Crucial mission awaits Baker in Israel

By Gwen Ackerman
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Secretary of State James A. Baker III is heading into the thick of a bitter — and perhaps unprecedented — confrontation between the United States and Israel.

President Bush's delay of badly needed loan guarantees for Israel has angered Israeli officials at the time when their cooperation is needed in efforts to convene a Middle East peace conference. Only a few months ago, it was Baker who was seen here as a cold, unfeeling man. Now he is being portrayed by some Israelis as the only hope for healing the rift — "the good guy in the guarantee drama," as the daily Maariv put it.

Baker is scheduled to arrive in Israel on Tuesday from the Soviet Union.

Bush threatened last week to use his veto power to block early congressional approval to co-sign $10 billion in loan guarantees Israel needs to help pay for housing and work for flood of Soviet immigrants. Bush said taking up the issue now could make it harder to get Middle East peace talks going.

The remarks struck a sensitive nerve on at least three counts:

- His linking of the loan guarantees to peace talks seemed to some Israelis to be legitimizing the Arab campaign against Jewish immigration to Israel.
- His comment that American soldiers defended Israel in the Persian Gulf War was viewed as turning history on its head. Many Israelis feel they came to Israel to rescue by staying out of the war, even under the extreme provocation of Iraqi missile barrages.
- Bush's portrayal of himself as a lone individual up against a powerful Jewish lobby was particularly incensed. Israelis see

Iran-Contra mess muddies Gates hearing

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee vowed Sunday that his panel will subject Robert M. Gates, President Bush's choice to head the Central Intelligence Agency, to "one of the most thorough" examinations in congressional history.

"There are a lot of tough questions that are there to be asked," said Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., as the committee prepared to open Monday morning what could prove to be highly sensitive hearings on the controversial nomination.

Gates

As allegations continue to swirl about Gates' role in the Iran-Contra affair, in the purported slanting of intelligence assessments and in secret U.S. policies to provide military aid to Iraq during its war with Iran, Boren pledged that his committee would not vote on his nomination "until we've been satisfied with those answers."

The strong language from the influential chairman raised the possibility that the committee might seek to prolong its inquiry in a fashion that White House officials have warned could leave the nominee to "twist in the wind."

Asked whether he had urged the White House to withdraw Gates' name from consideration, Boren, who is usually thought to be supportive of the nominee, said he had not, but added, "That's a decision that the president has to make."

Speaking in an interview on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," Boren said it remained "hard to say" whether new evidence would cause the committee to reject the nomination. Administration officials nevertheless expressed continued assurance that the nominee would win a Senate endorsement.

"I am confident that Mr. Gates will be confirmed," national security adviser Brent Scowcroft said on the same broadcast.

And Bush told reporters Sunday: "He'll pass."

Among the potentially explosive new accusations senators said the committee will attempt to probe are charges by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., that Gates was involved during the mid-1980s in secret and improper CIA operations to provide military aid to the Iraqi regime of Saddam Hussein.

Promoting growth

Retiring Scoutmaster Frank Mogensen's green thumb has inspired many projects throughout Twin Falls, including the plot at Addison Avenue and Jefferson Street.

After years of tending Boy Scouts, marigolds, Mogensen slows down

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Frank Mogensen loves to help things grow.

For more than 42 years, he has helped boys grow into men, tending his duties as Boy Scout Troop 67's scoutmaster as carefully as he trims the marigolds in his yard.

Now he looks forward to turning the reins over to someone else so he can spend more time tending climbing roses to his trellis than double half-hitches to a tent stake.

"It takes a lot of time. I look back now and I don't know how I ever did it before I retired," Mogensen said. He retired from the Idaho State Police in 1986 after 28 years in uniform.

Changing times — A2

Back then, he occasionally held scout meetings while on duty and sometimes got called to work in the middle of the meetings.

Mogensen plans to stay close to the troop, though. He'll attend some of the weekly meetings and he will remain in charge of the review board that determines when a boy is ready to move up in rank.

The 68-year-old Mogensen began his scouting career more than 50 years ago as a farm boy growing up near Filer. During the Depression, his parents were reluctant to let their 15-year-old son join the scouts because they needed him on the farm.

But Mogensen finally rejoined his way into the Boy Scouts in 1938 and never really left.

He earned his Eagle badge, scouting's highest honor, two years after joining. "Little more than a year after that, he was a U.S. Army infantryman battling the Japanese in the Pacific."

His scouting skills stood Mogensen in good stead in the Army, helping him escape some of the mental traps usually reserved for new recruits. While others floundered in KP duty, Mogensen was training 40-year-old men in first-aid and knot-tying.

He fought in the Aleutian Islands, the Marshall Islands and in the Philippines, where a Japanese mortar bomb hit him for several weeks. He was

Croatians claim upper hand in clashes with federal troops

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — Yugoslav tanks and troops pounded Croatian positions again Sunday in reprisal for blockades of federal garrisons, and the breakaway republic said it had captured several army posts.

The Croatian blockade of federal outposts triggered a dramatic escalation in the fighting that has claimed more than 400 lives since the republic declared independence from Yugoslavia on June 25.

Air raid sirens sounded in Zagreb for the first time Sunday, and jets streaked overhead but did not attack the Croatian capital. Elsewhere in the republic, at least 26 people died in a 24-hour period ending Sunday night.

"We are not afraid. When you are in your own home you can't be afraid," said Nikola Pribanic, the 37-year-old watchman at a house on Mhanovicva Street, as he rushed people into an air raid cellar.

"I don't believe they'd really bomb Zagreb," said Valentin Ilvat, 73, who remembered bombing raids during World War II.

Just-in-case, extra-steel-barricades were put up around Zagreb's government buildings, and tank traps and other barriers were fortified.

Road-kill crew approaches job with light heart

The Associated Press

SPOKANE — Most people have seen them on the road, or parts of them anyway. Those lifeless, unidentifiable, bug-and-tire-track-ridden carcasses that once were rabbits, porcupines, raccoons, deer or skunks.

It can be stomach-wrenching to drive by one of the unfortunate critters that has met destiny with the roll of a tire. But just imagine being Spike Skeels, Myron Berger, Terry Adams or Wendy Kapelke.

They have to scrape up the deceased. And in the summertime the heat makes their clients just a little more trying to pick up.

With the tools of the trade — a shovel and a pair of gloves — these state and county employees scout Eastern Washington roads looking for road kill — or whatever the scientific term of choice.

"I drive a slab wagon," joked Spike Skeels, who works state roads out of the Colville and Deer Park area. "Every once in a while people will ride by while I'm picking up a deer or whatever and you can see what they're thinking — "Oh, that's who does that. That's what happens to those."

Some people drive by with a funny look like "I wonder what he eats for dinner," Skeels said.

Road kill is "a fact of life so you've got to have a sense of humor about it," said Dick Novotney, a state road maintenance superintendent, who, like many in his field, keeps on hand the "You-Hit-It, We-Spit-It Road Kill Grill" menu.

No one is quite sure where the muck menu came from, but for sports such dishes as "The Chicken that Didn't Quite Cross the Road," "Poodles 'N' Noodles," "Clunk of Skunk," and the daily special — "Anything Dead Between 2 Slabs of Bread."

The crew can make fun of what it does — but the main thing is to get (the animals) off the road so no one has to look at them and so no one has an accident trying to

Weather across nation definitely becomes more interesting

The National Weather Service in Boise reports warmer afternoons into mid-week.

A dry surface high pressure system moved over Idaho from the West Coast, while at the same time an upper-level high pressure system drifted eastward just off the West Coast. This combination means Idaho will have sunny skies each day into at least mid-week with warmer afternoon temperatures.

Late Saturday night skies were clear across the state. However some areas of fog formed shortly before sunrise in the mountain valleys, and the upper Snake River Valley near Idaho Falls. It burned off by late morning.

Low temperatures were on the cool side Sunday morning. Minimums in the valleys ranged from the lower 30s into the lower 40s. Mountain lows were in the mid-20s to lower 30s. The coldest reported low was 22 at Stanley.

The warmest temperature in the state Sunday was 92 degrees at Hagerman.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 111 degrees at Redding, Calif., and Lake Havasu, Ariz. The lowest was 20 degrees at Stanley.

Paraplegic climber halts short of peak

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) - A paraplegic mountain climber and his partner halted for the night Sunday short of their goal - the summit of Yosemite's famed Half Dome - with plans to make the final ascent after sunrise.

Mark Wellman, a park ranger, and partner Mike Corbett were 75 feet from the top of the 2,200-foot monolith when they decided to stop late Sunday afternoon, fearing that nightfall would overtake them before they reached the peak. "You don't want to top out in the dark," Wellman said by radio. "We're trying to do this as safely as we can."

They planned to resume climbing at 8 a.m. and hoped to finish about noon. They began what was expected to be a weeklong climb Sept. 4, but foul weather and crumbly rock delayed the ascent. The climbers sleep in hammocks suspended from the rock face.

Wellman, 31, paralyzed below the waist since a 1982 climbing fall, gained fame in 1989 when he and Corbett scaled the 3,200-foot face of El Capitan across Yosemite Valley. He climbs on rope placed by Corbett. Lifting himself up with thousands of pulleys.

Harkin enters race for presidency

WINTERSSET, Iowa - Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, a no-excuses Democrat with a zest for political combat, declared his candidacy for president Sunday with the promise to reverse the "greed and selfishness" of Republican economic policies and a pledge to "make America our most favored nation."

Harkin, who has energized Democratic activists over the past few months with his stinging attacks on President Bush, quickly set the tone for what is likely to be an aggressively partisan campaign by a politician whose motto is "Never defend. Always attack."

I'm here today to tell you that George Herbert Walker Bush has feet of clay, and I intend to take a hammer to them," Harkin told a cheering crowd of more than 2,500 people that included longtime Iowa supporters as well as new converts from other states.

Harkin, 51, joined former Massachusetts Sen. Paul E. Tsongas and Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder as the major announced candidates for the Democratic nomination.

Baker urges unity in Soviet Union

ALMA ATA, Soviet Union - Secretary of State James A. Baker III journeyed to the heart of Central Asia on Sunday to urge a key leader of the Soviet Union's increasingly independent republics to keep working to hold the crumbling federation together.

Baker flew to this remote city on the Steppes, only 200 miles from China's eastern coast to meet with the powerful president of Soviet Kazakhstan, Nursultan Nazarbayev. It was an unusual but calculated political act by the secretary of state, a highly visible visit to try to boost the prestige of a Soviet provincial leader - precisely because he is helping to keep the Soviet Union from coming apart at the seams.

"Nazarbayev is clearly someone committed to maintaining some kind of cohesion, and to prevent the disintegration of the union," a senior U.S. official traveling with Baker said approvingly. "The guy is important, and this is a way of giving him additional status," he said.

Democracy sweeps Hong Kong voting

HONG KONG - Pro-democracy candidates swept to a resounding victory Monday over Chinese Communist-backed candidates in Hong Kong's first direct legislative election in 150 years of British colonial rule.

But less than 40 percent of Hong Kong's registered voters cast ballots in the landmark vote and the low turnout appeared more a victory for apathy than activism. Liberals took 16 of the 18 races Monday, and the others were taken by a conservative, pro-business candidate and a moderate. Pro-Beijing candidates lost every race.

Retiring leader views changes affecting Scouting with alarm

By Brad Bowen
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Now in his fifth decade of leading Boy Scout Troop 67, Frank Mogensen has seen scouting change, and not necessarily for the better.

Mogensen decided more than two years ago to let someone else take over because it was "a little disenchanted with the way things are going."

"It seems like everything is working against scouting," Mogensen said.

National groups, including the American Civil Liberties Union, have recently begun pushing the Boy Scouts to permit girls to join. Others want homosexuals to be allowed as troop leaders and most recently, people have pushed to separate scouting from its religious underpinnings.

"Why do the atheists feel that they have to infiltrate these organizations?" Mogensen asked. "The moral part of scouting has got to be the important part, the teaching behind it."

Many of the changes in scouting today come from the boys themselves and their parents, he said.

Some boys rebel against the basics of being a Boy Scout - wearing the uniform to meetings, practicing knot-tying, and being kind and courteous to others, Mogensen said.

"I find myself continually wondering why some of the members of Troop 67 keep attending scouting functions," he wrote in a March letter to each of the 40 troop members.

A lot of boys seek the organization's top rank - Eagle scout - because of pressure from parents, not necessarily because it's what the boys want to do.

In February, Mogensen wrote a letter to his troop criticizing the actions of some parents who move their boys from one troop to another just to make it easier to get that Eagle badge.

"Is the boy's decision to go ahead and put the effort into attaining the goal (Eagle), just to satisfy his ego, or to make his Mom and Dad happy or is he doing it because he really enjoys the program, he truly believes in the basic fundamentals of scouting?" Mogensen asked in the letter, barely seven months before watching the 99th Eagle badge bestowed on a member of his troop.

All of these problems come at a time when the Boy Scout tenets of being responsible, helpful, friendly, courteous and kind are most needed, he said.

Scouting should provide leadership as a time when there is so much corruption in government and business, he added.

"I didn't have a lot of this stuff when I was a kid," Mogensen said. "Of course we didn't have TV when I was a kid either."

The number of school activities and the increasing pressure of homework make it harder than ever for a boy to find time for scouting.

"It takes the fire out of the boy" or an overnight backpacking trip, when he misses a couple of meetings and loses interest, Mogensen said.

Mogensen

discharged from the Army in 1945.

He returned to Filer and married his high school sweetheart. Mogensen had met his bride-to-be one day when she brought her brother to a Boy Scout meeting.

During the war, his old troop had disbanded, so Mogensen and his brother-in-law reorganized it. He became scoutmaster, but eventually had to quit because the drive to Filer from his new home in Twin Falls was too long.

In 1949, however, officials from the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church convinced him to take over as scoutmaster for Troop 67 and Mogensen has been there ever since.

His entire family has been involved in youth programs. Mogensen's wife, Betty, was an active Campfire Girl leader and each of their three daughters went through scouting when I was a boy, I wanted to help others achieve the same thing," he said.

Mogensen still lives in the Jefferson Street home he and his wife bought after they were married. He spends most of his free time trimming and planting and pruning the myriad plants in his yard.

Marigolds, alyssum, California poppies and gladioli decorate the front yard, along with a bronze maple tree planted in memory of his wife, who died of cancer seven years ago.

himself as a small, threatened country and the United States as the world's only superpower.

