant. In fact, just as the leaves are beginning to turn brown is a better time to dig them.

The stem indicates clearly just where each bulb is located. They can be replanted immediately at a less crowded spacing or a new location. They can also be stored in a refrigerator for up to three months if you can't decide where to plant them right now.

Annual flowers such as petunias or marigolds can be planted on top of spring flowering bulbs for summer color. I usually do not wait until the leaves turn brown but simply plant flowers in between the bulbs. The browning bulb leaves can be removed later.

Summer flowering bulbs are normally planted in the spring. Because of our relatively short growing season, most should be started inside in pots. Some like tuberous begonias, dahlias and anemones can be purchased as potted plants in nurseries now.

Gladiolus is one summer flowering bulb which can be planted directly outside in June and still bloom before frost. Gladiolus are sometimes planted at two week intervals from April until the end of June for a succession of flowers for cutting.

All summer flowering bulbs except lilies must be dug in the fall and stored at a cool temperature for the winter. Lily bulbs can be planted in spring or fall. They are just as hardy as tulips and daffodils.

Bearded iris is sometimes classified as a bulb although its root is actually a rhizome. These spectacular flowers with long sword shaped leaves bloom this month. The best time to plant, divide or move bearded iris is in July or August after they are through blooming. They bloom best if divided regularly about every three years.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Fans, air conditioners will last longer with proper maintenance

Portable cooling devices such as window air conditioners and fans will work better and last longer if given some simple maintenance. Cleaning and lubricating are generally needed most but often are ignored if delayed until a heat wave hits.

Start by making sure the electrical cord and plug are in good condition. For safety, of course, the unit must be unplugged throughout a checkup. Examine the cord for breaks or nicks and the plug for cracks or loose terminal posts.

Suitable replacement cords can sometimes be obtained from manufacturers or appliance-part dealers, but a substitute cord that doesn't meet the appliance's requirements can be as dangerous as a deteriorated cord. If you are in doubt about cord replacement, take the appliance to a qualified appliance-repair shop or discard it.

You can use a vacuum cleaner to clean the outer housings and grilles of air conditioners and fans. A brush or crevice tool will eliminate loose dirt and dust. Most air-conditioner grilles and some fan grilles are held in place with clips and screws, and they should be removed for better access when

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

You can sometimes expose an air-conditioner chassis and inner parts, including the motor and condenser, by removing a few retaining screws and sliding the chassis out of the case. Chassis removal is especially helpful when you are cleaning window or wall air conditioners left in place year-round. However, some units, especially old ones, are extremely heavy. In most cases, it is possible to heft the chassis to test the weight before pulling it free. Removal of the chassis permits the interior of an air-conditioner case, as well as the condenser, motor and fan, to be vacuumed and cleaned.

Greasy deposits are likely to remain on parts of some appliances after vacuuming. You usually can remove the deposits with a mild spray detergent and a damp sponge, but you must take care not to get liquid cleaner or water in a motor or other electrical part. When cleaning, you should wipe all parts that get wet with a soft cloth and then allow them to dry for 24 hours before the appliance is used.

The motor is usually the only part in an air conditioner or fan that might need lubrication. Check the owner's manual or labels on the motor for specific lubricating instructions. Motors that need lubricating have small oiling cups or openings at the ends, near the shaft bearings. Usually, you need only a few drops of an appliance-motor oil, and once-a-year lubrication is adequate for most motors.

Air-conditioner filters, located behind the front grille, also need attention.

Filters should be washed in warm, sudsy water, rinsed and allowed to dry before reinstallation. If a filter is torn or deteriorated, replace it. If a duplicate filter is not available, replacement filters that can be cut to any size are available.

Readers' questions and comments are welcome and should be sent to Gene Austin, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Box 8263, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101. Questions cannot be answered personally.

Care needed with flowering bulbs

Spring flowering bulbs such as tulips, daffodils and hyacinths have recently completed their bloom.

Allen Wilson Gardening

What remains are leaves which will gradually turn brown and die. Those leaves are manufacturing the food to produce new bulbs for next year's bloom. As soon as the leaves start to turn brown the new bulb is fully formed and they can be removed.

If the bulbs have become overgrown with shrubs or are too crowded to bloom well, they can be dug and replanted. It is not necessary to wait until fall to replant. In fact, just as the leaves are beginning to turn brown is a better time to dig them.

The stem indicates clearly just where each bulb is located. They can be replanted immediately at a less crowded spacing or a new location. They can also be stored in a refrigerator for up to three months if you can't decide where to plant them right now.

Annual flowers such as petunias or marigolds can be planted on top of spring flowering bulbs for summer color. I usually do not wait until the leaves turn brown but simply plant flowers in between the bulbs. The browning bulb leaves can be removed later.

Summer flowering bulbs are normally planted in the spring. Because of our relatively short growing season, most should be started inside in pots. Some like tuberous begonias, dahlias and anemones can be purchased as potted plants in nurseries now.

Gladioli are one summer flowering bulb which can be planted directly outside in June and still bloom before frost. Gladioli are sometimes planted at two week intervals from April until the end of June for a succession of flowers for cutting.

All summer flowering bulbs except lilies must be dug in the fall and stored at a cool temperature for the winter. Lily bulbs can be planted in spring or fall. They are just as hardy as tulips and daffodils.

Bearded iris is sometimes classified as a bulb although its root is actually a rhizome. These spectacular flowers, with long sword shaped leaves bloom this month. The best time to plant, divide or move bearded iris is in July or August after they are through blooming. They bloom best if divided regularly about every three years.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times-News.

Fans, air conditioners will last longer with proper maintenance

Do it yourself Gene Austin

Portable cooling devices such as window air conditioners and fans will work better and last longer if given some simple maintenance. Cleaning and lubricating are generally needed most but often are ignored if delayed until a heat wave hits.

Start by making sure the electrical cord and plug are in good condition. For safety, of course, the unit must be unplugged throughout a checkup. Examine the cord for breaks or nicks and the plug for cracks or loose terminal posts.

