Good wishes precede aid to Soviets

The Associated Press

LONDON — Western leaders faulted Mikhail S. Gorbachev's efforts toward "an open and democratic Soviet Union" on Tuesday and worked to assemble a limited aid package.
On the eve of the Soviet president's precedent-setting appearance at a free-world economic summit, President Bush and Secretary of State James A. Baker III promised Gorbachev would not leave London "empty handed."
A draft of the group's concluding economic communique, which was obtained by The Associated Press, provided no specifics on what type of aid would be offered. It said only that the summit countries "stand ready to aid the integration of the Soviet Union into the world economy."

Gorbachev's plea - A5

The package would contain more details by the time it was announced Wednesday by British Prime Minister John Major.
The seven largest industrial democracies also endorsed a universal register for arms transfers, vowed to leave all sanctions on Iraq until it complies with remaining U.N. sanctions and endorsed Bush's new push for a Middle East peace.

The Mideast effort, given new life with apparent conciliatory movement by Syria, may be the best chance yet for direct peace talks between Israel and her Arab neighbors, Baker told reporters, but he cautioned that there remain "plenty of hurdles. We're not there by a long shot."
The draft economic statement said the groundbreaking study of the Soviet economy done by international lending agencies last year provided a good outline on which the Soviets should proceed. That study called for the Soviets to move quickly to put a free-market system into place even though the transformation would involve economic pain and dislocation in the beginning.

"That study lists many of the elements necessary so that the reform be crowned with success, among which is fiscal and monetary discipline and the basis for a

Happy homecoming for Hobbs

Wounded state trooper returns home to fanfare, happy family

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

DECLO — Idaho State Police Cpt. Steven Hobbs is back home.
A month and a day after he was gunned down on a remote stretch of freeway near the Utah border, the 38-year-old state trooper returned to Declo Tuesday afternoon to a street lined with family, friends and fellow officers.
"It feels great, really great," a smiling Hobbs said from his front porch. "There are a lot of great people out here."
A friend drove Hobbs and his wife from the Ogden, Utah, hospital where the officer has been recovering from the June 15 shooting that nearly killed him.

Hobbs stopped a car on Interstate 84 just north of the Utah border and the driver opened fire, striking Hobbs three or four times.
The officer's bullet-proof vest deflected all the bullets except the one that hit him under the right arm and travelled across his body.
Shawn Kerrigan, 25, of Milwaukee, admitted shooting Hobbs by pleading guilty last week to aggravated battery, assaulting a police officer and using a deadly weapon while committing a crime. His sentencing is scheduled for Aug. 16.
Hobbs said Tuesday his recovery is not yet complete.
His right arm, wrapped and splinted, is working fine, but Hobbs said he still can't feel his right hand. He is slowly recovering the vision in his left eye.

Hobbs was shot the night before Father's Day. Five of his seven children were on hand to welcome their father home Tuesday. Two sons were away at boy scout camp.
Eleven-year-old Seth said he was "pretty excited" about his father's homecoming. He stood on the sidewalk, eyes glued to the road into town as he waited for Dad to arrive.
More than a dozen state police cars lined one side of the street; Minidoka and Cassia county sheriff's department vehicles lined the other and a street full

Hobbs ineligible for long-term disability aid

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

DECLO — Although he returned home Tuesday, Idaho State Police Cpt. Steven Hobbs doesn't know if he'll ever return to work.
An act under current regulations he won't be eligible for the state's disability insurance if his career is over, Idaho State Police Capt. Dave Neal said.

"We're extremely concerned about it," Neal said. He'll ask state legislators to change the rules that require state employees to have 10 years of experience and be completely disabled before receiving disability compensation for on-the-job injuries.
Hobbs has nearly six years with the state police. He also spent two years as a Rupert city police officer.
Hobbs still has no feeling in his right hand and has not regained full vision in his left eye, a month after a gunman shot him at close range during a traffic stop near the Utah border.

It's too soon to tell when or if he'll be back on the job.
"I'm sure I'll get the doctors," Hobbs said.
Workman's compensation insurance pays for all of Hobbs' medical bills and he has one year of paid leave, Neal said.

Senate OKs contradicting abortion bills

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Tuesday night to allow many pregnant girls to decide for themselves whether to get abortions, then approved contradictory provisions requiring girls about to undergo the procedure to notify their parents.
The two votes confused lobbyists on both sides of the issue. In effect, the Senate addressed the controversial question by leaving a final decision for later.
"I think we're in an extraordinarily confusing situation," said Marcia Greenberger, president of the National Women's Law Center, which favors abortion rights.
"I don't know what this means, frankly," said Susan Smith, associate legislative director of National Right to Life, a major anti-abortion group.

The votes occurred as the Senate moved toward allowing federally-financed family-planning centers to offer abortion advice, a bill President Bush has threatened to veto.
By 52-42, the lawmakers adopted an amendment to the controversial bill, a bill that would allow pregnant girls 18 and under to follow one of several paths before having an abortion.
Under that amendment, girls could either obtain the consent of a parent or adult relative, simply notify their parents, 48 hours in advance, or have a doctor or clergyman declare the girl's interests would be harmed by notifying her parents and that she is mature enough to decide for herself.

In addition, the girl could apply for a court order finding that she is mature enough to decide for herself.
The measure, sponsored by Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and three Republicans, would apply only in the District of Columbia and the nine states that don't already have parental notification laws of their own.

The Senate then voted 52-47 for a more restrictive measure sponsored by Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind.
The Coats measure requires a girl to notify her parents 90 days before an abortion. The only exceptions would be in cases of incest, child abuse or neglect.

Senate delays Gates hearing

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Stung by revelations that CIA officials told them lies about the Iran-Contra scandal, the Senate intelligence committee Tuesday postponed for two months confirmation hearings for President Bush's nominee to run the CIA, Robert M. Gates.
The delay was bad news for Gates, deputy director of the CIA during Iran-Contra and now Bush's deputy national security adviser. Both Gates and Bush wanted the hearings to begin this week to counter fresh suspicions about Gates and the CIA.
Despite the delay, intelligence committee chairman David Bonior, D-Okla., who has strongly supported Gates in the past, said that the nomination is not in jeopardy.

Home on the range ... but there's no room to roam

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The National Park Service doesn't want Congress to buy a ranch in central Kansas because, at 11,000 acres, there's not enough room for the buffalo to roam.
And it's also worried that the deer and antelope might wind up playing on the highway.
The park service's decision Tuesday, which seemed to be the opposite of its earlier position, left Rep. Dan Glickman,

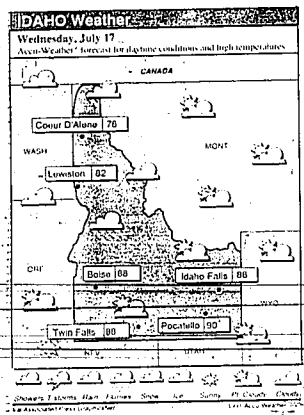

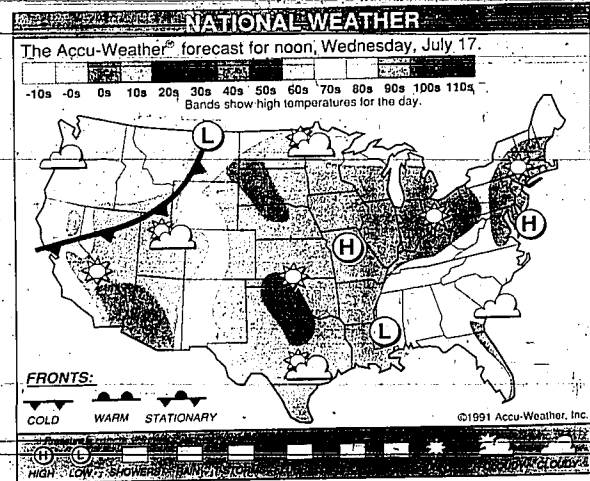

D-Kan., defending a national monument that its neighbors don't want, that the park service doesn't want to run and that even the local congressmen say it was too big.
Glickman, leading sponsor of a bill to establish the Flint Hills Prairie National Monument, told a House panel that he had not been formally notified of the park service's opposition.
"I think you've been set up," replied Rep. Joel Heltzer, R-Colo., a member of the House panel holding Tuesday's hearing.

Glickman's bill would allow the government to buy the 7,348-acre ranch, now owned by a bank in Kansas City, about 130 miles to the northwest. The bank is willing to sell the land, and buildings on it already are on the National Register of Historic Places.
The park service has estimated that it would cost as much as $8 million to buy and develop the ranch and 450,000 to $250,000 to open it to the public.
The land would be a monument to the tallgrass prairie, seen by explorers and early settlers as a sea of grass stretching from central Texas, through Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas into southern Saskatchewan. Much of that land has been plowed or developed, and not much pristine prairie remains.

The park service said Tuesday that in addition to being too small, the 7,348-acre ranch is "tricky" due to antichamber human development. Kansas State Highway 177 runs right through the ranch, and there are some 30 oil and gas wells on the property.

Thunderstorms drench Southeast; heat grips wide area

The Associated Press

Thunderstorms drenched parts of the Southeast on Tuesday as temperatures soared into the 90s and 100s in parts of Florida and the Southwest.

By midday, rain showers and thunderstorms reached through Southeastern Tennessee to the western coast of Alabama, southeast Mississippi and the upper Texas Gulf Coast.

Light rain dampened much of Washington state as well as southern Oregon and Northern California, the National Weather Service said.

Elberton, Ga., got more than 5 inches of rain in the morning and early afternoon. The downpour flooded some streams and low-lying areas of Elberton County.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT included more than 3 inches at Galveston, Texas, more than 1 inch at Beaufort, S.C., and Albany, Ga., and nearly an inch at Valdosta, Ga.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department said today it is making "urgent efforts" to check out what relations say could be a recent photo of three U.S. pilots shot down over Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

"I can tell you that the photo is currently being analyzed by the full range of technical means available," spokesman Gregg Hartung said.

A spokesman for the American Defense Institute said family members identified the three men as:

- Air Force Col. John Leighton Robertson, 60, of Seattle, shot down Sept. 16, 1966, over North Vietnam.
- Air Force Maj. Albro Lynn Lundy Jr., 58, of Sherman Oaks, Calif., shot down Sept. 16, 1966.
- Navy Lt. Larry James Stevens, 50, of Canoga Park, Calif., shot down Feb. 14, 1969, over Laos.

Officers saluted as Hobbs' vehicle passed.

The oldest of the Hobbs children, 15-year-old Valerie, was the first to hug him when he climbed out of the Chevrolet Blazer.

Earlier, she remembered hearing about the shooting while visiting relatives in California.

It was 1 a.m. and Valerie woke up to see her aunt holding her hand with tears in her eyes.

"I asked her what was going on and she said 'Before I tell you, I want you to know that everything's going to be OK,'" Valerie Hobbs remembered. "As soon as she said that I knew, I've just been in shock since then."

Dressed in a green shirt, jeans and cowboy boots, Hobbs looked happy but a little tired after the three-hour ride.

He endured plenty of good-natured ribbing about his newly-sprouted beard as he accepted hugs and congratulations from his fellow officers.

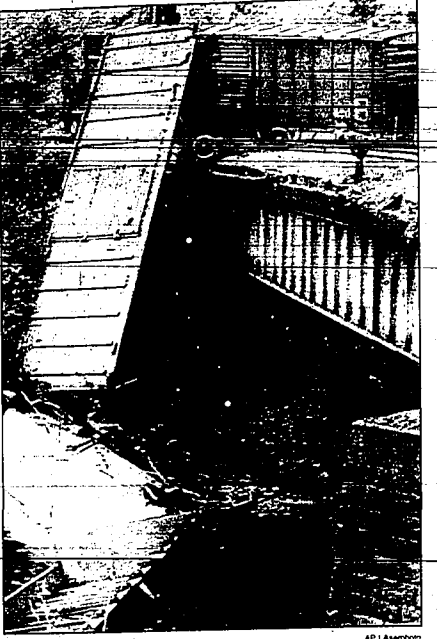

"Is that face regulation?" asked one.

"Dad needs to shave," piped up one of the younger boys. "He looks like a mountain man."

The captain will get to his pretty soon," Hobbs said, rubbing the scruffy growth. He paused briefly to answer reporters' questions before being ushered into the house and out of the hot sun by his wife and a nurse.

Hobbs' wife, Janice, had a birthday Monday, but celebrated Tuesday.

"This is my present," she said.

