Cheney: No defense savings from cuts

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Administration officials said Sunday there will be no short-run savings in defense costs from President Bush's dramatic nuclear weapons standdown.

"Over the next few months, or in fiscal year '92, there are added costs with terminating contracts, moving systems around, destroying warheads, etc., that had not previously been expected," Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

Soviet response - A2

Cheney said the nation's military must be ready to fight a regional conflict anywhere in the world and that the Strategic Defense Initiative is needed in a world of nuclear proliferation. He defended the B-2 bomber program as necessary to the country's defense and said the armed forces already are in the midst of a massive buildup that will cut their manpower by 25 percent.

The need to prevent a regional conflict like Operation Desert Storm forms "the basic underlying assumptions by which we size our forces today," said Cheney.

National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft said that "five years out, I think there will be a peace dividend" and "hopefully it will be sizable. But 'I honestly don't know how much,'" said Scowcroft, speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Defense spending is heading down to 3.6 percent of gross national product, the lowest level since 1939, said Undersecretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz.

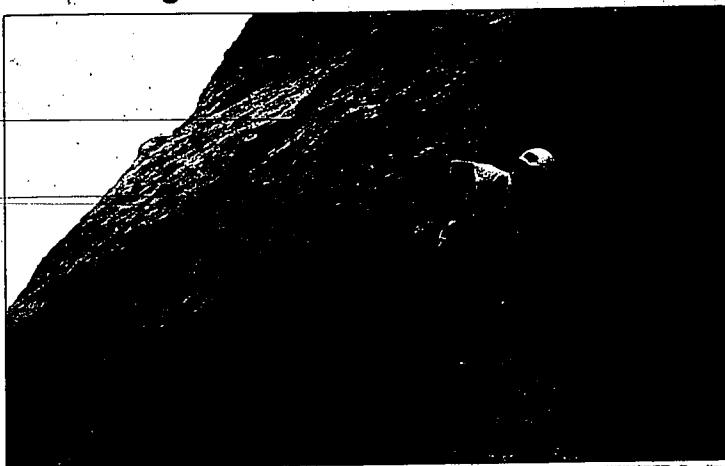

"The United States can afford the programs it needs and still afford an adequate defense," Wolfowitz said on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday."

The administration got an expression of support from one congressional Democrat, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"I do think those who believe we're going to be able to declare a peace dividend and have a huge amount of money for domestic purposes are not looking at the fiscal picture of the country," said Nunn. "Most of the defense savings are going to have to go to try to meet the deficit, which is growing," added Nunn, speaking on CBS's "Face the Nation."

Rock climbers from around the world test their skills on cliffs at the City of Rocks National Reserve.

Climbers worry as park services crack down at City of Rocks

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

ALMO — More than a hundred years ago, the starkly beautiful cluster of granite columns just west of here was a stopping place for pioneers traveling the California Trail. Some of their inscriptions can still be seen on the rocks.

Today, City of Rocks National Reserve is attracting pioneers of a different sort — people from around the world who want to climb the 60-story stone formations.

But some of them aren't sure they're welcome any more.

As the number of climbers, well, climbs, the National Park Service and the Idaho Department of Parks, which share jurisdiction of the reserve, are becoming stricter about enforcing rules against permanently altering or damaging the rocks.

Last month Dave Bingham, a longtime rock climber from Ketchum who has written a climber's guide to City of Rocks, was cited for chipping handholds in the rocks and applying epoxy glue to reinforce natural holds.

He was fined $132.50, given a 30-day suspended jail sentence, put on a year's probation and ordered to remove all hardware from his climbing route and restore the rock as much as possible.

Bingham, who has been rock-climbing for 20 years, said the Park-Service exaggerated the extent of what he did to make an example of him. He also said most climbers are very careful to do as little as possible to the rocks they climb.

"Occasionally you'll reinforce a hold that's already there with epoxy to keep it from falling off, but not something anyone likes to do," said Bingham, 35.

"The climbing community is very opposed to chipping," he said. "It's like cheating. The game is taking what nature gives you."

More than 81,000 people visited City of Rocks last year, Superintendent Dave Pugh said, and if the weather stays good that figure could top 100,000. Rock climbers make up the bulk of those visitors, he said.

Pugh said climbers respect the rocks, but said that enforcing the rules has become more important with the larger number of climbers. Also, he said, until about a month ago there weren't enough

Church unhappy with verdict in Jesuits' massacre

The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Church leaders on Sunday said they are dissatisfied with the conviction of two army officers and acquittal of seven other soldiers in the 1989 massacre of eight people, including six Jesuit priests.

The judge's decision Saturday came in the first trial against Salvadoran army officers for political killings, eroding a tradition of military impunity in such slayings.

The trial also was a watershed in relations with the United States. Congress has made successful prosecution of the Jesuits' killers a condition for continued aid to El Salvador's rightist government.

Washington has provided hundreds of millions of dollars in a nearly 12-year-old war against leftist guerrillas that has killed more than 75,000 people, mostly civilians. Many were slain by death squads.

Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, auxiliary Roman Catholic bishop of San Salvador, said "the church is not satisfied" that only two of nine military men were convicted for the murders of six priests, their housekeeper and her daughter.

Rosa Chavez said the church does not believe that "the real authors of this crime have been convicted ... the decision has to be more wide-reaching."

Father Jose Maria Tojeira, Jesuit Provincial for Central America, said: "I'm not overly bothered by the acquittal of those of lower rank, though I believe there was sufficient evidence to convict them. I believe it is correct that the jury placed the blame going upward in rank, and we should keep looking up the ranks for more of those responsible."

President Alfredo Cristiani declined to give his opinion of the verdict Sunday. "The jury made that decision, and it has to be accepted," he told reporters.

There was no immediate comment from the U.S. government.

Army Col. Guillermo Benavides, believed to be the man that ordered the massacre, was the only person convicted for the murders of the priests. Yussuf Mendez was convicted of the murder of 15-year-old Celina Ramos, the daughter of the

UN takes quick advantage of influence in new era

Chicago Tribune

NEW YORK — Anyone who still thinks the United Nations is a diplomatic backwater should have spent a few days last week witnessing the activity in the corridors of its 39-story headquarters on Manhattan's East River.

As the Security Council held round-the-clock meetings on Iraq's detention of U.N. inspectors in a Baghdad parking lot, the final details of a landmark peace accord signed Tuesday between the government and leftist guerrilla factions in El Salvador were being hammered out in another part of the U.N. building.

On several other floors, Cambodia's rival factions put the finishing touches to their own peace settlement. Another hostage was released in Lebanon; U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar is at the center of what is emerging as the "most successful" effort yet to free the remaining hostages.

As if Perez de Cuellar weren't busy enough already — he is also trying to negotiate settlements in Cyprus, the Western Sahara, the Korea and East Timor — the Security Council last week passed a resolution asking him to intervene in Yugoslavia.

"Strengthened by President Bush's endorsement of its authority during the Persian Gulf crisis last year and freed from long paralysis of Cold War rivalry, the United Nations is taking on a life of its own as the pre-eminent institution of the 'new world order.'"

And it is rising to the challenge of becoming the world's peacemaker as envisioned by its founders 46 years ago.

"The consensus that emerged in the United Nations around the central idea that breaking peace is inadmissible did not disintegrate even after the crisis in the Gulf was over," the Soviet Union's new foreign minister, Boris Pankin, said in his first address to the General Assembly. "On the contrary, this consensus led to practical steps to resolve other burning issues."

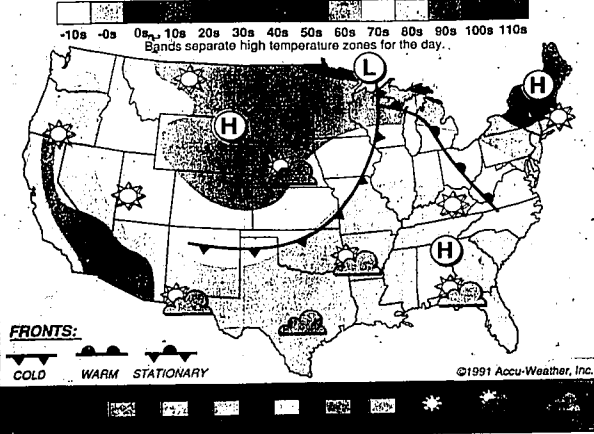

"This newfound power has its roots not in the Gulf crisis but in the end of the Cold War, which in part explains the U.N.'s successes in mediating an end to conflicts

California governor vetoes gay rights bill

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Pete Wilson on Sunday vetoed a bill that would have outlawed job discrimination against homosexuals. He said it could have led to unjust lawsuits.

The Republican governor had been heavily lobbied by conservatives and religious groups, who had sent over 100,000 letters to his office in recent weeks. But he denied that the lobbying campaign influenced him.

But Wilson said the measure contained a complicated formula for remedies for discrimination victims. That, he said, would "create burdens upon employers, both guilty and innocent" by opening the door to unjustified lawsuits, higher business insurance costs and other unknowns.

He said existing laws already prohibit employers from discriminating.

15 killed in Indian shantytown fire

NEW DELHI, India — Fire ripped through a crowded shantytown on the fringes of the capital on Sunday, destroying 2,000 huts and killing at least 15 people, news reports said.

State television quoted officials as saying the fire in the Govindpuri slum colony in a southern suburb of the city was set off by the explosion of a cooking-gas cylinder in one of the huts.

United News of India said 10 children were among the 15 who died in the fire. Three other people were burned, the agency said.

Cheney: Soviet respond well to cuts

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Bush administration officials said Sunday that the Soviets had responded enthusiastically to President Bush's initiative unilaterally reducing nuclear weapons and the prospects for a complementary response were promising.

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, interviewed on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley," said Bush telephoned both Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin before making his Oval Office address Friday night.

"They were enthusiastic then and they've been enthusiastic since," the Pentagon chief said. He noted, though, that it would be unrealistic to expect immediate proposals from the Soviets. "If someone had hit us with this cold within 24 hours, we would not prepare a substantive response and say, 'OK, we'll take down the following systems.' It will take some time for them to work it out. But I think they will."

Exxon settlement set today

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A second settlement has been reached in government lawsuits against Exxon Corp. over the nation's largest oil spill, a spokesman for Gov. Walter J. Hickel said Sunday.

Details of the settlement were being withheld until a formal announcement Monday at the governor's Anchorage office, spokesman Eric Rehm said. An earlier settlement, announced in March, fell apart when a federal judge rejected the criminal plea bargain and the Alaska House voted down the entire agreement.

Negotiations between Exxon, the state and federal government resumed earlier this month.

priests' housekeeper. The two officers face sentences of 20 to 30 years in prison.

But the jury also acquitted seven lower-ranking soldiers — two sergeants, two sergeants, a corporal and two privates — who by their own admission carried out the gruesome massacre, in which the corpses were mutilated.

Benavides was director of the National Military College on Nov. 16, 1989, when the priests were killed at their residence. The other eight defendants — one of whom is a fugitive and was tried in absentia — formed part of a 35-man detail that raided the Central American University earlier the same day.

The slain priests were administrators and professors at the Jesuit school, which had long been considered subversive ideologues by the far right, which includes many military officers. The priests were killed on the sixth day of major rebel offensive.

Jim McGovern, aide to U.S. Rep. Joe Moakley (D-Mass.) said, "There's a certain sense of justice that Benavides was convicted, because he designated campsites, which would be accessible by car, and 20 to 25 back-country sites accessible only to hikers.

Bingham, who serves on the committee putting together the plan, said he was concerned that reducing the number of campsites was an indirect means of discouraging climbing at City of Rocks, instead favoring the historic aspects of the site.

But Pugh denied that was the intent. The Park Service would only put in as many campsites as it thought the 14,000-acre reserve could accommodate, he said.

"In no way, shape, or form are we trying to discourage climbers," he gave the orders. But it's disappointing that people who have committed such a brutal murder go free."

Moakley heads a congressional task force following the case. He has accused the armed forces of "acting in a way to protect other high-ranking officers he contends were implicated in a conspiracy to kill the priests."

"Now it must be asked, who ordered Benavides' conviction?" McGovern said.

"That will be a challenge for Congress and the administration in the coming weeks, to make sure the investigation continues."

"That's the last thing we want to do," a group, from a park management point of view, we couldn't ask for a more in-line group than climbers."

Since the mid-1980s, he said, City of Rocks has become an internationally famous destination for rock climbers. Between April 15 and Oct. 15 the site attracts an average of 500 climbers a week, he said. Half of them are from Europe.

"The rocks are quite unique in their climbability," he said. "There are a lot of good quality climbs, and the remote, scenic setting is a big attraction, especially for Europeans. It's so different from what they're used to."

IRS targets man who reported unpaid taxes

KENNER, La. (AP) — The former controller of a computer company said he didn't expect a parade for telling the Internal Revenue Service the firm wasn't paying all its taxes, but he didn't think he'd get stuck with the $69,000 tab.

The IRS said it was just following the law when it held S. Stewart Joslin responsible for taxes the company withheld from workers' paychecks but never passed on to the government.

"I could wind up paying interest all my life and never get this $69,000," Joslin said Saturday. "The real problem is I don't owe the cotton-picking money. And they're not looking at anybody else. That really steams me."

Joslin wouldn't name the company he went to work for as a controller in early 1987. He said he didn't realize until that fall the company wasn't forwarding the tax money.

"I wasn't aware of withholding tax problems until October, when I began signing paychecks on a regular basis," he said. "The bookkeeper told me there was a problem. I started trying to get the owners to pass on their withholding."

The owners finally agreed to do it, Joslin said.

"It was supposed to be done in May. It never happened. At that point, I notified the IRS and became their primary target with that notification," Joslin said.

The owner told an IRS agent at a meeting with Joslin that Joslin wasn't responsible for the decision not to pay up, Joslin said.

"The IRS didn't take his word for it. I continue to be the primary target for repayment," he said. IRS spokeswoman Teresa Bailey said the agency is following the law in going after employees responsible for making sure that taxes were paid.

"The IRS tries to educate people. And one of the things we tell them is that when you sign your name (on company tax forms) you are as responsible as you are for your own individual return," she told The Times-Picayune in a story published Wednesday.

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., asked the IRS to review Joslin's case and Sandra Freehand, chief of the agency's New Orleans appeals office, concluded Joslin is responsible for the unpaid taxes.

Joslin isn't alone. "You don't get any gold stars for bringing a problem to the attention of IRS," said Frederick Daily, a tax lawyer in San Francisco.

He said he represents a personnel manager held responsible for $600,000 in unpaid taxes after his San Francisco firm declared bankruptcy and its owners went to England.

Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson recently wrote about a woman billed for $120,000 in withholding taxes even though she quit her company in Austin, Texas, and told the IRS her former bosses weren't turning over the money.

A congressional subcommittee is considering an investigation into whether it is fair to go after mid-level managers.

Joslin said the tax bill amounted to $120,000 when he first got it in November 1988 from the IRS.

Politics lock up unemployment benefits

New York Daily News

WASHINGTON — It's a classic Washington story of political and procedural gridlock: 2.3 million Americans have exhausted their unemployment benefits. There is $8 billion sitting in a fund specifically set up to extend payments to those people, but no one can have any of the money.

The reasons have to do with presidential campaign politics, tension between the White House and the Democratic-controlled Congress and rules of a budget agreement — all of which have kept the Bush administration and Congress bickering since March.

The long-term unemployed, whose case histories are so emotionally chronicled in House floor speeches, are still waiting to see whether the government will give them access to a fund they helped subsidize.

"The money is there," said Mark

'The money is there. It's crazy not to put it to use when people are in need. They still need to put food on the table.'

— Mark Roberts, AFL-CIO

Roberts of the AFL-CIO's Washington office. "It's crazy not to put it to use when people are in need. They still need to put food on the table."

Currently, the jobs are entitled to up to 26 weeks of unemployment benefits. Beyond that, states can qualify for extended benefits if their jobless rates meet certain levels. Critics complain that the rules, which were tightened during the Reagan administration, are too strict. Many would like to change the formula to make it easier for states to draw from the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Changing the formula to release more money from the fund, however, would violate last year's budget agreement. The pact prohibits the allocation of money, even from a dedicated fund, unless Congress comes up with a way to pay for it or President Bush declares an emergency.

