Suit challenges spotted owl rules

Suit challenges spotted owl rules

WASHINGTON Logging and community groups Friday challenged federal rules infeitled to protect the northern spotted owl, saying they have economically harmed timber-dependent areas in the Pacific Northwest.

In a lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court, the plaintiffs contended the U.S. Fish and Wildlife overstepped its legal mandate when it issued the regulations in July 1990.

The rules were set with the regulations in July 1990.

The rules were set with the regulations of the reconomic impact, the lawsuit said, adding that officials in Washington state, Oregon and California have relied on them in adopting local regulations.

As a result, large areas of land are improperly of limits to timber harvesting," the suit said.

The plaintiffs include community droups in Sweet Home and Mill City, Oregon, individual trustees for timberland holdings, and logging company owners.

Appeals Court won't rush abortion law

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court on Friday refused to put the nation's strictest antiabortion law on the fast track to the U.S. Supreme Court.

U.S. Supreme Court.

The 5th U.S. Circuil Court of Appeals denied motions by state Attorney General William Guste to expedite a hearing on the Issue and to certify issues in the case for immediate Supreme Court review.

The three-judge 5th Circuit panel case gave no reasons for the decision.

The law passed by the Legislature this summer would send doctors who perform abortions to jail for up to 10 years with fines of up to $100,000.

The well-equipped army is nominally under the command of the eight-member federal presidency, where Serbia and its allies control four votes. But some military units appear to have acted independently during the 2-month-old Yugoslavis.

The fighting began after Croatia and Slovenia declared independence on June 25. They acted after the leaders of Yugoslavia's six republics refused to agree to their demand that Yugoslavia be, transformed into a loose association of sovereign states.

Brouhaha resumes over empty council seat

'I can have the floor anytime I want it!'

WENDELL.—Let the people, not the mayor, decide who should fill the vacant seat on the Wendell City Council.
This was the consensus Thursday, of council members Ron Finley, Jack Green and Dale Bunn over the strong objections of Wendell Mayor GeorgelBenson.
At a special council meeting attended by about 20 persons, Benson said Gwen Rost was his second choice-for.a.council-andidate to replace Pat Goedhart, who resigned at the end of July. The council last week rejected Benson's first choice of Connie Bjornn.
Finley said that an appointed council member would only serve at two council meetings before the November election.
Rather than appoint someone now, Finley said, the voters should be allowed to pick the next council member.

- Wendell Mayor George Benson

"There's nothing against any person who has been nothinated so far," Finley said.
"But it's close to election time."
Benson interrupted Finley to say that city law requires the mayor to make appointment and for the council to approxe or deny that appointment.
Finley objected to Benson's interruption.
Benson replied. "I can have the floor anytime! want it.

The Idaho license tag has been redesigned, and now looks much like the state's centernain plate that's been on the road since 1987. The biggest difference is that it says "scenie Idaho" and "famous potatoes," according to Sandra Ulrich of the Twin Falls County assessor's office.

The standard green-on-white license ag has been around for 25 years, and during that time the state issued new plates periodically. Before that, Idaho alternated green-on-white and white-on-green plates and sold them annually.

The four-year-old, red-white-and-blue "centennial plates cost extra."

State officials say they are issuing new plates to standardize the license tags—about a quarter of Idaho plates are the-centennial version—and because many of the old ones are wearing out. They also say they are running out of numbers for Ada County, the state's most populous, and need to start over.

The forest reserve system was established in 1891 to protect timber lands and watersheds. When it was created in 1905, the Sawtooth reserve encompassed what is now the Boise, Payette and Sawtooth forests and parts of the Lemhi, Salmon and Challis forests.

Jerome prisoners receive exercise area

By H.R. Weixel Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Immates at the Jerome County jail will be able to spend time outside exercising in a zoon-to-be constructed recreation area.

Jerome County Commissioners have chosen a 1,500-square-foot area on the north side of the courthouse as a recreation ward.

Two security fences, one made of cinder block and the other a chain link fence, will enclose three sides. The north side of the courthouse will be used as the fourth wall.

Razor ribbon wire and a wire dome over the top of the enclosure will provide further security, according to bid specifications. Basketball, volleyball and other exercise equipment will be available in the 'Plans are to cover the ground with four inches of concrete.

"This will begin to bring us into full compliance with federal and state regulations," said Sheriff Larry Gold. "It's only a temporary solution, but until a funding source is found this will have to do."

State inspectors recently faulted the jail for its lack of outdoor recreation.

Idaho Jail Standards Coordinator Judy Felton qualified the deficiency, though.

"Jerome hasn't been able to furnish a secure outdoor recreation area, but they do shackle the prisoners and take them outside for exercise and other activities," she said.

A recently constructed interior exercise room also serves as a classroom where inomates receive schooling twice a month.
"Our overall goal is to cut down on the recidivism rate and build up self-esteem," Gold said. "We want to produce a person that feels good about himself."

And she stanted just by smiling.

Dembrowsky, president of the Institute for Affective Skill Development, described to Twin. Fall's teachers Friday how she developed a curriculum for troubled students that shows them how to aim for long-term goals rather than for instant gratification.

Counselors are using Dembrowsky's leaster for the sixth of the standard for the sixth of the Counselors are using Dembrowsky's lessons for a new elective class this year, Twin Falls High School counselor Debbie Van Engelen said. The Magic Valley Alternative High School will also offer the date.

offer the class.— Dembrowsky said she had a reputation for "inappropriate behavior" in the sixth grade; but her teacher — "Mrs. Wilson"— changed that by recruiting her to tutor third-graders and by acting as a sounding board for her lessons under the guise that she was nervous.

"And I must have been good because she nevel looked nervous to me during reading, Dembrowsky said."

Dembrowsky said.

Dembrowsky said building a relationship with students is the most powerful tool in teaching. Imprisoned students she taught in Alaska this summer were aloof until she developed rapport with them, she said.

en they learned. --

"It's not just how to survive in class, but how to survive in life," she said.

Van Engelen and two other high school counselors have encouraged "high risk" students to join the classes at the high school and the alternative school. They hope it will help them build self-esteem, develop motivation, assume responsibility and expand their talents, she said.

The school is also optering a class for parents of those students, she said. "It is a family issue," Van-Engelen-said. "They are a big part of that child's life so it is important to work with them. The school realizes that students have difficulty learning when their lives are in turmoil, she said. "They have high capabilities, but they havel tight capabilities, but they havel utilifiled their potential," Wan Engelen said.
The Friday meeting gave Twin Falls teachers a taste of the strategies Dembrowsky uses, she said. Deptorowsky encouraged teachers to try to build relationships with all-of-their students, even if they see 178 every day. The teachers can do it one student at a time, she said.

She told a story about a jogger who stops, and asks an old man on a beach why he is scooping up starfishes and throwing them into the sea.

The old man says throwing them back saves their lives.

Coup fails as Soviets abandon Lutherans tackle social problems, re-elect bishop communism as a 'statist god'

L NEW YORK (AP) — At the heart of the failure of last week's attempted Soviet coup was the sweeping abandonment of communism as a "statist god," says a noted scholar of Russian Orthodoxy who was there at the or noted scholar of Russian Orthodoxy who was there at the time. "It's a creed that failed," said the Rev. John Meyendorff, a theologian-historian and leading authority on Soviet life. "The feeling of the country has been exorcized, so to speak, of a demon. They got rid of communism." Meyendorff, in Moscow when a hard-line communist group declared the ouster of President Mikhail Corbachev only to confront massive popular opposition and Gorbachev's speedy restoration, said in an interview: "It was fantastio," almost the

He said Markist-Leninist social-political ideology with its avowed atheism has prevailed in the past as a "substitute religion, a monolithic, dogmatic system, imposed by force," denying any transcendent God, rejecting any higher truth or rights of conscience.

"It's a sort of false religion," he said. "But now everybody knows it is false. The plotters hoped it still would work. They tried to recover power, based on bowing down to communism. But nobody believes in 1t anymore. It won't work anymore."

Salt Lake cathedral restoration moves into its 2nd phase

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The second phase of restoration of Salt Lake's historic Cathedral of the Madeleine will begin soon, after officials signed a $7 million construction contract.

"Having work."

"Having worked on the financial end of this, it's just thrilling to get to this point," said Catholic diocese controller Barbara. Woodbury.

The contract was signed by Charles H. Culp, president of Salt Lake's Culp Construction Co., and the Most Rev. William K. Weigand, bishop of the Salt Lake Catholic Diocese, at a cathedral newsconference.

conference.

The first phase of restoration of the 82 year-old cathedral-began in February and involved a complete inspection of the building and necessary demolition work.

Architect-on-site Vince Benie of the Nev York firm of Beyer Blidder Belle Architects, said the project is "so unique that nothing like this has been done in the country."

and approved a policy calling for resisting and struggling against the evils of the world.

Rejecting a motion to delay action on social issues pending further study, delegates to the assembly of the 4-year-old Evangelical Lutheran 'Church' in 'America' approved a 'foundational' document laying the basis for church action on social issues.