Abba Eban, Israel's former foreign minister, wrote Sunday in Maariv that "Israeli-U.S. relations are at their gravest hour, so much so that I don't remember such a rift in the past 40 years." Former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said it is the worst crisis since the 1956 Suez War, when the Eisenhower administration opposed the invasion of Egypt by Israel, Britain and France.

Rehavam Zeevi, a far-right member of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Cabinet, said Bush was "very close to... being an anti-Semite" and a proponent of the opposition Labor Party, said Bush's remarks had "anti-Semitic overtones."

Housing Minister Ariel Sharon and other hard-righters urged Shamir to sound the alarm to the peace conference tentatively set for next month. But Shamir, for all his fierce nationalism, has avoided strong language. With or without the loan guarantees, the United States remains avoid them," Novotny said.

"They're nicer to pick up in the winter. Lying out in the hot summer sun can really do something to a dead body," said Terry Adams, also a state road worker based in Spokane.

The workers are quick to point out that picking up road kill is only a small part of their job. They are snowplow drivers, landscape roadways and help stranded motorists among other jobs.

"They also are quick to point out that road kill is not edible, even deer meat. And although a few have had tempting offers from passerby for fresh carcasses, they turn them down.

Smaller animals such as dogs, cats and skunks usually are buried off the side of the road.

Larger animals find their final resting place in the Idaho Department of Transportation pit. And sometimes the animals end up at a rendering plant where they are turned into tallow for soap and candles or become bone meal and meat meal. Because the road kill business is so unpredictable, it makes little sense to make it a full-time job, workers say. Besides, natural predators, such as coyotes and birds, relieve some of the workload.

Spiking up road kill were an eight-hour-a-day job, no one would want it, said Myron Berger, a county road supervisor in Spokane.

"Sometimes it's hard to tell what the animal is. Sometimes you shove up what you can," he said.

The workers did each other about drawing-sticks-or-taking-turns-but sometimes the low man gets the lowest forms of death.

"It seems like the temps get the skunks," said Doug Morion, a temporary worker on the state roads in Spocane.

"Although the workers make jokes about the grossness of their jobs, they realize there is really little humor in it."

"It's a waste of wildlife," Berger said, and finding pets can be sad.

Sunday to have captured more than 400 federal soldiers and a large cache of arms.

Croatian Defense Minister Luka Bebić said the troops surrendered at six federal army barracks, two military warehouses and two watchtowers in response to the cutoff of food, electricity and water.

In a statement issued in Belgrade, the federal army said Bebić was lying. "Individual cases of desertion are being transformed into hundreds," it said.

Neither claim could be independently verified.

Croatia said it was impatient with peace efforts by the European Community and might drop out of a Yugoslav conference if the fighting worsens.

Foreign Minister Zvonimir Separović told reporters called the talks were "counterproductive and irrelevant" compared to the war raging in Croatia.

Israel's main source of aid and weapons.

"The last thing we want is to cause damage to us and the United States, our ally, who is really the only supporter we have in the world community," said Yossi Ben-Aharon, Shamir's top political adviser.

Israeli lobbyists have reportedly warned Shamir to back off demands for immediate consideration of the loan guarantees or risk a battle with Bush. Shamir says he will not, withdraw the request, but he and his senior ministers clearly want to tone down the war of words.

Nation

Senator says Thomas would help GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — A key Republican senator said Sunday that Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas will bring "real diversity" to the nation's top court and broaden the GOP's appeal to black voters.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who grilled Thomas last week about his hostility toward affirmative action programs, said the black jurist "may serve as a role model to bring many African-Americans to the Republican cause."

"There's a real concern among the Democrats and among the traditional leaders in the African-American community that Judge Thomas may bring people to a different way of thinking."

Specter said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

Another Judiciary Committee

member, Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said that after a week of hearings, the lawmakers still do not "know what the real Thomas will do" on the high court.

But Heflin said Thomas would win Senate confirmation if the vote were held today.

Most "moderate conservative Democrats would vote for him unless he really stubs his toe," said Heflin, who said his own mind was not made up.

Specter said "race played an enormous factor" in President Bush's choice of Thomas to succeed the retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall, and rightfully so.

With Thomas's up-from-poverty background, he is "a man who has a very, very different view of the world, a real diversity, which that court badly, badly needs," said Specter.

Thomas returns to the committee today for a second week of hearings, with many liberal groups lined up to oppose his nomination.

Parolee charged with murder; state weighs changing system

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Ronald Fort was a convicted killer in prison more than 12 years when he came before the state Parole Board this summer. The last time he got parole, Fort was hauled back to jail for gun possession.

Despite that and other warnings of possible trouble, the board let him go on July 22. A month later, he was back in prison, accused of another killing.

On Tuesday, Fort, 31, of Lincoln, faces a probable cause hearing in the Aug. 18 shooting death of Baron Sean Smith, a 25-year-old musician who worked with urban kids, trying to divert them from drugs and gangs. Smith's body was found in the parking lot of a job training center in Omaha.

Fort pleaded innocent when he was charged on Aug. 23 with first-degree murder in Smith's death.

In the meantime, Gov. Ben Nelson wants the three parole board members removed; they have refused to resign. And General Don Stenberg says the parole system needs to be re-examined, and maybe abolished.

"The concern which I have is that the time actually served is much less than the sentence as the public understands it," Stenberg said.

But there has been little support in Nebraska to get rid of parole. And criminal justice experts say parole is more than a reward for good behavior. They say it also provides a crucial release valve for overcrowded prisons.

"Parole gives correctional authorities some control over a person," said Phil Heymann, who teaches criminal law at Harvard University.

The attorney general's reaction isn't unusual, though, Heymann said. "Whenever somebody kills and commits another murder," Heymann said, "it puts great pressure on legislators to say no to parole for murderers and causes parole boards to say 'No more paroles.'"

At the start of this year, nearly a half-million parolees were under active supervision in the United States, according to the Criminal Justice Institute of New York.

That compares with the 800,000 inmates packed into prisons built for just over 600,000. In Nebraska, prisons are 47.6 percent over capacity.

Parole systems work, said Marj Marlette, editor of Corrections Compendium, a national journal for corrections professionals published in Lincoln. "We've had very few problems, there have been some parole revocations, but not many, really," she said.

Jail fire victim moved from elsewhere

FORSYTH, Mo. (AP) — The victims of a fire at the Taney County Jail included a woman drunken driving suspect who was moved from another jail that was too crowded and a former police chief held on a charge of failure to pay child support.

Donna Redhan and Charles Lee Nagel were among four inmates killed before dawn Saturday when a generator fire filled the one-story, concrete jail with thick black smoke. The fire cut power to the jail, trapping all 26 inmates in their cells until firefighters could free them.

"I'm still numb. I don't know how I'm going to tell my kids," said Nagel's ex-wife, Margaret Nagel. Nagel, who had been police chief in Rockaway Beach, had four children. Thirteen inmates remained hospitalized Sunday in Branson and Springfield hospitals, where they were being treated for smoke inhalation, hospital officials said. They were all in satisfactory condition.

Crews were working Sunday to clean up smoke damage in the jail.

Nine inmates from Taney County were being held in the Branson Jail, the presiding commissioner of Taney County, said it would be Monday before officials get any idea on when the jail may be ready for occupancy again.

Mission to Planet Earth," said program manager Mike Luther.

The observatory was released a little later than planned, because controllers had trouble getting a signal to pass between the craft's main antenna and a second satellite through which data is transmitted to Earth. The problems continued after the release. Signals were gained, and lost, three times within two hours.

Shuttle deploys satellite to study ozone layer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery astronauts dispatched an observatory satellite Sunday to examine the effects of pollution on Earth's withering ozone layer.

Ground controllers ran into trouble communicating with the spacecraft.

The glittering, copper-colored satellite, its solar panel jutting to one side, drifted off into orbit shortly after midnight. Mark Brown unleashed the observatory from the end of the shuttle's mechanical arm as the ship flew over the Atlantic Ocean toward West Africa on its 34th spin around the world since liftoff Thursday.

"It was a spectacular show," shuttle commander John Creighton said. Those on Earth were just as impressed.

Vandals wreck clinic; doctor remains firm

AURORA, Ill. (AP) — Vandals broke into a clinic of a gynecologist targeted by weekly protests for performing mid-term abortions, destroyed medical equipment and spray-painted anti-abortion messages on walls, police said.

Dr. Aleksandr Jakubowski estimated damage at more than $100,000, but said Sunday he will continue performing abortions at his clinic in this Chicago suburb.

"This is part of my gynecological and obstetrical practice and is going to be part of it," Jakubowski said.

The messages "baby killer" and "Thou shall not kill" were painted on walls sometime before the clinic released Saturday morning, police said.

"It's just insane. Every citizen who's anti-abortion but is sane is going to say, 'Oh, my God,'" said Jakubowski. "I think it's going to anger a lot of people."

The doctor is one of few in the Chicago area who perform second-trimester abortions.

There were no suspects in the break-in at the clinic where pickets have appeared each Saturday since April. On April 25, about 50 demonstrators surrounded the doctor's car at a highway rest stop and two chained themselves to the car. Five were arrested.

"We do not condone violence. This actually hurts our cause because it reflects on us," said protester Randall C. Means. "Now, I'm going to be embarrassed to be picketing."

Aurora Mayor David Pierce took a not-in-my-backyard attitude. "We don't need vandalism in this town, along with any other crime," he said. "And we probably don't need what (Jakubowski) does here, either."

New principal, novel ideas welcome in Shoshone

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

Ringquist

SHOSHONE — Sue Ringquist says she gets funny looks from students who see her out jogging the rural roads around Shoshone. She adds the guys working out in the weight room also can't get used to her pumping iron.

As Shoshone High School principal, Ringquist, 33, is not much older than some of the students in her new school.

Ringquist also says she is the youngest female secondary school principal in the state. But she adds so far she has relished the challenges that go with being young and feels her age has been good for the students. It is the reason, she says, she lives her life the way she wants to, including working out in the weight room.

"I don't think I'm a real person," Ringquist says. "I think I'm young enough that they feel comfortable talking to me."

"The students seem very open to me."

But Ringquist's youth isn't what makes her special to the 182 students at Shoshone High School.

What makes her unique is that she is trying to make a difference in the way they feel about themselves and their school.

"I'm trying to help them develop pride in the school and in themselves," Ringquist says. "I want the community to see them as responsible citizens."

To help them do that, Ringquist is implementing some innovative leadership techniques, including involving students in projects designed to spruce up the school and the community.

In one example of her new policy, Ringquist and 14 Shoshone High School kids have been spending their autumn weekends cleaning up the highway near Shoshone under the "Adopt a Highway" program.

And like a fresh autumn breeze, Ringquist and her novel ideas are being welcomed with open arms in this small district.

"I feel like some of the changes I've made have been positive changes," Ringquist says. "The community has been very supportive of the changes I've made."

But Ringquist says her kids also know that she's tough and can show leadership.

She has tightened student schedules to get rid of free study periods, something she says was getting out of hand. And her tardy policy is even tougher; six tardies will land a student in "Saturday School."

The Shoshone school board asked her to

"be strict on discipline" when they hired her last spring, Ringquist says, but she says her students are, for the most part, model citizens.

Ringquist, who was raised in a small Wisconsin town about the same size as Shoshone, was an art teacher in Blackfoot for seven years before coming to Shoshone. She has her masters in health and has taken advanced courses in administration. She says that although she had concerns about overseeing a senior staff of teachers — which turned out to be unfounded — she has a good relationship with others at Shoshone. She added she also knew she would be good at her job, despite her age and inexperience.

"I felt like it was an area where I could make a difference," Ringquist says. "I have the skills that make me a good administrator."

"I love it. I feel very comfortable with the job. It's been a challenge, but a very good challenge."

Jackpot power will be off for part of Tuesday

JACKPOT — The lights are going out in Jackpot Tuesday, but not older than the way out.

Idaho Power Co. will be doing work at the substation north of Jackpot Tuesday and will cut off electrical service to Jackpot residents from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The affected areas runs from 10 miles north of Jackpot to two miles south of town.

"We will not be dark at midday, however, all Jackpot customers have backup generators and will be open for business as usual."

Fate of treatment plant proposal to be decided at polls

JEROME — Voters will go to the polls here Tuesday to decide the fate of a proposal to authorize the city of Jerome to issue revenue bonds to build an updated wastewater treatment plant to process waste products generated from a soon-to-be built cheese plant.

Cost of the expansion would be $1.5 million to be paid for by the Jerome Cheese Co. based on usage of the treatment system. The revenue bond would not effect taxes. Rates charged to Jerome residents would not be increased.

The plant currently in operation does not have the capability to handle the increase waste load from the cheese plant.

Voting will take place at the City Hall, 152 East Ave. A. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

City sponsors Snake River workshop Tuesday evening

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Rivers Unit will sponsor a workshop to formulate a plan of action for the Middle Snake River on Tuesday.

The workshop will be from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the community meeting room of the Obchain Insurance Co. building at 264 Main Ave. S.

Exercise facility for Jerome prisoners off to slow start

JEROME — No bids have been received to construct an outdoor exercise area for Jerome prisoners.

The 1,500 square-foot area is to be built on the north side of the Jerome County Courthouse.

"We now have the authority to find somebody (to build the facility) without going through the bid process," Jerome County Commissioner Veronica Lierman said. "We still would like to get it built this fall," she said. Anyone interested in the project should contact the commissioners' office at 324-8811.

Nomination deadline for 4 city council seats is Sept. 26

JEROME — All four Jerome City Council seats will be vacated and filled by an election to be held Nov. 5.

Petitions of nomination, indicating a candidate's intention to run for a council seat can be turned in to the city clerk beginning at 8 a.m. on Sept. 26. Petition submission will close at 5 p.m. on Oct. 8, Helen Paoli, city clerk said.

The four council positions became vacant when two council members resigned and the jobs filled by appointment. Terms have expired for the other two councilmen, Don Jacobson and Rocky Jackson. At the Nov. 5 election, two positions will be filled for a two-year term with the other two seats filled for four-year terms.

Polls will be open on Nov. 5 from noon to 8 p.m. Registered voters living north of Main Street will vote at the Jerome Civic Club Memorial Library. Those living south of Main Street will vote at the City Hall.

