House hikes grazing fees 400%

The Times-News and States News Service

WASHINGTON — Over the bitter objections of Western lawmakers, the House approved an amendment Tuesday night that would raise grazing fees on public lands by 400 percent over the next five years.

The vote was 232-192. Supporters of the bill, led by Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., said the increase would save taxpayers money and equalize grazing fees on private and public land.

But Western congressmen argued that the increase would devastate rural economies.

"The vast majority of the 31,000 ranchers who graze cattle and sheep on Western public lands run small, family owned operations. They simply cannot afford this kind of increase," said Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho. "These are not corporations, these are ranches which have been in the family for generations, and this amendment will put them out of business."

"We've had a market-oriented grazing fee formula that has worked well for 13 years," said Rep. Larry LaRocco, D-Idaho. "This effort to quadruple grazing fees was done without hearings and without committee or subcommittee approval."

The amendment would increase livestock grazing fees per animal unit per month from $1.97 to fiscal year 1991 to $2.62 in 1992. By fiscal year 1995 the fees could hit $8.70 per animal unit month.

An animal unit is a horse, a cow and her calf, or five sheep.

"A lot of our members will be out of business if the Senate passes this bill," said Idaho Cattle Association President Dan Hammond of American Falls.

But Hammond and ICA executive vice president Betty Munis said the measure's margin of approval Tuesday encouraged them.

"You hate to call this a victory, but last year this bill passed the House by 96 votes," said Munis. "This time it was 40."

Senate opponents of the grazing fee hike last year blocked consideration of a similar House-passed bill boosting grazing fees.

But this year, the amendment was tacked on to the House's $13.2 billion interior spending bill. The legislation, which the House passed 345-76 later Tuesday, provides spending for interior department agencies, including the National Park

Rankin denounces 1% 'falsehoods'

Tax limitation initiative author extols proposal

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The author of the new 1 percent tax initiative on Tuesday rebutted "outright, overt falsehoods" he said are being spread about his tax-limitation proposal.

Idaho Property Owners Association President Ron Rankin told Twin Falls senior citizens that the ballot initiative "is the people-telling the government this is exactly what you can spend."

The 1 percent initiative, which would limit property taxes to 1 percent of market value, may be the second tax-limiting proposal to go before Idaho voters in 14 years. Idahoans approved the previous measure overwhelmingly in 1978.

Organizers need 32,000 signatures to get the new version on the November 1992 ballot. They have about half that number now.

Rankin, of Coeur d'Alene, said a loophole in the original initiative led to "systematic emasculation over 12 years, culminating with the lifting of the 5 percent cap."

The Legislature, unable to implement the original 1 percent initiative, imposed a 5 percent cap on property tax budgets. Many exemptions have been made, however, and last winter lawmakers repealed the 5 percent cap altogether in favor of a "truth-in-taxation" law, requiring newspaper advertisements of all proposed property tax increases.

Rankin called it the "deception in taxation," and said it led to the new drive for signatures.

He went through a laundry list of what he said were criticisms and misconceptions about the measure, trying to debunk each in turn.

Ron Rankin tells an audience at the Twin Falls Senior Center that a reduction in property taxes may not mean higher income and sales taxes.

All existing exemptions, such as the 50-50 homeowners' exemption, would remain intact, Rankin said.

Opponents say the 1 percent initiative would cut school budgets by 35 percent, Rankin said. But he pointed out that only about 27 percent of a school district's budget is funded by property taxes, so the net loss of school funds would really be about 9 percent.

The initiative calls for a two-thirds session of qualified voters — instead of the current two-thirds majority of voters who turn out — to approve exemptions such as a school funding override. Opponents say that's impossible.

"That's true. It will be almost impossible," Rankin said.

He said it's a deliberate attempt to force a change in school funding from property taxes to income or sales taxes.

"The sentiment is there to get the school funding off the ad valorem tax. This will act as an incentive," he said.

Existing overrides would remain effective until they expire, he said.

Approval of the 1 percent initiative will not necessarily result in an increase in other taxes, Rankin said.

Opponents say it will result in a 25 percent increase in income taxes — to pay for schools, for example, Rankin said. But he said the current income tax is 8 percent, and under the 1 percent initiative those taxes would increase at most by 2 percent. That's a 25 percent increase in the tax rate, not in total taxes, he said.

"And I don't believe there will be that much of a raise," he said.

Rankin said the initiative would

GOP leaders ask Andrus to call special reapportionment session

The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — House Speaker Tom Boyd and Senate President Michael Crapo want Gov. Cecil Andrus to call a special session of the Idaho Legislature to take care of reapportionment without all the pressures of other issues.

But Andrus says he will call a special session for this fall only if a legislative committee working on the subject can agree on a single plan with bipartisan support.

Crapo and Boyd said handling reapportionment in a special session in late October or early November will be the best way to deal with the politically touchy subject.

"Many pressing issues are upon us — education, corrections, water quality, state revenues and others demand our attention. These are issues that the people reasonable expect the Legislature to make our priority," the Republicans said.

"Handling reapportionment this year in an extraordinary session is not only consistent with good management, but also will best serve the people of Idaho."

Andrus repeated his earlier statement that he will consider the request if he can be convinced of the need and that it would be a wise use of public funds.

Senate Democratic Caucus Chairman John Peavey of Carey said he would support a special session if the interim committee can devise one plan that has general bipartisan support.

"I think we'll just have to wait and see how close that interim committee gets. It would be a waste of time to go up there and spend three or four weeks and get a plan that's going to go to court anyway," Peavey said.

Only the governor can call a special session. Andrus also has the power to limit it to a single subject.

Boyd predicted that the Legislature can come up with a new legislative districting plan in a special session of no more than a week.

Backlog of unpaid taxes hits $96 billion

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service's backlog of billed but unpaid taxes grew last year by 11 percent to $96.3 billion, congressional auditors said Tuesday.

If the IRS continues its present collection strategy, only about one-fourth of the delinquent accounts will ever be collected, the General Accounting Office told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee. "Almost one-half, $46 billion, will not be collected or abated during the 10-year statutory collection period and, thus, will be written off at the end of the period," said GAO Associate Director Paul L. Posner. About $24 billion is likely to be abated due in part to errors by the IRS or taxpayers, he said.

Posner presented the report on accounts receivable as part of an assessment of management challenges facing the IRS. The hearing centered on the agency's $8 billion project to modernize its computers over the next 10 years.

"Strategies are emerging at IRS that hold considerable promise for improving the agency's overall capacity to resolve the accounts-receivable problem as well as other longstanding service, delivery and tax enforcement problems," Posner said.

Team finds more suspected Iraqi nuclear sites

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Investigators said Tuesday they have identified more suspected nuclear sites in Iraq, but Western diplomats said Iraq had denied the team access to a secret military base where nuclear materials may have been taken.

As part of the agreement ending the Persian Gulf War, Iraq told the International Atomic Energy Agency it had 24 nuclear facilities.

U.N. experts identified one additional site in May and "several more" since, said David Kay, deputy leader of the IAEA team, which is working with the United Nations in investigating Iraqi weapons.

Kay would not divulge how many more were found or their suspected purpose. In Washington, a Bush administration official said the IAEA team had been denied entry to one site. The official declined to give any further details, except to say that, "This is clearly in violation of the U.N. sanctions."

The site was a secret military base near Baghdad, according to diplomats familiar with a briefing at the United Nations by the U.N. Special Commission. Nuclear materials may have been taken to the base, and cranes and other heavy moving equipment were seen in operation there, the diplomats said.

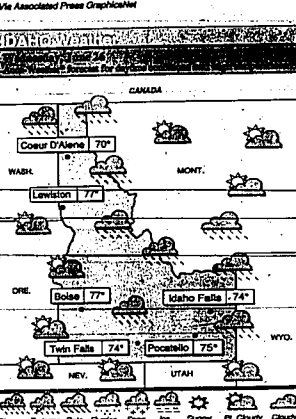

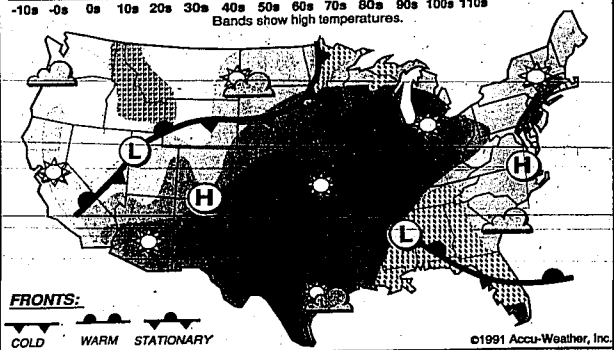

Under the U.N. cease-fire resolution April 3, Iraq agreed to allow the United Nations to supervise destruction of any chemical and biological weapons, short-range ballistic missiles and nuclear weapons-grade materials.

The probe by Kay's team will not be finished for several months, Kay said.

Croatia, Slovenia split; turmoil may lead to Yugoslav civil war

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — The republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared independence from Yugoslavia on Tuesday, but the federal parliament issued an urgent appeal for army intervention to prevent the dismemberment of the country.

Unless a compromise can be found, the declarations threaten to inflame longstanding ethnic tensions, worsen Yugoslavia's grave economic problems or possibly plunge the nation into a civil war.

The proclamations said each republic was no longer part of Yugoslavia, a political union of six republics and 24 ethnic groups that has periodically exploded in bloody factional fighting since its founding in 1918.

The Marxist-oriented government of Serbia and its allies bitterly oppose the independence of Croatia and Slovenia, which have adopted more market-style economic systems and are more prosperous. About one-third of Yugoslavia's 24 million people live in the two republics.

Bells in Zagreb's Catholic churches rang and people uncorked champagne in front of the Parliament as Croatia declared independence. Inside the building, a defiant speech by Croatian President Franjo Tudjman, a Serb nationalist.

"We cannot remain within the country due to the continuing threats and aggression and hatred against anything that is Croatian," said Tudjman.

Two hours after Croatia's 6 p.m. secession declaration, neighboring Slovenia, which borders Austria, Italy and Hungary, followed suit. A celebration in Ljubljana was set for Wednesday.

Yugoslavia's Entangled Republics

During the Cold War, the nationalist politics of Communist Josip Broz Tito brought unity that rose above traditional ethnic rivalries. But with the fall of Communism in Eastern Europe, the rivalries have surfaced, bringing political strife and violence.

How Yugoslavia was formed

The Balkan country was born in the aftermath of World War I as a joint kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

Being occupied by the Germans in 1941, it re-emerged as a Communist-style federation of six "people's republics" with Macedonia, Montenegro and Bosnia-Herzegovina added to the three pre-war states under Tito.

The declarations, opposed by most Western nations, threatened to break up Yugoslavia. Serbia, the largest republic, has said that in the case of secession it would seize Serbian enclaves in Croatia and other republics.

Some 500,000 ethnic Serbs living mainly in Yugoslavia's Krajina and Slavonia regions staunchly oppose an independent Croatia. Clashes between Serbian militia and Croatian police have left 22 dead in recent months.

Krajina Serbs are threatening to cut off federal government services and join their territory to Serbian regions in the rest of the country. If implemented, that union could provoke a Croatian crackdown, which in turn could prompt central government or Serbian intervention.

In Washington, the State Department said it wouldn't recognize the independence declarations, and urged both

Twin Falls homeowner Myrtle Orbe said she supports the 1 percent initiative because the state and federal governments have "runaway, bloated expenses," and the Legislature should not have lifted the 1 percent budget cap.

"Why should we be sending men to the moon when we've got starving children right here in the U.S.?" Orbe said.

republics to pursue their goals through negotiations with Yugoslavia's central government.

Western European nations also have refused to recognize independence unless all the Yugoslavian republics agreed to a separation.

Tudjman said Bulgaria had recognized his republic, in a telegram he waved at a news conference. But the Tanjug news agency quoted Bulgaria's foreign ministry as denying that assertion.

Munis. "They knew a lot of cooperation would vote for the fee increase because they felt they had to vote for the (interior) spending bill."

According to Synar, only 3 percent of the country's 1.6 million cattle ranchers graze their cattle on public land. Yet, he added, taxpayers pay at least $100 million dollars every year to subsidize the federal grazing program.

And because of the relatively low grazing fees, federal land managers cannot afford to protect the ranges from environmental damage, he said, adding that at least 60 percent of all public rangelands are in fair or poor condition.

"The Synar amendment is designed to bring free market business practices to public rangelands management," Synar said. "Grazing fee subsidies promote poor use of our natural resources and taxpayer assets such as land and water. The subsidies are bad fiscal policy and bad environmental policy."

But opponents said high grazing fees will force family ranchers off public land.

"Eighty-eight percent of the cattle in Idaho spend at least part time on public land," said Munis. "If you take them off public land, you put a lot of operators out of business and that's going to hurt the communities where they live and the businesses they support."

The Bureau of Land Management said if the government raises grazing fees 99 percent of all public lands would be free of cattle.

Ranchers don't have enough private land for all of their cattle, said Jon Doggett, a spokesman for the National Cattlemen's Association. Eventually, family ranchers will be knocked out of ranching and developers will buy up their land, he said.

Session

But Crapo said it could take as much as a month to resolve differences if there is no consensus on a plan before a special session begins.

A one-week special session would cost about $190,000. The 1991 session allocated up to $350,000 for a special session, he said.

The Republicans made the same request earlier. But in a three-page letter sent to the governor Tuesday, they formally notified Andrus that the Legislative Council has directed the special 20-member redistricting committee to finish its preliminary work by Oct. 1 and be prepared to submit one or more proposals.

"However, even if no consensus can be reached, the committee's work will be finished by Oct. 1 and all preliminary mapping and data collection will be finalized. Statewide hearings will have been held and public input will have been reviewed," they said.

"I think we have made a good case for a special session," Boyd said. "I think he will be amenable to a special session."

"I think he (Andrus) will listen," Crapo said.

Crapo said he hopes the 20-member committee will agree on a single plan, although he acknowledged that might be "wishful thinking" and reapportionment battles might not be solved easily.

Andrus has said that if the Legislature thinks it could handle reapportionment in a one-week special session, the same work could be done in a week of a regular session.

"Respectfully, we must disagree," the Republicans said. "Few would seriously doubt that the reapportionment issue will be extremely difficult and time-consuming."

"Like other demanding issues, it is unlikely to be resolved in a few weeks if it must be handled in the context of all the other business of a regular session," the GOP letter to Andrus said.

"Reapportionment is one of the most difficult issues the Legislature faces," Crapo said. "It is a difficult and time-consuming process."

Boyd argued that the public will gain if a special session is held in the fall. Otherwise, he said, other state issues will be delayed or not faced in the next session because of reapportionment battles.

"There is little likelihood that trying to handle it at the front end of the next session would save either time or money. The most likely outcome would be that more time and expense would be involved during a regular session as the reapportionment issue became enmeshed in the other political issues of the session," he said.

The Legislature redistricting is the process of drawing up new district lines to reflect population shifts in the last decade. It will be especially hard this year because the current Legislature has 42 districts and a record 126 members.

Under a 1986 constitutional amendment, the new Legislature must have 30 to 35 districts, meaning at least 21 and up to 36 seats will be eliminated.

Schlichte said there are enough out there, some people who will feel put upon," Boyd said.

The 1990 Census Bureau put Idaho's population at just over one million. Since preliminary figures were released, Legislative Council Director Myron Schlechte and his staff have been preparing county-by-county tables.

The job had to be done by hand in 12 counties which ignored state law requiring the use of recognizable geographic boundaries in creating voting precincts.

Schlichte said that task is done, but the state expects to get adjustments from the Census Bureau on minorities and other groups such as the homeless who may have been undercounted.

Some estimates say up to 28,000 might be added to the Idaho Census by the adjustments, which are expected by July 15.

Schlichte said once the adjustments are received, the Idaho county by county tables will be ready for new plans.

Tobacco researchers say smoking kills

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of scientists who get research money from the tobacco industry shows that most of those responding believe cigarette smoking causes serious, often fatal diseases.

According to a report in the American Journal of Public Health, 94 percent agreed that even secondhand smoke is harmful to nonsmokers and 91 percent agreed that most lung cancer deaths are caused by smoking.

In all, 77 of 166 researchers who were mailed the survey answered it, a response of a bit less than half. "The industry says that there is controversy about smoking and disease, and it's our position that saying there's controversy is the same as saying there's controversy over the shape of the Earth," said K. Michael Cummings, a senior research scientist at Roswell Park Cancer Institute, Buffalo, N.Y.

Cummings, who led the study with others at his cancer institute and Ronald Davis of the federal government's Office on Smoking and Health, said the survey shows the tobacco industry "does not accept the opinions even of scientists whose research it funds."

"I'm not saying the research being done is poor. It's very good research," he said. "But it would raise the question of whether it is ethical for scientists who believe this industry makes a lethal and addictive product" to do research sponsored by the industry.