Enter politics: Bush won't declare an emergency. Republicans don't want to raise taxes to pay for more benefits. The Democrats say Bush doesn't want to admit there's a recession, and the Republicans charge that the Democrats are just looking for a cheap 1992 campaign issue to help them bloody a popular president.

Meanwhile, 300,000 Americans a month are exhausting their benefits and are still waiting for an answer.

"This is not about who has the issue," said Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., one of the main negotiators of the House unemployment bill. "It should be about solving the problem." Last week, House and Senate leaders agreed to a $6.4 billion compromise package that would extend unemployment benefits for up to 20 weeks.

The White House has termed the legislation "a bunch of garbage." It was still unclear whether Congress has enough votes to override a presidential veto.

An override vote will depend on Republicans from high-unemployment areas.

"I think it's fair to say that the Democrats are, in fact, using this as a political issue," said Rep. Susan Molinari, R-N.Y. But "from a New York, Northeast perspective, I felt very strongly obligated" to vote for the benefits extension, she said.

For the Democrats, the standstill with Bush may be the strongest issue they have to use against the president next year.

"It's central to the overall need the party" has to reach out to working folks and people who want to work," said Democratic consultant Mike McCurry.

Blacks still dominate death row numbers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid a congressional debate on how to improve the death penalty, the Justice Department reported Sunday that blacks still make up a much larger share of Death Row inmates than of the nation's population.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said that as of Dec. 31, 1990, blacks comprised 40 percent of prisoners awaiting death penalties. The 1990 census found the U.S. population is 12.1 percent black.

In 1987, the Supreme Court ruled that statistical evidence of discrimination is insufficient to render death-penalty statutes unconstitutional.

That ruling came in the case of Warren McCleskey, a black man who was executed last Wednesday in the Georgia electric chair for the killing of a white Atlanta policeman during a 1978 furniture store robbery.

Last week, the House Judiciary Committee approved and sent to the House floor a bill allowing legal challenges to death sentences based on statistical showings of race discrimination. The Senate rejected a similar provision last summer.

Under prodding from the Bush administration, both House and Senate crime bills would greatly expand the federal death penalty — to cover some 50 new crimes.

The Justice Department study found 2,356 prisoners awaiting death penalties at year-end, up 5 percent from the previous year. Thirty-two of them were women, and the median age was 34.

At the time of the study, 34 states and the federal government had death penalties on the books, but Colorado's has since been struck down by the state supreme court.

Of those condemned to die, 1,375, or 58.4 percent, were white; 943 or 40 percent were black; 24 or 1 percent were American Indian and 14 or 0.6 percent were Asian. Those of Hispanic ethnic origin totaled 172, or 7.3 percent. In the prison study, as in Census compilations, people of Hispanic origin are counted in other racial categories: black, white or other.

Van runs over tent, killing 4

FOLLETT, Iowa (AP) — A van went off a road in a campground and ran over a tent Sunday, killing four people inside.

The van's driver apparently had been drinking and will be charged with four counts of vehicular homicide, Clinton County Attorney Larry Schultz said at a news conference at the site. He wouldn't give any other details of the accident.

The accident happened Sunday morning at the Fairbanks Campground near Follett, near the Mississippi River in eastern Iowa. Campground owners Norma and Ron Fairbanks said the tent was near a small access road with a 15 mph speed limit.

Gambling ready to make debut in Colorado Tuesday

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (AP) — Limited-stakes gambling begins Tuesday in three historic mountain mining towns where residents hope the slap of cards and the click of slot machines will help the local economies.

Central City, Black Hawk and Cripple Creek, all relics of Colorado's gold-rush past, have seen better days. All are heavily dependent on summer tourism to keep going, with business falling off sharply after the first snow falls. They're in rugged terrain not suitable for ski developments, and are reachable by narrow, two-lane roads.

But town leaders hope they can lure troops of gamblers from hundreds of miles away to try their hand at blackjack, poker and slot machines, the only three types of gambling allowed, with 55 bet ceilings. A dozen or more casinos will open in the three communities. So far, 26 licenses to operate gaming establishments have been issued by the state Gaming Commission, and there is a backlog of dozens of applications.

Gambling was illegal in Colorado until voters last November approved a constitutional amendment making it legal in the three communities beginning Tuesday.

Referendum proponents had won support by touting legalized betting as a way to restore the crumbling communities while bringing millions of dollars in additional revenue into state and local treasuries.

When prison calm is broken

The Washington Post

DEER LODGE, Mont. — The deep quiet of a Sunday morning had developed in this small western Montana town of ranchers and miners, last week when the blare of the prison alarm started churchgoers leaving 9 a.m. services.

As ambulances raced out of town to the Montana State Prison five miles away, and the alarm wail did not cease, County Attorney Chris Miller, who was mowing his lawn, recognized the signs of a major disturbance. Over the next four and a half hours, inmates at Montana State staged the country's bloodiest prison riot in 11 years.

In a planned uprising, prisoners seized control of the maximum security complex and killed five fellow inmates suspected of being informants, hanging three of them from a cellblock balcony by electrical cords, local law enforcement officials said.

The five dead were among 10 inmates held in protective custody because they had given incriminating information about other prisoners or because the nature of their crimes made them vulnerable to attacks.

"Everything that could go wrong did," Miller said in an interview. The rioting inmates, who began the incident by cutting a three-foot-high break in an exercise yard fence, "succeeded beyond their wildest dreams."

The riot has set the rest of the country's overcrowded prison system on edge. Montana's director of corrections, Curt Chisholm, said his counterparts in other states have flooded his office with questions about what caused it. "It makes every warden in the country nervous," Chisholm said.

Sept. 22 was a particularly beautiful day in Deer Lodge, a town of 4,000, with the sun flattening the nearby mountains into luminous blue shadows and lighting up the yellow aspens until they sparkled like metal.

As usual, most of the prison's 68 maximum security inmates were locked in their cells, watching TV.

Twelve inmates were exercising in fenced cages in a central courtyard. Five guards escorted the inmates back to their cells, leaving the other nine locked in the outside exercise "kennels."

Inmates entered the central control room after setting a fire that melted the booth's glass.

Unnoticed by the guard in an indoor control booth, the nine managed to congregate in one kennel and crawl out through an opening in the fence, according to Chisholm. They ran into the building, where they "immediately split up," Chisholm said. The control booth guard managed to close the door to the cellblock where the five guards

The other five guards locked themselves in a 3-by-5-foot concrete shower stall in the corner of the complex and leaned a wet mattress against the shower gate for added protection, while the inmates hung a blanket on the shower to further cut off the guards' view.

Once the inmates gained access to the control booths and opened all as "infectious" means, succeeded in barricading himself in his cell. Two others, who had not been confined to their cells, hid in the laundry room.

A fourth inmate, Robert Horbeck, managed to flee to an entrance way, although both his legs were broken, according to Fiske. There, he bluffed his attackers by claiming that armed officers kept outside the door would shoot if they approached him, Fiske said.

Of the six other inmates in protective custody, five died and one was left for dead, with his throat slashed and 27 staples in his head. He is now in stable condition in the prison infirmary.

The prison riot squad, which stormed the building when its members realized inmates were being attacked, found four bodies on the concrete floor of the protective custody cellblock. Some of the victims also had been stabbed and their heads had been smashed with fire extinguishers, Miller said.

A fifth man was found dead in his cell. Prison officials later established that three of the five had been hung.

had gone, but an inmate threw a bucket in the doorway before another guard was able to close off the wing where the protective custody inmates were housed.

The rioters then broke the glass around the control booths with fire extinguishers and set fire to mattresses and other material to melt the remaining security glass. Miller said investigators believe inmates may have used an oxygen tank as a blowtorch.

The guards in two control booths fled up escape ladders onto the roof.

the cell doors, "it was complete pandemonium," Miller said, with "damn near all" of the 68 maximum security inmates "participating in the riot." One group quickly surrounded the inmates in protective custody, wielding fire extinguishers, broken mop handles, television cords, staplers and other weapons.

A few of the inmates in protective custody decided not to resist, apparently concluding that if they didn't fight back, they wouldn't be hurt so much, according to officials. One man, through what Miller described

LDS leaders counsel against certain prayer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Women are as important as men in life and in scripture, but it is inappropriate for Mormons to pray to a "Mother in heaven," church leaders told the faith's annual Women's Meeting.

President Gordon B. Hinckley, first counselor in the church's governing First Presidency, said while logic and reason suggest there is a heavenly mother, those who would further devotion to such a divinity are misguided.

"The fact that we do not pray to our Mother in heaven in no way belittles or denigrates her," he told the gathering Saturday night at the Mormon Tabernacle.

Hinckley also took time to answer a 14-year-old girl's letter to church President Ezra Taft Benson, in which the child questioned the few mentions of women in scriptures.

Hinckley quoted verses in the faith's Doctrine and Covenants that refer to "sons and daughters unto God."

The word "men" in the scriptures is often a generic term referring to humanity, unless it deals with priesthood responsibilities, he said.

men are not more important than women. "I am confident that the daughters of God will be as eligible as will the sons of God," Hinckley said.

Elder M. Russell Ballard of the Council of the Twelve counseled women about the exhaustion and frustration some may feel trying to be "super women."

"If anything is left or neglected, you may feel that you have failed. To you who feel harried and overwhelmed and who wonder whether you ever will be able to catch the departing train you think you must be on, I suggest that you learn to deal with each day as it comes along doing the best you can, without feelings of guilt or inadequacy," he said.

Rather than berating themselves for what isn't achieved, Ballard said, wives and mothers should congratulate themselves for what was accomplished.

He also counseled against succumbing to peer pressure and stressed that transgression of any kind will lead to a loss of self-esteem. "You young women have a responsibility to live exemplary lives, so the young men will respect your values and treat you as daughters of God deserve to be treated," he said.

Boise nursing home negligent in rape case

BOISE (AP) — A Boise nursing home has been found negligent in failing to prevent a 77-year-old patient from being raped by a nurse.

A five-man, seven-woman Ada County jury determined Friday that Treasure Valley Manor and its parent company should pay $390,000 in compensatory and punitive damages.

The jury deliberated five hours before handing down verdicts against the former employee and Touchmark Living Centers Inc. of Beaverton, Ore.

Earl Grove Jr., a 26-year-old Boise man convicted of the rape last year, was held individually responsible for $5,000 in damages.

Treasure Valley Manor was found negligent for hiring and inadequately training and supervising Grove, a former convict with a record of aggravated assault, forgery, burglary and escape.

"This was a tragedy that was clearly avoidable," Boise attorney William Mauk, representing the victim, said Friday.

"One of the messages is that the elderly and their families should be very careful in selecting nursing homes. The industry has a duty to protect their patients. These people can't protect themselves."

Logging plan withdrawn

PRIEST LAKE (AP) — In an unusual move, a Forest Service manager has withdrawn a logging plan within days of its appeal by environmentalists.

But Priest Lake Ranger Al Collozzi immediately issued a revised plan that includes some changes he expects will please the local appellants.

"We have dropped one entire road system. That gives us more protection for watershed and fisheries. It also makes sure we don't enter an old-growth stand."

West Branch of the Priest River. The watershed was heavily logged in the past. Environmentalists worry more harvest will hurt water quality, increase the risk of flooding and kick sediment into streams, threatening cutthroat trout.

Gordon West of the Selkirk-Priest Basin Association, one of the appellants, worked with Collozzi in planning the sale. He said he had not seen the revised decision notice, but was disappointed the timber volume will still remain about 7 million board feet.

Accidents claim 7 over weekend

The Associated Press

Seven people have died in three Idaho traffic accidents, two of which are believed to be alcohol-related, authorities say.

A crash Friday on U.S. 95 six miles south of Plummer killed four and injured five.

Idaho State Police said Nadine Manybears, 28, of Desmet; Grace Sitsler, 75, of Lynden, and Lynda Faye Sitsler, 42, Wash., and her daughter Diane Jane Sitter, 4, of Spokane, Wash., died at the scene of the head-on crash.

Mrs. Manybears was pregnant and near full-term, an ISP dispatcher said.

Two Troy teen-agers also were killed when their pickup collided head-on with a logging truck about two miles west of Troy on Idaho Highway 2. Michael LeRoy Davies, 19, and Chanda Lee Morris, 16, were in a pickup which pulled around another vehicle and into the path of an oncoming logging truck shortly after 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Elmer Raymond Kollerker, 35, Hansen, died Friday night when his pickup careened off a mountain wall and plunged into Salmon Falls Creek Canyon.

Moms organize against gangs

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Fed up with drive-by shootings, threats and the criminal environment fostered by gang involvement, a group of mothers has banded together to fight back.

Mothers Against Gangs, or MAG, has anti-gang strategies in the works, ranging from mandatory school uniforms and newsletters to tougher truancy laws and negotiations with gang leaders.

Most important, the mothers say, is forging a network of communication between parents.

"These women are almost as much victims of gang activity as their kids are," said Colleen Minson, an ex-Salt Lake City school board member and one of MAG's founders. "They need to have somebody to talk with to begin coping and working it out for themselves."

Alana Reid points to her 16-year-old son, whose life has spanned from his father's murder in California to gang initiation to jail last May for riding on a drive-by shooting in Salt Lake City.

"Don't shut them out. You have to be there for them," Reid said. "You have to give them something to grab and hold on to before it's too late."

The mother of a teen charged in the shooting of East High School assistant football coach Bill Erice this summer said a lack of honest talk blinded her family to the boy's growing involvement in gangs.

She wouldn't talk about the Aug. 27 attack that left Erice wounded, but warned parents not to take the gang threat lightly.

"All I ask is that they open their eyes and take a long look at their child. Take an hour and talk to them," said the 34-year-old woman, who asked that her name not be used to protect her son's identity. "We had no communication. That's where I made my mistake."

One mother, who also requested anonymity, hopes MAG can end a bitter struggle to keep her son gang-free. She told of gang members smashing through the front door of her home one night as they tried to get their hands on the 13-year-old boy, who refuses to join.

The team routinely gets knocked around the halls of Clayton Intermediate School, and the mother takes him out of class 30 minutes early each day to spare him beatings on the way home. "These kids are infatuated with gangs big time," she said. "My boy is afraid to say no because he's afraid of retaliation. But I can't protect him all the time."

Another mother and MAG member, Lois Salazar, has offered to contact senior members of the gang pressuring the boy to ask them to back off.

Craig: Review, not reform, mining law

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

Craig

SUN VALLEY — A formal review of the 1872 mining law is being proposed by Sen. Larry Craig as an alternative to major reform of the venerable legislation.

Speaking via telephone to a gathering of miners at the Sun Valley Mining Conference on Saturday, Craig said he hoped the proposed review of the law would counterbalance a mining reform bill introduced by Rep. Nick Joe Rahall, D-W. Va., in the House.

"I'm not willing to consider wholesale changes in the law because I simply don't think it's necessary," Craig said.

Signed by President Ulysses S. Grant, the 119-year-old mining act and its land tenure privileges have remained virtually unchanged since its inception. Critics contend that the law is outdated and gives mining unjustifiable advantages over other land uses.

Sen. Dale Bumper, D-Ark., is proposing to repeal the 1872 mining law. His attempt to place a moratorium on new mining patents was narrowly defeated in the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee last week, Craig pointed out.

In the House, Rahall's mining reform bill is making speedier progress.

"I hear they're going to try to get it to the floor for a vote sometime this session," Craig reported. "That means we may see a similar bill in the Senate early next year."

To counteract Rahall's legislation, Craig and Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont., are cosponsoring legislation that would authorize a review study of the 1872 mining law and recommend what changes, if any, are needed.

Craig said he hoped his bill would be considered by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee before adjournment in mid-November.

"The question is: Are we going to have a mining development law?" Craig asked.

"Or are we at a point where someone can, in an arbitrary or capricious way, say, 'No, you cannot mine there because there are grizzly bears or because it's elk habitat,' or something like that?"