Registration for the election will close at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 1, and will resume on the day after the election. Jerome citizens can register at the City Hall.

Reserve your license plate number soon or lose it

JEROME — Jerome County residents who want to keep their current license plate numbers after new plates are issued must reserve them soon.

Idaho will be issuing new plates to everyone starting Jan. 1. Jerome County residents who want to keep the numbers they have must reserve them between today and Oct. 31, at a cost of $2 for each number reserved.

The Jerome County reservation program will only reserve up to license number 2710000. Any unreserved number below 2710000 may be reserved on a first-come, first-served basis from Nov. 1 through Nov. 30, 1991, at a cost of $2 per number reserved.

Office hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Water, sewer system nears completion

By Deborah Shimkus
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — The streets of Bellevue are being torn up daily as residents watch the progress of the installation of the city's first water treatment and sewerage system.

But the confusion may not last much longer. An engineer handling the project reported to the city council this week that the system could very well be in place by this fall.

Construction crews are 80 percent done with the main line installation, putting them two weeks ahead of schedule, said Project Engineer Vance Forsgren.

The transmission line is 80 to 90 percent complete, and the treatment site construction is about one week behind schedule.

Currently, the installation has caused traffic delays, detours, and rough roads throughout the city.

Contractors have only done preliminary clean-ups and will do a more thorough job of returning the city streets to normal once the lines are installed, Forsgren said.

In a related matter, funds are still available for low- to moderate-income households for hookup to the new sewer system, said Ted Hendricks, grant administrator.

So far, two hundred residents have applied for the funding, he said. Hendricks added he hoped at least fifty more people will apply. Residents may apply for the financial support at the City Hall. The city received a $375,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to enable low- to moderate-income households to hook up to the sewer system.

Edsel love affair was dad's doing

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — When Aubrey Shaffer took his son, Roger, to the 1957 Twin Falls County Fair to see the new Edsels, he didn't know he was starting his son on a lifelong passion for classic cars.

Now that he has two of Roger's 14 classic cars parked in his backyard, he's got a pretty good idea.

"It's really his fault that I got started on this," Roger Shaffer says, chuckling.

"Dad took me out to see the new collection of Edsels at the '57 fair," Shaffer recalls. "It was the first time they were introduced in Twin Falls."

"We thought they were just about the prettiest things we'd ever seen," Shaffer says. "It started a love affair with the Edsel. I've wanted one ever since."

He got his wish in 1988, when he bought his first Edsel from a man in Gardiner, a 1958 salmon-colored Pacer he'd had his eye on for years. He recently purchased a second cherished Edsel, a 1960 Sahara Beige Ranger.

The Ranger rounds out a car collection that started in 1977 with the purchase of a 1936 Ford. The collection which Shaffer has fully restored. He also owns — and spends about 15 hours a week working on — 11 classic "Willys" in various shapes and sizes.

Shaffer, who lives in Hagerman, says he is by no means the only one around who loves the cars. The museum Edsels, which some have described as looking like "a Ford sucking a lemon." He says there are currently 10 Edsels on the road in Magic Valley and about 11,000 worldwide.

Shaffer belongs to the Edsel Owners Club, which boasts almost 2,000 members.

The 1958 Edsel is a favorite of Hagerman car collector Roger Shaffer.

Jerome agriculture museum awaits voter approval

By H. R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Voters will decide in November whether an agriculture museum will be built in Jerome.

Jerome County Commissioners approved at a recent meeting to put the question on the Nov. 5 ballot.

If the proposition passes, a taxing district would be set up to pay for the museum. The county would appoint a 5-member board to handle construction and operation of the museum to be located south of Jerome.

The annual budget for the museum is estimated at about $80,000 to $90,000, Clair Ricketts, a member of the Jerome Historical Society said. Taxes would not be collected for the museum until 1992. Commissioner Veronica Lierman said.

When completed, the museum could create more than 30 jobs for the area.

It will be located at the crossroads of U.S. Highway 93 and Interstate 84, a highly traveled area, where more than 4 million cars have been recorded as passing, according to Ricketts.

The museum will be a replica of a typical Carey Act farm, showing its progress from horse-drawn vehicles to modern machinery.

The story of irrigation practices in Idaho from gravity pivots will be one of the first operational displays. Old-time machinery, a train station with engine, passenger and cattle cars, dairy practices and out-buildings also are planned.

Seven acres will be used for ponds and bird habitat. A visitors' center and recreational vehicle dump station are in the development plans, according to publicity from the Jerome Historical Society. A nature trail and displays of historical artifacts will be part of the museum. Most of the displays have been collected and put in storage, ready for construction to begin.

Placing the museum on 110 acres of Bureau of Land Management property has already been approved.

"We're at a place now where we're looking for a professional who can help us set up the museum if the citizens approve the museum in November," Ricketts said.

Be skeptical of constitutional amendment promises

Tuesday marks the 204th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution. I mention this because the Constitution is likely to become a political football again this election season, and this seems a good time to try to minimize the blame.

Amending the Constitution is a favorite quest of Idaho politicians. Sen. Larry Craig has championed an amendment requiring the federal government to balance its budget as long as he's been in Congress.

Rep. Richard Stallings, who wants to join Craig in the Senate, also supports a balanced-budget amendment, as do his Republican "bros-in-Dix" Kenithorne and Milton Erhart. Erhart also supports an amendment to let the president veto individual items in appropriations bills, an idea that's had about as much success as the balanced-budget amendment.

Then there's the nationwide movement to limit the terms of senators and representatives. The initiative that Idahoans for Competitive Government, the local arm of the term-limitation movement, is pushing would affect state officials, but if it becomes the law in Washington, other states would limit congressional terms as well.

Many politicians, former politicians and would-be politicians support the idea of term limitation, if not a specific law. But many constitutional scholars believe that the only way to limit congressional terms is by constitutional amendment.

Drew DeSilver
On politics

Proponents of school prayer, opponents of abortion, supporters of directly electing the President — all have their own pet amendments as well. As different as they are, these proposed amendments have one thing in common: Not one has a chance of becoming part of the Constitution anytime soon.

"In fact, I'll go further than that: If Congress passes a balanced-budget, line-item veto or term-limitation amendment while I'm in Twin Falls, I will go down to City Park at high noon and eat a hat.

The fact is, proposing or endorsing a constitutional amendment is a sure way to look like you're doing something without actually having to do something. Amendments are like boulers thrown into the deep lake of American political life: They make a big splash, then sink without a trace.

In 1989, 138 amendments were introduced in the House, 34 in the Senate. They included 32 separate balanced-budget amendments, 13 line-item veto amendments, and 12 term-limitation amendments.

Only two of those amendments actually came up for a vote. One was a balanced-budget amendment sponsored by Craig and 242 of his thin-house colleagues. The vote was 279-150, seven short of the two-thirds vote required.

The other was an amendment designed to prevent malicious physical destruction of the American flag. This is a perfect example of congressmen using the Constitution as an opportunity to grandstand for the folks back home (that is to say, us).

Forty-eight flag-protection amendments, each with a passel of co-sponsors eager to demonstrate their patriotism, were introduced in the summer of '89. Only one actually made it to a vote. The House vote was 254-177; the vote in the Senate was 58-42. Both were short of the two-thirds requirement.

Those were the last proposed amendments to make their way to a floor vote. Most are assigned to a committee and promptly forgotten. Even if they had passed both the House and the Senate, they would still have to be approved by 38 states.

This tells us several things. One is that, while politicians are eager to suggest amending the Constitution when push comes to shove they don't actually want to do it. You have to figure that, with 32 balanced-budget amendments floating around, Congress could have passed one if it really wanted to.

The second is that it's very hard to change the Constitution. This shouldn't be a surprise — the Framing Fathers wanted it that way. They deliberately wrote a tough, difficult amendment procedure into the Constitution to keep it from being altered at whim.

If you count the Bill of Rights as one amendment (since they were all adopted at the same time), the Constitution has been amended only 17 times in more than 200 years.

The third lesson is that Congress won't make the extraordinary effort of amending the Constitution if the effort will be to reduce its own power.

And that's the real reason why a balanced-budget, line-item veto, or term-limitation amendment pass.

So, the next time Candidate Smith tells you that his solution to the problems of the day is to stop a balanced-budget amendment, veto school prayer, right-to-life amendment, just smile, nod your head politely and say, "So, no planning on doing much in Congress, eh?"

Drew DeSilver covers politics for The Times-News.

Hearing set on status of nuclear waste dump

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A hearing on the status of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant will be held Sept. 21, New Mexico's two U.S. senators have announced.

The Energy and Natural Resources Committee field hearing will be held at the Albuquerque Public Schools, Technical-Vocational Institute board room, Sens. Pete Domenici and Jeff Bingaman said.

Bingaman, a Democrat, will chair the hearing. Both he and Domenici, a Republican, are members of the committee.

Federal, state and local officials as well as representatives from environmental and community groups will get a chance to testify, the senators said.

WIPP is a U.S. Department of Energy project designed to bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry. 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad.

The repository has yet to open, pending resolution of safety and environmental concerns and the withdrawal of land around the site from public use.

Station, Rankin file countersuit

COEUR D'ALENE, (AP) — Political activist Ron Rankin and the Coeur d'Alene radio station that carries his radio show, have counter-sued a Panhandle engineering firm that claims it was slandered on the air by Rankin.

KCDA-FM owner John Rook and Rankin contend in their suit that J-U-B Engineers and President Jim Coleman of Hayden Lake harmed them financially by organizing a boycott against the station.

The suit alleges Coleman threatened to "break" Rankin for commentaries aired in early July in which Rankin railed against J-U-B and for Coleman for their roles in a project to revitalize downtown Coeur d'Alene.

In his commentaries, Rankin, the leader of the statewide initiative to limit property taxes to one percent of actual market value, blasted local officials and Coleman for saying a portion of the downtown was a blighted slum in an application for federal money to underwrite the revitalization effort. Coleman sued the station and Rankin for $250,000 in damages, alleging he had been slandered.

The counter-suit by Rook and Rankin claims Coleman convinced the Coeur d'Alene Downtown Association to halt advertising with the Rook's station because of the commentaries.

Removing polygamy ban not an option

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A state legislative commission has decided not to consider removing a ban on polygamy from the Utah Constitution.

Some members of the Constitution Revision Commission Friday announced the removal of the ban to avoid a possible conflict with the U.S. Supreme Court.

"As a statement of principle of law, I can see (removing) it," said state Supreme Court Justice Michael Zimmerman. "But I don't see what political downside, what signal does it send?"

Polygamy was an early tenet of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The church outlawed plural marriages before Utah was allowed to become a state in 1896. Federal officials required a ban on polygamy to be written into the state's constitution, Zimmerman said.

Utah is one of only three states with constitutions that ban polygamy. Idaho and Oklahoma are the other two.

Hispanics not new to Gem State

BOISE (AP) — The greatest misconception about Mexican Americans is that they are recent arrivals in Idaho, a University of Washington historian says.

"We have been in the Northwest longer than any other group except for Native Americans," said Erasmo Gamboa of the Ethnic Heritage Center at the University of Washington.

"Five-hundred seventeen years," he said Friday at the Hispanic Issues Conference in Boise.

In a workshop on Hispanic history in the Northwest, Gamboa talked about the contributions of Hispanics and the dearth of information about their culture in classroom history lessons.

The earliest visitors to Idaho were the Spanish and Mexican people who arrived from Mexico in the 18th century in ships constructed out of cedar wood, he said.

Mild quake strikes northwest Washington

ORCAS, Wash. (AP) — A mild earthquake struck this island town Sunday morning but there were no reports of injuries or damage, officials said.

The quake measured 2.8 on the Richter scale and occurred at 9:20 a.m. EDT, said Seth Moran, a graduate student at the University of Washington Geophysics Center in Seattle. It was centered near Orcas on the San Juan Islands in northwestern Washington, about 20 miles northeast of Victoria, British Columbia and about 26 miles west-southwest of Bellingham.

Workers in the San Juan County sheriff's office felt the tremor for about a second and a half, said lead dispatcher Tom Eades.

"It was like having a truck run into the back of the building. For a half second there was a low rumble, and then a real heavy concussion," Eades said.

He said the sheriff's office fielded several calls from people who felt the quake, but no one reported any damage or injuries.

The Pacific Geoscience Center in Sidney, British Columbia, said it recorded two small foreshocks less than an hour before the main tremor.

"There are quakes that occur up in the northwestern part of Washington but they're usually a little farther south," Moran said. "This is the first one I know of in quite a while that occurred near the San Juans."

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 3.8 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 2.8.

An earthquake of 2.8 is unlikely to cause any serious structural damage.

Hookups are expected to be as much as $500 per household. The general contractor will open bids for the low- to moderate-income hookups this Tuesday.

In other business, the council:

Agreed to enter into a Blaine County Fire Services Mutual Aid contract. This contract specifies that the cities of the Wood River Valley and the county will assist each other in fire suppression when possible and details the responsibilities and liabilities of assisting fire departments, according to Hatley Fire Chief Michael Chatman.

For example, manpower and use of equipment will be at no charge, but a city may be requested to reimburse the fire department of another city for use of specific chemicals.

Bellevue has only one fire truck, departments with manpower, said mayor Dennis Wright. If each of the cities and the county enter into the Mutual Aid agreement, the city of Bellevue stands to benefit a lot, he said.

Agreed to change the zoning on three acres at the northwest end of Bellevue from a transitional zone to business zone.

The change will enable Cal Neil of Sun Valley Associates to build an R.V. storage park at the site, just north of a trailer park he owns. The Westwood R.V. Storage Park will be constructed entirely of metal and will house up to 135 recreation vehicles, according to Neil.

The units will be surrounded by a 6-foot fence topped with barbed wire, he said. The council encouraged Neil to do extensive tree planting to improve the appearance of the site.

"I don't want to have to look at it," said Councilman Richard Kimball.

bers. Another club, the International Edsel Club, has about 3,000 members. Shaffer says each of these clubs has members, like him, that own more than one Edsel.

"I bought the Ranger from a friend in Kuna who has six," Shaffer says. "There's one guy in South Dakota who has 150 Edsels, including two convertibles."

Edsel convertibles are extremely rare, according to Shaffer, and by far the most sought-after Edsel model. A 1960 Edsel convertible, one of only 71 manufactured that year, sold at a Phoenix auction last year for $42,000. A mint-condition Edsel convertible will fetch between $7,500 and $12,000.