The Tobacco Institute has long said that "smoking is a risk factor associated with a variety of diseases," said Walker Merryman, vice president of the group that represents the tobacco industry.

However, Merryman said, "we don't know" whether smoking causes disease, "and it doesn't make a particle of difference what the views of the Council for Tobacco Research grantees may be. We're interested in the quality of their research, not what their personal views are."

Harmon McAllister, scientific director of the council, which is financed by tobacco manufacturers, said most scientists believe that lung and cardiovascular diseases are due to a variety of factors and that "there is a long chain of events before expression of the disease occurs."

"That the industry would keep putting money into this research shows they are opened minded on this," he added.

But Cummings, in his article in the journal's July issue, charged that the tobacco industry is using the research-sponsoring council as "a public relations vehicle intended to foster a false impression that the cigarette industry and others are interested in investigating the smoking and health 'question.'"

Orders for durable goods up in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for "big-ticket" manufactured goods posted a 3.8 percent gain in May, the biggest in over a year, the government said Tuesday.

That was one of three reports suggesting a modestly improving economy.

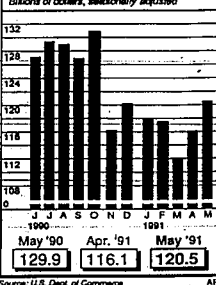

"There doesn't seem to be any question that the economy is in a recovery stage right now," said Lawrence H. Meyer, head of a St. Louis economic forecasting firm. But he added, "I haven't seen anything yet to alter my view that the recovery will be very subdued."

Also suggesting that the economy was turning were a real estate trade group's report that sales of existing homes in May rose to their highest level in 18 months, and a business organization's survey showing a small improvement in consumer confidence.

In its report, the Commerce Department said the jump was the largest since a 7.0 percent advance in March 1990, four months before the onset of the latest recession. All major industries except electronic and other electrical equipment posted gains.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater welcomed the surge in durable goods orders as a sign of "strengthening of the manufacturing sector."

"We are encouraged by it," he said. "Does this mean the recession is over? I don't think we can proclaim this. But it is one of the continuing building blocks that pile up that show the recession is ending."

Sources: U.S. Dept. of Commerce, AP

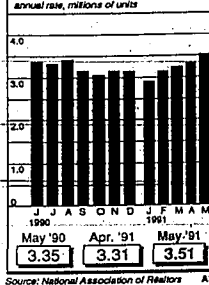

Sources: National Association of Realtors, AP

"We are slowly climbing out of this," Fitzwater added.

"The May durable goods report fits with the impression that the economy is recovering, albeit at only a moderate pace," said economist Marilyn Schajta of Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, a New York securities dealer.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Realtors reported that sales of previously owned single-family homes jumped 6.0 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.51 million. That was the highest since 3.56 million units were sold at an annual rate in December 1989.

And the New York-based Con-ence Board said its consumer confidence index rose to 78.0 this month from 76.4 in May, when the barometer had fallen three points.

The business-supported research group said the reading means that while consumers regained some of their confidence in the economy in June, they are not optimistic enough to step up their plans for major purchases immediately.

Consumer caution is one of the factors analysts cite to support their forecasts of a below-average pace of recovery from the recession. Consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

Nevertheless, economist Gordon Richards of the National Association of Manufacturers, pointed to a 2.9 percent increase in what he called "the critical area" of non-defense capital goods orders excluding aircraft.

This sector, which rose 3.9 percent in April after falling for three months, often is a barometer of industry plans to expand and modernize to meet the demands of an expanding economy.

The largest gain in durable goods orders was an 11.5 percent increase in transportation equipment. It also was the first advance in this category since an 18.2 percent jump last December. Excluding transportation, orders still rose 1.4 percent.

Industrial machinery and equipment orders rose 4.0 percent following a 1.9 percent gain a month earlier. Primary metals orders edged up 0.8 percent after gaining 7.9 percent in April.

But orders for electronic and other electrical equipment fell 2.6 percent. They had jumped 10.8 percent in April.

Defense orders surged 21.1 percent, paced by the shipbuilding and tank category. They had risen 16.4 percent in April following a 15.5 percent drop the previous month.

Shipments of durable goods increased 1.0 percent, the second consecutive gain following five months of declines. Most of the advance was attributed to transportation equipment, including a large increase in motor vehicles.

Unfilled orders, on the other hand, slipped 0.1 percent, the fourth consecutive decline after remaining unchanged in February and January. The last increase was a 0.2 percent gain last December.

Doctors say court's abortion ruling bad

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association on Tuesday condemned a U.S. Supreme Court ruling barring federally funded clinics from discussing abortion with patients, saying it infringes upon the doctor-patient relationship.

Leaders of the nation's largest organization of doctors also urged the government to change the warning label on cigarette packs to read "Smoking is ADDICTIVE and may result in DEATH."

On a voice vote with no opposition, the AMA's policy-making House of Delegates passed a resolution warning of "inherent dangers" in the recent high-court ruling.

The court ruled May 23 that staff members at federally funded clinics can be barred from discussing abortion with pregnant women or from telling them where to get an abortion.

"Do patients in this country really want judges and politicians on the examining table with them?" asked Nancy Dickey, an AMA board member.

AMA policy states that abortion is a matter between doctors and patients.

Dickey said AMA members, regardless of their views on abortion, were outraged by the ruling. "We really don't perceive this as an abortion issue. We see it as a doctor-patient issue. I want the right to tell my patients what the options are."

Dickey said many doctors are worried that if the government can tell them what they can and cannot say about abortion, it eventually may tell them what to say and do in other matters.

It was the second full working day of the House of Delegates' five-day annual meeting, held to set policy for the nearly 300,000-member organization.

Monday's sessions were dominated by a debate on AIDS testing for doctors and patients and a demonstration by 200 AIDS activists outside the Chicago Hilton & Towers, where the convention is being held.

Also Tuesday, delegates considered a range of proposals, such as protecting children who ride in the backs of pickup trucks and establishing guidelines for doctors who testify in court as expert witnesses.

The organization also renewed its call for an end to all kinds of advertising and promotion of tobacco.

Robert McAfee, vice chairman of the AMA's board of trustees, said he is upset by what he considers attempts by tobacco companies to attract young smokers through their sponsorship of sporting events.

"There is nothing that is made better by smoking cigarettes," said McAfee, a former smoker.

Congressional blacks press Bush on S. Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black members of Congress told President Bush on Tuesday that lifting sanctions against South Africa would be "a historic mistake."

They also urged him to put aside racialist divisive rhetoric against a civil rights bill.

Bush met with 18 of the 26 black members of Congress and told them he has little choice under the law but to lift sanctions once South Africa's government releases all political prisoners. "I don't have much flexibility," Bush said.

The congressmen told Bush there was evidence South Africa had not fully met other legal conditions required for dropping the sanctions, despite claims to the contrary.

The session was sought by the Congressional Black Caucus in hopes of dissuading Bush from moving to drop sanctions and in an effort to gain a cease-fire in the public debate over civil rights.

"The vice president and his family are entitled to access to recreation like any American family, but not at this cost to taxpayers," Hoagland said in a statement he submitted with his amendment.

House measure aims at Quayle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House took a step at Vice President Dan Quayle on Tuesday by voting to block new horse stables from being built at a national park in Virginia where Quayle and his family have ridden.

Lawmakers adopted the measure on a voice vote after its sponsor, Rep. Peter Hoagland, D-Neb., said the cost of adding six new stalls to the three already at Manassas Battlefield Park was excessive. The National Park Service says the work would cost $50,000.

Kennedy Smith not at medical school

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — University of New Mexico School of Medicine residents began training Tuesday, but William Kennedy Smith wasn't among them because his paperwork hadn't been processed, a school official said.

Gail Sutton, a school spokeswoman, said she could only speculate about when Smith will arrive to begin his three-year residency program for internal medicine.

Smith submitted his paperwork last week to the school, which sent it to the New Mexico Board of Medical Examiners in Santa Fe.

Prayer of House was Islamic this time

WASHINGTON — The daily prayer of the House was offered Tuesday by an Islamic cleric, apparently a first. Siraj Wahaj, the Imam of Masjid al Taqwa, in Brooklyn, N.Y., prayed and called on God to "guide the leaders of this nation... and grant them righteousness and wisdom."
The House chaplain's office said there was no record of a Muslim prayer at the opening of a House session, although records are incomplete.

Rep. Nick Joe Rahall, D-W.Va., said he sponsored the Islamic prayer at the request of several Muslim and Arab groups.
Rahall, whose grandparents were born in Lebanon, said he was glad to do it.

Bush to visit Canada, catch ball game

WASHINGTON — President Bush will travel to Toronto on July 9 to attend the all-star baseball game and confer with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney on the economic summit of seven industrialized nations, the White House said Tuesday.

Bush

Bush will attend the Major-League Baseball All-Star Game with Mulroney.
The two leaders also will discuss the July 15-17 summit meeting in London and hold a news conference before Bush returns to Washington.
Bush is consulting with U.S. allies in advance of the summit in view of the fact that Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev will also attend and is expected to seek economic assistance from the summit partners.

Johnny Carson guest dies at age 108

ELLSWORTH, Kan. — Mildred Holt, who traded barbs with Johnny Carson and sipped a highball on "The Tonight Show," has died at the age of 108.

During the August 1987 appearance, Mrs. Holt kidded Carson about his appearance and drank a highball from a coffee mug.
"If my minister saw it, he probably would say, 'Oh, my goodness,' but I say anybody that's 105 can do what she wants to do," she said later.

She was hospitalized with pneumonia and a knee infection and died Sunday at Ellsworth County Veterans Memorial Hospital.

Manufacturers speak against ring ban

AUGUSTA, Maine — Maine's first-in-the-nation ban on six-pack rings, which have been known to ensnare wildlife and add to the state's trash woes, is under attack by manufacturers of the plastic yokes.

A summer-long ban on the rings takes effect July 1. Like other key provisions of Maine's comprehensive trash-reduction law, including a ban on juice boxes, it has come under steady assault from industry lobbyists.

To assuage manufacturers wanting to sell off an excess of the plastic connectors, the ban will be shelved in the fall for nine months before being reinstated next July 1. Lobbyist Kenneth MacLeod said he hopes that by then the Legislature can be convinced that the yokes should remain legal.

MacLeod contends that alternative cardboard connectors take even longer to decompose and that the wildlife threat posed by plastic connectors is overstated.

Rubbish, says Rep. Herbert C. Adams, who sponsored the ban.

Ranch won't be site of visitor's center

DALLAS — Plans have been ditched to buy a $70,500 longhorn cattle ranch for use as a visitor's center for the superconducting super collider.

The Texas National Research Laboratory Commission dropped the plan Monday after a state official questioned the use of taxpayer money for the ranch.

The panel oversees $500 million in state bonds approved by voters to help bring the giant atom-smasher to Texas.
The collider, a 53-mile operation, is being built with $8 billion in federal funds in Ellis County, south of Dallas.

Report: Cutting fats prolongs life slightly

CHICAGO (AP) — Trimming dietary fat to no more than 30 percent of calories consumed would add only months to the lives of average Americans, researchers said a new report.
But the report, published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, was immediately dismissed by advocates of low-fat diets.

Thirty-seven percent of the average American's calorie intake is fat, whereas a maximum of 30 percent is recommended. Consuming excess fat raises the likelihood of developing coronary heart disease and cancers of the breast, colon and prostate.

Yet reducing fat to 30 percent of calories would put off death for only about 2 percent of the 2.3 million Americans who die each year, said analysts led by Dr. Warren S. Browner of the University of California School of Medicine, San Francisco.

"This 2 percent benefit, equivalent to an increase in average life expectancy of three to four months, would accrue chiefly to people over the age of 65 years," the authors wrote.

"These results may be disappointing to those who believe that following a healthier diet will protect them from early death," the authors said.

Dr. Margo Denke, assistant professor of internal medicine at the Center for Human Nutrition of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center, said the report is "interesting from a population standpoint, but it should not be used to make individual decisions."

"One of the problems is this concept of 'average,'" she said in a telephone interview from Dallas.

Low-fat diets don't necessarily help everyone, but they act like insurance policies to pay big benefits — including staving off death or debilitating symptoms — in individuals prone to heart disease, she said.

Denke also criticized the study for failing to take into account that for every American who dies of heart disease, four others have heart disease symptoms that could be caused by too much fat in their diet.

Yes, combat power, but not in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — The allied military force supported to help guarantee the security of the Kurds will be composed of battle-ready combat units but won't be based inside northern Iraq, the Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday.

Pete Williams told reporters that no agreement has been reached on the makeup, base location or command structure for such a force.

However, he confirmed that U.S. forces will participate.
"It's clearly... something we will do," the spokesman said.

Williams said the administration was "concerned about the situation with the Kurds.... We don't want to see a situation arise where the Kurds head into the mountains again."

Hundreds of thousands of Kurds fled into the mountains on the borders with Turkey and Iran, fleeing Iraqi military troops following the failed Kurdish uprising against the forces of Saddam Hussein.

Williams said the U.S. administration has "established a timetable" for the withdrawal of its 1,250 military personnel still remaining in northern Iraq, but he declined to disclose it.

The so-called "residual force" expected to replace them "would clearly have combat power," but it "wouldn't be based in northern Iraq," he said.

Williams said he couldn't say whether the force could be based in Turkey, as many reports have indicated, "until we all agree on it."

On Monday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the international rapid deployment force would replace the current forces and "remain there for some time to help solidify security for the Kurds."

There are about 10,000 allied military forces in the region, roughly divided between Turkey and Iraq.

Of these, some 5,200 are Americans, Williams said.

Let's stop dragging our feet on housing for troubled kids

Last fall, in a flurry of organization and determination, county officials in the Magic Valley geared up to solve the juvenile detention crisis.

We're still waiting for them to do something.

Through nine long months they've sifted through various plans for housing young lawbreakers. But they seem no closer to a solution than they were when in September, when the Southern Idaho Youth Center closed and left the Magic Valley with no alternative but to incarcerate young criminals in motels or put them back on the street.

It's been long enough.

The counties inherited and rejected a recommendation for a juvenile justice center from a committee headed by state Sen. Joyce McRoberts. Since then a new committee of officials from six valley counties has considered dozens of sites in Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

None, so far, has panned out. In some cases, their choices have run into opposition from neighbors. In others, the trouble was cost. In still other circumstances, logistics were the problem.

So the representatives of Twin Falls, Jerome, Gooding, Blaine, Camas and Elmore counties continue their search for the perfect solution. They're not going to find it.

What's at issue here is a facility that nobody wants to build. It would be nice if there were an acceptable private-sector alternative to building a jail for kids, or if the state would step in and solve the problem.

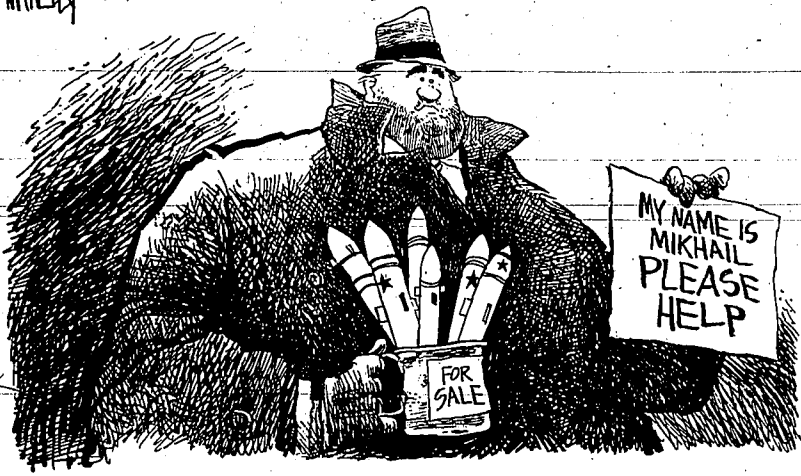

That's not going to happen. The commissioners, prosecutors and cops who have to make this decision are going to have to settle for a less-than-perfect compromise.

Like most compromises, it's not going to please everybody. It's going to cost the taxpayers money. But it's a damn sight better than locking kids up in motels to watch HBO all day or sending them home because there's no place else to put them.

This is a decision by committee, and like most committees this one is made up of people with different priorities and competing agencies. That's fine to a point, but this panel is approaching gridlock.

The juvenile detention problem hasn't gotten better since September. It's still a crisis. The only difference is the light at the end of the tunnel is growing dimmer. It's time to make a decision.

WHEAT/Chicago Tribune

Claims about the F-16 just won't fly

WASHINGTON — With the shrinkage of the Pentagon budget, defense contractors are marketing their weapons with arguments so brazen that a new term is needed: war-mongery. Just as pornography is criticism to the point of obscenity, war-mongery is advocacy to the point of offensiveness.