The assembly also tackled its first such issue, abortion, with keen debate about it. When it would be acted on was uncertain. The eight-day policy-making assembly runs through Wednesday.

In the statement on church social action, the delegates said: "The presence and promise of God's reign makes the church restless and discontented with the world's brokenness and violence. Acting for the sake of God's world requires resisting and struggling against the evils of the world.

BLOOD FOR THE GODS

Trace back the liquids used to christen ships: Now, it's champagne. Yesteryear, red wine.

Earlier, animal blood. Earliest, human blood, a sacrifice to the gods. Human life wasn't sacred, but ships were.

Aristotle thought farming was "natu-al," but retail trade was "unnatural." Q. Anything to the old sailing vessel persition that a naked woman aboard ship culms the sea?

A. Suilors of old quoted it. For rea-ons of their own.

Superstitions usually have practical rigins, do they not?

Q. A "cyclone" is just another name for "hurricane," right? How do they dif-fer from "typhoon"?

A. They don't. Their occans are dif-ferent, that's all, Atlantic, hurricane. Pa-cific, typhoon, Indian, cyclone. Writes a client: "A 'near miss' isn't something that nearly misses.

If it were, it'd be a hit. So why call it that?"

RED ŠEA

Q. If the Red Sea is deep blue, why it called the Red Sea?

A. Death of algae turns the surface reddish brown. From time to time.

Police charge teens with lewd behavior

BLACKFOOT — Three 13-year-old Blackfoot boys have been harged with lewd and lascivious conduct, robbery and aggravated as-ult after allegedly forcing two 9-year-old boys to perform sex acts a each other.

on each other.

According to a Blackfoot Police Department official, the teen-agers have been taken to the state Youth Services Center in St. Anthony.

The two ydenger boys were fishing Tuesday at Jensen's Grove, when the highest occurred.

The teen-agers followed the younger boys to one of their homes and allegedly assaulted a parent with an ax.

Med center plans $6 million expansion

CALDWELL — West Valley Medical Center plans a $6 million expansion over the next year to improve health care services to the Canyon County area.

Canyott County area.

"We're convinced the money we're going to invest in the facility will be the best for Caldwell in the long run and will hold down health-care costs," said Steve Bateman, West Valley administrator.

Bateman led' group of about 20 people through the hospital Thursday to discuss the renovation plans.

Remodeling will add 1,800 square feet of-space for outpatient

Other improvements, such as in the radiology center, will mean pa-tients won't need to walk down the fallways while robed to get from one department to another, Bateman said.

The renovations are also needed to install new X-ray equipment.

Officials hope water regulations work

FORT HALL — After detecting chemical residues in drinking well water north of Fort Hall for the last several years, officials hope tighter regulations will finally begin reducing the contamination.

"We haven't seen any chemical drops yer that we can attribute to-our new rules," said Roger Turner, water quality specialists for the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes. "We expect to eventually see improvement, but we don't expect the drops to show up for quite a while."

COUNCIL (AP) — The two sides of the logging issue make their usual claims, but the timber industry and conservationists agree - the Payette National Forest's Cuddy Mountain sale is an important one.

—Forest officials—have approved—lans for selling about 19 million board feet of timber in two unjouched basins on the Hells Canyon side of the mountain.

Evergreen Elimber Co. in New Meadows and Boise Cascade Corp. Thursday, the companies said logging the area is crucial to the industry's future in southern Indaho. Inner sales like this one represent 30 percent of the Payette forest's annual haryest in the next decade. If groups like Neighbors of Cuddy Mountain halt the sale through an appeal, as they pledged to do, timber workers fear at least one sawmill or several small ones will close.

"It's extremely critical to maintain the current harvest levels," said David Van De Graff, area timber-lands manager for Boise Cascade. "Three isn't enough timber right now to keep everyone here, so someone, will have to take a thic." Overall, southern Idaho mills can collectively process 265 million board feet, he said.

Early test results are still being finalized.

But as testing continues on the 26.000-acre strip of land where high nitrogen fertilizer levels have plagued domestic wells, farmers are cooperating fully with the Fort Hall Business Council's new farm chemical code, Turner said.

McKim Creek fire near containment

SALMON (AF) — Hundreds of firefighters closed the circle on the six-day-old McKim Creek fire in central Idaho's Salmon National Forest on Friday, and fire bosses predicted the 5,000-acre blaze would be contained by day's end. Some 600 firefighters, backed up by air tankers and helicopters, had been committed to the blaze burning 25 miles south of Salmon since it erupted-into-Idaho's-largest-forest-fire-of-the-year earlier-this week.

this week.

The fire was believed to have been started by lightning nearly two weeks ago and then smoldered for days before gusting winds blew it to life on Sunday.

Within less than 24 hours, the blaze exploded over more than 3,500 acres. Fire bosses declared it a major fire, and veteran strategists were called

Chief questions holdback for public education

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Just two and a half weeks after saying he understood the governor's financial 'caution, state Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans is questioning Gov. Cecil Andrus' commitment to public education in view of his order withholding some $6.3 million in state aid to schools.

to schools.

Speaking to teachers in Idaho Falls, Evans maintained public education cannot be both the accounts to priority and the target of budget cuts just like any other program in the state.

"It seems to me that if the public school system is the highest priority for funding — if the education of our children is the most important thing this generation can do for the next—then public schools ought to be exempted, or at least partially exempted, from the executive order, "Evans and description or the state spending "right down to the nubbins" to secure extra cash for public schools and children's programs.

But then the governor imposed a.1.3 pertent holdback in state spending through the end of January, in large part blaming the action on excessive legislative spending last winter.

If the withheld money is not covered by law will write this winter.

Troubling ride returns to fair

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The "Gravitron" ride will be running as planned at the Eastern Idaho State Fairrin Blackfoot, which begins this weekend, the owner of the carrival company offering the ride says.

Federal regulators have urged hutdowns and inspections of Grav-tron rides like the one that fell apart the Missouri State Fair and in-ured seven children last week.

However, George Butler, owner of Butler Amusements of San Jose, Calif., said the ride has been, inspected as federal regulators have asked and will be operating at the fair as planged.

"There's nothing wrong with it," Butler said Friday, "It's in good shape."

Bruins open football season facing old nemesis

TWIN FALLS — After a three-year hiatus, one of the ritigs langided football rivalries has a brief renewal tonight when the Twin Falls Bruins host the Highland ams at 7:30 p.m. at Bruin Stadium.

The Bruins have defeated the Rams only three times since Highland came into being in the fall of 1964. The last time was 10, years ago, when the Bruins wound up second in state. Twin Falls won that one 28-14.

'The teams haven't met since 1987 when Twin Falls left the Gem State Conference to go independent but knit closer ties with teams in the third district.

teams in the third district.

Thickens that collide tonight come prestly much from the same direction. Highland has just one returning starter—but a host of lettermen and squad men. Twin Ealls will have four more starters back but will be relying on some two-way players and some sophomores.

"Both tams are inexperienced," agrees Bruin Coach Jon Jund "but the difference is, we are young. They will be starting just a about all seniors. That maturity makes a difference."

The Rams have a big line to operate behind with 285-pound Shawn O'Hearn and 235-pound Sam Roberts at the tackles. The guards and centers run from 190 to 200.

Senior Ryan Hope, 6-0, 165, will get the quarterback assignment and it appears that 185-pound senior Bo Barrus may be the starting running back. Most of Highland's speed appears in its wide receivers, which gives the young Twin Falls secondary a test.

"When they throw they like to show'a lot of trips(letts) and run a lot of pick routes every well. They usually like to throw adements, 'the coach continued. Looking back over the preseason workouts, Jund said "Twin Falls has gotten better and better in the secondary which is dod because outside of Ryan Malay we have no experience back there. Stich beats the Open heat

NEW YORK - Wimbledon champion

NEW YORK — Wimbledon champion Michael Stich crumpled in a sopping heap in the courtside flower bed at the U.S. Open on Friday and looked ready for burial. The searing sun beat down on fils bare head and the 120-degree court burned through his sneakers. A soaked handkerchief, drooped around his neck. Across the-net, MaliVail Washington was doing delp knee bends after breaking slich's serve to win the fourth set and tie the third-round match.

Stich, unfazed by Wimbledon's floods but bent double by New York's heat and himmidity, pulled himself slowly out of the flowers, ambled over to the baseline, then-did what-all champlons must. From some inner reserve, he got his serve going botter than the weather, resumed his dogged net attack, struck a few blazing forchands and won 5-7, 75, 62, 46, 65 in 39 hours of sheer torture.

Bob Welch, the 1990 Cy Young winner, is 11-9. Dennis Eckersley is a great reliever, but he isn't immortal. And the Athletics' trademark swagger has become a limp to that finish. The White Sox looked heady to pounce on Aug. 11, when Wilson Al-

But Chicago personally helped Detroit get back into the AL East race, losing six times to the Tigers, and also lost to the likes of Cleveland, Baltimore and New York. While Bo Jackson may provide an offensive spark if he completes his remarkable combeback, he probably won't help the Sox, in the standings unless he pitches some complete games.

