DAMASCUS, Syria — Alternately cracking jokes and confused, American Edward Tracy emerged Sunday from Beirut after 1,757 days in captivity in what officials say may be a breakthrough in the Lebanon hostage crisis.

Syrian intelligence agents collected Tracy, 60, at an undisclosed location in the Lebanese capital and drove him to Damascus. U.S. officials whisked him from Syria to Europe in hours.

Friends who knew Tracy as an eccentric self-styled poet and part-time Koran salesman before his kidnapping in Beirut Oct. 21, 1986, said he appeared perhaps a bit older and tired — but largely unchanged by nearly five years in captivity of Muslim fundamentalists.

He sported a slight pot-belly and long white hair. But Tracy was clean-shaven, unlike a photograph of the Vermont native in a beard dropped off at a Western news agency in Beirut on Sunday, just hours before his release.

"I'm ready for the 100-yard dash, if my wife shows up," Tracy quipped as he left Syria's Foreign Ministry. U.S. officials met with him briefly at the U.S. ambassador's residence before he caught a special evacuation flight to a U.S.-military hospital in Wiesbaden, Germany, for comprehensive medical testing.

Turning to a phalanx of photographers, shooting frame after frame, he also cracked: "Thank you very much for this lovely turnout of all you people. I'll pay $100 for each magazine cover."

He earlier told Syrian television: "I'm surprised the world is still here. I'm really happy to see a tree, hear an airplane, hear an automobile. I am amazed and baffled by it. I can't find the words. I must find words."

Tracy, who had lived and traveled abroad for years before he moved to Beirut in the early 1980s, was known to friends as an Arabic speaker who had converted to Islam before his capture. He is a divorced father of three daughters. His elderly mother lives in Burlington, Vt.

He also said in the Syrian TV interview that he passed his time as a hostage playing cards and drinking tea. He provided no details on fellow American captive Joseph Cicippio, the comptroller of American University in Beirut.

Both Tracy and Cicippio, also 60, had been held since 1985 by the Revolutionary Justice Organization, a shadowy pro-Iranian Muslim fundamentalist group similar to, if not a pseudonym for, the Islamic Jihad.

On Saturday, Cicippio's Muslim captors released a photograph of the Pennsylvania native, generating hopes that he too would

Forest supervisor leaves the Sawtooth with eye on future

By N.S. Nokkenved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — He's bailing out, but not in a Forest Service pamphlet. Ron Stoleson's leaving town for a new job.

Stoleson, who once tested parachutes for the Forest Service, ended nine years as supervisor of the Sawtooth National Forest Friday. He's moving on to Ogden, Utah, to become deputy director of a new Forest Service program in state and private forestry at the Intermountain regional office.

From parachute tester to supervisor, Stoleson has devoted most of his 55 years to the Forest Service. "I knew long before I got out of high school what I wanted to be," he said.

Stoleson's tenure in Twin Falls was marked by completion of a landmark long-range land management plan for the 1,805,746-acre Sawtooth forest, and by a very public controversy between Twin Falls District Ranger Don Oman and a group of Oakley-area ranchers who graze their cattle on Forest Service land in the South Hills.

But now that he's leaving, Stoleson feels the forest is in "better condition than when he arrived."

He concedes that "sometimes improvement comes in small chunks," but it is the direction that counts.

Born in Viroqua, Wis., near Lu Cross, in 1936, Stoleson grew up in Rock Island in northern Illinois. While earning his forestry degree from the University of Montana in Missoula, he worked summers for Forest Service.

As part of his college training, he worked on trail and timber crews, as a fire lookout and as a smokejumper — a firefighter who parachutes to remote forest fires.

Stoleson officially joined the Forest Service before he even finished his studies at Montana. His first job after graduation was at the Forest Service's technology development center in Missoula where he tested parachutes.

Parachutes were tested with dummies before Stoleson strapped one on. The work included finding better ways to drop cargo and people from airplanes.

One of those improvements, known as a "deployment bag," helps reduce the shock to the jumper when the chute opens, he said. Earlier chutes had opened with a snap when the canopy opened and abruptly stopped the jumper's rapid descent.

"It just pops up," Stoleson said.

The center also worked on better ways of growing trees and collecting seeds, developing a machine that shakes whole trees to loosen seeds.

Stoleson also helped develop a portable fire shelter, a folding metallic fabric under which firefighters seek refuge if they are overrun by a forest fire. And he worked on the non-flammable fabric called Nomex, used in smokejumper uniforms and firefighter clothes.

Stoleson in 1970s, he became district ranger in what is now part of the Kootenai National Forest in Montana. From there he moved to the Salmon River District of the Nez Perce Forest in Riggins, which later was combined with the Slate Creek District.

After his stint as a district ranger, he transferred to Forest Service

U.S. leads world in selling weapons to Third World

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. weapons sales to the Third World more than doubled last year, making America the world's top arms supplier, an annual congressional report has found.

The growth in U.S. arms sales — from nearly $8 billion in 1989 to $18.5 billion in 1990 — was attributed to the Iraqi threat in the Persian Gulf and to shrinking Pentagon budgets. These smaller budgets are forcing defense contractors to sell abroad or go under, said the report by the Congressional Research Service.

For the first time since 1983, the United States ranked at the top of the list of arms suppliers to Third World nations. It accounted for 44.8 percent of all weapons agreements, up from 23.6 percent the previous year, said the report, written by Richard F. Grimmer, a defense expert.

This data comes as the administration is discussing an initiative announced earlier this year by President Bush to curb weapons sales to the Middle East by the five top suppliers — the United States, Soviet Union, China, England and France.

The plan, discussed at a Paris conference last month of all five seller-nations, was prompted by the massive Iraqi military buildup of the 1980s which enabled its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The Iraqi invasion, however, led to accelerated arms purchases by Kuwait's neighbor, Saudi Arabia, which also felt threatened.

The value of 1990 U.S. weapons agreements with Saudi Arabia — $14.5 billion — exceeded the total worth of all Soviet arms deals with the Third World in the same year — $12.1 billion, according to Grimmer's data, collected from the defense department and other sources.

Not all the sales with the Saudis were

1st sockeye in 2 years reaches Redfish Lake

The Times-News

REDFISH LAKE — For the first time in two years, an adult sockeye salmon has made its way up to a Fish and Game Department weir just south of Redfish Lake.

The 21-inch-long sockeye was captured on Redfish Lake Creek at the department's Sawtooth Fish Hatchery at about 7:30 a.m. Sunday, according to Tom Herron, fish culturist with the department. "It looks like a male," he said.

He said it appeared to be healthy. The salmon was on his way to spawning grounds in Redfish Lake, which got its name from the thousands of salmon that used to swim in its waters. No adult sockeye have been seen here in two years, but many had hoped at least one mating pair would find its way home to spawn this summer.

The lone sockeye captured Sunday is being held at an indoor holding vat at the fish hatchery for now.

Fish and Game officials plan to hold at least several of the sockeye captured in the weir for an artificial breeding program.

But officials said they won't decide how many salmon to keep for captive breeding until after they see how many return.

Herron has been keeping vigil over the weir after several pair of sockeye salmon were spotted at Lower Granite Dam, 400 miles downstream from Redfish Lake.

The weir is a fence that stretches across the creek. The only passage upstream through the weir is into a caged area from which the fish can be removed.

Historically, the sockeye return to their native spawning grounds at Redfish Lake between early August and late October.

Shuttle Atlantis arrives safely back in Florida

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis glided through a clear, aug sky and returned home to Florida on Sunday with five astronauts who dispatched a satellite and conducted research to help future space voyagers.

Shuttle commander John Blaha invited everyone in Mission Control to a party later in the week and told them to take the rest of the day off. "Everybody can go home after all it is Sunday morning," Blaha said before climbing out of the cockpit.

Atlantis landed at Kennedy Space Center at 8:23 a.m. It was the first shuttle mission since the 1986 Challenger accident to have Kennedy as the primary touchdown site and the first Florida landing in 42 shuttle flights.

The shuttle circled the world 142 times during its nine-day journey, which began Aug. 2, and traveled 3,676,369 miles.

Welcome home, Atlantis. Congratulations on a picture-perfect mission," Mission Control's Bob Cabana said after Atlantis rolled to a stop.

About 700 guests gathered in 83-degree heat for its arrival.

The four men and one woman were whisked from the landing strip to a medical clinic. Physicians wanted to check the astronauts before they readjusted to gravity; one of the mission's major goals was to shed more light on the body's adaptation to weightlessness.

A failed cooling system for one of three auxiliary power units did not hamper Atlantis' fiery plunge to Earth. The power unit simply was run for less time, shuttle director Robert Crippen said.

Sunday's smooth landing demonstrated the shuttle's ability to return safely to Florida when the weather is good, said Crippen, a former astronaut.

Bell joins school restructuring effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell has a vision of using technology, academic competition and parental involvement to solve the crisis in American education he helped identify eight years ago.

Bell applauded President Bush and his reform program to invent "New American Schools" by the year 2000. But he insisted schools need to be shaped up today, "using today's teachers and today's traditional organizational structure."

"We offer a practical and common sense vision of how to shape up our schools," Bell said of the book he coauthored with veteran teacher Donna Elmquist.

They set forth a three-step approach that Bell said "will bring new energy and power to transform our schools and our country into a learning society."

The book, "How to Shape Up Our Nation's Schools," recommends updating schools with the latest technology, motivating students through frequent interschool academic competition and forcing parents to sign contracts pledging to work with their child.

Bell, education secretary from 1981 to 1985, is best known for his leadership in establishing the commission that produced the landmark report, "A Nation At Risk" which helped start the school reform movement.

The biggest fault of the initial reforms, Bell said, "was that we tried to shape up the schools from the top down and we tried to do it with a whole host of changes."

"We had so many of them that we didn't do them thoroughly and efficiently," said Bell. "As a result, we had a disappointing reform movement."

Now, Bell is excited about the new momentum for changing and improving the nation's education system.

Technologically updating the nation's schools is the centerpiece of the ideas he and Elmquist share. The proposal suggests levying a statewide or school district bond to raise enough money to pay $916 per student to transform each school and train teachers for the new roles.

"We need to have one computer with every three students," Bell explained. "Students ought to spend a third of their time mastering the curriculum on an individualized basis, interacting with a very smart and effective computer software. We think this will restructure the schools and bring about a revolution in how teachers teach," how students learn and how school officials reach out to parents.

If each school district would completely integrate with technology a certain percentage of schools each year, Bell said, all of the 110,000 schools in 15,000 school districts nationwide would be converted into a high-tech institution in the next three to five years.

Officials fear sunken ship

SEATTLE (AP) — An oil spill from a sunken Japanese ship near Cape Flattery, the northwest tip of the main United States.

The fish processor is leaking hundreds of gallons of oil daily. It sank July 22 after it collided with a Chinese freighter.

The U.S. Coast Guard estimated that about 70,000 gallons have leaked already and that more than 200,000 gallons of oil remained in the wreck.

Case could be trouble for new U.S. bank laws

NEW YORK (AP) — The struggle to control an estimated $310 million of assets in Bank of America and Commerce International's U.S. operations has troubling implications for the nation's banking laws, regulators say.

BCCI's liquidators want a federal bankruptcy judge in New York to bar new lawsuits against the bank's U.S. assets and prevent further regulatory fines as liquidators try to pay off depositors and creditors worldwide.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge James Gartry on Friday agreed to temporarily prohibit new lawsuits against BCCI until a Nov. 1 hearing.

Richard P. Ziegler, a lawyer for the New York State Banking Department, said BCCI's foreign liquidators in essence want to skirt the way banks have been liquidated in the United States since the 1930s.

The liquidators' request raises issues of national importance which, if resolved in their favor, "will have far-reaching and fundamentally destructive consequences to this country's banking regulator framework," Ziegler's firm said in court papers.

Peace remains shaky among Croats, Serbs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Renewed fighting on Sunday left two Croatian policemen dead in a setback to a tenuous cease-fire that had kept an uneasy peace in Croatia. Federal officials monitoring the truce, however, reported no big fights between warring Serbs and Croats. And the new violence did not block an exchange of prisoners. Croatian police were reported to have killed a fifth person, an armed Serb, in the troubled east Croatian region of Slavonia on Saturday. The uneasy peace in Croatia had held since Wednesday. Ten Serbs and 10 Croats were exchanged near Djakovo in Slavonia, Belgrade television reported. The Croats had been held in the Serb stronghold of Borovo Selo, and the Serbs in the regional center of Osijek, the state news agency Tanjug said. Three of the Serbs interviewed by Belgrade TV bore knife marks on their faces and claimed to have been threatened with torture. They said they had been held 20-40 days. There was no independent confirmation of their claims. Sunday's swap was the second in as many days. Three Serbs and two Croats were exchanged late Saturday at Vinkovci in Slavonia. Tanjug said 70 other prisoners would be swapped Monday. More than 200 people have died in fighting since Croatia declared independence June 25. Irfan Ajanovic, a member of the federal commission monitoring the cease-fire, had no confirmation of the new deaths reported by Croatian media. "There have been no contacts between the belligerent sides, and that is what is important to emphasize," Ajanovic told a news conference. Federal officials have emphasized that snipers may be beyond the control of Croatian security forces or rebel Serbs.

Albanians ready to leave days of suffering in Italy

BARI, Italy (AP) — Hungry, exhausted and dehydrated after four days under a broiling sun, groups of Albanians on Sunday battled each other and police to board buses to return to the homeland they fled. But others promised to defy the Italian government's hard-line policy toward the 12,000, would-be refugees who crossed the Adriatic Sea last week. Some Albanians being kept at a soccer stadium in Bari brandished sticks and wooden rods to keep away police. Authorities hoped to send nearly all the approximately 5,000 remaining Albanians back to their impoverished homeland on Sunday. The Interior Ministry said the operation was moving speedily toward conclusion with the cooperation of the Albanian government. The ministry said there had been 50 repatriation flights on Saturday and aircraft were leaving every 15 minutes for Tirana on Sunday. Italy, which has received three big waves of Albanian boat people in the past year, hopes that the forced repatriation will discourage others from coming. It allowed the previous arrivals to stay. At the Bari port, where at least 3,000 Albanians had been jammed together for four days with little food, many Albanians said their dream of a new life in Italy had become a nightmare. "We are all hungry. Everyone has sunstroke. There are no bathrooms, no beds, nothing, nothing, nothing," protested Dr. Lambi Lallia of Durres, one of the refugees.