The latest centerfold from the military-industrial complex is a full-page advertisement for the F-16, built by St. Louis-based General Dynamics Corp.

The ad features an F-16 screaming right toward the reader, its underwing pylons loaded with auxiliary fuel tanks and air-to-ground missiles. "The 1,200-knot battleship," we are informed in half-inch-high black letters below this fearsome vision. Recall that battleships and F-16s were used in the war with Iraq.

"Most battleships have cruising speeds of around 20 knots," the text of the ad says, noting that "the F-16 fights like a battleship but flies at the speed of sound, which means it'll clear a lot of water, in very little time."

Forget, for the moment, that when an F-16 pilot pushes the throttle to supersonic speed, he runs out of fuel in about 10 minutes. The hype rolls on: "The F-16 is the premier battleship for the defense of maritime nations. No matter how many 20-knot battleships you have."

The driest landlubber can see the fallacy of this comparison, but the ad isn't aimed at taxpayers. It's aimed at members of Congress, who vote the budgets that buy F-16s.

Congressional IQs are high enough to know it is ludicrous to compare a fighter to a battleship. There is no comparison in the ability to hit or absorb hits.

Take hitting power, for example. The F-

16s flying out of Saudi Arabia to attack targets in Kuwait and Iraq were heaving a single pair of 2,000-pound bombs.

At best, a whole squadron of 24 planes could rain about 48 tons of ordinance on the foe, maybe two or three times a day.

On the other hand, the 16-inch guns of an Iowa-class battleship can lob more than 1,400 tons of shells per hour. With hundreds of shells in their magazines, battleships have staying power in terms of ordinance on hand. They've got staying power in terms of fuel too, with thousands of tons sloshing in tanks even after steaming halfway around the globe. Airplanes have to go home when fuel tanks are nearly empty.

Battlewagons can fire with impunity, since they are heavily armored against enemy counterfire. But a single 50-caliber machine-gun bullet, hitting at the right spot, can bring down a frigate F-16. For this reason, all coalition aircraft dropping bombs over Kuwait were prohibited from flying below 8,000 feet, where they would have been within range of Iraqi gunfire.

One of the fortunate paradoxes of battleships is that when the great powers stopped building them, nations also stopped building the heavy weapons to sink battleships. The French Exocet cruise missile, for example, carries a relatively puny warhead of 360 pounds. That's enough to do grievous damage to a modern cruiser, which is built like a soda can to save weight, but an Exocet isn't going to dent the engine-block construction typical of battleships.

It is instructive to recall the heaps of ordinance the U.S. Navy had to dump on the Japanese battleship Mushashi to sink her in October 1944. The Mushashi was laid down about the same time as the U.S. Navy's Iowa-class battleships and represents a comparable state of development in terms of armored protection.

It took the concentrated efforts of 250 U.S. carrier-aircraft to sink the Mushashi. According to a Japanese account, when the mighty Mushashi was first hit with an aerial torpedo and a 1,000-pound armor-piercing bomb, "she sailed serenely on."

It took 13 torpedoes to pierce seven torpedoes to starboard and 17 hits from 1,000-pound bombs to send the Mushashi to the bottom. What Third World country has the capability to mount this kind of attack on a U.S. battleship?

Obviously, an F-16 can hit targets deep inland, but the relevant question for the next war is what do we do if we're not invited? The invitation by Saudi Arabia was an exception, and in the future U.S. military forces may have to fight their way ashore to establish a lodgment. That's where naval gunfire comes in. Bombing targets that are 60 miles or more inland does not gain the vital superiority needed at the water's edge to get on the beach.

There is an obvious way to discourage General Dynamics and the like from advertising 1,200-knot battleships, says David Cohen of the Advocacy Institute, a training outfit for non-profit organizations.

"Take away the tax deductibility" for weapons advertisements, he suggested. In this event, war-mongery, not battleships, would be extinct.

David Evans is military affairs writer for the Chicago Tribune.

Kudos for those looking at gender equality at CSI

Regarding last week's story about sexual harassment at the College of Southern Idaho, I am pleased that the Center for New Directions and Eric Ridgway are researching the matter of gender equity in the Magic Valley.

As usual, President Gerald Meyerhoffer's public remarks do not match the private and actual situation at CSI or southern Idaho, for that matter. This region is still operating on turn-of-the-century Freudian values — those that propound that women who are not homemakers, professional nurturers, or fluffy supporters smiling at the elbows of their men are exhibiting aberrant behavior.

The Center for New Directions, the CSI Counseling Center, and the faculty at CSI contain many fine wonderful people who are more than willing to assist both men and women in living lives in the contemporary world. Some administrators, however, are more often than not a hindrance to this process. I am willing to understand and forgive some administrative decisions based upon the pressures of financial obligations, but the need to address archaic attitudes about women and their place in the system is long overdue.

Abuses continue to exist at CSI and elsewhere because people, for whatever reason, refuse to discuss problems openly. And since open discussion is the only way to find solutions to such problems, I've decided to relate what happened to me during my last year at CSI (1990-91).

There is no student newspaper, nor is there a journalism program of any kind at CSI. Feeling the need for such a forum, another student and I met several times with administrators to discuss starting a newspaper. The idea was always conveniently shelved in hopes, I'm sure, that as soon as I graduated, the problem would go away. But since I own a printing press, my colleague and I decided to publish our own miniature paper and distribute it on campus in hopes of inspiring the student senate to take one on.

Penelope Reedy-Sloan Reader comment

When the first issue was distributed (which I might add contained nothing controversial, in the lead article praised CSI's services for non-traditional students), President Meyerhoffer was furious and even threatened my husband's job by remarking to the dean, "We don't need an English instructor on campus whose wife is subverting the institution." (I asked the president in front of a witness if he had made this remark and he confessed that he had.)

He then went on to infer that I wasn't behaving like a proper faculty wife. I wish I'd have had the presence of mind to ask him if "faculty wife" was a paid position.

There are issues which CSI administration chooses to deny rather than admit and correct. I hope CND and Eric Ridgway's study will provide the incentive to bring the Magic Valley forward into contemporary society.

Penelope Reedy-Sloan lives in Twin Falls.

Letter

Sexual harassment exists

College of Southern Idaho President Gerald Meyerhoffer is in serious need of some education on what constitutes sexual harassment in your front-page article June 20 entitled "Counselor says sexual harassment exists at CSI." Meyerhoffer is quoted as saying: "He (counselor Eric Ridgway) certainly didn't point out any (sexual harassment) problems and I know of none. I would say from our perspective, there's no (sexual harassment) problem at all."

Meyerhoffer still does not accept that the Rodeo Club's joystick incident this spring is a blatant case of sexual harassment. Ridgway's definition of sexual harassment is: "If it's sufficient to affect the victim's environment, it's sexual harassment."

When two CSI women students, members of the Rodeo Club, were told to wash the dirty jockstraps belonging to male club members, their "environment" was certainly affected. How many other incidents of sexual harassment have occurred on the CSI campus it is not known because the school does not have a student grievance procedure.

After some investigation following the joystick incident, I discovered this omission on the part of the institution and, to my knowledge, it has yet to be remedied. It is my understanding that such a grievance procedure is mandated under Title IX for any institution receiving federal funds.

Time is running out on Meyerhoffer. A number of people have sounded the alarm. Not only has he not responded (a letter I wrote him in April is yet to be acknowledged), he also continues to act as though he were sleeping in an ivory tower where non-existent "problems" such as sexual harassment will just go away.

Wake up, Meyerhoffer. It's 1991 and ivory towers have gone the way of other myths. Sexual harassment exists on your campus, just as it exists throughout our society. It is for people in positions such as yours to work toward the eradication of the "problem," not deny it exists.

Can the Bush administration politically stand 2 clowns in the palace?

Q: "What's the difference between the Iraqi air force and John Sununu?"

A: "Sununu flew 55 more missions." That's why the gaudy travels of John Sununu beats your ordinary TV sitcom. Air Sununu has a built-in laugh track.

Everybody's got a Sununu wisecrack. Jay Leno's gag — "Bush is jogging again... He has to... Sununu has the car" — circulated instantly around the country. It even wound up in the presidential news summary on Bush's morning desk.

The fact that Sununu is America's No. 1 target on the Laugh-O-Meter is the best indicator his days as chief of staff are numbered. When barroom wits and cartoonists treat you like Soupy Sales, you're usually fired in Washington. You've lost your gravitas.

The trouble for Bush is that Sununu is excess baggage — and I'm not alluding to his physique. Bush already has Dan Quayle as a national fun guy. Every night this White House offers a surfeit of comedy for the Leno, Letterman and Carson gag writers — an embarrassing palace of clowns.

Every day the running question to Bush is: Will he (Quayle or Sununu) survive? Bush

Or that he flies to New Hampshire to visit his dentist.

Sandy Grady

Or thumps his nose at critics and rides a White House limo to New York to buy $5,000 of stamps. (Anybody stuck in New Jersey Turnpike traffic would be thrilled to see Sununu cruise past his Caddy bag.)

Or wheelies until he finds a corporate jet to visit him at a Chicago dinner.

That's the crux of Sununu's gall that invites such contemptuous laughter: He's operating like a better-than-thou Caesar who sneers at the common herd.

Remember, this guy who uses the Air Force like his own Yellow Cab Co. is only a staffer, a bureaucrat, a presidential factotum. Sununu is evidently confused that when the band plays "Hail to the Chief," it's his song.

"He's like a drunk who thinks he's invisible," said a White House top aide who's among many Sununu non-admirers. "He's above rules."

Bush was privately boiling about Air Sununu. After all, three days into his presidency, Bush told his staff: "It's not really complicated. It's a question of knowing right from wrong... bending over backwards to see there's not even a perception of conflict of interest."

So the White House gang combed Sununu for a midnight meeting. Later Sununu said in feigned contrition of his travel: "Mistakes were made." Notice the passive voice — no honest admission. "Hey, I blew it."

But there's something more insidious about Sununu's freefloating gallivanting: the cozy romance between Washington pals and corporate lobbyists.

Look at four trips Sununu made in June to Republican fund-raisers.

He was flown on corporate jets provided by a Pentagon supplier, the director of an S&L taken over by the feds, and two big insurance companies.

Maybe there's nothing criminal about the president's chief obliging corporations for a plane ride. But don't tell me Sununu won't someday have to return a phone call — and a favor.

You get mostly silence from Congress about Sununu's flying the Friendly Corporate skies: How can top Congress look out-astounded when they too free-load on fat-cat planes? Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., a Capitol Hill powerhouse on agriculture and finance, solicited flights on planes owned by farming giants ConAgra of Omaha and Archer Daniels Midland, as well as Coastal Corp. (Texas oil company), U.S. Tobacco and Federal Express.

Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., made similar flights 25 times in 1989-90. Even if they pay the air fare, that aerial hanky-panky smells of collusion.

There's a populist anger beneath the laughter at John Sununu.

It's needing the Washington ego — big shots riding government limos to New York or flying regally on Pentagon lobbyists' jets.

"Why can't Sununu fly commercial? Why can't you buy him a coupon book on the Trump Shuttle?" reporters asked spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, who could only shrug.

Why indeed? If Sununu were hijacked to Cuba, White House aides might collect a ransom to pay Castro to keep him.

The guess here is that before the 1991 Republican convention, Bush will have to drop either Quayle or Sununu. One joke at a time, Mr. President.

Kuwait to end martial law, disband courts

KUWAIT CITY (AP) — Kuwait announced Tuesday that it is ending four months of martial law and disbanding the special war tribunals that have sentenced 29 people to death for collaborating with Iraq.

The end of martial law, effective Wednesday, will be an important step toward returning Kuwait to normal following the Persian Gulf War.

However, opposition leaders and defense lawyers cautioned that the emirate's royal rulers still will maintain restrictive laws, including those limiting public assembly and free speech.

Martial law, in effect since U.S.-led allied soldiers forced Iraqi troops from Kuwait on Feb. 26, was due to expire Wednesday after a month-long extension.

"It was extended for a month, it won't be extended again," said Justice Minister Ghazi Obeid al-Sagoff. He spoke in a telephone interview.

He said the martial-law tribunals, which have been widely criticized by international human rights groups and Western governments, will be disbanded and the 125 remaining cases sent to the general prosecutor for redistribution to the regular court system. The tribunals began operating May 19 to handle about 450 cases of residents accused of cooperating with the Iraqi army during its seven-month occupation.

The courts have sentenced 29 people to death, mostly Jordanians and stateless Arabs. Al-Sagoff said those judgments will stand unless they are overturned by a panel of three appeals court judges and Crown Prince Saad Abdullah Al-Sabah, the martial law governor.

Dr. Abdullah Nibari, a leading opposition figure, said the end of martial law won't bring many changes to Kuwait. It "doesn't mean that we are liberated domestically," he said. "We are still under very restrictive laws."

"They lifted the martial law, but as far as civil liberties, free press, the right to gather, they still prevent that under other laws," he said.

Thousands flee as Pinatubo throws ash

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Mount Pinatubo spewed steam and ash more than six miles high Tuesday, and a series of moderate earthquakes sent thousands of people fleeing from their homes near two U.S. military bases.

The Office of Civil Defense announced it was setting up monitoring stations near Mount Pinatubo to watch for deadly mudslides that could result if heavy rains unleash tons of ash piled on the volcano's slopes.

The U.S. Embassy said Washington would release $5.3 million in economic aid to victims of the volcano's eruptions, which have killed at least 310 people and heavily damaged Clark Air Base and Subic Bay naval base.

The 4,765-foot volcano began

Taxi drivers in Capas, near Mount Pinatubo protect themselves.

erupting June 9 after more than 600 years of dormancy. Filipino scientists inspected four and unspecified activity.

The cloud of ash and steam unleashed by the volcano drifted to the northwest, spreading debris over the provinces of Pampanga and Tarlac, including President Corason Aquino's sugar plantation.

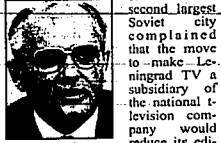

At least five tremors strong enough to rouse sleepers and topple household objects shook the cities of Olongapo, near Subic Bay, and Angeles, adjacent to Clark. No damage was reported, but residents ran from their homes for fear that homes damaged earlier by the volcano's eruptions would collapse.

"Children were crying. Dogs were howling and mothers covered their children to cover them from falling objects," correspondent Louella Vizcocho said by telephone from Olongapo, 25 miles southwest of the volcano.

Leningrad angry at Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has put Leningrad's radical television station under his control, and city officials are furious, Soviet media reported Tuesday.

Mayor Anatoly Sobchak and other officials of the second largest Soviet city complained that the move to make Leningrad TV a subsidiary of the national television company would reduce its editorial independence.

Leningrad TV, which reaches 70 million people, has broadcast sharp criticism of Gorbachev. National television is tightly controlled by a Gorbachev appointee.

"The decision does not take into account the opinion of city council deputies and residents, and may provoke confrontation between city authorities and the central government," Sobchak was quoted as saying Monday night, shortly after Gorbachev's decree was announced.

He said he would appeal to Gorbachev to reverse the decision and allow the Leningrad City Council to create an independent Leningrad Television and Radio Company, the Russian Information Agency reported.

Under Gorbachev's decree, Leningrad television now comes under the purview of Leonid Kravchenko, head of the national broadcasting company Gostelradio. No reason was given for the change. Kravchenko has been accused by Soviet journalists of "rolling back glasnost" and reinstating strict censorship since Gorbachev appointed him to head Gostelradio early this year. He has denied the charge of censorship.

Several tell of commander's atrocities

STUTTGART, Germany — Witnesses say that as a Nazi camp commander, Josef Schwamberger set his dog on inmates, used pliers to tear out their gold teeth and robbed his Jewish victims of jewelry before killing them.

The former SS lieutenant goes on trial Wednesday in what could be the last major Nazi war crimes trial. It is the first Nazi trial since the reunification of Germany in October.

Schwamberger, 79, has long been listed as one of the 10 most-wanted Nazis. He is charged with murdering or helping to murder 3,377 people, including 50 by his own hand.

6 die in gun attack on commuter train

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Gunmen fired on a packed commuter train Tuesday in the black township of Soweto, killing six people and injuring 18, police said.

The police said they did not have a motive for the attack. But it was similar to several incidents on black commuter trains in the past year that were believed linked to factional fighting in the townships.

Police spokesman Col. Tienie Holroyd said three of the injured were in serious condition following the 6 a.m. shooting.

Police step in to still Muslim protests

ALGIERS, Algeria — Police clashed Tuesday with Muslim fundamentalists protesting the removal of Islamic insignia from public buildings, and the military said one person was killed and 12 were wounded.

The death was the first reported since June 5, when authorities declared a state of emergency, which included an overnight curfew, and rescheduled national elections to quell anti-government protests by the fundamentalists. It was not known whether the clashes would become as serious as those on June 5, which left at least 19 people dead and more than 200 injured.