Suitable replacement cords can sometimes be obtained from manufacturers or appliance-part dealers, but a substitute cord that doesn't meet the appliance's requirements can be as dangerous as a deteriorated cord. If you are in doubt about cord replacement, take the appliance to a qualified appliance-repair shop or discard it.

You can use a vacuum cleaner to clean the outer housings and grilles of air conditioners and fans. A brush or device tool will eliminate loose dirt and dust. Most air-conditioner grilles and some fan grilles are held in place with clips and screws; and you should remove them for better access when cleaning.

You can sometimes expose an air-conditioner chassis and inner parts, including the motor and condenser, by removing a few retaining screws and sliding the chassis out of the case. Chassis removal is especially helpful when you are cleaning window or wall air conditioners left in place year-round. However, some units, especially older ones, are extremely heavy. In most cases, it is possible to lift the chassis to test the weight before pulling it free. Removal of the chassis permits the interior of an air-conditioner case, as well as the condenser, motor and fan, to be vacuumed and cleaned.

Greasy deposits are likely to remain on parts of some appliances after vacuuming. You usually can remove the deposits with a mild spray detergent and a damp sponge, but you must take care not to get liquid cleaner or water in a motor or other electrical part. When cleaning, you should wipe all parts that get wet with a soft cloth and then allow them to dry for 24 hours before the appliance is used.

The motor is usually the only part in an air conditioner or fan that might need lubrication. Check the owner's manual or labels on the motor for specific lubricating instructions. Motors that need lubricating have small oiling cups or openings at the ends, near the shaft bearings. Usually, you need only a few drops of an appliance-motor oil, and once-a-year lubrication is adequate for most motors.

Air-conditioner filters, located behind the front grille, also need attention.

Filters should be washed in warm, sudsy water, rinsed and allowed to dry before reinstallation. If a filter is torn or deteriorated, replace it. If a duplicate filter is not available, replacement filters that can be cut to any size are available.

Readers' questions and comments are welcome and should be sent to Gene Austin, The Philadelphia Inquirer, Box 8263, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101. Questions cannot be answered personally.

What's what?

A shot of whiskey
Not everybody recalls when a "hooker" was also another name for a straight shot of whiskey. Likewise so called in allusion to Union Army General Joseph Hooker. He believed his troops should get what they wanted.

Brand names come and go. "Darling Fanny Pan Cake" went. It was chewing tobacco.

When Christopher Columbus landed in the West Indies, tribesmen in a friendship gesture offered him dried tobacco leaves. He tossed them away in disgust. Today that might make him some kind of hero, I suppose. In fact, though, he had no notion of what they were for.

A. Not long after over-her became water turtles low-domed.

PRINCESS GRACE
Q. Didn't Princess Grace Kelly record a No. 1 hit record?
A. With Bing Crosby, she did. "True Love." In 1952, same year she moved to Monaco.

Blood pressures of some people invariably go up as soon as they walk into doctors' offices. The phenomenon is called "White Coat Hypertension."

Q. What was New York City's first electric sign?
A. A huge fixture with 1,200 lights to advertise 27 varieties.

This bird called the kwi, only about as big as a chicken, lays a one-pound egg. Remarkable! Did I mention the kwi has no tail?

honey, vinegar, and mustard and bring to a simmer over medium heat. Taste and season with cayenne and salt and black pepper. The sauce may be made ahead and refrigerated.

To finish cooking the ribs, heat the oven to 350 degrees. Place the ribs in a roasting pan and lightly baste the top side with sauce. Cook in the oven about one hour, turning the ribs and lightly basting every 10 to 15 minutes.

The ribs can also be grilled. Cook in water as directed, and then finish cooking over a low fire on a charcoal grill, turning every 15 minutes. Start basting with the barbecue sauce after 30 minutes. Total cooking time is about 60 minutes.

To make popcorn, it will foam up. Pour over popcorn in paper bag. Using a slotted spoon, stir with lifting motion until well coated. Roll the paper bag up. Put in microwave, and microwave on high for 90 seconds. Remove from oven, and stir. Return to oven and cook on high for another 90 seconds.

*For variety, 1 tablespoon mozzarella may be used instead of the syrup. Or 2 tablespoons honey or maple syrup may be substituted for it, too.

"It's crisp and not sticky, and it doesn't have a lot of sugar on it, just enough to give it flavor," she says. "The coating doesn't drown out the popcorn flavor. It is good." And here is another way to fix popcorn:

HERBED POPCORN

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons chives
- 1 teaspoon basil
- 1/2 teaspoon thyme
- 1/4 teaspoon marjoram
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine ingredients and simmer a little 2-3 minutes so that the butter is flavored with the herbs. Pour over:

2 cups pretzels well coated. Put into a 250-degree oven for 15-20 minutes, until it is a little crispier, and not oily to the touch.

*If you prefer a lot of butter on it, cut down on the popcorn.

POPCORN BALLS

Pour over:

3 popcornful of popped corn

Stir until all coated. This is sugary to the touch, but not sticky.

Let it cool. Use the next recipe when she makes...

Fortune-cookie maker seeks new words of wisdom.

Chicago Tribune
CHICAGO — Won Ton Foods Inc., which calls itself the largest fortune-cookie producer in the world, wants to read your fortune.
In recent years, co-owner Donald Lau took on the task of writing 1,800 new fortunes each year at his Brooklyn company — in some cases making the fortune seen fresher than the cookie, such as "Beware of ambition. It can lead to a lot of hard work."

Now Lau is accepting public input. Noting that Americans break open 2 million fortune cookies each day, Lau says it's hard for one writer to keep up.
Although there are three fortune-cookie factories in Chicago, all use fortunes provided by companies such as Cosmos Enterprises of Westboro, Mass., which rotates its stockpile of 10,000 fortunes every few years.

If you've always wanted to see your words written into baked goods, send your ideas to Donald Lau, Won Ton Food, 220 Moore St., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11206. Sorry, he can't pay or give bylines.

Man's yearly physicals missed growing prostate cancer trouble

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this from a well-known cancer and tumor clinic in Twin Falls.

We are here because my husband, who has had a complete physical every year since 1971, has inoperable prostate cancer. I am angry and bitter because no doctor, during 20 years of annual physical examinations that included a digital rectal examination, ever mentioned that there are blood tests which can detect prostate cancer.