One of the reasons the Edsel's, which originally sold for around $2,700, have increased in value over the years is that there were so few made. From 1938 to 1940, only 13,000 of the Ford-based cars were sold. Shaffer says there are several reasons the Edsel has become the car of infamy.

Kurdish leader: Iraq agreement near NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iraqi Kurdish leader Massoud Barzani predicted Sunday an agreement on Kurdish autonomy could be reached within days, the Iraq News Agency reported.

Barzani, leader of the Kurdistan Democratic Party, met with Defense Minister Hussein Kamel Hassan and Izat Ibrahim, vice chairman of the ruling Revolutionary Command Council, the state-run agency said. The report gave no details of the proposed autonomy pact.

Aquino promises referendum on base

MANILA, Philippines — President Corason Aquino urged the public Sunday to overturn the Senate's expected rejection of a new lease for the U.S. Navy base at Subic Bay.

She said she decided to hold a national referendum because "there is no more hope that the treaty will be ratified" when the Senate votes Monday, the day the current lease expires.

Twelve of the 23 senators said they would vote against the 10-year lease extension, four more votes than needed to defeat it. "I propose we take the issue directly to the people," Mrs. Aquino said in a nationally televised address.

KGB barred from diplomatic posts

MOSCOW — Foreign Minister Boris Pankin said the KGB secret police will be barred from selecting personnel for diplomatic posts, as was the case for much of Soviet history.

In a weekend interview with the independent news agency Interfax, Pankin said the KGB should "must not be engaged in forming the personnel" and that he wanted to put a stop to the deployment of spies in diplomatic guise.

That would put him on a collision course with the new KGB chief, Vadim Bakatin, who has said the agency would continue sending intelligence officers to work as journalists and diplomats in foreign countries. According to Pankin, the size of Soviet trade missions abroad, which have also served as KGB covers, will be reduced. "They are too large and they frequently perform the same functions," he said.

Violence ebbs day after pact signed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Black faction fighting calmed Sunday, a day after the white-led government and the two main black opposition movements signed an unprecedented pact seeking to halt the violence.

Police reported scattered attacks and two deaths, but said the township appeared less tense than at any time since the latest wave of unrest began Sept. 8.

The accord signed Saturday marks the first agreement between the government, the African National Congress and the Inkatha Freedom Party. It establishes codes of conduct for political parties and the security forces, and sets up panels to monitor compliance.

Previous peace pacts have collapsed, setting back President F.W. de Klerk's efforts to negotiate a new constitution to extend voting rights to the black majority of 30 million.

Thieves lift bikinis hours before contest

GEORGETOWN, Guyana — Bandits almost thwarted a national beauty contest when they stole the competitors' bikinis a few hours before the show was to go on, police said Sunday.

The robbers picked the locks on a car containing 19 bathing suits Saturday evening, and organizers of the Miss Guyana Pageant were sent scurrying around the city for replacement suits long after shopping centers had closed for the day.

Blanket of smoke marks start of Amazon burning season

SAO SEBASTIAO DE TOCANTINS, Brazil (AP) — It's burning season in the Amazon and a thick haze of smoke and ash shrouds the rain forest. Fires by ranchers and farmers this year are expected to destroy 5,000 square miles of forest, an area slightly larger than Connecticut, according to government estimates. That would be about 40 percent of the amount burned last year.

Already, three children have died from respiratory ailments related to smoke inhalation in northern Para state, and airports can open only sporadically because of poor visibility. Forest fires have damaged electric lines, causing periodic blackouts.

A smoke cloud stretched almost 4,000 miles in early September, from the northeastern state of Maranhao to remote Acre on Brazil's western border with Peru.

In this small village in the southeastern Amazon the sun rises an eerie red, trapped behind a gray shroud, and sets the same color at day's end. Even on cloudless nights not a single star can be seen.

"Ten years ago this entire region was covered by virgin rain forest," the Rev. Miguel Elouso Rojo said as he squinted through smoke rolling across the windshield of his pickup truck. "Now it is total desolation."

Rojo drove past mile after mile of blackened land, with only an occasional palm tree still standing. A few skinny cows walked amid the ruins, picking at the little green that remained.

Homesteader Raimundo de Souza, with his wife and children, clears away debris left by fires set on his land in Brazil's Amazon region in 1988.

The lovely Tocantins River passes just a few hundred yards in front of the village's Roman Catholic church. But during the burning season, Rojo says, he almost forgets it exists. "The river isn't even visible until you are at the water's edge," he said.

Though it is illegal to burn the jungle for farming or ranching, the practice is routine. Fires are set as soon as the dry season begins, normally in August.

More than 250,000 square miles of rain forest — about the size of Texas — have been burned in the Amazon, whose 2 million square miles contain 30 percent of the world's remaining rain forest.

The burning destroys lush vegetation that produces huge amounts of oxygen. Meanwhile, the smoke is believed to contribute to the "greenhouse effect," which many scientists say is causing a gradual warming of the planet. Many rare plant species also have been killed off before they could be studied.

Hostage release weeks away, top Shiite cleric says

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's top Shiite Muslim cleric predicted Sunday a Western hostage release could be reached within weeks, but urged a one-time swap involving the captives and Arab prisoners to end the crisis.

Sheik Mottammed Mehdi Shamseddine's statements came amid intense speculation that freedom for one or two of the Western hostages was imminent.

Other religious leaders with ties to the kidnappers had predicted a hostage release in a matter of days.

Shamseddine called for a comprehensive swap — rather than gradual releases — of Arab prisoners held by Israel in return for the 11 Westerners held by Shiites in Lebanon.

Israel demands a full accounting of its missing servicemen before it releases more of the detainees, including leading Shiite cleric Sheik Abdul Karim Obaid.

But Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Sunday that Obaid will not be released before any of the other Arab prisoners held in Israel or south Lebanon.

"No, we won't do that," said Arens, interviewed on ABC-TV.

"I don't think that would make any sense for us to do that. As far as anybody's concerned (Obaid), I think, is probably the best card that we in the West have."

"I think if we give up that card, that may be the end of the release of hostages."

Assembly convenes to admit 7 members, assess Soviet plight

UNITED NATIONS — The 46th General Assembly will welcome seven new members — including the Baltics — assess the Soviet empire's collapse and approve a new Security Council secretary-general as it opens this week.

The 159-nation assembly, which convenes Tuesday, boasts its membership to 146 with admissions of North and South Korea, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia and the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Only the Holy See, Monaco, San

Marino and Switzerland remain non-voting U.N. observers.

One of the highlights of the assembly's season will be its confirmation of the next secretary-general to replace Javier Perez de Cuellar, who has served 10 years as the world's top diplomat.

The Security Council must select and the assembly must approve a candidate before Perez de Cuellar's term ends Dec. 31. The assembly meets throughout the year, but active business goes on from the third Tuesday in September until mid-December.

Swedes hand Social Democrats big setback

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Social Democrats, founders of Sweden's welfare state, suffered their worst defeat in nearly 60 years Sunday as voters turned to non-socialist parties offering tax cuts, more choice and less bureaucracy.

Inflation and growing concerns about government efficiency shifted the prosperous Swedes' support away from the party that has governed for 53 of the past 59 years.

Salvadorans, guerrillas bring high stakes to U.N. negotiation table

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran president and senior guerrilla leaders will meet today with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar in an effort to end the 12-year-old civil war that has taken more than 75,000 lives.

Alfredo Cristiani and leaders of the Farabundo Mari National Liberation Front, or FMLN, do not plan a face-to-face meeting, but hope that separate talks, with Perez de Cuellar carrying messages between them, could lead to the formulation of a quick timetable for the war's end.

Because both sides have expressed a willingness to bring the war to a close, expectations for positive results are high.

"If the negotiations collapse, fighting could very likely increase," said Ruben Zamora, the vice-president of the national legislature and a longtime rebel ally. "But if they are successful, the significance is an acceleration of negotiations and the goal of peace in 1992 will be real."

Perez de Cuellar is expected to propose a one-time set of negotiations aimed at a simultaneous cease-fire and agreements concerning the future of the armed forces and the rebels' return to civilian life.

A immediate cease-fire, however, is unlikely to come out of the meetings.

Rocket is grounded by late hit in CFL game

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Toronto Argonauts general manager Mike McCarthy wants Dan Wicklum thrown out of the CFL for a late hit Sunday that sent Raghib "Rocket" Ismail to the hospital with a concussion.

But the Calgary Stampeders linebacker said that if Ismail were not a millionaire, nobody would care about the hit. Toronto also lost quarterback Matt Dunigan for up to six weeks with a separated shoulder suffered on the team's second offensive series.

Ismail, the rookie from Notre Dame who signed a guaranteed $18 million, four-year contract last spring, left Toronto's 33-24 loss to Calgary midway through the second quarter after being hit by Wicklum.

"Ismail had already been tackled while returning a punt when Wicklum came in late and drove his helmet into the Rocket's shoulder and neck. Wicklum was assessed a spearing penalty on the play. I'm going to get him out of the league," fumed McCarthy afterwards.

"(Ismail's) head was already on the ground. It's an emotional game, but you didn't need cheap shots."

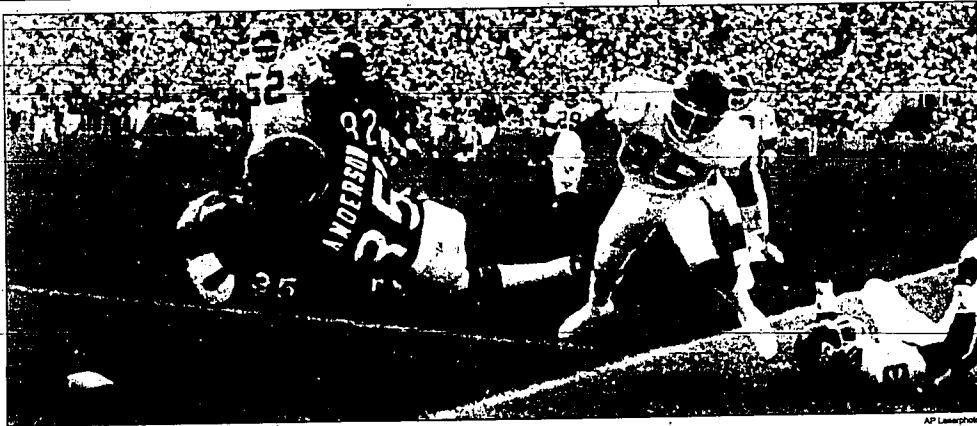

Wicklum denied intentionally trying to hurt Ismail.

"I had no malicious intent," said the fourth-year pro from the University of Guelph. "He was an Argonaut returning a punt and I wanted to tackle him. It was a quasi-late hit and the refs called me. If the referees had thought it was a blatant, late hit, an intentional cheap shot, they would have kicked me out of the game. But they didn't think that."

Blocked field goal lifts Bears past Giants

The Associated Press

Matt Bahr learned an important lesson. You can't kick a football through a Refrigerator.

William "The Refrigerator" Perry, Chicago's 320-pound defensive tackle, blocked Bahr's 35-yard field goal attempt with 15 seconds to play, preserving the Bears' 20-17 victory over the New York Giants.

A late defensive stand was the key for the Bears, who blew a 13-0 lead but went ahead for keeps on Neal Anderson's 42-yard scoring run with 6:38 to play.

The Giants (1-2) drove to the Chicago 13, but an illegal motion penalty on third down moved the ball back to the 18.

Then Jeff Hostetler threw an incomplete pass, forcing the Giants to go for the tie.

"I don't know, maybe he did it with his stomach," Bears coach Mike Ditka said. "I got my hand on it and blocked it."

Perry said, "I really don't know what happened," Bahr said.

"I thought I struck the ball well. Of all the things you would think that would happen, that's the last one."

Coach Ray Handley said the Giants were trying "to get the ball into the end zone to win the game and not trying to set up a field goal. But the penalty set us back."

Jim Harbaugh threw a 75-yard touchdown pass to Wendell Davis, and Kevin Butler kicked two field goals as Chicago took a 13-0 halftime lead.

Rodney Hampton ran for two TDs and Bahr kicked a field goal to give the Giants a 17-13 lead that didn't hold up.

Braves rout Dodgers to stretch lead Hamblin tops Idaho golfers in Boise Open

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Any doubts the Atlanta Braves may have been pennant pretenders in the NL West were wiped out Sunday with a 9-1 rout of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Sid Bream drove in five runs, including a first-inning grand slam, and Steve Avery pitched a four-hitter as Atlanta stretched its lead to 1½ games over Los Angeles heading into the final three weeks of the season.

After Friday's 5-2 loss to the Dodgers, some suggested the young Braves might be feeling the pressure against the battle-tested Dodgers.

But Atlanta overcame an early deficit on Saturday to beat Los Angeles, 3-2, in 11 innings.

Atlanta has won nine of its last 10 games, and has three more with the Dodgers next weekend in Los Angeles.

Despite losing the last two, the Dodgers returned home with a 7-4 road trip to play their final 18 games on the West Coast, 13 of those at home, the others at San Francisco and San Diego. The Braves have 19 games remaining.

Avery (16-8) allowed a leadoff single to Bream in the first inning before retiring the next 15 batters in order, a streak that ended when David Justice dropped Jose

BOISE — Twin Falls pro Mike Hamblin repeated as the highest scoring Idahoan in the Boise Open of the Ben Hogan Tour Sunday — but you wouldn't believe how he did it.

Hamblin, who was 13th and seven under par in the Albertson's-sponsored event last year, finished this tournament just one under par. And he had to blister the back nine and final four holes to get it there.

You see, Hamblin had nines of 42-30 in registering Sunday's closing one-under 72. Going out — they play the backside as front nine in this one — he was playing it smart, conservatively and trying to hold it together largely by hitting irons off the tee.

But his one-iron kept sending the ball right — and right into all those pine trees lining all of Hillcrest Country Club's fairways. He had to chip out a couple of times to escape and then his usually Tennessee, Nebraska and Iowa moved into the Top 10, while Notre Dame dropped out of the elite group for the first time in three years in Sunday's Associated Press college football poll.

Tennessee (2-0) jumped five spots to sixth following a 30-16 victory over UCLA, and Nebraska (2-0) rose four places to ninth after routing Colorado State 71-14. Iowa (2-0), which beat Iowa State 29-10, went from 14th to 10th.

