A nation honors its veterans

At Freedom Inn, the talk is of sacrifices forgotten

By Phil Sahn

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A good day to remember a lot of friends. Many of them are dead.

"Vietnam," he said. He calls himself Bob Samson. Like the other Vietnam-era veterans at the Freedom Inn, a local watering hole for veterans of all eras, Samson had no trouble opening up Monday about Veterans Day.

Fride and frustration filled his voice. The day — a national holiday commemorating the moment in 1918 when the guns fell silent and World War I ended — means so much to those who served. But to others, it seems the day goes by unnoticed, he added.

"It's just another three-day holiday — a chance for the merchants to hold a sale, maybe the last fishing day of the year," Samson said.

"Veterans are remembered in time of war but not in peace," he said. Others sitting at the bar agreed.

"The community support you'd expect just isn't there," said a man who only will say that his name is Jerry. He served in Vietnam, Jerry said.

"Are the church groups or Chamber of Commerce supporting Veterans Day?" he asked.

It seems odd that in conservative Twin Falls, a town ablaze in yellow ribbons in support of Operation Desert Storm last winter, that Veterans Day passes all but unnoticed, Jerry said.

"Yellow ribbons? That was just keeping up with the Joneses," said another fellow standing at the bar.

Another man, Bill, who said he served as an officer in Vietnam, joined the conversation. "In this part of the country, people seem to be very unpatriotic," Bill said.

Except for Samson, the other veterans who spoke for this story would not permit their last names to be used. Their comments were personal and do not represent the feelings of any established veterans organizations, they said.

Bush sends overdue respect 'good for nation's soul'

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. — Leading the nation's Veterans Day observances, President Bush placed a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns on Monday. Bush pledged the United States would "always be a force for peace in the world" as he paid special tribute to veterans of the nation's two most recent wars.

His topcoat drawn tight against the chilling wind, Bush said at the annual ceremony in Arlington National Cemetery that Desert Storm veterans "freed a captive nation and set America free by renewing our faith in ourselves."

The president also promised that the nation would "never forget the POWs and the MIAs yet to be accounted for" from the Vietnam War.

Across the Potomac River in Washington, several thousand people came to the Vietnam Memorial for brief ceremonies in which eight names were added to the wall of Americans whose deaths were attributed to the war — making 58,185 in all.

In a sampling of other Veterans Day observances: ROTC students based at Wright State University kept a vigil at the Dayton National Cemetery in Ohio to remember any American prisoners of war who didn't return from Vietnam.

The national commander of the Disabled Veterans of America said in Indianapolis that the government should do more than just praise war veterans. At

Gramm calls for keeping nation's military strong

The Associated Press

BOISE — A Republican leader told a Veterans Day gathering here that the country's leaders could do better to honor veterans is to make a commitment that the United States will remain strong.

"The best commitment we can make to veterans and to ourselves is a commitment that the United States will always be the most powerful nation on the earth," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas and chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

Gramm was in Boise for the event and a round of meetings with GOP leaders on the upcoming U.S. Senate race in Idaho. Freshman Sen. Larry Craig called Gramm "my compass" — he always puts me back on point" on Senate votes.

Gramm said he was not surprised that the president won a hotly contested vote in support of a war resolution when the Persian Gulf War started.

"This is not the same America that existed in the 1960s," he said. This is a new America, an America that understands itself better and is proud and stronger than it was then.

"America is a different country today than it was before we sent those 540,000 Americans to the Middle East," he said.

"The world is changed today," Gramm said. "There is only one superpower in the world: That superpower is the United States of America, and I want to keep it that way," Gramm said.

He said if the biblical admonition is true, and lions will lie down with lambs, "it is very, very important that the United States of America be the lion."

"Only then can we be sure that the lamb is going to be safe," Gramm said. A small group organized a counter-ceremony at Boise State University against the "excessive nationalism and militaristic spirit" that surrounded the Persian Gulf War.

"It is a quiet protest against the type of ceremony held on Veterans Day, and is intended as a tribute to the victims of war," said a statement issued by William A. Wines, a Boise State professor and one of the group's organizers.