Peruvian rebels kill 11 police

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Eleven policemen died in a six-hour shootout with 200 leftist rebels in the southern highlands, police said Sunday. Gen. Raul Chavez said a column of Maoist Shining Path rebels on Friday attacked a police post in Laramate, 210 miles southeast of Lima in the department of Ayacucho.

Chavez said seven policemen were wounded. The number of rebels dead is unclear, police said. News of the attack reached Lima more than 24 hours later because of the area's remoteness. More than 23,000 people have died since the Shining Path took up arms in 1980.

Inmates decapitate prisoner

EL PUERTO DE SANTA MARIA, Spain (AP) — Rioting inmates in a maximum-security prison decapitated a fellow prisoner Sunday and took four guards hostage before giving up to police, a prison spokesman said. The riot at Puerto I on the Bay of Cadiz was the latest in a series that have swept Spain's 82 overcrowded prisons, where drugs and AIDS are rampant. It was not clear how inmate Miguel Anguita Martinez was decapitated, but rioters in Spanish prisons usually arm themselves with handmade knives and other metal objects.

Missionaries killed

ZAMBOANGA, Philippines (AP) — A slant against Islam that has sparked a grenade attack that killed two women and injured more than 30 people during a performance by a Christian missionary group, officials said Sunday. Police identified the dead as Karen Gotsdiner, 19, of New Zealand and Maaza Sofia Siegfriedson, 19, of Sweden. They were among 250 members of Operation Mobilization, an evangelical Protestant group that arrived July 31. Witnesses said unknown assailants hurled two grenades at the stage Saturday during an entertainment program at the city wharf.

Saudi sheik accused of child marriage

Indian police on Saturday freed 10-year-old Ameena.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A 60-year-old Saudi Arabian sheik appeared in court Sunday, a day after he was arrested for marrying a 10-year-old Indian girl and trying to take her home with him. The girl's cries for help alerted passengers on a domestic flight Saturday, and led to his arrest minutes after the plane touched down in New Delhi. She had allegedly been sold by her impoverished family. The case was unusual, but not unheard-of. Newspapers occasionally carry stories of young poor girls being sold, with a growing reported demand in the Persian Gulf in recent years for young Indian Muslim brides to be married.

Arranged marriages between children are more common, but in most cases the children stay at home until puberty. The legal age to marry in India is 18, although the law is only sporadically enforced. Ameena Begum was married Thursday to Sheik Yahya H.M. al-Saghis after he had paid $4,077 to Begum's father, a rickshaw driver in the southern city of Hyderabad, The Sunday Times newspaper reported. The amount would be roughly equal to six years' earnings for a rickshaw driver. The Times said Ameena was the second-oldest in a family of six daughters and two sons. Investigators said the sheik was suspected to be part of a slave-running gang. Police told Magistrate V.K. Maheshwari the Saudi sheik had photographs of four young girls in his possession, including one of Ameena Begum. Along with a marriage certificate for Begum, al-Saghis also was holding one for a 32-year-old woman whose whereabouts are unknown. Maheshwari ordered al-Saghis, a stout man with a stringy beard, to remain in police custody for two days, pending further investigation. Police said more time was needed for interrogation because al-Saghis did not know much Hindi or English and police needed an Arabic-speaking interpreter. During the hearing, the sheik said in broken Hindi that he was ill and repeatedly asked to be allowed to return to his country. He was apprehended minutes after flying with Ameena from Hyderabad to New Delhi on Saturday, The Times newspaper reported. They apparently were intending to change planes and fly on to the Middle East. After boarding the plane, Ameena began crying and said she had been forced to marry the Saudi and wanted to get away from him. Passengers complained to the crew, and a flight attendant helped inform the control tower in New Delhi of the problem. Al-Saghis was charged with illegally marrying a minor. According to his lawyer, Feroze Khan, the Saudi was told by Ameena's family that the girl was old enough to be married.

Neo-Nazi leader warns he's preparing to fight

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The head of a neo-Nazi group said Sunday the government could no longer guarantee national security, and he pledged to prepare for conflict with the white authorities and the African National Congress. Eugene Terreblanche, head of the pro-apartheid Afrikaner Resistance Movement, said the three deaths and dozens of injuries suffered by supporters in a Friday night clash with police made additional confrontations inevitable. "We are preparing for the oncoming revolution," the husky, bearded Terreblanche said. "We are preparing to fight." The battle in Ventersdorp, 80 miles west of Johannesburg, marked the first time pro-apartheid activists had been killed in a clash with government forces. The fighting threatened to unleash the deep divisions within the dominant white Afrikaners over the dismantling of apartheid. Terreblanche, wearing his customary khaki uniform, demanded that President F.W. de Klerk hold a whites-only election so the white minority could give its verdict on his race reforms. De Klerk is not required to hold a ballot until 1994, and says he wants to negotiate a new constitution by then that will extend voting rights to the 30 million black majority. Terreblanche said that unless a whites-only poll is held, "the situation will get worse, and then could come war." The charismatic Terreblanche has thousands of loyal supporters, mostly among rural whites, who are heavily armed and have military training. The movement is not considered strong enough to pose a serious threat to the government, but it does have the power to wage a sabotage campaign.

Protesters block fast trains in France

MARSEILLE, France (AP) — Police fired tear-gas Sunday to disperse protesters who blocked train tracks in several areas, stopping 40 trains and leaving 20,000 passengers stranded. The demonstrators were protesting plans to lay track for high-speed trains through wine-producing regions of Provence, a scenic area of southern France. Hundreds of protesters blocked train tracks at Arles, Senas, Miramas, Sorgues and elsewhere to demand that an independent commission review the French national railway's project.

The Night/Weekend-Initial-Minute rates for the 125-292 and 293+ mileage bands are also increasing; as is the Night/Weekend Additional Minute rate for the 293+ mileage band. All other rates are decreasing. In addition, US Sprint is increasing the per-call surcharge for in-state FONCARD calls from $.55 to $.75.

US Sprint will also file a tariff revision mid-August to be effective September 1, 1991, to 1) reduce all Person-to-Person operator surcharges from $4.10 to $3.50; 2) increase the LEC Calling Card Station-to-Station and Mechanized Calling Card surcharges from $.70 to $.80, and 3) add an additional Operator Dialed Surcharge of $.75 which will apply in addition to all Station-to-Station and Person-to-Person Operator Surcharges when the customer has the ability to dial all digits necessary for call completion but dials instead "0", "00", or 10333 + "0" to reach the US Sprint operator to have the operator complete the call. The Operator Dialed Surcharge will be applied to all Operator Service calls completed by an operator except for 1) calls which cannot be completed by the customer due to equipment failure or trouble on the US Sprint network; 2) when a US Sprint FONCARD is being used, or 3) when a LEC Calling Card is used.

Glenns Ferry man dies in 1-car accident

MOUNTAIN HOME - A Glenns Ferry man was killed after being thrown from the pickup he was driving early Saturday morning, an Elmore County sheriff's deputy said.

James Richard Viner, 37, was southbound on South Main about two miles south of Mountain Home when he drifted to the right of the roadway, said deputy Greg Berry.

The car rolled several times when Viner swerved back on the road and overcorrected, Berry said.

Viner was pronounced dead at the scene, he said.

Soda Springs man killed in accident near Burley

BURLEY - A Soda Springs man was killed Saturday when the car he was riding in rolled over on Interstate 84 west of Burley.

Gregory Norcross, 34, was killed in the accident, according to Idaho State Police in Twin Falls.

According to the ISP, Vickie Norcross, 31, was driving the car in the left-hand lane about 5 p.m. Saturday when she went off the highway. She overcorrected, and the car rolled over two and a half times.

Norcross, who was not wearing a seatbelt, was thrown from the car, as was a three-year-old baby, Patience, according to ISP. Christopher Norcross, 2, was also not wearing a seatbelt but stayed in the car.

Vickey, Christopher, and Patience Norcross were taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital, where they remained overnight.

They were released today, a hospital spokesman said.

Police search for vehicle that killed youth in hit-and-run

RUPERT - The Minidoka County sheriff's office is investigating a hit-and-run accident which killed a 16-year-old Rupert boy late Saturday.

Authorities said Dennis Roger Mortensen was walking along Idaho Highway 25 near Minico High School west of Rupert when he was struck by a vehicle about 11:15 p.m.

County Sheriff Arvid Hansen said the youth was taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert, where he died a little over an hour later.

Minidoka County Sheriff's Deputy James Wardel said authorities are looking for a copper-colored vehicle, possibly a pickup, with a broken headlight and damage to its right front.

Salt Lake City residents injured in Saturday accident

SNOWVILLE, Utah - Three Salt Lake City residents survived a one-vehicle accident Saturday afternoon near the Utah border.

Maxine Bray, 50, was reported in stable condition Sunday at Bannock Medical Center in Pocatello, where she was flown by helicopter. Her passengers, daughter Rachael Calhoun, 21, and grandson Joshua Heyworth, 22 months, were taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital. They were released Sunday.

According to Idaho State Police, Bray was driving just east of the Juniper rest area about 5:30 p.m. Saturday when she drifted off the road.

She overcorrected and rolled the car 1 1/2 times, ISP said.

HANSEN - A Twin Falls man was in stable condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after a motorcycle accident Saturday night near Magic Mountain.

According to the Twin Falls County sheriff's office, Terry Humphrey, 31, 1015 E.ter Ave. W, and a passenger were riding down Magic Mountain Road Saturday night shortly after 10 p.m. when Humphrey missed a curve and plunged 27 feet into Rock Creek Canyon.

It took sheriff's police and paramedics an hour to extricate Humphrey from the ravine; said Dep. Don Newman.

Humphrey broke his arm and possibly his hip, in the accident, Newman said. His passenger, Jon Wilcox, of 649 Apache Way, Twin Falls, suffered only minor cuts and bruises, Newman said.

"The days passed because they were wearing helmets," he said.

"There was a big chunk out of the front of Humphrey's helmet." Excessive speed or alcohol did not appear to be factors in the accident, which happened six or seven miles north of the Magic Mountain ski lodge, Newman said.

GOP Senate hopefuls line up to succeed Symms

By Drew DeSilver - Times-News writer

U.S. Senate seats don't come open very often. When they do, the temptation on the part of ambitious politicians to grab the brass ring can be irresistible.

Steve Symms' announcement last week that he would not seek a third term has cleared the way for several Idaho Republicans to run for his seat.

Only one person, Boise stockbroker Milton Erhart, has announced his candidacy.

Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne has indicated that he'll decide whether or not to enter the race early this coming week. Former state Attorney General Jim Jones said he will make his intentions known sometime the first half of September.

Others who have been mentioned as possible candidates are Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter; 1986 gubernatorial candidate and former Lt. Gov. David Leroy; State Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls; and former State Sen. Rod Beck, now owner of a Boise real estate company. Whoever wins the Republican nomination next May will likely face Democratic U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings in the general election. Though he has not made his official announcement, the four-term congressman has filed for the Senate seat and is expected to win the Democratic nomination with little or no opposition.

Jones: Water issues will figure largely in his campaign

JIM JONES
Age: 49
Occupation: Attorney in private practice in Boise and Twin Falls.
Previous political experience: Idaho attorney general, 1982-1990; ran in 1990 Republican Senate primary, losing to Larry Craig; ran in 2nd Congressional District Republican primary in 1978 and 1980, losing both times to Rep. George Hansen; aide to U.S. Sen. Len Jordan, 1970-1972.

Other experience: Attorney in private practice in Jerome, 1973-1982.
What kind of campaign will he run? Jones says that if he runs, it'll be a "grass-roots, low-budget" campaign. It'll have to be, since Jones has never had much luck in raising campaign funds.

Larry Craig outspent him by better than 10-to-1 during last year's Senate primary, and Jones said he expects Kempthorne (whom he calls "the insider candidate") will also outfund and outstep him. Jones won't be helped by the fact that as attorney general he antagonized such traditional big contributors as Idaho Power and the retail gasoline and oil dealers.

But Jones says "I can get more bang for the campaign buck than anyone in the state... and he promises a hard-fighting

• Plans a low-budget campaign
• Has similar support base as Stallings
• Clashed in past with governor

when he took on Idaho Power in the Swan Falls controversy, says water issues would be at or near the center of his candidacy. He would also advocate term limits for congressmen, outlawing political-action committees, and giving states the right to regulate out-of-state campaign contributions. If he runs, he says, he will challenge the other candidates to a ceiling on expenditures.

How would he do against Stallings? Two Democrats, state party chairman Wetherell and State Auditor J.D. Williams, say Jones would be the strongest Republican candidate to replace Symms. "He's a great campaigner, he's won statewide office, and he has a real following, especially in southern and eastern Idaho," says Williams, who lost to Jones in the 1982 attorney general's Erhart: Will 3rd time be the charm for businessman?

MILTON E. ERHART
Age: 51
Occupation: First vice-president for investments at Prudential-Bache Securities in Boise.
Previous political experience: Ran for governor in 1990 Republican primary, losing to Roger Fairchild; ran unsuccessfully for Idaho House in 1986.

Other experience: Stockbroker at Dean-Witter, 1984-1986; insurance agent, 1983-1984; Seventh-day Adventist minister, 1963-1982.

What kind of campaign will he run? Erhart describes himself as "very conservative on fiscal matters and moderate on personal liberties," and indicates that he will position himself as the conservative candidate in the Republican primary. He promises a "hard-hitting, people-oriented" campaign. "I'm a straight shooter," Erhart says. "I call them as I see them."

The self-styled outsider says he learned two big lessons from his third-place finish in last year's gubernatorial primary: how to raise money effectively and the importance of working hard in the Magic Valley and eastern Idaho. Erhart promises that Magic Valley residents will see a lot of him in the next nine months.

• A pro-choice candidate
• Could have a tough time winning rural vote
• Promises to stick with the issues

What issues will he talk about? Erhart says four or five main issues will dominate his campaign. Although he didn't want to discuss them in depth until his official candidacy announcement, he indicated that two of his causes would be term limits for public officials and getting Social Security and Medicare off the federal budget. Last year, Erhart stood out as the only pro-choice candidate in the Republican primary.