No injuries in Japanese earthquakes

TOKYO — Three earthquakes jolted northern Japan on Tuesday, but there were no reports of damage or injuries.

The strongest of the quakes registered a preliminary reading of 5.6 on the Richter scale, officials said. The Central Meteorological Agency reported no danger of tidal waves. It said all three quakes occurred off Ibaragi state, about 88 miles northeast of Tokyo. The quakes gently shook buildings in downtown Tokyo and registered up to four on the Japanese scale of seven in the towns nearest to the epicenters.

Cabinet: Government to sell state property

MOSCOW (AP) — Two-thirds of Soviet state businesses will be privatized by the end of 1995, according to a government proposal circulated to lawmakers.

Under the proposal by the Cabinet of Ministers, circulated Monday and reported by both the Interfax and Tass news agencies, the central government will retain up to half the defense and energy industries and as much as 70 percent of the communications industry, but sell nearly everything else.

The Soviet government now owns virtually all businesses and factories in this country of 285 million people and 15 republics.

Private businesses and joint ventures between Soviet and foreign firms have been allowed to open under Gorbachev's limited economic reforms. Most have been restaurants, retail outlets and light industries, primarily manufacturers of consumer goods.

The national legislature is to resume its debate Friday on the privatization bill. The official Tass news agency says lawmakers are split roughly in half on the issue.

Hard-liners, led by former Politburo member Yegor Ligachev, argue that privatization would violate one of the central principles of socialism.

Moderates, including deputy Communist Party leader Vladimir Ivashko, say privatization is inevitable.

The legislation would give employees the first option to buy their factories, followed by other Soviet citizens and firms, then foreigners.

Ligachev said state property should only be transferred to collectives, not individuals, because, "Otherwise, new bourgeoisie and foreign investors will be able to buy up all enterprises of the country."

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has been talking about reducing central government control on the Soviet economy for years, but until now has taken no concrete steps toward private ownership.

The Cabinet document says privatization would be carried out in two stages, one in 1991-92 and the other in 1993-95.

New principals have diverse experience

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

Taylor leaves Burley - B3

TWIN FALLS — Harrison Elementary School's new principal once drove to class in a police car during civil rights riots in Los Angeles.

And the new head man at O'Leary Junior High at one time helped lead a school district in Alaska that was larger than West Virginia.

The School Board Tuesday hired Beverly Lorange, Filer Elementary School principal for the past three years, as the new Harrison principal. Bruce Slama, Aberdeen High School's principal for the last four years, was named O'Leary's principal.

Lorange will make $40,000 a year. Slama's salary has not yet been calculated. Twin Falls School District Personnel Director Keith Farnsworth said.

Fifteen people, including four local candidates, applied for the Harrison position, and 27 people, including three locals, sought the O'Leary job, Superintendent Terrell Donich said.

Slama replaces Norman "Duke" Wise-man, who has retired, and Lorange succeeds Steve Wills, who has taken an elementary school counseling position.

Slama, 48, received a bachelor's degree from Alaska Methodist University in Anchorage, a master's degree in counseling from the University of Alaska at Fairbanks, a second master's in public school administration from the University of Alaska at Anchorage and a doctorate from the University of Wyoming.

He was a principal at Adak, Alaska, in the Aleutian Islands for three years; high school principal at Ketchikan, Alaska, for five years; assistant superintendent at King Salmon, Alaska, and superintendent in Delta Greely, Alaska, for a year.

The Lake and Peninsula School District in King Salmon was larger than West Virginia and many children in its 14 schools —

Clear Lakes Grade plans still set for 1992

BUHL — Planning and design preparations for the Clear Lakes Grade project through the Snake River Canyon north of Buhl are on schedule, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

Project engineers have submitted a report for review, containing various preliminary research and other findings.

In addition, a hydrogeological study to determine the effect construction will have on the water table and Clear Springs Trout farm at the foot of the proposed roadway is more than half complete.

Final plans, specifications and estimates are expected by September 1992. The project should begin sometime in early 1993. The new road will be located to the east of the current one, with two 12-foot lanes, wide shoulders on each side, guardrail, plus an additional truck climbing lane for use on the hill.

The grant, from the U.S. Department of Labor, will fund employment and job training for Vietnam veterans, veterans who have recently left the service and veterans with service-related disabilities.

Symms said in a press release that the project will last for a year, beginning in July.

Officials will place boulders in Upper Salmon to help fish

STANLEY — The Sawtooth National Recreation Area and the Idaho Department of Fish and Game are planning to install boulder cluster structures in the upper Salmon River from Stanley to just below Lower Stanley to enhance fish habitat and fishing opportunities.

"The boulder clusters are designed to scour pools and break up the shallow flow along the one and one half to two mile stretch of river," said Wally McClure, fisheries biologist for the SNRA. "This will benefit anglers by providing some structure in the river to hold trout stocked in the area and by providing resting areas for adult and juvenile anadromous fish."

Opposition won't block work release center, state officials tell neighbors

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A community work center for convicted felons will be built inside the city limits on Washington Street South despite vehement protests by area residents, state officials said at a public hearing Tuesday.

"Why is it being put in the middle of a residential section?" asked Debbie Wildman, who has lived near the site for 13 years. "There's got to be a way we can stop it."

Wildman and others at the public meeting said they will consider filing a lawsuit to stop a 56-bed work center planned for a now-vacant piece of farm land across from the Norco Windows factory on Washington Street South.

That spot was selected by the State Board of Correction last week, which accepted a proposal by property owner Reed Goold and J&M Building Systems to build the center and lease it to the state.

The center is aimed chiefly at prison inmates nearing release and men on probation who are having difficulty staying straight, said Eugene Larson, the Correction Board's administrator for field and community services.

No sex offenders will be placed at the center and the majority of those sent there will not be violent offenders, Larson said.

The center will provide a place where male residents can live in a structured environment while they continue working and supporting their families, Vernon said. The center could open in late February or early March.

As many as 565 convicted felons already living in the eight-county Fifth Judicial District, said district probation and parole director Jerry Packer. Many of those people may need the added supervision of the work center to keep them from violating their probation and taking up valuable bed space in the county jail and state prison, he said.

But Wildman said she fears the center will bring down property values. That hasn't happened in other areas of the state where work centers are up and running, countered Board of Correction Director Richard Vernon.

Several studies have proven that work centers do not harm property values and

INEL hearing brings out other issues

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory held a public meeting Tuesday night to talk about its plans to clean up its radioactive waste, but some of those in attendance were more interested in knowing why the site continues to accept more.

"What consideration is being given to movement of hazardous waste materials into the state?" asked state Rep. Jim Kempton, R-Albion.

"You have a Superfund site and you're still bringing in materials from out of the country."

Kempton referred to a DOE announcement earlier this month that INEL would accept radioactive waste from reactors outside the United States.

"Where are we going to put the stuff we have?" asked Mary Cook of Twin Falls. "It's like my husband: He's keeps putting new stuff into the refrigerator before I get the old stuff out."

The subject of the hearing was to explain DOE plans to clean up two contaminated bodies of water at INEL, the Warm Waste Pond and a "perched" water zone, both at the Test Reactor Area.

Walt Sato, chief of the environmental program branch of DOE's Idaho Falls field office, said the issue of accepting new waste was outside the scope of the cleanup effort.

"The mission of our program is to take all these sites and clean them up to an acceptable level," he said. "All of the current operations have to be in compliance with the goal of not creating more release sites."

But Twin Falls podiatrist Peter Rickards was concerned about potential loopholes in the process of waste disposal and cleanup, and the possible siting of the proposed New Production Reactor at INEL.

"When push comes to shove, the DOE is going to keep nuclear production going," he said.

The public hearing process on the cleanup of the two Test Reactor Area sites will begin next month.

The Energy Department seeks to identify the best ways to clean up radioactive materials, primarily cesium, in the sediment beneath the pond.

State awards grants for education, the arts throughout Magic Valley

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In an effort to touch more rural communities with arts programs, the Idaho Commission on the Arts has earmarked $468,838 for 142 projects in 48 towns — including 15 worth $50,123 in the Magic Valley.

"Good things are happening in Idaho as a direct result of federal and state support for the arts," said Margot Knight, commission executive director.

"The arts and Idaho artists have a special and distinct role to play in increasing the quality of life of all our citizens," Gov. Cecil Andrus said.

"I am committed to making the arts truly available to Idahoans in every corner of our state," Knight said. The state received more grant applications from rural communities than ever before, and many of the grants went to small towns.

- In the Magic Valley, they included:
 - Idaho Folklife Museum in Albion — $7,000.
 - Buhl Arts Council for a performance and workshop by Robert Bluestone — $507.
 - Poppelwell Elementary School in Buhl for an education residency — $2,355.
 - Castleford School for an arts education residency with Margo Proksa — $1,300.
 - Filer School District for a four-week arts education residency — $2,071.
 - Hansen Elementary School for an arts education residency — $1,060.

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls' Accident Reduction Team is making a dent in Twin Falls' high accident rate, and more help may be on the way, a state traffic safety official said Tuesday.

The number of accidents in Twin Falls from January to May is down 30 percent over the same period last year, said Pat Raino, traffic safety specialist and grants contract officer for the Idaho Transportation Department.

"So far, the Twin Falls program has done a real dynamite job," Raino said. "The community here is much more aware of traffic safety."

Raino was in town to evaluate the city's three-man accident reduction team, which took off in January thanks to a federal grant issued by the Transportation Department last year.

This year's grant budget calls for continued federal support plus the addition of a traffic officer and an extra patrol car, Raino said. That budget has already passed its first hurdle, the state's Traffic Safety Commission, but must still be approved by the Transportation Department and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Nighttime injury accidents — typically the most serious wrecks and the ones most likely to be alcohol-related — are down more than 30 percent over the first five months of the year, Raino said.

Those numbers are encouraging, she said, but the city still has miles to travel before relinquishing its title as one of the most accident-prone places in Idaho.

Twin Falls was second only to Garden City in the number of accidents per resident last year.

Buhl ordinance marks 11 p.m. curfew for July

By Bertilia L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Children no longer will be allowed to be out on the streets after 11 p.m. after a parent or guardian when a new curfew ordinance goes into effect in the city of Buhl.

This new law will be enforced beginning early in July.

The new ordinance was first read at a City Council meeting held earlier in the month. Council members were unable to come to a decision after the first reading, so a special meeting was scheduled to continue the discussion and allow more public comment.

The second reading took place Monday evening.

After hearing public comments, discussing it and making one major change, Council members voted to pass the ordinance.

Hatch surrenders AK-47 on eve of gun bill fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch may have violated federal firearms law for years by displaying a captured Soviet AK-47 on his office wall.

Ironically, the Republican's misuse came to light this week just as he was planning to lead the fight against gun control provisions in a Senate crime bill before the Senate.

Hatch said Monday that his involvement with the assault rifle was innocent enough, no matter how legal it may or may not have been.

"It caused quite a stir with the Capitol police when they tried to bring it through security."

radical environmentalist group Earth First! who are charged with conspiring to sabotage nuclear plants.

Davis, Baker and two of their co-defendants also face a variety of property-destruction charges accusing them of damaging power lines and a ski lift.

FBI special agent Michael C. Roof testified that when Mark Davis and Marc Baker were arrested May 30, 1989, a woman escaped into the desert near Parker despite the search by a 10-member SWAT team of FBI members, assisted by search dogs, searchers on horseback and a helicopter.

During his testimony in U.S. District Court, Roof said that Tucson, Ariz., law enforcement officers, who questioned the FBI team the day of the arrests, were told the FBI team was on a training mission.

"Isn't that just an outright lie?" asked Michael Black, attorney for defendant Margaret "Peg" Millet, 37, also of Prescott.

Davis, 40, and Baker, 39, both of Prescott, are among five arrested or former members of the Center

In some cases, real estate values have gone up after the centers were built, Vernon said.

Officials were quick to point out that the work center will look more like an office building than a jail. Landscaped lawns, not security fences, will surround the building, Larson said.

Several local government officials at the meeting said the project will not have to be approved by the city's Planning and Zoning Commission.

Many people, even some who support the project, said they were upset that there was no public comment period before the decision to build the center was made.

"We should have been notified earlier," said Pete Johnston, who is trying to sell 75 acres adjacent to Goold's property. Johnston said he would have offered his own property for the project if given the chance.

surprise to Goold, who said it will take some time for people to realize their fears are unfounded.

The center will take up only about two of the 80 acres Goold owns west of Washington Street South. Goold said converting the cow pasture to a work center is "a good investment, dollar-wise."

Estimated construction cost for the project is $800,000, with an annual budget of around $500,000.

Buhl

Council members passed the new ordinance.

When originally presented, the ordinance stated children could not be out between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. After hearing public comment, council members decided 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. would better serve parents, children and everyone concerned.

The previous curfew ordinance on the books had so many variations it was deemed too difficult to be enforced. The new ordinance is more clear cut and affects all children under the age of 18.

Children without adult supervision will not be allowed in streets and alleys, parks, places of amusement, eating establishments, vacant lots and other locations within city limits during curfew hours.

The new ordinance clearly addresses legitimate reasons children under 18 may be out during curfew hours - they may be out if they are driving to and from work, school functions, sports activities, entertainment, etc.

Police Chief Ron Romero said that it is not the police department's intention to pull children out of public restaurants or hassle children on their way home. These children have a legitimate reason for being out and aren't causing a problem. Romero said it's the children roaming the streets and causing problems, such as vandalism or disturbing the peace, that they are after.

Romero said a first-time offender would just receive a warning. Repeat offenders will be taken into custody and the parents will be called to pick up the children. If the problem persists, a citation may be issued.

Some council members and citizens said 11 p.m. was too early for a curfew and suggested midnight might be more appropriate. Mayor Leonard Petersen said the ordinance could be revoked or amended by the City Council at any time if the new ordinance doesn't seem to be working, and if brought to the city's attention.

Accidents

Garden City and Post Falls also received grants to start traffic safety task forces this year.

The state has funded accident reduction teams in the Idaho's major cities for more than a decade now, Raino said. The purpose is to help officers find more time to prevent accidents instead of investigating them after they happen, she said.

Toward that end, Twin Falls' traffic officers are writing more tickets, said Cpl. Dave Heidemann, who heads the accident reduction team. All the statistics have not been compiled yet, but the number of citations issued May 1 was significantly higher than a year ago, he said.

The federal grant that started the accident reduction team is "seed money" to get the program rolling. The city will eventually be required to assume funding budget.

That could be difficult if the growing 1 percent property tax initiative movement is successful in slashing the city's most important funding source.

When a previous 1 percent initiative passed in 1978, many agencies were reluctant to begin new projects because they didn't see how they could afford to keep them once the federal money ran out, Raino said.

Speaking from her personal perspective as someone who visits law enforcement agencies statewide, Raino said she doesn't see "a lot of frivolous bucks being spent. They're pretty much bare-bones budgets."

* Sun Valley Center for the Arts to present Dizzy Gillespie - $1,000.

* College of Southern Idaho for Arts on Tour - $3,900.

* Magic Valley Arts Council for general operating support - $3,700.

* College of Southern Idaho to present the Side Street Strutters - $1,080.

* Lincoln Elementary and Sawtooth Elementary Schools, Twin Falls - $1,675, $1,475.

The commission received applications for $1 million worth of grants this year, or about $250,000 more than last year, she said.

All funds are matched by local community.

The commission is a state agency governed by 13 private citizens who serve four-year terms and are appointed by the governor.

Its 1992 budget is $1.4 million. In January the commission will give $65,000 for towns to hire people to administer arts programs. Only nine of 41 community councils have paid employees.

The money comes from a new grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, Knight said.

The commission offers grants to fund arts programs, for individual artists, for arts organizations and for schools.

The funds come from Idaho, private donors and the National Endowment for the Arts.

In addition to the state grants, Western State Arts Federation also made fee support awards to the Sun Valley Center for Arts and Humanities for a performance by Frederick Moyer (5360), and the College of Southern Idaho for a Western Opera Theatre performance ($2,500).

Rupert property owners upset over increase in tax valuations

By Terri McAfee
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — New valuations for commercial property along Highway 24 have brought shocked protests to the Board of Equalization in Minidoka County.

Commercial owners along the highway in Rupert complained this week of new valuations before the county commissioners, who make up the board.

Stan Buckley, owner of Finish Line, presented a letter of protest regarding his 1991 tax valuation to the commissioners. Finish Line's valuation for the 1990 tax year will be reviewed by the State Board of Tax Appeals. The letter was a formality so that the 1991 valuation could be added to the appeal.

Buckley maintains that using a fair market value rather than replacement cost or an income method is an unfair means of setting the valuation.

Don Chisum, representing Tri-Circle, John Simpson and Charles Parks, owners of property on the highway protested the new valuations on their commercial property. The new valuations brought increases of 54 to 78 percent.