A tanker carrying more than 195,000 pounds of weed killer lies in the Sacramento River near Dunsmuir, Calif., after a derailment. Jack Hannigan, Southern Pacific Railroad bridge supervisor, right, assesses the damage.

Toxic spill threatens California reservoir

DUNSMUIR, Calif. (AP) — Thousands of gallons of weed killer that had spilled from a derailed tanker car drifted toward the state's largest reservoir Tuesday, prompting a warning to boaters and fishermen.

The spill, which began Tuesday, was expected to reach the Sacramento River arm of Lake Shasta late Tuesday. Since Sunday night, the spill has killed thousands of fish and sickened scores of people.

Bathers and fishermen were advised to avoid the arm of the reservoir, and business leaders said the spill threatened the area's summer tourist and sport fishing industries.

Bakers are world famous for our fishing on the arms of the rivers that feed Shasta," said Michael Arnold of the Chamber of Commerce for Shasta County. "Nothing this devastating has ever occurred."

Officials said the spill didn't appear to pose an immediate threat to the state's drinking water.

"We think the dilution factor is pretty strong by the time it gets to us," said Karen Arntzen of the Contra Costa Water District in the San Francisco Bay area.

"There's no chance that it will leave here empty handed," Baker said. "There are any number of things the countries here will agree should be done."

Greenspan balks at lower interest rates push

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan, pushing himself at odds with President Bush, indicated Tuesday that the central bank will not move interest rates lower in the near future.

"Monetary policy has adopted a posture of watchful waiting as economic indicators have pointed increasingly toward recovery," Greenspan told the House Banking subcommittee on domestic monetary policy.

Greenspan

Private analysts interpreted Greenspan's remarks as signaling the Federal Reserve sees no need to stimulate economic growth with further cuts in short-term interest rates, and will be satisfied with a lackluster expansion in the election year of 1992.

"His message is, 'Look, folks, we're content with only a gradual recovery because we want to bring down inflation,'" said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

In his most optimistic comments yet on the rebound, Greenspan said, "There are compelling signs that the recession is behind us."

He acknowledged the theoretical possibility of another lapse — a so-called "double-dip recession" — but said he found "no credible evidence" to suggest one was likely.

Instead, he emphasized the importance of encouraging what he called "promising signs of a slowing in inflation" as the economy emerges from the downturn that began in July.

"The progress against inflation that has been set in motion must not be lost," he said.

That likely won't sit well with Bush, who last week nominated the 65-year-old economist to a second four-year term. In announcing the reappointment, Bush said he wanted interest rates as low as possible, and thus growth as strong as possible, without runaway inflation.

Analysis, which follows the arcane inner workings of the Fed say the two stances are far apart.

The Fed is expecting the economy, as measured by the gross national product, to grow only a modest 2.5 percent to 3 percent from the fourth quarter of this year to the same period in 1992.

However, the Bush administration is looking for considerably stronger growth of 3.6 percent in 1992.

"That could eventually run him into conflict with the White House," said economist David M. Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. in New York.

"The administration wants the economy to grow more strongly to ensure Bush is re-elected."

In a move viewed as a concession to the Bush administration, Greenspan revealed that Fed policy makers have decided not to reduce their principal money supply growth target from the current range of 2.5 percent to 6.5 percent.

Such a reduction, which has occurred in three of the last four years, would have tended to push interest rates higher, dampening both inflation and growth.

Greenspan, however, emphasized the extension of the current range is provisional and that, for now, "it appears to be a 'safety' lockaway to allow low either monetary tightening if inflation surges or easing if the recovery falters."

He said policymakers were wary of lowering the target for fear it would be interpreted as complacency toward the so-called credit crunch, which has seen banks reluctant to lend to borrowers they once considered creditworthy.

The credit crunch continues in some sectors, he said, but the central bank detected "little further tightening over the spring."

Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C., chairman of the subcommittee, questioned whether retaining the current money supply target was consistent with achieving price stability.

But, Greenspan said price stability could be reached without actually reducing the annual increase in the Consumer Price Index to zero. He said the Labor Department's index, the most widely accepted measure of inflation, does not fully reflect quality improvements in products over the years.

For instance, an auto made in 1991 should cost more than a similar model made 20 years earlier, even without inflation.

An annual increase in the CPI of 0.5 percent to 1.5 percent could be considered consistent with price stability, he said, adding, "I don't think we're very far from that point."

The Fed is projecting an inflation rate of 3 percent to 4 percent next year. Most private forecasts and the Bush administration's prediction are in the upper end of that range.

Cheney: Forces probably won't return to Clark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Tuesday he doesn't expect to see U.S. forces return to Clark Air Base, the sprawling Philippine installation severely damaged by volcanic eruptions.

Cheney

"It is just not a viable prospect," Cheney said of the future of Clark, one of the largest U.S. bases overseas.

"My expectation is that we are not going to be interested in going back to Clark," he told a convention of the Magazine Publishers of America.

Internal-Air Force studies have put the costs of bare-bones repairs at the base at about $500 million!

Cheney's assessment comes as talks are under way in Manila between U.S. negotiators and Philippine officials on the future of Clark and another huge U.S. base, Subic Bay Naval Station.

The leases on both are scheduled to expire Sept. 16.

Cheney said he expects to decide on Clark's future within a few days.

He said the United States was far more interested in retaining rights to

Subic Bay, a vital ship repair and supply port for the Navy, and wants to work out an agreement with the Philippine government "as soon as possible."

The secretary said that Clark was in "bad shape" and that "massive" damage had been done since Mount Pinatubo, 10 miles away, began erupting June 9.

In Manila, the senior Philippine negotiator, Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus, said that the U.S. and the talks were now dealing with Subic Bay.

The president of the Philippine Senate, Jovito Salonga, said the United States was offering $203 million annually to keep the naval base.

Before Mount Pinatubo erupted, the United States had offered $300 million annually for both bases. The Philippines had asked for $825 million a year for a seven-year extension of both leases.

Of that disparity in negotiating positions, Cheney said, "Hopefully, we will be able to work something out, but the likelihood that we will go back to Clark is pretty remote."

U.S. officials said the negotiations were proceeding on the assumption that Clark will be closed and that Subic is the focus of negotiations.

Those officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Armitage had given Manglapus the recommendation of the U.S. Pacific force commander, Adm. Charles Larson, to leave Clark.

Cheney said Manila could continue negotiating for several years, even if it becomes dormant, he said, the huge amount of ash in the region is a danger to air operations because the dust causes jet engines to fail, he said.

"As best we can tell, the cost of refurbishing the base would be enormous, and even after we had done that, we still might not be able to use it, so my expectation is that we are probably not going to be interested in going back into Clark," Cheney said.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said he expects Cheney will discuss the matter with President Bush and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin Powell, before deciding on Clark's future.

Operations at Clark, which has served as a major Air Force refueling, maintenance and logistics center for years, were being reduced prior to the volcano's eruptions, changes made because of the diminished threat faced by U.S. forces overseas and the Pentagon's budget cuts. Williams also noted that the Pentagon has been looking at alternative sites for military operations in the region "for some time."

On June 10, about 17,000 U.S. troops, and dependents, evacuated Clark, most transferring to the United States, only a few hundred remained at the base, most of them involved in security and cleanup operations.

Scientists say the volcano could continue erupting for three years.

City delays anti-smoking law

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — This chic city was considering the nation's toughest anti-smoking ordinance, but bar owners did so much huffing and puffing the Town Council hastily backtracked.

The San Jose suburb, which

Self magazine calls one of the nation's 10 best workout areas, was considering following 179 California towns and counties in passing some type of cigarette ban as the state moves city by city toward a near smokeless society.

Richard Adams had decided to give up Clark and the talks were now dealing with Subic Bay.

As usual there will be two Christmas stamps this year, a traditional design and a contemporary design. Both will be issued Oct. 17, with first-day ceremonies for the traditional stamp scheduled for Houston and for the modern stamp in Santa, Idaho.

When this year's Christmas stamps come out in October, they won't have the postage printed on them. They could be worth either 29 or 30 cents each.

Printing is already underway at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, because it takes months to turn out the millions of stamps needed for the busiest mailing season.

Meanwhile, the Postal Service is hoping the independent Postal Rate Commission will approve its appeal for an extra penny on the first class

Priest shoots ill wife, kills self

PITTSBURGH (AP) — An Orthodox priest shot and critically wounded his wife, then killed himself Tuesday, leaving a suicide note that blamed God for her "living death" with Alzheimer's disease.

The Rev. Wolodymyr J. Jaworsky, 69, shot his 56-year-old wife, Vera, in the head early Tuesday in the living room of the rectory at St. Vladimir Ukrainian Orthodox Church on the city's South Side, police said.

Jaworsky, a pastor for 11 years, then fatally shot himself.

Mrs. Jaworsky, who was found lying on a couch, was in critical condition in the trauma intensive care unit of Mercy Hospital, spokesman Kirk Dodson said.

Pentagon faults its intelligence, communications in gulf war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military failed to provide clear-cut intelligence and timely battle-damage reports to its Desert Storm commanders, the Pentagon acknowledged Tuesday.

"We still need to do better," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney stated in an introduction to a declassified version of a congressionally mandated report on his department's Persian Gulf mission.

While most of the report celebrates the allied victory in the 43-day battle against Saddam Hussein, it also takes a detailed look at the shortcomings experienced by the 540,000 U.S. forces deployed to the gulf in the wake of Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. And it states that even though the operation was "generally successful," the nation must know that in the future "problems... would be posed" should the military be forced to face two large crises at the same time.

While U.S. forces suffered the loss of 148 killed in action and 458-wounded in action, the report offers no clue to the mystery of how many Iraqis died in the conflict. There is "limited information available" to assess such a toll, the report states.

It also points out that despite the destruction wrought upon Iraq, its forces were able to find "some unconventional weapons facilities" and that the coalition was unable to find "some critical Iraqi leadership facilities." "This was not described in the report."

One of the major problems was the gathering and sifting of information about the enemy; and informing battlefield commanders about the daily changes in the opponent's status — particularly providing photographic "imagery" about the damage done in bombing and battles, the report states.

"The morale and intentions of the Iraq forces and leaders were obscure to us," field commanders wanted more tactical reconnaissance and imagery, the report said.

Getting such reports turned out to be a "difficult and slow" process, particularly when the need to restrict targets had to be determined, the study said.

The commander of the operation, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, made a similar complaint about the difficulties of intelligence gathering during recent congressional testimony.

The general complained that the Air Force and the Navy had problems transmitting their target information to each other.

He also faulted the intelligence data provided commanders, claiming it had been watered down.

The report noted that the search for Saddam Hussein's Scud missile force proved "difficult and costly," diverting a "significant" number of aircraft to an operation that wasn't able to destroy the elusive missile arsenal in the end.

At one point, three squadrons of attack aircraft that could have been used to pound other Iraqi targets were sent to search for the mobile missiles launched as a terror weapon against Israel, Saudi Arabia and coalition forces. "In the end, Scud launches were not stopped, but they were suppressed," the report said.

The much-praised Patriot missile systems — deployed for the first time in warfare and used to fend off Scud attacks — "worked but imperfectly. Mobile missile-hunting was difficult and costly," the report said.

The forces pushed to the region were "ill-prepared" in the early days of the war for Saddam's potential use of biological weapons, even though military officials were well aware his forces possessed them, the report stated.

The report also said that U.S.

forces "were not nearly good enough at clearing land and sea mines, especially shallow water mines. This might have imposed significant additional costs had large scale amphibious operations been required."

The forces' helicopters, such as the Army's "top-of-the-line" Apache, "were maintained only with care in the harsh desert environment," the report stated.

As well, the forces need to have more heavy equipment transports, improved navigation systems to help troops find their way on the battlefield, and ways to help identify friend from foe in order to cut down on the so-called "friendly fire" deaths that result from troops attacking their colleagues.

The report also discloses for the first time that "some number" of the Army's top-of-the-line M1-A1 battle tanks may have been damaged or destroyed due to "friendly fire" incidents. No such tanks were penetrated by Iraqi weaponry, the report states.

The report notes that much of the U.S. military's capability wasn't even tested in the war, given that there was no submarine threat, no significant Iraqi surface navy, "no effective attack by aircraft on our troops or our post and support facilities."

Council takes step to limit Gates' term

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The City Council took the first step Tuesday to limit the police chief's term, an important move in starting the process of Chief Barry E. Gates' retirement and picking a replacement.

Gates has been under pressure to resign since the videotaped March 3 police hearing of black militant Rodney King by a group of white police officers.

Pressure has increased since an independent commission last week recommended that Gates, 64, retire from the $169,000-a-year post.