How would he run against Stallings? When asked if he sees himself as the dark horse in this year's race, Erhart says that may have been true before last year's campaign but is so no longer. However, he'd have a hard time finding anybody to agree with him.

Several major Republican figures interviewed for this news story refused to talk about Erhart on the record; one said, "I can't say something nice about someone, I'd rather say nothing," Stupilus and others say they can envision

Kempthorne: A rising star who needs name recognition here

DIRK KEMPTHORNE
Age: 39
Occupation: Mayor of Boise since 1986.
Previous political experience: Managed Phil Batt's 1982 gubernatorial campaign.

Other experience: Idaho public affairs director, FMC Corp., 1981-1985; executive vice president, Idaho Home Builders Association, 1978-1981; assistant to director, Idaho Department of Lands, 1976-1978.

What kind of campaign will he run? Most observers rate Kempthorne as the man to beat, if he decides to run. He is so popular in Boise that no one challenged him for re-election in 1989. Democrats and Republicans alike praise him for leading Boise's economic revival.

• Concerned with quality-of-life issues
• Likely to inherit Symms' top aides
• Works well with others, even Democrats

He would also find it easy to raise campaign money, which he'd need to make himself known outside the Boise area. Larry Eastland, former finance chairman for the state party, said Kempthorne would run "a noncombative, insiders' campaign" that would take advantage of his low-key, genial personality.

Kempthorne is seen as a rising star by many Republicans, and he would have the backing of most party leaders if he ran.

Larry Eastland, former finance chairman for the state party, said Kempthorne would run "a noncombative, insiders' campaign" that would take advantage of his low-key, genial personality.

What issues would he talk about? As mayor, Kempthorne has been associated with local quality-of-life issues, such as redeveloping downtown Boise and fixing up the city's infrastructure. He could point to those accomplishments as evidence of his effectiveness and leadership ability.

However, Kempthorne hasn't articulated positions on any statewide or national issues; something he'll need to do soon. "His challenge will be to define his vision and stake out a political agenda he can become known for," Eastland said. Added Mike Wetherell, Boise city councilman and chairman of the state Democratic Party: "It's entirely different from the kind of mess he's run

Cannon not hurt by marijuana smoke

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Republican U.S. Senate candidate Joe Cannon's admission that he once smoked marijuana as a teenager doesn't appear to have hurt his political chances, a new public opinion survey shows.

The copyright Deseret News-KSL-TV poll, published Sunday, reveals that the former Geneva Steel chairman leads other possible GOP candidates in the experiment with relishing Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

The same survey has Cannon finishing second overall to Democrat Scott Matheson Jr., son of the popular late governor.

Cannon, 42, has acknowledged puffing on a marijuana cigarette since 1967, his freshman year at Brigham Young University. He said he later turned himself in for the Jefferson.

Pollster Dan Jones & Associates found that 80 percent of Utahns said Cannon's experiment with marijuana 24 years ago makes no difference in whether they would support his senatorial bid.

Nine percent said Cannon's drug incident made them much less or somewhat less likely to vote for him, while 8 percent said his drug experimentation made them somewhat or much more likely to vote for him, Jones found.

The poll was taken before revelations late this past week that Cannon accidentally violated federal election laws by individually donating more than $25,000 to political candidates and organizations.

Federal Election Commission records show Cannon donated $32,750 last year, some in gifts to candidates running for the same office.

Cannon said he has instructed his attorney to report the violation to the FEC and see what needs to be done to correct the error.

Attending a Cache County Republican Party meeting Saturday in Logan, he said he suspected the marijuana and FEC revelations were helped along by political foes.

"I should be flattered because this probably would not be happening unless I was considered to be a front-runner," Cannon added.

Ted Stewart, who also wants the GOP senatorial nomination, said he didn't think the revelations should be considered in the race.

"I think what I did as a kid or what Joe Cannon did as a kid is irrelevant to this campaign," Stewart said.

As for the FEC violations, Stewart said he believed Cannon's explanation.

Speakers address Mormon Church symposium

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Rep. Wayne Owens says supporting the setting aside of wild lands as protected wilderness is one way his fellow Mormons can preserve some of God's best work.

"It's up to us to see if we can save any of that creation," the Democrat told the Sunstone Symposium, an annual independent conference on Mormon issues. "Wilderness provides a window on that creation."

Owens, who has proposed setting aside 5.4 million acres of new Utah wilderness lands, said Mormons who support such preservation are "on firm theological ground."

"The Savior found strength and solitude" and peace in the wilderness, the congressman said, "I found I could relate to that."

Owens said many Mormons, steeped in their pioneer heritage, still see untamed lands as something to be conquered and developed.

"(But) there are times when the desert ought not to blossom like a rose," he said Saturday.

Owens quoted Mormon pioneer leader Brigham Young in support of his environmentalist stance.

"The soil, the water, the air are all pure. Do not suffer them to become polluted."

Once wilderness is gone, it cannot be replaced, Owens warned.

Meanwhile, another speaker said success in the war with Iraq and subsequent parades and patriotic fervor should not blind Americans to the immoral nature of the conflict, a Brigham Young University professor says.

Eugene England, an English professor and author at the Mormon Church-owned school, contends the United States lost the war with Iraq — in a moral sense — because violence never results in good.

"It is an absolutely un-Christian principle that might makes right," England said. The gathering is not sanctioned by the Mormon Church.

When confronted with evil, the only option sanctioned by Christ is to "overcome it with good," England said.

But Valerie Hudson, director of the international studies center at BYU, countered that the world is not yet at the point "where we could lay down the sword in the Iraq situation."

Reporter: Mormon Church lied in defense of Dunn

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church officials lied when they said they had no way of "finally verifying" whether a former church official's accounts of his war and baseball experiences were accurate, a reporter claims.

Wayne Packer, whose research into Paul H. Dunn's stories showed several had been fabricated, said members of the faith's Quorum of the Twelve Apostles were well aware the stories were false when Dunn was abruptly retired from the church's hierarchy in 1989 for reasons of "health and age."

Packer told an audience at the Sunstone Symposium on Saturday that church leaders had conducted at least two internal inquiries into the veracity of Dunn's stories and whether he had falsified copies of tax documents. The second investigation was headed by a church attorney, Harry Pugsley, with whom Packer, a Mormon, said he cooperated.

"His report, confirming the allegations, was delivered to the Quorum of the Twelve just a couple of weeks before Paul Dunn was given emeritus status," Packer said.

The research by the former KSL television reporter was purchased by The Arizona Republic and formed the basis of the newspaper's story in February about Dunn, whose tales of World War II and playing in the St. Louis Cardinals organization helped make him the most popular speaker and author in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Jones

The Twin Falls native is the only potential candidate with a support base that overlaps Stallings'. His rhetoric on water rights plays well to farmers, and rural anti-Boise sentiment would hurt someone like Kempthorne more than Jones.

But Jones has never run well in north and western Idaho — that's where he lost last year's primary to Craig. Also, while being short on funds might not be a handicap in the primary, it could prove fatal in the general election, especially against Stallings, who will have many of the advantages of incumbency. The consensus, though, is that Jones would be at least as formidable an opponent as Kempthorne.

What kind of senator would he be? Jones knows his way around the Senate from his stint with Len Jordan, Eastland says, and would be an effective spokesman for Idaho water rights. Jones says he would probably make water his specialty, especially since "there's not anyone in the delegation who knows about it."

Stapilus wrote in "The Idaho Political Almanac 1990" that as attorney general, Jones was "willing to march into the middle of heated squabbles and wind up blooded, as long as he [kept] his sense of where he [was] headed."

Jones clashed often with Democratic Gov. Andrus, but also worked with him on the lottery and other issues on which they happened to agree.

Erhart

scenarios in which Erhart could win the nomination (usually if more than three candidates run in the primary), but add that they're very likely, "I like Mitt," Jones says, "but he has a rough row to hoe."

Even if Erhart were to pull off an upset and win the nomination, with no government experience, little statewide organization and hostility from his own party, he would not appear to be a strong opponent for Stallings. But Erhart remains confident.

"I'm not concerned about Stallings," he says. "Once I'm down working in the Magic Valley, I can go toe to toe with anyone on agricultural issues. Over time I think the rural part of the state will favor my candidacy."

What kind of senator would he be? Erhart says he would be "more of a working senator" than Symms, with less emphasis on rhetoric and more on results. "I'm an extremely goal-oriented person," he said. "I'm going to stick with the issues I enunciate in the campaign, not rail against this group or that group."

Kempthorne

before. He'll have defined his position on a whole host of major issues — spotted owls, salmon runs, wilderness, abortion.

How would he do against Stallings? Kempthorne's popularity in Ada and Canyon counties, which together contain nearly a third of Idaho's population, gives him a formidable base. But being mayor of Boise can be a disadvantage too. As political analyst Randy Stapilus says, "You only have to go about 10 miles outside the city limits to start finding resentment toward Boise."

Kempthorne has never run a statewide campaign before, and might find it difficult to break into the voters' support base in rural southern and eastern Idaho.

Not only that, but he's never really had a tough race, according to Stapilus: He was unopposed in 1989 and rode a bipartisan citizens' movement to the mayor's office in 1985. One thing everyone interviewed for this story agreed on was that the primary and general elections are likely to be some of the toughest in recent Idaho history.

But Kempthorne is likely to inherit several of Symms' top aides, including campaign whip Phil Reberger, and he should have plenty of money and time to spread his name and message around the state.

What kind of senator would he be? That depends on whom you ask. Eastland describes Kempthorne as sharing many of the conservative views as Symms and Craig, but expressing them in a kinder, gentler manner. Wetherell describes him as a moderate-to-progressive Republican, but said he might not stay that way throughout a statewide

Worshippers mourn 9 killed at Phoenix Buddhist temple

PHOENIX (AP) — Sunday was to have been a day of celebration at Wat Prankuram, a graduation of sorts for a grandmother and two young men who underwent training at the Buddhist temple.

Instead, members of the area's small Thai community gathered to mourn the three inmates and six monks who were slain.

Their bodies were found Saturday at the temple surrounded by cotton fields and desert on the city's outskirts. Investigators said the eight men and a woman had been shot sometime late Friday or early Saturday.

Officials refused to say what the motive might have been. But investigators believe at least two people took part in the killings, Maricopa County Sheriff Tom Agnos said.

The victims — six monks, two young men or teen-agers and an elderly woman, all in saffron-colored robes — were found face down in a living area connected to the temple, Agnos said. All had been shot. "The killings were very methodical," Agnos said.

At least two weapons were used, Agnos said, but he refused to elaborate or to say if that was the reason investigators believe there was more than one killer.

All the rooms in the living quarters had been ransacked but the temple itself appeared undisturbed, including gold and jade statues and a "money tree" with 20 one-dollar bills left as offerings, he said.

Worshippers here told deputies the monks generally wear gold chains, but no chains were found on the bodies, Agnos said.

A Phoenix police department gang expert is helping in the probe, but Agnos downplayed speculation the carnage was the work of Asian gangs. The expert was brought in "to cover all the bases," he said.

"It scares me to death," said Betty Craft, a neighbor who traded gardening tips with the temple's monks. "I couldn't fathom anything like that because they were such nice, docile people."

Some wondered if racism were to blame.

"In America we have a lot of hate," said Robert Johnson, a black Air Force veteran whose Thai wife, Bupha, worships at the temple. "It's not just against blacks now, it's everybody."

Madeline Ong-Sakata, past president of the Arizona Asian Association, noted that anti-Asian graffiti was sprayed on a Chinese church twice last year.

"I can't believe this is a robbery, not with all the anti-Asian things going on," she told The Arizona Republic.

Agnos refused to comment when

Two unidentified Thai youths wait for a school bus under a road sign for Wat Prankuram in western Phoenix. Friends, relatives and press gather outside the temple, awaiting word from authorities.

asked if racist graffiti was found in the temple complex.

Worshippers left the temple to sheriff's investigators Sunday. They planned to meet at a Phoenix restaurant in the afternoon to plan funerals and talk about the temple's future.

Promkuram Wat serves 200 to 300 Buddhists of the mainstream Theravada sect, many of them Thai wives of active or retired servicemen. The temple is a focus of activity for about 3,000 Thais in the Phoenix area and also draws Laotians and Cambodians.

The temple occupies an L-shaped, one-story building just west of the Phoenix city limits, near Luke Air Force Base.

The killer or killers struck the day before a ceremony marking the end of three weeks of live-in training in religion and self-awareness for an elderly woman and two young men or teen-agers, Johnson said.

Teachers have unsettling ideas

MOSCOW (AP) — The wishes of some Idaho teachers would keep their bosses awake at night.

Educators at the final session of the Idaho Education Association's summer conference Friday in Moscow imagined a system without school administrators and school boards.

Others suggested a world where teachers earned more and could learn about the latest developments in education on a weekly public television program.

Although the teachers' union did not make any formal decisions about the strategy for reform, members plan to study the suggestions.

Teachers spent three days exam-ing reports on education reform to learn how it will affect their classrooms.

Along with concerns the teachers expressed about rapid change, some wondered how reform will succeed when many schools still lack basics.

A Twin Falls teacher, Mary Lu Barry, said another teacher told her she would welcome computers in her classroom but, "I'm worried first about pencil sharpeners and water fountains in my halls and dictionaries."

Others wonder if their administrators and districts would support the more powerful role teachers would assume in some models for future schools.

"In some communities more than one teacher in one place means there's a problem," said Jane Lewis, from Idaho Falls.

Another frustration was that many "new" ideas about "education" are ones teachers have advocated for a long time.

But the public is only now beginning to understand their validity after three reports on reform that were released in Idaho this year.

Suggestions included establishing a computer bulletin board for IEA members and publishing a step-by-step blueprint for reform, so teachers would know exactly where it is headed.

Value of golf course rankles a lot of people

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — How much is the new Hagadone golf course at Coeur d'Alene worth?

The Idaho Board of Tax Appeals may have to wade through a number of appeals over the valuation for property tax purposes, currently $8.5 million.

Assessor Tom Moore set it at $12.1 million. The county commission voted to lower the valuation by $3.6 million.