Those parcels have not been re-evaluated for a number of years because of a lack of movement in the real estate market.

Recent sales for comparison were available for the re-appraisal.

The commissioners took the protests under advisement. Homeowner valuation protests by Richard and Shirley Paoli and Bob Nielsen were addressed by the new county assessor, Max Vaughn, who made arrangements to review the properties.

In other business: Larry Burbank was chosen to sit on the Minidoka Memorial Hospital Board by the commissioners. But the commissioners refused a request to create a new hospital board position to be filled by a physician. The hospital's chief of staff already sits on the board in ex-officio capacity.

Ross Hunsaker, a farmer who was injured in a snowmobile mishap earlier this spring, asked to be removed from the Planning and Zoning Board. Commissioners chose Kelly Runyon, a realtor, to fill the vacated position.

Dave Speir complained to the commissioners about noxious weed laws that go unenforced. Commissioner Lyle Barton explained—that some herbicides cannot be used in specified areas.

"If you got a law," Speir replied, "you enforce it or you kick it out."

County Treasurer Elaine White's office is in the midst of the recent tax payment collection. White intends to retire tax anticipation notices with the new collection.

The county's recycling program is at a standstill since the recycler can no longer afford to pick up the paper. The county's options are to haul the material itself, hire someone to collect it, or to have it removed on a quarterly basis.

Ray Bingham, representing Computer Arts Inc., gave a presentation on his uniform software program package and a printer for the treasurer's office. No decision was made until after the new budget has been seen in July.

Gillett will succeed Taylor as principal at Burley Junior High

By Laurie Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — After 11 years as principal of Burley Junior High School, Jeff Taylor has announced that he will resign his position with the Cassia County School district to accept the job of principal at Highland High School in Pocatello.

Taylor was instrumental in developing and setting up computer programs for the school district, according to Superintendent Norman Hurst. He also was a leader for the State Accreditation Association.

"For three consecutive years while Taylor was principal, Burley Junior High was state accredited with merit," Hurst said.

"Taylor has served us very well." Taylor will be replaced by Vice Principal Dan Gillett, who has worked for the Cassia County School District for the past two years.

Gillett received his bachelor of science degree from Brigham Young University in Utah. He received his master's degree from the College of Idaho in Caldwell.

Gillett majored in physical education and has a minor in zoology. He was a teacher at Shoshone High School for four years before moving to Hailey, where he taught physical education and coached basketball, track and football.

Two years ago, he moved to the Mini-Cassia area to work for the Cassia County Joint School District.

Gillett is a Declo native, and is the son of Joseph Gillett of Declo.

"Mr. Gillett is creative, talented and a very outstanding person. We feel he will do a great job as principal," Hurst said.

Officials say AIDS office fire was set

BOISE (AP) — A fire that burned the Idaho AIDS Foundation office in Boise over the weekend was arson-caused, the Boise Fire Department report.

Someone appeared to have used an open flame Sunday night, such as a match or a lighter, to ignite paper in a supply closet beneath a stairway, said fire investigator Joseph Daugenti, adding there was no motive or suspect by late Monday.

"They just used the material (pamphlets, literature) that was available," Daugenti said. "It doesn't appear to be a pro."

The building was locked when firefighters arrived. Daugenti said they found papers strewn around, but nothing appeared to be stolen. "We don't have the facts to make any kind of judgment, and our concern is to get the office open and let the investigators take care of preparing reports on what they found," said Foundation spokeswoman Mary Ann Seitz-Hart.

The group's first priority is to find a temporary office so its phone can be reconnected, she said.

The fire smoldered for about an hour before a passer-by reported it at 10:50 p.m.

Richard Cooke, the building's co-owner, said a damage assessment had not been completed, but he estimated it would be several thousand dollars.

"The whole building has to be cleaned and repainted," Cooke said. He said the building has been broken into once previously but not the foundation office.

"There's never been any animosity toward the AIDS office, and, as far as tenants go, they have been excellent," Cooke said.

The foundation, established in 1985, is a private, non-profit, service organization devoted to AIDS education and support activities.

Man charged with murder will eat pizza

ST. MARIES (AP) — A man accused of murder, rape and kidnapping will have a slice of pizza delivered to his Benewah County Jail cell in honor of his 29th birthday. But forget the frosting. Benewah County Sheriff Rodney Thormahlen has denied a request to allow Reuben Rich of Clarkia to enjoy a slice of birthday cake to celebrate the occasion Wednesday.

"His family wanted him to have cake, but we don't usually do that," Thormahlen said Monday. "I said I would allow pizza as long as it is brought to all the prisoners."

The Pizza Factory in St. Maries will hand-deliver two medium Canadian bacon and pineapple pizzas to eight inmates serving time, Thormahlen said.

Rich was arrested last February and charged with the shooting death of Jerry Caines, 34, of Santa

Businessman, city settle suit in police case

BOISE (AP) — Garden City has settled a federal lawsuit alleging police brutality, say the attorneys handling the case.

The suit alleged Boise businessman Jack Mahan, 56, was beaten during a traffic stop in 1988.

Mahan sought punitive damages from the city, and officers Ray Chopko and Ken Mayer. Mahan's attorney, Thomas McCabe, said settlement papers were signed Monday.

"We're happy on our end," McCabe said, "but they insisted on us not disclosing the amount of the settlement."

According to the suit, Mahan was driving on Chinden Boulevard on the morning of Feb. 26, 1988, when he was pulled over for following Chopko's cruiser too closely.

When Mahan refused to sign the citation, he said Chopko grabbed his left arm through the window, twisting and slamming it over the door, the suit said.

Production, processing of food tops list of industries in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Agriculture and food processing accounted for almost 36 percent of Idaho's gross state product in 1987, according to a computer model University of Idaho economists have been developing for four years.

The model shows agriculture was responsible for 21 percent of Idaho's $13.65 billion gross state product. Food processing accounted for 14.9 percent, timber 11.9 percent, tourism 3.4 percent and mining 2.2 percent.

The gross state product is roughly the state equivalent of gross national product, including all wholesale and retail purchases of goods and services. "This kind of information is essential in a state like Idaho that is dependent on natural resources and on decisions regarding the disposition of those resources — many of them made by the federal government," Hank Robison of the Moscow Agricultural College of Agriculture said. "The effort involved using tremendous amounts of published and unpublished data for 1987, said Robison, the project leader. Because the model is the first of its kind, he said, the results can't be compared with previous research results based on different data-collection methods or earlier years.

"The hard part is done. The framework is in place," Robison said. "It continues to get funding, the model

"will be able to provide a picture of the state as it evolves through time." Part of that evolution involves tourism. The impact of recreation and leisure travel by both residents and non-residents ranged from 6.7 percent of gross sales in northern Idaho to 2.4 percent in southwestern Idaho.

But Charles Harris of the University of Idaho College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences said tourism's economic importance probably is bigger today with new development in Coeur d'Alene, Sandpoint and Boise.

"The tourism infrastructure and industry have expanded a lot in Idaho since 1987," he said. "What we've seen is about an 18-percent increase statewide just in lodging receipts between 1987 and 1990, above and beyond the normal increases in room rates."

Harris said the model shows agriculture and timber are still the mainstays of Idaho's economy, but their growth has been flat in recent years. "If you're looking at future growth, tourism and food processing are some areas with strong potential. While agriculture accounted for $2.87 billion and was the leading industry statewide, researchers found that timber was the leading natural resource-based industry in northern Idaho. It accounted for 44.5 percent of the gross product compared with agriculture at 9.5 percent.

Agriculture and food processing together were responsible for 26.3 percent of the gross product of southwestern Idaho and 47.3 percent of southeastern Idaho. But in the Magic Valley, which Robison called "one of the most agriculturally dependent regions in the nation," agriculture alone accounted for 45.3 percent and food processing another 32.1 percent. "That surprised me," said Neil Meyer, an agricultural policy specialist for the College of Agriculture. "I didn't expect that ag and food processing would be that high in the Magic Valley or that they would be as high as they are in southeastern Idaho."

The model also showed that cattle production, with gross sales of $828 million, was the single biggest portion of Idaho's agriculture economy in 1987. Wheat was king in northern Idaho with statewide gross sales of $216 million and potatoes led in southeastern Idaho. Gross spud sales in 1987 totaled $365 million statewide.

Meyer said the model should help Idaho's existing businesses survive while helping the state diversify its economy. "Basic business retention and expansion says that your best way to industrialize is to do all that you can to help your existing industries survive and grow," he said.

Navy halts noisy testing on lake

BAYVIEW (AP) — A mechanical malfunction has suspended and possibly ended high-level noise tests the Navy began in Lake Pend Oreille last month, a Navy official says.

George Guedel, technical director of the David Taylor Research Center in Bayview, Monday said the Navy has temporarily quit that phase of testing and will not undertake others that could jeopardize a more important experiment scheduled for later.

The Navy intends to begin a project called the Intermediate Scale Measurement System in 1993, involving the emission of sonar signals as high as 150 decibels. It is designed to protect submarines by exploring new silencing techniques that will hinder their detection. "To quiet concerns of local activists, Naval officials agreed to conduct a study on fish behavior near the project site, then determine whether the signals will harm fish habitat.

The Navy then permitted acoustical tests in excess of 150 decibels about five miles from the study site beginning last month.

Lake Pend Oreille Idaho Club president Jim Watkins, who helped negotiate the fish study with the Navy, said the recent tests were loud enough to alter the fish environment before experts had a chance to study it. He also charged the Navy with reneging on its promise to conduct the study before initiating any high-level noise tests in the lake.

The Lake Pend Oreille Idaho Club and Clark Fork Coalition filed an appeal in April to force the Navy to conduct an environmental impact statement on the project.

The 300-member sportsmen club, along with members of the Clark

Fork Coalition and Bayview Chamber of Commerce, struck the May 17 agreement with the Navy to conduct the mutual study.

Guedel insisted Monday the sonar tests did not compromise the fish study or scuttle the pact to protect the fishery. He did acknowledge, however, that it was loud enough to upset boaters.

"It clearly has affected the human environment, particularly on a quiet night," Guedel said of the signals that kept some Bayview resort moorage customers awake. "I guess we should have been a little more sensitive to community concern and let people know a little more ahead of time."

A meeting on the baseline study, which the Navy has agreed to fund and orchestrate with local residents, is still set for Wednesday at the Navy research center.

Federal raid prompts speculation of motives

WALLACE (AP) — As federal agents left the Silver Valley after a sweep of illegal gambling devices, residents wondered what prompted the weekend raid and whether more were in store. Agents involved in Sunday's extensive raids declined to say Monday whether the seizures were part of investigations into other crimes such as illegal drug sales, income-tax evasion or public corruption.

"Whoever was letting them get away with gambling was letting them get away with something else," said Gilbert Sherbinov, a disabled miner who lives here. "If whoever is letting this get by, who knows what else they're letting get by?" On Sunday, 150 FBI agents raided 58 bars, two vending-machine businesses and three residences in Wallace, Kellogg, Mullan and outlying areas of Shoshone County.

The agents hauled off nearly 200 video-poker game machines, financial records and hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash. There were no arrests. Absent from the operation was Shoshone County Sheriff Frank Crnkovich, who said Monday he was notified only moments before the morning raid began. "The whole thing catches me by surprise. I had no idea gambling was going on in the county."

Mutombo says wealth won't spoil him

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dikembe Mutombo can speak four African languages, English, French and Portuguese, and is picking up Spanish. After Wednesday night's NBA draft, he can learn another one — the language of money.

The 7-foot-2 center from Zaire and Georgetown is virtually certain to be one of the top four picks in the draft, which guarantees he will soon be a millionaire. He is a longshot for No. 1 — only if Charlotte backs away from its expected selection of UNLV's Larry Johnson could he go that high.

Mutombo has hired ProSery and David Falk to handle his contract negotiations and help him manage his money. Despite the riches to come, Mutombo doesn't expect to convert to a flashy lifestyle.

"I'm not going to buy 10 or 11 cars and wear gold; I just want raised that way," said Mutombo, who moved to the United States from Africa five years ago. "I've been reading the books they use to teach at Har-

NEW YORK — Put the NBA draft in the same category as a public auction, big-money bingo, or a buffet luncheon. There might be a lot going on, but it doesn't look like much.

"If your idea of visual images is David Stern walking to the podium 28 times then, yeah, it's a visual image," Turner Sports senior vice president Don McGuire said. "Drafts, themselves, aren't very visually pleasing."

"I want to go to the NBA and prove to people I can play offense," he said. "I studied the stats, and guys like Patrick Ewing and Michael Jordan who score 40 points all the time in the NBA never averaged 20 points in college. I scored 15 points a game and everybody collapsed on me. The NBA floor is more open and I know I can score and be rookie of the year."

Mutombo, whose parents have been staying with him for a month after a five-year separation, said he also would be a steady contributor to a foundation for poor people

"African players are playing under a lot of pressure because African society is closer than America," he said. "Everyone is like

18-year-old outsprints Ore-Ida racers

SUN VALLEY — Dede Demet, 18, may be one of the youngest riders at the Ore-Ida Women's Challenge but Tuesday she proved that she is also one of the strongest.

Demet outsprinted nine other riders, including race leader Jeanne Longo-Ciprelli, to win the 63-mile mountainous road race that scalded the picturesque Sawtooth Range.

Demet's TGI Friday teammate Eve Stephenson was second and Longo-Ciprelli of Weight Watchers third in the fast and furious spring race into Ketchum.

"I felt really good today," said Demet, the 1989 junior world champion and hopeful for the 1992 Olympic team. "My morale has been a little low because I haven't been feeling well," she continued, attributing her sluggishness to a grueling spring race schedule in Europe.

Demet is currently fifth in the overall standings, 44 seconds behind Longo-Ciprelli. Demet and her three TGI teammates are all in the top 10 in overall standings, giving the squad a solid four-minute lead in the team competition.

Stage 5 winner — 1. Dede Demet, TGI Friday, 2:26:10; 2. Evie Stephenson, TGI Friday, 3. Jane Ciprelli, Weight Watchers.

Dede Demet, center, outsprinted nine riders to win Stage 5 of the Ore-Ida Women's Challenge. Overall leader Jane Ciprelli, left, finished third and Demet's teammate Eve Stephenson placed second. WIMBLEDON, England — Unable to explain her plodding play on the grass where last she danced so nimbly, Martina Navratilova turned to Greek mythology to tell her story.

"I felt like Sisyphus," she said, starting those who wondered whether he ever won Wimbledon. "I had to keep pushing the stone up. As soon as I got close to the top, it came down again."

And down, in and out, tennis balls flew wildly on Centre Court on Tuesday as the nine-time champion added another chapter to her own Wimbledon myth. Her record 100th victory at Wimbledon came nervously, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, against Elina Reinach on a misty day of broken rhythms and interrupted play.

Defending men's champion Stefan Edberg left for the second straight day without a victory, though at least he got on the court this time. He led 6-4, 6-4, 0-1 against Marek Rosner before showers snaked the courts again.

Suddenly now, she seemed seared as she struck balls defensively and moved slowly as if rooted to the court. Centre Court, long her domain, threatened to be her prison, expres-

Tyson, Ruddock tone down verbal sparring from past

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Mike Tyson and Donovan "Razor" Ruddock swore on their best behavior Tuesday in their first meeting since their raucous televised news conference in May.

"I'm sorry Razor that I called you bad names," Tyson, teigning contrition, said when asked if he felt repentant about remarks he made about Ruddock, whom he will fight in a rematch Friday night at the Mirage.

On May 2, Tyson, who was in Las Vegas, told Ruddock, who was in New York, "I'll make you my girlfriend."

Tyson also called Ruddock a transvestite and said, "You're sweet. I can't wait for you to kiss me with those big lips of yours."

"Mike Tyson is Mike Tyson," Ruddock said at Tuesday's news conference. "He can say what he wants. I don't pay attention to that."

He did, however, in May. After Tyson's "girlfriend" remark, Ruddock had said, "I think he's trying to get brave enough to come out of the closet."

Ruddock also called the former heavyweight champion a moron and an ignorant fat kid.

Tyson was a 5-1 favorite to win the rematch, which was made because of the controversial ending of the first fight. Tyson won when referee Richard Steele stopped the fight at 2:22 of the seventh round with Please see SPARRING/B6

Idaho Board of Education to discuss Big West question

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Board of Education has put the question of letting Boise State University leave the Big Sky Conference for the Big West Conference on its agenda for Thursday's meeting in Moscow.

But board President Colleen Mahoney of Lewiston said Tuesday that it was only for discussion. Boise State President John Keiser doesn't need an answer right away, she said.

Keiser did not return calls to his office Tuesday from The Associated Press. "He won't need a commitment from us until he knows whether or not they'll be invited after they (Big West officials) visit in July," Mahoney said. "There will not be a formal invitation issued until they make a campus visit."