A major debate on the Endangered Species Act is also likely this session, Craig reported.

"With fingers crossed, I think we might be able to make a few adjustments," Craig said.

Hearing on toll-free calling set for Oct. 23

BOISE — A public hearing on a petition for toll-free calling between Buhl, Castleford and Twin Falls has been scheduled for next month by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

The hearing is slated for 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 23, at the Buhl Middle School auditorium.

Those who want to testify may do so by signing in at the door. No advance registration is necessary.

In March, the PUC received a petition from 200 Buhl-area residents requesting extended area service between Buhl and Twin Falls. An amended petition was filed last month to include Castleford.

NFIB, valley legislators gather for breakfast meeting

TWIN FALLS — The National Federation of Independent Businesses Idaho chapter will host a breakfast for Magic Valley legislators Thursday at the Canyon Springs Inn.

Pete Skamsner, the NFIB Idaho director, said members will talk with lawmakers about issues that affect small businesses, including property tax relief, the proposed 1 percent initiative, health insurance costs and mandated health benefits.

The breakfast is scheduled for 7:30 a.m. NFIB has about 7,000 members in Idaho.

Studded snow tires legal on Idaho highways Tuesday

BOISE — Studded snow tires can be used on Idaho highways starting Tuesday, Idaho Transportation Department officials said.

Studded tires are snow tires with small metal cleats embedded in the tread. They are legal from Oct. 1 to April 15 each year in Idaho.

On front-wheel-drive vehicles, studded tires should be used on all four tires, the department said.

Snow tires, studded or otherwise, must be of the same construction and size as the other tires on the vehicle.

Department officials also warned that studded tire laws vary in neighboring states. Studded tires are legal in Montana and Nevada starting Oct. 1; in Utah, Oct. 15; Washington, Nov. 1; and Oregon, Nov. 30. Wyoming has no restrictions.

Lottery issues scam warning after 2 Boise area cases

BOISE — The state Lottery is warning Idahoans about recent illegal scams which have appeared in the area.

One incident involved an elderly woman who was contacted by phone by someone claiming to be working for the Lottery. The woman was told she won a huge jackpot, but would have to meet with the phony employee to fill out forms before claiming her winnings.

The Lottery said it does not solicit winners, who are required to either mail in their tickets for validation or come to the Boise lottery office.

In another case, a young woman was approached by a man claiming to be working for actresses in an upcoming Lottery television commercial. The Lottery works with a Boise advertising firm and all talent used in advertisements are under contract.

Anyone who has witnessed a scam should contact the Lottery's security division in Boise at 334-2277.

Reserve your license plate number soon or lose it

GOODING — Gooding County residents who want to keep their current license plate numbers had better let Gooding County Assessor Doyle Pugmire know soon.

The state will issue new license plates starting Jan. 1, which means that anyone who wants to keep his current license number needs to reserve before Nov. 29.

Reserving a license number will cost $2. Further information can be obtained by phoning Pugmire at 934-5666.

Tickets for Oct. 10 Success Breakfast still available

TWIN FALLS — Tickets are still on sale for the annual Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Success Breakfast, featuring psychologist-author Wayne Dyer.

The breakfast is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 10, at 7 a.m. in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. Dyer's remarks will follow at 8:30 a.m. at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium.

Tickets are $35 for chamber members and $45 for non-members.

Further information can be obtained by phoning the chamber office at 733-3974.

'Shoshone' nets mixed reviews

By Janene Buckley
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Shoshone's vintage theater was filled to capacity for Saturday's world premiere of the documentary "Shoshone."

"One of Shoshone's strengths is its diversity," said Mayor Tim Rindinger at a pie and coffee reception following the movie.

Area residents' responses to the film were representative of that diversity.

Comments ranged from technically excellent, wonderful, and interesting, to depressing, it shows only the negative, just one side of Shoshone.

The hour-long documentary was produced by the British Broadcasting Corporation in cooperation with the Idaho Public Broadcasting system. It is one of an 8-part series on American life, called "Sun of Mind."

The film focuses on attitudes and ideas in a rural setting. In the documentary, the setting is as important to the overall impact as the interviews with local residents.

Scenes of the railroad, drought-parched farmland, sagebrush, and solitary farm structures, as well as panoramic scenes of the city and county provide a visual support for the issues presented.

The film's producer John Barnes of the BBC looks at such issues as community spirit, economic difficulties and residents' reactions to years of drought.

Rural attitudes towards government, the court system and even racial prejudice and outsiders are presented.

Barnes takes a look through four generations at families' strength and commitment to the land through the eyes of a local family that immigrated from the Portuguese Azores at the turn of the century.

Patriotism is examined against the backdrop of the Persian Gulf War with scenes of the war and yellow ribbons tied to pine trees in Shoshone City Park. The film also features scenes from the funeral of Andrew Moller of Rupert, the only Idahoan to die in Saudi Arabia.

Lynn Allen of Idaho Public Television told the crowd, "You are the real stars of the show."

He said the film is Public Broadcastings first venture into the international market and the first-ever co-production between the BBC and IPB.

"This is an important event for Idaho Public Broadcasting and an important event for Idaho and Shoshone," he said.

The documentary will be aired Wednesday on KAIT channel 4 at 10 p.m. The 8-part series will be shown in Europe during the spring of 1992 and later in the year in the U.S. Allen said the Shoshone segment will be the first in the series.

When Barnes first came to Idaho he "fell in love" with the look of Shoshone, Allen said.

Shoshone has been the site of a Smithsonian Institutes Research project and was the pilot for the Idaho Perspectives Project, as a result, residents have become more aware of their heritage and values and were willing to participate in the film project.

During his stay in Shoshone last spring.

Police career pretty Gold-en

Top cop touts education

By Susanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

Having worked on some of the nation's toughest beats, Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold has plenty of experience to call on when fighting Idaho crime.

JEROME — In a career that has spanned nearly three decades, Larry Gold has protected Ronald Reagan from terrorists, acted against a corrupt police chief who was in league with organized crime and helped solve the Patti Hearst kidnapping case.

He photographed the 1969 Isla Vista riots in Santa Barbara and has even directed traffic on New York's 5th Avenue during rush hour.

Now, as Jerome County Sheriff, Gold is using what he's learned on some of the nation's toughest crime beats to help take a bite out of Idaho crime.

But Gold's education isn't confined to what he's learned in law enforcement over the past 28 years. He recently earned a master's degree in education with a minor in counseling from the College of Idaho, and he's using his new skills to try and keep Jerome criminals from repeating their mistakes.

"I absolutely believe that education is the key to keeping these people out of jail," Gold says. "There are three tools: education, rehabilitation and enforcement. Education should be the primary goal."

Gold spends about two hours every day counseling inmates and their families and testing them for learning disabilities.

Gold, who is dyslexic, says he believes many criminals are learning disabled and turn to crime out of hopelessness.

He is trying to reverse that effect by making sure that everyone who passes through the Jerome system has the opportunity to complete a GED program and have access to education once they are on the outside.

"That way they don't feel like their time in jail has been wasted," Gold says. "It's essential to building self-esteem in these people."

Deer hunters bag llama instead

By Elodie Maller
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Clark Harman had no idea what he'd bag on a recent hunting trip.

Nor did he know he'd be offered a reward for his find that day or tangle with a beast that could do some pretty good ... well, spitting.

But, he and his hunting partner Blair Davis dutifully loaded their catch into the back of a pickup — their llama, that is.

Harman says he was baffled after coming across the shaggy beast on top of Cotterel Mountain near Albion several weeks ago. And, not a little frightened of the strange creature.

But the two Burley men got over their reservations and decided to rescue the animal in an episode that lasted up to four hours.

Harman now says he's glad he and Davis returned the beast to its home.

"I felt really good," Harman said, adding he got a letter from the llama's owner recently, saying her children had been

"We finally got him loaded. He just stood back there, and I held his lead rope through the back window. It was the funniest thing you ever saw."

— Clark Harman

praying for the animal's return.

The two Burley men's adventure began early one midday morning, with Davis carrying a deer permit.

"We were driving on a different range," Harman said. "We would drive up and get out and glass the ridges with our binoculars."

All of a sudden about 250 yards away, Davis spotted an large shape shrouded in a shadow.

Sure enough, Harman took a peek and saw a llama in a halter, dragging a ragged lead rope.

The two started walking closer and noticed it was bleating like a sheep.

Harman said he started to imitate the noise, and the llama began heading toward the men, crossing the crust of a ravine.

There was only one problem once the beast got closer.

"I grabbed his rope. Then we didn't know quite what to do with it," Harman said. "I know they spit and kick a lot."

The two tied the llama to the bumper of Davis' truck, then headed slowly down the mountain. After about three to four miles though, the llama had had enough.

"He got tired," Harman said. "He sat down and broke the lead rope."

At that point, the Burley hunters decided they had only one recourse. They drove the pickup into a ditch so the back of the bed was level with the road.

Advice for dark-horse candidate in Senate race that isn't

Milton Erhart
Prudential-Bache Securities
Boise, Idaho 83706

Draw DeSilver
On politics

Dear Mr. Erhart:

As you no doubt know, the conventional wisdom is that you have about as much chance of winning the Republican Senate nomination next year as Northwestern does of going to the Rose Bowl.

But, as a veteran, I'm tempted to agree that your campaign is doomed to fail.

I'm not so sure.

True, you have few if any ties to the state GOP apparatus, you'll be outstep by Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne and you have

That was 1972, and the candidate, of course, was Steve Symms, the man you want to replace in the Senate.

I don't know if you can pull off a Symms-like upset. He was running for the House of Representatives, not the Senate, and had the benefit of a three-way race. As of now, you and Kempthorne are the only candidates. But I think there are some things you could do to make the race a lot closer than most people are predicting.

Like they say, free advice is worth what you pay for it, but consider the following for whatever it's worth.

Forget the Treasure Valley. Everyone knows Kempthorne here, and they've already decided whether they'll vote for him or not. Concentrate on the Magic Valley, eastern Idaho and to a lesser extent north Idaho (there are more Republicans there than most people realize).

Stress your outsider-ness. It's always a potent appeal, especially in these parts of Idaho, and it's one Kempthorne (and Democrat Richard Stallings, should you win the primary) will have trouble appreciating. And make a virtue of your low-budget campaign — Idahoans don't like slick.

Position yourself as the pro-choice candidate, especially if state Sen. John Hansen of Idaho Falls joins the Republican

Llama

 "We pulled and pushed for about five minutes," Harman said. "We finally got him loaded. He just stood back there, and I held his lead rope through the back window. It was the funniest thing you ever saw."
 Harman says the two had to travel up to nine miles yet down the mountain, and the llama stood still in the bed, patiently watching the men.
 "We finally got off the mountain three hours later," Harman said. "We went through Declo, and people just about broke their necks doing a double take."
 Harman took the llama home and called the Cassia County Sheriff's Department to report his capture. That evening a deputy called him back, saying there was a reward for the return of the llama.
 The llama apparently belonged to Richard Chase of Pocatello, who kept the animal, named Spice, as a pet.
 Spice, had been lost two weeks after it wandered from Conner Creek store in downtown Albion.

 Chase had stopped at the store, leaving the llama outside, on an packing expedition to Independence Lake with a group of Boy Scouts.
 Harman says the animal traveled about six miles into the woods.
 Chase's wife Carol arrived at Harman's home the next day to pick up Spice, thrilled to have him back.
 "I couldn't take the reward," said Harman, referring to the $100 Carol Chase had offered him. "Not after I learned they had donated their time to take the scouts up there."
 He added the Chase kids had been heartbroken at the loss of Spice.
 Harman adds the episode proved to be a pretty good "fish tale" in itself. "You know how everyone tries to stretch their hunting and fishing tales?" he asked.
 "There's no way we'd be able to over top this story. If I hadn't got pictures of it, no one would ever have believed me."

Shoshone

 Barnes said "he was impressed with Shoshone's sense of its own history, and the residents' friendly cooperative attitude, so he decided to produce this segment of the series in Shoshone."
 Although some residents claimed the film was depressing, showing bars and junk cars, the mayor said differently.

"The film does an excellent job of telling the story John (Barnes) wanted to tell," Ridinger said. "It doesn't show all the Shoshone story, but it would take all eight films in the series to do that."
 County commissioner Jerry Nance, who was presented several times in the movie in his capacity as an elected Big Wood Canal Co. board member, said he felt the movie was excellent.

 He added it shows "the kinds of strife" that can occur in a small community faced with drought and economic difficulties.
 "This is a harshly beautiful land," the movie shows that, said one movie viewer as he crossed the railroad tracks in Shoshone. "It takes strong people to live here; the movie shows that."

Obituaries

Elmer R. Kollecker
 Elmer Raymond Kollecker, 35, Heyburn, died Friday evening, September 27, 1991 in a single car accident near Salmon Falls Reservoir west of Rogerson, ID.
 Elmer was born June 20, 1956 in Spokane, Washington to Theodore and Donna Burlington Kollecker. He moved with his family as a small child to the Magic Valley where he grew up and attended schools. He started his own painting business in 1973 which he still owned and operated at the time of his death.
 He married Sharon Popp on April 26, 1983 in Elko, Nevada. Elmer was an avid hunter and fisherman and enjoyed the outdoors.
 He is survived by his wife Sharon of Hansen; two sons, Elmer Kollecker, Jr., and Raymond Kollecker both of Hansen; two brothers, Gary Burlington of Jerome and Ted Kollecker of Boise; two sisters, Lillian Milner and Patty Burlington, both of Twin Falls and several nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his parents.

 A Memorial service will be held Tuesday, October 1, at 2:00 p.m. at Reynolds Funeral Chapel with Pastor Randall Davis of the Evangelical Free Church of Jerome officiating.
 Arrangements under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel.

'Hammering Man' headed back to foundry for repair

SEATTLE (AP) — Instead of pounding away at an imaginary nail in front of the Seattle Art Museum, the 11-ton "Hammering Man" sculpture was on a flatbed truck headed back to the foundry Sunday.
 The 48-foot hollow-steel artwork, which cost $400,000, was damaged Saturday when a nylon strap broke as it was being hoisted into place in front of the new museum. The sculpture dropped a foot to the roadway, then fell into the crane.

Photographers and others at the scene scattered as the crane's boom collapsed around the sculpture.
 Workers spent Saturday night prying and cutting the boom away from the sculpture. "Hammering Man" onto a trailer.
 Paul Kimble, president of SeaPac Services, which crated and hauled the sculpture, said it was being taken to the Lippincott, Inc., foundry in New Haven, Conn., where it was built.

 primary. Hansen and Stallings are both anti-abortion; Kempthorne was drafted on the issue. Being the only pro-choice candidate would give a lot of people who might not otherwise vote for you (including, perhaps, some Democrats) a clear reason to do so.
 Stalk out a cautious, skeptical policy on new production at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. Remember that INEL's popularity drops off with every mile you go from Idaho Falls, and if Hansen runs you won't do well there anyway.
 Start campaigning in earnest now. Don't spend any more weekends in Boise, no matter how pleasant. Spend them in Jerome or Soda Springs or Council Bluffs. If you have a prayer of winning, you need to outbid your opponents.

the Senate Appropriations Committee.
 According to a press release from Stallings' campaign office, Stallings wants the appropriations committee appointment "because of the broad-based benefits such an appointment would bring to Idaho." given the heavy federal presence in the state, such as Mountain Home Air Force Base and INEL.
 A seat on the appropriations committee would also put Stallings in good position to watch out for Idaho agricultural interests.
 Since the appropriations committee is one of the most powerful in the Senate, you might think Stallings would have to wait his turn to get on it. But five of the 16 Democrats on the committee are freshmen, so it's not inconceivable that Stallings might join them.