TORONTO (AP) — Wayne Gretzky and Mark Messier, who terrorized NHL teams when they played together as Edmonton Oilers, could be reunited torlight wearing red and white as the Canada Cuphocky tournament begins.

Gretzky, bothered by a strained right thumb, will play wearing a small cast, while Messier, who didn't report to camp until Friday, said he's in game shape and could sait up when Canada meets Finiand, at Maple Leaf Gardens to open the six-team tournament.

In the two other opening games, the United States, despite the hospitalization of coach Bob Johnson, meets Sweden in Pittsburgh, while the Soviet Union faces Czechoiovakia in Saskatoon.

Gretzky, the team's captain, pronounced himself fit after an hour-long-workout-Friday. "I'm going to play," said No. 99, gingerly massaging the small cast that covers the base of his thumb and wrist. "I've looked forward too much to this tournament to not be playing."

Messier, meanwhile, looked impressive in his first workout with Team Canada. Knee and thumb injuries kept him away from camp until the last minute, but he was welcomed with open arms by coach Mike Keenan, Gretzky and the other Canadian players.

"There's a very good possibility he could play," said Keenan. "His fitness level is far superior than we anticipated.

"I'll be ready whenever they want, me to play, "he said. "It's the games that count in this thing. If they wanted me to dress against the Finns, I could do it."

Keenan said Messier has benefited from an offseason conditioning program that kept his physical condition up to par.

The best by Lewis, the muss consistent jumper in history and the man considered to have the best chance of breaking Beamon's record was 28-10%. He did it twice, once indoors, once outdoors. Twenty-nine feet kept cluding him.

Had Lewis not spread out his talents, in the 100- and 200-meter dashes, the 400-meter relay and the long jump, he probably would have broken the record. Powell, strictly a long jumper, got it with one superbjump—just like Beamon had done.

Lewis finally got his 29-foot jump; he got three of them Friday night, and produced four of the seven-best long jumps in history, under any conditions. He had the greatest series ever. And he lost.

Powell: jumping ahead-of-Lewis, ropend with 25-9%, then followed with 28-0%, 27-2%, a foul, the record 129-2% and a foul.

Lewis began with 28-5% then had a foul, a wind-aided 28-11%, a wind-aided 29-2%. 29-11% and 29-0.

Before Lewis final attempt, Powell sar nervously on the benchfor long jumpers to rest during the competition. "My heart was beating very quickly," said Powell, 27, who was holding his right hand to his heart after having put both hands

NFC Central has early showdown

Vikings seek to reverse trend with Bears; Bengal tempo up

The NFC Central Division on Sunday will get a quick favorite and the Vikings get a quick favorite and the Vikings get a quick opportunity to learn if they can reverse some old bugaboos—grass and Soldier Field.

The Vikings and Bears are, the co-favorites in the division, with Chicago seeking its seventh title in eight years. Minnesota won in 1989.

The Bears also have won their last seven openers, the longest such streak in the NFL.

"I don't know which team is the best in the Central Division, but I guess we'll find out pretty quick," Bears quarterback Jim Harbaugh said.

Bears quarterback Im Harbaugh said. "We know it's important to get off to a good start," Chicago linebacker Mike, Singletary said. "The fact we haven't lost at home in eight years probably is because we have such a great attitude."

probably is declared we have such as a present attitude."

record on the rone, espansing doors," quarterback Wade Wilson said.

"We have to go with a mindset, putting aside all distractions, all the things that have been said about our not being able to win on the road."

"It's going to be a banger," Bears coach Mike Dika said. "It's not going to be for the faint of heart. This is a heavyweight fight. This is a challenge—to the victor goes the spoils."

lenge — to use viscon good not spoils."

Other NFL openers Sunday have Atlanta Kansas City, Seattle at New Orle-us, Tampa Bay at the New York "Jets. Dallas at Cleveland, Philadelphia at Green Bay, Phoenia the Los Angeles Ranis, the Los Angeles Ranis, the Los Angeles Raniders at Houston, Miami at Buffolo. New England at Indianapolis. San Diego at Pittsburgh, Cincinnati at Denver, and Detroit at Washington. On Monday night, it's San Francisco at the New York Giants.

The Vikings, who finished a disappointing 6-10 last season, played their best game in a 41-13 victory at the Metrodome, a game Ditka tabbed as his "Horro Film."

"Just another psychological ploy of Ditka 1s," Minnesota coach Jerry Burns said, "He's a master psychologist. I'd like to learn a few of his tricks."

Elsewhere, the Broncos are putting a lot of emphasis on the opener with the Bengals.

a lot of emphasis on the opener wim to Bengals.

Since Denver began making playoff appearances in 1977, it's won ninc openers and subsequently went to the playoffs eight of those years. Conversely, the Broncos lost five openers, and they failed to grach the playoffs each of those years.

"I way in Dallas for 16, years, and we won the opening game all 16 years and we were in the playoffs of 15 of them," coach Darn Reeves said. "So winning the opener is really mortan! I think it giets you in the right frame of mind and sets the tempo for the whole season."

The Bengals are planning to use a revised form of their no-huddle of-tense against Denver, calling it "the Tenno" tense against Denver, calling it "the Tempo."

It allows quarterback Boomer Esiason to call a play with a hand gesture or a single word out how much we're committed to it," Esiason said. "We've used it for a few quarters free and there. Just hope we give it time and stick with it for four quarters, That's our personality." Esiason used the new wrinkle during the preseason as he directed the Bengals to 11 scores. Coach Sam Wyche's new scheme allows the Bengals to run their no-huddle at dif-ferent speeds, keeping the defense from getting into a rhythm.

While - Cincinnati's o'ifense has sparkled, the Dolphins struggled in the preseason under-Dan Marino. In his seven quarters of preseason ac-tion, the Dolphins produced only three field goals.

In the final game, against the Saints, Marino had five completions in 18 attempts for 68 yards, with in-terceptions ending the first three se-ries. Five days earlier, he signed a five-year, $25 million contract exten-sion.

"There have been some throws that could've been made that he didn't make that he ordinanily makes," coach Don Shula said. "But I think Dan is the least of our problems. I know he's going to be there."
"It's just a matter of exceution. We haven't been in syne," Marino said. Cowboys quarterback: Troy Aikman will be facing a revamped Browns secondary that could give him he opportunity to show what his surgically repaired right arm is completely healed.

The Brown have four defensive backs out with injuries. Thane Gash and Mark Harper are out for the season, and Anthony Bloglock and No. I pick Eric Turner are out of the game. Gash has a neck injury and Harper at torn Achilles tendon. Turner, with a stress fracture in his leg, and Blay-lock, with a broken hand, are out for at least a month.

"I still believe they've got some outstanding players back there." Aikman said.
"Their comers are very good corman said.

"Their comers are very good corners and they're going to make it tough on us. I don't believe we're going to go into the ballgame thinking there's a whole lot of big plays to be made."

Browns comerbacks Raymond Clayborn and Frank Minnifield have both been Pro Bowl performers in the past. But Clayborn is 36, well past re-tirement age for most NFL corners, and Minnifield, at 31, is past his prime.

Clayborn had no interceptions last year, Minnifield two.

Clayborn had no interceptions last year, Minnifield two.

Taking over at safety for (Gash and Turner are Vince Newsome, a Plan B acquisition who led the Rams in tacksee cach of the past two years, and Harlon Barnett, a 1990 fourth-round draft pick from Michigan State who missed the first 10 games last season because of a back injury.

The Rams-Cardinals-game features a reunion of Phoenix defensive coordinator Fritz Shurmur with the team that fired him last year when the Rams-went 5-11.

Jeff Fisher was hired to replace Shurmur, and the Rams are going with an attacking, 443 defense ratherthan the softer 3-4 they used under Shurmur.

Shurmur was hired by the Cardi-Shurmur.

Shumur.
Shumur was hired by the Cardinals shortly after the Rams fired him, and he's made a quick impression.

"Fritz is magnificent," Phoenix. coach Joe Bugel said, "He's a player's coach. They certainly have tremendous respect for him."

Dear Mr. Wolff:
We have a player in our group who chats felly during the bidding or play. Then she continually asks for reviews, asks who's on lead, etc. Do the Laws cover such behavior?

Meter Mevis, Grasd Rapids, Nick.

ANSWER: Ves, the Proprieties section states: "As a matter of courte-sy, a player should refrain from paying insufficient attention to the game (as when a player obviously takes no interest in his hand or fre-quently reviews the auction)."

Dear Mr. Wolff:

when I can get a clinch discard in hearts??

After dummy's heart ace won, south led a heart to his time for the 'sure' fliesses and the roof fell in West gobbled up the nine with his ID, and the slam went one down.