The Big West is losing Fresno State to the Western Athletic Conference in July 1992. That will leave it with nine member schools in men's sports and 10 in women's.

It is considering bringing either Boise State or the University of Nevada at Reno to the Big Sky schools' conference. She said that as an opportunity for their football programs to step up from NCAA Division II.

Sizzling Twins stop Blue Jays' win streak

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Pagliarulo's two-run sixth-inning homer put Minnesota ahead to stay as the Twins improved their June record to 21-2 by overtaking Toronto to 8-6 on Tuesday night, ending the Blue Jays' five-game winning streak.

Jack Morris (10-5) won for the seventh straight time and 10th in 12 starts dating back to April 24 despite blowing a 4-0 lead by allowing five fourth-inning runs. Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 20th save.

Todd Stottlemyre (8-3) took a 5-4 lead into the sixth before allowing a single to Gene Larkin. Pagliarulo hit the next pitch over the right-field wall for a 6-5 lead.

Chili Davis has a two-run homer, his 17th, for Minnesota. Kelly Gruber, John Olerud and Greg Myers homered for the Blue Jays.

Toronto's Greg Myers, left, blocks the plate and puts the tag on Minnesota's Chili Davis as he tries to score in the third inning.

BOSTON (AP) — Matt Nokes hit a three-run homer and Don Mattingly lined a pair of doubles and a single Tuesday night as New York ripped Seattle Mariners for 10 hits and beat Boston.

Clemens (9-5), who lost his second straight decision, was unable to hold a 4-1 lead — although the three runs scored on Nokes' 11th homer earned because of a fielding error by shortstop Luis Rivera.

Tim Leary (4-7) allowed two runs in each of the first two innings, but lasted long enough for the win.

Steve Fave picked the ninth for his eighth save.

Brewers II, Tigers 3
DETROIT (AP) — Darryl Hamilton had a three-run double to cap an eight-run eighth inning as Milwaukee blew out Detroit.

Jim Gantner added a two-run single as Milwaukee sent 13 men to the plate in the eighth, turning a 3-2 game into a rout.

Milwaukee's Bill Wegman (3-3) surpassed his entire 1990 victory log. Wegman, coming back from a lower spring, allowed five hits in six innings for his first victory over Detroit since 1988. Detroit starter Walt Terrell (3-8) gave up six runs on nine hits in 7-2 1/3 innings.

Travis Fryman had a solo homer and scored all three runs for Detroit.

American League

Angels 4, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Walt Joyner drove in two runs and California tied an American League record with its 12th straight errorless game to hand Kansas City its fifth straight loss.

The Angels scored twice in the eighth to break a 2-2 tie, getting an extra out by hitting the ball out of the infield. Dave Gallagher's RBI grounder snapped the tie and Joyner added an RBI single.

Kirk McCaskill (7-8) allowed eight hits in 7 1/3 innings for the win. Bryan Harty pitched the ninth for his 19th save. Mike Boddicker (6-6) hurt himself by making an error and hitting a batter, both of which led to runs.

Orioles 5, Indians 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sam Horn homered in the fourth inning and hit a two-out, tie-breaking double in the 12th as Baltimore beat Cleveland for its season-high fourth straight win.

It was the third consecutive extra-inning game for the Orioles, who won both games of a doubleheader on Sunday. They're building a gigantic lead in the eighth, turning a 3-2 game into a rout.

Mark Williamson (2-2), Baltimore's fifth pitcher, got the win with 1-1-3 scoreless innings. Greg Olson pitched the 12th for his 13th save in 17 tries.

White Sox 4, Mariners 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Jack McDowell pitched 7 1/3 hitless innings and collected five three-run homers to give his major league debut to lead Chicago to its fifth straight win.

McDowell was five outs away from becoming the first White Sox pitcher since Joe Horlen in 1967 to throw a no-hitter in Chicago when Scott Bradley lined a sharp single to right field. Omar Vizquel followed with a single to left, but McDowell preserved the shutout by getting Harold Reynolds to fly to deep center and striking out Greg Briley.

McDowell (9-3) finished with seven strikeouts and three walks while pitching his major league-leading sixth complete game.

a cookie and getting his first snack in the jar?
"On contrary, McGuire says there are several ways to spice up a draft for television.

"First, we have a guy who starts at about this time of year and works 12 months to pull together footage of every potential draftee for next year," McGuire said.

"It's rare when we don't have some sort of historical footage of a player that's drafted, even if it's only from high school. That really helps."

Next comes the juicy part.

"At this time of year, there's more gossip in the NBA than you pull out of Ron Barrett with the tradecard and so forth. Rumors just keep flying. It's that's the night word, by involving ourselves with various teams."

"For example, this year (TNT) will feature live remotes from Cleveland where coach Don Nelson's Golden State Warriors have three first-round picks, and from Charlotte where the Hornets will make the first pick."

"Three years ago, we did it with Bernie Bickerstaff when he was in Seattle and with Doug Collins in Chicago. We got a lot of good stuff out of it because we found out what was going on in those people's minds before the announcements were made," McGuire said.

Not all of McGuire's ideas have worked, he freely admitted. Unlike the champ, he tried the cookie and got his hand out of the jar.

"Our first-year guys made the mistake of taking out cameras into the crowd to do interviews. The minute the lights went on, it became a circus," McGuire said.

"This year, for the first time, the draft will be held on the main floor of Madison Square Garden rather than the Felt Forum, and the NBA's trying to make it look like an extravaganza.

"The jury is out on this one, by far," McGuire said. "They're opening up the arena for 7,000 fans. They're actually going 40-40-40 on (Monday) — they're building a gigantic stage that covers the floor of the Garden. Now, they're all up on this stage with an emcee and a big screen projection with some of our videos."

"I don't know what's going to happen, but it has potential."

Now, all they need are the Rockets and a guy with six smartly coiffed poodles.

Cubs end 9-game skid against Braves

National League

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Chicago Cubs ended a nine-game losing streak — their longest in six years — as Les Lancaster won as a complete game for the first time this season in a 5-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Tuesday night.

The Cubs had five hits off starter John Smiley (8-5) and relievers Vicente Palacios and Rick Kipper, but reversed a recent streak of low-run losses that saw them lose four games by one run and three by two runs during their losing streak.

The Pirates, continuing to struggle at the plate, lost their third in a row and fifth in six games as Lancaster (3-2) limited them to a run and five hits in eight innings. The National League East leaders have scored only 26 runs in their last 11 games and haven't had an RBI from their cleanup hitter in seven games.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin McKeown had a grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning as New York rallied past Montreal.

The Mets, who scored four times in the first inning against Detroit, had nothing more until the ninth. But Gary Templeton led off with a single and pinch-runner Keith Miller moved up on a wild pick-off throw by Barry Jones (3-5).

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ozzie Smith drove in four runs, including a go-ahead two-run single in the eighth inning, as the St. Louis Cardinals rallied twice to defeat the Philadelphia Phillies 10-9 Tuesday night.

The Cardinals, who snapped a three-game losing streak by ending ahead 6-5 with a five-run fifth. The Phillies then led 8-6 and 9-7 before the Cardinals rallied for three runs in the eighth for their 13th come-from-behind victory.

Astros 1, Braves 0

Ruduck still on his feet—Most of servers thought Siceluck acted too hastily.

Tyson did compliment Ruduck, although grudgingly.

"He's a better fighter than Douglas," said Tyson, who lost the fight on a shocking 16th-round knockout by James "Buster" Douglas on Feb. 11, 1990.

"No doubt, he's a good fighter," Tyson continued. Then he added, "I'm the best."

"Before, before, I'll beat him again. He's going to get knocked out."

"A lot of people are making plans, but there are always upsets," Ruduck said of his underdog rise. "I don't know, if I lose, it doesn't bother me."

Asked why he took a rematch with Tyson rather than take another route to a title bid against Evander Holyfield, Ruduck said, "I've got nothing better to do."

Of course, a victory would send the 27-year-old Ruduck into a title match in the fall.

Should a 4-year-old Tyson win, however, his next opponent will not necessarily be Holyfield.

Don King, Tyson's promoter, and Dan Duva, Holyfield's promoter, have been waging a war of words against each other of not wanting the fight.

It is possible that Tyson's next opponent could be 42-year-old George Foreman, the former champion who came out of retirement in 1989 against Holyfield to a 12-round unanimous decision.

Unbeaten Riddick Bowe, another heavyweight contender, will appear on the card in a 10-round bout against Rodolfo Marin of Puerto Rico.

In another title fight, Azumah Nelson of Ghana, the World Boxing Council super featherweight champion, will meet Jeff Fenech of Australia.

The unbeaten Fenech is a former WBC super bantamweight and featherweight champion. Nelson also once held the WBC featherweight title.

Rosensbaum said, "The Big Sky's caliber of competition will go down."

"They're the only two we're officially looking at," Jody McRoberts, assistant Big West commissioner, said Tuesday from the league's Santa Ana, Calif., headquarters.

"There have been several schools discussed, but these are the only two we're looking at seriously."

There appears to be little opposition in Nevada to Reno switching conferences. It already has a strong rivalry with Big West member Nevada-Las Vegas and geographically is closer to many Big West schools than to some in the Big Sky.

Healy McRoberts said, "We've heard there may be a problem in the state of Idaho" with Boise State making the move.

"I would think that before the conference would give any kind of invitation, Boise State would be free to go," she said.

McRoberts said the Big West asked Keiser to take the question to the Board of Education. The Board of Education rejected a request from the University of Idaho on Oct. 20, 1972, to leave the Big Sky for the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. That conference later became the Big West.

The reception might not be much warmer this time. Concerns have been raised about whether Boise State would be able to continue its traditional rivalry with the University of Idaho by leaving the Big West.

Idaho State University President Richard Bowen has openly opposed the idea.

On Tuesday, the president of Idaho State's governing Board of Trustees said that leaving a Boise State defection would hurt the Big Sky competitively and financially.

"If one team leaves, others will try to do it down the road," Werner

Ex-Miami official hires prominent lawyer

MIAMI (AP) — A former University of Miami athletic counselor, who recently predicted he'll go to jail for falsifying financial aid applications, now getting advice from a prominent criminal-defense attorney.

Tony Russell has admitted falsifying 600 forms to obtain government grants for athletes at Miami and elsewhere.

No charges have been filed against Russell, but he now has an attorney, Roy Kahn of Miami, confirmed Tuesday he was appointed at a closed federal hearing Monday to represent Russell.

Sources close to the case speculate that the government moved for the appointment of an attorney to protect Russell's interests. He is the focus of an investigation by the FBI and U.S. Department of Education.

"I have had short conferences with him," Kahn said. "But it will not be until after we sit down and have a long conference and discuss the basics of the case that we will know what direction we will take."

Kahn would not elaborate.

Russell has said he submitted falsified forms on behalf of about 40 University of Miami students, mostly football players. He said he assessed them as a processing fee and used the money to buy cocaine, a practice he said he started about two years ago. Before that, he said, he didn't charge a fee.

The Miami Herald reported Tuesday that Russell continues to give conflicting accounts about who, if anybody, knew about the scam.

In an interview with reporters Saturday, Russell said he acted alone. He said he confessed to the FBI and doesn't want a trial.

The Herald quoted three sources close to the probe as saying Russell may implicate others in the university athletic department.

Federal investigators have been questioning Russell for a week.

"It is against federal law to disclose targets of an investigation until charges are filed," said Diane Cossin, spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's Office. "The investigation is quite detailed and involves irregularities at the University of Miami financial aid office."

The Palm Beach Post quoted university and federal sources as saying the administrative structure immediately above and around Russell would be investigated.

Anna Price, assistant athletic director for academics, did not return phone calls seeking comment. John Johnson, assistant athletic director for compliance, declined to say whether he has been questioned by federal investigators.

"Everyone has to live with themselves," Johnson said. "I'm not pointing a finger at anyone. If they choose to point the finger at me, so be it."

University President Edward Foote said he had no knowledge of additional suspects.

"There is a lot about the investigation that I don't know at this stage," Foote said. "I'm sure the investigators are talking to many people."

"To the best of my knowledge, there is only one person so far implicated in any wrongdoing," he said.

The FBI and Department of Education also will investigate anywhere Russell said he sent a falsified financial aid application since beginning the scam, federal sources said.

Russell, 43, has said he first falsified Pell Grant applications in 1977-87 as head football coach at a high school in Pompano Beach, Fla. He next coached at West Virginia State College, where he said he also falsified Pell Grant applications.

He then went to Kentucky State University, where he assisted the football program on a part-time voluntary basis. He was not involved with financial aid applications there, he said.

Russell was associate academic coordinator at Miami for two years until three weeks ago. Russell said he resigned, university officials said he was fired.

Monica Seles, shown after winning the French Open, reportedly saw an orthopedic surgeon in Colorado last week.

Women's top seed still mum on withdrawal from Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — There's still no definitive word on the injury that forced Monica Seles to withdraw from Wimbledon.

Seles, who had been seeded No. 1, withdrew Friday with what her agents described as "an injury caused by a minor accident." On Monday, her late withdrawal cost her a $6,000 fine from the Women's Tennis Association.

Newspaper stories today suggest Seles' injury is a torn ACL in her right knee, which is not out of action long.

USA Today reported that Dr. Richard Steadman, an orthopedic surgeon, treated Seles in Vail, Colo., last Wednesday. Thursday and Friday, Steadman — who performed arthroscopic knee surgery on Martina Navratilova last fall, specializes in sports-injuries and has been the U.S. ski team physician for 17 years.

However, Steadman did not provide any details on the injury.

"I would like people to find out, but at her request, I am to release no information," Steadman told the newspaper. Asked about the possibility that Seles could play again in three weeks, Steadman said: "I don't disagree with that."

A New Jersey tournament promoter quoted Seles' agent, Interable Management Group, as saying that Seles will return to tennis for the Pathmark Classic in Mahwah, N.J., starting July 10.

"They said there was no doubt she will come here," John Korff, tournament's promoter, told The Record of Hackensack, N.J.

"They told me she has a mild stress fracture in her shin."

However, a spokeswoman for IMG said Seles had not told the agency the nature of her injury.

"We don't have anything at the moment," Robin Rizzo said at the outfit's Cleveland office.

Rizzo said they had only Seles' statement that she regretted missing Wimbledon and looked forward to returning.

"The date of her return, what year of accident, we don't have yet," Rizzo said.

Korff said, however, the date of Seles' return had been set.

"We'll be the first one she plays when she gets back," he said.

"The tournament," Steadman said, "College is not part of the regular women's tour and its results do not figure in the rankings, which Korff said should make it all the more attractive for Seles.

"It's a great way for her to get back into it without worrying about her ranking," Korff said.

The San Diego Union report said that Seles has informed organizers of the Mazda Tennis Classic in San Diego that she expects to compete in the tournament that begins July 29.

Raquel Giscalf, the tournament's director, told the newspaper that Stephanie Tolleson of IMG confirmed Seles' plans.

"(She) said Monica's having trouble with an old injury that will require about two weeks," Giscalf said. "She wasn't specific about the injury, but she said Monica would definitely be here."

Gerry Smith, executive director of the WTA, said he was asked IMG to provide a medical certificate specifying the injury.

Smith said he'd been informed by Seles' agents that the injury was not serious and that she was expected back in action "in a few weeks' time."

Smith discounted reports that Seles had an arm injury or would need surgery. He said he had been "led to believe" that the injury was related to Seles' problem with her plants.

But Smith said he had been unable to reach Seles personally to find out the exact nature of the injury.

"If I knew I would tell you," he said. "I really don't know what it is. I can only speculate that they are not fully aware themselves of what the injury may be."

Smith said Seles was somewhere in the United States.

"She doesn't answer the phone," he said. "We would like to talk to Monica directly. I don't know why she doesn't answer. Maybe she isn't there."

Her father, Karoly Seles, said in the Belgrade daily Novosti on Sunday that she had an arm problem and "chronic inflammation of the muscles of both legs."

"When she gets up in the morning, she hardly manages to walk," Karoly Seles was quoted as saying. "Monica is too tired. The arm injury is just a culmination of our problems."

The Belgrade daily reported that the Australian Open and French Open champion had her neck examined in New York on Saturday after she experienced pain during a practice session.

UNLV coach denies signing request for fixer

LAS VEGAS (AP) — UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian denied he signed ticket request forms for convicted sports fixer Richard Perry.

A Las Vegas television station, KLAS-TV, reported that a probe conducted by the Nevada attorney general's office will reveal the link between the Rebel program and Perry.

The attorney general's office has been investigating the allocation of commentary tickets for Rebel games, and is expected to release a report on that probe to Nevada regulators Thursday.

The coach said the ticket issue came up two weeks ago when it was learned that tickets were left for Perry four times in 1986 and 1987.