We have been told that my husband has had this disease for at least seven to eight years. We also learned that if a man's brother or father has had prostate cancer, his chances of getting cancer are increased 2½ times in every medical questionnaire my husband has ever filled out. He stated that his father had died of prostate cancer. (His brother was diagnosed last week with the same disease.)

We are hoping that our experience will educate others so they will not find themselves where we are. We strongly urge all "high risk" men to be examined by a urologist, because any physician does not recognize prostate disease.

—ANGRY-AND-BITTER

DEAR-ANGRY AND BITTER: You have every right to be both angry and bitter, and I thank you for trying to warn others.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

When in doubt, sit with your own mate.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for insisting that a written thank-you note for a gift is still absolutely imperative. I was appalled when a reader suggested that a "warm hug and a verbal thank-you at the next chance meeting at church or a social function would be sufficient."

A child should be taught at a very early age to write a thank-you note. Writing improves finger coordination, penmanship and spelling, and helps to create a bond between the child and the giver.

In today's world of electronic communication—the telephone and fax—it is still necessary to record thoughts, events and instructions in writing. If a "tape" is erased, the message is lost forever. Therefore it is vital that we learn how to communicate in writing. And it all begins when a child is taught to write a thank-you note. At 86, I am still writing.

—M.S.P., SANTA ANA, CALIF.

To get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a long-business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

For readers who do not know what "high risk" means in this context, it refers to people whose blood relatives have been afflicted with the same disease.

DEAR ABBY: When a couple asks another couple to ride along with them, what is the proper seating? Should the wife automatically sit in front with her husband, or should she sit in the back with the other lady? Or should the couple whose car it is ask the other couple how they prefer to ride?

—EDNA C. IN CARMAN, ILL.

DEAR EDNA: It depends on the circumstances—how well the couples know each other, the distance to be traveled and whether either of the couples are newlyweds. (Newlyweds usually prefer to sit together.)

The important factor in the seating arrangement is that everybody be pleased and comfortable. Couples who have a long friendship might prefer "one-on-one" conversation with the spouse of the same sex. My personal rule of thumb

Bulls have Magic talking retirement

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The disappointment of a 3-1 deficit in the NBA Finals has Magic Johnson thinking he might consider retirement after the series.

"I have three weeks off after this is over and I'll sit down and decide what to do," Johnson said after the Los Angeles Lakers' practice Tuesday. "I might decide to leave after this season, or it might be one or two more years. I always wanted to be a businessman, although I'm set up financially so I don't have to work another day in my life."

Johnson, 31, said he never expected what he called the "ultimate series" between the Lakers and Chicago Bulls would become so one-sided. The Bulls have a chance to win the first championship in the franchise's 25-year history with another victory at the Forum on Wednesday night.

"There becomes a point when you say, 'I think I'm tired of traveling. I'm tired of giving things up,'" Johnson said. "You always wonder how much longer you want to go, even if you're not really thinking of quitting."

Magic Johnson Surprised at series

"Ultimately, I'll do what's best for me, not what's best for the Lakers or the NBA. If I thought in my heart that we had no legitimate chance to win, I'd be more inclined to quit."

The Lakers, who have won five championships since Johnson's arrival in 1979-80, got no encouraging news on the injury front Tuesday.

Cochi Mike Dunleavy, who said he wasn't counting on injured starters James Worthy and Byron Scott, scrimmaged with the team because he wanted Johnson to rest, too. That left nine players on the floor.

"I made a few baskets, but our bench has guys who are better than me," said Dunleavy, 37, who retired as an active player in 1985 but filled in as an emergency reserve for Milwaukee as recently as last season.

"We have to prepare like James and Byron are not going to play," Johnson said. In the 1980 Finals against Philadelphia, Johnson moved to center in Game 6 and had 42 points and 15 rebounds as the Lakers beat the 76ers and won the championship despite an injury to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"This is a similar situation, but I don't know what's going to happen and how I might play in the game," Johnson said. "I can't go into a game saying, 'I'm just going to shoot tonight.' You can't plan things that way. I have to see how the game goes."

Asked if he would play the entire game, Johnson replied, "I don't think I'll play 48 minutes, but it will be close to that."

Worthy, who sprained his left ankle two weeks ago in the Lakers-Portland series, and Scott, who has a bruised right shoulder, would be replaced by A.C. Green at forward and Terry Teague at guard.

"Neither of them is at the point where they could play tomorrow," trainer Gary Vitti said. "But we have another day to work. No decision will be made on either of them until game time. We're treating them around the clock. I haven't given up."

"The real test will be getting on the floor, doing some cutting and some spontaneous movement," Vitti said.

"I'm not ruling anything out," Scott said. "I'm keeping hope alive that I'll play. It wouldn't help the team if I go out there injured. I was told by the doctor that it takes a week or two for this to heal. But we're trying to speed up the healing process."

Strawberry passes by Giants' Mitchell in All-Star balloting

NEW YORK — Daryl Strawberry of Los Angeles moved past San Francisco's Kevin Mitchell to take the lead among National League outfielders in the latest balloting for the All-Star Game.

Strawberry, who trailed Mitchell last week, is ahead by almost 40,000 votes, according to figures released Tuesday by the NL. Andre Dawson of the Chicago Cubs is third in the voting for outfielders. The top NL vote-getter is Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg (758,341).

Vote on expansion unlikely this week

Knight-Ridder News Service

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — It appears South Floridians will have to wait at least a week before they can officially lay claim to a Major League Baseball team.

Commissioner Fay Vincent, after meeting with baseball's executive council, said an owners' vote this week is unlikely if and when baseball's eight-man ownership committee approves the South Florida and Denver ownership groups.

However, several owners said that they plan to approve the NL expansion committee's recommendations of South Florida and Denver, once the ownership committee declares them fit.

The ownership committee, which handles all franchise transactions, will review South Florida-Big League Baseball-Topco by H. Wayne Huizenga, and the Denver group, headed by John Antoumci. If there are no problems, the matter goes to the 26 individual owners for a vote.