Notre Dame (1-1) fell from seventh to 11th after losing to Michigan 24-14. It's the lowest ranking for the Irish since the second regular-season poll in 1988, when they were 13th.

Southern Cal's 21-10 upset of Penn State had a major impact on the Top 25, dropping the Nittany Lions (2-1) from fifth to 12th and moving the Trojans (1-1) into the rankings at No. 22.

Florida State remained No. 1 after beating Western Michigan 58-0. The Seminoles (3-0) received 47 of 58 first-place votes and 1,436 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Michigan (2-0), which humbled Houston 40-10 Thursday night, stayed No. 2 with eight first-place votes and 1,345 points.

Because of media attack, Olympic president won't seek re-election

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — U.S. Olympic Committee president Robert Helmick, saying Sunday he is the target of an unprecedented attack by the media, won't seek re-election when his term expires next year.

Helmick, a Des Moines, Iowa, lawyer, said his decision to step down next year was based in part on the controversy surrounding his professional ties with companies that have business dealings with the Olympics.

"The whole thing got started with some confidential information that came out about my clients, all put together in an unprecedented attack against me," Helmick said in an interview during the final day of competition at the World Gymnastics Championships at the Hoosier Dome.

Helmick singled out the national daily USA Today, which first raised the issue of a possible conflict of interest with articles that Helmick had received consulting fees from several sports companies that do business with the Olympics.

"I don't feel that I've been given an opportunity to say my side of the story," Helmick said. "USA Today came out with a lot of confidential client information. They added a lot of numbers to a story, but some facts together and makes it appear like there's wrongdoing when in fact there has not been an allegation that I influenced any business decision of the Olympic Committee or in any way hurt the Olympic Committee."

"The only implication is that there's a general appearance of wrongdoing. I apologize for that, but now I see that it won't

'The only implication is that there's a general appearance of wrongdoing. I apologize for that, but now I see that it won't give up and in fact sports writers at U.S. Olympic Committee dinners have stated on the record that they're out to get me.'

give up and in fact sports writers at U.S. Olympic Committee dinners have stated on the record that they're out to get me."

Helmick did not identify the individuals he was referring to.

"We interviewed Mr. Helmick for 5½ hours on two separate occasions before publishing the article," said Gene Polienski, managing editor-sports of USA Today. "We explored everything that we published."

"In subsequent interviews, we've asked him to be happy to afford him another opportunity."

Helmick said he was concerned that a review by the USOC of his professional work for companies with Olympic connections could delay the selection of the next USOC president.

"My decision is based on the fact that we start the nomination process within the next two months, and based on the review being made of my sports law business, I don't want that review to hold up the nomination process," Helmick said.

Helmick said he also wants to spend more time with his family. "Nothing is more important to me, other than my family, than the Olympic movement. I've given more time to the Olympic movement than my family and I want to reverse that now," Helmick said.

Helmick said his decision would clear the way for the USOC's board of directors to proceed with the selection of a nominating committee, the first step toward naming his successor.

Weibring beats duo

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — D.A. Weibring came from four shots back to pass Greg Norman and seven others Sunday and win the Hardee's Golf Classic by a stroke over Paul Azinger and Peter Jacobsen.

Weibring won the tournament in 1979, when it was called the Quad Cities Open. It was his third PGA victory and all three have come in his native state. Weibring, born in Quincy, Ill., also won the 1987 Western Open near Chicago.

Weibring, 38, had seven birdies and a bogey for a 6-under-par 64, his best round of the tournament at Oakwood Country Club. That gave him a four-round total of 267, 13-under par.

Weibring has been on a hot streak. He was the 36-hole leader at the Canadian Open a weekend ago and finished tied for fifth. A week earlier, he tied for seventh at Milwaukee.

Azinger shot 68 on the final

day and Jacobsen had a 65 as both finished one stroke back. Norman, second-round leader, Leonard Thompson and Scott Hoch were at 269. Norman, the gallery favorite, finished with a 68 while Thompson shot a 67 and Hoch a 66.

Steve Lowery, Steve Jones and Brad Fabel were at 270. Lowery, who had to qualify Monday to make the field, closed with a 71, as did Jones. Fabel had a 66.

Third-round leader David Edwards slumped to a 72 and finished at 271. He ended his sub-par streak at seven rounds, having back to last weekend's Canadian Open, where he was second.

Tom Purtzer, the No. 2 money winner this year, had a 66 for a 271. Trevor Dodson, who has a 27 with a 68 Saturday, wound up with a 67 for a 272.

Ailing back sidelines Gretzky for Canada Cup championship round

TORONTO (AP) — The Great One will be The Missing One when Canada tries to win the Canada Cup hockey tournament Monday night.

Wayne Gretzky was told by doctors to rest his ailing back and won't be in uniform for the remainder of the championship round against the United States.

Gretzky, the tournament's leading scorer with four goals and eight assists, was hammered into the boards from behind by defenseman Gary Suter in the second period of the first game of the Cup final at Montreal Saturday, which Canada won 4-1.

Gretzky suffered back spasms and spent the remainder of the game watching on television. He suffered a similar injury two seasons ago and missed 17 games.

Gretzky was walking gingerly when he made a brief appearance at Maple Leaf Gardens Sunday. He stayed for about an hour and, uncharacteristically, didn't give interviews.

'I think the trap you can fall into is counting too much on one person and we want to make it clear that as well as Wayne has been playing, we can't rely on him forever.'

—Mark Messier

Coach Mike Keenan broke the news to the Canadians and the media and it didn't sit well with Gretzky.

At first, Keenan said it was unlikely that Gretzky would play in Monday night's second game of the best-of-3 final. Shortly after, Keenan admitted his best player would be out.

"He went for X-mas's Sunday morning and the recommendation was he should have some rest for a lengthy period of time," Keenan said. "We do not think it (the injury) is any more than that."

"He will stay with the club and be with us until the end."

Gretzky's teammates had a spirited practice, but their enthusiasm was dampened when they talked about his less.

"He has carried us and we all will have to dig a little deeper," defenseman Al MacInnis said. "We all know what he has done for us so far. The least we can do is go out and win this for him."

"We have a lot of character ... I don't think we are in a whole lot of trouble."

Canada responded to Gretzky's injury with a strong third period, with Mark Messier, Gretzky's longtime friend and former teammate, rising to the occasion.

Messier is ready for an encore performance. "I think the trap you can fall into is counting too much on one person and we want to make it clear that as well as Wayne has been playing, we can't rely on him forever," Messier said.

"They want very much to win this tournament and have put a lot of effort into it," Keenan said.

"They don't want to let each other down. For that reason, they will be extremely well prepared."

The U.S. team skated at Montreal on Sunday before flying to Toronto later in the day.

While it didn't know of Gretzky's fate at the time, Gretzky was on their minds.

"He is the best player in the world right now and you don't like to see anybody get hurt," center Joel Otto said.

"But they are not short on leaders."

Scranton captures 1st LPGA title

COQUITLAM, British Columbia (AP) — Nancy Scranton birdied the 17th and 18th holes to close out a sensational 4-under 31 on the back nine and claim her first LPGA Tour championship Sunday at the du Maurier Ltd. Classic.

Scranton won $100,000 from the prize pot of $700,000 in the final LPGA major tournament of the year.

"The birdie on 17 from 7 feet broke a tie with Debbie Massey, who had led or shared the lead since her opening-day '67. Massey three-putted the 18th to provide Scranton with a three-shot victory."

Scranton, 30, of Tampa, Fla., closed with a final-round 3-under-par 68 and a 72-hole total of 9-under 279. She shot her way into contention during the third round Saturday with a 64 to break the course record.

du Maurier Ltd. Classic

Scranton trailed Massey by three shots through 12 holes Sunday, but eagled the par-4 13th hole and birdied the 14th to pull into a tie.

It was Scranton's first win in seven years on the LPGA Tour. She claims her play improved steadily following a divorce earlier this year. She formerly played under the surname Brown.

Massey was second at 282 after shooting a 73 on the 6,421-yard Vancouver Golf Club layout.

Several players challenged for the lead during the final round, but most faded on the sun-drenched back nine.

Three players tied for third at 284. Laura Davies closed with a 71, while Patricia Wright slipped to 74 and Trish Johnson to 73.

'Real easy putt' wins Digital for Thompson

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Playing in a steady rain, Rocky Thompson sank a "real easy putt" on the final hole Sunday to snip a tie with Bruce Crampton and capture the Digital Seniors Classic golf tournament.

"I'm the man," Thompson, the mayor of Toco, Texas, roared to the gallery before sinking the 10-foot birdie putt for the victory.

Thompson's second victory in 624 PGA tournaments, dating back to 1964, was worth $60,000.

He said he used a light and sound machine to relax him before shooting a 2-under-par 70

Lions 17, Dolphins 13

At Detroit, the Lions (2-1) prevented Don Shula's 300th NFL coaching win and spoiled Dan Marino's 30th birthday.

It appeared it would be the Dolphins doing the celebrating after Shula Lee jammed to the Lions 3 with 4:42 remaining. But the Lions pushed Dolphins back to the 5 and, on fourth down, Marino's pass for Tony Martin was slapped away by Ray Crockett in the end zone.

Barry Sanders ran for 143 yards and Peete completed 13 of 24 passes for 173 yards for the Lions.

Steelers 20, Patriots 6

At Pittsburgh, Bobby Broster broke a tie with a 32-yard completion to Eric Green early in the fourth quarter. The Steelers (2-1) then made it 20-6 when punter Bryan Wagner kicked the ball into his own blocker and Pittsburgh's Eric Mills recovered in the end zone for a touchdown.

Eagles 24, Cowboys 0

At Irving, Texas, Clyde Simmons set a club record with 47 sacks and the Eagles set a team mark by sacking the Cowboys' Troy Aikman 11 times while intercepting three of his passes. Jim McMahon threw for two Philadelphia touchdowns.

Redskins 34, Cardinals 0

At Washington, Earnest Byner and Wilber Marshall took personal charge against the Cardinals, who fell with a third from the unbeaten ranks.

Byner ran 23 times for 109 yards and caught four passes for 51 yards. Marshall had two interceptions, one to stop a threat at the 8. He went 54 yards with the other for a touchdown.

Packers 15, Buccaneers 13

Falcons 13, Chargers 10

At San Diego, Chris Miller threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to rookie Mike Pritchard and newly acquired Norm Johnson kicked two field goals as the Raiders won a game matching winless teams.

Raiders 16, Colts 0

At Los Angeles, Jay Schroeder passed for 114 yards and a touchdown while the Raiders added to Indianapolis' offensive problems. The Colts (0-3) have scored only one TD and just 13 points in three games.

Broncos 16, Seahawks 10

At Denver, John Elway threw a 61-yard TD pass to Ricky Nattiel and David Trethewell kicked three field goals, but the Broncos had to hold off Seattle cornerback John Kasay kicked a 28-yard field goal and Jeff Kemp hit Brian Blades on a 47-yard TD pass in the last 77 minutes. Denver's defense settled by forcing four incomplete passes after Seattle got within 14 yards of a winning TD.

Bills 23, Jets 20

At East Rutherford, N.J., Jim Kelly threw a 15-yard scoring pass to Thurman Thomas with four minutes left as Buffalo remained unbeaten. The Jets (1-1) dominated for much of the game and Craig Heyward scoring two touchdowns on 1-yard bursts to lead the Saints to a 24-7 victory Sunday night.

Golf

Continued from A7 faultless putter betrayed him for three three-putts.

After eight holes, Hamblin was a surprising six over — and definitely ready for Plan B.

"After three-putted No. 8 (a three-par) for another bogey I said to Tracy (Frank who was caddying for him) the driver's coming out of the bag for the rest of the day," Hamblin said.

And once he got in an attack mode everything improved although on a couple of occasions the ball still found its way off the fairway.

The back (front) nine took a licking after that.

His closing 30 included one bogey and also four straight closing birdies. It nearly included a hole-in-one on the par three 17th hole when he drove landed about 18 inches short of the cup and just slipped by on the right side.

Hamblin said he was disappointed over "my shot making" on the front but felt a little better after the third back nine.

"That one nine-hole score was the total difference from last year," he said of Sunday morning's six-over 42.

Common sense should rule return of wolves to area

They're intelligent, beautiful, ghastly in their killing efficiency and something about them stirs deep feelings of terror and wonder.

The wolf in the wild is one of the most magnificent expressions of nature. The way they hunt, mauling deer, elk and other game herds of the old, weak and unappreciated enforces the rule of survival of the fittest.

But when wild wolves and domestic livestock and pets come in contact, problems can occur, and therein lies the crux of the debate about bringing the Rocky Mountain gray wolf back to Yellowstone and central Idaho. As in any issue involving public lands, advocacy groups have formed both for and against wolf reintroduction.

And like wilderness, salmon, grazing and other debates before, the groups are using statistics and studies to support their positions.

One state often cited by both pro- and anti-wolf interests is Minnesota, where a population of timber wolves has grown from several hundred at the turn of the century to 750 in the 1970s and over 1,500 today.

An examination of the effect wolves have actually had in Minnesota seems to lead the way to a compromise. First of all, the animals naturally seek game, such as deer, not livestock for prey.

They will be put in remote parts of Yellowstone and just as in Minnesota, it should be many years before they move onto agricultural lands. When that happens, control measures need to be implemented.

In Minnesota, a state animal damage control office traps and kills problem wolves. The wolf population, reacting to an increase in deer population, has been steadily increasing in Minnesota, and the state has requested a limited sport trapping season.

The whole idea is that if and when wolves have completely populated the area, control means must be taken to control them on nearby agricultural lands. There shouldn't be a blanket prohibition against killing wolves that prey on livestock.

Conversely, there's no sound reason not to permit wolves in the national park and wilderness areas of Idaho.

If common sense would only replace invasive, the host of wolves on a crisp Yellowstone night would not necessarily mean hardship for nearby sheep or cattle ranchers.

Fewer grazing animals would be best

Ann Reynolds Jones's Sept. 2 comments concerning livestock management on public land are true - most cattle and sheep allotments are not well managed.

Both cattle and sheep are exotic domestic imports and their management is not suited to the natural conditions of much of the public land. "Our rangeland needs grazers" is a false statement.

A high percent of the grasses on public land are not native species. The native grasses have been wiped out and exotic imports are what you see - crested wheat grass and Kentucky blue grass and many new weed species.