Moore and Coeur d'Alene tax activist Ron Rankin both said they planned to appeal the July 8 decision by the commission. Resort owner Duane Hagadone also has complained that the new valuation is too high, and has indicated he also may file an appeal.

Commissioners Bob Haakenston and Bob Macdonald ignited the controversy when they voted to lower the valuation of the golf course and other Hagadone Hospitality lakeshore properties by almost $4 million.

Board spokeswoman Eileen Peterson said the appeals are unprecedented, because usually it's individuals who file the appeals. She plans to ask the attorney general's office later this month how to handle the conflicts.

"I've never had a situation like this before," she said. She said she would like to see the appeal filed directly to 1st District Court, but it's uncertain which appeal would take precedence.

Moore's appeal differs from that filed by Rankin. In addition to the golf course valuation, Moore appealed the commissioners' devaluation of Hagadone Hospitality-owned Huckleberry Beach and the Beach House Restaurant and Silver Beach Marina.

More benefits are possible, but not likely

BOISE (AP) — A bill on President Bush's desk could extend unemployment benefits to some 17,700 Idahoans, but a state official who administers those funds doubts it will get any further.

Dick Eardley, the state Department of Employment's unemployment insurance administrator, said the legislation contains a provision requiring Bush to declare an emergency to trigger it.

Eardley said information he is getting from Washington, D.C., is the Republican president will not sign the emergency declaration for the Democrat-sponsored bill.

"We're assuming at this point that (the bill) won't take effect, that after the August recess there will be an attempt to run another bill through," he said.

The Democrat measure, written to ease the unemployment problems caused by the recession, adds up to 20 extra weeks of checks to the basic 26-week benefit period.

Bush criticized the $5.8 billion plan as too expensive and said he preferred a less expensive GOP proposal extending benefits to fewer people.

Emergency landing injures 6 in Colorado

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Six people, two from Idaho, were injured Saturday when a single-engine plane lost power after takeoff here and the pilot made an emergency landing in a field, authorities said.

The pilot, John Jerry Wilda of Caldwell, radioed the Colorado Springs Municipal Airport tower that he was having engine problems shortly before the plane landed on its belly in the rugged debris-strewn field.

Study shows everyone needs health care

BOISE (AP) — An informal survey by a state task force on health care has found most Idahoans feel everyone should have access to that care, regardless of their ability to pay for it.

Preliminary results of the survey were turned over Friday to the Idaho Legislature's committee on health care in Boise.

Sen. Joyce McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, who co-chairs the committee, said they would be analyzed.

"We have many Idahoans who are uninsured, and it prevents access to health care," James Borchers, spokesman for Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Idaho, said he had no comment on the survey findings until he sees the report.

"Our feelings would be there are opportunities for public and private partnerships that could provide better access than we have now," he said.

When the Legislature convenes this winter, the committee will recommend how to aid the estimated 15.9 percent of Idahoans who lack health insurance. Nationwide, about 13 percent go without.

The survey was not scientific; no margin of error was calculated. The questionnaires were printed in daily newspapers and were available at public hearings. "Something will be put before the Legislature, but whether it will be approved is another thing," McRoberts said.

Health-care advocates applauded the preliminary results.

"I thought it was significant that a majority thought that everyone was entitled to health care, regardless of their ability to pay," said Wanda Michaelson, executive director of the non-profit Idaho Hunger Action Council.

The man, about several times, was found about 6 p.m. Saturday alongside the North Ogden Divide, a county road that leads to Liberty in the northeast portion of Weber County.

Symms' downfall may have been speaking his mind

From the first, Steve Symms was a fighter. When he left apple farming and entered politics, his "Take a bite out of Washington" theme let people know he would consistently vote for less government, which he did.

Symms' retirement, announced Wednesday, gives the Republican Party a chance to start over with a candidate who does not carry the baggage of Symms' frequent "can't-em-like-I-see-em" comments and personal troubles.

But the party will be hard put to find a better campaigner. On the sidelines he will remain a potent force who could influence the 1992 outcome.

The Post Register has seldom agreed with Symms, but we have not been prepared to pile it on when it came to his personal life. We found him to be an intelligent and engaging man, and meeting him reinforces why he has commanded such loyalty.

He saved victory from defeat in a 1986 race against former Gov. John Evans by the sheer force of his personality, shaking hands one at a time in a successful bus tour of the state during the closing stages of his campaign. Some of Symms' stands and comments might have gotten him in less trouble had he engaged in the popular practice of disguising his true position. It takes a certain courage to be one of a handful of votes against a measured act like the Clean Air Bill, which, by its very name, is hard to oppose. But he did not duck or equivocate. The more impassioned he became the more articulate was his stand.

Figures indicate that the total federal tax burden today has not changed compared to when Symms took office. It has only been shifted in its application. But that's not because Steve Symms did it.

Symms retirement will not be without its comforts, given the nearly $3 million he will receive under a Senate pension, a fact that is not without its irony given the reason Symms went to Washington. Nonetheless, we wish him well in private life.

Symms has been a memorable figure in Idaho politics and has not been heard from for the last time.

The Post Register, Idaho Falls

Idaho needs a senator who can deal with tough issues

He went out much the way he went into Idaho politics, throwing fiery barbs at some of his favorite targets: Democrats, the media, big government.

In 20 years of public service, Sen. Steve Symms has kept bedrock conservatism in his heart and cowboy boots on his feet. It was no different Wednesday when Symms stood atop a Sunny Slope hill to announce the end of his Senate career.

Idaho is losing a maverick, a man who often stood alone because he refused to bend to Washington ways.

His retirement offers an opportunity for change in the face of Idaho's rapidly shifting economy and lifestyle. Increasingly, the state needs a senator who can be a moderating influence and an effective consensus-builder to deal with the tough issues ahead, such as grazing, wilderness, taxes, the changing world order.

Let voters send Symms to Congress to carry the message that less government is good government.

For nearly two decades, Symms never wavered from that line. In these days of wind-testing, poll-taking politicians, that's an admirable trait.

He stood up for capitalism, a strong defense and personal freedom.

Yet, he was no friend of the environment, voting against the Endangered Species Act and the Clean Air Act.

And his consistent role as the outsider—often casting the only "no" vote among the entire Senate—was sometimes more harmful than helpful to Idaho.

It can be argued that Symms was a man for the times, however. He has been a loyal Republican through the reigns of Reagan and Bush; presidents Idahoans overwhelmingly supported.

Retirement won't mean the end of Symms' influence on Idaho politics. That wouldn't be his style. He surely will continue to rail against journalists, union bosses, the liberal Eastern establishment and Communists.

But the rhetoric is beginning to lose its sting after 20 years. And it may not be as meaningful as Idaho heads toward the 21st Century amid shifting world-powers and value systems.

For two decades, Idahoans have had a dedicated public servant who was often controversial, but always boring and always willing to fight for what he thought was right.

The Boise Statesman

Small towns are not looking after their futures

Small towns, as anyone who was raised in one will probably tell you, are great places to grow up.

Clean air, low crime rates, friendly people and easy access to outdoor activities are just some of the features that make places like Preston, American Falls, Firth or Rockland good family towns.

But for years residents of these communities, and most others across Idaho, have seen many of their town's children grow, mature and leave when high school is over.

The essential human resource which keeps communities alive goes with them.

"Keeping them down on the farm," has been a problem for rural American towns for over two centuries now and not much can be done to prevent someone from being lured by the bright lights, higher education facilities and cultural activities offered by bigger cities.

Still, the qualities that make small towns a good place to grow up should also attract their wandering native sons and daughters back home when it's time to raise their own families.

That is, if the residents of the towns don't shoot their future in the foot first.

Voters in Preston, American Falls, Rockland and Firth, among others, have recently done just that, rejecting school bond and mill levie proposals.

One of the first things any parent wants to know is how good an education his or her offspring is going to receive.

In Idaho, a state which ranks near the bottom of the nation for educational funding, the issue is only compounded when communities refuse to support their schools by voting against mill levies and school bonds.

Making ends meet in any sized town is difficult enough. Property taxes, cost of living, the issue is only compounded when expenses all add up.

But when schools are overcrowded, understaffed, ill-equipped and generally underfunded, it is in the best interest of everyone in a town, not just parents of school-age children, to correct the situation.

Look around — when an elementary teacher faces a class of 30 or more school kids in a room which should only hold 20, what's going to happen?

When those same children visit a bigger city somewhere and see like a modern, fully funded school looks like, what kernels of doubt about their towns are going to be planted in their minds?

You get what you pay for. Decreasing population, businesses relocating elsewhere and towns on a downhill slide, are symptoms of something more than a recession or economic downturn.

They also speak of the residents' willingness to see their town survive.

The Idaho State Journal, Pocatello

Symms' retirement has long history

CALDWELL — It wasn't a hasty decision by Sen. Steve Symms to retire from the U.S. Senate rather than try for another term next year.

It's been years in coming, perhaps almost since Symms won his second term after a tough battle in 1986 against then-governor John Evans.

A close friend and supporter says Symms came into a room on the last day of that hectic campaign, laid his head in his hands and said, "I just can't do this any more."

There were a lot of things that were expressed, though unsaid, when Symms chose this week to announce his retirement on a dusty airstrip atop the family fruit ranch at Sunnyslope, outside Caldwell.

It was just an apple's throw from the spot where Symms, a political unknown, launched an unbroken string of election successes in 1972.

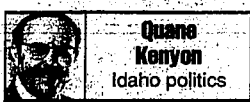

This past week, Symms, 53, wore a cowboy hat, boots and jeans in making his announcement. Perhaps it was a statement that he wanted to give up the high-pressure, high-profile life of one of the most powerful politicians in the country for a quieter life in rural Idaho.

In March on the night that his close friend and colleague, Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, was killed in a plane crash, Symms seemed extremely shaken and in an interview he expressed for the first time publicly doubts about the future course of his life in politics.

And he repeatedly mentioned the sudden death of Heinz, who was five months younger, during the months leading up to his announcement.

Democratic polls claim that Symms' popularity has slipped since he beat Evans in 1986.

Despite a major thaw in the Cold War, Symms clings to his suspicion of the Soviet Union and calls for increased defense spending. But the Republican says his own poll shows he would have won had he run.

There have been embarrassments caused by Symms' penchant for shooting from the hip.

And his personal life hasn't helped his political chances either.

He's always touted family values, and despite reports of marital difficulties, his wife, Fran, stood at his side during the 1986 campaign.

After a few months later, the couple separated and divorced in 1989. Symms plans to wed a former aide, Loreta Fuller, although he won't say when or where.

In an interview earlier this year, Fran Symms said her husband made some promises to her in 1986 that weren't kept, hinting at infidelity.

There's also the stress of constantly being in the public eye.

Anyone in high-level politics knows it can be a tremendous strain, although a few like Symms and Gov. Cecil Andrus have seemed to thrive on it.

In fact, he suggested in the past week that his son's recent federal indictment on immigration law violations was prompted in part by the system's desire to prove it shows no preference to prominent politicians or their families.

Voluntary retirement, instead of possible defeat at the polls in the next election, also allows Symms to get out of a major inconsistency.

When he started office in 1973, he said often that he didn't believe in professional politicians, that he thought people should be

"citizen politicians" to serve a few years and then return to their own homes and occupations.

But "I didn't turn out that way with" Symms.

He served eight years in the House and by the end of his current term will have another 12 in the Senate.

Ignoring his two decades of service, Symms in announcing his retirement talked about "citizen politicians" again. At one point he said recent congressional actions make it clear "it is time for term limitations."

Symms stands out as one of the best campaigners ever to run for public office in Idaho, and possibly in the nation.

It was the strength that help him surprise Wayne Khewell and most other Republicans in the 1972 GOP primary.

He upset 24-year Senate veteran Frank Church in 1980, and six years later beat a popular Democrat winding up 10 years as governor, John Evans.

But being a good campaigner, appealing to voters with outspoken, blunt statements, didn't translate into getting much done in Congress.

Symms never has been one of those "go-along-and-get-along" types willing to make trades to get bills passed.

His retirement announcement, however, won't keep him out of politics. Symms promised to continue working for the changes he thinks necessary, but as a private citizen.

And he has more than $500,000 in his campaign treasury to underwrite the effort.

Still, Idaho politics will be a bit duller without Symms the candidate.

Sadly, cross-burning is part of freedom

SEATTLE — There are times when it's OK to burn a cross on a lawn in an act of race hatred.

That's what King County (Wash.) Superior Judge Patricia Aitken said the other day when she threw out six counts of malicious-harassment charges against David Kenneth Talley.

Talley is 19 years old and apparently brain-dead enough to think burning a cross on his lawn south of Seattle is a wonderful way to welcome new people to the neighborhood.

He was concerned that having Phillip and Rene Smith move in across the street would lower property values on his mother's home.

The Smiths are an interracial couple, and the blazing 4-foot cross convinced them they should find somewhere else to buy a house.

The Smiths obviously were intimidated. Talley, whose unproductive existence includes being self-proclaimed head of the local skinhead group, acknowledges that race motivated his actions.

But Aitken says that "the conduct, while reprehensible, was protected by the First Amendment."

She made a distinction between Talley's case and a cross-burning that took place in another Seattle suburb just five days after Talley strangled his intellect by putting two sticks together and setting them on fire.

In the Bonnet case, two unlighted role models, Joshua Lee Straube and David Allen, and three juveniles lit an 8-foot cross in the yard of an African-American family; the cross-burners didn't even know.

Aitken said the Bonnet burning carried an implied threat of harm and should be tried under the malicious-harassment law.

There are some folks who believe that just burning a cross is an implied threat because of the history of murder, lynching and beating that accompanies these acts of bigotry and cowardice.

There also are folks like the Smiths, who are devastated by these acts of stupidity and who jerk like Talley symbolic victories by deciding not to move into their house, on which they had already placed earnest money.

It's not pleasant or reassuring to have a cross burned across the street from a home where you intend to live and raise children.

But letting hatemongers know they can frighten someone away, that easily only makes them bolder and brings them out from under their rocks more often.

Yet if the Smiths made a questionable decision, there is no question about Aitken's ruling.

She's right.

Talley's act of mindless insensitivity and terminal dumbness was constitutionally protected.