Asked if the Boston Red Sox would vote affirmatively, owner Haywood Sullivan said: "Oh yes. It's just up to (the ownership committee) to come to a vote."

Said Atlanta Braves CEO Bill Barsholomay: "I don't have any problem with it."

A majority (eight of 14) vote is required by the American League. Nine of the 12 NL owners must vote affirmatively for the measure to be approved.

But they may not get the chance to vote Wednesday. Vincent quashed the optimism expressed by ownership committee head Fred Kohlmann of the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday that a vote could happen by Thursday.

"We talked about a number of issues in our meeting of the executive council," Vincent said Tuesday. "There is no change in

IOC expected to OK blood tests for drugs

The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, England — Blood samples are likely to be used in testing athletes for drugs at future Olympics, the Games' top anti-doping official says.

Despite sensitive moral and legal questions, blood tests offer the best way to identify banned substances which evade detection in urine samples, Prince Alexandre de Merode, chairman of the IOC's medical commission, said Tuesday.

De Merode presented a report on the issue to the IOC Executive Board and said he expects it will receive final approval by the IOC next year. "I believe everybody is interested in doing this because they realize the difficulty and necessity of detecting new drugs," he said. "Taking blood is probably the only way to have a good test."

De Merode said blood tests would supplement urine samples, not replace them. "It will be a complementary test, a second check."

IOC spokeswoman Michele Verdier said blood tests would not be implemented until after the 1992 Barcelona Olympics. The earliest they could be used would be at the 1994 Winter Games in Lillehammer, Norway.

The issue was first raised at the IOC's Executive Board meeting in April. At the time, officials noted that blood testing could raise legal, moral and religious problems, and might even violate laws on human rights and civil liberties in some countries.

Main Events wins rights to promote Holyfield-Tyson

The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — Promoter Dan Duva, with a purse bid of $51,010,000, won the right to promote the Evander Holyfield-Mike Tyson heavyweight championship fight.

Duva's Main Events topped six other promoters in purse bids held Tuesday by the International Boxing Federation for Holyfield's mandatory defense.

Don King, Tyson's promoter, did not submit a bid and said Monday that Tyson no longer considers the IBF a player in the boxing world because it recognizes South African fighters.

"We don't want to be ranked by the IBF," King said, adding that if Tyson beats Holyfield he would not accept the IBF title.

Women's golf tournament prize money up this year

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

JEROME — Under new sponsorship, the Magic Valley Women's Golf Tournament will be offering more in prize money when it begins a two-day run at the Jerome Country Club Thursday morning.

The Southern Idaho Grocers have taken over sponsorship of the annual event, ending a 52-year run by The Times-

News, and that, plus additional sponsors for various tees and greens, will result in about $4,000 added to the prize list.

Among those running for the top prize will be Twin Falls' Rosemary McRoberts who won the title in Bull last year and is seeking her fourth overall crown.

The list of challengers is impressive and familiar.

Not the least is Virginia Undheim,

Twin Falls, who has won this tournament 14 times.

There are other former champions in the strong 21-women championship flight including Shuana Robins, Oleta Roberts, Sorensen Sorenson and Dennis Ellingham.

Some of the new faces try to crowd the veterans out of the top spot will be Tara Cantrell, a Washington State golfer, and Gooding graduate Mandy Patterson.

"We think this is a very strong championship flight," said McRoberts, noting the field basically is limited to Magic Valley residents. "We have 21 girls with six to 16 handicaps. We have a total of 93 women participating in five flights and we think every flight will be very competitive."

The tournament will begin from a shotgun start at 9 a.m. Thursday and Friday. The social highlight will be an awards luncheon following the end of competition Friday.

Urbie scores on passed ball to lift Giants

CHICAGO (AP) — Jose Urbie raced home with the tie-breaking run on a passed ball in the 10th inning and pinch-hitter Mike Kingery singled in another to lift San Francisco over Chicago.

The Giants have won seven of 10 while the Cubs have lost their three straight.

Urbie opened the 10th by drawing a walk off Dave Smith (3-0), who had surrendered a ninth-inning homer to Matt Williams to send the game into extra innings.

Urbie went to second when Smith hit Mike Felder with a pitch and took third on Willie McGee's long fly to center. Urbie came home and Felder moved up when a Smith pitch got by catcher Rick Wilkins. Kingery followed with a single.

Kelly Downs (3-4), the third San Francisco pitcher, got the victory and Dave Righetti pitched the 10th for his sixth save.

Mets 2, Braves 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Viola gave up one run in 8 1/3 innings and Kevin McReynolds hit a two-run home as the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 2-1 Tuesday.

Viola was two outs away from his fourth complete game of the season when play was delayed 57 minutes by a rain. John Franco relieved when the game resumed and got the last two outs on four pitches for his 13th save.

Viola (7-3) had a perfect game going 5 1/3 innings when Rafael Belliard struck out. But Belliard reached first base when catcher Rick Cerone could not handle a wild pitch in the dirt.

Belliard was sacrificed to second by losing pitcher Charlie Leibrand (5-5) and scored on Ron Gant's single, the first hit off Viola.

Chicago Cub Ryne Sandberg dives safely back into first base ahead of the tag from San Francisco's Greg Litton in the first inning of Tuesday's game at Wrigley Field.

Chris Sabo paced the Reds' attack with two RBIs and pair of doubles.

Cincinnati scored two runs in the fourth inning off Chris Nabholz (2-4) to take a 2-1 lead and added four runs in the fifth.

HOUSTON (AP) — Pinch-hitter Ken Oberkirk drew a bases-loaded walk from Roger McDowell with one out in 11th inning Tuesday night to give the Houston Astros a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

McDowell (3-2) struck out Craig Biggio to start the 11th, but Ken Caminiti and Jeff Bagwell followed with singles and Steve Finley was intentionally walked. McDowell then walked Oberkirk on four pitches to force in the game-winning run.

Al Osuna (2-2) pitched the 11th inning for the victory.

Houston left the bases loaded in the 10th when Casey Candaele took five hits.

The Phillies got two runners to third base and the Astros one runner through out of the plate to keep Mark Portugal and Pat Combs locked in a scoreless duel.

Casey Candaele singled in the sixth and tried to score on Biggio's double to the left-field wall.