Mining

 Independent Mining Association, described the endangered species legislation as "the most damaging act that was ever passed, as far as mining is concerned."
 Holmberg maintained that any unsubstantiated report of gray wolves on her mining claim could stop her from mining until she could prove her operation was having no impact on the endangered species.
 Ailsa Becke, state staff biologist for U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, pointed out that the Endangered Species Act only affects projects that take place on federal lands, receive federal funds or require a federal permit.
 "There are ways to mitigate on potential impact," she said.
 Haas advised the miners to consult with the federal agencies in advance to find out what endangered plants or animals are likely in a particular area and what can be done to mitigate impact.
 "I have yet to see any project of any kind in Idaho stopped because of the Endangered Species Act," Haas said.
 "I'll provide you with a list," Holmberg countered.
 The second annual Sun Valley Mining conference was co-sponsored by the Independent Miners Association and the Boise law firm of Hawley Troxell Emis & California. Gold says his new job and his new mission of education suit him perfectly.
 "My wife and I chose to live in Idaho," Gold says. "It's not like we just ran out of gas on the highway and ended up here." But it's been a long trip, Gold admits.
 Born and raised in New York, Gold went straight from the police academy to walking a beat in Tuxedo, N.Y., a suburb of New York City.
 "I am still remember my first traffic assignment on 5th Avenue and 53rd Street," Gold says. "I stood on the curb — there were four lanes going both ways — for about 20 minutes, trying to muster the nerve to walk into that intersection."
 Gold left the Tuxedo department six years later after testifying against the chief of police, who was in cahoots with members of organized crime to hide the murder of a landlord manager.
 Afterwards, Gold decided to leave law enforcement, move to California and get into real estate.
 But when he got there, the call of the law was too strong to ignore. Only three weeks after arriving in the sunshine state, Gold found himself working for the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department Bureau of Criminalistics as a photographer. It was on that beat that Gold says he saw some of the hottest action of his career.
 "I arrived in 1969, during the Days of Rage in Chicago, when there was a lot of civil unrest on campuses nationwide, when they burned down the Bank of America in Isla Vista," Gold recalls. "I remember one night we drove up to Isla Vista and there were about a 1/2 dozen patrol cars upside down and on fire."

 "I photographed the violence that was occurring, trying to identify persons who were actually looting or doing the arson or committing the violent crimes."
 Gold was promoted to detective in Santa Barbara in 1972 and was assigned to a special investigation unit looking into unsolved murders and vice crimes. During that time, he posed as a drug dealer and hit man.
 In 1974, Gold was assigned to the Patti Hearst kidnapping investigation. Gold says he spent months poring over photographs, suspect's utility bills and inmate visitation sheets. "I found a connection that would lead the department to Hearst. Gold also worked as a strategic threat analyst in Santa Barbara for the Reagens for several years while Gold was president of the Region 9 Organized Crime and Intelligence Unit. He says then-governor Reagan was a great guy to work for.
 "I like him, personally, very much," Gold says of his famous former boss. "His wife was a little cold, standoffish, but I think he's a tremendous person."
 Gold has several photographs in his office of Reagan. One taken at Nancy's birthday party in 1974 shows a smiling Reagan with his arm around Gold. Gold also has a letter seen in his possession from the President in 1984 following a buck injury that finally sidelined Gold's active police work.
 "There's a line in the letter that I really think shows the kind of person he is," Gold says. "It says, 'I believe that God has a plan for each of our lives, and now you have to go out and look for it.'"
 Gold says he's found that plan in Jerome. After his injury, he went back to school, earning a bachelor's degree in Public Service Administration. He came to Jerome in 1983 for a stint as a Community Diversion Coordinator and fell in love with the quiet, little city.
 He ran for sheriff in 1984, but lost by a small margin. He then moved his family back to New York.
 "The negative effect of New York City on my children was incredible," Gold says. "They were being exposed to a tremendous amount of violence."
 When the sheriff's job was up for grabs again in 1988, Gold came back for good.
 "I guess I'm a fighter," Gold says. "I knew I could do the job. I just refused to take no for an answer."
 Gold says he has big plans for his department and will definitely run for the job again in 1992.
 "It's challenging," Gold says. "But it's a good challenge."

HELENA, Mont. — Jerry Miller of Twin Falls fell one match shy of winning his first Northwest Regional title at the Helena Budweiser Open.
Miller lost to Bruce Hamilton of Seattle 2-3 in the championship match at Sleeping Giant Lanes.
Hamilton won $2,000, Miller $1,200. It was Hamilton's sixth Northwest Regional title and second this year.
Miller was the qualifying leader with 6,016 pins in 26 games, 16 pins better than Hamilton.

SAMANTHA, Ala. — Steve Devours, an appropriately named offensive coordinator at Northside High School in Samantha, Ala., has an unusual way to psyche up his troops. He serves them rattlesnake before the team's game against rival Berry, a tradition that he started in the early 1970s.
"When the Berry game rolled around, I went out and killed some rattlesnakes and prepared them for the pregame meal," he told the Tuscaloosa News.
"When I finally convinced them they were eating rattlesnake, they went crazy."
"They were fired up and ready to play. We went out that night and beat Berry, 7-0, and that was the only shutout they suffered all year."
Northside has lost only once to Berry since the reptiles were added to the menu.

Braves make trade in last week of baseball season

HOUSTON — In a trade so surprising because it came so late, the Atlanta Braves tried to boost themselves in the final week by getting pitcher Mike Bielecki and catcher Dawson Berryhill in a deal that sent two young pitchers to the Chicago Cubs.
The move, one of the latest in baseball history, was announced just as the Braves were finishing beating Houston 6-5 in 13 innings.
The victory pulled Atlanta within one-half game of NL West-leading Los Angeles, which played San Francisco at night.
The Cubs received Turk Wendell, one of the best prospects in the Braves' minor league system, and Yorkis Perez.
Bielecki, 13-11 for the Cubs, was scheduled to start Monday night for Chicago. Instead, he joined a team that has been searching for a fifth starter for more than a month.
"I'm not happy, I'm shocked," Bielecki said in St. Louis, where the Cubs beat the Cardinals 5-3.
Bielecki said he thought he might be traded around the All-Star break, "but I didn't think I'd be traded with six days left."

The Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Jim Kelly and the Buffalo Bills made their point about their point-a-minute no-huddle offense on Sunday.
It's most effective when there's no time to think.
Kelly threw for 303 yards and three touchdowns as the Bills came back from a sluggish first half to score 35 points in the final 32 minutes and beat the Chicago Bears 35-20 in a battle of NFL upstarts.
"When the clock is running down on it, it seems to get us going," center Kent Hull said. "It's an offense that seems to thrive under pressure and not do so well when there isn't much."
There wasn't much pressure at the start for the Bills, who had scored 87 points in two home wins, then just 41 in two victories on the road.
In the first 28 minutes they had the ball for just six minutes, had 28 yards on offense and were lucky to be trailing 6-0 — the Bears had two touchdowns called back by penalties and had to settle for Kevin Butler field goals of 28 and 42 yards.
In the last 32 minutes, the Bills had the ball for 19 minutes and rolled up 381 yards and 1:59 left in the half and Buffalo on its own 15.
The ball made the end zone 107 seconds later, the result of a 33-yard strike from Kelly to Al Edwards. That gave the Bills a largely undeserved 7-6 lead, setting them off on a richly deserved offensive explosion that left them 5-0 and dropped Chicago to 4-1.
"We'd done such a good job playing them for the first 30 minutes until the last 30 seconds," Chicago coach Mike Ditka said. "But this is a 60-minute game and you have to play all 60 minutes."
Indeed, the second 30 minutes were drastically different.
The Bills took the kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown — Carwell Gardner's fourth-down recovery of his own fumble from a yard out in the end zone. The drive started with runs of 12, 9 and 19 by Thurman Thomas, who got 90 of his 117 rushing yards after intermission.

"We didn't expect them to run like that," Chicago linebacker Ron Rivera said. "They ended the first half driving the ball and we thought that would be their mode of operation coming out."
Kelly agreed, saying the key was a misdirection play which set Thomas free for those first three runs.
"Thurman opened it up," Kelly said. "We had a couple of running plays we didn't use in the first half. The misdirection was one of them." That made it 14-6.
On the next possession, it became 21-6 on a 2-yard TD pass to Butch Rolle, the third drive set up by Maury Buford's 26-yard punt, was the 10th touchdown in Rolle's last 10 catches. "They only let me in on one other play," Rolle said of the streak, which dates back five years.
Neal Anderson's 2-yard run cut it to 21-13 with 8:45 left in the game. But on the Bills' next play from scrimmage, Kelly found James Lofton for 77 yards and it was 28-13 and just about over.
"The safeties were playing too close," Kelly said. "It was just a matter of getting those guys up and throwing deep."
The more speed — Thomas took the ball in from 11 yards out three minutes later to make it 35-13. Mark Green's 1-yard TD with 40 seconds was just an afterthought for the Bears.
The game was the first back for Bruce Smith, last year's defensive player of the year for Buffalo, who underwent arthroscopic surgery on his left knee July 22. He wasn't officially credited with a tackle, but he had several pressures on Jim Harbaugh, who was 17 of 35 for 203 yards. "I could feel a lot of pressure out there," said Harbaugh, whose 17-yard TD pass to Anderson was called back by offensive interference on James Rouse. The Bears also had Mark Carrier's 43-yard TD with an interception was negated by Tim Ryan's offense.
Smith felt something else. "I feel very sore," he said. "The knee is fine, but I feel sore."

Twins clinch on Sox loss

The Associated Press

TORONTO — The Minnesota Twins did more than finish first in the AL West. They finished first in baseball's history books.
"Anytime a team can accomplish something that's never been done in the history of baseball, you have to be excited about it," general manager Andy MacPhail said Sunday after the Twins became the first club in major-league history to go from last in a division or league one year to first the next.
"We did it in the game's most difficult division. There was no winning by default. To go from last to first in that climate was very difficult and very rewarding."
The Twins failed to wrap up the title earlier in the afternoon, losing 2-1 to Toronto. But when the White Sox fell 2-1 to Seattle, Minnesota won anyway.
Minnesota rebounded from a season in which it went 74-88 and finished in last place. No team had ever gone from worst to first, but the Twins did it in taking their first division championship since winning the World Series in 1987. Atlanta, meanwhile, is trying to do the same thing in the NL West.

MacPhail and the rest of the Twins heard about Chicago's loss while aboard the team bus on a trip to Hamilton, Ontario. The Twins later boarded a flight to begin a series in Chicago on Monday night.
"We really played well after the first couple weeks of the season," Twins manager Tom Kelly said, referring to a 2-9 start. "We got into the lead, we maintained our lead and we increased our lead."
The Twins were still in sixth place, 7 1/2 games back, when they beat Texas on May 28 and to end the Rangers' 14-game winning streak and begin a 22-2 run of their own — including a 15-0 start to June.

Florida State strengthened its hold on the top spot in The Associated Press college football poll on Sunday, while Michigan tumbled to No. 7 and Nebraska set a record for most consecutive rankings.
Florida State (4-0) received 56 of 49 first-place votes and 1,472 points after beating Michigan 51-31 Saturday. That's eight more first-place votes than the Seminoles got last week from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.
The loss to Florida State dropped Michigan (2-1) four spots in the poll.
Miami (3-0) remained second after defeating Tulsa 34-10. The Hurricanes, who visit Florida State on Nov. 16, received two first-place votes and 1,398 points.
Washington (3-0) is third, followed by Tennessee (4-0), Oklahoma (3-0) and Clemson (3-0). All four teams moved up one place as the result of Michigan's loss.

Dodgers top Giants on freak play

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — If the Los Angeles Dodgers go on to win the NL West, it may be as a result of the strangest play of the year.
Los Angeles maintained its one-game lead over Atlanta on Sunday night by scoring two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat San Francisco 3-2. It wasn't your everyday rally, either.
With the Giants holding a 2-1 lead, reliever Dave Righetti (2-7) gave up a leadoff single to Mike Scioscia and Jose Offerman came on as a pinch runner.
Pinch-hitter Stan Javier then singled on a 3-2 pitch, sending Offerman to third on a hit-and-run play. Brett Butler followed with a hard ground to second baseman Robby Thompson, who threw home to get Offerman on a fielder's choice.

Offerman, however, was able to get in a sliding stop, and the runners advanced to second and third.
Mike Sharperson followed and lost control of his bat, sending a weak grounder toward third. The ball and the bat, incredibly, arrived in the infield at the same time. The ball took a short hop and was hit by the bat — again — allowing Javier to score the tying run. Darryl Strawberry then won the game with an RBI single to right-center field and was mobbed by his teammates.

Houston Astros' Craig Biggio is tagged out at third trying to stretch a double into a triple Sunday.

Cashen fires Harrelson in final act as Mets GM

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — In a surprise only by its timing, the New York Mets fired manager Bud Harrelson on Sunday in Frank Cashen's final act as general manager.
Harrelson was informed of his dismissal late Saturday afternoon, and didn't show up at Shea Stadium as the Mets played their final home game of the season. The players were informed shortly before 11 a.m. by Cashen and Al Harazin, who will take over as GM at the end of the season.
One Met front-office official said Harrelson was surprised by the news and did not take it well. Harrelson was offered the chance to meet with players, media and coaches, but declined. He did not answer his phone.
The Mets named third base coach Mike

Harrelson

Cubbage as interim manager, and he is considered a candidate to take over on a full-time basis.
"It's a nice opportunity," Cubbage said. "Yes, I definitely want to be considered for the job and I've made that known. They know what I can do and the decision is based on that rather than seven days."
However, a front-office official said Cubbage is unlikely to get the job.
The Mets said Harrelson, 47, would be offered a position in the organization.
"I hope he will stay with us but he has the option to go elsewhere," Cashen said.

Braves keep pace with LA

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — All the Atlanta Braves know is that they swept a three-game series at the Astrodome. And, that's all they wanted.
Atlanta had to rally to take the first two games of the series and won 6-5 in 13 innings on Sunday to stay one game behind Los Angeles in the NL West.
The Braves allied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat visiting San Francisco 3-2 in a night game.
The Braves blew a 5-0 lead before winning on Brian Hunter's RBI double to left field off Mark Postung (10-11).
The Braves, who have rallied to win 34 times this season, were cruising along until the Astros tied it with a four-run eighth inning.
But the Braves overcame that too, aided by former Houston pitcher Jim Clancy (3-5), who worked the final three innings for the victory.

"You don't expect wild and wooly games in this dome," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "But we got an outstanding job from Clancy and Hunter, crushed the big hit. When you get up by five and then get tied, it's tough to take."
The Braves in the two previous games, allowed the Braves one hit from the seventh through the 12th. Curt Schilling retired the last nine batters he faced before Postung started the 13th by swinging Ron Gant, setting the stage for Hunter.
"It felt great to get the hit today," Hunter said. "Somebody is always picking us up. Ronnie was running and that helped. In my first two at bats I left runners on. This time I tried to hit it hard."

Council down

Richfield

BOISE - Council scored every period to defeat Richfield 28-6 in an eight-man football game played at Borah High School Friday.

Richfield got its touchdown on a 15-yard pass from Mark Whitehead to Sean Wade in the third quarter. Whitehead was 9-of-19 passing for 126 yards. Dan Riley rushed for 50 yards on 12 carries. Dale Anderson patted the defense with 21 tackles that included two quarterback sacks.

Northern Iowa upsets Vandals

MOSCOW (AP) - Brian Mitchell kicked five field goals and Northern Iowa scored 23 unanswered points in the second half to defeat No. 2 Idaho 36-14 Saturday night in a Division I-AA game.

Mitchell, who had his NCAA record-of-27 consecutive kicks broken, was perfect from 34, 21, 22, 20 and 44 yards.

Also, the senior made all three of his extra points to extend that streak to 73 straight.

No. 17 Northern Iowa of the Gateway Conference improved to 3-1, while the Big Sky's Vandals lost their first game in four outings.

The Panthers capitalized on four straight Idaho turnovers at the start of the second half to overcome a 14-13 halftime deficit.

Linebacker William Freoney began the comeback when he intercepted a Doug Neumeister pass and returned it 28 yards to the Vandal 44.

Six plays later, Northern Iowa quarterback Jay Johnson scored on a one-yard plunge to give the Panthers a 20-14 lead.