Council President John Ferrario introduced a motion Tuesday to schedule a special election for voters to approve changes in the chief's job, as recommended by the independent Christopher Commission.

The changes would limit a chief to two 5-year terms and give the mayor final say in a chief's selection. The chief, whose job carries civil service protections, can be fired only for wrongdoing or gross ineptitude. The mayor has indirect firing influence.

The move by Ferrario, a longtime Gates backer, was seen as a step to ward casting Gates into retirement while helping him save face.

Gates has sent mixed messages about when he intends to retire and under what circumstances; many statements indicate that he would leave his post of 13 years at some point if voters approve a term limit. Ferrario sent his motion for a special election to three council committees, which were asked to draft a "single statement" on the matter for full council action, perhaps as early as next week. The election would be held late this year.

The proposals must go directly to voters, because such changes in the chief's job require amendments to the City Charter.

Some council members indicated they might oppose the special election because they are not certain whether Gates would resign even if the city went ahead with the election. "I'm very ambivalent about it," said Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky.

Ex-mayor dies of heart attack

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frank L. Rizzo, the brash cop-turned mayor or, died Tuesday as he campaigned to make a City Hall comeback. He was 70.

Rizzo, the Republican candidate for mayor who had served two terms as a Democrat in the 1970s, died of a heart attack. GOP officials said.

He had been transported by ambulance to Thomas Jefferson University Medical Center after he suffered a heart attack at his campaign headquarters, a secretary to the city Republican Party said.

Karen Warrington, press secretary to Mayor W. Wilson Goode said the mayor was informed by the hospital of Rizzo's death. The mayor expressed his deepest sympathy and condolences to the Rizzo family, she said.

Gorbachev seeks summit nations' help at Soviet 'turning point'

LONDON (AP) — After months of buildup, Mikhail Gorbachev meets Western leaders Wednesday seeking their hearts and help at a "turning point" in his efforts to reform the Soviet economy.

Gorbachev has long sought a meeting with the world's wealthy democracies, sending a letter to the Paris summit in 1989 and dominating from a distance the discussion at Houston in 1990.

This year, he won an invitation, albeit at the conclusion of the official summit. And Gorbachev has put on an impressive effort to cast this meeting in do-or-die terms, for his reforms.

At the Soviet Union, he said in a letter to the summit leaders, "there is a critical shortage of food, children items and medicine. The financial and credit system is in disarray, the state budget deficit is growing, export trade and currency earnings have gone down."

Increased investments and advice from the West, and money for creation of a stable stabilization fund, would help accelerate his economic reforms, Gorbachev said.

Least anyone miss his seriousness, he said, "I am running high hopes on the upcoming meeting in London."

"There is every reason to believe that it may mark a turning point in the efforts to bring about the Soviet Union's organic incorporation into the world economy."

Gorbachev also may discuss a strategic arms deal with President Bush and try to schedule a U.S.-Soviet summit to sign it later this summer. But the emphasis at the Group of Seven summit — even before Gorbachev's arrival — was on the question of what to do to help his economic reforms.

The leaders, who saw Gorbachev's letter last week, were prepared to respond with what British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd on Tuesday called "a message of encouragement for reform."

But that might not be enough for Gorbachev, who was arriving Tuesday night for a series of one-on-one meetings Wednesday and one-on-one sessions Wednesday and Thursday.

"There is no chance he will go home empty-handed," said Secretary of State James A. Baker III. He said the Western leaders were committed to helping the Soviet Union integrate into the world economy, increase energy production and improve its distribution system.

Gorbachev was not asking for, and would not receive, "cash grants," said Baker.

The Soviet leader has set no figure for the level of aid he wants from the West, but did refer to problems repaying the $65 billion Soviet foreign debt. And he called for an international fund to stabilize the ruble and hasten efforts to trade it freely on the world market. Soviet aides estimate that $10 billion to $12 billion would be needed for such a fund.

Gorbachev, in his letter and a 40-page supplement, detailed the collapse of the Soviet economy and outlined ways the West could help, including conversion of defense industries into civilian production and expropriation of rich Soviet oil and gas reserves.

The Soviet Union and Western nations, he said, had ended the Cold War, "but the sphere of economic relations has seen no noticeable change." Western nations maintained stingy tariff and credit policies toward the Kremlin, embargoed sales of some high technology items, and were hesitant to invest in the Soviet economy, he said.

At home, he said, Soviet national income fell by 11 percent and industrial production was down 5.8 percent during the first six months of 1991.

Soviet oil extraction technology "remains low." And Soviets produce as much food as Americans, he said, but only put one third of it on the table. Out of the average grain harvest of 200 million tons the Soviets lose 30 to 40 million tons to spoilage, pilfering and inefficiency.

Soviet industrial managers, he said, lack basic knowledge of market economies, even the most recent planning.

To cure these ills, the Soviet legislature passed laws to sell small state-owned retail stores, restaurants and service establishments, he said.

The government, he said, also was preparing to shift major industries from state control and joint stock ownership, and to allow foreigners — for the first time — to become full owners of Soviet businesses.

To encourage such investment, he said, the Soviet government would provide tax and currency exchange benefits.

In particular, he urged Western governments and businesses to:

- Invest in Soviet oil and natural gas exploitation.
- Set up management training programs for Soviets.
- Ease restrictions on high technology items.
- Use Soviet commercial space launches.
- Help study and cure environmental pollution.

President Bush and Japan's Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu confer as they walk back from lunch to summit talks at Lancaster House.

Leaders want arms sale register

LONDON (AP) — Leaders of the world's top industrialized nations, seeking to prevent another Iraq-style arms buildup, gave their backing Tuesday to a proposal for a U.S.-supervised register of conventional arms sales.

But France objected to the nations taking on the role of actually policing international arms sales.

The nations at the economic summit, including some of the world's biggest arms sellers, confined themselves to urging a ban on "arms transfers which would be destabilizing."

In their communique on arms control, the leaders of the United States, Japan, Canada, Britain, France, Germany and Italy avoided suggesting reprisals against offenders — and did not propose any new curbs on sales.

"We intend to give these issues our continuing close attention," and the communique covering conventional arms sales and the non-proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons.

The leaders had been temporarily deadlocked late Monday about the arms communique because of differences over whether to include tough follow-up measures.

The final version was agreed to Tuesday morning, the second day of the annual three-day summit.

Japan and Britain had both put forward the U.S. arms register proposal, reflecting alarm at the arsenal which Iran acquired before the Gulf War and at the flow of arms to the Middle East generally.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd said the leaders' arms declaration was "substantial."

"It is not a good idea that somebody like Saddam Hussein will be able to accumulate twice as many tanks as France and Britain combined. And we intend to prevent this in the future," Hurd told a news conference. "All countries should refrain from arms transfers which would be destabilizing or would exacerbate existing tensions," the declaration said.

Croatia calls for EC monitoring of cease-fire

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia on Tuesday demanded that a European Community team monitoring a cease-fire in Slovenia also be sent to Croatia, the scene of ongoing ethnic violence.

A Croatian policeman was killed in a mortar attack Tuesday and two members of a foreign TV crew, including an American, came under fire and were slightly injured while driving in the Croatian countryside. Yugoslavia's eight-member presidency had scheduled another meeting Tuesday to discuss the Yugoslav crisis, but the meeting collapsed when several republics refused to attend.

The pro-Western republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared independence June 25, capping a long quarrel with Serbia, the largest republic, over the future of the Yugoslav federation.

Fighting broke out, mainly in Slovenia, leaving more than 60 dead.

Leaders of the seven leading industrialized nations, meeting in London, called on all parties in the crisis to abide by a European Community-brokered truce in the fighting, which was reached July 8.

East Europeans feeling left out, offering up plea: Don't forget us

LONDON (AP) — Pity the East European countries.

Two years ago, President Bush and other Western leaders were so worried about the economic plight of the East Europeans that they put together a package of technical assistance and urgent food shipments.

This year, the Soviet Union and its enormous economic and political problems have caught the attention of the leaders at their annual economic summit.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has even been invited to visit.

"The East European countries might be feeling a little left out," said Jay Mitchell, economist at PlanFico, a Washington-based consulting firm specializing in Eastern Europe.

At the summit's opening session Monday, French President Francois Mitterrand and other leaders urged their counterparts not to forget the new democracies in Eastern Europe.

that these countries have of being short-circuited or undermined," said French spokesman Daniel Bernard.

Officials said the heads of Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary recently sent a letter to each of the summit leaders, expressing concern that attention — and resources — might be diverted from them.

Sources said the East Europeans were worried about the loss of markets in the Soviet Union and uncertain prospects for finding new ones in the West.

"Essentially, that means some hard decisions for us," British Prime Minister John Major was quoted by a spokesman as saying.

The East European countries are struggling to change their centrally planned economies into the free-market models practiced in the West.

Some have undertaken drastic measures that have sent consumer prices rising and lifted unemployment rolls.

"People are furious," Polish President Lesz Walensa complained during a recent visit to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels.

"It's not that they view the reform negatively, but they see no alternatives," he said.

"The politicians are not able to put them to work."

To try to cushion the shocks, Western leaders agreed at their 1989 summit in Paris to fashion an aid program for Poland and Hungary.

The program, put together by the 12-nation European Community, has since been expanded to cover Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Horst Krenler, a high-ranking official in the European Community, said the two-dozen Western nations contributing to the effort so far have pledged $31 billion.

More than three-quarters of the total has been promised by the community nations — Belgium, Britain, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal and Spain.

Romanian law halts adoption

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — President Ion Iliescu Tuesday signed a law that sharply curtails Romania's free-wheeling adoption procedures and halts all new adoptions until at least Sept. 1.

The law bars the adoption of children abandoned for less than six months, makes the sale of a baby a crime and puts all adoptions by foreigners under the control of the government's Adoptions Committee.

It calls for jail sentences of up to five years for parents and baby dealers who receive illegal payments for facilitating adoptions.

In June, the Adoptions Committee's head, Dr. Alexandra Zurgescu, announced the committee would be disbanded until at least Sept. 1 for reorganization.

Oregon Educational Act seeks to revamp traditional high school

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Oregon has embarked on a long-range program to abolish high school as it now exists in hopes of producing students better able to compete with their peers in other countries.

The program, called the Oregon Educational Act for the 21st Century, recently received final approval in the Legislature and is awaiting the governor's signature.

It would restructure high school so that students would receive a "certificate of mastery" in the 10th grade. Students then would be steered toward a college preparation program or vocational training.

The reforms also would eliminate early grade levels and lengthen the school year from 175 days to 220 days by the year 2010.

Gov. Barbara Roberts and state School Superintendent Norma Paulus are among the plan's staunchest supporters. The governor has promised to sign the bill soon.

Some skeptics have said the goals are laudable, but they won't be reached unless future legislators are willing to spend a lot of money to implement the changes. Lawmakers committed about $2 million to get the reforms off the ground in the next two years.

Other critics have complained that Oregon is adopting an elitist, European-style system in which students not bound for college are pushed into early training for factory work.

But the program's chief sponsor, state Rep. Vera Katz, says it will put Oregon at the head of the class when it comes to producing students who will be able to keep up with changing technologies in the global economy.

"It is the intent of this legislation that Oregon will develop the best educated citizens in the nation by the year 2000 and equal to the best in the world by 2010," she said in an interview.

In a sense, Oregon is being used as a testing ground for recommendations of the National Center on Education and the Economy, of which Katz is a trustee.

The center is made up of political, business and education leaders who have been pushing for changes in job-training programs.

Katz's bill embraces many of the key proposals contained in the center's 1990 report, "America's Choice: High Skills or Low Wages."

Oregon's plan would affect students from the beginning of their formal education.

It would do away with the traditional grade structure from kindergarten through third grade, grouping children according to abilities rather than age. Students' academic and technical skills would be tested every few years.

The most controversial part of the program deals with the restructuring of high school.

Starting in 1995, students would attempt to obtain a certificate of mastery by the end of 10th grade. Special remedial learning centers would be available to permit those who fail the test to keep trying for a certificate. Students who pass would choose either to enter college preparatory courses or to begin a program of at least two years that would combine academic work and on-the-job training.

Court reverses plan to suspend medical license

SEATTLE (AP) — The state Court of Appeals has overturned a medical board's decision to suspend the license of a doctor who missed several treatment sessions for drug addiction.

The three-judge Division 1 appeals panel ordered that the Washington State Medical Disciplinary Board publish information that Dr. Stephen E. Olmstead still can practice medicine.