Combs, who lost his last three starts, pitched nine innings and gave up five hits.

Ryan pitches 6-hitter; Rangers down Chisox

American League

ARRLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Nolan Ryan pitched a six-hitter and struck out 10 Tuesday night to end his career shutout as the Texas Rangers beat the Chicago White Sox 2-0 to end an eight-game losing streak.

It was the first complete game by a Texas pitcher since Ryan's no-hitter on May 15, 1973.

Neither Ryan (4-4) nor Chicago's Alex Fernandez (2-6) had allowed a run until the sixth inning, when the Rangers scored twice on Mike Stanley's RBI single and a bases-loaded walk to Mario Diaz.

Ryan struck out 10 or more for the 210th game of his career, and third time this season. He tied Tom Seaver for eighth on the all-time shutout list.

Terry Shumpert had his second home run in the third inning when the Royals' biggest scoring seven runs scored New York on July 4 — as Kansas City broke a three-game losing streak. All the runs were charged to Jose Mesa (4-7), whose ERA swelled to 7.53 over his last five starts.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins, getting a bases-loaded single from Kent Hrbek in the eighth inning, rallied to extend their winning streak to 10 games with a 5-3 victory Tuesday night over the New York Yankees.

Kevin Tapani (6-0) won his second straight start despite allowing home runs to Mel Hall and Roberto Kelly. Rick Aguilera pitched a perfect ninth for his 17th save, tying him with Oakland's Dennis Eckersley for the major league lead.

Open tough on foreigners

Knight-Ridder News Service

CHASKA, Minn. — By now, we've heard that the Open has been around since 1896, but the fact is that Englishman Tony Jacklin won the U.S. Open 21 years ago at Hazeltine.

What some of you might not have noticed is that Jacklin also is the lone European to win America's national golf championship in the past 25 years. Australian-born David Graham won the 1981 U.S. Open.

Back in the 1960s and '70s, it was rare when a "foreign" player would win an Open — or any of the four majors, for that matter.

That has changed in recent years. Except at the Open.

Non-Americans now own the Masters and British Open. Gary Player, in 1987, was the most recent American to win at Augusta. Mark Calcavecchia, in 1989, is the lone American to win the British Open in seven years.

Even at the PGA, in which the foreign contingent is the smallest, last year's tournament was won by Australian Wayne Grady.

Why is it that foreigners can't do the other majors but not the U.S. Open?

The prime Open winner Curtis Strange had one possible explanation. "I don't know what type of golf course the Europeans play week in and week out, but we see these types of conditions every week, the narrow fairways and long rough," Strange said Tuesday. "Maybe we're more used to it."

Nick Faldo of England, who has performed the best among foreigners in recent Opens, finishing second in 1988 and tying for third last year, agreed.

"We don't have the uniformity of the rough in Europe that you have here," said Faldo, who was one shot out of last year's Open playoff, won by Hale Irwin over Mike Donat.

"Here, the rough is consistent — it's just bad. In Europe, you can have a good lie or a bad lie."

"And we don't play as tough of golf courses week in and week out. I think American courses are tougher than European ones."

The main reason is that the rough at Augusta National is not nearly as deep as thick as that on Open courses. Players can gamble off the tee and still have good shots to the green if they catch the rough. The rough on an Open course is a more severe penalty.

Another reason for the lack of foreign success at the Open is the U.S. Golf Association's limitations on non-Americans in the tournament; the foreign players say.

NCAA may examine its executive director

SAN DIEGO (AP) — NCAA executive director Dick Schultz, who could come under investigation by his own organization, said Tuesday he was "embarrassed" that rules violations may have occurred while he was athletic director at Virginia.

Virginia is investigating whether its athletic fund-raising arm illegally made loans to student-athletes from 1982-90, Schultz said in a letter to the NCAA.

"I guess the only thing I want clearly understood is that I had absolutely no knowledge of any major NCAA rules violations while I was there," Schultz said in a news conference prior to making a speech at the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics' annual convention.

"Anything I say has the ability to be misinterpreted by either side. Virginia might think I'm taking a shot at them and somebody else might say I'm trying to whitewash the situation," Schultz said. "I think the best thing to do is wait for them to complete their investigation and see where that goes."

Virginia president John T. Casteen III formed a four-member panel last month to investigate the loans by the Virginia Student Aid Foundation. The committee will report its findings to the NCAA.

'Obviously I think all of us who have served there as athletic directors are probably somewhat embarrassed by it, that something potentially in violation could go on.'

— NCAA's Dick Schultz on his days at Virginia

If the investigation reaches the NCAA, Schultz said he would not be involved in conducting it because investigators report to the Infractions Committee, not him. He said he will be interviewed "if they want me to be."

Virginia athletic director Jim Copeland said last month that most of the 36 loans in question went to members of the football, men's basketball, wrestling and golf teams. He said some involved graduate assistant coaches and four or five students who did not play sports.

The interest-free loans ranged from $40 to $1,700 and averaged about $350, Copeland said. Most have been paid off, he said.

NCAA rules say any employee or representative of a school's athletic interests may not provide a student-athlete with a loan. But Rick Evrad, the NCAA's director of legislative services, said loans would not constitute a violation if they were "generally available to all students."

Wayne Sparks, Virginia's director of financial aid, said 30-day, interest-free loans up to $150 are available to all students through his office.

Sparks said that if the loan is received through the dean of students, the maximum amount available increases to $200 — still below the reported $359 average of the VSAF loans.

Copeland said the loans were discovered after an athlete approached VSAF executive director Lawson Drinkard about a loan. Drinkard, who was appointed in March, then researched VSAF records and discovered the previous loans.

"I guess I have a hard time convincing myself that anything was done there willfully," Schultz said. "Apparently this has been in existence since the 1950s through four different athletic directors and none, that I'm aware of, have knowledge of or were aware of it."

"Obviously I think all of us who have served there as athletic directors are probably somewhat embarrassed by it, that something potentially in violation could go on. I think that's still to be determined. But that's about all I can say."

Schultz's address was on economic issues, but the timing of the Virginia investigation is ironic because one of themes at this convention was image enhancement of college athletics.