He made a statement, on his own property, and may have violated the fire code, but not the malicious-harassment law.

It hurts the hearts of some people to see the U.S. flag burned in anyone's yard.

Those angered by such acts think it is an act of treason that mocks the memory of the men and women who fought and died in combat.

Flag-burning may make you mad, but it is protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution.

Exposing your bigotry and lack of working brain cells by cross-burning is also protected as long as it doesn't infringe on the freedom of someone else.

That's the tough thing about living in a democracy. Freedom has to swing both ways.

It has to work for things you like and things you don't. People on all sides of an issue must have equal rights and privileges to voice their opinions.

On the first day of my first college political-science class, the instructor said, "If just one person in a society is not free, then no one in that society is free."

If basic rights can be taken away from one person, then those same rights can be taken away from anyone.

That's the hard lesson Aitken tried to get across in her ruling.

It may not sit well with folks who are tired of all the racial, sexual, religious and class intolerance that is making it harder and harder to live together in this little corner of the universe.

But common sense and common decency can't be legislated.

They have to start at home. Talley would not have touched a cross in his mother's yard if he'd grown up in an environment where tolerance and respect were watchwords.

Through our own actions, or indifference to the nonsense they pick up on the street, we allow children to become bigots and existists and disrespectful of difference or age or disability.

That's why it's self-destructive to resist having information about cultural diversity in our schools and workplaces.

Intolerance is bred from ignorance and fear.

What you don't know CAN hurt you and can make mistakes of your children.

The boy is that Talley burns a cross, runs a family off and goes free.

The bigots in the other suburb — who still face charges — caused neighbors to reach out to one another and to communicate in a real sense of caring and concern.

But that's the law, and Aitken ruled appropriately.

The problem, however, goes deeper than the law.

It goes all the way to home training, and I'm not sure how we change that one.

The Associated Press

CARMEL, Ind. (AP) — Search the fairy tales. Scan the recent books. Check with Hollywood.
Go where you will — in fact or fiction, past or present — it's difficult to find a comparison for Long John Daly's astounding victory Sunday in the 73rd PGA Championship.

Maybe Lee Trevino in the 1968 U.S. Open, or Jack Fleck's playoff upset of Ben Hogan in 1955, or Francis Ouimet against Harry Vardon and Ted Ray in 1913. All had some, but none had all of the elements in Daly's three-stroke victory over Bruce Lietzke.

None, for example, had to sweat out the uncertainty of a position as the ninth alternate to even gain a place in the tournament. Daly did.

None had to contend with the longest course ever used for one of golf's major championships. Daly did.

And none, certainly, ranked as the biggest hitter in captivity. Daly does.

For the season, he averages 286 yards on his drives. For the week, on the vast expanse of Crooked Stick, he was much longer, in the 300-yard range.

That enormous power — the attraction of the home run ball, his moon shot off the tee and the accompanying, shouted comment “KIH!” from caddy Jeff “Squeaky” Medina — brought a legion of fans to his side and made him an instant hero.

“I think everybody knows this is a Cinderella story for John Daly,” the new champion said after his triumphant march up the 18th fairway, with both clenched fists pumping the air.

But as overwhelming as was his victory, just so overwhelming was Daly in the aftermath.

“I feel so wonderful,” he said, obviously groping for words. He found some and blurted them out.

“I'm glad an American won a major again,” he said, then found another theme.

They came by the thousands, lining the fairways three and four deep on both sides and perching on rooftops, and cheered and whistled and howled and applauded.

But they congregated around the tee — where the power grows — and the greens, where the departing Daly bumped fists with joyous spectators on his way to the next tee.

Armed with a three-stroke lead to start, golf's new hero stretched it out to four at the turn and won it with a final-round 71, one under par, and a 276 total.

No one ever got closer than two strokes. By the time Daly reached the turn, it was a race for second place.

“He made it a little interesting with a three-putt double bogey on the 17th, but all that did was leave him a mere three-stroke cushion with one hole to play.

All he had to do was stay out of the water on the right side of No. 18, and he made sure of that with a drive to the left side of the fairway. An iron to the fat of the green, a walk up to the rear of the gallery — his gallery now — and golf appointed a brand new star.

Daly, exhibiting a certain fresh-faced naivete, positively beamed when someone mentioned his new status.

“The veteran Lietzke, the only man able to stay in touch with the lead, recognized that Daly was not a one-week wonder.

“I'm certainly leaning toward the kid being real,” Lietzke said after claiming second with a 70 and a 279 total.

Jim Gallagher Jr. was next at 281 after closing with a 67. Kenny Knox slipped to a 74 and was another stroke back at 282. Steven Richardson of England and Bob Gilder followed at 283. Richardson had a 69 and Gilder a 73.

U.S. Open title-holder Payne Stewart shot 70 for 285 and Masters champion Ian Woosnam of Wales struggled to a 76 and a 291 total.

Great catch, 1 run lets Cuba squeak by U.S. in Pan Am

HAVANA — Seisbol, Cuba's national pastime as it is America's, brought out all the passion of the Pan American Games in a rocking World Series-style game that Cuba won by a few inches and one run.

On a sweltering, tropical Sunday, with 60,000 fans jammed into 55,000 seats, pounding drums, tooting horns and blowing whistles nearly nonstop for three hours, Cuba beat the United States 3-2 after a brilliant, game-saving dive with the bases loaded.

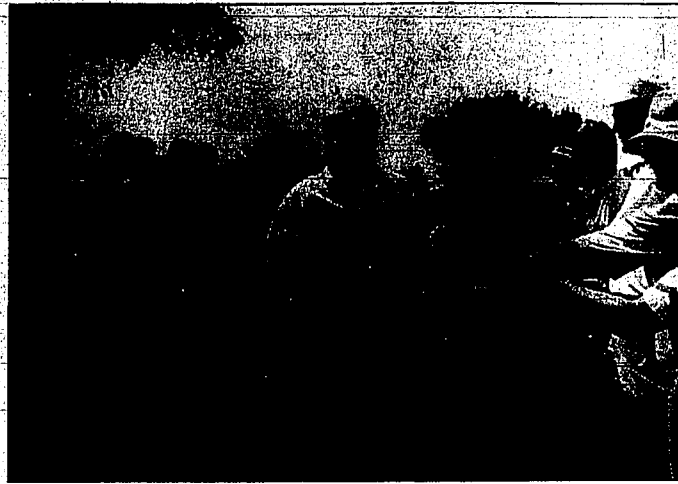

Virtually the whole nation tuned into this game, which summed up the intense rivalry of Cuba and the United States in a sport that both countries cherish. Both teams were packed-with-players-of-major-league potential, but only the Americans will get the chance to prove it. For the Cubans, this was an opportunity to show the world once again how good they are.

Cuba, 7-0, and the United States, 5-1, played to meet again in the medal round later this week, and probably in the Olympics next year, but no game could have more drama than this one that meant nothing more than pride.

The tension, building all week, swelled from early in the morning as thousands of people stood outside the stadium six hours.

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Longtime stock car racer John Delphus “J.D.” McDuffie was killed Sunday when his car became airborne and smashed into a urewall and guardrail just five laps into the Budweiser at the Glen NASCAR Winston Cup race in Watkins Glen, N.Y. It appeared in television replays that McDuffie's left front tire came off, triggering a 160-mph slide off the Watkins Glen international track at the end of the long straightaway — the fastest part of the 2.428-mile, seven-turn road course.

John Daly of Memphis, Tenn., is greeted by spectators on his way to the tenth tee during final round action of the PGA championship.

Long John Daly was a joy to watch

By Bob Verdi
Chicago Tribune

CARMEL, Ind. — With America losing its dimples on the international golf front, what a pity John Daly can't head directly from his victory lap around Crooked Stick to the first tee at Kiawah Island, S.C.
That is where whipped-ass U.S. forces will wage fairway wars against Europe for the Ryder Cup in late September, and what better medicine could there be for scarred Yankee pride than this big bopper who fell out of his car to seize the PGA Championship on Sunday?

David Stockton, captain of the red, white and blue squad, has been looking for a hot player to round out his roster, and if this mystery individual could be an intimidating sort, so much the better. Well, now, who fits both roles as outstandingly as Daly, especially in an alternate-shot format? This guy, you'd kill to have as a scramble partner. And it so happens that Pete Dye, who designed Crooked Stick, created the layout at Kiawah.

“Don't know if I'm qualified for the Ryder Cup yet,” drawled Daly, “but there's nothing I like more than beating those foreigners.”

What Daly did this week, after driving from his Memphis home to fill the PGA's ninth and last alternate spot, was effect the ultimate confluence of forces that the sport of golf was anticipating. An absolute free swinger used nuclear-age equipment to destroy a high-tech course during a major tournament containing a world-class field of participants. He had the perfect game for the perfect place at the perfect time.

Yes, Daly is long. He's longer than Greg Norman or Freddie Couples or Davis Love III. John Daly is longer than “War and Peace.” Yet, just when the purists scream that now is not soon enough to legislate against balls that fly too far and titanium sticks that pack too much power, Daly's routine sends the scientists scurrying back to their labs in a hush. He's really as basic as it gets. He hits the ball hard, goes and finds it, then hits it hard again. He swings out of his shoes and connects with the sweet spot, which is merely the fantasy of every hacker on earth.

Daly's regimen won't provide any fodder for the brotherhood of golf gurus, either. The superstar's increasingly high profile has fostered a legion of genre tutors who

Matlock nets 1st win of speedway season

By Jeff Hoekisson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gary Matlock picked up his first main event victory of the racing season and Chris Jordan and Raleigh Curtis also visited the winner's circle in action Saturday night at the Magic Valley Speedway.

For Matlock the evening was a perfect one. In the trophy dash his car was driven by Lewis Matlock to the win. Then Gary raced to a heat win to preview his main event title.

“Finally it went my way,” Matlock said after taking the checkered flag.

Matlock took the lead in the race on lap 14, passing Scott Keller. The duo stayed one-two the rest of the way to the checkered flag.

Jordan, who last visited the winner's circle about a month ago, has had troubles keeping his car on the track the last month.

“Last week we blew a clutch getting to the track,” said Jordan of his tough luck.

Jordan's win was not without its troubles. On the opening lap of the main event Lynn Baird and Mark Goodman tangled up in turn four forcing Jordan to get on his brakes causing him to go off the top side of the track.

Jordan caught his first piece of luck by not being sent to the back of the pack, instead he ended up in the pole position.

From the front spot it was clear sailing much of the way. In fact Jordan

Sox rookie hurls no-hitter

BALTIMORE (AP) — Wilson Alvarez had thrown no-hitters before. Twelve of them. But his masterpiece against the Baltimore Orioles on Sunday was dramatically different than the others.

Wilson Alvarez
New York Yankees star
The Tigers, who swept Saturday's doubleheader from New York, fell four games behind Toronto in the American League East.

Alvarez (1-0), called up from Double-A on Saturday, struck out seven and walked five first batters in the ninth, Mike Devereaux on a routine fly and Juan Bell on a strikeout. Alvarez walked Carl Ripken on four pitches and Dwight Evans on five. He then struck out Randy Milligan on a 0-2 pitch.

It was one of history's more improbable no-hitters. In his only other major league game, he lasted on July 24, 1989, for Texas and failed to retire any of the five Toronto batters he faced, giving up three hits — including two home runs — and two walks.

Twins 5, Mariners 2
SEATTLE (AP) — Kevin Tapani pitched a four-hitter for his fifth straight victory and the Minnesota Twins kept their slim lead in the American League West.

Tapani (10-7), whose last defeat was on June 27 against Toronto, was backed by home runs by Shane Mack and Kent Hrbek, who had three RBIs. He improved his career record to 4-0 against Seattle.

Royals 3, Indians 2
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Brett singled home the winning run in the 13th inning, cupping a two-run rally as the Kansas City Royals came back twice to beat the Cleveland Indians.

The Royals, led to two hits for eight innings, scored the tying run in the ninth with help of left fielder Alex Cole's error. Then, after Jeff Manno hit a solo home run in the top of the 13th, the Royals took advantage of two more misplays.

Athletics 3, Angels 2
ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Willie Wilson's line drive was misplayed by left fielder Luis Polonia into a two-run triple in the fifth inning, and the Oakland A's beat the California Angels 3-2 for their sixth straight victory.

The Angels have lost 10 of 11, including Oakland's three-game sweep. The Athletics are 9-1 against California this season.

Yankees 12, Tigers 6
NEW YORK (AP) — Mel Hill hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning and his most crucial strokes didn't involve crucial booms: He made two very important putts to the categorized "one-dimensional" players who insist Daly is an accident begging to undo himself; he'll never consider the possibility that he'll learn some restraint. Couples did it. Love did it, they all do it. Even at slightly reduced range time, Daly will be picking different clubs from different spots, as if in a onetime.

Giants 4, Dodgers 3
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco completed a three-game sweep of first-place Los Angeles as Darren Lewis' run-scoring infield single in the seventh inning snuffed a tie.

Braves 3, Astros 1
ATLANTA (AP) — Armando Reynoso pitched two-hit, shutout ball for six innings, in his major-league debut as Atlanta beat Houston to complete a three-game sweep. The Braves completed their homestand 10-0 and moved to within 1½ games of Los Angeles.

Padres 13, Reds 0
SAN DIEGO (AP) — BIP Roberts went 4-for-4, including two of San Diego's club record five home runs, and Ricky Bowen pitched two-hit ball for seven innings in his major-league debut as the Padres routed Cincinnati.

STRATTON HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — In her second major victory since winning the 1989 U.S. Open, Seane O'Grady won the 1991 LPGA Classic. She finished with a 72 (94-73-72-78) to finish with a 289 (74-77-72-78) to win.

Learn how to say 'no' and keep self-esteem

Ask any woman and she'll likely tell you she has trouble saying no. Consider a case in point.

"I went to the doctor for my stress," says one harried woman. "I was worrying about stupid little things that I don't need to worry about. The doctor said, 'You've got to say no.'"

JoAnn Larsen
Psychology

"Mostly," she continues, "the problem was my next-door neighbor. She is constantly asking me to baby-sit and I am constantly saying yes. The doctor also said, 'Tell her that you can't baby-sit anymore.'"