The court said Olmstead, a cardiologist, began using morphine in 1987. He swapped tubexes of morphine at the University of Washington Medical Center with ones filled with saline, court papers say. A tubex is a syringe with a needle attached to a glass cylinder.

Olmstead signed a statement in September 1987 admitting he used the drug. At the same time, he signed an agreement with the Washington Monitored Treatment Program to enter in-patient treatment for drug addiction, submit to random urine samples and attend weekly group therapy sessions and twice-weekly Alcoholics or Narcotics Anonymous meetings.

Golf course tax could increase

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The Kootenai County Commission has asked the state Board of Tax Appeals to decide whether commissioners should review their reduction of The Coeur d'Alene Resort Golf Course's tax valuation.

If the state board calls for a review, Kootenai County Commissioner Bob Haakenson said Monday that he will disqualify himself.

Two of Haakenson's children work for Hagadone Corp. His son Eric is an accountant for Hagadone Hospitality Co., which owns the golf course.

"Whether there is a direct conflict is questionable, but there is the appearance," Haakenson said.

Commissioners last week set the taxable value of the 18-hole, 135-acre lakelakefront course at $3.6 million less than Kootenai County Assessor Tom Moore.

He has criticized the decision, but so has Hagadone Hospitality Chairman Duane Hagadone, who said he would challenge even the lower valuation by county commissioners sitting as the county Board of Equalization.

Firefighters-see light in Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Firefighters moved toward containment Tuesday of a two-acre fire burning in scattered lodgepole pine in a remote section of Yellowstone National Park.

Twenty-six firefighters were battling the Owl Creek fire, which was sparked by lightning Monday afternoon. It was located about 20 miles southeast of West Yellowstone, Mont.

Three ground crews received air support from two helicopters using water buckets to help douse the flames, according to park spokesman Caroline Evans. The fire did not spread overnight and by Tuesday morning the firefighters had established a fire-around it, Evans said.

Officials tout school in Idaho Falls

IDAHO FALLS — A technical institute in Idaho Falls to train employees for the U.S. Department of Energy could make the town the nation's hub for education on nuclear technology.

EG&G Idaho, the INEL's largest contractor, has submitted a proposal for a new National Academy of Science and Technology to Energy headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The academy would be located at University Place, be administered by DOE and train workers from department sites nationwide. Energy officials have refused to release copies of the proposal.

INEL spokesman Brad Ruggler said the University of Idaho Foundation, which helped write the proposal, agreed to construct a building and lease it to DOE.

Henrys Lake trout prompt concern

BOISE — Thousands of trout died over the winter in Henrys Lake and state health officials are concerned a proposed housing development on its shores could compound the situation.

Martin A. Benson of Carlsbad, Calif., wants to build a 22-cabin residential complex on the north shore of the lake. He has applied to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for a permit to fill in 37 acres of wetlands for the development. The state must ensure new building will not violate Idaho water quality standards before the Corps can issue the permit.

In March, more than 8,000 trout died in the world-class fishery, when oxygen levels under the ice apparently dropped. Research indicates to determine the cause of the excessive plant growth and reduced oxygen.

Gilbert blasts Andrus group on taxes

BOISE — A governor's committee on the proposed one-percent property tax initiative unfairly excludes known supporters, a leading proponent of the tax-cutting measure contends.

"We're being left out," Rachel Gilbert, vice-chairman of the Idaho Property Owners Association, said. "Wouldn't you call that stacking the deck?"

But a spokesman for Gov. Cecil Andrus disputed her claim and said the 12-member panel is only preparing for a "tax summit" planned for early fall to explore issues surrounding the initiative.

Lawyers in sex case seek venue change

BOISE — Attorneys for a former Meridian teacher accused of sexually abusing students want to move the trial — or at least jury selection — out of Ada County.

Daniel Douglas Campbell's lawyers argued Monday in 4th District Court that the Ada County news coverage has made it impossible to find unbiased jurors. Campbell is charged with seven sexual abuse charges involving two girls. Campbell has pleaded innocent and the first of two trials is set to begin Aug. 12. He faces a possible life term if convicted. "The defendant has already been convicted by the news media," Boise attorney Fred Frahm said.

Japanese, Oregon group will open campus

LEWISTON (AP) — A Japanese education foundation and an Oregon-based international education group will open a U.S. branch campus at Lewis-Clark State College next spring, officials have announced.

The Eishin Foundation and American Heritage Association eventually plan to build a dormitory for 300 to 400 students, classrooms and offices near the Lewiston college.

Lewis-Clark was selected Monday over Portland State University as the site for a U.S. branch campus.

The Eishin Foundation operates a five-year-old high school of 1,200 to 1,400 students and is building a college campus for 300 to 500 students in Iruma, Japan, northwest of Tokyo. The American Heritage Association is a Lake Oswego, Ore.-based group that establishes international academic programs.

At a news conference, Lewis-Clark President Lee Vickers said an agreement between the college, the foundation and association will be signed later this month in Japan. It won't cost the state a dime and the Japanese students will pay out-of-state fees at Lewis-Clark, he said.

The Pacific International Institute will open next May with 108 Japanese students. They will spend their first year at the college's Intensive English Institute and taking general education courses, said John Burns, executive director of the American Heritage Association.

The institute will be non-profit and separate from Lewis-Clark, but its students will be considered Lewis-Clark students and its classes will operate under the umbrella of the college's accreditation, he said.

Burns said the students will be temporarily housed in apartments and private homes. Vickers said renovations of the college's old library and the Sam Glenn Complex will provide enough classrooms for the extra students.

Burns said the students will spend their second and third years taking classes at the Pacific International Institute that meet Lewis-Clark academic standards.

The students will have the option of going to Lewis-Clark or another college for the fourth and fifth years of their schooling, he said, but most are expected to stay in Lewiston to complete their studies.

Burns said the purpose of the branch campus is to bring in foreign students to benefit from the academic, linguistic, cultural, social and other aspects of life in Lewiston.

He said the American Heritage Association also plans to form a consortium of colleges and universities, including Lewis-Clark, to lure students and faculty to the Eishin Foundation's new college campus at Iruma.

Burns said Lewis-Clark was chosen over Portland State because Lewiston, with about 28,000 people, is a small rural community that offers security, hospitality and opportunities for Japanese students.

Federal officials consider options on 2 reservoirs

BOISE (AP) — There is a substantial amount of uncontracted space at Cascade and Deadwood reservoirs on the Payette River system and federal officials are reviewing how it will be used.

The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation has started to evaluate management alternatives for 477,000 acre-feet of water storage space.

"There is considerable interest in the eventual use of the water stored in uncontracted space from both local and downstream users," said John Keys, regional director for the bureau.

One rule is that 300,000 acre-feet of storage in Cascade and 30,000 acre-feet in Deadwood will be retained for local resources such as fisheries, bald eagles and water quality. Cascade Reservoir suffers from algae growth and lower water worsens the condition.

"The water quality and fishery of Cascade Reservoir are essential ingredients in the survival and growth of the resident bald eagle population protected under the Endangered Species Act," Keys said.

One option would be to sell the 138,000 acre-feet of storage for wildlife to Idaho for administration. A measure passed in this year's legislative session authorized the Idaho Water Resource Board to negotiate the purchase of that space.

An contract would be approved under the environmental assessment of the water storage was completed.

The 97,000 acre-feet left will be evaluated for use for other purposes, including augmenting the flow in the Lower Snake River for salmon, if it is determined more water will help their migrations.

In the interim, 90,000 acre-feet will be available for the next three years, as opportunities arise, to increase the flow for anadromous fish.

Glenn heads Idaho Republican group

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn is the new chairman of the Idaho chapter of the National Conference of Republican County Officials and says it's top priority will be electing Republicans at all levels next year.

Glenn was named at the group's meeting held in conjunction with the National Association of Counties convention which ended Tuesday.

He said the GOP organization will provide campaign assistance for party candidates. "Republican county officials will serve as the foundation for a local network of community leadership dedicated to electing Republicans, especially President Bush and Sen. Steve Symms," Glenn said.

Sho-Bans take 2 salmon

SUNBEAM (AP) — Sho-bone Bannock fishermen speared two salmon on the Yankie Fork of the Selway River over the weekend.

Bret Hasket, a tribal game warden, said one fish was taken on Friday and the other Saturday by the traditional spear-fishing method.

The tribes' spring chinook season ends Sunday.

Few tribal members are fishing this year because the run is low and streamflows are high, making the fish difficult to find.

"That is a lot of work and a lot of miles of stream to cover," he said. "It would be fine if they were in one spot and you could jump in and get them, but it's not like that."

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission closed the spring chinook season to sportsmen, but left the Yankie Fork open to the tribes to take up to 25 fish.

Child-care agency needs plan on spending funds

POCATELLO (AP) — The Idaho Office for Children soon may have $3.5 million to spend on child-care programs, but isn't sure how to spend it.

State federal guidelines govern how most of the money must be spent and states must develop and carry out plans for child programs, said Susan Sahberg, director of the new office. The agency is collecting comments on how to spend the federal grant money.

Federal regulations say 75 percent of the money must improve the availability of day care, such as helping low-income families pay for day care. The other 25 percent must go to improve the quality of child care and the availability of programs for preschoolers and for school-age children before and after school hours.

"It would be fine if they were in one spot and you could jump in and get them, but it's not like that."

"There has not been new money in this area for a long time," she said.

Last year, Congress authorized $2.5 billion for three years of child care programs, including $71 million this year. Idaho should get about $3.5 million.

Symms takes swipe at Stallings in ad

By Anita Dennis
Times-News writer

Symms Stallings

TWIN FALLS — Tucked between ads for "Images of Love" lingerie and wedding and bridesmaid's dress rentals is the ad for a U.S. congressional candidate.

WANTED: CANDIDATE If you have the WISDOM to understand that a strong national defense is essential to freedom, the JUDGMENT to know when to use it & the COURAGE to vote to use it, IDAHO WANTS YOU IN THE U.S. HOUSE! Call Steve Symms 344-1776.

Idaho's senior U.S. senator has taken out the personal ad in newspapers across the state this week because, "He's interested in elevating the debate about the two congressmen," said Dave Pearson, Symms' spokesman.

in the Persian Gulf to get Iraq out of Kuwait.

"It's an interesting approach to congressional recruitment," Stallings said Tuesday through his spokeswoman, Melodie Rydahl.

Stallings, who wanted to let economic sanctions continue to work before using force, is planning a challenge to the incumbent senator in 1992. Symms has not yet announced whether he'll seek a third term.

"Since I know of no one who doesn't believe in a strong national defense, I'm going to assume Steve will hear from as many Idaho Democrats as he will Republicans," Stallings said.

Is the ad indicative of the tone of Symms' potential reelection campaign and the issue he'll focus on?

"So it would seem," Rydahl said. But the Democratic county is taking the ad in stride. "It's a janky thing to do," she said.

But one potential Republican candidate for Stallings' 2nd District seat doesn't think the ad is very funny.

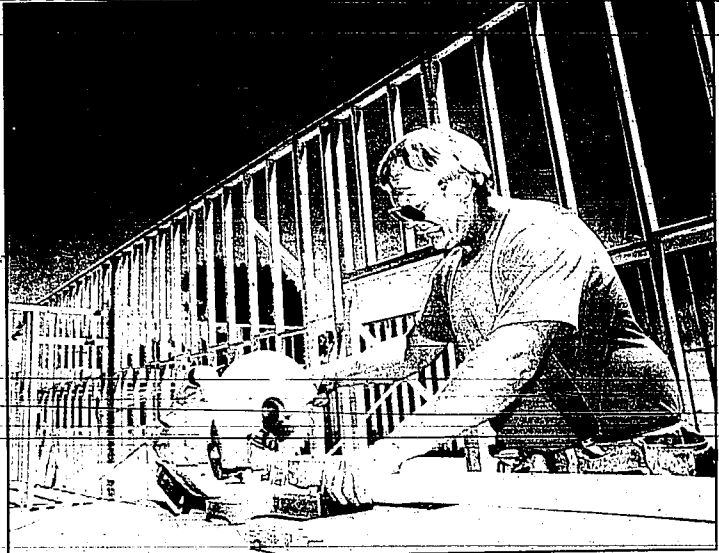

"I take offense at it," said state Rep. Mark Stubbs of Twin Falls. "It's almost a kick in the pants to people who are interested in Stallings' seat, like me."

Pearson said that's not the point.

"There is no intention to offend any good candidate," he said, and Stubbs' record would indicate that Stubbs wouldn't have opposed the ad, said Pearson said.