"One of the great fears an athletic director has is what in the world is going on without his knowledge," Schultz said.

Gastineau's blow was indeed solid, official says

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The state boxing commissioner said videotapes of Mark Gastineau's quick knockout of Derrick Dukes convinced him the former New York Jets defensive end landed a solid blow.

Doug Beavers made the comment after columnist Jay Mariotti of The National Sports Daily in New York reported that Dukes said he was paid to "flop." Dukes denied making that statement.

Beavers said Monday that he was at first skeptical about the knockout, which came 12 seconds into Gastineau's pro boxing debut Saturday night in Salem. Gastineau's uppercut appeared to lift Dukes off the canvas. Dukes landed on his shoulders and head.

"I looked at the tape and he definitely got hit," Beavers said. "Whether he got hit hard enough to pick a 242-pound man off the ground is impossible to prove."

have held up the money and declared it no contest. There's no question he got hit."

Mariotti said Dukes told him Sunday at Roanoke Regional Airport: "You've got to do what you're paid for. I'd have whipped him."

Dukes denied Monday that he had spoken to any reporters at the airport. "There wasn't anybody there," he said. "It's a lie."

Promoter Rick Parker said Dukes received only the $600 his contract specified. "The guy got beat. He was embarrassed, so if he said he could have beaten Mark, he was only doing it to make himself look better."

Dukes' manager, Rob Russen, blamed Gastineau's unorthodox style — for his fighter's early demise. "It was a vicious uppercut. Nobody throws an uppercut on the third punch of the fight. That's what makes Gastineau so dangerous. He's so unorthodox," he said.

Nuggets trade top scorer for draft pick

DENVER (AP) — The rebuilding-minded Denver Nuggets dealt leading scorer Michael Adams to the Washington Bullets on Tuesday for a first-round draft pick, giving the NBA's worst team two of the top eight picks in the NBA draft.

The Nuggets sent Adams, along with their No. 19 pick in the first round of the draft and future draft considerations, to Washington for the Bullets' No. 1 pick, the eighth choice overall.

The deal gives the Nuggets the fourth and the eighth choices in the first round — the highest two choices Denver has ever had in its history.

No other team in the June 26 draft has two lottery picks.

For Adams, it means a return to the Bullets, where he played for one season (1986-87) before being dealt to the Nuggets.

Adams was a "throw in" in a trade that also sent Jay Vincent to Denver in exchange for Darrell Walker and Mark Alanie.

In four seasons with Denver, the 5-foot-10 Adams became one of the game's best point guards and a dangerous 3-point shooter. This past season, he led the Nuggets in scoring (26.5), assists (10.5) and minutes played (35.5).

"We appreciate all the contributions Michael Adams has made to this franchise, and we wish him all the best," Denver general manager Bernie Bickerstaff said.

"It's always difficult when you give up quality, but you have to give up something to get something good."

"We are in the process of rebuilding the team, and this gives us two early first-round picks. With our own pick, No. 4, and Washington's No. 8, we should be able to land two good young players. With this trade, we may be able to solidify ourselves at two positions."

Among No. 8 picks in recent drafts were former Nuggets forward Calvin Natt, Boston center Robert Parrish, Phoenix All-Star Tom Chambers, Milwaukee's Jack Sikma, Indiana's Detlef Schrempf and the Los Angeles Clippers' Ron Harper.

But Bickerstaff indicated he might not be finished dealing.

"What I want to do with No. 8 is listen," he said. "There are some teams positioned behind us that may want a particular player. We may be able to parlay this into something else at No. 11."

He acknowledged he was discussing a possible trade with Atlanta for veteran guard Doc Rivers.

"We are talking," Bickerstaff said. "Doc Rivers makes sense in terms of a matchup situation with Chris (Jackson), Todd (Licht) and Reggie (Williams). Michael and Chris weren't a good match."

On the other hand, Bickerstaff said, it would be comfortable heading into the draft with the No. 4 and 8 choices.

"There are three players we like at No. 4 — Dikembe Mutombo, Doug Smith and Steve Smith," he said. "Stacey Augmon, Greg Anthony, Mark Macon, Luc Longley — they all could be there at No. 8. We'd take two of those players."

Jordan's king hospitalized with irregular heartbeat

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein, hospitalized with an irregular heartbeat, assured Jordanians from his sickbed Tuesday that he would soon be back to work... The royal palace said the 55-year-old monarch, who has a decade-long history of heart trouble, was in excellent condition after being hospitalized Monday night at the kingdom's army hospital, Hussein Medical City... A palace official said he might be released by Wednesday. The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the heart trouble was caused by "a result of continuous hard work during the past few weeks."

King Hussein in satisfactory condition physically draining activities." But Hussein took part in shuttle diplomacy during the Gulf crisis, visiting dozens of countries in a vain bid to stave off war. "I fear only God," he once said. Said to be a direct descendant of the Prophet Muhammad, Hussein was named king in August 1952 as a student of 16. His father, King Talal, abdicated because of mental illness after ruling for one year following the assassination of Hussein's grandfather, King Abdullah.

The monarch was educated in exclusive schools in the United Kingdom: Harrow and the military academy of Sandhurst. Hussein has been married four times — divorced three times — and has 11 children. His first marriage to Dina Abdel Hamid, his cousin, ended after she gave birth to their daughter, Princess Alia. In 1961, Hussein married an Englishwoman, Tony Avril Gardiner, defying predictions that marrying a Westerner could diminish his popularity in the Arab world. Gardiner became Muallim and changed her name to Muna, Arabic for desire. That marriage lasted until 1973, when the king married a Palestinian woman, Alia Toukan. In 1979, Hussein married American-born Lisa Halaby, who converted to Islam and changed her name to Noor, Arabic for light.