West Spothle wrong to play as he did 'Or this hand and against this particular. West, the answer is a qualified yes. However, he did make the best 'icchnical play. He was right to try the hearts before the diamonds. (good Jack would have made the diamond finesse suncessary, and the hearts had to be played for so feer in any event). He was unlucky in that he played this slam against this opponent. Against most Wests, a l'irst-round heart finesse to dummy's Jack would work. pesse to duramy's jack would work, and winning a total of 12 tricks af-ter that would prove to be routine.

OAKLEY - Magic Valley feedlot operators are remaining calm in the face of low cattle prices and a nationwide oversupply of heavy cattle.

"We've watched it through a number of years here." said Phyllis Bedke of Bedke Feedlot in Oakley. "The prices stay down from about now until mid-October. After that, by November, you'll see quite a rise They are counting on an increase in demand as consumers drop light summertime eating habits and eat more meat.

Bedke and her husband, Frank, leased out their remote Nevada ranch two years ago and went into the cattle feeding business — partly to spend more time with their children, Annette, 16, and Frank Jr., 15, who had lived with their grandparents while their parents worked the ranch.

Their feedlot holds 1,500 cattle.

"We've been building this as we can afford it." Frank Bedke said.

Price plunge

But this year, they saw national cash cattle prices plunge 12 percent in two weeks in late July and early August.

The price drop put a squeeze on profits, even though the Bedkes don't buy and sell cattle - they only fatten them on contract for farmers and ranchers.

The Bedkes and other feedlot owners named four problems hurting profits:

· Ranchers, enjoying abundant rangeland forage after a wet spring, have been in no hurry to put their steers on feed and plun ing prices for fed cattle provided them little incentive to take cattle off the range.

· A proposed two-tier dairy price support program, now stalled in Congress, "has the market in a state right now," Frank Bedke said, The bill seeks to cut U.S. milk production and beef producers fear dairies will be forced to slaughter cows, flooding the market with beef.

Vern France, of France Inc. feedlet in Gooding, blamed the price drop on a glut of heavy mimals — with lots of low-value fat on their, bodies — being held out of the slaughter market as feedlot operators await better prices.

 Mike Telford of Interstate Feeders Inc. in Malta said demand is poor. "You have unemployment in the Northeast. People are being conservative with their consumer choices.

Frank and Phyllis Bedke, who feed beef cattle and springer helfers, hope cattle prices will rebound.

Rebound

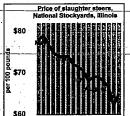

But Telford expects prices to rebound. Personally, I think the market will come back, but I don't think it will come back quickly. In 30 to 40 days it will be back.

That's when cattle will come off the range nd ranchers will be ready to sell "They'll start bringing them in October, November and December and feed them through the spring. We've already had a couple of inquiries," Phyllis Bedke said:

Dean Nielsen, of Nielsen Livestock in Paul, is less optimistic. "I hope the fall prices are better, but I don't know. The groery stores haven't lowered their prices any to help us out. I know with the feeder cattle coming on the market and the fat cattle being withheld, something has got to give."

France said feedlots should not hold onto fat cattle, "It would be better for the feedlot operators to bite the bullet and take the price that is there when they're finished out," he said. "Cattle are like lettuce in that they are a perishable product. They keep cating up the Nielsen agreed, "We ship them when they're ready, whether the market is ready or

That attitude is typical in Idaho, Telford said, "We're not part of the whole picture here in Idaho. Some markets do have a lot of fat cattle and overweight cattle. But we're current here," Telford said. Interstate has 38,000 cattle in its feedlots capacity is 50,000. About 80 percent belong to ConAgra, the rest are custom fed.

"I noticed Texas and Oklahoma are selling at $69.50 and $70. We're usually 50 cents under that market. We're still below the break-even point. Seventy-three dollars or $74 would be the break-even point. That would be pretty good," Telford said.

"By October we should have some real good prices.

People who eat breakfast in restaurants are often asked if they want white or wheat toast. Some of them might become confused, Ms. Logue said. "Two things we actually got out of this opinion poll," she said. "One is to communicate what is wheat, and the other is dietary guidelines."

If the Wheat Foods Council and other grain promoters can get that message through to the public, they will have accomplished a lot for farmers, millers, bakers and others in the wheat-processing

Researcher cautions more work needed on promising results of erosion control

By Rick Patterson AG-Wockly-writer

KIMBERLY - Research is underway in three parts of the country, including the USDA Kimberly Research Center, on the use of spray-on polymers to control ero-

Bob Sojka, one of two USDA researchers on the project at Kimberly, was reluctant to talk about the polymer research.

"But based on the results we've had so far, we're 90 percent sure it will hold the soil in place,: Sojka said. "There are a lot of other questions to be answered like application and (cost) suitability."

Sojka said the polymers, which would be dispersed through the irrigation system, would only be one part of a regimen for erosion control. They form a thin film over the aurface of the soil that prevents application of polymers). But erosion. "We don't want people to get the idea we've got polymers and we can go back to farming the way we did 15 years ago. That's not true. It's not a magic bullet.

"You need two or three levels of soil erosion management, looking at cultivating practices and field engineering," Sojka said.

"We don't want to get people's hopes up. We're a long way off, but polymers are probably going to be an effective tool."

"We've found nothing to date that would be adverse (about the Kimberly Research Center, is co-we're so early along in the research of it. It does seem to hold the soil in place and be environmentally benign."

On management plots, the cost of application has been about $1 per acre. Researchers are still studying how well the polymers remain in place.

Beans could particularly benefit from the polymer application because low-till practices often don't work real well and pre-plant irrigation often erodes soil into creeks

Other research centers engaged in the project are in Peoria, Ill. and West Lafayette, Ind.

Sojka said it would be about three months before documentation is ready on the work completed so for.

Briton urges USSR aid

Knight-Ridder Financial News

LONDON - The Soviet Union needs a massive injection of Western food aid if it is to avoid a femine British Prime Minister John Major said Tuesday, according to a report this week in the Daily Telegraph newspaper.

"It is probable that we will actually have to provide food to the Soviet Union rather than just food credits," Major was quoted as saying ahead of talks with U.S. President George Bush in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Such aid could come from beef and butter mountains in EC-intervention stores, as well as from Britain's strategic food stockpile, which the government is running down as part of its defense review, the newspaper said. Major also said he planned to bring in agricultural experts from Europe and the United States to help improve the Soviet harvest and offer technical advice on transporting food to consumers.

Britain believes a direct-aid package will be agreed to quickly by the Group of Seven industrialized nations, but longer term packages will take longer to work out, the newspaper added.

Iraq says babies are dying

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - An Iraqi health official said Tuesday that more than 14,000 infants have died from lack of food and medicine due to economic sanctions from the Persian Gulf War.

Health Undersecretary Shawqi Sabri, quoted by the Iraqi News Agency, predicted Iraq's infant mortality rate would worsen in coming months and pleaded with ther details on the children's world health and humanitarian organizations to push for an end to the U.N.-imposed sanctions.

Sabri was quoted by the staterun agency as saying 14,333 Iraqi children under age 5 died because of a lack of food, medicine, vaccines and medical equipment resulting from the sanctions. The INA report, monitored in London by the BBC, gave no furdeaths.

"It's too early to tell if it will affect price The impact could be great, but we don't know the impact," Rooney said.

There is a chance Idaho could be a big beneficiary of the drought in the Northeast. In Maine, New York and Pennsylvania some 40,000 acres have been affected Maine is struggling to get in its drought-shrunken harvest after suddenly receiving 8 inches of rain in the month of August - 3 inches because of Hurricane Bob.

"We haven't had rain all summer and now that it is time to harvest, we're struggling against the rain and wet fields," said Wayne

Smith, Maine Department of Agriculture. Maine will have the smallest crop in decades, Smith predicted. The yield will be down 35 to 60 hundredweight per acre. We're looking at 210 to 230. bags per acre when the normal would be

The August rains followed just a half inch in July. "It's a real case of feast or famine,"

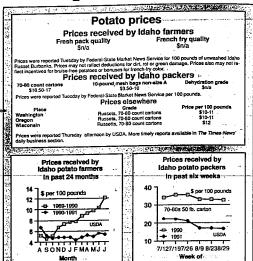

He said the quality and size of the potatoes is good, but the number of tubers per hill is half of what it should be.

"The impact on the nation's potato supply-will not be dramatic," Smith added, "but the impact here in Matthe is very significant to Maine farmers."

Problems in New England could create a niche for Idaho's smaller potatoes, if the early projections bear out across the state.

This will create a gap for consumer-sized potatoes for the Idaho potato," Rooney said. "It could help us depending on the size of these potatoes. Thomas Cooper with the Federal-State Market News Service in Idaho Falls said supplies are still light and demand in the non-sized A potato is moderate..

Grants will fund study

PULLMAN, Wash, (AP) Washington State University and University of Idaho researchers have received a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to develop a "sustainable" system of potato production in the Pacific Northwest.