Gary Glenn, an Ada County commissioner also eyeing Stallings' seat wasn't offended, however. "I've never answered a personal ad in my life, but there's a first time for everything," he said.

Gimme shelter

Working beneath Tuesday's hot sun, Twin Falls framer Jim Schrock cuts pieces of wood for construction of the new courthouse for the Snake River Basin adjudication. The building will house a courtroom and a clerk's office for the massive court proceeding — a lawsuit to sort out more than 100,000 water rights in the Snake River Basin involving 39 of Idaho's 44 counties.

Energy Department decides Twin Falls won't have hearing on weapons plant

By N.S. Nokkventved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Federal Energy Department has turned down U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings' request for a Twin Falls hearing on a proposed nuclear weapons plant.

Hearings get under way in Idaho Falls today to hear comments on the department's plans to modernize its nuclear bomb production facilities. Similar hearings have been and will be conducted across the country.

But the Energy Department no longer listens to citizens' representatives, complains Butte resident Bill Chisholm.

It took years to convince the government to let the public express its opinion on projects. But neither the department didn't like what it heard in Twin Falls, Chisholm said.

The An Force too has been taken to task in the Twin Falls hearings, and it did not schedule a hearing here for its latest expansion proposal for the Mountain Home An Force Base.

"It's a very serious foreboding," Chisholm said. "The government appears to be walking away from even the pretense of listening to the public and leaving no easy access to participate in important decisions," he said.

The Energy Department told Stallings that if it had an extra hearing in Twin Falls, it would have to go back and have extra hearings at all the other places across the country that asked for them, said Stallings aide Cary Jones.

But Jones noted that the department held multiple hearings in Idaho on other nuclear projects, including the New Production Reactor and on an Environmental Restoration and Waste Management program.

The Wednesday session is a preliminary hearing that will help determine what is covered in a programmatic environmental impact statement on the weapons upgrade proposal. It will be followed by other hearings when that impact statement is released. Written comments also are accepted at any stage of the impact statement process.

"People feel it's important to testify in person," Jones said.

Few Idaho political leaders sign up to testify

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — Idaho's political leaders will be notable by their absence on Tuesday when the Energy Department opens two days of hearings on the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's bid to become a national center for nuclear weapons production.

But plenty of the state's businessmen and nuclear weapons critics were ready to square off on the Complex 21 proposal to modernize the nation's weapons production. Escorted Idaho businessmen are pushing for the lucrative defense work while weapons critics like the Snake River Alliance adamantly oppose shutting the focus of INEL from research to weapons.

INEL is one of five sites being considered for the project, which would relocate one to three of the government's weapons plants.

As many as 9,000 jobs could materialize if INEL is selected.

The Idaho Falls hearing is the only one scheduled for the state to gather suggestions for what an environmental impact statement on the for the project ought to include. The Energy Department added the second day to accommodate a "people's hearing" at the early volcano eruption site.

More than 200 people gathered Tuesday for the hearing.

Oakley family glad to be home, away from volcano

By Terri McAfee
Times-News correspondent

OAKLEY — It's good to be home, says Airman 1st Class Nick Greenwell, recently arrived in Oakley from the Philippines with his young family after living through the natural disasters of a volcanic eruption and a typhoon.

No more times to wait in. No more crying children to be carried and soothed for hours.

Simple necessities, like food and water, in ample abundance.

Greenwell, 21, and his young family — wife Stacy, also 21, and sons Joshua, 18 months, and Caleb, six months — lived at the foot of Mt. Pinatubo at Clark Air Force Base, for 18 months. Then the mountain came to life after a 600-year nap.

Its awakening irrevocably damaged Clark Air Force Base.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Tuesday he believes that continued U.S. support of the Philippines is in the "national interest" because of the amount of aid.

Cheney is expected to announce the base's fate within the next few days.

"We didn't take it seriously," Greenwell said about the early volcano warnings. "At the time it really didn't hit us that it was really going to happen."

The family gathered staple items in bags at the door and kept the cars' gas tanks above the half mark as their only precautionary move.

The day before the eruption, evacuation began. An orderly removal to Subic Bay Naval Station became pandemonium when people panicked and the air base residents evacuated en masse rather than in lined segments.

Drug force passes hat for funding

By Diane Schorzman
Times-News correspondent

BUTTE — The Magic Valley Drug Task Force is going public with its appeal for money.

Because of cutbacks in federal money distributed by the state to law enforcement agencies, members of the task force said at a news conference here Tuesday, said the agency may have to shut down.

The task force will receive only $400,000 of the $885,000 in grant money for which it had applied from the Federal Criminal Justice Commission. Last year, the task force asked for $1,300,000 and got $800,000.

"With that in mind, do we want to fight or do we want to give up and go home," asked Don Walden, a Twin Falls police department detective whose time has been donated by the city to act as project manager for the task force.

Although Twin Falls' Task Force is the state's largest, it has been shut down because of inadequate grant funds, "we've decided to keep our task force," said Walden, although it means seeking the necessary funding somewhere else.

The task force estimates that it will need another $100,000 to keep operating during the fiscal year 1991-92, and is asking the public for help in raising that money.

Walden says the community already is an integral part of the fight against drugs. The task force receives daily information from residents about suspected drug dealing in their neighborhoods and the task force encourages them to continue to call.

"There is a severe drug problem in the Magic Valley," said Walden.

Frank Nichols, Twin Falls County deputy prosecuting attorney, wants that "drug" problem to come this way.

"Twin Falls is located at the crossroads of Interstate 84 and U.S. Highway 93, routes used for smuggling, Nichols said. Because of the arrival in the area of organized crime figures, "we are getting a lot of evidence money funneled through our town," he said.

"The quantity of drugs in the Magic Valley is staggering," he said.

Jerome confident about jail review

By H. R. Weikel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Fresh paint, homemade bread and more room for prisoners are among the improvements in store for the Jerome County Jail in preparation for a state mandated inspection, to be held Tuesday.

Jane Felton, president of the Idaho Jail Standards Committee will conduct the inspection.

"I think overall we are in pretty good shape. We don't have any outdoor recreation area, but we're discussing that with other counties," said County Commission Chairman Carl Montgomery.

"We have a good facility, and we don't expect any major violations to state standards," he said.

"We've reduced our average population from 100 to 80."

Ketchum will try sharing building inspector

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The Ketchum City Council has agreed to share its building inspector with the city of Sun Valley for a three-month trial period.

Dennis Wheeler, Ketchum's building inspector, will serve both cities if the cooperative agreement is approved by the Sun Valley City Council, which meets Thursday at 8:30 p.m.

After the trial period, the neighboring-cities will consider consolidation of the cities' building departments.

"The agreement is a sharing of costs $40,500 for the next three months," said Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jaquet during Monday night's council meeting.

The Ketchum council approved the agreement unanimously.

Since the retirement of Sun

Valley's building inspector, Oliver Dibble, "Wheeler has been performing that city's plan checks and building inspections. He estimated that he has spent 35 hours on Sun Valley projects over the past two months.

"They needed somebody to fill in and we provided it," Wheeler explained, pointing out that Dibble would be in for him while he was on vacation.

"We never discussed payment for services rendered," Ketchum Councilwoman Suzanne Orb, who helped negotiate the three-month agreement with Sun Valley, said she hoped the two councils would agree on a permanent consolidation of the building departments, and perhaps other city services.

"We're trying to open the door for this concept of consolidation," she said.

"I think we have a really good building inspector right now, and I don't want that to change," said Councilman Tom Heide. "As long as he's supportive of it, I'm supportive of it."

Wheeler told the council he was happy with the new arrangement.

In other business during the meeting, the Ketchum council announced a 90-day moratorium on in-lieu parking applications.

The moratorium was announced following a lengthy discussion on the application of residents Ed and Sue Dumke to make an in-lieu payment instead of providing the extra parking space required for an addition to their condominium at 6th Street and Leadville Avenue.

The council eventually agreed to the in-lieu payment, which is $3,240 under the city's existing formula, but called for an immediate halt to new applications.

In-lieu payments, in theory, are used by the city to purchase and construct parking areas elsewhere. But council members questioned the appropriateness of the existing formula and the city's ability to profit from parking elsewhere.

Councilman Guy Coles said he was opposed to the concept of in-lieu payments for parking in general.

The moratorium, which began Monday and expires Oct. 15, was applied to all but 1-3-1 votes.

Councilwoman Sue Wolford voted against it, saying she disagreed on the necessity for a moratorium.

Also on Monday, the council:

- Granted an outdoor music permit to The House of Saturday, July 27, between the hours of 5 p.m. and 9 p.m., provided neighboring property owners do not object.
- Increased the rental rate for the Ketchum Fire Department's pumps and ladder truck, from $50 per hour to $70 per hour.

"It was timely for us to update this because we may have the opportunity to rent the equipment in connection with the filming of a movie during the month of August," Jaquet said.

Tabled the Heideberg Inn's application for a zoning staff interpretation that its planned renovations and remodeling are an expansion of a non-conforming use (a motel in a limited residential zone). The issue will be considered at the council's Aug. 6 meeting after neighboring property owners are notified of the proposal.

Industry around his name surprises Mantle

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mickey Mantle sat next to his 1967 road jersey, politely listening to collector Jonathan Leland Evans discuss his company's auction of sports memorabilia scheduled for next Wednesday.

What about the jersey, Evans was asked. What is it worth?
"About $50,000," Evans said. Mantle stiffened.

And if you want to add Mantle's '67 cap to complete the set, that is also available at the auction. Price tag: $4,000 to $5,000. If you're going for $50,000 for the shirt, well, you'd certainly want the hat, too.

Now it was the Mick's turn to speak. He looked admiringly at the gray jersey, with the stark No. 7 on its back.
"Fifty thousand, huh," he said. "I've got a couple of hats here."

Mantle sits in awe of how the paraphernalia of his career has zoomed in value. He said he saved very little because he never imagined this happening.

'Who would have thought this? I never thought about saving anything. When I played it was not that big a deal. Now I love it. It brought me back.'

— Mickey Mantle

"Who would have thought of this?" he said. "I never thought about saving anything. When I played, it was not that big a deal. Now I love it. It brought me back."

Mickey Mantle has become a cottage industry.

He does autograph shows, shakes hands, poses for pictures. "Men come up with their kids, shake hands and say to their kids, 'This is Mickey Mantle. He's the greatest ball player alive.' It's a great ego-builder. It gives me goosebumps."

Then the kids say, Dad, that's an old man. Mantle is 59 now and like his memorabilia, well-preserved. His own collecting is limited to a few things from his career like his retired No. 7 jersey and items signed for him by his own heroes — Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Joe DiMaggio. "It's not for sale," he said.

Being Mickey Mantle has become a lucrative business for the man whose top salary as a player was $100,000.

I make more money on Saturdays and Sundays than I made in my first four years with the Yankees," he said.

Those were tough times for baseball players. Mantle earned $2,500 as a rookie in 1951, then $10,000, then $17,000.

1956, the year he won the Triple Crown, he was up to $32,500. Yankee owners Del Webb and Dan Topping ordered general manager George Weiss to double Mantle's salary the next year, pushing him to $75,000. "That made Weiss mad," Mantle said.

The next year, Mantle won his second straight MVP trophy and his batting average went from .353 in his Triple Crown year to .365. "My first contract offer was a cut," he said.

Weiss' pugnacious nature was legendary. "One time, I was in right field during batting practice and I tossed a ball to a kid in the stands," Mantle said. "They took me right upstairs in uniform and Mr. Weiss lectured me, told me that it wasn't my ball to give away, that if I hit a fan the Yankees could be sued and I could be sued."

"Then he made me pay $5 for the ball."

Ball players of that era bought their own shoes and gloves. The uniforms belonged to the club, although players routinely gave away their shirts at the end of the season. A Chevrolet clubhouse van got Mantle's 1967 shirt. And not for $50,000. "That would be a real worth $50,000," Mantle said. "If I did, I'd be sleeping in it."

The tournament is played to select a team to represent Idaho in the BCI Championship Tournament July 26-31 in Mesa, Arizona.

The win helped the South to place four players on the state team. Moreton will be joined by Justin Jones, Malad; Jeremy Toner, Burley; and Brian Homer, Wood River. The rest of the squad is drawn from the state.

As runner-up, the North placed three on the select group as did the West. The East has two representatives.

David Cunningham, Lapwai, scored 11 of his 19 points in the opening period to help build that lead.

Toner got the South to within one to open the second quarter and Moreton took over, scoring eight of the South's 15 second-quarter points for a 34-28 halftime lead.

Moreton helped close the floor on the North in the final quarter with eight more points.