"So what do I do when I get home? My neighbor is sitting on my porch. Can you baby-sit Mark for me next week?" she asks. Could I say no? Not here I had just gone to the doctor - spent 50 dollars - and I said yes again. I felt so sorry for her when she said, 'I'm just so stressed out, I work three days a week, and I need a vacation,' that I caved in. But after I said yes, I realized: Here I am - the doctor tells me to go on a vacation and to say, 'No, I can't baby-sit' - and now she's on vacation while I work my night job, take care of my three children, and have this extra child to care for all next week."

Why is it so difficult for women to say no? Here are reasons women report: "I have a 'can do' reputation to protect. Other women are constantly amazed at what I get done, and I don't want to tarnish that reputation."

"If I say no, I worry that someone will wonder, 'What on earth does she do all day?'"

"It's awful when someone turns me down, so I say yes because I don't want them to go through what I go through."

"I'm returning a favor. She didn't say no to me, so I can't say no to her."

"I'll look like I'm not very organized."

"It embarrasses me to admit I can't do everything."

Notice that most of these reasons have a common theme. They have to do with people - not hurting others or warding off being rejected or evaluated by them.

For most women, saying no is an emotional event that has to do with their lovability. According to the dictates of traditional cultural (and unconscious) programming, since it's a woman's job to please people, if she hurts someone, she's worthless. If she gets rejected by someone, she's worthless. So her self-esteem is at stake anytime anybody wants something from her. It's no wonder, then, that many women suffer at having to say no.

Nail biting is gone, but Becky Hanover of Buhl still twists her hair, particularly when driving.

Bad habits can be licked

Psychologists say tension often causes our more minor, annoying habits

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

BUHL - Becky Hanover has been hooked on the habit of wiggling her leg since she was a teen-ager. She also bit her nails for 10 years, until she turned 21 and got braces on her teeth. Shortly after that, she began twisting her hair.

Hanover said she is not particularly nervous: Rather, she said, she is a victim of some common bad habits.

"A bad habit is an addiction to any form of negative behavior that might be harmful to a person," said Dr. Gregory Tucker, a licensed clinical psychologist who has practiced in Ketchum for the past 16 years.

Especially common habits include lip biting, arm rubbing, face squeezing and involuntary twitching, in addition to leg swinging, nail biting and hair twisting. Even procrastination falls in the category of bad habits, Tucker said.

The catch-22 of habits, according to Tucker, is that, although people may consciously hate their bad habits, they may also receive some sort of unconscious pleasure or comfort from them. "A lot of people are unhappy unless they are working on problems all the time," Tucker said. "Working on a bad habit gives a person a project."

Most people agree that bad habits can be broken, but trying to break one can be quite a struggle. Psychologist G. Alan Marlatt, co-editor of the book "Relapse Prevention," wrote that 80 percent of those who try to break a habit will relapse within 90 days.

Hanover, who lives in Buhl with her husband and four small children, is aware of that fact. She tried to rid herself of her nail biting habit for years. "My family and friends were always pestering me about my nail biting," she said. "I tried talking myself out of the habit, and I even put cayenne pepper on my nails for a while."

By the time the braces came off

Hanover's teeth, her nail biting habit was gone. "But just talking about it makes me want to put my fingers in my mouth again," she said.

Twin Falls counselor Jim Palmer treats bad habits as a part of what is going on with people emotionally. "Just because you bite your nails doesn't mean you need professional help, but it can be an indication of tension," Palmer said. "It's often an outward show of something that's going on inside a person."

Bad habits can be troubling in a variety of ways. "Biting your nails hurts, but I need to do something with

Couch potatoes: Watching TV may make you fat

By Ira Dreyfuss
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The couch potato is no myth, scientists say. People who watch TV a lot tend to look like spuds.

"As TV viewing time increased, the prevalence of obesity increased - the more the TV viewing, the more the obesity," said researcher Larry A. Tucker, director of health promotion at Brigham Young University.

Tucker and researcher Marilyn Bagwell of Arizona State University in Tempe reviewed data from 4,771 females employed by more than 30 companies that had contracted for health counseling with Health Advancement Services Inc., a Tempe-based health management firm of which Bagwell is vice president. Their findings were published in the American Journal of Public Health.

Nurses working for Health Advancement Services asked the women how much time they spent each day watching television. They checked how fat the women were by taking caliper readings on the thigh, abdomen and arm.

Tucker and Bagwell classed the women as obese if 30 percent or more of their body weight was fat. Overall, almost one-third were obese.

Compared with women who watched less than an hour a day, women who spent four hours a day watching TV had more than double the prevalence of obesity, the study said. Those who reported three to four hours of viewing a day had almost twice the rate. Those who watched one to TV is like a companion; you feel comfortable with it. If we can make them see that exercise is like a companion, it's an analogy that seems to work.

Larry A. Tucker,
director of health promotion at Brigham Young University

two hours had close to 1.5 times the rate.

In previous studies, men who watched a lot of TV had similar problems, Tucker said.

The research doesn't prove TV makes you fat, the study notes. It could be that the heavier you are, the more you like to watch a lot of TV. After all, TV-watching requires little effort, so it's easy on an out-of-shape body. "That's very likely to be partially the cause," Tucker said. But he doubts it's the key one. He believes people get fat largely because they watch TV instead of being active to burn off surplus calories.

Of course, plenty of television watchers also eat while they watch, Tucker said. The nurses also looked at whether the women exercised. The study said non-exercisers were both 80 percent more likely to watch a lot of TV and 45 percent more likely to be obese.

So, Tucker and Bagwell advise, up and at 'em.

The researchers concede that's easier to advise than to accomplish.

"It comes down to a desire to better use your time," Tucker said. "Probably the single most important factor is how committed you are."

"It's harder to get the obese out to begin exercise than the woman who is not obese," Bagwell said.

Starting an exercise program may feel strange.

Most of the merchandise in the Freeze Frame line contains Scotchgard Stain Release treatment.

Kids leave tags on caps, shoes

DALLAS - The most important part of a hot outfit these days? The price - tag, that is.

All those plastic and cardboard sales tags that the rest of us cut off and throw away are now status symbols among teens. The fashion trend primarily involves brand-name athletic shoes and caps bearing the logo of popular sports teams, according to store managers.

Health notes

STRESS BUSTERS: Stressful events are in the eye of the beholder, researchers say. One way to defuse a tense situation is to imagine how your favorite TV character would react to a situation. In other words, put yourself in Bart Simpson's shoes! "You can even pretend you're the star of a TV comedy, and this frustrating episode is tonight's plot," says Steve Allen Jr., an assistant professor of family medicine at the State University of New York Health Science Center at Syracuse (and son of the Steve Allen of show-business fame), in a recent issue of Prevention.

RISE AND SHINE: It is a well-known fact that a good night's sleep will reduce drowsiness the next day. New research shows, however, that in addition to how long you sleep, the time of day that you get up is important. It has been determined that people who get up earlier in the morning rather than those who sleep in, even when the total amount of sleep time is the same, tend to be more alert and productive during the day.

ROOT CANAL: Chances are, if you're really wary of a root canal, you've never had one. One telephone survey of 1,000 people showed that those who had had a root canal were three times as likely to describe it as painless as those who'd never undergone one. According to Joseph D. Maggio, former president of the American Association of Endodontists, the pain associated with root canal actually comes before the procedure - because of the infection that makes it necessary.

THE RESTLESS LEG: Sleepless nights because of restless leg syndrome? Those rhythmic leg jerks every half-minute or so during sleep can be dramatically relieved with a drug used to treat Parkinson's disease. The syndrome affects between 1 and 5 percent of the population, and is most prevalent among the elderly. In a study of 12 patients, the Parkinson's drug Sinemet was significantly more effective in relieving leg muscle jerks than Darvocet, which is often prescribed for this syndrome, reports the Johns Hopkins University Sleep Disorders Center.

MINI-MEDITATIONS: You can calm yourself down by taking a few minutes - even 30 seconds - to meditate, Prevention magazine says. Watch clouds or flames of fire, waves breaking on the shore, nature, people, traffic or buildings. Don't try to make sense of what you see - just watch. As soon as you notice a thought in your mind, go back to merely seeing.

BABY'S TEETH: One of the best ways to practice good oral hygiene for your baby is to make sure that the wee one doesn't fall asleep with a bottle. According to the Academy of General Dentistry, nursing-bottle syndrome is a condition that causes severe decay in baby teeth when the lactose in milk and fructose in juice combine with the bacteria in baby's mouth. The condition affects up to 6 percent of children under age 4.

Officials look to vitamin to prevent spina bifida

ATLANTA (AP) - Federal health officials recommended that women who have babies with spina bifida and similar spinal defects take the vitamin folic acid to help prevent any recurrence.

Based on research presented in Britain last month, the national Centers for Disease Control recommended the such women planning another pregnancy should take four milligrams of folic acid daily. The dosage will require a doctor's prescription.

Folic acid is contained in many multivitamin tablets in small amounts. CDC officials warned that taking enough multivitamins to get four milligrams of folic acid would cause a woman to ingest harmful amounts of other vitamins.

The study conducted among women who had spina bifida babies showed that folic acid reduced their next child's chances of the defect by 71 percent.

The vitamin should be taken when a woman is trying to conceive, researchers said. Spina bifida, a malformation of the spine, occurs around 28 days after conception, before many women even know they are pregnant. After the British study, some researchers recommended that all women contemplating pregnancy begin taking folic acid.

"The problem is that there hasn't been a study yet to prove that," said Catherine Harnett, executive director of the Spina Bifida Association of America. "So we're not comfortable yet making a recommendation on a dosage for the general population."

The CDC pointedly stopped short of recommending folic acid for all mothers-to-be.

"That's a much more complicated issue," said Dr. David Erickson, chief of the CDC's Birth Defects and Genetic Disease Branch.

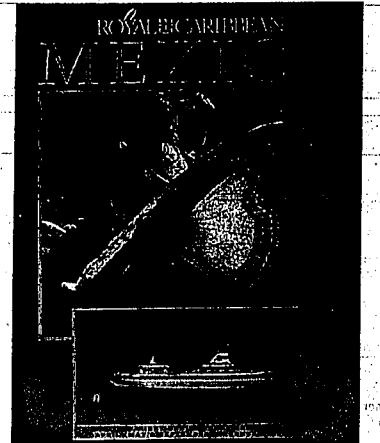

Spina bifida is the name for a number of related conditions that occur when the spine, during fetal formation, does not close properly, leaving the spinal cord and nerves susceptible to serious damage.

It occurs in about 4,000 babies a year in the United States.

While the risk of spina bifida is statistically low - about 1 in 1,000 births - women who have had a spina bifida pregnancy run a much higher risk of having another, about 2 in 100.

Varicose veins often more a cosmetic than health issue

NEW YORK (AP) - The older you get, the more prone you become to varicose veins, caused when the tiny valves that regulate blood circulation in the leg veins begin to malfunction.

But varicose veins are usually more of a cosmetic problem than a health issue.

In painful or very unsightly cases, there are several treatments available.

These include removal, ligation or sclerosing, which involves the injection of a chemical solution that hardens the affected veins and blocks blood flow.

There are also sex differences. Obviously play a role, since four times as many women develop varicose veins as men.

Hereditarily also is a factor, and prolonged standing or inactivity can also contribute to the problem.

Age also plays its part: the skin's connective fibers become less elastic over the years and cannot support the veins as firmly.

If you are prone to varicose veins, you may be able to head off their worst effects or at least alleviate some of the discomfort by avoiding prolonged standing or sitting, particularly with your legs crossed above the knee.

Frequent walking or swimming may help control a mild case, and wearing elastic support stockings may also help.

Cuomo signs law allowing terminally ill to collect benefits

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Legislation that gives terminally ill New Yorkers a chance to collect death benefits while they are alive is compassionate and prudent, a lawmaker says.

Gov. Mario Cuomo signed the living will legislation into law last month. It was sought by advocates for people with AIDS, but all terminally ill New Yorkers will be eligible.

"These in need can now tap into their policies and come out with the extra help needed to put their minds at ease during a very difficult time," said state Sen. Guy Varella, a bill sponsor.

The benefit won't be considered income that can be used to determine whether a person is eligible for welfare or Medicaid benefits under the law.

The benefits will also be exempt from New York state and city taxes.

Forty-six states now authorize accelerated payment of death benefits, according to state Senate Majority Leader Ralph Marino.

Student testing offered at CSI

TWIN FALLS - The College of Southern Idaho plans group ASSET placement testing for prospective students beginning today.

The placement tests are required of all students seeking a certificate or degree and those enrolling in a single math or English class. Results are used to help advise students.

The test will be given at 8:30 a.m., 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. today through Thursday and at 8:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. Friday in Room 116 of the Canyon Building.

The testing will continue Aug. 19, 21 and 22 with sessions at 8 a.m., 9 a.m., noon, 2 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. in Canyon 116 and 125. Tests will also be given at 8 a.m., 9 a.m. and noon Aug. 23.

New student orientation and advising will be held Aug. 20. For more information, call 733-9554, Ext. 250.

So what's a woman to do when her she'd like to say no comfortably and without bating an eye? Here's advice, taken from a new book by the columnist called "I'm a Day Late and a Dollar Short: A Woman's Survival Guide for the '90s" (Deseret Book):

• Depersonalize the "no's" you give, and even the ones you get. Think about it this way. Saying no needs to relate simply to whether you (or anyone else) have the time, energy, resources - or even the interest - in investing in a certain task. You need to give other people the right to prioritize their lives in a way that makes sense to them. Likewise, you need to exercise the right to prioritize your life in a way that makes sense to you.

Remember, if you don't set limits, you'll give your limited resources away in big chunks and neglect people and activities that are truly important to you.

"TV is like a companion; you feel comfortable with it," Bagwell said. "If we can't have them see that exercise is like a companion, it's an analogy that seems to work."

Start by assessing how much time you spend in front of the TV, Tucker said. "A lot of people aren't aware of how much time they spend."

Then set up a TV diet, deciding how much to watch and when not to watch, so you won't be drawn into the next program just because it's on, he said.

Also, decide what you'll do with the time you're gaining, he said: "When the TV's not on, a lot of people are kind of lost."