WSII extension horticulturist Robert Thornton and UI research agronomist Jeff Stark will lead work on the project designed to evaluate management systems that use different levels of synthetic chemicals for weed and pest control.

The project goal is to find the best combination of conventional and alternative methods to allow farmers to maintain their resources indefinitely while still making a profit, Thornton said,

During the three-year, $330,000 project, the re-searchers will measure the chemicals' effects on pest control, crop yield and quality, soil erosion and groundwater quality.

Cooperating growers in Washington and Idaho will help lest management systems and evaluate their feasibility.

Shippers get view of new promotions

SUN VALLEY - "If it's not from Idaho, it's just a spud."

That's the kicker message in a series of down-home style television commercials that will begin airing the first week of October to promote Idaho potatoes. Advertising agencies hired by the Idaho Potato Commission unveiled their strategies for marketing-the-1991-potato-harvest-at-the-Idaho-

Grower Shippers Association convention at Sun Valley Inn on Thursday. Craig Carlson, of the Young & Rubicam ad agency in San Francisco, presented a new commercial campaign designed to increase consumer awareness of the yellow and black 'Grown in Idaho" scal. "Confusion still exists about whether all russets are Idaho potatoes," Carlson pointed out.

Market research by Young & Rubicam revealed that many consumers are confused about whether the Idaho potato is a variety, or whether Idaho is truly the state of its origin. "Our strategy is to link the Idaho potato to the Grown in Idaho seal," Carlson said.

Television will be the primary medium for the new ad campaign, with 30-second and 15-second commercials airing nationally in selected markets.

Each of the television commercials features a friendly, countrified spokesperson who appears to be an Idaho potato grower. In the droll style of the Bartles & Jaymes wine cooler commercials, he presents some of the suggestions he's received on marking his product so people will be "to tell Idaho potatoes from those others."

These suggestions include:

· Branding the potatoes with the Grown in Idaho seal. - Dressing the potatoes in red sweaters that have Idaho insignias. · Placing push-button voice boxes on the potatoes that cry out "Hey! Ho! I'm from Idaho!" when activated. "Thanks for the suggestions," says the spokesman with a wry smile, "but we'll just keep our seal on the bag. "Remember: If it's not from Idaho, it's just a

The actor who appears in the commercials is Steve Ruggles of Los Angeles, according to Carlson. The TV ads will be supported by print advertising in national women's magazines like Family Circle and McCall's.

Public relations efforts for the Idaho Potato Commission begin with the Shelley Harvest Festival, Kathy Hyatt of the Creamer Dickson Basford agency announced that the event would be getting national media attention from Willard Scott, weatherman on the Today Show, and Cable News Network.

The New York Times and the Christian Science Monitor also plan to cover the festival, she said. "Our public relations strategy for: 1992 will have two primary messages," Hyatt said. "First, that Idaho potatoes come only from Idaho; and second, that Idaho potatoes are superior to all other potatoes.

Mel Anderson, president of the IPC, pointed out that effective marketing allowed potato growers to harvest and sell the largest potato crop in Idaho history last year "with relatively

The commission spent an all-time high of $7 million on Idaho potato advertising and premotions in 1990-91.

Local Control of the Control

How much more can the Idaho potato industry grow? Agricultural economist Dr. Joe Guenthner addressed that question during a Wednesday afternoon seminar at the convention. He outlined an economic analysis of future potato demand that he recently completed for the IPC. His conclusion: demand will grow 2-3 percent per year. "I'm bullish on the demand for fresh potatoes," he said. Guenthner cited several key factors fueling growth in the potato market: · Increased use of microwave ovens, Eighty percent of American homes have microwave ovens and, according to Good Housekeeping magazine, their most frequent use if for baking Increasing percentages - from 5 percent in 1958 to 30 percent in 1990 - of meals purchased at fast food restaurants where potato products are served.

Excellent market identity, giving Idaho potentoes nearly 30 percent of the U.S. market

Guenthner said he was not concerned about Idaho's distance from major markets on the East coast, "I think it's a myth that potato production will shift back East," he said.

Idaho's location is actually an advantage, he said, as the U.S. population shifts to the West. "The consumers are coming closer to Idaho," he pointed out.

Guenthner also dismissed fears about the impact of new trade agreements with Mexico, not;

that country.

Beans would rather let hay make nitrogen

By Rick Patterson AG Weekly writer

KIMBERLY - Compared to alfalfa, beans are lazy legumes

Beans rotated after alfalfa are not the nitrogen producers they have been reputed to be, according to a researcher speaking at the Kimberly Research and Extension Service Dry Bean Field Day Aug. 22.

Alfalfa, with the help of legume-loving rhizobium bacteria, puts about 10 parts per million of nitrogen into the soil - so much that beans refuse to do the hard work of adding more, said Burl Meek, USDA researcher.

"It takes quite a lot of energy to fix nitro-gen. Bean plants won't do it if it is not necessary," Meek said.

Meek's research is aimed at finding an ideal crop rotation - one that minimizes the use of fertilizer and reduces the amount of nitrogen leaching into the groundwater as pollution.

"Alfalfa fixes a huge amount of nitrogen," he said. "The reason to follow that with beans is to get the benefit out of the soil.

"We work with fields that have generally been in alfalfa for three or four years. We kill the field in October using Landmaster, then begin three rotations," he said.

One rotation under study calls for beans the first and second years.

The second rotation uses corn the first year and winter wheat the second year. The third rotation includes no-till methods, with com the first year and winter wheat the sec-

Alfalfa-to-beans is a common rotation. Silage com in the second and third rotations can be grown without fertilizer, Meek said.

Meek's research is based on two years of work, using 10-acre plots grown in 800-foot strips, "the same as the grower would do it."

Solarization

A soil sterilization technique that might someday replace furnigants has been tested in research plots at the center.

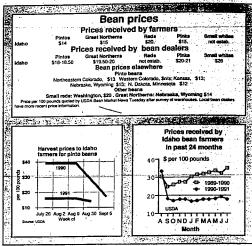

The soil is heavily moistened and then covered with clear plastic. Under sunlight, temperatures beneath the plastic reach 140 degrees at the soil surface and 100 degrees at depths of 6 to 12 inches.

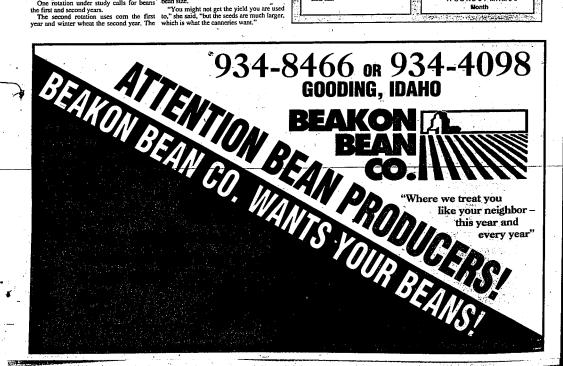

"This has a great effect on the soil, climinating the plant pathogens, weeds and nematodes," researcher Carl Strausbaugh said. At the center, solarized plots produced fuller plants that had closed rows and grown six inches taller than non-solarized plots.

Due to the expense of the plastic, Strausbaugh said solarization would likely suit potatoes best Researcher Kathy Stewart Williams talked about reducing plants per acre to increase bean size.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. - Corn and soybean prices are not yet high enough to cause hog producers to change their minds about expanding herds, experts say. But if corn prices reach $3, the current expansion phase could be cut short.

"I don't think we've seen enough of a shift in feed input prices yet to cause a cut-back in expansion plans," said Dale Durchholz, livestock analyst for AgriVisor Services Inc. in Bloomington, Ill.

Neither the current hog-corn ratio or the December futures hog-corn ratio have reached a point "where we can clearly say raising hogs is a losing proposition,

The hog-corn ratio, a popular measure of hog industry profitability, represents the price of live hogs per hundredweight divided by the price of com per bushel. In other words, it is the number of bushels of corn that are equal in value to 100 pounds of market hogs.

For the week ended July 27, the USDA reported a hog-corn ratio of 24-to-1, unchanged from a year earlier. A hog-com ratio of 20-to-1 or higher indicates profitable conditions for most hog producers. The ra-tio averaged 19.6 in 1988, 18.4 in 1989 and 23.1 in 1990.

Chris Hurt, Purdue University livestock marketing specialist, said while some producers may have based expansion plans on raising good corn crop, those plans were likely set going into the summer.

Because the decision to expand is a major one, involving lining up marketing contracts, breeding stock - and for some producers, building new facilities - a "fairly major jolt" is needed to halt the expansion trend.

Durchholz said the USDA June hog report showed the heaviest expansion occurring in states with a high concentration of commercial hog operations, or in states where commercial operations are making

"Three-dollar corn would make the hog industry very nervous.

Hog industry attention will probably shift more to the soybean market during August, Durchholz said, noting that corn crop is pretty well made now,

The soybean crop has yet to go through its key development stage and crop losses could be heavy if weather remains dry through August. If soymeal prices continue to soar, "that could be the second shoe dropping" that would cause some producers to abort expansion plans.