Tarkanian said he was questioned by UNLV officials about the matter.

"Only one time was my signature (on the ticket request form) and it was forged," Tarkanian said. "It was not my signature."

The attorney general's probe, which began last October, was reportedly sparked by someone forging names to ticket request forms.

Tarkanian said tickets requested by Perry, other than the one time in which his name was used, were requested by other personnel in the basketball office.

Tarkanian said the requests were legitimate because Perry was then known only as Sam Perry, and was known to the coaching staff as a New York City basketball coach.

"In 1987, we knew Sam Perry as a summer league coach from New York City," Tarkanian said Monday. "There was anyone who would know him differently. This whole thing makes me sick. He was treated just like any other coach would have been treated."

Perry was responsible for steering New York City prep star Lloyds Daniels to UNLV. Daniels was dropped without ever playing for the Rebels after he was arrested on drug charges.

Tarkanian announced earlier this month that he would retire at the end of the basketball season. The retirement was prompted by publication of photos showing three former Rebel players in a hot tub with Perry at Perry's Las Vegas home.

SuperSonics owner scraps plan to build new arena

SEATTLE (AP) — A proposed new arena for the Seattle SuperSonics won't be built because of insufficient financing, several television stations reported Tuesday.

SuperSonics owner Barry Ackerley scheduled a Wednesday news conference to announce a "major development" in the project. But KING-TV, KIRO-TV and KOMO-TV, citing insufficient sources, reported that the plan to build a $100 million arena near the kingdom is dead.

Money paid for luxury suites is being refunded, KING said.

Ackerley met privately Tuesday with Mayor Norm Rice but Rice later declined to discuss specifics, saying Ackerley wanted to make his own announcement Wednesday.

Asked if the NBA Sonics would be leaving Seattle, Rice told KIRO-TV: "There's a lease with the (Seattle) Coliseum.

They'll be playing in the Coliseum until that lease is done and I think they will look at where their other options are. But this is a decision on an arena, not on a basketball team."

The team has four years left on its Coliseum lease.

"I think you are concerned about a lost opportunity," Rice said. "I'm an optimist. So I believe that nothing is ever lost. You just have to reshape it and repackage it and go onto something else."

Arena project manager Bill Ackerley, Barry Ackerley's had left his office Tuesday evening and was not immediately reachable for comment on the television reports.

Seattle president Bob Whittitt refused comment on the arena plan.

The Ackerleys earlier voiced optimism about the project's prospects. But several months of negotiation with a Japanese bank have not secured financing for the 18,000-seat arena, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Tuesday.

Ackerley Communications owns several radio and television stations and a billboard concern.

Barry Ackerley has said the team needs a new, larger venue to survive financially. The Sonics play in the Coliseum, a nearly 30-year-old site on the grounds of the 1962 World's Fair. The coliseum seats only 14,000 and its roof leaks.

A bond referendum that would have raised money to fix the roof and spruce up the facility failed this year. Rice has said there is no money in the city budget for the Coliseum this year.

A deal between Ackerley and the city would have rebated $30 million in admission taxes to the arena developer, paid $2 million in traffic improvements and $150,000 in police costs.

Bradley regains focus on golf after battling Graves Disease

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — It's 1986 all over again for Pat Bradley, who has literally steeled herself back on course toward the PGA Hall of Fame.

Bradley was the tour's top money-winner in 1986, winning three major tournaments along the way. But the following year she found herself becoming uncomparably fatigued, and in 1988 she began to shake when lining up putts.

"I had never been sick in my life...so I didn't think there was anything physically wrong with me," she said. "I thought I was creating the symptoms in my own mind, trying to maintain the high level of performance I had set for myself in 1986."

It wasn't that at all, Bradley had hyperthyroidism, or Graves Disease, a rare disorder that usually is difficult to diagnose.

She now takes a pill every morning to combat the condition. She has red spots on her legs — a side-effect of the medication — but there certainly is nothing wrong with the way she's been playing golf.

Bradley, 40, is once again the leading money-winner on the tour. She won the Centel Classic last month and has finished in the top 10 in 10 of the 14 tournaments she's played this year.

Bradley is now focusing on the LPGA Championship, to be held at the Bethesda Country Club from Thursday through Sunday. She hasn't won a major since 1986, when she won the LPGA in Ohio, but all that could change this weekend.

"My health is now 100 percent, and basically I'm picking up where I left off in 1986," she said Tuesday. "I've won six majors already, but I'd love to add another major to my resume. It would be a nice feather in my cap."

But it would not officially proclaim her return to prominence.

That's already been taken care of. "I think I've already announced my comeback through what I've done this year," she said.

The Golf Writers Association of America voted her the Ben Hogan Award of 1991, given to the golfer who is judged to have come back from a serious injury or illness.

"That helped close the door on my illness," she insisted. "I think I've made that statement quite clearly."

Bradley, the leading money winner in the history of the sport, has won 27 tournament titles since joining the tour in 1974. She still needs three victories to enter the LPGA Hall of Fame, arguably the hardest Hall to get into.

The requirements haven't changed since the late 1950s. A golfer has to win 30 events, including two majors, or 35 events with one title, or 40 official events.

"It's a very tough qualification," Bradley said. "The biggest joke is that it's the smallest Hall of Fame in sports. I understand the founding members wanting to make it distinguished, but things have changed since 1950."

Bradley won't worry about it, though. The way she's been playing lately, she figures it's only a matter of time before she joins that elite club.

"I don't feel a burden in making it happen each time," she said. "I believe my time will come. I have been able to reach every goal that I have set and I honestly and truly believe I will not be denied this one."

Bradley and 143 other players, including defending champion Beth Daniel, will be vying for the top prize of $150,000. At least they won't have to contend with Nancy Lopez, who withdrew last week because of her pregnancy.

Big Sky athletic eligibility standards to get tougher

BOISE (AP) — Starting in August, eligibility standards for Big Sky Conference athletes will get a little stricter.

At the Presidents' Council meeting earlier this month, school presidents approved a new "satisfactory progress" rule which requires a student-athlete to achieve a cumulative 1.8 grade point average by the beginning of his or her second year. The athlete must reach a cumulative 2.0 grade point average by the third year and must maintain that average thereafter to compete in intercollegiate athletics.

The old rule required athletes to achieve a 1.6 GPA after the first semester, 1.8 after the second and third semesters and 1.9 after the fourth and fifth semesters and 2.0 thereafter.

"We're getting a little more restrictive," said Arnie Sgalio, assistant commissioner.

Big Sky athletes also must meet NCAA requirements that they complete 24 semester hours or 36 credit hours per year, an average load of 12 credit hours per semester.

The new rule applies to any student-athlete who enters a member institution after Aug. 1, Sgalio said.

The Presidents' Council also agreed on what the term "equitable agreement on the distribution of television revenue." It stipulates that local television rights fees will go 30 percent to the host institution, 25 percent to the visiting institution and 45 percent to be distributed evenly to the nine member institutions.

It began March 18. It will end June 28.

Lower earnings sent stocks down

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Caution prevailed Tuesday on Wall Street as stock prices closed slightly lower amid concern that second-quarter corporate earnings would be weaker than expected.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 2.90 points to close at 2,910.11. Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index, which measures a broader range of stocks, lost 0.29 point to 370.65. S&P's industrial index fell 0.10 at 442.22.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about a 7-to-5 ratio in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 887 down, 623 up and 535 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 155.45 million shares as of 4 p.m., up from 137.71 million in the previous session. Computerized trading in after-hours sessions brought the volume to 157.04 million shares. The total consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades on those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, came to 192.64 million shares.

Stock analysts attributed the light trading volume to several factors. One was a reaction to the Dow average's 52.55-point plunge on Monday after the presidents of two large Japanese securities firms resigned in a stock-exchange scandal.

The Dow average partly recovered early Tuesday after traders bought shares at depressed prices, said Hildegard Zagorski, vice president and market analyst for Prudential Securities Co.

Stock analysts also were worried about sharper-than-expected declines in corporate earnings for the second quarter. For example, Wells Fargo & Co., a leading West Coast bank, reported it anticipated second-quarter earnings would be less than a tenth of the $2.95 a share reported last forecast.

The announcement sent Wells Fargo down 6 1/2 at 74.

The most active issue was the initial public offering of International Specialty Products Inc., unchanged at 15 1/2 in heavy volume. Other active issues included DuPont Co., down 1/4 at 28 1/2; Beazer PLC, down 1 1/4 at 7 1/2; Philip Morris, down 1 at 63 1/2; and IBM, up 1 at 99 1/4.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $8.85 billion or 0.25 percent in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 0.29 point to 203.21.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Art is long, life short; judgment difficult, opportunity transient." — Goethe.

West made the most promising lead to beat today's no-trump game, but South managed to thread his way to success. Cover the East-West cards and develop a plan after the lead of the diamond queen.

Barry Schaeffer of Houston was declarer in a team contest at a regional tournament held in that city.

While prospects did not appear bright, Barry took the first trick with his king and placed his first bet on an unlikely but lucky lie in hearts. He crossed to dummy's spade ace and led a low heart, successfully finessing the jack. The ace failed to drop the king, so there was no alternative but to give a heart trick to East.

East exited with a spade, which Barry won, and the last heart was cashed. (West discarded a spade and East a club). On the next high spade, West discarded a diamond to club discard would not have helped), and Barry then led the club ace and another club to give West the lead.

West could take his high diamonds, but Barry's established 10 brought in his ninth winner.

Would it have helped for West to unload his club king? No, that would have merely transferred the end-play to East. After winning the club queen and 10 and the last spade, East would have had to lead a club to dummy's nine for the same result.

Jerome cook's recipe wins national contest

JEROME - A new recipe for a vegetarian casserole with cheese topping won national honors in the "Great Chefs of America" contest sponsored by the American Dairy Association.

By Helen Kulm, 27, of Jerome submitted the winning recipe.

Kulm is the instructor chef at Boise State Culinary Art Institute where she has been teaching for 5 years. The prize for the winning recipe was an all-expense paid trip to Honolulu in July. Kulm's recipe, titled "Vegetable Ole," was displayed at the national Restaurant Association annual food show held in Chicago. Journalists and editors of food magazines judged recipes submitted from throughout the country and selected four winners. Kulm's recipe placed first for the Western region.

The winning recipe will be published in a book by the Dairy Council.

Food institute reports more consumers using coupons

Shoppers generally continue to be satisfied with their supermarket; they're concerned about the environment and nutrition; and, in an apparent effort to offset increasing prices, more are using coupons and switching to less costly store brands.

These are just some of this year's trends, reported recently by the nonprofit Food Marketing Institute in Washington.

FMI says this year's annual survey, the 20th, showed:

- More than eight in 10 shoppers gave their primary supermarket a rating of good or excellent for its convenient location; and, in an apparent effort to offset increasing prices, more are using coupons and switching to less costly store brands.

- Larger weekly grocery bills reflect a rise in consumer spending. From 1990 to 1991, the average bill increased from $74 to $79, the first significant increase since 1986, when it jumped from $68 to $74. The average per-person weekly expenditure also increased significantly, from $29 to $32.

- Meanwhile, the importance of a market providing "items on sale or money-saving specials" increased from 84 percent in 1989 to 88 percent this year. Fewer shoppers, however, said they regularly bought groceries at discount or warehouse food stores.

- Price-off coupons (36 percent) and scanning the newspaper for grocery specials (33 percent) continue to be popular ways to economize.

Politically correct canines can now dine on organic dog food

Politically correct canines can finally eat without guilt. Now there is not only an organic dog food, but it comes in a recycled box.

Nature's Course is the dog food designed for families "concerned about their food sources," according to the Ralston Purina Co. "We recognize that your dog deserves the same regard for health and well-being."

Among other things, Nature's Course has no artificial flavors, colors or preservatives; is made from certified pesticide-free grain; and contains real beef and real chicken - no beef or chicken by-products or fillers.

Of course, it costs a bit more to be politically correct. The price: $13.49 for a 20-pound bag, compared to $12.19 for a 25-pound bag of regular Purina Dog Chow. (Pound for pound, that's 67 cents versus 49 cents).

Compiled from staff and wire reports

Now that summer is here, thoughts turn to long, sunny days, holiday weekends and outdoor activities. What better time to enjoy the company of family and friends and what better way to do so than at a casual backyard get-together?

The name of the game is "easy" - from the food and drinks right down to the table setting and cleanup. Whether your party is impromptu or planned, this simple menu will look and taste sensational with a minimum of effort.

Welcome guests with a cool, refreshing summer sipper to help beat the heat. A tall glass of iced tea is always a warm weather favorite. Serve it with lemon and mint or use the teas as a flavorful base for quick and easy cooler recipes.

In Summer Sparkling Refresher, cranberry juice and seltzer are mixed to create a tangy spritzer-like beverage which quenches thirst with a fizz. To celebrate the fresh fruits of summer, serve Fruit-Tea Lime Delight, a pretty-as-a-picture drink. Or, cool off with Oranges 'n Cream Cooler, a frosty combination of tea, orange juice and vanilla ice cream rich enough to double as a dessert.

Easy recipes doesn't necessarily mean burgers and hot dogs. For example, this recipe for Summer Mixed Grill couldn't be simpler. It features your choice of chicken, beef, lamb or pork cubes, Italian sausage and fresh vegetables in a savory marinade. The kabobs cook in minutes on the grill, and you can save time by having guests skewer their own ingredients.

A simple side dish, Garden Fresh Bean Salad is light and tasty change of pace from mayonnaise-based salads. A summer's-breeze to make, this colorful combination of mushrooms and green and red beans is tossed in a zesty vinaigrette. Round out the menu with corn on the cob, a straight-from-the-garden salad and bread toasted on the grill.

And for dessert, what says summer faster than fresh fruit platters or salads? In addition to the season's standbys like melons, peaches, plums and berries, add a touch of the tropics with sliced mangos and papaya. Remember, when activities - including dining - move outdoors this summer, keep it simple. An easy-to-prepare menu, refreshing drinks, no-fuss tableware and quick cleanup are sure to spell lots of fun for everyone.

Hot tips for cool parties

Follow these hot tips for summer entertaining:

- Eating outdoors is not just for lunch and dinner - try a brunch to get started early and enjoy more of the day.

- Serving food buffet style works well in an outdoor setting. Set up the food in the shade and let people eat when they're ready.

- When grilling a variety of foods that need to be served at the same time, partially cook denser items in the microwave or start them on the grill earlier.

- Jazz up drinks with cool-looking ice cubes made by freezing whole blueberries, strawberries, grapes, raspberries or sprigs of mint in ice cube trays. Or, make ice cubes out of lemonade and add to iced tea in place of lemon.

- Get out of the kitchen and into the sunshine by doing as much as possible ahead of time. Many recipes can be prepared in the morning of the day before.

Cover and marinate in refrigerator at least 4 hours.

Remove meat and vegetables, reserving marinade. On skewers, thread meat cubes and vegetables. On separate skewers, thread sausage; begin to grill or broil. Add meat and vegetable kabobs; grill or broil, turning and basting frequently with reserved marinade, until meat is done and vegetables are tender.

Makes about 6 servings.

- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup red wine vinegar

Cook's profile

Jenn Hall specializes in making meals early

By Joan Bean
Times News correspondent

JEROME - During the 30 years Jenn Hall worked full time, her family always had home-cooked meals. She prepared main dishes ahead or slow cooked them in the oven or crockpot.

Hall says she didn't want to put money she earned into buying food she could have fixed herself if she were home all day. And she says her family preferred her home cooking to convenience foods or eating out.

Added to that, Hall says she liked having food ready when she came home at night. "I don't like to spend the evening in the kitchen," she says.

She made use of her time in the morning to start the crockpot or to get an oven meal going at noon. Some dishes she prepared a day ahead.

And because Hall works part time now, there are times when she still has need to make meals ahead. The following is a recipe for a barbecue sauce she uses for crockpot meals.

BARBECUE SAUCE

- 1 cup diced onions
- 1 cup ketchup
- 1 cup water
- 1-2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/2 cup cider vinegar
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 2 teaspoons dry mustard
- 1 teaspoon paprika

Bring to boil and simmer about 15 minutes, until thickened a little. Pour some sauce over meat in crockpot; the amount depending on how much meat there is in the crockpot. For 2 1/2-3 pounds of chicken or turkey use about 1/2 cup of the sauce, and for 4 pounds of beef ribs, pour on about 1 cup of sauce.

Freeze remaining sauce for future use in crockpot or for basting when barbecuing.

Hall says when she cooks chicken or turkey legs in this sauce she and her husband, Herman, have this for one meal and hone the rest of it out for sandwiches.

You don't get lunch meat that tastes like this homemade chicken and turkey that you do get with this barbecue sauce," she says.

The next recipe is one that can be made in the morning and stored in the refrigerator.