In the consolation game the East got a 12-foot jumper by Kelly Dawson for the Idaho Falls, with 10 seconds remaining in the game to pull out an 84-82 win.

Welshman optimistic about British Open

The Associated Press

SOUTH HIPPON, England — Despite defeats in their last warm-up tournaments, Greg Norman and Ian Woosnam are optimistic heading into the British Open.

Woosnam won the Monte Carlo Open two weeks ago, but finished 10th in last week's Scottish Open. However, he wasn't that disappointed because coming into the British Open with a two-tournament winning streak would have meant extra-pressure on the 31-year-old Welshman.

"I can't imagine what it would be like if I came in here going for three in a row this year," he said. "I didn't want that... I'm more relaxed now than I was last year. I'm playing well. I'm very confident."

Norman, in the worst slump of his career, blew the Western Open in his last start. The Australian had a five-stroke lead in eight holes to play and finished second, but said he still exceeded his expectations in the tournament.

"I entered the Western in the 11th hour, just to play. I just bought some new clubs," he said. "I didn't expect. Sure, I needed some new clubs, but I was playing his first tournament since withdrawing from the U.S. Open because of a hip problem."

"Instead of just playing, I got myself in position to win. That's much more than I expected. Sure, I needed some new clubs, but I was playing his first tournament since withdrawing from the U.S. Open because of a hip problem."

Despite his year-long victory drought, a bout with burnout and occasional sniping from the international press, Norman remains one of the leading contenders at the British Open, which begins Thursday at Royal Birkdale.

"I've just gone through a bad run," Norman said. "I really feel that it's bottomed out, that I'm on the upswing now."

"I'm not writing myself off. I've got a lot of other people are. I got a big boost in confidence from the Western. I'll come back. I still have the confidence it will happen. I have a very good feeling about this week."

So does Woosnam.

"I played well in Scotland," he said. "Good, solid, steady golf. Nothing wrong with the way I played. I've played well for several weeks now, but lately my putting has not been that good. Sometimes that happens. Sometimes they just don't go in."

"It's just a matter of patience. It's a matter of whether it comes week or not. If the putts go in, it's your week. If they don't go in, it's not your week. It's that simple."

Cadwell, who also won the senior state title this course a month later, was named to represent the 50-plus amateurs in the cup matches which are slated for July 23-24 at Sun Valley Golf Course.

The two second district amateurs named to the team are Terry Spackman of Burley and Jason Meyerhoeffer of Twin Falls.

Those three should be among the contenders, along with former champion Glenn Hakeley, Burley, who has won this title before, and Denny Simpson of Heyburn who calls the Burley course home.

Simpson said the field will be divided into flights by handicap and be assigned putters and tees times to both days.

THE TIMES-NEWS

BURLEY — At least three of the amateurs named to the state Carter Cup team will be participating in the Burley Amateur golf tournament this weekend.

The two-day event will have opening in all flights, reports host Professional Earl Simpson.

He said the tournament, which offers a barbecue Saturday afternoon, will be decided on gross in each of the flights and guarantees a 100 percent pay back.

The three Carter Cup players include defending champion Bruce Caldwell of Boise, who broke away over the first five holes last year to lead the rest of the day despite a late charge by Twin Falls' Deane Cadwell.

The last-place Astros not only dropped their fifth in a row, but lost starting pitcher Jim Deshaies to a first-inning bruised arm and reliever Darryl Kile to a sixth-inning ejection. Kile was tossed after hitting Gary Redus with a pitch immediately following Varsho's homer, but no fight erupted although both benches emptied.

South wins hoops gold at festival

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tournament MVP Peggy Evans of Tennessee scored 20 points Monday night as the South failed to beat the North 82-77 in overtime and win the U.S. Olympic Festival gold medal.

Basketball and the boxing gold medal matches were the highlights of the fourth day of the festival, which continues through Sunday at sites in and around Los Angeles.

The South appeared doomed when Anjina Hopson of Arkansas threw the ball away on an out-of-bounds play with 26 seconds left in regulation and her team trailing 69-67.

But after Cathy Marx of Iowa made just one of two free throws, Hopson hit a 3-pointer with 5 seconds left to force the overtime. After going 1-2 for 1-3 from 3-point range in her first three festival games, Hopson was 3-of-7 from 3-point range.

The South wound up 3-1, the North 2-2.

In the bronze medal game, Frozema Jerro of Arizona State scored 11 points as the West snapped its winless streak with a 69-60 victory over the East.

Giants reach deal with playoff hero

MADISON, N.J. (AP) — The fight for the New York Giants quarterback job is underway and it's going to be a long one.

Hostetler, the longtime backup who led the Giants to the Super Bowl after Phil Simms was hurt in December, ensured that by teaching a contract agreement late Monday night as the first day of training camp ended.

Terms of the deal were not released, but it should raise Hostetler's salary from $425,000 to more than a $1 million, putting him on equal footing with Simms, who makes $1.4 million in the final year of his three-year contract.

Hostetler then led the Giants to win over Phoenix and New England in the final two regular-season games before guiding them to victories over Chicago, San Francisco and Buffalo en route to the NFL title. The team has won all seven of his career starts.

"When I'm sitting in a room by myself, I feel the competition is too close to call," said Handley. "I feel confident either will be able to lead us to the type of record we want to have."

There can be no arguing with Simms' numbers. Since he became the Giants' starter in 1984, the team has won two Super Bowls and posted a 74-37 regular-season mark. Simms has started 101 of those 111 games and has a 64-33 record. New York was 64-3 in the games Simms missed because of injury.

Besides the two games he missed last season, Simms missed one each in 1989 and 1988 and six in 1987, three of which were strike replacement games.

Still, Simms knows Hostetler is pushing to take the job.

"I don't feel the pressure," Simms said. "I've had to go out there and turn it up any more than in the past. It's really pretty simple. The situation is different, but as far as I'm concerned, there's nothing I can do any better."

Handley disagreed. He said he was looking for Simms to raise his game after for Hostetler, a third round draft pick in 1984, to make great strides.

LeMond holds lead heading to mountains

ST. HERBLAIN, France (AP) — Their numbers reduced by fever, Dutch cyclist Erik Breukink and his PDM team withdrew Tuesday from the Tour de France, leaving leader Greg LeMond in a powerful position entering the Pyrenees Mountains.

Breukink pulled out before the start of the 11th stage with a bacterial infection that dropped him from second to third and forced five of his PDM teammates to withdraw on Monday.

"It's an infection due to the drinks in the bottles and maybe some food," PDM director Jan Gibbers said. "Bill [LeMond] is relieved to know that it's a bacterial disease, because you can cure it easier than if it would have been a virus."

Breukink had been second overall behind LeMond on Monday, but struggled to finish the 10th stage as he rode with a fever of 100 degrees.

Gibbers withdrew Breukink and his three remaining team members — Sean Kelly of Ireland, Raul Alcala of Mexico, and Joseph Van Aert of the Netherlands — before the start of the 154-mile leg Tuesday from Quimper to St. Herblain.

to the team," said LeMond, who kept the overall lead for the fourth straight day. "It's going to be mentally hard for Breukink, because he was going well."

LeMond finished 22nd in the 11th stage and his lead shrank to 51 seconds over Djamolidine Abdoujaparov of the Soviet Union.

Dr. Gerard Ponce, the chief medical officer for the Tour de France organization, said the four PDM riders still showed effects of the illness.

"They are tired and their heartbeat is accelerating," Ponce said. "They have a fever."

Gibbers said the PDM team will try to recover in time for the World Cycling Championships at Stuttgart in August. They may do some racing next week in Belgium and Spain.

France's Charly Mottet captured Tuesday's stage in a quick ride that finished an hour ahead of schedule.

Abdourajov managed to shave 18 seconds off LeMond's lead by placing well in special sprints during the stage.

Breukink's withdrawal helped Spain's Miguel Indurain move into third, 2:17 behind LeMond.

The cyclists have their only day off Wednesday, traveling by plane to Pau before two stages in the Pyrenees. The mountain stretches are one of LeMond's strongest points.

In 1986, LeMond made up four minutes in the Pyrenees on leader Bernard Hinault of France. Last year, the American chopped nine minutes off the margin of Italian Claudio Chiappucci in the mountain stages.

Both times he won the Tour. The first Pyrenees stage is 122 miles of hard climbing from Pau to Jaca, Spain.

NCAA says Heisman winner must pay for airfare

McAllen, Texas (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer apparently will have to pay for airfare and hotel accommodations he received during a speaking engagement in South Texas, an NCAA official said.

The Brigham Young senior and his wife received free plane tickets and rooms so Detmer could take part in a July 4 celebration in McAllen, organizers said.

That would be a violation of NCAA rules, according to Rick Evidy, NCAA legislative services official.

"If a student-athlete receives compensation for his or her part as a speaker, that would be contrary to our regulations," Evidy said in a Tuesday edition of The McAllen Monitor. "With regard to expenses, that would not be permitted, either."

According to a city of McAllen news release, Detmer and his wife, Kim, were provided air transportation on American Airlines from Provo, Utah to McAllen, and a hotel room at McAllen's Embassy Suites on July 3.

While in McAllen, Detmer addressed a gathering at the city-sponsored "All-American Tribute to Patriotism."

Detmer did not receive compensation for addressing the gathering.

According to NCAA enforcement director Mark Jones, the punishment for accepting small paid expenses is usually only reimbursement for the services.

"In many cases, if an athlete receives something, he or she may be required to repay whoever is involved for the services," he said.

Duke players head list of Pan Am prospects

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 16 players vying for spots on the U.S. basketball team at next month's Pan American Games better be prepared to step the 3-point shot and to put up a few themselves, coach Gene Keady said Tuesday.

Giant Bill Thomas Hill and Christian Laettner of NC A&T are among Duke's best at the 3-point line, players who arrive on the Purdue campus at West Lafayette on Wednesday and begin play in the games in just 2 weeks.

Keady, the Purdue coach, said a strong 31 American disappointments in international play as well as his own coaching experience overseas have taught him the 3-pointer is a weapon that must be used offensively and stopped defensively.

"I think our philosophy is a little bit different: stepping the 3-point shot and putting up more 3-point shots by us," Keady said in a teleconference.

The U.S. players must expect to encounter a different style of play from the foreign teams, older and more experienced and likely to throw up open shots from anywhere, Keady said.

"The 3-point shot, that's a big factor. They won't even hesitate," Keady said.

Keady said the players coming to Purdue were selected with the 3-point in mind, and he feels he has a half dozen players who can consistently hit the long shot.

He also said he has a good idea what the final roster will look like, but won't say who will definitely travel to Havana because he wants everyone to come in with a "fair chance of making the squad."

The 16 players include 12 selected during April trials at Colorado Springs, Colo., plus four who received waivers from USA Basketball and were allowed to miss the trials.

Laettner, Doug Christie of Pepperdine, Robert Horry of Auburn and Byron Houston of Oklahoma State.

Others coming to the trials include 7-foot Eric Motross of North Carolina, 6-6 Jim Jackson of Ohio State, 6-foot 8 Wally Williams of Maryland and 6-foot Mike Peptowski of Michigan State.

Twice-a-day practices begin Thursday, with an exhibition Sunday against an Indianapolis AAU team and workouts with the Canadian team July 23-24. The team is scheduled to leave for Havana on July 28.

Other than the gold medal, a Keady-coached U.S. team won in the 1989 World University Games, American squads have struggled in recent international play, settling for the bronze in the 1985 Olympics at Seoul and silver in the 1987 Pan Am Games in Indianapolis. They also failed to win gold medals in the 1990 Goodwill Games and the 1990 World Championships.

"By our standards, anything less than the gold is a losing situation for us," Keady said. But, he added, because of recent failures, "I think there's less pressure on us."

The favorites to win the gold on Aug. 17, according to Keady, are Puerto Rico and Cuba, which plays the U.S. on Aug. 3. "We play them first, so that's a big concern early," he said.

Ice cream, potatoes keep family happy

Who ever wrote "Summertime and the livin' is easy..." must have lived on some other planet.
 Here it is the MIDDLE of fishing season and the closest I've come to a fish is getting it out of the freezer. Something is wrong with my priorities!

Nancy Joy Jones
 Valley cooking

It was confusing feeding the extended family over the holiday. I wanted to please everyone and give them their favorite food. After all, it was our first real get-together in a couple of years.
 Well, after counting noses and their choices, I went ahead and did as I wanted. You see we had one true vegetarian, one who doesn't eat red meat, one who doesn't eat red or white meat but will eat fish plus a son-in-law who by his Muslim faith doesn't eat pork in any shape or form.