Hurt said feed prices could speed up the decision by some producers to leave the hog business within the next year or two.

Utility says airborne volts not a danger

PORTLAND - Oregon State University researchers have found no effects from power lines on the hormone levels in sheep.

AG Weekly

The preliminary findings were an-nounced recently by Bonneville Power Administration. They were first presented by Jack Lee, a BPA environmental health specialist, at the June meeting of the Bioelectromagnetics Society in Salt Lake City.

The findings still are under review. A final report should be available in spring 1992:

Lee took part in a year-long study of the possible effects of electric and magnetic fields produced by high-voltage power lines on sheep.

"We found that both the animals under the power lines and those in the control area showed normal melatonin patterns," Lee said. "We found no significant difference between the two groups."

Researchers also found that both groups of female sheep began their reproductive cycles at the normal time, in the fall:

From April 1990 to April 1991, researchers penned one group of 10 sheep directly beneath 500-kilovolt transmission lines, where fields are strongest. A second control group of 10 sheep was kept away from the line, where field levels were low.

. The study took place at BPA's Ostrander substation, near Estacada, Ore. OSU researchers took more than 6,000 blood samples from the sheep over a 10-month period. They tested them for fluctuations in levels of melatonin, a hormone that regulates the body's biological cycles.

Laboratory studies have sometimes shown significant drops in the amount of melatonin produced by animals such as rats - exposed to EMF. In some of the studies, the strength of the laboratory-produced fields was compa-rable to that used in the Ostrander

Farmers hope milk spill brings 2 'tiers'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Frustrated dairy farmers are talking about dumping milk in fields and pigpens if Congress refuses to prop up the lowest milk prices in a decade.

They are angry and bitter that Congress left town for its August recess without passing a "two-tiered" dairy relief bill that would have boosted milk support prices by

They're also furning at the Bush administration's opposition to the legislation which would attempt to reduce a nationwide milk glut by paying a lower, secondtier price to farmers who produce too much milk

A strike organizer, dairy farmer Bruce Krug of Constableville, N.Y., said dumping milk may be the only way to call attention to the plight of dairy farmers, who are expected to lose $3 billion this year under the lowest prices since 1978.

While milk prices at the farm have fallen 25 percent, the retail price drop has been smaller, according to Peter Vitaliano, director of policy analysis at the National Milk Producers Federation.

The price of a half-gallon of whole milk fell from $1.40 in June 1990 to $1.37 in June 1991, while the all-milk price at the farm fell from $13.95 per hundred pounds in June 1990 to $11.57 in June 1991, he

"Campaigns - whether economic or membership or presidential - are won and lost in television and the print media," said Larry Mitchell, director, of state-federal relations for the American Agriculture

"And for farmers to win, they will have to couch it correctly, and show that what they're doing is not negative," Mitchell

Krug said the decision to dump milk wasn't made lightly and came after months of meetings and lobbying Congress.

"This strike is not something any of us are enjoying putting together," he said.

Krug said farmers in New York, Vermont, Pennsylvania and Missouri are organizing an Oct. 1 strike, and that farmers in other dairy producing states are also being contacted.

Mitchell said about 10 states will hold demonstration milk dumps Friday to draw support for the Oct. 1 strike.

Krug said striking farmers want to stop sending their milk to the dairy processors, who prepare it for retail sale.

"Probably the most common way is to pour the milk onto the ground of our fields to dispose of it." Krug said. "Some farmers are talking about giving it to food banks. I'm going to offer mine to the people in the village.

Lobbyist tours Idaho for comment on 2-tier

By Terri McAffee AG Weekly correspondent

RUPERT - Seeking grass-roots opinion about the proposed two-tier dairy legislation now stalled in Congress, a National Farmers Union lobbyist visited dairy farmers in Idaho this week.

"There is more unity built around this issue" than any other agriculture issue of recent memory, said Cheryl Cook as she visited with dairy farmers who gathered at the home of Chad Bailey.

home of Chad Bailey.

The dairy proposal is stalled partly because of Bush administration threats to veto it. The bill would hike milk support prices, but penalize dairymen who produce too much milk with a lower, second-tier
price,

Congress has been unable to muster enough votes to override any presidential since Bush's inauguration. With adjournment looming, there may not be enough time for override levislation to pass for override legislation to pass.

"If we can't get him (President Bush) to sign something, we are out of luck until next year," Cook said.

Cook said the Bush administration is opposed to any two-tier price support system because of its General Agreement on Trade and Tariff talks with Europe and Japan. The administration does not want producer prices to be above those prevailing in international trade, cook said.

Cook said the Bush administration's "free-market idea doesn't exist in reality. We can't afford to give up our food supply."

Matters are further hampered by slowly rising dairy prices.

"The longer it goes the more complicated it becomes," said Chad Bailey, a Rupert dairyman. Dairy people say that the rise in price is due to the historical trend of cheese production for the holidays. They think pripes will drop again in January.

The administration and Congress have put dairy farmers and hungry children on opposite sides, Cook enid

Urban congressmen are swayed by the Bush administration argument that the two-tier bill will drop children from federal nutrition programs and increase the cost of milk for food stamp recipients.

But next year is an election year.
"1992 should change the climate," Cook said. Sen. Patrick, Leahy, D-Vermont, chairman of the, agricultural committee, will be upfor re-lection and more likely to, listen to his farm constituents.

It is possible that any legislation out of the Senate will be a diversion program. It will "sound, smell and taste" like a two-tier price program but be called a diversion program, Cook said.

 Because reduced milk production usually results in increased slaughter of dairy cattle, a diversion program would assess the dairy industry if there was a drop in cattle

Many analysts believe beef cattleproducers have been holding fait, cattle back, waiting for higher prices. Sooner or later, these cattlewill go on the auction block, driving prices down from within the' beef industry, but dairy would be assessed for them under a diversion plan, Cook said.

Dairymen told Cook that if a two-tier price system is passed, quotas should be based on a farm's five-year average production. A two-year average would be unfair because of the extended length of the dairy crisis, dairymen said.

"A two-year-average will kill many people," said Mike Simcoe, a Rupert dairyman. "They have to be protected."

There will be a Farmer Fly-In, including farmers from all commodities, Sept. 21 in Washington, Cook said. "They will be working for dairy and trade of we can change the dairy brilgman-filayber-We carl change-them to fit & waste to be executed."

Farmers saw their bank accounts shrink and the value of their farms decline in 1990, according to the study conducted by a team of Washington State University agricultural economists and sponsored by the Spokane-based state wheat and barley commissions.

A final draft of the report, "Grain Fanns in Eastern Washington: an Economic Assessment," will be released in September after harvest, Washington Wheat Commission administrator Tom Mick said.

USDA predicts U.S. exports will decline

WASHINGTON U.S. agricultural exports are fore-cast to fall to $37.5 billion in fiscal 1991, reversing five years of steadily rising sales, and are expected to remain flat in the year ahead, USDA said this week in its quarterly Agricultural Exports report.

However, "no one talks about maximum fat content," said Edith Munro, director of information for the Corn Refiners Association Inc. in Washington. Setting a maximum fat standard is "an unfair attempt to reclassify a lot of corn gluten feed that now goes into (the Netherlands) duty-free," she added.

To retaliate against what it sees as unfair trading practices, the U.S. corn industry is seeking import restrictions on EC agricultural prod-ucts. Farm-disaster bill moves ahead despite veto threat

Knight-Ridder Pinancial News

WASHINGTON - A move afoot in the Senate to provide disaster assistance for farmers should pick up speed by next month, despite a looming threat that President Bush will veto any aid package, according to congressional sources.
"We: have 30 co-sponsors, and by the time September comes around we'll have around 50," said Mark Keenum, an aide to Sen. Thad Cochran, D-Miss., who introduced a disaster-assistance bill in Floods, freezes and severe dry weather in parts of the U.S. are expected to cut crop yields modestly this year, although experts say the damage is nowhere near as widespread as that of the last major drought, in 1988.

The USDA forecast this week that 1991 corn production will total 7.42 billion bushels, down 6 percent from last year, and that soybean output will drop about 3 per-cent to L87 billion bushels.

Although damage to major crops is not severe, a number of lawmakers - Sens. Harris Wofford, D-Pa. and John Seymour, R-Calif., and Rep. MURTAUGH - A $17,000 engineering study of a plan to deliver Snake River water to farmers on shrinking wells near Murtaugh is due in mid-September.

At stake is a project costing $5 million to enlarge the Twin Falls Canal Co. canal serving Lake Mur-taugh. The water would be pumped to 15,000 acres of farmland now irrigated from private wells.

Farmers in the Southwest Irrigation District, bounded by Oakley, Murtaugh and Burley, have been organizing for three years under state oversight to limit pumping out of the so-called Oakley Fan water table and its neighboring aquifers.

Now, the farmers have obtained

Loren Holmes, of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, said the farmers now pump 30,000 acre feet more from the water table each year than can be naturally replaced.