ENCHILADA CASSEROLE

- Serves 6
- 2 pounds lean ground beef
- 1 1/2 tablespoons (or more) chili powder
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1/4 whole clove garlic, chopped (optional)

- 1 (16 ounce) can tomato sauce
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- 2 cups grated cheddar cheese
- 1 can cream of chicken soup
- 1 cup milk

Brown beef, onion and garlic and drain. Add tomato sauce, chili powder, salt and pepper; heat thoroughly. Use a vegetable spray of rub a little margarine on bottom of a 9-by-13 inch casserole. Line with 1 layer of flour tortillas (about 6). Pour meat mixture over tortillas. Put on another layer of tortillas, allowing them to come up sides of baking dish a little. Mix the milk and soup together and blend. Pour over the second layer of tortillas. Sprinkle grated cheese over all. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Let stand about 10 minutes.

Sometimes Hall prepares parts of this dish, and stores them a day or two before putting it all together and baking it. To do this she browns the ground beef with the seasonings, adds the tomato sauce, then puts it into a container. She grates the cheese and puts it in a bag. She refrigerates these ingredients up to a couple of days.

Then it's a simple matter of heating tomatoes and chicken soup and putting it together," she says. "It's a do-ahead thing, and it will keep."

Serve with a tossed salad or fruit salad and French bread that has been sliced, lightly buttered, lightly sprinkled with Salad Supreme and wrapped in foil; then put into already hot oven for about 5 or 10 minutes.

Here is a main dish that can be put in the oven at midday and ready to eat at dinnertime.

RICE CASSEROLE

- Serves 4
- 2-3 pounds chicken parts or 6 to 8 pork chops

When Jenn Hall gets in a "cookie-baking mood" she makes a day of it. By baking dozens of varieties she can store any extras in the freezer.

Office turns off showers for adopted toddler

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I adopted a beautiful little boy two years ago. He was 2 years old when we got him. We waited for 24 years to get him, and when the agency called us to say we could come and get him, I was so thrilled I shared the good news with my co-workers. I worked in an office with 13 other women. In the three years and hosted one in my home.

Abby, I cannot tell you how heartbroken I was when no one from the office even called to ask how things were going. No shower, no gifts — not even a card. I did, however, receive many questions about my son's birth parents. (Did I ever meet them? Were they married? How old was his mother? Does he have any sisters or brothers?) I since have moved on to a new job because I felt so much resentment toward my co-workers. I was invited to two more baby showers before I quit.

Abby, please remind people to treat everyone's new child the same — adopted or not. It would mean so much to the new parents. I just had to get this off my chest. Thank you for listening.

BROKENHEARTED WITH A TERRIFIC SON

DEAR BROKENHEARTED: There is no work-force for the attitude of your former co-workers, but I'm printing your letter because it carries a very important message! An adopted child deserves the same celebrated welcome as a birth child, and because there is usually so much red tape, praying and waiting, perhaps a little more...

DEAR ABBY: I am a female, working for a cable television company as a computer operator. Lately, every morning when I sign in on the computer, I find suggestive messages of a sexual nature from the man I relieve from the night shift.

One message: "Darling, I dreamed about you last night..." He also had flowers delivered to me at work on Valentine's Day.

I am a single mother and this is starting to get out of hand. I am dating another man and have no interest in this co-worker. Should I report him to my supervisor? Someone in the office suggested that I file sexual harassment charges. What if I do, and the guy gets canned from work and tries to hurt me or get even?

HARASSED IN DENVER
DEAR HARASSED: Before you report him to your supervisor, tell the pushy pest that you are not interested in his flowers or his fantasies. And if he annoys you further, make good your threat.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. My desk at work is 10 feet away from a person who whistles constantly. I get so irritated that I cannot concentrate on the task at hand. This is beginning to have a great effect on my work, and I don't like it. The problem is that this person is my boss, and I don't want to run the risk of seeming insubordinate. On the other hand, if this whistling does not stop, I will go crazy. What should I do?

SOON-TO-BE-BONKERS

DEAR SOON: Your job can't possibly be more important to you than your sanity, so tell your boss that you can't concentrate on your work while "someone" is whistling. And if your boss continues to drive you bonkers with his/her whistling, repeat the message, unless, of course, you don't mind going bonkers.

Recycling grass clippings provides benefits for lawns

In this age of concern for the environment, we are constantly encouraged to recycle to reduce waste and garbage. There are few kinds of recycling which compare in ease and benefits to recycling lawn clippings.

Allen Wilson
Gardening

Instead of bagging your lawn clippings and sending them to the landfill, you can either use them as mulch around shrubs, trees, flowers and vegetables or else return them directly to the lawn for recycling.

Lawn clippings are relatively high in nitrogen compared to other mulching materials. Because of this, they do not need to be fertilized with extra nitrogen from the soil. That sometimes robs plant roots under the mulch of the nitrogen which they need for growth.

When micro-organisms break down other organic materials such as sawdust or bark dust, they must use extra nitrogen from the soil. That sometimes robs plant roots under the mulch of the nitrogen which they need for growth.

As grass clippings are changed to humus, they actually add nitrogen to the soil. If grass clippings are left on the lawn, they supply about one pound of nitrogen per 1,000 square feet per growing season. This is equivalent to one full feeding with lawn fertilizer.

Lawn clippings, like other mulches, reduce weed germination. Because most weed seeds require light to germinate, covering them with mulch reduces the number which sprout. Mulch also reduces water evaporation and moderates soil temperature changes. Both of these improve plant growth.

The two main counter-arguments for removing lawn clippings are thatch buildup and trash. If grass clippings are not removed, they can build up a thatch layer. Research has shown that lawn clippings add little, if any, to thatch buildup. Lawn clippings are almost all leaves and therefore contain very little lignin. The lignin found in grass stems, rhizomes and roots is much slower to break down.

These are the main contributors to thatch buildup. Sometimes lawn clippings are slow to break down if the soil is acid. However, you almost never have acid soil conditions in the Intermountain area.

Lawn clippings will stick to shoes if they are wet, and clippings can be tracked into the house. However, I have found very few bagging lawn mowers which will not leave enough clippings so that some are picked up on shoes. The solution to tracking dirt is to mow grass only when it is brushed before entering the house.

Most lawn mowers have been designed to throw clippings to the rear or side of the machine for bagging. When the bag is retracted, they leave clippings in windrows and clumps. These are not only unsightly, but can damage grass by shading.

Because of recent emphasis on recycling, there is hardly a lawn-mower manufacturer which does not have at least one model of recycling or mulching mower. In some cases, a bagging mower can be changed to a recycler simply by changing the blade.

I recently purchased a recycling mower which does and excellent job of chopping clippings into fine pieces and spreading them evenly over the lawn. It did not leave any noticeable clippings, even when I let the grass get a little too long.

Consider wiring when buying air conditioner

By Karol V. Mezzio and Randy Johnson
The Baltimore Sun

No matter how you feel about the appropriateness of air conditioning in old houses, when the temperature hits the high 90s and the humidity's not far behind, you'll probably want some relief. Even if it's just one room, maybe a bedroom, having a place to cool off will make the rest of the house seem more bearable.

There's more to it than just sticking that yard sale unit in the window, however. Before you even look for one, you need to consider:

- What size unit you should buy.
- Where you will plug it in and what impact it will have on the wiring.
- How it will be mounted on the window.

Air conditioner sizes are meant to be read by engineers, not by ordinary humans. Instead of being in cubic feet, or something logical, they are sized in Btu, or British thermal units. One Btu is the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. In the case of air conditioners, the Btu rating indicates how much heat the unit will remove.

Fortunately, there's a rule of thumb, based on square feet of the space to be cooled, to help you decide how big a unit you need. It is only a rough guide, to give you an idea what to look for. If you have ceilings higher than 8 feet, or a lot of windows on a south-facing wall, or some other special circumstance, you'll need the advice of the salesperson. The point is to buy only as much capacity as you need; the price, size, cost of operation and wiring needs rise dramatically with the larger units.

Wiring is an important element in choosing and installing an air conditioner. Air conditioning and old wiring don't mix. In electrician's terms, air conditioners pull a lot of juice. If you simply plug it into a wall outlet, it's probably going to require most of the amperage available on that particular circuit. If the wiring is old, it may not be heavy enough; it could heat up enough to be a fire hazard.

Ideally, each air conditioner unit should be on its own circuit. Circuits are measured in two ways: amperage, which is the rate at which electricity is delivered through the wire; and voltage, which measures the pressure of the electricity. (Electricity, like water, has to be under pressure to get to the outlet points.) Basic circuits are 15 amps, 115-120 volts. A small unit runs on 120 volts, and may pull 7 amps - or half the current available on a 15-amp circuit. Any unit that pulls more amps than that should have a 20-amp circuit.

If you're redoing the wiring anyway, install 20-amp circuits where you plan to plug in air conditioners. (The technical term is 20-amp duplex receptacle circuits.) It's not a special outlet; in the winter you can use it for a lamp or an iron or a radio.

Larger air-conditioning units may require more voltage - 230-240 volt circuits - but operate more efficiently by using less amperage. An electrician can install a 230-240 circuit, if you have "three-wire" service into the house. Old electrical service has two wires running from the utility pole to the house; newer service has three.

If you have two-wire service, you can change it, but it will require the combined efforts of an electrician and the local utility company.

One you get the wiring straightened out, you have to figure out how you'll support the air-conditioner unit in the window. The unit has to slant down and out, so condensation can run out. Smaller units generally are designed to be supported by the window. That works fine if you can position the unit so that it slants in the right direction. Otherwise, you may have to build up the surface on the inside.

Before you go out to look at air conditioners, measure the window. Then take a tape measure to the store so you can measure the units you're interested in.

By all means shop around. Air conditioners have gotten more sophisticated in recent years; among other things, they're rated for energy efficiency. There are also more easement units available and there are even movable units that require only a plug and small window vent. Be sure you've checked out all the options.

And besides, the stores are air-conditioned.

Window fans can keep rooms cool at lower cost

Q. I've acquired a two-fan window fan, but am not sure how to put it to best use. Can you help? — A. Curran.

A. Most window fans are reversible and can be used either to expel inside air or blow in outside air. It is usually more effective and comfortable to use a fan to expel stale, heated air from the inside and at the same time pull fresh air into the space through open windows. Using the fan to expel air also avoids the strong blast of air that occurs in the intake position, though fast-moving air can temporarily give a cool feeling.

A window fan will give best results when it is coolest outdoors, usually in early morning. A good technique is to partially open one or more windows in rooms to be cooled and have the fan operating at its highest exhaust speed during the coolest hours. Windows farthest from the fan will need to be opened wider than those close to it.

Some fans get good results by turning off the fan and closing windows and drapes when the outside air begins to warm up in the morning. The windows are reopened, and the fan turned back on, when the interior air warms later in the day. Some large window fans can cool a small house in this manner, during all but the hottest weather, if there is good air circulation to the fan from the various rooms.

Because fan noise might be a problem, especially if a fan is used at high speed, a bedroom usually isn't a good location for a large window fan. Smaller fans are often quiet enough for bedroom use, however.

An important rule: A window fan should not be used at the same time and in the same space as an air conditioner, since it will exhaust or blow out expensively cooled air. Room air conditioners and fans can be used at the same time in different rooms if doors between the spaces are kept closed.

Create culinary excitement tonight with a great tasting sandwich. Versatile, satisfying and easy to prepare, sandwiches make perfect dinner fare when dressed with fresh vegetables and partnered with richly textured bread.

Turkey With A Twist combines the zesty flavors of horseradish, mayonnaise and bacon bits in a moist turkey salad sandwich. Top with crisp lettuce leaves and tomato slices, serve on a crusty Kaiser roll or thick slices of rye toast.

Black forest ham, rich camembert cheese and luscious ripe pear are broiled then topped with a blend of honey, mayonnaise and mustard for the Ultimate Ham-and-Cheese Sandwich. Serve open-faced on a baguette.

Cheeseburgers may have cancer-fighting compound

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — An experiment that indicates cheeseburgers may contain a cancer-fighting compound could have promise, but researchers say don't put down that salad fork yet.

"I don't want to advocate that people consume high-fat diets," said T. Shultz, a nutritional biochemist at Washington State University.

It is, however, ironic that the much-reviled combination of cheese and hamburger could have the potential to fight cancer, he said.

Shultz has been working for nearly a year with a compound called conjugated linoleic acid, or CLA. The compound occurs in "cheese-and-some types of meat — particularly the processed varieties — and to a lesser extent some plant oils."

- 1 small clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1 pound green beans, cooked or 2 cans (16 oz. each) cut green beans, drained
- 1 can (16 oz.) chick peas (garbanzos) or red kidney beans, rinsed and drained
- 2 cups fresh or canned sliced mushrooms

In medium bowl, blend onion recipe soup mix, water and vinegar. Stir in oil, dill, parsley and garlic. Toss with remaining ingredients; chill.

Makes about 6 cups salad.

might inhibit cancer-cell growth. Shultz's research did not generate much enthusiasm from Colin Campbell, a nutritional biochemist at Cornell University.

"There's so much wrong with the addition of fats to the diet, Campbell said, he doesn't even like to see stories about it."

"I hardly think that people would like to add carcinogens to their diet," said Campbell, who was one of the authors of the 1982 diet, nutrition and cancer study for the National Academy of Sciences. The study was used by a variety of health organizations to set dietary guidelines.

People need to increase their consumption of fruits, vegetables and reduce fat intake to 30 percent, he said. Subsequent studies seem to indicate plant-based foods should make up 80 percent to 90 percent of the diet, he said.

In WSU studies, Shultz tested CLA's cancer-fighting power by adding the compound to flasks containing human skin, breast, colon and rectal cancer cells.

"Interestingly, we found that this compound, CLA, reduced cancer-cell growth significantly in vitro," Shultz said. "Within one week, growth of the cancer cells was reduced by as much as one-half."

Shultz is writing up the results of this study for publication. He also is trying to determine whether eating CLA can increase the level of the compound in the human bloodstream. He expects to analyze the data from the study this summer.

"We need to proceed with caution," Shultz said. "But this might have a hypothetical application later on."

More research on CLA's cancer-fighting power is needed, he said. "There are so many unanswered questions, particularly in the larger sense that we can't make an observation like this and use it in the practical setting," Campbell said. "In fact, I worry about publicizing information like this."

- 1 cup long grain soft cooking rice
- 1 can cream of chicken soup
- 1/2 can water

1 envelope dry onion soup mix

Lightly grease a 9-by-13 inch pan. Sprinkle uncooked rice in pan. Mix soup, water and onion soup and heat a little. Pour, reserving about 1/2 cup, over rice, and stir. Lay cut up chicken or pork chops over rice mixture. Drizzle remaining soup over top. Cover with foil. Bake at 325 degrees for 2 1/2 hours for soft rice or 3 hours for crisp rice.

Serve with a tossed green salad or cabbage salad. A vegetable, such as broccoli is good with this.

"It's very simple," she says. "And it's excellent."

The next recipe is one that is prepared a day ahead. It makes a nice brunch.

EGG AND SAUSAGE CASSEROLE

- (A poor man's quiche)
- Serves 8-10
- 1 pounds sausage*
- 8 slices bread
- 6 eggs
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 1/2 cups milk
- 2 cups cheddar cheese
- 1 can cream of celery soup

1/2 soup can whole milk

Brown sausage and drain. Remove crusts from bread. Lay slices in bottom of a slightly buttered 9-by-13 inch pan. Crumble sausage over bread. Whip together eggs, dry mustard and 2 1/2 cups milk. Pour over bread and sausage. Grate cheese and sprinkle over mixture. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight.

Next morning mix celery soup and the 1/2 soup can milk. Pour over first mixture and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Let stand 10-15 minutes before serving.

Serve with a fruit salad and French bread.

*For people who do not care for sausage, she says 2 cups steamed broccoli may be substituted. Just omit the sausage, and in the morning tuck steamed broccoli down into the mixture that stood overnight. Pour the celery soup and milk mixture over top and bake.

When Hall gets into a cookie-baking mood she makes a day of it. She might bake 3 dozen of one kind and 3 dozen of another, and put them into the freezer.

Here is a cookie recipe she says has gone to Cub Scouts and Little League for treats. It's always been very popular. And, with the banana and oatmeal in them, they also provide nourishment.

BANANA OATMEAL CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

- Makes 3/4 dozen
- 1/2 cup lowfat margarine
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 cup mashed banana (ripe or overripe)
- 1 1/2 cup quick cooking oatmeal
- 1 (12 ounce) package chocolate chips.

Cream shortening and sugar. Add eggs. Sift dry ingredients. Add alternately with banana, starting and ending with the banana. Stir in oatmeal and chocolate chips. Drop by 2 1/2 teaspoonsful onto lightly greased baking sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for 10-12 minutes.

"This is a cookie you can bite easily and it is firm, but not crisp," she says. "It's a nice moist cookie."