Following an interception by safety Nelson on Idaho's next possession, the Panthers bogged down on the 5, but Mitchell hit a 22-yard field goal to make it 23-14.

Northern Iowa's defense held off Northern Iowa's offense for the remainder of the game.

Broncos romp over Austin

BOISE (AP) - Quarterback Jeff Mendenhall passed and ran for two touchdowns and one touchdown Saturday night as Boise State coasted to a 38-7 Division I-AA victory over Stephen F. Austin.

It was the fourth straight home victory for Boise State this season, the first since the Broncos' best season in 1975. The Texas team fell to 1-2.

The visitors didn't score until the games final seconds when quarterback Kenny Henderson hit flanker Tim Fields with a 7-yard pass.

Boise State of the Big Sky Conference scored on consecutive possessions in the third period to break open a 14-0 game.

Mendenhall hit split end Mike Wilson with a 40-yard pass and then ran for a touchdown on the 2-yard line, while tailback Chris Thomas scored two plays later to extend the Broncos lead to 21-0.

And on the next possession, Mendenhall completed a 51-yard pass to flanker Sheldon Fordlund to the Stephen F. Austin 6. The junior quarterback scored from the 2 and two plays later for a 28-0 advantage with 5:33 left in the quarter.

Linebacker Eric Escandon then picked off a pass by Lumberjack quarterback Mike Goddard, returning the ball 19 yards for a touchdown to make it 35-0 early in the fourth quarter.

Freshman running back Wade Booker gained 62 yards on 20 carries. Henderson and Goddard completed 12 of 25 passes for 107 yards.

Boise State took a 6-0 lead on a pair of Mike Black field goals, but didn't score its first touchdown until 29 seconds remained in the first half when flanker Kerry Lawyer scored on a 9-yard reverse.

That completed an 80-yard, 12-play drive during which Mendenhall hit four-of-five passes for 39 yards.

Turner TDs run Saints record to 5-0

The Associated Press

Pro football

Bobby Hebert threw two touchdown passes to Floyd Turner as New Orleans (5-0) completed the first perfect September in its 25-year history with a 27-6 win over Atlanta. The Saints have won seven straight over two seasons and eight in nine against the Falcons (2-3).

Rickey Jackson sacked Atlanta's Chris Miller three times at the Superdome and recovered one of two fumbles that led to field goals by Morten Andersen.

Deion Sanders played his second NFL game in eight days. He also got in as a pinch-runner twice for the Braves in Wednesday's doubleheader and stole one base.

Cowboys 21, Giants 16

Troy Aikman threw a 23-yard touchdown to Michael Irvin with 2:13 left and the Cowboys ended a six-game losing streak against New York. Dallas (3-2) moved over .500 for the first time since Jimmy Johnson became coach in 1989.

The Cowboys took a 14-3 lead in the third quarter, let the visiting Giants (2-3) ahead 16-14 on Jeff Hostetler's 19-yard TD pass to a diving Stephen Baker (5:41 left), then rallied and held on as Holt intercepted Hostetler's pass in the Dallas end zone with 1:10 left.

Panthers 31, Buccaneers 3

Barry Sanders scored three touchdowns for the first time in his career and Detroit (4-1) won its fourth straight. It's the best start for the Lions since they won their opening four games in 1980.

Sanders had his third consecutive 100-yard game, rushing for 160 yards in 27 carries. He had touchdowns of 7, 11 and 69 yards — the longest of his career. Tampa Bay, at 0-5 the only winless team in the NFC, gave up two touchdowns in the first 10:14 as it fell to 0-5.

Raiders 12, 49ers 6

Jeff Jaeger kicked four field goals for Los Angeles (3-2), which held off a late charge.

Mike Cofer's 25-yard field goal with 3:54 left pulled the visiting 49ers (2-3) within six points after Charles Haley recovered Steve Smith's fumble. The 49ers got the ball back at their 26 with 2:30 remaining after a punt and moved to the LA 19 before Steve Young threw consecutive incompletions, the second on fourth-and-7 with 1:53 left.

Jerry Rice, who has caught at least one pass in 84 straight games, was without a catch until the first time since Jimmy Johnson became coach in 1989.

Rams 23, Packers 21

Special teams veteran Paul Butcher sparked Los Angeles (2-3), which scored two touchdowns in a 7-second span and took a 20-7 lead.

Visiting Green Bay (1-4) led 7-6 when Butcher, a 5-year veteran who's started just one game, set up the Rams' first touchdown by recovering Allen Rice's fumble at the Packers' 15.

Seahawks 31, Colts 3

Six-foot, 8-inch Dan McGwire became the tallest quarterback in NFL history, but only got to attempt seven passes.

McGwire, a first-round draft pick from San Diego State, did little more than hand off as Seattle (2-3) took a 17-3 halftime lead in the Kingdom. He completed three passes for 27 yards and was intercepted once before Jeff Kemp replaced him in the second half.

Chiefs 14, Chargers 13

Christian Okoye scored on a 1-yard run three plays into the game and Steve DeBerg threw an 11-yard touchdown pass to Robb Thomas for the Chiefs (3-2).

San Diego (0-5) trailed 14-10 and had third-and-goal on the Chiefs' 5 with 10 minutes left. But Neil Smith sacked John Friesz for a 7-yard loss and Friesz lost 7 more yards on a fumble.

Jets 41, Dolphins 23

Chris Burkett blocked a punt by Reggie Roby — the first blocked punt in the NFL this season — and returned it 11 yards for the Jets' second touchdown in a 26-second span just before halftime. It was the first time in 12 years New York blocked a kick and turned it into a score.

New York (2-3) had just taken a 14-10 lead with a 10-play, 62-yard drive by Brad Baxter's 2-yard plunge into the end zone.

Visiting Miami (2-3) trailed 21-13 at halftime. The teams traded field goals in the third quarter and the Jets scored 17 points in the fourth, including Baxter's 2-yard TD run and Eric McMillan's 83-yard interception return for a touchdown.

Cardinals 24, Patriots 10

Tom Tupa, shaking off the stigma of being a career-long backup, passed for a career-high 312 yards and three touchdowns for Phoenix (3-2). The game at Sun Devil Stadium was attended by just 26,043, the smallest ever there for an NFL game.

Jon Vaughn inherited the job in the preseason when Tim Rosenbush went out with a knee injury. He threw a 17-yard TD pass to Ernie Jones and a 15-yarder to Johnny Johnson in both in the second quarter — and connected with Ricky Proehl on a 62-yard scoring pass play in the fourth.

Jon Vaughn, a rookie running back, scored on a 99-yard kickoff return for the Patriots (2-3).

Broncos 13, Vikings 6

Gaston Green ran for 158 yards for Denver (4-1) and John Elway scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 17-yard, third-and-8 draw play late in the third quarter.

Minnesota (2-3) drove to Denver's 13 with 43 seconds remaining, but Ricky Gannon's fourth-and-3 pass was dropped by a wide-open Hassan Jones at the 5.

Faul Reveiz's longest field goal as a Viking, a 49-yarder, gave Minnesota a 3-0 lead.

Treadwell tied the score on a 37-yarder with 12 seconds left in the half, but Reveiz added a 25-yard field goal at the start of the second half.

Hale Irwin drives in a birdie putt on the 9th green during his Ryder Cup match against Bernard Langer Sunday.

Missed putt hands U.S. Ryder Cup title

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — The United States broke Europe's six-year Ryder Cup reign in dramatic fashion Sunday, winning the title when Germany's Bernhard Langer missed a 5-foot putt on the final stroke of the final hole.

The miss allowed Hale Irwin, playing against Langer in the 11th and final head-to-head matchup, to take a half-point and give the Americans a 14½-13½ victory.

After three days of play, the Ryder Cup came down to the final green. Langer's putt went right of the cup and the Americans jumped for joy, hugging and waving American flags as they congratulated each other. The crowd surrounding the green began chanting "USA, USA!"

After 10 matches Sunday over the windswept dunes and marshes of the Ocean Course, the Americans led 14-13 and needed only a tie to win the cup.

The Europeans needed to win the final match to gain a 14-14 tie and retain the cup, just as they did two years ago at The Belfry in England.

The American victories were gained by Paul Azinger in a critical, 1-up decision over Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain; Corey Pavin 2 and 1 over Steve Richardson of England; Chip Beck, with a sand shot for an eagle in a 3 and 1 decision over Masters champion Ian Woosnam of Wales; Fred Couples 3 and 2 over Sam Torrance of Scotland; and Lanny Wadkins 3 and 2 over Mark James of England.

missing an 8-footer, and Langer got up and down with a 6-foot putt that won the hole with a par.

It tied the match and gave Langer a chance to keep the cup if he could win the final hole.

And he had a chance. Irwin was short in two, then chipped poorly, leaving himself a 20-footer for par.

Langer, meanwhile, played two shots to just off the green, then went 5 feet past the hole. When Irwin missed his long putt, Langer — and Europe — needed the 5-footer to retain the cup.

But, with his peculiar putting grip of the right hand gripping both the putter and his left forearm, he missed.

The two teams entered the final singles matches tied 8-8.

Twelve matches were scheduled, but American Steve Pate, injured in an automobile accident on Wednesday, was unable to compete. Under a prior agreement, Pate and David Gilford of England were deemed to have played to a tie and each team was awarded one-half point.

The American victories were gained by Paul Azinger in a critical, 1-up decision over Jose Maria Olazabal of Spain; Corey Pavin 2 and 1 over Steve Richardson of England; Chip Beck, with a sand shot for an eagle in a 3 and 1 decision over Masters champion Ian Woosnam of Wales; Fred Couples 3 and 2 over Sam Torrance of Scotland; and Lanny Wadkins 3 and 2 over Mark James of England.

Mariners dash White Sox' AL West hopes

CHICAGO (AP) — Randy Johnson pitched the Seattle Mariners past Chicago 2-1, eliminating the White Sox from the AL West race.

Minnesota, which lost in Toronto 2-1 earlier in the afternoon, clinched the title when Johnson (13-10) outdueted Charlie Hough.

Johnson, 0-2 in his last six starts, gave up four hits and struck out 10 in 7 2-3 innings. Bill Swift got the last two outs for his 15th save.

Hough (9-9) lost despite giving up only two singles in eight innings.

American League

Brewers 5, Red Sox 4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Boston Red Sox blew it again, falling to Milwaukee for their fourth straight loss and fading to 4½ games behind AL East-leading Toronto.

Orioles 7, Tigers 4

DETROIT (AP) — Hot-hitting Cal Ripken homered twice and drove in four more runs as the Baltimore Orioles beat Detroit 7-4, eliminating the Tigers from AL East contention.

Royals 8, Angels 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rookie Tim Lincecum hit his first career grand slam and Kevin Appier won his career-high 13th game, leading the Kansas City Royals over the California Angels.

Indians 5, Yankees 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Ed Taubensee had three hits and his first three major-league RBIs and Eric King won for the first time in his last nine starts as the Cleveland Indians beat the New York Yankees.

King (6-1), who hadn't won since Aug. 5, gave up six hits in seven innings.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Ricky Henderson went 5-for-3 and drove in four runs and Jose Canseco got four hits and drove in four runs as the Oakland Athletics routed the Texas Rangers.

The Athletics led 12-1 after three innings and 18-3 after the fifth.

Viola ends losing streak as Mets win for new manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Only hours after Bud Harrelson was fired as manager, New York Mets Philadelphia 4-3 under interim manager Mike Cubbage. The Mets announced Harrelson's dismissal at a morning news conference in a move that came only as a surprise by its timing.

The Mets were 74-80 under Harrelson this year, heading for their worst finish since 1983.

Frank Viola (13-15) ended a seven-game losing streak and Keith

Pirates 6, Expos 3

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Barry Bonds and Curtis Wilkerson hit solo homers and Red Sox won for the first time since July 14 as Pittsburgh beat Montreal.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe overcame wildness to win for the fourth time in five decisions and Ryne Sandberg drove in two runs as Chicago defeated St. Louis. The victory kept the Cardinals from clinching second place in the NL East. St. Louis already has clinched a tie.

Reds 8, Padres 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Paul O'Neill's first sacrifice fly of the season tied the score in the sixth and Chris Sabo scored Cincinnati's first run in San Diego. Shortstop Craig Shipley's fielding error set up Cincinnati's four unearned runs in the sixth off Ricky Bones (4-6).

Earnhardt victory ends Gant's streak

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Harry Gant's magic ended nine laps from the end of Sunday's Tyson Holly Farms 400 when Dale Earnhardt darted into the lead and went on to end Gant's four-race winning streak.

Gant dominated the 400-lap event, leading 350 laps and appearing on the way to a modern-record fifth NASCAR Winston Cup win in a row until a broken brake lining opened the way for series leader Earnhardt.

Gant came out of the final pit stop, on lap 358, holding the lead and seemingly in command. But Earnhardt got past Morgan Shepherd to take second place in the pits, then went after Gant on the track.

Keiser troubles should have been aired sooner

The Idaho Board of Education may have built an airtight case for the dismissal of Boise State University President John Keiser, but it almost forgot to present the evidence where it mattered the most — in the court of public opinion.

Three days after giving Keiser a resignation-or-be-fired ultimatum, the board got around to explaining the reasons to the people who paid his $100,000-a-year state salary. Karl Shurtliff, the board's vice president, presented an 11-point justification of the firing at a press conference Sept. 23.

By the board's account, Keiser frequently failed to seek board approval for his actions. Yet one wonders whether the BSU president's defiance of the board would have gone on so long had his transgressions been fully disclosed at the time they happened.

The board apparently has periodically called Keiser on the carpet for exceeding his authority. But because the criticism took place in closed sessions, the degree of board dissatisfaction with his performance wasn't fully known.

For example, the board decided at its June meeting in Moscow to give Keiser a raise. By withholding the raise, the board might have given the public a clue that Keiser's job was less than secure.

Because there was no advance warning, Boise State students were shocked Sept. 20 when the board voted 6-1, with board President Colleen Mahoney abstaining, to remove Keiser from the president's office. (Because he has tenure as a history professor, he has the option of remaining at BSU.)

Board members realized over the weekend that they needed to give a fuller explanation than simply that they had lost confidence in Keiser.

The Sept. 23 press conference was important for two reasons: to confirm that the dismissal wasn't prompted by allegations of a personal or criminal nature, and to assure the people of Boise that their hometown university will continue to prosper without Keiser at the helm.

Based on what is known, the board was justified in firing Keiser. But the inevitable backlash from BSU partisans could have been diminished had the board been less secretive about its earlier scrums with Keiser.

A few more suggestions for 'Strong Start' program

In his "Strong Start" education reform proposal announced last week, Gov. Cecil Andrus chose the right themes. As in so many things, the genius will be in the details.

Andrus' "Five Keys to Excellence" are consistent with the best thinking about how education must change to meet 21st century needs. He would increase the power of teachers and parents to make policy, reach out to children before they come to school, improve access to computers, provide before and after school programs, and launch a series of model schools of the future.

We commend the governor for his initiative and direction. But before the proposal becomes law, here are some suggestions:

Andrus talks about integrating social services into the schools and stresses the need for a breakfast program. That's fine, but Andrus apparently does not address the greatest need, which is to help parents prepare their children for learning.

Parents who know how to do so can increase a child's IQ by 15 to 30 percent. Schools need outreach programs for parents of preschoolers, backed up by information in the mass media.

Access to computers would be terrific, with one computer for every three children the minimum. Computers can teach children in ways that are highly effective and efficient.

But the cost for computers for the entire school system would be $163 million.

Andrus wants to help children of working parents take advantage of time before and after school. The danger here is that parents will shift even more responsibility to the school and take even less themselves.

Parents are "in school" with their children. They need to be helped, trained and required to help their children succeed.

Idaho counties need guidelines for bailiffs

Allegations of misconduct during the murder trial of Mitchell Odiaga show the need for stricter standards for court bailiffs.

That trial — at an estimated cost of $200,000 — was one of the most expensive in Idaho history.

Yet one person could undo it all.

The same thing could happen again here in Idaho. No county has specific rules for bailiffs.