We had it all and no one went hungry. Yes, we had red meat, steaks and hamburgers, we had sausage, we had baked beans, we had salmon, etc., the secret was to have lots of potato and other vegetable side dishes and lots of homemade ice cream!

With the beginning of the summer explosion in the gardens, here are some of the ways we've been treating ourselves.

RHUBARB MARMALADE
 6 cups rhubarb, coarsely chopped
 1 large can (any size between 14- and 20-ounces) pineapple
 6 cups sugar
 ½ cup chopped nuts

Combine in a large saucepan the rhubarb and pineapple and cook for 5 minutes, stirring constantly, then add the sugar and keep stirring until sugar is absorbed.
 Let it cook for 30 minutes and then add the nuts.
 Refrigerate if you're going to use it fairly soon (up to a month or so) or can as you would a jam.
 This next recipe is for the two people left in the world that such. Line a strainer or colander with a cloth or large coffee filter and pour the yogurt on top and let it drain overnight. This takes some of the wetness away and it acts more like cream cheese.

Any way said your or your neighbor's herb garden for this one.

FRESH HERB DIP OR SPREAD
 16 ounces of cream cheese
 8 ounces (1 stick) of unsalted butter
 1 tablespoon of chopped fresh oregano
 1½ teaspoons chopped fresh thyme
 1½ teaspoons chopped fresh basil
 1½ teaspoons chopped fresh dill
 1 freshly ground pepper

Cream the cheese and butter together. Now add everything else and mix well. Chill for a day before using. Serve at room temperature. This will keep for 5 to 7 days if covered and refrigerated.

With the herbs coming on strong in my garden I've been experimenting with combinations. This one grew because there was an excess of the three herbs. It's wonderful, but part of that was due to the whipping cream which was left over from the ice cream makings (I don't see why half and half wouldn't work just as well but haven't tried it yet). Use any pasta, but I think you'll want a wider noodle than a spaghetti to hold more of the sauce.

HERB PASTA SAUCE
 1 cup butter or good margarine
 1 cup half and half or whipping cream
 1 clove garlic, minced
 1 cup grated parmesan cheese (fresh grated is important, don't use canned)

Ride a beach party wave with some spirit

Remember movies like "Beach Blanket Bingo" and "Back to the Beach"?

Remember Gidget, Elvis, Frankie and Annette? These beach classics inspired millions of moviegoers to jivebug in the sand. Now, along with the revival of the 1960s clothing and accessories, beach parties are making a comeback, promising to be this summer's hottest party craze.

Adults can ride the beach party wave and throw their own splash with the appropriate summer spirit. The suggested beach party menu adds a modern touch to beach party classics. Recipe ideas include the Midori Sno-cone, an icy concoction with an innovative twist: Goombay Chicken, a tropical taste for the outdoor grill; any of the other following beach-inspired food and drink items.

Feature bright, vibrant colors and festive decorations. Offer guests day-to-surfer caps and plastic beach balls as party favors. Adorn food with colorful paper beach umbrellas and the newest in whimsical swizzle sticks.

Sun, sea and sand aren't necessary to throw a great beach party. Appropriate food and drink and the right attitude can heat up any occasion to the proper beach temperature!

MIDORI SNO-CONES

4 ripe honeydew melon, seeds removed
 3 kiwifruits
 2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
 pinch salt
 ½ cup sugar
 ½ cup water
 ½ cup melon liqueur

Peel honeydew and kiwifruits and cut in chunks. Add fruit, lime juice and salt to food processor and puree until smooth. (Should yield 3 cups.)

In small saucepan, boil sugar and water for 2 minutes. Let cool. Mix fruit puree and sugar syrup. Put in ice cream maker and freeze according to manufacturer's directions.
 Halfway through freezing process add ½ cup liqueur and stir. Finish freezing process.
 Place large scoops of sorbet mixture into paper cones. Drizzle each sno-cone with liqueur.
 Makes 6 servings.

GOOMBAY CHICKEN

Marinade:
 ½ cup white vinegar
 1½ cup melon liqueur
 ¼ cup vegetable oil
 ¼ cup orange juice
 2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
 2 tablespoons teriyaki sauce
 2 tablespoons sugar
 1 tablespoon garlic powder

1 tablespoon thyme leaves
 4 teaspoons salt
 2 teaspoons cayenne pepper
 2 cups chopped cilantro
 1 cup chopped onions

Chicken:
 1 3½-pound chicken, cut into 6-8 pieces
 4 pineapple, peeled, cored, cut into 8 slices

Combine all marinade ingredients in a large bowl; mix well. Reserve ½ cup marinade in small bowl. Add chicken pieces to the large bowl, and marinate in the refrigerator for 2 hours or overnight.
 Remove chicken from refrigerator, and discard chicken marinade. Place chicken in shallow baking dish with pineapple slices.
 Bake chicken and pineapple in 375 degrees oven for 45 minutes basting occasionally with reserved, fresh marinade. Or, grill chicken and pineapple.

Frozen treats can be sinfully rich or lusciously low-cal

By Jane Snow
 Knight-Ridder News Service

Who says you can't have it both ways? You love sumptuously rich, chocolate-covered ice cream bars but you also dote on low-calorie frozen fruit and yogurt pops. Go ahead, indulge. Just in time for the dog days of summer, we've developed recipes for ultra-rich ice cream bars and low-calorie fruit pops.

We offer recipes for both the rich and the lean with good reason. When it comes to filling up while cooling off, Americans can't make up their minds.

Almost 200 new frozen novelties of all kinds were introduced last year alone, and few lacked takers. Particularly hot this summer are the new frozen-candy bar knockoffs such as Snickers.

However, sales of low-calorie frozen pops are hardly suffering. In fact, they're up 25 percent, according to the American Dairy Association. Overall, sales of frozen novelties have doubled in the past five years, to $2.5 billion.

If you're really ambitious and have lots of freezer space, you can buy a half-gallon of ice cream and make 20 to 22 frozen bars. A quart of ice cream will yield 10 or 11 bars.

Whichever size batch you make, buy the ice cream in a brick, not a round tub. For the smaller batch, you may have to buy a half-gallon and cut it in half.

On days when a lean treat is in order, take your pick - icy strawberry-marinato bars made with chunks of fresh, ripe fruit or beautifully creamy blueberry bars made with frozen blueberries and buttermilk. The frozen pops can be frozen in either small paper cups or plastic molds, available in discount stores and some supermarkets.

The fruit bars become very firm when frozen. For a softer texture, transfer them from the freezer to the refrigerator a few minutes before eating. To release the pops from the molds or paper cups, dip them briefly in hot water.

The chocolate-dipped ice cream bars are trickier to make than the fruit bars, but you

Creativity helps cooking on tight budget stay delicious

By Deborah Hornblow
 The Hartford Courant

You have paid the bills for the month - the mortgage, the car loan, the heating bill - and the amount straining back at you from the checkbook hardly seems enough to feed a gerbil, never mind two adults. There must be some mistake in the math.

No, you think. We're in a recession.

You stare back at the amount in the checkbook. You are overcome by images of Oliver Twist and his bowl of gruel. You wonder if you could get the recipe.

No one ever said cooking on a tight budget is a recipe for fun and happiness, but with a little creativity and extra effort, even first-time recession cooks will find it can be a delicious and rewarding challenge.

Cooks might use the following guidelines, which can be applied to recipes in any cookbook. More a matter of common sense than research, these suggestions are essential to maintaining a thrifty food budget:

• Buy the most time-efficient recipe for more time than you would if you were Donald Trump's ex. Saving money in the kitchen requires doing some homework. Think of it this way: The more time you have to spend thinking up reasons not to go on a vacation, not to buy a new car, not to go to the mall...

• As Winston Churchill was oft quoted, "Prepare, prepare, and prepare." In other words, shop with a list and try to stick to it. If you don't plan ahead what meals you are going to make, chances are you'll wind up relying on potentially costly impulse purchases, takeout foods and dining out. To prepare your list, consult cookbooks and recipe files and plan the menus for the week.

"We've all heard this one before, but that's because it's true: Waste not, want not. Incorporate leftovers into the menu so pennies and dimes don't go down the drain. If you indulge in a spring meal of leg of lamb for Sunday dinner, use the leftovers to make shepherd's pie or croquettes. The remains of a roasted chicken can become part of a pasta dinner or a hearty soup. If you make meatloaf for dinner, pack meatloaf sandwiches for the next day's lunch.

• Avoid prepared packaged foods like TV dinners and frozen pizzas. Even if you do this as a general rule, it is imperative if you are looking for ways to conserve food dollars. A little imagination and not much time in the kitchen can produce a meal that Mrs. Paul would probably be proud to put her name on.

• Buy the least expensive cuts of meat, poultry and fish. Check supermarket ads for what's on special. Instead of buying boneless chicken breasts for the grill, opt for chicken legs or thighs. Instead of beef tenderloin or T-bone steak, buy the less desirable flank steak. Look for specials at the seafood counter and don't be afraid to experiment by cooking a new kind of fish.

• Where possible, do some of your own butchering.

The ability to bone a chicken breast, as one example, will save you a good deal. Save the bones and skin to make chicken stock.

• Buy fruits and vegetables that are in season to get the best buys. Also check for deli discounts.

• Consult supermarket flyers for sales and, even if it hasn't been the caught dead doing it, clip coupons.

• Think pasta, potatoes, rice and beans. Not only are carbohydrates good for you and filling, but they will help stretch whatever protein foods you buy. Without meat, poultry or fish, satisfying and nutritious meals can be made by combining vegetables with pasta, potatoes, rice or beans. Magnificent meatless and inexpensive meals can be made of vegetable lasagna, potato pancakes, risotto or black bean chili, to name a few.

• Don't forget the incredible, edible egg. The national obsession with cholesterol has sadly made egg avoidance the rage. But, for those on unrestricted diets, the occasional egg dish is far more delicious than dangerous. An inexpensive and versatile protein, eggs hatch such economical epicurean delights as quiches, omelettes, frittatas and souflés.

• Begin a meal with soup or appetizer to take the edge off your appetite. The simplest soups may be concocted from leftovers and they make filling first courses, as do such inexpensive and nutritious appetizers as hummus or tsatsiki (a Greek dish made with cucumbers, garlic and yogurt), which means you need less of a main dish to complete the meal.

Hot 'N Spicy Chuck Roast will welcome family members home

Looking for just the right flavor to welcome home members of the extended family this summer? Hot 'N Spicy Chuck Roast, marinated and grilled, shows good taste when it comes to a family reunion menu.

Marinated six to eight hours or overnight, then cooked outdoors, this simple entree keeps the kitchen cool and allows plenty of time for visiting and catching up on family news.

Hot 'N Spicy Chuck Roast and Vegetable Relish.

boneless beef chuck roast is an economical choice for serving a crowd. A 3- to 4-pound boneless beef chuck shoulder or eye roast will serve about 8 to 10 people. This beef roast is enhanced with a tenderizing marinade. In this recipe, the marinade calls for cider vinegar, honey, Worcestershire sauce and hot pepper sauce. Before marinating, soak half of the mixture to be used as a flavorful barbecue sauce with the grilled roast.

Once marinated, the roast is slowly grilled to perfection using an indirect cooking method. Set up the grill with a charcoal fire on either side and a drip pan in the middle. When coals are burning equally on both sides, place the roast over the drip pan. Then cover and grill, adding 15 to 20 coals for each side every 45 minutes to 1 hour to maintain proper heat during cooking.

Overnight, in refrigerator 6 to 8 hours or overnight, if desired), turning occasionally. Cover and refrigerate the remaining marinade.

Prepare grill for indirect cooking: Arrange coals on either side of grill. Place a drip pan between the coals. Remove roast from marinade. Discard marinade. Insert meat thermometer so tip is centered in the thickest part of roast and does not rest in fat.

When coals are medium-low, place roast on grid over drip pan; cover grill. Cook 25 to 30 minutes per pound for medium rare (145 degrees) to medium (155 degrees) or to desired doneness. Add additional coals to each side of grill after 1 hour.

Prepare Vegetable Relish. Remove roast from grill; tent with aluminum foil and allow to stand 15 to 20 minutes or until thermometer registers 150 degrees for medium rare; 160 degrees for medium. Place reserved marinade in small saucepan; heat until hot. Carve roast into thin slices. Serve with Vegetable Relish and hot barbecue sauce.

Test about 4 inches above coals for medium-low with 4 to 5 second hand count.