Real range management by the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management and state lands is not an emphasis item. Spend more money, change the season of grazing, join a new partnership - these activities are only Band-Aids. No resource problems are solved.

The real problem is too many cattle and sheep on the range in many places. Higher grazing fees will not solve the problem (although fewer numbers on the range will help), the small increase in the federal income is a small drop in the bucket.

I agree, some of the public rangeland has improved from the early 1900s. The presence of cattle and sheep on the range is a trade-off; their presence is only resource damage and income for a privileged few. This applies to all natural resources, some of the impacts are soil compaction, reduced water quality, less fish, birds and wildlife; only the insects increase.

Ken Johnston
Reader comment

Concentrated cattle and sheep do the soil and water resources no favors. Soil compaction prevents water infiltration and seed germination, and it limits the development of deep-rooted native grasses; the only increase is erosion from rain and snow melt.

Floods are presently considered a serious hazard because water rushes from the watershed, causing erosion. Why? Because the vegetation has been consumed and the soil compacted by livestock. Any flood control vegetation on the riparian areas has been consumed and returned as fertilizer (cow pies). There is no vegetation left to control the flow of water, build stream banks and aid in water storage. Stored water would allow the stream to flow all summer and maintain a quality fish habitat.

I once spoke with a resource specialist and his philosophy was, "If you don't know what you are looking at, you'll never see it."

Most of the public land users, including permittees, do not understand what they are looking at when it comes to vegetation and resource management, even on their own ranches. Most of them cannot tell you the difference in five different species of grass even though their livelihood depends on it.

The economic impact of fewer cattle and sheep on public land has been greatly overstated. Since the early 1900s, Idaho has lost several hundred thousand head of livestock from public land and Idaho has not been devastated because of the reduction. The state, as a whole, is better off since the animals have been removed.

The persons who suffer from the low grazing fee are private livestock producers. These ranchers pay taxes on all of their land holdings. The public grazers pay taxes on a very small percentage of the land they graze, yet they control thousands of acres of public land on which they pay no taxes.

Ask the public if they would like more wildlife, fish, clean water and less soil erosion on their land or to maintain the present numbers of livestock and public land ranchers. By the way, how come all the grasses along the freeways have not died from lack of grazing? It's the same species as on the public rangeland?

New about-face on salmon may save sockeye yet

September heat seeped into the crowded, third-floor room downtown. Under bright TV lights, Gov. Cecil Andrus scolded Sen. Larry Craig, and other political heavy-hitters threatened and cajoled.

Meanwhile, four sockeye salmon - the only ones to return to Red Fish Lake this year - were enjoying their own private tank of cool well water at the Stanley bathery.

It was almost enough to make you think the salmon had the better deal. But as everyone at the Salmon Forum knew, the fish are on the brink of extinction.

Thankfully, at day's end, Idaho's year-old plan for saving the state's salmon runs emerged intact. And so did the planners - maybe even stronger than before.

That was partly because errant sons, who had been critical of it, finally agreed to joining the fold. Most notably, Sen. Larry Craig. Another was Ron McMurray of the Port of Lewiston.

Idaho needs everybody behind a unified plan to avoid being bullied by downstream interests in Washington and Oregon.

Craig, who sponsored the forum, declared himself a supporter of the Idaho plan, which involves a dramatic lowering of reservoirs to flush fish to the sea next spring.

That was good news. If you've heard what Craig has said on the road, you might have thought otherwise. "I'm not sure we could well be being bullied into letting Idaho's salmon become Japanese fish farms,"

I would vote for sugar beets over sushi any day of the week. ... I am not going to forsake the economy of the state for a fish."

Last week in Twin Falls, Craig told water users that the drawdown plan was unrealistic.

But this week, Craig says he is backing the Idaho plan and was just trying to speak for those who felt left out of the salmon-saving process.

The Port of Lewiston's entry into the salmon-saving plan is also welcome. The port stands to lose - and lose big - when a drawdown occurs.

It will be unable to operate for six to eight weeks while the locks at the eight Snake and Columbia river dams are out of commission. Imagine the Boise airport or Hewlett-Packard shut down for two months. It's almost unfathomable.

Port officials have a complex situation to resolve, and will need the help of all those represented at Thursday's forum to bring it off successfully.

The plan developed more than a year ago by Gov. Cecil Andrus is the best thing going so far, although it may require some fine tuning here and there.

If broad-based support for the plan continues, such as that exhibited at Craig's forum, someday you may be able to count the number of salmon at Red Fish on more than one hand.

The Idaho Statesman, Boise

Iraq is taking advantage of U.S. concern with Russia

Inspection says that - in a direct violation of a resolution by the U.N.'s Security Council - it will not permit U.N. arms inspectors to use foreign helicopters in its airspace. It wants them to use only Iraq aircraft.

Foreign helicopters, an Iraqi man says, are being used to transport fuel to Iraq's security.

A U.N. inspection team is currently in Iraq looking for long range missiles, but in protest against its new constraint, it said Thursday, it is pulling out. Its work, however, is not over.

The Iraqis have been pressing the limits of the cease fire resolution ever since last spring. Now they have begun to violate its terms openly in a test of the U.N.'s will to stand up to an unpleasant and hazardous job.

The Iraqis are aware that the United States is pressurized by the great events in the world and by the quarrel with Israel over money. They are counting on the short American attention span to enable them to slide out from under the sanctions imposed five months ago after their defeat.

But the United States and the United Nations have much better reason now to insist on rigorous enforcement of the resolution than they had at the time they wrote it. Over the summer the U.N.

inspectors have demonstrated that Iraq was not only developing nuclear weapons but was working on a much larger scale than even the pessimists had suspected.

Under present circumstances, economic sanctions are not going to be effective.

The U.N. will shortly establish rules permitting Iraq to sell some of its oil to buy food, but it's entirely possible that Iraq - claiming infringement of its sovereignty - will refuse to sell oil under the U.N.'s conditions.

The burden of the growing food shortages rests most severely upon the Shiite population in the southern part of the country, and since those were the people who rebelled against Saddam Hussein last winter, he is content to let them suffer. His army is still quiet adequately fed.

The allies' military victory in the desert last winter advanced the process of containing Iraq but did not complete it. As the U.N. inspectors' discoveries this summer have shown, leaving the job undone would be intolerably dangerous.

If diplomatic and economic pressures are ineffective, then it becomes unavoidable to resume military pressure.

Let them see result of abortion

In response to a letter appearing Wednesday:

Two decades ago as a young "I'll live forever" teen-ager, I was subjected, in a drivers education course, to watch a movie called "Red Asphalt." This movie showed accidents in a very deplorable manner, giving credence to the movie's title.

The purpose of showing this footage is, I'm sure, obvious to you - to not only scare the heck out of me but also to make me aware of what can happen if I fail to use common sense behind the steering wheel.

Call it propaganda, indoctrination or just plain scare tactics, it was, in fact, reality. We see reality on the evening news every day, showing us just how it was. Whether it's seeing hundreds of Iraqi soldiers dead on the battlefield or a body under a blood-soaked cover being loaded on an ambulance in Twin Falls, it's reality.

My wife and I saw a baby maybe a few weeks old, at the Twin Falls County Fair this past week. If it wasn't for the fact that an abortion clinic would not accept the mother's credit card, that baby would not have been seen. That's the reality. It hangs in the balance between a credit card and cash. I should think we all need to see reality.

Reality is what we saw on that pamphlet at the fair. I, as a parent in today's world, realize that I should subject my child to the realities of today.

When my child asks me, "Dad, why do we have soldiers that have to kill other soldiers? Aren't they dads like you, too?" or "Dad, why do they kill babies before they're born? Aren't they people, too?" what do I say - that all of this is make-believe and that's not reality?

Of course not. I believe I have the responsibility to tell my child that this is what's going on in today's world and that these things are not right.

Hopefully, by the time my children are old enough to form an opinion about the importance and meaning of life, they'll see it as it is - real!

You see, babies before they're born bleed just like soldiers on a battlefield. I truly believe that an organization advocating choice should display those same pamphlets as the Pro-Life advocates display. If you are truly advocating choice, please let us see the results of each choice before they make their decision; life as God intended or a dismembered baby in a garbage can!

Thanks to council for new lights

It's really great. ... We now have two new stoplights - at Eastland and Elizabeth and at Falls and Locust streets.

Thanks go out to the City Council for working with the public who knew the importance of both lights. We appreciate your foresightfulness.

On another subject, a little girl was walking down the sidewalk crying. When we asked her what was wrong, she said her family could not go to the fair because the fair would cost too much. If you stop to figure how much it would cost a family of six to just get into the fair (not including the rodeo), you would come up with close to $100 for the entry tickets, food and rides.

Going to the fair should be an enjoyment, not a financial burden. You know school children do require school supplies and clothes at the same time of the year. Would it be impractical to have some sort of family plan so those parents with larger families could go and enjoy the fair to its fullest?

In response to Kacey O'Connor's letter Sept. 12:

The booth in question is to prevent the killing of our next generation; those little guys don't have a voice yet. I'm glad somebody is willing to be their voice for them. Instead of having fun at the fair, they were willing to give their time sitting in that booth, and I'm sure they aren't fun.

If the booths would have been for starving children, orphans, children suffering from broken-homes, abuse, AIDS, drugs, etc., those booths would have been for those "certain" programs, they would not have been for the "killings of our children" through abortion (and we wouldn't expect them to). If you would have taken the time to see the pages and pages of signatures, you would see there were a great number of people who gave the booth was there.

The governing laws of our land says the price of "murder" is either death or imprisonment. It is a sad state when it takes "government power" to tell us not to murder. Murder is murder.

Slow down to avoid road deaths

As I ponder the death of a good friend, my world gets a little dimmer. I've seen, over 37 years in Kimberly, many mutilations and deaths on Sugar Factory Road. Not just people but just about every pet I've ever loved.

This is, and I hope always will be, a strong agricultural community. What that means is, as many as people may be as overshaded by a few who are greedy, that is remotely involved in my business as a farmer.

If you, as a driver on any of these rural county roads, don't like to be inconvenienced, stay the hell off of them. I've not personally hit an animal on the road and I don't think it's luck. I think it's just taking the responsibility of driving seriously.

Bryon Egbert's death on Sugar Factory Road was so senseless, I'm outraged. Mad because the reality of life hits home every so often and I've done so little to help.

I can think of a dozen opportunities youth can pursue, but without parental guidance, those opportunities are only available to a few.

A few parents who care can quickly be overwhelmed by a few who care about nothing. I can't help believing those kids who killed Bryon have parents who care about nothing.

What is really unfortunate is the parents who already care will read this and the ones that don't care find reading difficult or a waste of time.

With some husbands, wives can't always be lovers too

DEAR ABBY: I've been waiting for years to see a letter like the one from "B in Dallas." (She said she faked orgasms.) I'm glad to know I'm not the only woman who does this.

Now I'll feel less like a freak. Please print all the letters you get on the subject.

— SACRAMENTO FAKER

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

DEAR FAKER: I could not believe the volume of mail. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Of course I fake it. All women do.

I adore my husband, but he couldn't find my erogenous zone with a road map, so I go through the motions to keep from hurting his masculine ego.

— DESERVES AN ACADEMY AWARD

DEAR ABBY: Most men have the rabbit habit: hop on, hop off. Athletes know that in order to perform well they must warm up first, perform, then cool down.

The act of making love is no different.

If men followed these instructions, women wouldn't have to fake it.

— MIDWEST COACH

DEAR ABBY: My darling is 65 and he's still making it. I'm 63 and still faking it.

When I read about these men who are still active at 85, I shudder. I don't think I could survive another 20 years of this.

Dear God, don't they ever wear out?

— LONG ISLAND FAKER

DEAR ABBY: Married for 22 years. Been faking it for 20.

— CHATTANOOGA "ACTRESS"

DEAR ABBY: I fake it just to get it over with. Sex never was as important to me as it is to my husband — but it's so good for his ego. I'd never let on that all my wild carrying on was an act.

We've been married for 44 years. He's faithful and so am I, and ours is a loving, solid marriage.

— CANADIAN FAKER

DEAR ABBY: I am 33 and my husband is 28. He's a wonderful man but a lousy lover. I don't dare get him too excited or it's all over before it's begun. We've been married for six years and we really love each other, so I can live with it.

— FAKING IT IN ST. PAUL

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor and I were discussing our inadequate sex lives over coffee one day. She said she often "fakes" orgasms with her husband, then I confessed that I also do with mine. We decided to message each other, and found it more satisfying than our husbands' efforts. Our husbands don't know the difference, and we are

— TWO WIVES HAPPY AT LAST

DEAR ABBY: Your reader thinks most women "fake it." Well, here's one who doesn't have to. Even though my husband is 79 and I'm 76, sex is still fun.

We love to have our children visit us for a day or two, but when they leave, I put the red satin sheets on the waterbed, turn on some soft music and don my sexiest nightie. Then, let the fun begin.

Believe me; faking isn't necessary.

— HAPPY HONEY IN HONOLULU

(More "fakers" tomorrow.)

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding."

To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Blonde jokes acceptable?

By Bob Dyer
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

How do you put a twinkle in a blonde's eye? Shine a flashlight in her ear.

How can you tell when a blonde has been using the office computer? There's white-out on the screen.

What do you call a redhead walking between two blondes? An interpreter.

In proper society, you cannot tell ethnic jokes or racial jokes or fat jokes or female jokes or disability jokes or homosexual jokes. But in the past couple of months, blonde jokes seem to have become perfectly acceptable.

You hear them at the office water cooler, over the radio, at parties. And some of the most avid tellers of blonde jokes are blondes.

Take 25-year-old Michele Cody of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, who thinks the jokes are hilarious. "I've got a stack of them in my car," she says with a laugh. "My friends call whenever they hear a new one." (Her fave: What do you call 12 blondes standing side by side? A wind tunnel.)

Another blonde, Sue Woodling, 22, of Tallmadge, Ohio, says she just turned from a large family reunion that included five blondes, and "they snort around and told blonde jokes the whole time."

Woodling identifies herself as a fifth-year senior at Ohio University. Then she laughs and adds: "But maybe you don't want to put 'fifth-year'."

Yep, in case you haven't picked up on it, the continuing theme here is that blondes are not Einsteins.