Fortunately, Ada County intends to have a code in place by the end of the year. State court officials also are considering setting guidelines and employment standards for bailiffs.

Every county should do likewise.

Taxpayers cannot afford to have expensive trials negated by bailiffs or others who are supposed to uphold and enforce the law.

For now, bailiffs operate under generally accepted practices. But a jury tampering inquiry in Blaine County revealed potential weaknesses in the system.

A jury-tampering inquiry did not conclude that there was misconduct by a Blaine County bailiff, who has resigned from his job.

And a court won't decide until next month whether his actions jeopardized Odiaga's convictions on second-degree murder. But merely raising the allegations has shown what could happen when a jury is sequestered during a long trial.

Statewide standards are needed to guide Idaho counties. Then counties should adopt their own standards for bailiffs that meet or exceed those guidelines.

Fallout from Keiser could be minimal

The short-lived furor over the firing of John Keiser as president of Boise State University shows how quickly most people lose interest and move on to something else.

Keiser was fired Sept. 20 in what came as a surprise to most students, faculty members and local civic leaders. But it should have come as no surprise to those who closely watch the Board of Education. Hints have been dropped since early summer that Keiser was in trouble, and at least one board member says the president was on thin ice long before that.

After an eventful weekend of rallies, protests and marches on behalf of Keiser, the controversy quickly ground to a halt.

The governor's office logged about 700 telephone calls the Friday afternoon Keiser was terminated and the following Monday. On Tuesday, there were about 100 calls, still running strongly in support of the fired president.

Wednesday's log was 20-6 in favor of Keiser, and by Thursday the calls had fallen off to almost nothing.

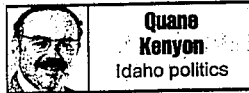

A lot of Boise people — including some of the businessmen who have contributed millions of dollars to the school during Keiser's tenure — pressed both the board to reconsider and Gov. Cecil Andrus to intervene.

Neither was likely to happen.

Seven of the eight members of the board are appointed by the governor to six-year terms. The state public schools superintendent is a voting member of the board, and the incumbent Jerry Evans is the only board member to vote against firing Keiser.

Like other boards in Idaho, the positions are part-time. They don't pay much — $30 per day plus expenses. Members of the Board of Education meet about 10 times per year, usually for two or three days.

But a lot of homework is required so most of the appointees in recent years have been businessmen, doctors, lawyers. There's been an attempt at geographical balance, although the appointments aren't specifically made to represent the four-year college and universities.

Quane Kenyon
Idaho politics

While some states allow for students to serve on education boards, Idaho has no such provision. Most recent appointments have been people over the age of 40, and Andrus says that's because few people who are not well-established in their business or career have the time, or the experience, for board business.

The system was designed to shield board members from direct political pressure. Since they are appointed by the governor and confirmed by the legislature, they have no direct influence on the process — except when the person who is being appointed comes up for re-election.

That's Andrus' and the governor already has announced he won't run again when his term ends in 1992.

Only one board member's term ends next year. That's Gary Fay, the Twin Falls insurance man and one of those who voted to remove Keiser. Andrus has given no indication whether he will reappoint Fay.

Under exceptions to Idaho's Open Meeting Law, the board was perfectly within its rights to hold a closed-door session to discuss Keiser, then come out into open meeting and conduct the actual dismissal vote without explaining it.

Evans objected to the board's failure to confront Keiser face-to-face with his dismissal.

Only after prodding from the governor, and after enduring a storm of criticism that included an organized effort among Boise State students to have everyone call board members at work and at home to complain, did the board explain why it fired Keiser.

It appeared to be a public relations disaster, but board members say they just didn't want to get into a public battle over Keiser's perceived problems.

Board Vice President Karl Shurtliff, a Boise lawyer, said members realized they would take a lot of heat but tried to avoid making statements about Keiser that later might be used against the state in a lawsuit. "That's why we sat there like a big bunch of dummies and didn't say anything," he said.

Shurtliff maintains Keiser has been in trouble "forever" with past boards, but they didn't do anything about it. "This is a different board," he said.

Though the board has indicated it is willing to pay Keiser's $100,000-a-year salary through June, the firing may be headed for the courts.

Besides the unhappiness of board members in Keiser's aggressive operating style, litigation also was against him continuing too long.

Much of higher education operates under the unwritten but time-honored "10-year" rule. It holds that after 10 years, a university president loses the enthusiasm and new ideas needed to lead a major school while seeing a decade of decisions erode his support.

Keiser, in his 14th year at Boise State, had a longer tenure than any university president since World War II. University of Idaho kept a couple of presidents for 12 years, but no one matched Keiser's service.

Under the 10-year rule, Keiser's time was running out anyway.

Reporting on Baby X has been misleading

I have been the chief criminal investigator for the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office for the past four years. As such I supervise all major investigations in the department.

I have over 10 years of law enforcement experience in Idaho and 12 years law enforcement experience in the military. I have had extensive training in criminal investigation, and I attempt to prove the crime by gathering facts — proof that certain things did or did not take place.

As I read the different articles in the paper on the Baby X case, I find several statements that appear to be speculation and not based on facts. I would like to take this opportunity to clarify some of the misunderstanding surrounding the facts of the Baby X case.

First, the case is a death investigation, not a homicide, murder or ritualistic killing. I know of no facts that prove that a homicide, murder or ritualistic killing took place.

The many leads in the case, however, follow a variety of different directions.

The autopsy report stated that the cause of death was indeterminate, but indicated that the left lung had severe bronchopulmonary dysplasia that could have caused the death a short time after birth.

Lt. Randall W. White
Reader comment

Second, I find no proof that the baby died a "horrible death," "suffered, was tortured," or that her "life ended brutally." Again, the autopsy report stated that the body was burned after death and that certain extremities were removed after burning. It also stated that there was some post-mortem predator activity.

Third, the articles indicated that the Minidoka County Sheriff's Office has not had "outside assistance" and has not aggressively investigated this case. To date, police officers from the cities of Salt Lake City, Twin Falls, Blackfoot and Rupert; deputies from the counties of Butte, Gooding and San Bernardino, Calif.; officers from the Idaho State Police, Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, Federal Bureau of Investigation and now the Idaho Attorney General's office have been involved in the investigation for a total of 22 officers from outside agencies.

The case file contains 702 statements, reports; investigative notes and other documents; 157 photographs, six cassette tapes, two video tapes and hundreds of man hours that have been spent on the case.

Last, the homicide-murder-ritualistic theory has been thoroughly explored in the papers, but let me propose another theory. I think it is also possible that a very young teenage girl could have given birth to the baby, the baby could have died a short time after birth, and the baby could have been taken to the landfill and left there.

As you read, this is one speculation — or is it? To the mother of Baby X, I know that the things you find in the paper must hurt you very deeply. You want your baby to have a decent burial and put the grief and pain behind you.

I plead with you, please call me and let me help you put an end to the nightmare. You can only you, can bring this case to an end and stop the hurt. Let me help you put your baby girl to rest.

Please call me on the non-recorded line, 436-6957, during the day. I will be the only person to answer that line.

Gee, Dirk, DOE plans are public

According to Dirk Kempthorne, he supports moving all nuclear weapons plants to Idaho but he can't comment on the ramifications of the specifics because he is without the opportunity to receive classified briefings. (Times-News, Sept. 18)

Dirk chooses not to explain why Jim McClure and he are working for General Atomics. Dirk chooses to justify counteracting Idaho for front-line duty by falsely accusing The Times-News of being weak on Saddam Hussein and the Russians.

Gee, Dirk, we've had public Department of Energy documents on the ramifications of the DOE's plan to rebury plutonium particles in trenches in Idaho for years. They are not classified documents but are part of the deal for the New Production Reactor that you blindly support. Details. Details.

Just how many billions of deadly plutonium particles are you willing to bury over our aquifer, Dirk? I bet you won't answer that question.

The folks I know in the Magic Valley don't trust the Russians and do believe in "peace through strength," but what does that have to do with Idaho getting every nuclear weapons plant shoved down our throats?

The DOE dictators just rolled over the governor's efforts to save Idaho from becoming the radioactive dump of the world. It's good to know where you stand, even if it's under the foot of a giant. Your big money friends from General Atomics think of nuclear waste in Idaho like Kruschev threatening Americans... "We will bury you."

Dirk, are the families in Idaho less important than the families in Colorado? Why don't you stand up for Idaho instead of standing up for General Atomics and the DOE?

Lack of housing causes problems

To Mr. Von Bergen:
Excuse me, but I am not a "rowdie." I am a single mother of one. I work full time at a job I paid money to go to school and learn how to do.

You see, the problem is, I can't make it on my own. I and my son are living with my parents, which is hard on both of us. All because there is no housing in this area. No, I cannot afford $375 a month for a two-bedroom apartment, and I won't live in a dive. The waiting list for low-income housing is up to two years. If you're lucky, you'll get in. In the meantime, we have people living in storage units, round towns, old trailers and cars. All because people freak when someone in this town betters it by adding to the growth of the area.

Sure, I could get on welfare assistance and get a place of my own, but that costs you too. You can't have it both ways. And sure, I think adding some more houses in that area would be great.

Take a drive and look at all the empty brand-new homes. Who will buy them? Not me! And certainly not the other families in my situation!

I want to pay my own way. But I don't want to live at home all my life. So for me, I'm not sure if it's worse or my parents. Maybe more should get on welfare. Maybe raising taxes is what it will take to see the housing problem change.

It's your choice. It sounds like the cards are in your hand!

World awaits reaction to Rouge's return

Knigh-Ridder News Service

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — It is the $64,000 question these days in the capital, the source of hot debate among intellectuals and obvious concern by government officials:

What will the people do when the Khmer Rouge come back to town?

Hard as it is to believe, two close associates of Khmer Rouge leader Pol Pot — Khieu Samphan and Son Sann — presumably will fish at least a temporary office here in November with the return of the Supreme National Council, a 12-member interim body headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk on which the Khmer Rouge hold two seats.

Samphan, former head of Pol Pot's state presidium, and Sann, former defense minister and head of the secret police, will be the first Khmer Rouge officials to set foot in the capital since the Vietnamese toppled their fanatical communist regime in January 1979.

More than a million people are thought to have perished during their four years in power. Security around them will undoubtedly be extremely tight in an atmosphere in which it is difficult to gauge what kind of reaction they are likely to provoke.

Must I forgive the Khmer Rouge because I am a Buddhist, Lady Lyda Sikowath, Sihanouk's cousin and a member of the royal family, said with a sense of deep ambivalence in a recent interview. "But the picture of death of my husband is always in my eyes."

A conflict remains between Lady Sikowath the Buddhist and Lady

Sikowath the wife. Can she really forgive them? "I don't know," she said, pausing to reflect. "I don't know if I can forgive them or not."

Ngon Vanna Ra, a homemaker who lost her father and three sisters to the Khmer Rouge, responded typically when asked how she would react.

"I have no feelings of revenge," she said. "It was not the leaders who killed my family, I don't know who the killer is. We are simple people. We want only peace and security. We don't want Pol Pot to return to power — ever. But we feel no feelings of revenge."

Bun Thieun, a Cambodian working as a clerk for a Western aid organization, was much less forgiving.

"If they are in Phnom Penh and keep silent, it will be OK for them," he said.

"But if there is an election and they go out and say, 'Vote for Pol Pot,' they will be killed by the people. Even though they won't have guns, they will kill them with stones."

"A Buddhist is a Buddhist," he said, "but a Pol Pot guerrilla is a Pol Pot guerrilla. Even though we are Buddhists, the blood cannot be forgotten. Blood must be repaid by blood."

State Department officials in Washington quoted sources last month as saying Pol Pot himself had traveled to Pattaya, Thailand, to supervise his negotiators when the SNC met there in late June.

Counted among the world's most odious criminal leaders, Pol Pot is thought to have been in seclusion in Thailand near the Cambodian border.

Samphan and Sann, the Khmer Rouge representatives on the SNC, are Paris-educated intellectuals who served on Pol Pot's central committee during the Khmer Rouge reign of terror.

An honest and modest man when he was Sihanouk's secretary of state for commerce in the early 1960s, Samphan later became known for his subservience to Pol Pot.

Sann, a philosophy graduate from the Sorbonne and a member of Pol Pot's original Paris clique, became a noted battlefield tactician and was an architect of the Khmer Rouge military victory in 1975.

3,000 rally in support of U.S. base

OLONGAPO, Philippines (AP) — About 3,000 residents of this city outside the Subic Bay naval base demonstrated on Sunday, denouncing the senators who voted to close the U.S.-run installation.

The crowd, which included city officials, businessmen and prostitutes, gathered in the rain outside the main gate of the giant American base to support calls for a popular referendum on the base's future.

On Sept. 16, the Senate voted 12-11 to reject a new agreement under which the United States would give up its other major Philippine installation, Clark Air Base, but keep Subic for 10 more years in return for $203 million a year.

This city of 300,000 people, about 50 miles west of Manila, depends almost exclusively on the base for its economic livelihood.

Mayor Richard Gordon addressed the rally, and between naming each of the 12 senators, asked the crowd, "What do you want to do?"

"Burn him at the stake," the crowd shouted back. "They will deprive us of our livelihood. Let us bury them," Gordon said.

President Corason Aquino announced plans for a national referendum immediately following the Senate vote.

Last Thursday, Gordon and several other politicians and businessmen began a drive to get the 3.5 million signatures necessary to bring the referendum to a vote. More than 45,000 Filipinos work at the base and thousands more depend indirectly on spending by the Americans for their livelihood.

Imelda wants to return home with Marcos' body

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government on Sunday extended Imelda Marcos' entry permit after the former first lady threatened to return from the United States with the body of her late husband if the extension were not granted.

A U.S. order preventing the body of ousted President Ferdinand Marcos from being flown from Hawaii to the Philippines expires on Monday.

Mrs. Marcos said Saturday that she would try to return with her husband's remains on a private plane before her entry permit expires. Presidential Executive Order 12626, which allows the body to be flown to Hawaii, expires on Sept. 30. Mrs. Marcos said she plans to go back about the 19th or 20th of October, instead of the 19th, to get the body from Honolulu.

It is not immediately clear if she will return with her husband's body. She said she would try to return with her husband's body on a private plane before her entry permit expires.

Franklin Drilon said he will extend Mrs. Marcos' entry permit for 30 days. Drilon said he would extend the body of the former president if she returned with it. He said the government would suspend the landing rights of any carrier that tried to fly the body from Hawaii, where Marcos died on Sept. 6, 1986.

Douglas MacArthur fulfilled his "I shall return" vow during World War II. Japan held the Philippines at the time.

Mrs. Marcos, who has been living in New York, was in Hawaii over the weekend for ceremonies marking the second anniversary of her husband's death.

Marcos and his family fled their homeland after the February 1986 "people power revolution" toppled his 20-year-old administration and propelled Mrs. Aquino into office.

Showdown looms over new value-added tax

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The African National Congress and its allies prepared to launch nationwide demonstrations against a new tax taking effect Monday that they say will burden impoverished blacks.

ANC leader Nelson Mandela and President F.W. de Klerk met late into Saturday night and the government announced Sunday that several additional foods would be exempt from the new value-added tax, or VAT.

But Mandela said the concession was inadequate. At a news conference Sunday, the ANC leader warned of renewed confrontation between the government and anti-apartheid groups only two weeks after they signed a peace treaty that has improved strained relations.

The ANC and the allied Congress of South African Trade Unions have scheduled 15 demonstrations nationwide on Monday, with strikes and other forms of protest to follow. "We are preparing for a campaign of sustained mass action," said Jay Naidoo, general secretary of the congress, the country's largest labor federation.

"The dispute appears to be more about politics than economics."

Anti-apartheid leader, 11 blacks killed in continued fighting

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More fighting between two black workers' unions in Johannesburg killed 11 blacks on Sunday, including an anti-apartheid leader.

The General Mining Corp., owners of the mine, said the fighting erupted at a workers' hostel Saturday night between different ethnic groups. It said the violence was not related to the recent strike that had caused earlier problems have political overtones between black factions.

The government argues VAT is a fairer tax, it will be more difficult to evade, and it will help boost a sagging economy.