"They are mining that (aquifer) system. There has been some pressure on them since (the irrigation district) was created six or sevenyears ago. They have been in the process of getting organized and looking for solutions."

Farmers have worried that the state could shut down as much asrights to Snake River water out of 20,000 acres of prime farmland to

Myers said the canal improvements, which include purchases of rights of way along five miles of canal and perhaps lengthening two bridges, will require a special levy against water users in the district.

The study will help determine the cost of the project, but actual costs won't be known until work is nearly ready to begin.

Work probably won't begin this off-season. "We could do it in a hased project and start this year, but we won't know about those decisions until we have the study," Myers said.

The study is being done by CH2M Hill of Boise, which has been working since May.

Southwest Irrigation is also looking at federal funds to finance construction of a pumping system to deliver the Snake River water from Lake ... It's still too early to tinker with Farm Bill

With prices for farm products dropping as harvest season approaches, many sectors of the U.S. farm economy are calling for a new farm bill to replace the 1990 edition.

But it is probably too early to change the law again. And more importantly, too little money exists in the federal treasury to do much about low farm prices.

To be sure, there are many unsettling developments this year in Magic Valley farm prices. Bean prices are plunging way below the break-even point. Beef cattle prices are bouncing up and down, with little assurance of settling anywhere near profitable levels.

Dairy prices are far below their pre-Farm Bill levels. Potato prices, too, could finally fall this year - after nearly three years of strength.

Some farm groups interpret all this as the fault of the 1990 Farm Bill. Milk prices fell because the support price was dropped, they say. Bean, beef and potato prices fell because farmers fled from the so-called "program" crops after subsidies were cut or eligible acres were reduced. They planted too many beans and potatoes, and added too many cattle to their herds. Supplies exceeded demand and Perhaps the Farm Bill is at fault. The intent of the 1990 Farm Bill was to make the farm economy subject to market forces. That is risky business because farming is already at the mercy of other cycles - weather, consumer demand and, more recently, periodic consumer panics.

Frequently farmers find themselves hit by two calamities at a time - low prices and low yields. Lincoln County is an excellent example, where USDA officials have said they may foreclose on dozens of grain farmers who owe money to the Farmers Home Administration. Grain priceswere low and yields were terrible because of drought on the Big Wood River irrigation tract.

But at other times, farmers enjoy high yields and high prices. Idaho potatoes in 1989 and 1990 are a good example. So were Idaho beans in 1990.

Milk was an excellent example in late 1989, when some dairy farmers were hauling in $100,000 a month.

There can be little doubt that tough times have returned. But wheat prices have steadied somewhat and they tend to lead the way - even more so than dairy prices. In the final analysis, farmers themselves must make farming profitable - either through collective marketing strategies, or through private marketing schemes.

Until the nation's food supply is threatened, and right now it is not, farmers cannot expect much more taxpayer

Not time yet to dump milk

In some heavy dairy regions, dairymen are orga-nizing for an Oct. 1 milk strike.

Other dairymen are striving to organize the orderly culling of 400,000 dairy cows - about 4 percent of the nation's dairy herd. Others are planning strategic demonstrations and picketing. Still others are stick-ing to the hope of successfully lobbying for a revised federal dairy bill.

Meanwhile,

If the milk price begins to backslide despite collective bargaining efforts ..., and after working hard on voluntary supply management programs, only then should dairymen look to highly visibla public demonstrations.

NFO's Dairy Department has a proven track record with its ability to negotiate favorable milk prices and contractual terms, stairstepping to build profitable milk prices, and then holding those prices for long-term benefits. In addition, the NFO Livestock Department already successfully bargains beneficial prices and terms for the nation's largest block of cull dairy cows. Both departments are poised to expeditiously handle greatly increased volumes of milk and cull cows. It will be a shame if the energy and readiness for action created by dairymens' frustrations are allowed to dissipate in a multitude of efforts without first focusing on the one effort that can make a real longterm difference - dairymen gaining control of their own supply and negotiating their own price.

That's just what the dairy processors and the federal government want - divide and conquer.

In recent weeks, the Minnesota-Wisconsin milk price has risen 97 cents. NFO thinks it will rise substantially again in September. The block price of cheese has increased 22 cents from its low point and noni-fat dry milk powder has recovered 10 to 12 cents per pound. If these prices firm up or move up, then the most logical plan of action is to hold those price gains and build upon them through pooling supplies, negotiating long-term contracts, and volun tary milk supply management.

DeVon Woodland

Culling cows is a good way to cut back milk sup plies, but the culling must be done in an orderly fashion, taking every precaution to keep from depressing the beef market even further, NFO knows how to get 400,000 cull cows to market while minimizing their downside impact on the market.

Price incentives to cut back production are another supply management option that is currently working well with NFO dairymen. Any NFO member who sells less milk than he did in the similar quarter a year earlier earns a 10-cent premium per 100 pounds,

If the milk price begins to backslide despite collective bargaining efforts in milk and cult cows, and after working hard on voluntary supply management programs, only then should dairymen look to highly visible public demonstrations.

NFO strongly urges the leaders of the milk strike movement to consider giving NFO collective bargaining and Marketing Agencies in Common a solid chance of success through greater participation by dairymen before falling back to other actions.

Activists endanger research

Three recent acts of terrorism by animal-rights activists in the Northwest highlight the need for passage of a House bill which would extend federal protection to farm and research facilities.

The Farm Animal and Research Facilities Act was introduced last month by Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas. The legislation provides prison sentences up to 10 years for the theft of animals or proper-ty from animal facilities, damage to facilities and unauthorized entry of private and publicly owned animal facilities.

Well-off farmers take tax dollars from needy cities

WASHINGTON - Seven years ago, while Walter Mondale was cleaning Ronald Reagan's clock in their first debate of the 1984 general-election season, he got off a great line.

It's not the things you don't know that scare me. Mondale said: it's the things you think you know that just aren't so.

Years later, myths elevated to the status of revealed truth in those bizarre years continue to dominate our politics and national policymaking to an amazing extent.

As every card-carrying Reagan-ite has "known" for years, the cities of America are giant tax revenueconsuming machines, populated by hordes of ne'er-do-well cheats who live off the hard work of the rest of the country.

This morsel of conservative gospel endures; it is central to most national political equations that cynically pit better-off suburbs and small towns against liberal Gomorrahs, with more than a dash of racial seasoning to spice the image.

Welfare, not subsidies

And it isn't even close to being accurate. According to Agriculture Department studies, it is nonmetropolitan areas that depend on federal benefits payments to an ex-tent well beyond their urban counterparts.

According to a 1989 report, metropolitan areas derive 13.8 percent of their personal income from these transfer payments; in nonmetropolitan areas, the dependence is 18.7 percent.

Even those averages misstate the point to an extent. The 13 states federal payments to individuals all rely on them for more than 20 percent of their personal income.

Intuitively, we imagine that this much greater rural dependence on Uncle Sam must somehow be related to family farming, as sacred an American pursuit as there is, one which we are all willing to subsi-dize for the "way of life" it maintains, an existence from which many of us are only a generation or two removed Alas, not true. These are transfer payments we're talking about, not arm price supports.

Subsidies bypass needy

What is worse - in fact scandalous - is that the money we think we are doling out in support of hard-working, supposedly struggling farmers is supporting the point to an extent. The 13 states comfortable and bypassing rural with rural areas most dependent on communities most in need of aid.

We know this thanks to some myth-shattering research by the Center for National Policy here, which has examined income data in America's counties and compared it to farm payments. The result, according to the cen-ter's Maureen Steinbruner, is a classic example of how good poli-tics and bad policy coexist. What the numbers show is that the more prosperous a rural county, the more dependent it is likely to be on federal farm-program payments (still flowing from the Treasury to the tune of nearly $10 billion a year). Steinbruner's work examined both what the Agriculture Department calls farm-dependent counties (more than 20 percent of personal income) and farm-important ones

(10-20 percent of income). What she found is that in farmdependent counties with per-capita income above $12,000, farm programs were providing more than 18 percent of the income, 50 percent more than was the case in counties with per-capita income of less than $9,000.

Compounding the outrage is that as stupendously productive American agriculture becomes even more so, the existing subsidy programs with their related restrictions on planting will continue, as the center's study concluded, to decrease efficiency, reduce exports and lower overall farm sales.

It's bad enough that television-fed "perceptions" dominate our politics. It's ridiculous that myths (about rural and urban life) send our tax dollars precisely to places where they're not needed at the direct expense of places where they are needed desperately.

Thomas Oliphant writes for the Boston Globe.

Grasses need grazing

there are varied reasons why w believe grazing fees are reasonable as they are. It does not seem to be fiscally responsible to disrupt the livestock economy in Idaho, when it has been one of the few sectors of production agriculture giving a retum on investment.