Not brain surgeons. Not masters of the SAT. And that theme troubles some people, including Michael Freedman, a psychologist who has offices in Cleveland and Akron, Ohio. He is not convinced that blonde jokes are truly socially acceptable.

"My general feeling is that any joke that degrades a person is not helpful to that class of people," he says. "This reinforces the stereotype that blondes have beauty but no brains."

It also should be noted that blonde jokes are, in a sense, female jokes. Male blondes are ignored, (OK, there is Dan Quayle, but that's different). He's a phenomenon unto himself.

Yet even Freedman, after a moment's reflection, softens considerably on the subject.

"It's not as big a deal as racial prejudice, because people aren't losing their jobs because of being blonde. They're not losing money or prestige or power. So maybe it's easier to get away with a blonde joke...."

"It's sort of a non-issue. The thing about blonde jokes is, I don't think anybody's really that upset about being blonde."

Children bring cheer to elderly

The nursing home for older people is cheery. A coffee hour in the morning, social hour in the late afternoon, exercises, games, movies. But where are the children?

The little ones to substitute for grandchildren living far-away or for children the residents never had?

Lucille S. deView
Aging

News discussions, book reviews, bingo. But where are the babies to cuddle? Toddlers to reach out to as they teeter across a room? Older youngsters to chat with, encourage, hug?

Birthday parties with balloons. Even a luau. But where is the childish laughter, sweet as wind chimes, to break the too-still hours?

In many communities across the country, Adopt-A-Grandparent programs fill this gap. Two nursing homes in Fullerton, Calif., for example, are visited weekly by a dozen or more mothers and fathers who bring their children to play games, sing songs and brighten the day for residents.

"I'm always sorry to see the children go," says Sharon Granafa, 51, a resident at Gordon Lane Convalescent Hospital. "I like kids. I was one of 12, and I wanted at least five, but I never had any."

The children aren't shy, says Bertha Diaz, Gordon Lane activities director. "Little ones don't shun people who are old or disabled. They rush right up to them, as if they were visiting grandparents. One little girl calls her special friend Nana, as she would her own grandmother. It's lovely." The visits are offered as adult education courses in parenting by the North Orange County (Calif.) Community College District. Nursing homes serve as classrooms, with a teacher on hand to show parents and children how to play and interact with the older generation.

"Two mothers, with five children between them, have visited every week for over a year," says Carol Reed, an instructor for programs at Gordon Lane and at Harbor Health Care. "One of the mothers brought her new baby along for the residents to hold. What joy!"

The Beverly Foundation in Pasadena, Calif., was among the pioneers in developing model Adopt-A-Grandparent programs nationwide. The non-profit agency offers a video to help establish nursing homes or individuals establish programs in their home communities. To order, send $23 to the foundation at 70 S. Lake Ave., Suite 750, Pasadena, Calif. 91101.

"For children, grandparent adoptions answer the need to visit older people and appreciate their place in history," says foundation president Carroll Wendland.

And for older people, being adopted answers the poignant question: "Where are the children?"

They're near. And coming to visit in a few days.

NyQuil, Sudafed and Tylenol Extra-Strength are among the over-the-counter medicines that, if used improperly, can be hazardous to your health.

Popping pills? Pharmacists warn of misuse

By Amy Davis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Warning: Misuse of this medication may be hazardous to your health.

Cautionary labels like this are found on the multi-colored packages of pain relievers, cough medicines, aspirin bottles and vitamins that line the shelves of drugstores.

Many of us use such medicines frequently. You're congested? Take a pill. Insomnia? Pop a tablet. Arthritis? You've got your pick of over-the-counter medications, otherwise known as OTCs. In fact, in our hustle-bustle worlds the desire for quick relief is increasing, health authorities say. We don't want pain and we can't miss work; so we reach for the fastest, most effective solution.

But as local pharmacists point out many consumers aren't aware of some of the real consequences of using the wrong drug or too much of the right one.

"Medication is complicated," Douglas Bell, owner of Medicine Shoppe, said. "To think you understand something because you read a book is foolish. Ninety-nine percent of the time you're going to be fine. It's that one percent that we try to guard against. People do die from reactions to and combinations of medicines. It's rare, but it can happen."

That's shocking news for a society that thinks that if two pills are good then three are better—a myth that pharmacists say does not hold true.

"The public gets the idea that if it's nonprescription, then it is safe. That is not always true," Dave Nelson, pharmacist at Sav-Mor Drugs, said. "The medication must be taken in correct doses. Practically any medicine you take too much of, there are dangers associated with it."

Like Tylenol Extra-Strength, for instance. Kurt Hefner, owner of Kurt's Pharmacy, said the analgesic or pain

Safety tips to take with you to the drugstore

By Amy Davis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Before buying over-the-counter medications, local pharmacists suggest knowing why you are taking the medication and what results you expect.

- Here are a few other tips they think you should know:
- Read the labels. Every ingredient and possible side effect is printed on the label. It's your responsibility to be informed.
- Don't take a higher dose than is recommended. Overdoses lead to adverse side effects such as liver problems, headaches and dizziness.
- Children should use children's products. Different body sizes require different medications. Your child can get sick using adult products.
- Ask your doctor/pharmacist about medication. These professionals are trained to give advice and determine which drugs are more suitable for you. Utilize their expertise.

Purchase OTCs at the same place you buy your prescriptions. That way, the pharmacist already knows what medication you are using, and he won't recommend something that could react adversely to it.

Don't take OTCs to mask a more serious problem. Most of the labels recommend that you do not take the medicine for more than a week or two weeks. That's because for the pain persists for that long, that's something more serious than a stomach ache or cold is taking place.

Be conscious of warning signs. Ringing in ears when taking aspirin may be an indication that you should not take any more. Rash, headache, blurred vision and loss of also common warning signs that the medication used is not suited for you.

reliever is safe except if it's used chronically over an extended period of time.

If consistently overused, Tylenol Extra-Strength may cause a kidney ailment called analgesic abuse nephritis, Hefner said. Chronic pain sufferers especially may fall victim to such problems as they depend upon products like Tylenol for pain relief.

Nelson agreed that the product is safe in moderation, but if overused it can cause both kidney and liver damage.

Aspirin taken in excess can also create problems, Twin Falls pharmacist said. "Take enough aspirin, and I'll guarantee you'll have an ulcer," Hefner warned.

That's because aspirin irritates the lining of the stomach, Bob Crowley, owner of Crowley Pharmacy, said. When aspirin breaks down, it becomes free salicylic acid and may cause serious damage to the stomach.

"Adding to the normal supply of stomach acid makes the system abnormal," Crowley said.

Sudafed is another product that when taken in excess may cause adverse side effects. Sudafed is an antihistamine containing pseudoephedrine (possessing stimulant properties). This OTC taken in excess may cause a person to become nervous or hyperactive.

Michel John Odiaga, recently convicted of two drive-by shootings in Keetchikan, allegedly took more than 35 Sudafed tablets the night of the murders. "For a psychotic person, taking Sudafed is like throwing gasoline on a fire," Psychiatrist David Sheffer testified at Odiaga's August trial.

Local pharmacists attribute Odiaga's actions to his mental illness rather than to the drug.

"One out of 20 patients can get nervous or hyper when they take Sudafed," Hefner said.

"Definitely a person like you or I who takes 35 Sudafed tablets is not going to get out and kill someone," Bell said.

The makers of Sudafed say that the side effects listed on the label also occur. They are not just put on the package for decoration.

"The directions are there for the consumer," said Sharon Haggerty of the public affairs department of Burroughs Wellcome, Co. "Our product is safe when taken properly."

Even taking too many vitamins can cause adverse side effects, Hefner said. An excess of Vitamin B₆ taken to reduce stress, can cause diarrhea or may be toxic. He recommends taking a multi-vitamin daily as a better, safer way to get the amount of vitamins you body needs.

Overdoses of Vitamin A and D are also toxic, Crowley said.

Taking more than needed is also an ill way to spend your cash. "A lot of times if you're taking too much of a vitamin, your body will throw it out," Crowley said. "It's a waste of money."

OTCs in combination with a doctor's medication may cause the prescribed

Teacher wins best legs contest

We never knew just how much talent was stashed away in Warren, Mich., until we got the big news when we received news from the body shop — a national contest to determine who has the best legs in America — in all of America. We figure Nair should know. After all, these are the people who know all about wearing "short shorts" that show lots of leg.

The winner turned out to be Lisa Wojciechowski. The Warren, Mich., high school teacher and coach is 26 and will get a chance to appear in a Nair commercial. She plans to use her $10,000 winnings to help pay for her upcoming wedding. We usually would indulge in heavy sarcasm when it comes to these variations on beauty contests, but in this case we'll hold back.

Keep your conscience clean

We have always been fans of companies that make an honest effort to be kind to the environment. So when we received news from the body shop — we slowed our speed reading so we could actually retain some of the information.

The body shop is introducing a line of products for mothers and babies, called mamatoes — which is derived from the swahili words for mother and baby. The tag line, "We Two Form A Multitude," comes from copywriter and dead roman poet Ovid, who originally wrote those lovely words.

The body shop also engaged the help of anthropologist Carol Dunham, who spent a year collecting mother and baby facts from cultures including Samoan, Malaysian and Japanese.

The results are non-animal tested products with naturally based ingredients. Items include relaxing bath powder, massage gels, nipple cream (to get nipples ready for breast feeding) and baby shampoos, lotions and powders. There are even toe bags and birth announcements.

All this for folks who want to raise environmentally correct children. The full line is expected in stores Monday. The body shop is located in many malls.

Improving your heart's health

CHICAGO — Much has happened in heart nutrition in the last 10 years, and the new, 5th edition of the American Heart Association Cookbook* (Random House, $25) reflects the change with updated recipes and 50 new ones. For example, there now are recipes incorporating arborio rice and brown rice. And the bean category has been expanded.

Though tempting and often creative, recipes in the 1984 edition are called for large amounts of fat and nutrition information was limited to the number of calories.

Health notes

EYEBING BREAST CANCER: If you're taking the drug Tamoxifen, also known as Nolvadex, for breast cancer, keep an eye out for vision problems. The medication can cause serious side effects affecting the cornea, retina and optic nerve, according to Wills Eye Hospital ophthalmologist Edward W. Greer. He recommends periodic examinations by an eye doctor.

MARRIAGE-BUSTERS: If your marriage breaks up, Philadelphia divorce lawyer Neil H. Stein says the cause likely will be one of these: disagreements about child rearing, traumatic health or financial problems, resentment over who is doing more, sexual incompatibility or extra-marital affairs, lack of money and conflicts over expenses, religious differences, addiction and/or recovery, disputes about relatives, employment-related conflicts, or failure to grow together.

AUTISM FINDING: A British researcher may have found a piece of the puzzle of autism. Pharmaceutical chemist Paul Sluettek has detected abnormally elevated protein-derivatives, called peptides, in autistic children's urine which, he believes, are a reflection of chemical malfunctions in the body. He believes defects in chemicals that send messages between brain cells cause the lack of communication and absence of social awareness in autistic children.

FAT OF THE LAND: OK, guys, the secret's out. It's not just women who are getting liposuction. The Lipoplasty Society of North America says men, too, are undergoing the fat-vacuuming procedure — primarily to reduce love handles and flatten fatty breasts and flabby stomachs. Self magazine reports.

THE BOTTOM LINE: Diaper-champ Nair notes: In its first-ever public settlement of a biodegradability claim, the Federal Trade Commission ordered American Enviro-Products, which makes Bunnies disposable diapers, to stop saying that the diapers would decompose in landfills. FTC actions against other companies that make environmental claims are expected this year.

CHIPPING AWAY: Here's something to keep in mind when you are packing your children's school lunches or your own work lunches. If Americans, who eat an average of six pounds of potato chips annually, stopped eating chips and ate the same amount of pretzels, they'd save 4,800 calories and 960 grams of fat, Self magazine reports.

CANCER ADVANCE: Good news about cancer: A team of French doctors reports successfully treating three terminal non-Hodgkin's lymphoma patients with a new bioengineered drug rather than risky and painful bone-marrow transplants. GM-CSF, made by Immunex Corp., now is used primarily to help chemotherapy patients rebuild blood cells — and to improve the viability of bone-marrow transplants. But the report in the British journal Lancet indicates that the drug may have broader cancer-treating potential.

Dear Dave, Are you a COMPLETE idiot or just a bonehead?

Today's topic is the U.S. National Tick Collection.

But first, I must make yet ANOTHER correction on the meaning of the French expression "savoir faire." As you may recall, I wrote a column stating that "savoir faire" means "ear size." A reader wrote back stating that I was a bonehead. So I wrote a column apologizing for my mistake and stating that the correct definition of "savoir faire" is, in fact, "nose hair."

I thought this had settled the matter, but recently I got a letter from ANOTHER irate reader, Lilliane Adams of North Haven, Conn. Her letter begins: "Are you a complete idiot?"

Having thus softened the blow, she points out that (a) I am still wrong about "savoir faire," and (b) she knows this because she, personally, is French.

Well of course now I feel like a MAJOR horse's patootie, but the French say "une BIGGIE butte du cheval." So this time, in preparing my correction, I had my staff of highly trained research assistants go over it thoroughly, both visually and by barking at it. Thus I am 100 percent confident when I state that "savoir faire" does NOT mean "ear size" OR "nose hair." It means "armpit fumes," as in: "Due to unusually high levels of 'savoir faire,' the Surgeon General is advising against travel to France."

Dave Barry Humor

I'm glad we got that straightened out. I sincerely hope that my leanness has not offended anyone else of the small-eating persuasion. Speaking of repulsive creatures, today's topic, as I said, is the National Tick Collection. If you think I'm making this up, check the June 1991 issue of National Geographic. There you'll find a fascinating new item brought to my attention by alert readers Scott and Irene Dean. It begins:

"The U.S. government has solved the problem of who should pay for upkeep on a million dead ticks by sending them to Georgia. The National Institutes of Health has shipped the National Tick Collection to Georgia Southern University in Statesboro with a five-year, million-dollar grant to maintain it."

"I'll pause here while you taxpayers wipe up the coffee you just spat all over yourselves when you went: 'WHAT? We're paying a MILLION DOLLARS to maintain DEAD TICKS?'"