The king has a sister and two brothers, including the heir to the throne, Crown Prince Hassan. Public sentiment in Jordan ran strongly in favor of Iraq's Saddam Hussein, causing tensions with the United States. Doctors said they suggested Hussein go on a diet last year, which he did. Royal palace officials have said Hussein lost 37 pounds between June and September. Doctors also advised the monarch to refrain from undertaking

Criticism of Albanian dictator provokes uproars at congress

TIRANA, Albania (AP) — A withering attack by Albania's leading writer on the "iron dictatorship" of the late Enver Hoxha provoked an uproar Tuesday at the Communist Party congress. A day after a party leader denounced the repressions of Hoxha's 41-year reign and hours after the party disciplined 17 of the dictator's cronies for abusing power, many party members reacted angrily to the renewed assault on Hoxha. Hundreds of the 1,400-plus delegates stood, shouting abuse, clapping rhythmically and chanting slogans for "Enver," the man they revered for forging Albanian independence at the end of World War II.

There have been predictions the Communists, known formally as the Party of Labor, could splinter into factions as the party prepares to share power for the first time since taking control of Albania in 1944. The party congress began Monday, a day after independent trade unions called off a month-long general strike that crippled the nearly bankrupt economy and compelled the Communists to agree to allow a multiparty government run the country until new parliamentary elections next May.

The Communists won multiparty elections this spring, but the party's standing has slumped and it appears to have little hope of winning next year's elections. Senior party official Xhefit Gjoni opened the congress Monday by blaming the country's economic backwardness on Hoxha's repressive regime and his decision to isolate Albania from the world. On Tuesday, Dritero Agolli, head of the Writers' Union, took the podium to denounce Hoxha's dictatorial rule.

"The human traditions of the country were destroyed," Agolli said. "People began to be afraid of one another, they saw a spy in everyone, became afraid even of family members. This fear existed even between man and wife." Hoxha terrorized, jailed or executed opponents and party comrades alike, and then appointed new leaders responsible for "crazy decisions" such as banning religion, foreign literature or peasant ownership of any animals but donkeys, Agolli said. Nepotism, arrogance, incompetence, servility and "hankering after villas and luxuries," characterized the Hoxha leadership from the 1970s on, Agolli said. He conceded he was among the privileged, confessing: "I am responsible for those mistakes."

The writer, Albania's second most popular after Ismail Kadare who fled to French exile last October, previously was not known as an outspoken critic of communism. His speech came after nine hours of heated, closed-door discussions Monday night during which the congress expelled nine of Hoxha's fellow leaders from the party and balked eight more from the Central Committee for abusing privileges.

Indians make trip to get award against wishes of United States

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — American Indians traveled to Libya in defiance of U.S. restrictions to pick up a $250,000 prize from Muammar Gadhafi to honor their "struggle for freedom." Gadhafi, the Libyan leader, did not attend the ceremony Monday.

The 21 representatives of North and South American tribes said the $250,000 would go into a fund for all Indian nations. Abdel-Hamid el-Sayeh, head of the Palestine National Council or the Palestinian parliament-in-exile, and Farouk Abu-Issa, the head of the Arab Workers Union, were among the prominent speakers. They praised the American Indians' struggle against white domination, drawing parallels with the Palestinians' fight to end the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza strip.

Ruth Deeny, an American Indian from Minneapolis, said she did not believe U.S. allegations that Gadhafi sponsors terrorism. "I fully realize what his reputation is. Many of our people were considered terrorists, such as Crazy Horse," she said, referring to the 19th century Sioux warrior. "I don't believe it. If they call (Gadhafi) a terrorist, they have to call Bush a terrorist for killing all these people in Iraq."

Relations between Washington and Libya are strained, especially since the U.S. government accused Gadhafi of aiding terrorists who carried out December 1985 attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports that killed 19 people. Washington imposed economic sanctions against Libya in Jan. 7, 1986, including restrictions on Americans traveling to Libya and a ban on Americans working here. Gadhafi's prize was founded in 1989. It was first awarded to South African black leader Nelson Mandela.

In 1990, it was given to the children of the Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule in the West Bank and Gaza. This year, the Libyan leader said he chose the Indians because of the approach of 1992, the 500th anniversary of Christopher Columbus' voyage to America.

'I fully realize what his reputation is. Many of our people were considered terrorists, such as Crazy Horse ... If they call (Gadhafi) a terrorist, they have to call Bush a terrorist for killing all these people in Iraq.'

Molten rock is gathering beneath snow-capped Mt. Fuji, a seismologist says.

AP Wirephoto

Some cast wary eye on Mt. Fuji

TOKYO (AP) — The eruption of a killer volcano in southern Japan is causing some Japanese to cast a wary eye at Mount Fuji, the majestic national symbol that is within volcanic spitting distance of Tokyo.

"A Major Mount Fuji Eruption is Considered Common Sense Among the Experts," shouted one headline in this week's Sunday Mainichi magazine.

The article quoted Akira Suwa, a former researcher at the Meteorological Agency and a volcano expert, as saying "it is unnatural to think Mount Fuji will not erupt" in the future.

Japan's tallest mountain, which is considered a god of the indigenous Shinto religion and is the focus of a major cult, last blew its stack in 1707, when it rained a blanket of ash over Edo, now Tokyo, 62 miles to the northeast.

Since then, 12,385-foot Mount Fuji has maintained a serene silence although it remains classified an active volcano. Tens of thousands of Japanese jostle along its paths daily during the summer climbing season while countless tourists crowd nearby scenic resorts, unconcerned that the sleeping giant might one day violently rumble to life.

But last week's eruption of Mount Unzen that killed 38 people on the southern island of Kyushu has reminded the Japanese of their island nation's vulnerability to natural disasters, particularly volcanos and earthquakes.

The Japanese archipelago is of volcanic origin, and about 75 of the islands' 230 volcanos are active. They average six eruptions a year, usually minor ones.

In recent days, Japanese media have started to focus on the possibility of a Mount Fuji eruption.

The weekly Shukan Asahi quoted University of the Ryukyus expert Masaki Kimura as saying "there is no mistaking the fact that magma (molten rock) is piling up" underneath the conical volcano.

He noted "signs of extraordinary things happening" around Mount Fuji, including abnormally fluctuating water levels and gas spewing from the mountain.

Other experts, such as seismologist Kenshiro Tsumura, argue that there is no evidence of a link between the Mount Unzen eruption and possible activity at Mount Fuji.

Still, jitters abound, particularly since a volcano in the Philippines also has erupted in recent days.