In theory, the ANC and the trade unions agree. "On principle, we have nothing against VAT," said Mandela. "We believe it is a better tax than GST (general sales tax)."

The government announced Sunday that it would provide a six-month exemption for several additional foods, including rice, corn, beans, and milk. Corn meal and brown bread have been given permanent exemptions.

Opponents crash talks, want Mobutu ousted

KINSHASA, Zaire — Zaire edged toward political chaos Sunday as 20 trade opponents of President Mobutu Sese Seko forced their way into his marble palace to disrupt talks aimed at forming a new government.

The group told reporters it would kill opposition leaders who agreed to form a coalition government that would allow Mobutu to remain even as a figurehead.

The scene demonstrated Mobutu's loss of control since unpaid soldiers mutinied a week ago, pillaging Kinshasa and other cities in this sprawling Central African country of 30 million people.

France and Belgium sent 1,750 troops to evacuate foreigners, and the soldiers' presence helped quell the rioting in the former Belgian colony. But both Paris and Brussels have demanded Mobutu end 26 years of dictatorial rule and all-party democracy.

The unrest in Zaire comes amid a wave of strikes, riots and protests that have swept Africa in the past 18 months. So far, 16 one-party states have been forced to legalize political parties.

Mobutu's presidential guard reacted with confusion as the band of minor opposition figures pushed their way into the president's office grounds on Sunday. A week ago they would have been shot.

They threatened to kill opposition leaders, including Etienne Tshisekedi, the 58-year-old leader of the Union for Democracy and Social Progress. He was widely expected to be named prime minister in the so-called government of national crisis that Mobutu has agreed to form.

Rebel leader Savimbi returns to Angola after 16 years of war

LUANDA, Angola (AP) — Rebel leader Jonas Savimbi was greeted by thousands of supporters when he returned to the capital on Sunday for the first time after 16 years of civil war against the nation's leftist leaders.

"We're going to make Luanda the capital of all Angolans," Savimbi said to a crowd of about 60,000 people packed into downtown Independence Square.

He has returned to lead his movement's political campaign for elections scheduled for next year.

His group, the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, and the ruling Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola agreed to the elections in a peace pact reached on May 31.

The war, one of Africa's longest and bloodiest conflicts, cost an estimated 500,000 lives.

"Savimbi has already won" zined supporters, who waved scarves and green rebel flags along roads leading into the city from Luanda's airport.

After political somersault, Labor challenging Tories for power

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — The Labor Party opened its annual conference Sunday in a position for the first time in a decade to threaten the Conservatives' hold on power.

"We can demonstrate this week that we are fit to serve and ready to govern," declared Labor leader Neil Kinnock, 49, who has discarded many of the party's leftist tenets that turned voters to the Tories the last three elections.

The weeklong gathering in this southern England resort is the last before the next general election, which must be held by July. If Labor loses, Kinnock is unlikely to survive as party leader, many analysts believe.

But Kinnock, who has straggled the party toward the center since taking over seven years ago, is a veteran at coping with political diversity: a party 12 years out of power.

personal ratings; attacks from Britain's mostly right-wing tabloid national newspapers; denunciations from Labor's angry leftists.

"The last Labor government was derailed in 1979 and the Tories easily won the next two elections. But now opinion polls show the two big parties neck and neck, and the campaign for the parliamentary elections has begun in all but name."

Rightists attack dozen refugee centers in Germany

The Associated Press

BERLIN — Hundreds of protesters marching to show support for foreigners clashed with police Sunday during a weekend in which extreme rightists attacked refugee shelters in more than a dozen German towns.

Meanwhile, state Interior Minister Rudolf Krause, responsible for security in the new eastern state of Saxony, resigned late Sunday.

The state has been one of the hardest hit by rightist attacks on foreigners over the past weeks and Krause had been accused in media reports of not doing enough to halt the violence.

However, Krause was also facing allegations that he once worked for the former East German secret police.

An Interior Ministry spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Krause's resignation but declined to provide further details.

President Richard von Weizsäcker said he would visit a home for asylum-seekers this week to show his concern over the rising violence aimed at foreigners in both the prosperous west and the economically depressed east.

For nearly two weeks, extreme rightists have been attacking shelters for asylum-seekers across the country. Most of the violence has involved the throwing of stones and firebombs at the shelters, but some foreigners also have been beaten.

Protesters from all parties have denounced the violence, which has begun appearing in western Germany. The attacks began in former East Germany, where rightists say foreigners are taking scarce jobs when the transition to a market economy has left many eastern Germans out of work.

Police said more than a dozen refugee centers across the country were attacked Saturday and Sunday.

More than 3,000 people, most of them young leftists, clashed with police Sunday after demonstrating against rightist attacks in Hoyerswerda, an eastern German town that has been the center of the worst violence.

Police said that about 60 cars were damaged by demonstrators throwing stones, and firebombs, and that at least 19 people were arrested. Police used water cannon to drench the protesters after they refused to disperse.

ZDF television reported in its evening newscast that one of its reporters was beaten up. The report did not say how serious the reporter was injured or who was responsible for the attack.

Demonstrators carried banners saying, "Stop Neo-Nazis" and "Down with Racism and Nazi Terror."

Yugoslav fighting resumes

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fighting flared again Sunday in several parts of battle-scarred Croatia, and the federal army surrendered more barracks' holdings by militias of the separatist republic.

The army has been beset by increasing morale problems and mass desertions as the Croatian campaign drags on. This situation could have contributed to a move by the general to regroup in parts of Croatia where there are large concentrations of ethnic Serbs who support the Serb-dominated army.

In other developments, Sijme Mesic, the "head" of Yugoslavia's collective presidency, said after consultations in New York with Javier Perez de Cuellar that the U.N. secretary general had offered to negotiate a peaceful end to the crisis.

A referendum on the independence of Kosovo province was almost complete, with nearly all of the Serb-ruled territory's ethnic Albanian majority expected to opt for sovereignty. The voting in Kosovo ended late Saturday, but Albanians born in Kosovo and now living elsewhere continued voting in other Yugoslav towns and abroad.

Tensions were high in Kosovo, with violence, where at least 100 people have died over the past two years in clashes with Serbian police. But no major incidents were reported after the arrests Saturday of dozens of referendum organizers and participants.

In Croatia, sporadic violence continued despite a cease-fire signed last week by Croatian and army leaders. At least six people were reportedly killed in fighting overnight and Sunday.

The Croatian Defense Ministry said federal warplanes dropped three bombs on a suburb of the Dalmatian port of Sibenik, damaging buildings in the first air attack in a week.

The army denied it had bombed Sibenik.

Shamir seems flexible on talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on Sunday did not rule out compromise in proposed Arab-Israeli peace talks, but he said Israel would not stop building settlements in the occupied lands.

Shamir's comments came a day after the Palestinian parliament-in-exile said it will support the U.S.-brokered talks, expected to take place next month.

But the Palestine National Council also called for a halt to settlement building and said the PLO has the right to choose participants in the peace talks, aimed in part at securing a Palestinian homeland. Israel has steadfastly rejected these two points.

In an interview with Israeli army radio, Shamir said freezing settlements before negotiations would only be a "precondition."

Mourners put flowers where Dmitri Komar, Vladimir Usov and Ilya Krichevsky were killed.

Russian official decries low turnout at memorial for dead

MOSCOW (AP) — About a thousand mourners attended a memorial service Sunday for the three victims of the failed August coup, vowing never to forget their fallen comrades.

But the enthusiasm of the barricade seemed to be gone, and some marchers said little had changed in the 40 days since the three men died defending the Russian Parliament. Some mourners said they believed the Communist Party was still ruling the country despite President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's suspension of its activities following the Aug. 18-21 coup.

The low attendance at the service surprised Russian Federation Vice President Alexander Rutskoi. "Today not enough people have come, especially considering the events," he said.

The somber ceremony was held at the newly named Freedom Square, just a few hundred yards from the sprawling Russian Parliament building.

On the night of Aug. 20, army tanks and armored personnel carriers attempted to force their way through an underpass beneath the square to Parliament, headquarters of Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin and the democratic opposition to the hardline Communist leading the coup.

The underground motorway was barricaded and guarded by demonstrators.

Three died: Dmitri Komar, 23, a fork-lift operator, and Vladimir Usov, 37, an accountant, were crushed by an armored vehicle; Ilya Krichevsky, 28, an architect, was shot by a soldier. Gorbachev later awarded them the title "Hero of the Soviet Union," the country's highest honor.

Sunday's crowd was a mix of elderly people wearing World War II medals, legislators with Russian Parliament lapel pins, Russian Orthodox priests in long black robes and young men in fatigues bearing the tri-color armbands of Parliament defenders.

Efforts to end Georgian clash stall

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — An explosion rocked Georgia's broadcasting center Sunday while it was occupied by opponents of President Zviad Gamsakhurdia, and violence in a breakaway region of the republic reportedly left two dead.

The evening blast injured at least one person and blew out most of the windows in the government building. Opposition leader Tengiz Segua called it a "provocation" by Gamsakhurdia's forces. Few details were immediately available.

The explosion came after a day of relative calm in the capital of Tbilisi, and as the government and opposition leaders were meeting in the Justice Ministry to try to establish an agenda for free talks.

Elsewhere in the Soviet Union, tens of thousands of people marched in a solemn 50th-anniversary commemoration of the Nazi massacre of Jews at the Babi Yar ravine in the Ukraine. In the Central Asian republic of Tadjikistan, the embattled Communist government called a special session of parliament as an estimated 10,000 people demonstrated in the rain outside.

In the wake of the August coup, increasing unrest has flared in the republics with the collapse of central authority.

One rebel Georgian National Guardsman was slightly wounded in a clash overnight outside the television center, which was occupied by the opposition last Sunday, the Tass news agency reported.

Gunshots were heard in other parts of Tbilisi on Saturday night and Sunday morning, but there were no other reports of injuries.

Raw power remains a part of Romania

By Roland Prinz
The Associated Press

Analysis

BUCHAREST, Romania — The miners' rampage and its brutal suppression are painful reminders that Romania faces years of economic, political and moral crisis caused by brutal Communist rule and a turbulent history.

No Communist regime in the Soviet bloc was as cruel and oppressive as that of the late dictator Nicolae Ceausescu and his predecessors, and no other eastern European nation has seen as much bloodshed and violence in casting off its Stalinist past.

More importantly, in no other former Communist country is there such an atmosphere of distrust as in Romania, whose fatalistic, superstitious people became independent only 110 years ago.

Since Ottoman Turkish rule ended in the last century, Romanian independence has been marred by political strife, labor unrest, economic backwardness and ethnic tensions, all of which have favored authoritarian rule over democracy.

"I have said it before: It will take 20 years for Romania to learn democracy," said Silviu Brucan, a senior Communist who became a critic of Ceausescu's regime.

The 4 million-strong Communist Party — the largest in eastern Europe as a proportion of the population — officially disbanded. But Romanian intellectuals say much of the old communist power structure is still intact.

"There is still a combination of former Securitate secret police members, some military men and former Communist officials resisting democratic change," said Dan Desliu, a poet and political writer.

The 1989 revolution, which itself cost more than 1,000 lives, has been followed by frequent outbreaks of violence.

At least six people died in March 1990 in clashes between Romanians and ethnic Hungarians, who suffered persecution under Ceausescu.

Three months later, six people were killed when President Ion Iliescu summoned thousands of coal miners to Bucharest to bolster his government.

Last Wednesday, the miners returned on their own — this time to try to topple Iliescu. Swinging iron bars and clubs, they attacked government buildings, looted shops and terrorized citizens. Police answered with truncheons, tracer flares, tear-gas grenades and even shotgun pellets.

Asked about the violence, Radu Campeanu, a senator and leader of the opposition National Liberal Party, said Sunday: "The Communist regime in Romania was the most drastic one. After the revolution, society got divided into mutually antagonistic forces: intellectuals against workers, the government against the opposition and Romanians against Hungarians."

Iliescu's National Salvation Front, which took power after the revolution with many ex-Communists in its ranks, has never gained the trust of the democratic opposition or most foreign governments.

But opposition groups don't trust each other, either. Desliu, the poet, says he is convinced there is no chance for a strong, united opposition that involves intellectuals in politics for years to come.

Some people say Romania's salvation lies in the return of King Michael, the monarch ousted by the Communists in 1947.

Iliescu's party remains implacably opposed to monarchy, and the government deported Michael a few hours after he returned unexpectedly for a visit to family graves last December.

Last week's violence forced the resignation of Prime Minister Petre Roman as architect of the economic reforms the miners hate.

The unrest has worsened political instability and leaves efforts to improve the economy at a standstill.

Ups, downs don't end a marriage

Editor's note: JoAnn Larsen is on leave. This is a favorite article from the past.

"In every marriage more than a week old, there are grounds for divorce. The trick is to find stages of living through the grounds for marriage," writes Robert Anderson in his play "Double Solitaire."

JoAnn Larsen
Psychology

With one out of every two marriages ending in divorce, how can couples protect their marriages and, in a sense, their life investments? Consider these possibilities:

• Recognize marriage as a "living entity" that will have ups and downs, ebbs and flows and different developmental stages.

Maxine Rock, author of "The Marriage Map," identifies seven stages through which couples must pass to achieve a fully mature relationship.

The last stage, called "New Freedom," is an "emotionally relaxed stage" in which each partner is finally cured of the urge to control the others' thoughts and behaviors and both are, at last, fully accepted and accepting. This stage is also the final transition from dependency to self-sufficiency in the marriage. Each partner has learned the delicate balancing act of being him — or herself — while being a dedicated and responsive partner.

• Recognize also that you and your partner are going through different developmental stages. "Living through the rhythms of one's own growth against the changes of a beloved partner" can create a wonderfully dynamic relationship, says Roger Gould in his book "Transformations."

• Capturing this personal growth process, one man says of his wife to whom he has been married 30 years: "It's been like being married to a series of different women. I have watched her growth and have shared with her both the pain and exhilaration of her journey. I find her more fascinating now than when we were first married."

• Recognizing that partners go through different rates of change may help couples to take a long-term perspective of their marriages.

"I don't know that anyone has an easy answer for how to mesh our individual passages... with our growth as a couple," says Nena O'Neil in "The Marriage Premise." However, if couples realize that riding out the stresses in the relationship can often pay off in the long run, "we might not be too hasty to dump relationships when our rates of growth are different."

• View the marriage as a flexible vehicle that should accommodate the

Plastic surgery: Sneek a peek at a better you

By Amy Davis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two tears rolled down Jennifer Gladfelter's face as her plastic surgeon peeled the plastic cast and gauze from her nose, she said, remembering her surgery of August 1990. "I cried when they took the bandage off because for the first time I could run my finger down my nose and it was straight," Gladfelter, 17, of Jerome said.

Like many individuals dissatisfied with a bump on the bridge of their nose, ears that stick out or an aging wrinkled face, Gladfelter enlisted the help of a plastic surgeon to alter her appearance and improve her self-confidence.

"Before the surgery I was intimidated to meet new people because I thought they were concentrating on my nose," Gladfelter said. "I tried to get used to it, but it didn't work. I'm an outgoing person. I felt like my nose was holding me back."

Whether in the teen-age or the golden years, appearance is important to many individuals, local plastic surgeons said. A simple, but costly, change may be the solution to increasing one's self-esteem and image in the mirror.

An eyelid operation can get rid of the bags and excess skin above and below the eyes. Liposuction can sculpt a body shape and a facelift can remove wrinkles, making you look younger.

Plastic surgery can also make daily life a bit easier. Gladfelter had a deviated septum, making it difficult for her to breathe. Joshua Wilson, 16, of Twin Falls also had trouble breathing at night and disliked a bump on his nose. A nose job, or rhinoplasty, could correct both problems.

Though a subtle ache and bruising is still slightly persistent a week after his surgery, the gain makes up for the pain, he said.

Dr. Julian Nicholson examines the nose of Joshua Wilson, 16, of Twin Falls after removing the bandages from his rhinoplasty.