Calm down. I checked into this, and it turns out that the National Tick Collection is OK. For one thing, it's the largest in the ENTIRE WORLD. Japan may have overtaken us in technology, but we're still No. 1 in deceased bloodsucking arthropods. The National Tick Collection has important scientific purposes. I spoke to the curator, Dr. James Keirans, National Geographic has a picture of Dr. Keirans holding a jar containing the largest known breed of tick. It looks like a small turtle. It is this tick we're to get hold of one of those yuppy lap-style dogs about the size of a Hostess Twinkie, you'd hear a quick "slurp," and all that would remain of the dog would be lint." Keirans said the National Tick Collection is basically a whole lot of dead ticks inside jars: the whole thing "fits into an area about the size of a good-sized living room."

Keirans said scientists need to study ticks because they (ticks) spread all kinds of diseases. He said scientists actually go out LOOKING for ticks. It's called "flugging," wherein the scientist attaches a piece of white flannel to a broom handle, then drags it over the grass, where the ticks grab on to it.

"I've been in situations where I've picked up the flag, and it was black with ticks," Keirans said. "Then I looked down, and my pants were covered with ticks, crawling up my legs."

(This scene could be the basis of a major horror film called "Tick," featuring Madonna as the Evil Tick Queen, wearing an elaborate anatomically correct female-tick costume featuring 173,000 mascara-smear eyes and 11 million tiny, breast cones.)

If a tick gets on you, the way to remove it is NOT to burn it or put chemicals on it. Keirans recommends you grasp the tick near its head, ideally using tweezers, slowly pull it out, and mail it to the Publisher, Clearing House, Not I made up that last part. But the rest is true — an example of the useful information we get from being the World Leader in tick research.

So I figure the National Tick Collection is a good investment of my tax dollars, especially when you compare it with other parasitic federal entities:

AMOUNT OF MONEY SPENT SENDING OUT NEWSLETTERS:

Tick Congress: Millions of dollars.
Dead Ticks: None.
USE OF GOVERNMENT LIMOUSINES TO ATTEND RARE-STAMP AUCTIONS: President's Chief of Staff; Yes.
Dead Ticks: No.
Maybe it would be cost-effective to replace high federal officials with dead ticks. Do you think that would work? Nah. Dead ticks are lacking a quality that comes naturally to your top federal leadership. Call it "savoir faire."

Dave Barry writes for the Miami Herald.

Pulitzer gives divorce advice

By Jeffrey Kleinman Knight-Ridder Newspapers

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Roxanne Pulitzer wants to help you get through your divorce.

For $19.95, she'll tell you all the right things to do. Roxanne Pulitzer, the Palm Beach woman who lost her kids, her house and her wealth in one of the most sensational divorce spats in memory? An expert?

"I can inform people of the mistakes I made so they won't make them," she says.

Pulitzer is pitching a divorce kit — videotapes, manuals and workbook — that offers advice for people in busted marriages. In the fall, she'll appear in a new series of videos, offering tips like how to pick a divorce lawyer, how to handle custody and how to avoid high legal costs.

Each 15-minute tape will run $19.95. "I think it should be given as a wedding gift," Pulitzer said between sips of coffee from her Palm Beach apartment, a block from the ocean.

"Most people select their lawyers by word of mouth," said Mark Luitner, who represented Peter Pulitzer in the big divorce.

In the videos, Pulitzer appears in blue jeans and a scarlet business jacket. From an easy chair, she gives her slick criticism to the interviewer. South Carolina divorce lawyer Jan Warner, who produces and sells the self-help kits.

Warner approached Pulitzer earlier this year about endorsing his $99 package and appearing on some new tapes. He wouldn't say what she's getting paid.

"Five people came to us wanting to do this, all of them celebrities," said Warner, president of a company called Life Management. "Roxanne is really the only one who made every mistake in the book. She learned from experience."

Pulitzer — who has shunned endorsements until now — took a look at the material, agreed to have her face and praise featured all over the brochure, and flew to South Carolina to tape her advice. This fall, she plans to tape another segment on preparing children for divorce.

So just what can Roxanne Pulitzer tell us about making the end an easier event?

Preparation and organization; she said, are the keys to a successful divorce — two virtues she readily concedes were missing during her own.

"It was a basket case," she said. Divorce lawyers aren't sold on Pulitzer's new product.

"I don't think Roxanne Pulitzer is particularly insightful about domestic relations," said Ronald Sales, who represented Palm Beach socialite Sukki Sullivan in her divorce last year. "Her experience was her own unhappy experience."

It was 1982 when Roxanne Pulitzer lost custody of twin boys Mack and Zack, now 14 and living with their father on a ranch near Okeechobee, Fla. The judge on the case said she "continuously engaged in adultery and other gross marital misconduct."

Publishing her Peter Pulitzer argued at the trial that his younger wife led him through a wild life of drugs, discos and menage-a-trois sex. On losing her kids, Pulitzer was crushed.

Roxanne Pulitzer Expertise for $19.95

Now 40, she writes novels and dates a French race car driver going through a nasty divorce of his own. She lives in a two-bedroom apartment in a Spanish-style building across from the Colony Hotel in Palm Beach. Her boyfriend lives down the hall.

Pulitzer is three-fourths through a new mystery novel, "Facades." She writes in longhand at her dinette set. Her first novel, "Twins," was just released in paperback.

Until now, she has shied away from putting her name to products refusing offers from jeans and perfume companies.

But after flipping through the divorce kit, she felt she could help people going through what she did nearly 10 years ago.

Joe Farish, the West Palm Beach lawyer who represented her back then, has unkind words for Pulitzer and her videotapes.

"It's good for a laugh," he said of the divorce kit. "She's totally unqualified. She's pitiful."

Pulitzer doesn't like Farish, either. One of her suggestions in the videotape: Be sure to shop carefully for a lawyer.

Astrological Forecasts

IF SEPTEMBER 16 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may not be religious in orthodox sense, but you are spiritual. In seeking perfection, you often are your own most severe critic. You exude aura of glamour, intrigue, mystery. Many claim you are akin to human lie detector, that you are psychic. Pisces, Virgo persons play meaningful roles in your life. Major project will be completed before September is finished. You'll make new start in October and could be involved in formal romance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): News concerning travel, special exhibit continued. Focus on university, philosophy, ability to obtain better display for product, talent. Creative juices silt. Love relationship will strengthen.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cooperation received from family member previously disinherited. Emphasis on funding, possible inheritance, accounting, inventory. Spotlight also on marital status, credibility. Capricorn involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Excellent news received concerning legal conflict. You'll have more room you'll gain added recognition and could be more affluent as result. Focus also on publicity, social activity, marital status.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You're on more solid ground, employment picture will be more suitable, profitable. You get job done in your own unique way.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): In-battle-odds on children, variety, necessity for change of scene. Member of opposite sex could make "declaration of affection." (Gemini figures prominently.)

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Attention revolves around domestic adjustment, home, property, security, professional appraisal. You become more aware of "time values." Musical entertainment featured tonight, Libra involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Scenario of spiritual values "faint" will be uncovered, credibility restored as result. You'll discover exactly what is expected. Virgo involved.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Focus on commercial enterprise, technique, intense, controversial relationship, financial picture much brighter than in previous days. Check property, automobile payments. Vigilance!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on communication, universal appeal, letting more persons become aware of your product, special capabilities. Not more "pulling punches" imprint style, be open to romance, challenge.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New adventure on horizon! Gather forces, divvy up, pioneering spirit, action incentive! Fear overcome in dramatic manner. Leo, Aquarius person play roles.

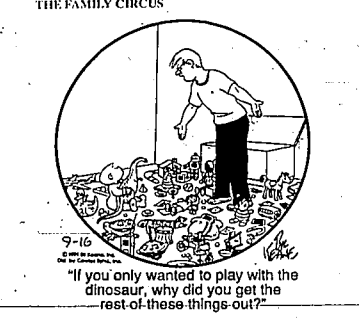

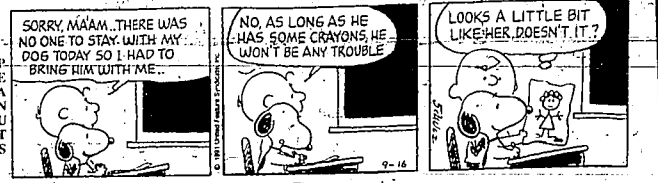

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Focus on publicity, cooperative efforts, credibility, reunion with loved one. You'll win friends, you'll have-look in matters of romance, speculation. Cancer, native aids in reaching goal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Display versatility, offer suggestions, protect original concepts. Social activities accelerate, promotion is in offing. Gift received that adds to wardrobe. Gemini, Sagittarius are in picture.

Who's the "closest and most enduring" of marital relationships? Mother and child? Husband a wife? Some psychologists say a huge body of data suggests it may be identical twins.

Repeated psychological tests of rodeo circuit riders indicate they are "extremely happy with their lives."

"When you go to the salad bar, get in the line with the most women in it. Lot of them are dieting, and they know what they want."

Their line moves faster." So advises an observant downtowner.

One thing you can say about that ancient Greek Herophilus of Chalcedon: He was the first to report that a human brain was in the head, the home to all the nerves.

Pills

 medication to be ineffective. A few OTCs taken with birth control pills may decrease the capabilities of the birth control pill, leading to unwanted pregnancies, Bell said.
 Mixing antacids or iron tablets with tetracycline (medication prescribed to clear up acne) can prevent the tetracycline from working, Bell said. Acne will come back despite your efforts to control the condition.
 Consumers with high blood pressure should be extra careful when choosing which OTC to purchase. Antihistamines and decongestants can raise your blood pressure.
 If your blood pressure is already at a critical level then raising it can be dangerous. In fact, it may cause a stroke, Heffner said.
 Buyers should also be aware of the contents in their medication. NyQuil, an adult nighttime cough medicine, contains alcohol. The product is 40 proof.
 The warning label instructs users to take only 2 tablespoons before bedtime.
 It also says not to operate automobiles or machinery after taking NyQuil.

Pharmacists say the warning should be heeded. "Driving ability can be more impaired by cough and cold medications than when you're over the legal alcohol limit," Bell said.
'A consumer needs to be informed. The responsibility is on the shoulders of each individual.'
 — Mary Leach, Port of Hope administrator
 Consumers also are purchased by teenagers wanting to get high. Swilling a bottle on Friday night can be dangerous, Mary Leach, Port of Hope administrator, said.
 Not necessarily because of the alcohol but because of overdoses of the other ingredients in the product, such as aspirin.
 Leach said alcohol in prescribed doses is dangerous for recovering alcoholics. "People in recovery need to be careful. The intent to become re-addicted may not be there, but the body may react to the alcohol in that way," Leach said.
 The best way to protect yourself, Leach said, is to read the warning labels.
 "A consumer needs to be informed. The responsibility is on the shoulders of each individual."

LEGAL NOTICE
 DEPARTMENT OF THE TWIN FALLS
 Bureau of Land Management
 (ID-020) 201-4212-113-27741
 Notice of Realty Action: Recreation and Public Purposes (RAPP) Act
 Classification: Idaho
 The following lands have been examined and found suitable for lease for recreation and public purposes under the provisions of the Recreation and Public Purposes Act, as amended (43 U.S.C. 809 et seq.).
 County: Park and Recreation Commission project
 Location: The Two Mile development of a water front park.
 Location: B. S. R. 17 E., Section 33, Lot 3
 Containing 20.8 acres more or less.
 The lands are not needed for federal purposes. Lease of the lands for recreational or public purposes is authorized by the BLM land use planning and zoning plan. Detailed information concerning this action is available in the office of the Bureau of Land Management, Bureau District Office, South Cayleigh Highway, Burley, Idaho.
 Lease of the lands will be subject to the following terms, conditions, and regulations:
 1. Provisions of the Recreation Act and to all applicable regulations of the Secretary of the Interior.
 2. All valid existing rights in effect at the time of lease issuance.
 3. All minerals shall be reserved to the United States, together with the right to prospect for, mine and remove the minerals.
 4. Any other reservations that the public interest or other determinations appropriate to ensure proper management of the Federal lands and interests therein.
 Upon publication of this notice in the Federal Register, the lands will be segregated from all forms of appropriation under the public land laws, including the general mining laws, except for lease under the Recreation and Public Purposes Act and leasing under the mineral laws.
 For a period of 45 days from the date of publication of this notice, interested persons may submit comments regarding the proposed lease or classification of the lands to the District Manager, Burley District, Rt. 3, Box 100, Burley, ID 83318. Any adverse comments will be reviewed by the State Director. In the absence of any adverse comments, the classification will be effective 60 days from the date of publication of this notice.
 DATED: August 16, 1991
 Gerald L. Quinn
 District Manager

PLENTY OF SPORTS INJURIES

The odds that any one person will be injured while engaged in a sports or other recreational activity has never been greater. While experts applaud the health benefits of physical activity, they are also aware that the frequency of musculoskeletal injuries is reaching epidemic proportions. To get the picture, take a look at who is doing what:

- Uncounted millions of persons bow, camp, hunt.
- Church and community softball, basketball, and volleyball teams engage millions of persons.
- Youngsters in every city, town, and hamlet play Little League ball.
- Thousands of racquetball and physical fitness centers have sprung up across the country catering to millions.
- Don't forget joggers, bicyclists, tennis players, jazzercisers, aerobic and break dancers.
- You name it! Even the handicapped-often confined to sedentary lives in a wheelchair-are enjoying the here and now of individual and team sports.

It seems that just about everyone is involved in the excitement of physical fitness and activity for the fun of it-even if it's only walking. Yet, the piper demands to be paid. All this activity leads to more than 50 million sports injuries per year in the United States-many of which are treated by chiropractors.

TREATMENT OF CHOICE: CHIROPRACTIC

Chiropractic's splendid reputation in the care and treatment of sports injuries has mushroomed during the past decade or so. Partially due to worldwide television coverage of sports events and television and radio dialogues with injured sports heroes, it is becoming common knowledge that chiropractic is very often the treatment of choice for musculoskeletal injuries of all kinds-especially those not requiring surgery. Most people are aware, too, that many professional and college teams have a chiropractor on staff or on call to look after an entire spectrum of sports-related problems, from simple sprains and strains to more serious problems resulting from intensive training and hard, competitive play.

WORD-OF-MOUTH PRAISE BEST

Although chiropractors are very appreciative of all the media attention they get about their successes in treating professional sports injuries, they still depend mostly on good-old-fashioned-word-of-mouth praise for their skills in treating those musculoskeletal injuries that happen to all of us at home, at work, and at play.