Tsumuhito Kobayashi, a worker at city hall of Kawaguchiko at the foot of the mountain, said in a telephone interview there were rumors spreading that Fuji might erupt again.

Children in the area have started talking about their fears, he said in a telephone interview.

Concern about a Mount Fuji eruption surfaces from time to time. Most recently, meteorologist Masatoshi Sagara said he was "90 percent certain" the volcano would erupt between Sept. 10-15, 1983.

Seismologists don't see quick end to volcanic rumblings near base

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The volcano whose fiery emissions prompted the U.S. Air Force to close down one of its largest overseas bases could rumble for years before a major eruption, the chief Philippine seismologist said Tuesday.

Scientists have warned a major eruption could occur at Mount Pinatubo, and their remarks prompted nearly 15,000 Americans to evacuate Clark Air Base, about 10 miles east of the volcano.

U.S. officials said the Americans would remain at Subic Bay naval base until the danger, from the mountain virtually shut down one of the largest American military installations overseas.

But Raymundo Punongbayan, chief of the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology, said it could take years before a major eruption, during which time the volcano could remain active and register periodic, small eruptions.

Punongbayan said the assessment was based on the experience of other Philippine volcanos. Mount Hibok-Hibok on Camiguin island, which erupted in 1951 after three years of sporadic activity.

Scientists are using Hibok-Hibok as their model for predicting activity at Mount Pinatubo because the two volcanoes have similar geological characteristics. Pinatubo's last major eruption was in 1380, before anyone here kept scientific records.

Punongbayan said a major eruption could also take place in a short period and that scientists simply had too little information on Pinatubo to be certain of their calculations. But he said a pattern of sporadic minor eruptions over several years could make the area around the volcano virtually uninhabitable.

"You're not sure when there will be another eruption so the posture of the government should be for long-term planning, he said for resettlement areas," he said on a television interview.

On Tuesday, a cloud of ash-laden steam rose up to 11,500 feet above the volcano but suddenly dissipated in the afternoon, only to revive again 20 minutes later. The area on the western slope of the mountain was covered in a thin layer of ash.

About 19,000 Filipinos also have been evacuated — in three provinces near the slopes of Mount Pinatubo, 60 miles north of Manila. They are housed in about 25 makeshift evacuation centers in the three provinces but outside the danger zone if an eruption occurs.

But there has been no general warning to residents of Angeles, where Clark is located. The city is 50 miles north of Manila and has a population of 380,000.

At Subic, newcomers from Clark tried to sort out their finances, adjust to cramped living and otherwise cope with dislocation. Finance officers issued partial pay to airmen who had to leave before having a chance to go to the bank.

Subic Bay already has a housing shortage, and about 25 percent of the 14,000 sailors, dependents and civilian employees live off-post. Subic has about 2,200 housing units but plans to build more were deferred because of uncertainty over whether the bases will be allowed to remain after their lease expires in September.

Talks between Manila and Washington on an extension are deadlocked over how much the Americans will pay, and how long the bases can remain.

Punongbayan said the Clark area was in the path of "pyroclastic" materials that flowed from Mount Pinatubo during its last major eruption in the 14th century.

Rolito Rimando, an Institute volcanologist, said portions of Clark stand on a "pyroclastic" foundation, meaning the rock formations formed during the last major eruption.

That means the effects of the last major eruption were felt as far away as the present site of the air base, he said.

Rimando said that a major eruption could hurl debris and poisonous gases in a 12-mile radius, affecting both the base and parts of Angeles.

Soviet ship rams pier on goodwill visit

ANTWERP, Belgium — A Soviet destroyer lived up to its name during what had been billed as a goodwill visit to Antwerp. Harbor officials on Tuesday were still assessing the damage.

When the Bezbozannenny, which stands for the Undaunted, arrived at the Antwerp docks Monday it failed to react to three alarms during its approach and rammed the pier, reducing part of the dock to rubble and destroying its own launching platform, newspapers reported.

"The Russians are Coming and Take Away the Pier," headlined the Antwerp daily De Nieuwe Gazet. "Squadron with Sweet Bunglers Bring Whiff of Glasnost to Antwerp," read the secondary headline.

The Bezbozannenny is 170 yards long, and has a crew of 320.

Court dismisses coup attempt charges

MANILA, Philippines — A military court on Tuesday cleared 11 officers and nine enlisted men of charges in connection with a 1987 coup attempt against President Corason Aquino.

The military said in a statement that armed forces Chief of Staff Gen. Lisandro Abadía had restored the accused to duty. Those cleared by the court included colonels Antonio Romero and Luisito Sanchez, Lt. Col. Jerry Albano and captains Andres Padringalan, Ivaristo Bilog, Ernesto Lasco and Rosalino Bailen.

The soldiers were tried in connection with the Aug. 28, 1987, coup attempt, which left at least 53 people dead and more than 300 wounded. Mrs. Aquino has survived at least seven armed military uprisings since coming to power in 1986.

Mandela will visit Gorbachev later

MOSCOW — Nelson Mandela postponed a trip to the Soviet Union because President Mikhail S. Gorbachev was too busy to meet with him this week, African National Congress and Soviet spokesmen said Tuesday.

"We think that he will come within the next month," said Gorbachev's spokesman, Vitaly Ignatenko. He said the Soviet leader "is busy right now" and was unable to meet the ANC deputy president, who had been scheduled to arrive in Moscow last Sunday.

The Soviet Union was one of the ANC's main backers and supplied most of its weapons during a 29-year guerrilla campaign that was suspended last year after the South African government made the group legal again. An ANC spokesman in Moscow said Mandela's visit would be rescheduled for another unspecified time.

India begins search for leader again

NEW DELHI, India — With authorities appealing for a peaceful vote, India resumes balloting today in national elections interrupted three weeks ago by the assassination of former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

Gandhi's Congress Party is hoping to capitalize on a wave of sympathy in the wake of his murder by a suicide bomber.

The party, left leaderless by the slaying, distributed posters depicting Gandhi and his mother, Indira Gandhi, who was also assassinated. "The sacrifices of the mother and son will be remembered by India," the slogan says.