"I have it done because it's worth it," Wilson said. "Even though the process of having it done is a little miserable."

His mother said she was pleased with the results and with Joshua's decision to finally have the surgery done. "There's a lot of youth who want to have surgery done, but don't because of peer pressure," Jeanne Wilson said.

That pressure has forced some patients to sneak in the back doors of plastic surgeons' offices, Dr. Julian Nicholson, of Twin Falls, said. Some even head out of state for a nose job or a face lift.

Magie Valley residents may go to Boise for a month to have the surgery and recover, Nicholson said. Patients from Las Vegas, Elko and Boise may travel to Twin Falls.

The sneaking may no longer be necessary though, plastic surgeons said, because society is becoming more accepting of cosmetic operations.

Plastic surgery tidbits

Did you know? A nose job in Idaho can cost $2,200 to $3,000 just for doctor fees and a face lift will run you $2,500 to $4,000.

• Only seven percent of all the cosmetic surgeries performed in the United States were done here in the Mountain Region (Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming) compared to 26 percent of the total being performed in the Pacific Region (California, Oregon, Washington).

• 87 percent of all cosmetic surgeries are performed on women, 13 percent on men. Dr. H. Peter Doble of Twin Falls predicts that by the year 2000 that ratio will be 50-50.

• Liposuction is the most common procedure for women while nose reshaping is the surgery most commonly performed on men.

• Liposuction is not a weight reduction surgery. Dr. Julian Nicholson of Twin Falls said that the amount of liquid removed in an average liposuction surgery weighs only about two pounds. While the procedure is great for shaping legs and stomachs, surgery will not be performed if the patient is overweight.

Weigh the risks before you consider taking the plunge

By Amy Davis
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Risk is associated with any operation. Plastic surgery is no exception to that rule.

While local plastic surgeons say the risks are minimal, they should still be considered before undergoing surgery.

When performing a facelift, or rhytidectomy, Dr. Julian Nicholson said, nerve damage may occur. During the procedure incisions are made on each side of the face and along the hairline. The skin is pulled up to its original position. Excess skin and fat is removed via liposuction and excision.

In eyelid surgery, or blepharoplasty, incisions are made in the upper and lower eyelids. Excess fat, muscle and skin are removed and the skin is repositioned and sutured. Faint scars may be visible for a short time after the surgery and in only a handful of cases nationwide the patient has gone blind, Nicholson said.

People with dark skin should be cautious when deciding to have dermabrasion performed because significant changes in skin pigmentation may occur. In this procedure, the doctor uses a rotating brush to remove the outer layer of skin. New, smoother skin grows back.

Bleeding, bruising, swelling and unusual scarring is possible with nose jobs, chin and cheek implants and since the surgeries are performed under general anesthesia there may be complications with the body's reaction to the anesthetic.

The biggest risk, perhaps, is that the outcome will not be what the patient expected, doctors said. Communication between the surgeon and patient will ensure that the expectations are realistic and disappointment is eliminated.

Risks are also associated with not having surgery done. Excess skin and fat above and below the eyes may impair a person's vision and prevent him from reading, working and even seeing. Some men have even said that the bags under their eyes have threatened their jobs as employers think they are getting older and unable to do their jobs, surgeons said.

Children with lop ears, or ears that stick out away from the head, may be teased so excessively that their self-esteem is

Looking good

Bigger the jewelry the better

The operative word for jewelry is big. Jewelry looks are big and complex, mixing and matching colors, textures, weights, lengths and styles. Everything is right, as long as there's a lot of it, according to the Jewelry Industry Council.

Welcome back the layered look. In jewelry terms, this means more gold and silver chains, of different sizes and types of links; more ropes of pearls or colored stones; bigger and more unusually shaped diamonds; and more creative mixing and matching. Mixed results include cascades of chains of different weights and densities, along with ropes of pearls and/or colored stones.

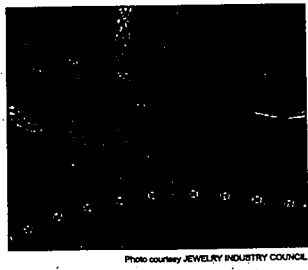

Look for watches as well to sport different bands. Chains, bangles, enamel or leather straps in a variety of colors will add to the variety of bracelets already at the wrist.

One more shoulder dusters, but dangling earrings will still add a touch of dazzle and drama to fall and winter nights. For a sportier day look, buttons, pearls, shell-shapes and other earrings will complement today's simple, tailored look.

And don't forget the fingers, which can be layered extravagantly: multiple rings per finger, several per hand.

Swing into fall with coats

This fall, coats don't mean a thing if they ain't got

This fall, jewelry has taken on gigantic proportions. That swing.

Swing coats reinforce the trend toward shorter hemlines as well as reinstating motion in clothing — seen in the softer fabrics, pleated skirts and fluted hemlines that are out in force for fall.

Swing coats started to show up last year, but done primarily in black, they hung quietly on coat racks. This year, swing coats are virtually impossible to

Health notes

DIABETES AND EXERCISE: If you're an insulin-dependent diabetic, exercise may have previously unknown benefits. Regular exercise should help diabetics who have some remaining insulin-producing capacity to increase insulin output," says Penn State researcher Peter A. Farrell, based on animal studies he's conducted.

A HEARTFELT NEED: The good news is that babies are some of the best candidates for heart transplants because their immature immune systems accept organs more easily. The bad news, a surgeon adds, is that there aren't enough tiny donor hearts. Leonard Bailey, director of heart-lung surgery at Loma Linda University Medical Center, says doctors may be timid about suggesting organ removal to grieving parents. But if asked, he says, many parents would say yes.

POST-POLIO SYNDROME: A new polio infection or reactivation of the old one may be responsible for renewed bouts of muscle weakness in people who caught and survived polio 30 or 40 years ago. So says a new study reported in the New England Journal of Medicine. One expert on post-polio syndrome says he does not think the unproven finding will have any immediate effect on treatment of such patients and that he sees no risk of patients transmitting the virus.

HIV-POSITIVE ATTITUDE: Many doctors, dentists, and nurses infected with the virus that causes AIDS, would rather shun medical treatment to keep their condition a secret than risk being fired. That's according to a survey by the American Association of Physicians for Human Rights, a gay doctors' group. Fifty-five percent of those surveyed said they feared patients would assume they were HIV-positive and sue them if they stopped performing invasive procedures. Says the study's author: "These people are endangering their very lives because of the public's hysteria."

SWALLOW HARD: Chill out — anxiety promotes tooth decay. That's according to Donald Morse, a professor of endodontology at Temple University School of Dentistry. Morse says in Self magazine that stress causes the mouth to produce less saliva, which contains enamel-building phosphorus and calcium, thus leaving your teeth more susceptible to decay-causing acids and bacteria.

THE HEART BEAT: A standard treadmill test can gauge survival prospects of patients with suspected heart trouble. So say Duke University doctors, who have developed a simple formula so doctors can use data from the test to develop a single numerical estimate of risk. Their report appears in the New England Journal of Medicine.

UPPING THE ANTE: Talk about putting your money where your mouth is! A maker of injectable collagen — a protein used to smooth wrinkles, repair the scars and give fuller lips — has offered to pay the legal fees and damages of any doctors sued over use of the product. The announcement by Collagen Corp. came after the Food and Drug Administration said it found a 75 percent higher incidence of the muscle diseases polymyositis and dermatomyositis in collagen users.

WITHOUT VIOLENCE

A rough road in Republican, Ohio, opened in 1919, when, Town fathers ignored them.

So they planted vegetables over the length of it. "That's what dirt's for," they said. Pavers arrived shortly. It has been called one of America's more imaginative... successful... non-violent demonstrations.

Medtronic issues pacing leads alert

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Medtronic Inc. has warned doctors that a device it made that transmits signals between pacemakers used by thousands of people and their hearts may not operate properly.

"Any life-threatening situation would be extremely rare," Medtronic spokesman Dick Reid said.

Medtronic estimates 60,000 of the Model 4012 implantable pacing leads are still in use.

The lead was introduced in 1984 and was last made in April 1990. Modern pacemakers usually are implanted in the shoulder area.

The lead is the pencil lead-sized conductor that runs from the pacemaker through veins to contact the interior wall of the heart.

Reid said physicians would easily detect reduced performance during routine monitoring.

The lead transmits information about the heartbeat to the battery-operated pacemaker, which adjusts a slow heartbeat to about 70 beats per minute by transmitting electrical impulses back to the heart.

If the pacing lead isn't performing properly, the patient probably wouldn't feel any symptoms, Reid said.

However, most pacemaker patients go to their doctor four to six times a year for monitoring, Reid said.

"If the lead should completely lose its conduction ability, the patient would feel as if she did before the pacemaker was installed. They might feel tired, lacking in energy," Reid said.

Medtronic issued the alert based on reports that some of the Model 4012 leads were not performing adequately, Reid said.

The company sent 20,000 letters to doctors who have implanted the leads or are following-patients with the leads.

Sales representatives also are contacting doctors.

New Alzheimer study focuses on rural areas

DAYBROOK, W.Va. (AP) — James Jacobs tickled the foot of his 85-year-old mother, who was tethered to a bed in a second-floor room. But Irene Jacobs' pale, blue eyes remained focused on an open window.

"She doesn't recognize him," said James Jacobs' wife, Marie, as she spread a disposable diaper under her mother-in-law. "It hurts, real bad. But you have to remember, she doesn't know what she's doing."

The first inkling something was wrong came about seven years ago when Irene Jacobs began to have trouble telling time. Later, she forgot about food cooking on the stove, got lost in her back yard, and stripped in front of visitors.

Doctors diagnosed her symptoms as Alzheimer's disease.

"There are very few days when Mom really knows what's going on and that's really sad," said Marie Jacobs, 48. "She was really outgoing and loving before this started. Now, you could set food down in front of her and she'd starve to death because she doesn't know what to do with it," she said.

Alzheimer's affects up to 4 million Americans, most of them over 65. It results from the degeneration and death of nerve cells in areas of the brain that control thought, memory and speech. There is no cure and no prevention.

Women appear to be more likely than men to get Alzheimer's in several studies that allow for the fact that women generally live longer.

Alzheimer's is the fourth-leading cause of death for adults in the United States, and researchers say it could afflict as many as 14 million Americans by 2050.

Knowledge about patients in rural areas is virtually non-existent, according to Dr. Robert Keefover, a neuro-psychiatrist at West Virginia University Health Sciences Center.

"We don't know how many people out there have it or how their families deal with it," said Keefover, who is overseeing a $3.6 million project to find out just that information. Financed by the National Institute on Aging, researchers from WVU and Marshall University will try to screen every person over 65 for Alzheimer's in three isolated West Virginia counties over the next three years.

Keefover said the project will test the effectiveness of several screening methods used to diagnose Alzheimer's.

"Ultimately, we'll know how to better find folks with Alzheimer's," Keefover said. "We'll also come up with better ways to help them, including the kinds of things that can be done without highly trained, expensive medical personnel." West Virginia was chosen because of its mostly rural population, Keefover said. Lincoln, Morgan and Tucker counties were picked because they have no urban areas, Keefover said.

Elderly residents in the three counties will have access to first examinations to detect Alzheimer's. The study is expected to provide data about the prevalence and risk factors associated with Alzheimer's among the rural elderly.

Besides Alzheimer's, researchers will be looking for evidence of other diseases marked by dementia, a deterioration of mental processes including memory disorders, personality change, impaired reasoning and disorientation.

The study grew out of recommendations made by a statewide task force comprised of physicians at WVU, Marshall and other medical and social service groups around the state.

Dr. Joye Martin, an associate professor of family medicine and community health at Marshall, said the Jacobs family and others who care for rural Alzheimer's patients face special challenges. "They don't have access to adult day care or other resources available in urban areas," Martin said. "They burn out. It's not unheard of for a caregiver to die before the Alzheimer's patient himself because it's so hard on them."

Many religions support women's right to choose

DEAR ABBY: With all the talk about "pro-life" and "pro-choice," I am confused about where the various religious denominations stand in the controversy.

Can you please tell us which religions support a woman's right to choose?

— CONFUSED IN ST. PAUL

DEAR CONFUSED: It is confusing. Not only do the various theologians differ in their positions on abortion, but within each religion individual members (and groups) may also have differing beliefs. The following are the official positions of some of the major religious groups that support a woman's right to choose.

AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE (QUAKERS): Supports a woman's right to follow her own conscience concerning child-bearing, abortion and sterilization.

CHURCH OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST: "Matters of family planning are left to the individual judgment of members of our church."

CONSERVATIVE JUDAISM:

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Opposes government restrictions on a woman's right to have an abortion.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH: "Any proposed legislation on the part of national or state governments regarding abortions must take special care to see that the individual conscience is respected."

ISLAM: Abortion is allowed for any reason in the first 40 days of pregnancy (approximately 5.7 weeks). They oppose abortion after this point, except if the woman's life is in danger. The issue of fetal deformity is an issue that is being examined by the church.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH: "The abortion decision must remain with the individual, and be made on the basis of conscience and personal religious principles, and must be free of governmental interference."

REFORM JUDAISM: The decision of whether or not to have an abortion is the woman's. Under traditional Jewish law, the fetus is not considered separate from the woman until its head is out of the womb.

UNITARIAN UNIVERSALIST ASSOCIATION: Supports the "right to choose" contraception and abortion as a legitimate expression of our constitutional rights.

UNITED CHURCH OF CHRIST: "Upholds the right to have access to adequately funded family planning services, and to safe, legal abortions as one option among others."

UNITED METHODIST: Supports the legal option of abortion under proper medical procedures.

ZEN BUDDHISM: "A decision should be made in full awareness of the consequences, and should be made by the individual with a clear head fully awake to the whole issue."

AMERICAN BAPTIST CHURCHES: Have adopted a neutral position.

No stated position has been announced by: African Methodist Episcopal, Buddhism, Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, Seventh-day Adventists, Shintoism, Sikhism.

Rally kicks off AIDS Awareness Month

BOISE — Health care organizations, education officials and concerned citizens will gather at noon Tuesday for a rally and balloon launch at the Statehouse in Boise to kick off cooperative statewide activities for AIDS Awareness Month in Idaho.

Richard Carper will be at the College of Southern Idaho Oct. 21-22 for AIDS education presentations on campus. A public talk is set for 7:30 p.m. Oct. 21 at the Fire Arts Auditorium. Carper is a man with AIDS from Grants Pass, Ore., who walked across the United States in 1989 to raise awareness about the disease.

"Building Bridges to Understanding" will be the topic of a conference on AIDS set for Oct. 24-25 at the Boulder Mountain Hotel in Sun Valley. The role of education in preventing the spread of AIDS is among the topics that will be discussed at the conference.

"Our theme for AIDS Awareness Month this year is 'Fight AIDS with Facts,'" said John Glaza of the Department of Health and Welfare's Bureau of Preventive Medicine.

The cure for AIDS is education. We know everything we need to know to stop the spread of the disease. We just need to convey this to the public, particularly our young people.

AIDS, or acquired immunodeficiency syndrome, is an infectious disease which is spread through sexual contact, sharing of needles and prenatal transmission from an infected mother. State records show that 381 people in Idaho have tested positive for HIV, the AIDS virus.

Nearly 100 AIDS cases have been reported in Idaho and 61 people have died from the disease. Since 1985, more than 54,000 blood samples in Idaho have been tested for the HIV infection.

MS group hosts symposium

TWIN FALLS — On Saturday, the Idaho Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society is conducting a one-day symposium for people with multiple sclerosis and other interested people.

The symposium will feature speakers from the Magic Valley, addressing issues such as multiple sclerosis, including medical, rehabilitation, government and community resources presented in the morning and family and interpersonal communication discussed in the afternoon session.

All Magic Valley residents who have been diagnosed with multiple sclerosis are invited to attend, with a family member or friend as well as other interested people.

The morning session will be open to all with the 1 to 3 p.m. session restricted to people with multiple sclerosis.

The symposium is free of charge. The session will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Desert Building on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

Lunch will be provided at no charge.

For information and to register, call 1-800-834-2006 by Thursday.