And if you can't take your eyes off the tube for an instant, at least let me." Blaming a refusal on someone else diminishes your credibility with others and suggests that you aren't your own person.

"Don't say yes unless you can do it without resentment. It's not fair to other people - who can't read your mind - to say 'yes' and then resent the fact they made a request to which you couldn't say 'no'."

"Be empathic. Show concern for the other person when you can't grant a request: 'I can see you're in a bind. I wish I could help - but I just can't baby-sit your 10 children tonight.'"

"Finally, don't make it difficult for other women to say no. One woman comments: 'We push each other. Oh, it won't take very long!' or 'I'll give you a committee.' We need to ease up on others and respect their needs."

JoAnn Larsen is a Salt Lake City family and marital counselor. Her column appears every Monday in The Times-News.

Biologists watch living cells at work

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The ruffled edge of a mouse-tissue cell, like an incoming tide, surged forward and slid back, trying to close a "wound" scraped across a cell culture on a glass slide.

Until recently, scientists had no way to watch a living moving cell. Now they have: a new take on the old light microscope that brings in computer-enhanced vision and fluorescent dyes.

"It enables you to see structures inside the cell that weren't even visible before. It allows you to see several cells at a time," said Massachusetts Institute of Technology biology Professor Frank Solomon.

The ordinary light microscope is the kind through which generations of high school students have seen the single-cell horrors in a drop of tap water. It was invented in the 1600s and used until the 1950s, when the research tool of choice became the electron microscope.

Lansing Taylor of Carnegie Mellon University works with a new procedure to observe cells under the microscope while they are still alive.

Today provides a brightly colored, 3-D movie of a cell at work.

In the new technology, developed since 1980, the light microscope is hooked up to video cameras, image enhancers, computers and state-of-the-art optics — everything but bells and whistles. The result has been called a light-microscope work station, a machine-vision light microscope and a video-enhanced contrast microscope, Taylor calls his Multi Mode Light Microscope.

At CMU, a foil duct to the ceiling carries away ozone produced by the microscope's light source.

Nobody hunches over an eyepiece here. Rather, students or professors sit back and gaze at a television screen. Add fluorescent dyes, and a researcher can light up cell structures and operations that never had been guessed at.

The dyes absorb a given color of light and emit a different color. And the microscope lens can focus through the cell to reveal the three-dimensional features of life's smallest unit. Taylor, one of the microscope's pioneer developers, speeded up a videotape to show that as one edge of the undulating mouse cell — a wound-healer called a fibroblast — moved ahead, other protoplasm moved toward the back of the cell.

On another tape, fluorescent green streaks in a cell indicated fibers of actin, a protein involved in cell movement. The streaks moved constantly through the cell, disappeared at the nucleus and reformed again at the cell's edge.

"What's the cell doing? We don't know. That's one of the things we're looking at," Taylor said. The usefulness of some of the information the new microscope produces may not be apparent immediately. That doesn't bother Alan Waggoner, the CMU biological sciences professor who developed the dyes.

However, research into birth defects already has profited from the light-microscope work station. The journal Cell reported May 30 that scientists have discovered the gene that causes fragile X syndrome, a form of mental retardation that runs in families. Graduate student James Sutcliffe of Emory University in Atlanta, who worked on the fragile X project, said the microscope helped pinpoint the location of the defective gene on patients' X chromosomes.

Pregnant women stay comfortable in summer

By Stephanie Shapiro
The Baltimore Evening Sun

Summer: It is the best of times and the worst of times to be pregnant. The weather may be unfeasible — in addition to the burden of extra weight, because pregnant women generate more heat than others. But there are advantages; too-hot swimming pool beckons, as do the seasonal produce and breezy, comfortable clothing.

Culled from the common sense lore of women who have been there, as well as professionals here are some tips on staying cool and pretty during a hot, hazy summer.

Invest in cool, loose cotton and linen clothing, in maternity or other styles. The Glamour Guide to Pregnancy (Ballantine, 1986) recommends dresses, which "feel cooler than suits or slacks," and clothes that are unlined and can be worn without a slip.

Do not hesitate to experiment. If you are searching for clothes that can be worn during and after pregnancy, "peasant-chic" clothing stores and mid-range chain stores seem to specialize in big, blousy and stretchy, African-style, batik jumpers, drop-waist dresses, trapeze shirts and tops, mini-skirts with elasticated waists, T-shirts, stirrup pants, over-sized chemises and Hawaiian-style shirts cover a lot of abdominal territory.

Summer bangles around the collar distract from the belly. Search the father-to-be's closet for well-ventilated clothing that will fit through several months of pregnancy. A man's shirt tied just below the tummy and worn with a pair of maternity shorts is a trim, smart look.

Borrow maternity clothes from friends. Choose maternity styles that flatter.

Your hair can be one of your best beauty assets during pregnancy. Thanks to those hormones, it probably is looking thick and shiny. Choose a cut that takes into account your face and body profile. Hair cropped short for summer should not be a too-severe contrast to growing roundly. A soft and wispy cut at chin level is a more complementary, the Glamour guide says. Long hair worn up — in a pony tail, twist or braids — is, also cool and pretty.

Does music slow down the aging process?

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Before settling on a name, musicians in this group discarded such ideas as the Last Chance Band or the Grateful Alive.

Most of the members of the New Horizons Band have about 20 years of experience "on the tie-dye clad youngsters at the Eastman School of Music teaching them how to play their instruments — little of it musical."

Along with having fun and fulfilling a few lifelong dreams, the band members are about to become test cases in studies to determine whether playing music has health benefits for an aging population.

"As far as I know, there is no time in which it is too late to play," said Frank Wilson, a California neurologist and author of "Tone Deaf and All Thumbs? An Invitation to Music-Making." Wilson organized a weeklong conference on music and aging this summer at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y.

The New Horizons Band is different from the hundreds of community and church bands spread across the country because its organizers were looking strictly for never-aging members must be at least 50 years old.

When Roy Ernst, professor of music education at the Eastman School, placed a newspaper ad in January announcing the start of the band, he hoped for 30 replies. He got about 60. His group is a mixture of people who have never picked up an instrument or have done nothing since high school band. A few musically proficient people were told they couldn't play the instrument they were used to. A piano teacher who joined had to play a wind instrument.

Some medical treatments restore youthful looks

The Associated Press

Face wrinkles are inevitable signs of aging, but there is a fountain of effective medical treatments available — other than plastic surgery — to restore at least some youthful looks.

Some of these treatments include: Abrasion. Physicians use a wire wheel or other device to "sand" your skin. This procedure is a quite effective around the mouth and eyes.

Chemical peel. A medication called trichloroacetic acid is painted over wrinkles near the eyes and mouth as well as the cheeks and chin. The acid, in effect, sings the skin but instead of producing a scar, smoother skin develops in the healing process.

Retin-A or retionic acid. Used for 15 years to treat acne, this prescription cream can reverse the effects of sun-damaged skin by reducing wrinkling, mottling and roughness. It causes sun-damaged skin to peel away and this and smooths the skin's outer layer.

Alpha-hydroxy acids. These chemical substances, found naturally in sugar cane and in fruits such as apples, mangoes and pears, are applied as a cream or lotion to reduce fine wrinkling and improve overall skin texture. They also help retain moisture in severely dry skin.

Mayo Clinic dermatologist Anthony F. Fransway says the use of moisturizers won't prevent wrinkles, but they can temporarily mask tiny lines and creases.

Playing largely classical compositions, members practice as both a large band and smaller ensembles. They've put on one informal performance so far, but are hoping for some public appearances this fall. Ernst helped start the group with a grant from the National Association of Music Merchants, who sense a potential new market if the idea catches fire.

Band members practice twice a week, and Ernst reports "remarkable progress" among some of his charges. After several weeks of being unable to coax a sound from the clarinet, 77-year-old Whitlaw Roemer has progressed to the point where he even composed a musical accompaniment to the poem, "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner."

Dorris Nash, 67, found little time for the saxophone she played in high school after growing up and raising two children. The retired medical librarian jumped at the chance to start again after being told about the band.

"The camaraderie is just marvelous," Nash said. "Everyone is just smiling and having a good time."

That's the most obvious benefit the band gives people who may be lonely, a social activity, and people who are less isolated tend to be more healthy, Ernst said.

But the University of Rochester's medical school will be looking for more hidden benefits — such as whether learning to play an instrument lowers blood pressure or increases brain activity, said researcher Kenneth Swartz.

Band participants say that while learning to play instruments like tubas and drums may be physically more difficult than when they were teenagers, they're better motivated.

my hands," Hanover said. She added that she believes her bad habits began as a result of coping with daily stresses and eventually became more involuntary and less connected to tension.

Many people try to banish bad habits from their lives by unlearning the behaviors and substituting new ones that also offer gratification. Some try exercise or meditation, while others learn to play the piano or tack on false fingernails.

Certainly, one way to stop a bad habit is to interrupt the behavior and substitute good performance," said Tucker. "But I prefer to work hypothetically. Tucker characterized a bad habit as a goal that the person may not be in touch with his or her true feelings. He said he counsels with a lot of people who are fighting bad habits.

"Through hypnosis, we can look at the attachment to the habit," Tucker said. He added that hypnosis allows a psychologist to plant positive notions in the unconscious mind. These new ideas can help a person give up a bad habit, he said.

In addition to substituting new behaviors for old and seeking ways to ease underlying tensions, psychologists also suggest taking a close look at the situations that trigger bad habits. Hanover, for example, feels the need to twist her hair when she drives her car or watches TV. Those are her trigger situations.

"In order to break a habit, it is important to look both at life issues and at how people behave," Palmer said. "When you are aware of what triggers your habit, you can be more successful in breaking it."

"Analysis may not be so complex when dealing with children, because habits come and go more easily throughout the childhood years. Nail biting, for instance, usually doesn't manifest itself until after age 3 and often begins during a transition time. Many children give up this habit, within a year, as a result of peer pressure. The habit may recur later in life, however, especially during times of stress. Occasionally, a habit can have fairly extensive implications.

"Whenever I'm sitting in a room swinging my leg, I sometimes notice other people starting to follow along," Hanover said. "My mother-in-law says she can't help wiggling her leg if she watches me long enough, and my brother-in-law has picked up the habit from me, too."

Hanover admitted she isn't sure she will ever give up her leg swinging, but she does try to think positively. "At least it keeps my legs in great shape," she said with a sigh.

the SPINAL COLUMN
by Drs. Sirucek & Corbin

Do You Have A Pinched Nerve?

The Chiropractic Physician is trained in body mechanics and how to relieve the cause of the symptoms that you have. The term "pinched nerve" is not a clinical term but helps to explain why the symptoms you have may be directly associated with the spine.

If you are suffering from radiating pain in the neck, arms, shoulders, back legs or feet it may well indicate pressure on the nerves as they emit from the spine. Headaches are one of the most common results of the nerves being stretched, irritated or compressed by inflammation in or near the spine. The doctor may call it a pinched nerve for easier understanding, and then identify it with a more clinical term on your insurance form.

Undue pressure on a nerve may cause an increase or decrease in normal nerve impulse transmission and bring about symptoms from headaches, stomach malfunction, and numbness in the legs. Since the nervous system is the first system formed in embryo, every function of the body is related to the brain and the nerve pathways of the muscles, organs and bones. Your body temperature, speech, vision and balance are all controlled by the nervous system.

The Chiropractic Physician will normally check and adjust the area of the spine associated with the symptoms you have. This adjustment of the vertebra is done after thorough examination and X-ray to determine the exact location of the trouble.

Disturbances in the spine can occur from poor posture, falls and even a simple slip on a rug. If the spine is suddenly disturbed in any way a "pinched nerve" may be the result and the chiropractic physician is the doctor that is trained to treat this type of condition.

There are many simple tests the doctor can perform to determine the possibility of nerve irritation. If you can answer yes to any of the following questions maybe you should call your chiropractic physician for an appointment.

QUESTIONS:

1. Continuing headache type pain that begins in the morning or develops in late afternoon.
2. Pains that travel from the neck to the shoulder and arm, or from the hip to the knee.
3. Dizziness when you change position suddenly.
4. Being told by some doctors there is nothing wrong with you and still the pain is present.

Do You Have PAIN?
You may need to talk to a Doctor.

Alaskan air travelers, others, need to beware of hungry ravens

If you're one of the millions of Americans who travel by air, a question you no doubt frequently ask yourself upon boarding an airplane is: "What, exactly, are the odds that this airplane will be pecked apart by birds?"

Unfortunately they are a lot higher than you thought. Alert reader Colleen C. Brown has sent in an Associated Press article stating that ravens have been pecking holes in small airplanes at the airport in Sotolnna, Alaska. This is not the first example of nature getting out of control in Alaska (official state motto: "Bear? I Don't See Any")... The BeAAAIIEEER... Alaska was also the site of the Easter Egg Hunt from Hell back in April. Many alert readers sent me the story about this event that appeared in The Anchorage Daily News; who sponsored the hunt along with the Kiwanis Club. The story says that about 1,500 children showed up for the hunt, but some of them wandered too far into the woods, where the snow was waist-deep. "Kids became stuck in the deep snow and mud and began to panic," the story says. "At least eight were reported missing by their parents." So the police were called, and if you are at all familiar with Alaska you will not be surprised to learn that one officer, Fred Jones, was attacked by a moose. The Anchorage police probably have a standard radio code, such as "10-53," that means "Officer Being Attacked By Moose While Attempting To Rescue Children Lost In Snow."

Officer Jones, flailing his way through the snow, tried desperately to escape, but the Easter Moose, which weighed 1,500 pounds and was in a very bad mood, kept after him. Finally Officer Jones was forced to draw his revolver and dispatch the moose to The Big Stomping Ground In The Sky, after which I assume he advised it of its rights. But aside from this incident and some cases of frostbite, it was a fun day all around. We can only imagine what kind of special treat The Daily News and Kiwanis Club are cooking up for the children for Christmas. Perhaps someone body should alert the National Guard.

But the point is that we should not be surprised to learn that small airplanes in Alaska are, having holes pecked in their wings by ravens. The Associated Press article quotes a raven expert named Boyd Shafer ("who has worked with ravens in movies") as saying that ravens are "highly intelligent" birds that are always pecking things open in search of something to eat.