Group says ads for chicken misleading

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advocacy group said consumers are being misled by the nutritional analyses one of the country's leading poultry distributors is providing on its packages.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest said in filings with the Agriculture Department and the Federal Trade Commission that Purdie Farms based its analyses on one-ounce servings, while a "customary" serving of chicken is about five ounces.

Purdie, based in Salisbury, Md., recently added nutritional data to the labels of its poultry products and has been touting that information in its advertising. The Agriculture Department has allowed the company to do so while the agency puts the final touches on proposed guidelines for nutritional labeling on meat and poultry.

"Disclosing nutrition information based on a tiny, one-ounce serving ... makes Purdie products appear much lower in calories, saturated fat and cholesterol than they actually are," CSPI said in a statement.

CSPI said also that Purdie's analyses are based on skinless poultry, even on packages of chicken with the skin on.

"Consumers may not realize that chicken with skin contains much more fat than the Purdie label indicates," CSPI said.

The Nutritional Labeling and Education Act passed by Congress last year requires that most foods other than meat and poultry carry nutritional data based on "commonly consumed" portions. For instance, CSPI noted, proposed Food and Drug Administration regulations would base nutritional data for fresh seafood on a four-ounce serving. That information will be posted at supermarket fish counters beginning in November.

Under an Agriculture Department proposal, however, nutritional information for meat and poultry, which that agency regulates, would be based on a one-ounce serving.

"If USDA fails to require nutritional labels on meat and poultry to match those on FDA-regulated foods, comparing the nutritional value of, say, fresh fish to fresh poultry or meat will be about as easy as converting dollars into yen," the Japanese currency, Bruce Silverglade, CSPI's legal director, said in a statement.

CSPI spokesman Randolph Harrison said the group sent a six-page letter to the Agriculture Department as an addendum to an earlier filing on the proposed labeling guidelines. CSPI sent a copy of that correspondence to the FTC along with a letter claiming that the Purdie broadcast and print ads calling attention to the nutritional information are allegations of false or misleading claims in advertising.

There was no immediate response from the Agriculture Department.

FTC spokeswoman Bonnie Jansen said that agency would not comment on a complaint filed against a particular company.

SURFSIDE TROPICAL FRUIT KABOBS

- 1 cup medium liquor
- 1/2 cup orange juice
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 honeydew melon, peeled and seeded

should have no trouble if you follow these suggestions:

- Before beginning, freeze the ice cream until very firm. Work quickly when cutting the ice cream into bars, and adding toppings, and whisk the ice cream back to the freezer between steps.
- Open and close the freezer door quickly, especially if you're using a refrigerator-top freezer rather than a deep freezer. Otherwise, your freezer will warm up and your ice cream will melt.
- The chocolate coating must be cooled to room temperature before pouring over the ice cream and bars. If you don't cool the coating completely, it will melt the surface of the ice cream bars, causing the coating to slide off.

FROZEN CARAMEL-PEANUT ICE CREAM BARS

- 1 quart vanilla ice cream
- 1 jar (12.25 oz.) caramel ice cream topping
- 1/2 cup salted peanuts
- 18 oz. chocolate, cut into chunks
- 1/2 tsp. butter
- 8 tsp. cream

Freeze the ice cream in rectangular spring works bowls until brick-soft. Freeze the caramel topping until very thick.

With scissors, cut the carton away from the ice cream and place on a cutting board. Warm a sharp knife in hot water and cut the ice cream into oblong bars the shape and size of candy bars (about 4 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches). Place on baking sheets lined with buttered wax paper. With the back of a spoon, make an indentation down the length of each bar, not quite to each edge. Freeze until very firm.

Remove bars from freezer and spoon caramel topping into indentations. Scatter peanuts over top. Return to freezer until very firm.
Meanwhile, place the chocolate in a microwave-safe bowl. Microwave on high power for 1 1/2 minutes. Stir. Microwave and microwave at 15-second intervals until butter and chocolate are melted. Stir thoroughly to incorporate the butter. Stir in the cream a little at a time until smooth. Cool to room temperature.
When ice cream is firm, coat the bottom of a shallow bowl with cooled chocolate. Place one ice cream bar in the chocolate and pour chocolate over the bar to cover.
Remove from the chocolate with two forks and return to the chilled tray. Repeat with remaining bars, whisking the bars to the freezer as soon as possible. Makes 10 to 12 bars.

HONEYDEW SHRIMP BROCHETTES

- 1/2 cup medium liquor
- 1/2 cup soy sauce
- 1/2 cup fresh lime juice
- 1/2 tablespoon minced, fresh ginger
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes (optional)
- 1 pound fresh, medium-size shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 1 honeydew melon, cut into thin 1-inch-by-4-inch strips
- 1/4 cup minced fresh parsley for garnish
- 10 6-inch wooden skewers, soaked in water

In a mixing bowl, combine liqueur, soy sauce, lime juice, ginger, garlic and red pepper. Add shrimp to bowl. Cover and marinate in the refrigerator for 1 hour. Place each shrimp on a strip of honeydew and thread on skewers. Broil for about 1 minute, until shrimp are cooked through. Serve garnished with parsley.
Makes 4-6 servings.

BLUEBERRY CREAM BARS

- 12 oz. blueberries
- Two-thirds of a cup of cold butter
- Artificial sweetener to taste
- Place blueberries in a metal baking pan and freeze until rock-hard. Place in a food processor. Add half the butter and pulse until berries begin sticking to the sides. Scrape down sides; Add sweetener to taste.
- With motor running, gradually add remaining butter, mixing processing until the mixture begins to form cream, but still has chunks. Spoon into small paper cups or molds. Insert craft sticks and freeze until firm.
- Adapted from "Slim Cuisine" by Sue Kretzman and the editors of Consumer Reports Books.

FROZEN STRAWBERRY-AMARETTO POPS

- 1 pint strawberries
- 2 tbsp. amaretto liqueur

Jones

- Continued from C1
- 1/2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
- 1/2 tablespoon chopped fresh marjoram
- 1/2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil (don't use lemon basil here)
- some fresh ground pepper

Melt the butter in a skillet and add the rest of the ingredients. Stir and let gently simmer to thicken a bit. Toss this with fresh hot pasta and serve immediately.

It's a wonderful side dish of barbecued ribs.

You know you really don't have to cook to make a wonderful sauce for pasta straight from your garden. This next recipe can be varied according to what is available.

For example, use oregano rather than basil as the main herb, use any of the parsleys, just make sure everything is absolutely fresh-out-of-the-garden.

UNCOOKED HERB TOMATO SAUCE FOR PASTA

- 4 medium garlic cloves, finely minced
- 2 pounds tomatoes (Roma's are best) to peel and definitely seed them for this, then chop
- 1 cup fresh basil leaves, chopped
- 1 cup fresh Italian parsley, finely chopped
- 1 cup freshly grated parmesan cheese
- 1/2 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 1/2 salt and pepper to taste
- Combine everything and mix well.
- Let stand an hour or two at room temperature to meld flavors. Toss with freshly cooked pasta and use extra parmesan cheese. Serve immediately.

Use about a pound of pasta with the above recipes and they will serve 4 to 6.
Enjoy the summer bounty.

Most common cause of yellow leaves in area is iron deficiency

Yellow leaves on plants can be caused by several different things. However, in our climate the most common cause is a shortage of iron.

Iron deficiency symptoms show first on the youngest leaves. Leaves become light green and then yellow with the veins remaining dark green. If the older leaves turn yellow, without dark veins, the cause is most likely nitrogen deficiency.

Iron is one of 16 nutrient elements necessary for plant growth. Although there is usually plenty of iron in most soils in the Intermountain area, plants often cannot obtain sufficient quantities for normal growth. Iron becomes tied up in insoluble compounds when the soil pH is high or alkaline.

The best long-term solution to iron deficiency is to lower the soil pH or make it more acidic. The best way to make soil more acid is to apply sulfur. There is some sulfur in most mixed fertilizers. However, pure agricultural sulfur can be purchased from some nurseries and most agricultural fertilizer dealers.

Sulfur is applied to the soil at the rate of about three to five pounds per 100 square feet. It should be cultivated into the soil.

Organic matter such as peat moss, bark dust, leaves, or grass clippings also reduce soil pH when added to the soil.

Changing soil pH is usually a slow process, so it may be several months before a noticeable change in leaf color takes place after applying sulfur or organic matter. It is still the best long-term solution to the problem. Our alkaline water gradually raises the pH, so yearly applications are needed, especially on sensitive plants like raspberries and roses.

Yellow young leaves can be made green more quickly by applying iron in a form which the plants can absorb. An iron sulfate solution sprayed on the plant is often absorbed through the leaves. Iron chelate can also be applied to either the leaves or the soil. Several brands are available.

Yellow older leaves can be improved more quickly simply by adding any fertilizer which contains nitrogen. A third major cause of yellow leaves is overwatering.

When the soil is kept too moist by frequent irrigation, there is not sufficient air in the soil for proper root growth. The roots are unable to take up enough nutrients for normal top growth and leaves become yellow.

Leaky roof often start of repairs

Q. Our roof leaked over the bathroom and a roofer fixed it. However, he said insulation over several rooms was soaked. The paint on the bathroom ceiling is also stained and ruined. How do I repair this mess?

— J. Harrington

Do it yourself
Gene Austin

A. Wet insulation is useless as insulation and, depending on how much water was absorbed, might take a long time drying out. If it stays wet very long, it can also cause mildew, musty odors and possibly even structural damage. For these reasons, it is best to remove the wet insulation if it is accessible. In many attics, blanket insulation or loose-fill insulation are fairly easy to remove. Removal will let the ceiling and structural members in the attic have a chance to dry out thoroughly. If the old insulation is compacted and soiled, it is best to discard it and install fresh material after everything is dried out.

No painting or ceiling repairs should be attempted until the ceiling material is fully dry. Most damage to the ceiling's gypsum board or plaster, such as small cracks or soft spots, can be repaired with patching plaster or spackling compound. If sizable areas are damaged, cut out the damaged sections and install new panels of gypsum board. Use wallboard tape and joint compound to blend in and seal edges of repaired areas.

Before repainting the ceiling, scrape any loose paint from old ceiling surfaces and sand, and give the entire ceiling a coat of a stain-killer primer. The stain killer will seal water stains and repaired areas. An acrylic-latex or alkylid paint can be used over the primer.

Q. Is it possible to repair a cultured-marble bathtub that has a long crack in the side. The crack goes completely through and leaks. Professional tub-repair people I've talked with want $25 an inch to repair the crack and will warrant it only a year. The installer and manufacturer can't be reached. — M. Peterson

A. If you are not too picky about the appearance, you can probably seal the leaking crack at least temporarily with Plumber's Goo, a caulk-type adhesive sealant that has a cloudy, semi-transparent appearance when cured. Apply a thick bead of Goo along the crack on the inside of the tub. I have used Goo to patch leaking buckets and sinks, among other things, and it is very strong and completely waterproof if directions are followed carefully. Plumber's Goo is sold at some home centers and hardware stores, and is made by Electric Products Inc., 1111 Watsoncenter Rd., Carson, Calif. 90745.

A possible danger, however, is that the weight of water against the cracked side will eventually cause the tub to fall apart. If this happens, there could be water damage and, if someone is in the tub, possible injury. For this reason, you should consider replacing the tub.

Q. I want to make sure my house is well insulated before winter, and am getting conflicting advice about the walls, which have fiberglass insulation in them. Is it possible to add blown-in insulation to these walls? — R. Glover

A. Fiberglass wall insulation generally fills the entire wall cavity. It would be impractical and a waste of money to attempt to add blown-in insulation. However, it is often possible to add blown-in insulation to fiberglass in unroofed attics.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF
"There is no substitute for talent. Industry and all the virtues are of no avail."
— Aldous Huxley.
After the defense plays three rounds of diamonds, where should South look to find his ninth trick? An expert has an easy answer. However, even a novice can succeed if he applies a little pressure.
The defenders took the king and ace of diamonds, and West led a third round with an air of confidence. Certain that the heart ace was with West, South decided to try for a 3-3 spade split. When this failed, South exhaled his clubs and led the heart-queen, but by this time West was all eyes and South was held to only eight tricks.
South did well to pick up the fact that West's smugness advertised the one more small step. Before cashing the spades, South should have run all four clubs, discarding a heart from dummy.
What does this do to West? On the third club he can discard a heart or a diamond. If he discards a spade, the suit will run, and if he discards a diamond, South can then lead a heart honor to cinch his nine tricks.
Some spectators come automatically. Even a novice can pull one off if he cashes in the right order.