Private landholders who can no longer afford to run livestock will be forced to subdivide ground, selling to out-of-state investors, or be swallowed up by huge corporate livestock entities

If the ground is devalued by loss of grazing rights due to unjust fee increases, operating capital will not be available to family livestock operations, just as it is drying up for family dairymen. In a time when our economy, rural and urban, needs strengthening, it seems unwise to reduce yet another cash-flowing oper-

Raising fees is an unfair tax to the heirs of the people who have devel-oped the land and to those who have purchased grazing rights.

Who will have the best vision for our public lands? The bike riders? The pleasure horsemen? The fishermen? Or the long-term steward of the land whose financial well-being depends on sustainable harvest through livestock?

Within the past 10 years, Alan Savory and the Center for Holistic Resource Management have begun to teach the concept of brittle environment vs. non-brittle environment. An example of non-brittle environment is the rain forest.

Much of the West is considered brittle environment, which in this context means a mature grass plant gains its full height and old material remains year after year until the plant dies, is harvested or is trampled into the soil by livestock or wildlife or disturbed. Examination of these areas will show no baby crested wheatgrass plants, unhealthy adult plants and a lot of bare ground; the graying material blows away.

Remove cattle from the range and multiply this effect times millions of acres and we will have done great harm to the watersheds of the West. The failure of most civilizations is traced to the failure of their watersheds.

Although Alan Savory as a game manager once wanted all domestic livestock off the land, he has after 20 years come to believe that livestock is the only practical tool for maintaining the natural grasses.

We would like to make these recommendations:

· Retain the current formula for grazing fees for family ranchers.

· Ideally, each watershed shouldhave a management team consisting of agency people, livestock produc-ers, recreationists and environmentalists. Each team would set clear goals for the watershed.

· Cooperative and open-minded livestock producers should be rewarded with more flexibility of numbers, times and dates because of variations in weather patterns and growth rates of livestock. Management plans should be more goal oriented to give the producer flexibility to reach the team goals.

We believe management concepts of the past and new methods can be blended for the optimum steward-ship of our public lands.

Animals produce rare human protein BOSTON (AP) - Scientists reported this week they have created the first genetically manipulated farm animals to produce large quantities of valuable human proteins in their milk.

The latest steps bring researchers closer to "molecular pharming" turning cows, goats and other animals into living pharmaceutical factories. The goal is to produce copies of rare natural substances in much larger volume than is now possible using genetically modified bacteria, yeast or cell cultures.

One of the animals, a sheep, produced up to about 215 ounces a day of a protein used to treat a form of emphysema. This is about four months' supply for one patient.

"We are very close" to having commercially useful quantities, said Dr. Vernon G. Pursel, a research physiologist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Beltsville, Md. "We may be there."

Three reports on the creation of so-called transgenic animals are being published in the Sept. 1 issue of the journal Bio-Technology.

In one of the reports, researchers from Tufts University veterinary school in Grafton and Genzyme Corp. of Cambridge described the first successful creation of transgenic goats that produce a human protein in their milk.

Experts generally agree that other gene-splicing techniques, transgenic animals must make 1 Dr. Karl M. Ebert, director of experimental biotechnology at the veterinary school, said the researchers have since produced a goat that makes 3 grams of TPA

"We have a goat that produced a level of a pharmaceutical that we believe could be economically viable," Ebert said.

In another article in the journal, Dutch researchers from the University of Leiden and Gene Pharming Europe said they had produced the first transgenic dairy cattle intend-ed to produce milk with human lactoferrin an iron binding protein. Their first animal was a bull, so it could not manufacture the human

A commentary in the journal described their gene-splicing tech-nique for cows as "a dramatic breakthrough in enlarging the transgenic pharm-yard."

Another team from Pharmaceutical Proteins Ltd. and the AFRC Institute of Animal Physiology and Genetics Research in Edinburgh, Scotland, produced three female sheep that made human alpha-1-antitrypsyn in their milk, This enzyme is used therapeutically to prevent life-threatening emphysema in people who cannot make the substance on their own.

One of the animals made up to 70 grams of the protein a day. The protein is now derived commercially from human blood. An estimated 20,000 people in the United States each need 200 grams annually.

UI researchers evaluate novel way to increase digestibility of forage animal science researchers believe they have found a better way to increase the digestibility of low-quality forages by ammoniating individ-ual bales sealed in plastic.

"The producer interest in this is far greater than anything I've ever been involved with," said Carl Hunt, an animal scientist leading the

The traditional method-of-ammoniation is to cover a stack of hay bales with a plastic tarp and apply ammonia beneath the plastic. The MOSCOW - University of Idaho technique does work, Hunt said, but he believes tests will show that the method developed at the UI will work better.

> In the UI tests, large round bales were individually sealed in plastic wrap. After the bales were sealed, anhydrous ammonia was applied to the bales using a probe inserted directly into their centers. Research associate Jay Locsche said the digestibility of the forage is increased when the ammonia permeates the entire bale and chemically binds to the grass, breaking down its fiber.

Feedlot budget

This Idaho District III Extension budget presents the average costs and returns per head for a 4,000-head cattle feedlot. Yearing steers come in at 750 pounds and are fed to 1,150. pounds. Heifers are fed from 680 to 1,000 pounds.

Estimates of the percentage of steers to heifers placed on feed were obtained through the Idaho Crop and Livestock Reporting

This budget assumes that out of every 100 animals placed on feed, 65 were steers and 35 were heifers. The feedlot is assumed to be used at 65 percent of capacity. It was assumed that cattle are fed continuously throughout the year. The turnover rate is 2.60 - that many groups of cattle cycle through the feedlot annually.

Steers are fed for 130 days and gain an average of 3.07 pounds per day. The cattle are fed a ration of barley, corn silage, alfalfa hay, and a protein, mineral, and vitamin supplement.

Labor for this operation is both hired and supplied by the owner. Veterinary supplies and services include the cost of growth

Merging 2 farm credit banks could benefit agriculture, analysts predict

AG Weekly and Knight-Ridder Pinancial News

WASHINGTON - The Sacramento, Calif., Farm Credit Bank, which supervises that Eastern Idaho Agricultural Credit Association in Pocatello, and the Omaha, Neb., Farm Credit Bank have bowed out of a four-bank merger plan.

But the Farm Credit Banks of St. Paul, Minn. and St. Louis, Mo. are still thinking about merging, a move industry observers say could help the lenders cut costs and improve service to farmers and ranch

"In general, peoples' reactions positive to this," said John Brake, professor of agricultural finance at Comell University.

Six months ago, officials from the two banks began to study pooling their resources.

If the merger were to occur, the two lenders would become the single-largest Farm Credit Bank in the US and would serve farmers in Arkansas, Illinois, Michigan, Min-nesota, Missouri, North Dakota and

The Form Credit Bank of St. Paul now has about $6.8 billion in assets while the Farm Credit Bank of St. ! Louis has about $4 billion. Together the banks have more than 200,000 borrowers.

So far, officials from the agencies are trying to determine whether the move would be cost-efficient and improve customer service, said John O'Day, vice president of gov-ernment relations for the Farm Credit Bank of St. Louis:

A final decision will likely take months to reach, O'Day and industry observers said.

BURLEY - Luke Marchant, 11. winner of grand champion quality at Cassia County Fair with his Charolais-Simmental cross steer, says he enjoys showing at the fair. He estimates that he spent 56 hours with his animal from March to August teaching it to lead, cleaning it, and feeding it.

Katie Richins, 9, who showed the reserve grand champion quality steer project, has enjoyed spending a lot of time with her animal at the fair, showing, feeding, and clean-ing the stall and steer. Two to three hours a day this summer she spent leading JoJo and training his hair to lay right for the fair.

Katie also has a horse project at the fair. She won first place in Western pleasure riding and entered trail and halter classes

Jill Ward, 17, winner of grand champion fitting and showing horse, says 4-H is a "good experience. It teaches you lots about horses." She especially enjoys the showmanship classes.

CLOVER CREEK - I decided tonight that atheists must live in cities. There isn't a soul alive who could look into a moonless Idaho night and doubt the existence of a higher power.

I'm not a religious woman; haven't seen the inside of a church in years. But tonight, while soaking in our stock tank-turned-hot tub, I saw a sky so clear and stars so bright, that, if there was a Church of the

But I still gasp, like I did when I was a child, at every one.

I saw six tonight, and as always, I felt uniquely and individually blessed by each one, like God or whoever was reminding me why I'm in Idaho,

I get caught up in keeping my head above water, like anyone in our bus Scott spends a lot of time outside in the fret about cattle prices and the BLM and

I wind myself up ing loan that comes due in January, and the misguided environmentalists, who want to test our cows for mentage emission. Every day, a ranch bill comes due and a cow goes through a fence and a neighbor finds one of our bulls in his corn. Or so it seems.

But tonight, in my quiet valley, even the coyotes have stopped their howling and found peace in watching the heavens. I re-member why I left Escondido, with its street lights and night sirens.

Idaho has its drawbacks, but even bills and bulls and weeds in the orchard can't sully the beauty I can find outside my back door, on a perfect Idaho night.