"If they think there's food inside, then they'll try and get at it," says Shafer, "That's a raven for you."

These are alarming words indeed. Because if the ravens are in fact "highly intelligent," it's only a matter of time before they figure out that they're wasting their time looking for food inside small planes. It's going to dawn on them that a MUCH better source of food is large commercial airplanes, some of which even carry a choice of entrées (usually "beef that tastes like chicken" and "chicken that tastes like used football pads").

Some night in the near future, on some commercial flight carrying a couple of hundred tired business persons home, the pilot's voice will come on the intercom and say: "Ladies and gentlemen, we seem to be encountering some unexpected PECK PECK PECK really there's nothing to worry PECK PECK PECK PECK probably just go away if we PECK PECK PECK PECK PECK PECK PECK MY GOD THEY'RE COMING THROUGH THE WINDSCREEN PECK PECK

PECK PECK PECK PECK OH NOOOOOO..."

What could happen next inside that ill-fated airplane is only too easily imagined by anybody who's ever read a Hitchcock's chilling movie: The Birds, in which tens of thousands of birds suddenly, without warning, dressed up as Anthony Perkins and attacked Janet Leigh in the shower.

When the plane swerved and pitched violently, with the pilot fighting to regain control, the passenger cabin would become a nightmarish chamber of horrors as swarms of highly intelligent, slinking, entranced ravens, their sharp talons glinting in the light of the FASTEN SEAT BELTS signs, swooped and dove among terrified business persons making pathetic attempts to defend themselves but succeeding only in whipping each other on the heads with their Wall Street Journals.

Somebody should do something. We can't count on the airlines.

They're paralyzed by financial problems, which have gotten so bad that on many flights, the pilot will refuse to land until the passengers agree to cash his paycheck. So it's up to you to protect yourself. From now on, when you take a commercial flight, you should carry some means of self-defense, such as a tennis racket or a small travel-size mace.

If the airport security personnel ask any questions, tell them: "Don't worry! This is only in case the plane is attacked by ravens!" If they have any questions, as evidenced by the fact that they wrestle you to the floor and handcuff you and sit on your head, then you just refer them to me. Assume them that I am a well-known nationally syndicated newspaper columnist who will take full responsibility. Be sure you spell my name correctly: G-E-Y-O-R-G-E W-L-L.

Tennis provides aerobic workout

By Sally Squires
The Washington Post.

For an estimated 23 million Americans, regular exercise is a love affair. They play tennis.

Since its introduction in England 120 years ago as an aristocratic lawn game, tennis has grown steadily in popularity.

Today, about one in 10 U.S. households contains one or more tennis players, according to the U.S. Tennis Association.

The sport requires speed, agility and power. Players often lunge across the court and spring to the net, which can cause injury for those who haven't done adequate warm-up exercises.

"We have an old saying: 'You get in shape to play tennis,' you don't play to get in shape," said Bill Norris, men's trainer for the Association of Tennis Professionals' Tour.

Beginners don't get much of an aerobic workout because tennis requires skill to keep the ball in play.

A study by the tennis association found that during an hour on the court, beginners typically expend about 53 minutes picking up balls.

But more experienced players — those who can hit both forehand and backhand shots and get most of their serves across the net — can burn up to 450 calories an hour playing singles, said Jack Groppel, a physician who heads the USA's Sports Science Committee.

Doubles, on the other hand, provides a far less strenuous workout. Only the best players, those who go all out during each game, are likely to boost their heart rates to aerobic levels, Groppel said.

Regardless of a person's skill, say tennis experts, all players need to spend time warming up with spins or fast walking and stretching exercises. Carol Teitz, associate professor of orthopedic surgery at the University of Washington's division of sports medicine, recommends flexing wrists, stretching calf muscles, loosening heel tendons and shoulder muscles.

or combativens.

"It could be to show off the price of something, whether it was really expensive or really cheap," she says. "Or it might also just be kind of funny; it's kind of a wacky style."

The fashion statement has posed a problem to some store managers, who find it hard to watch for shoplifters when customers walk around with price tags dangling from their clothes.

Looking

"It has to do with idolatry of major professional sports," says Lisa Weidman of Thrasher, a magazine for teen-age skateboarders. "I'd say it's definitely a display of wealth, akin to wearing a fur coat. They just leave the price tag on — they leave all the tags on."

Jim Shaunfield, the manager of Foot Locker at NorthPark Center, says the big plastic logo tags from sportswear companies such as Nike are especially noticeable.

"It's not the price tags — it's the brand names," he says. "We always cut them off because they make the displays look cluttered. But people come in and ask for them. We give them to them because we just threw them away. A lot of them end up as key chains."

Mary Clarke, a fashion editor at Sassy, a teen magazine, says the fur may be a way of expressing humor

Designer stresses flattering colors

"I hate the cold," designer Marc Jacobs says. "No matter the season, I always want to think that spring is right around the corner," he muses, adding, "Maybe that's the reason I always use pale colors in my fall clothes."

But Jacobs, designer of the women's Perry-Elis collections, isn't the only one who's singing "It might as well be spring" this fall.

Though autumn is traditionally a time for deep moody colors, this time around numerous designers have opted not only for brights but also for an unexpected array of, Easter egg and soft Jordan almond tones.

"They're so flattering," Jacobs explains.

Mother-in-law uses boots for kicking relative

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law has never liked me, but time worsens things. She lives in another state, thank God, but she visits often.

Here is my gripe: One week after I gave birth to my second child, Mom was visiting me. I bent over to tie the laces of my firstborn's shoe, and she kicked me in the behind with her pointed-toe Western boot, then she let out a hearty laugh! My husband was right there, and he never said a word to her!

I later told a family friend about this incident and the friend couldn't believe it, so she went to my mother-in-law and asked her, "Well, Mom, why did you do that? My husband was right there, and he never said a word to her!"

mother, and can double-talk his way out of anything.

HAD IT WITH ROUGHNECKS

DEAR HAD IT: Don't call 911 — that's for emergencies, not for a chronic pain in the behind. Something must be wrong with your mother-in-law, and I think your husband must have inherited it. Be grateful that "Mom" doesn't wear spurs.

DEAR ABBY: I have been an avid reader of your column for years. I am an African-American male, 30 years of age, who has been incarcerated for almost seven years now, convicted of first-degree homicide and sentenced to serve 30 years.

While in the penitentiary, I completed all academic requirements for a B.S. degree in applied psychology.

I very much wish to become a registered nurse. Prior to my incarceration, I had completed two years of nursing school at a local four-year college. I intend to seek another undergraduate degree in nursing upon my release. The question is this: Will my being a convicted felon prevent me from pursuing a career in nursing?

I really do want to help people, Abby. Regrettably, it took this episode in my life to enable me to mature and come to an appreciation of life. I feel that nursing would also assist in my psychological healing, which I am remorseful and I do regret my past actions.

DEAR H.B.: Each state has its own requirements regarding licensing to practice nursing. Upon your release, write to the State Board of Nursing located in the capital city of the state in which you would like to practice. And if you enclose a stamped envelope, addressed to yourself, your chances for a response may be increased.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

This mathematics may be defined as the subject in which we never know what we are talking about nor whether we are saying is true. -Bertrand Russell.

You don't need to have majored in math to determine the best percentage play for today's ninth winner. All you have to know are a few basic rules regarding probabilities. South wins West's fourth-best heart lead and marks time by cashing the ace and king of diamonds. He's thinking about how best to find his ninth trick. He has two hearts, four diamonds and two clubs. Should he try for his ninth in spades or in clubs? He cannot plan on both chances; if he leads the opponents in twice, their heart suit will be cleared and ready to run. The chances for the spade ace to be with West are a straight 50-50. What are the chances for a 3-3 club break?

Whenever an even number of cards are outstanding, the chances of an even break are below 50 percent. In this case (3-3), only 35.53 percent. Therefore, the correct percentage play is to lead toward dummy's spade king for the ninth winner. It only appears to be more dangerous to lead toward dummy's unprotected king. In reality, it's the odds-on play.

Students living outside of Twin Falls or Jerome counties but within the State of Idaho will be charged out-of-district fees in addition to the regular tuition and fee cost. The student's home county may pay the out-of-district fee providing the student meets the requirements of Section 33-2110A and 33-2110B of the Idaho Code in all respects. Excerpts from the Code are as follows:

"No County shall be liable for out-of-district tuition unless the Board of County Commissioners of the County has first verified to the Junior College in writing the fact that the student is a resident of the County", and

"A resident student is any student whose parents or court appointed guardians are domiciled in the Junior College district and provide more than fifty percent (50%) of his support".

A completed Certificate of Residency is required from all out-of-district students. If certification is not received the student will be required to pay the fee normally charged to the County. A new certificate must be obtained each year that you attend the College of Southern Idaho.

The Certificate of Residency blanks are available from the college business office, counseling offices, and most county commissioners' offices. Each out-of-district student should obtain certification from his/her county commission.

COLLEGE OF SOUTHERN IDAHO

WORKSHOP

by Dr. Martin Seidenfeld
TEAM BUILDING AND EMPLOYEE MOTIVATION

There are two basic requisites needed to develop a strong and healthy organization team:
Trust and interpersonal respect.

A sharing of practices, goals, and values. Lacking trust and being uncertain in respect, members of an organization become guarded and unable to devote their energies to the tasks that need doing. Without agreed-upon goals and values; they find themselves competing instead of collaborating, unable to commit to team membership. Without these two requisites, they fail to perform, and the organization suffers.

The major emphasis of this workshop is to help managers define their organizations' basic goals and the values and practices that follow from them.

Particular emphasis will be given to methods for improving employee motivation, focusing on effective performance reviews as a key element. Techniques for effective reprimanding will also be explored.

Finally, those attending will be helped to develop greater self-confidence in themselves as managers. They will have the opportunity to share with each other, to whatever depth they choose, their personal philosophies, attitudes, wishes and fear about their companies and their careers.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

Managers in both private and public section organizations who wish to create greater harmony and stronger teamwork among their managers and throughout their entire organizations.

PROGRAM LEADER

Dr. Martin Seidenfeld, psychologist, is President of Human Resources Corporation, and serves on the faculties of Boise State University and the College of Idaho. A former vice president of American Management Psychologists, Inc., one of America's largest firms of consulting psychologists, Dr. Seidenfeld has consulted with many of America's largest corporation as well as numerous smaller companies, government agencies, and other organizations. An extremely popular speaker and seminar presenter, he had his own radio call-in program and is a widely published author.

Dr. Seidenfeld is a former president of the Idaho Psychological Association and is a member of the American Psychological Association and the American Society for Training and Development.

STATISTICAL ANALYSIS USING ELECTRONIC SPREADSHEETS

Why use statistics?

Statistics gives us a way to measure our uncertainty. We lack definite answers, but we know which outcomes are most probable and how much confidence we can place in the predictions. The use of statistics guards against certain prevalent fallacies and biases.

Sales managers or Comptroller for a Business

Assume you need to forecast sales for the next three years. With good historical data and the use of regression analysis in a spreadsheet, you can predict sales and state the level of confidence you have in your estimates.

Educators

This semester's algebra class seems unusually bright. You can use the Student's T-test in a spreadsheet to determine if this population is different from last semester's class.

Researchers

Does a new variety, new drug or pesticide, or new medical treatment work better than the standard one?

Legal Profession

Assume you work for a law firm. There are many areas of the law that virtually require the use of statistics in helping to determine whether a violation of the law has occurred. These include employment discrimination, deceptive advertising, damage determinations, and earnings forecasts.

There are hundreds of stat packages for the PC, some brought down from monstrous mainframes. Few are as versatile or inexpensive as using a spreadsheet, such as Lotus 1-2-3, QuatroPro, etc. Analysis templates can be easily prepared for repeated data analysis. Did you know that multiple and polynomial regression can be easily done with spreadsheets? Besides the basic statistical functions supplied by spreadsheets, it is easy to produce the sums of squares which are the basic calculation for many statistical tests.

Course Description

The student will be led through review of theory, steps of analysis, and review of interpretation of inferences. Lectures, demonstration, and guidance through keyboard exercises (some homework) should prepare the student to perform standard statistical procedures. The focus of the course will be using an electronic spreadsheet to perform statistical procedures, not teaching basic statistics and theory.

The Business File covers everything from forming and managing a small business and its personnel, to production, marketing, accounting, investing, legal concerns, all the challenges of doing business in an international arena and in a high-tech era.

Government by Consent focuses on the way every individual can affect the way we are governed. It attempts to combat the growing apathy and alienation among the American people by showing how individuals can make a difference in how government operates. The course utilizes interviews with political movers and shakers, minidocumentary segments, animation, and graphics that vividly explain complex concepts and processes.

War and Peace in the Nuclear Age incorporates a variety of perspectives — political, historical, philosophical, and scientific — providing students with a solid foundation of knowledge upon which they can base their views of the nuclear future. The course shows how nuclear politics and technology have influenced international relations and contemporary thought.

DYNAMICS OF CLINICAL PRACTICE

PHILIP CROSY on SUCCESSFUL LEADERSHIP for MANAGING QUALITY

What does leadership mean in the reality of the business world? What are the characteristics of a successful leader and a well-run organization? This telecast examines the structure of the successful organization and its ordinary concerns of the leader: quality, finance, and relationships. It addresses special problems women and minorities face in attaining executive positions and offers practical solutions. The telecast provides a detailed discussion of finance and the creation of financial black holes. What are the most effective ways to communicate about finance and debt? Are budgets of any value?

The second session of the telecast focuses on relationships among executives and their peers, employees, suppliers, customers, and the community. Discussion includes leadership's accountability to work and family and whether both can be served. Detailed topics in quality are then explored, including difficulties in implementing quality improvement and policies that make quality the fabric of an organization.

Philip B. Crosby consults, lectures, and writes on management. His vast experience in quality includes positions as quality manager at Martin Marietta, a vice president of ITT, and most recently, founder and consultant for Philip Crosby Associates, Inc. Mr. Crosby's success in challenging conventional management wisdom has attracted organizations from around the world. Mr. Crosby's numerous books address obstacles to achieving quality in business. Three focus on management's role in quality improvement: Quality is Free, translated into 15 languages; The Eternally Successful Organization; and Leading: The Art of Becoming an Executive.