The statement said the ceremony was intended to raise student awareness of the nature and cost of war.

Parents don't know goals

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite almost two years of high-pressure salesmanship by President Bush and the nation's governors, an overwhelming majority of American parents cannot name any of the government's six national education goals, a new survey released here Monday shows.

The survey, commissioned by Newsweek magazine and paid for by the Chrysler Corporation and the national Parent Teacher Association, found that only one in four parents of school-age children were aware of the national education goals and fewer than one in 10 could name any of them.

goals — as described in the survey — were unattainable.

The goals, touted as the first salvo in a national war against educational decline, were set forth during an education summit between Bush and the nation's governors in January 1990.

Bush and the governors have promoted the goals at every opportunity, but some feel parents have been left out of the equation.

"There was such a great effort to communicate with the educators and the business community, but the effort was not made to communicate with parents," said Pat Henry, the president of the PTA. The six goals, to be reached by the year 2000, are:

Deadbeat roster shrinking

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The scandal over congressmen's unpaid bills in the House "redemption" has lost some of its epic quality.

It turns out, says an official who has spent the last month sorting out the bills, that there were fewer deadbeats than believed.

Even so, five weeks after headlines about the debt began causing lawmakers indignation, some 30 account holders still owe up to $50,000, the official said.

A lot of those who owed the restaurant have paid up. Expectations are that most accounts will be current in a few weeks.

The figures early on were quite inflated," said the official working on the problem who declined to be further identified. "The bulk of the money owed was, current accounts, amounts being billed."

On Oct. 3, Rep. Pat Roberts of Kansas touched off an uproar by saying that some 300 current and former House members had more than $300,000 in unpaid food bills. Some $255,000 of the amount, represented amounts due Service America Corp., which operated the House restaurants and catering system from 1987 until last August.

Roberts, ranking Republican of the House Administration subcommittee on personnel and police, proposed posting debtors' names in the House restaurant

Rain, snow extend across northeastern quarter of U.S.

The Associated Press

Rain and snow fell from the northern Plains to New York on Monday, and the lingering cold wave dropped temperatures to record lows across the Deep South.

At midday, snow fell over southeastern North Dakota, eastern South Dakota, central Minnesota, northwestern Wisconsin, northwestern Michigan, western New York, western Pennsylvania, and eastern West Virginia.

"Buffalo, N.Y., received 6 inches of snow Monday. This is extremely early - the earliest we've had in years," said Dick Smith, highway superintendent in suburban Hamburg.

Snow that began falling Sunday knocked out electricity to more than 32,500 customers in parts of West Virginia. But the storm that dumped up to 4 inches of snow, plus icy rain and sleet, dampened forest fires that had burned since last month.

Freezing rain extended over northern Minnesota, southwestern Iowa and northeastern New York.

A weekend storm that churned northward along the East Coast caused less coastal damage than expected, and less than the Halloween storm that severely eroded beaches.

Rain also fell Monday over northern and southwestern Kansas, western Texas, eastern New Mexico, and from the northern Pacific Coast across northwestern Montana. Snow fell over northeastern New Mexico.

Rainfall amounts during the six hours up to 1 p.m. EST were less than one inch.

Record lows Monday were 45 at Hollywood, Fla.; 26 at Huntsville, Ala.; 32 at New Orleans; 27 at Tallahassee, Fla., and 48 at Twin Palm Beach, Fla.

About 600 low temperature records have been broken or tied in the two weeks since the cold outbreak began on Oct. 28.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EST ranged from 27 at Hibbing, Minn., and Park Rapids and Ironwood, Mich., to 86 at Palm Springs, Calif.

Monday's low for the Lower 48 states was 15 at Jamestown, N.D., and Yellowstone National Park, Wyo.

Baker, Miyazawa start process of reconfirming U.S.-Japan ties

The Washington Post

TOKYO — Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa began Monday to reconfirm in the post-Cold War era.

They affirmed the need for close cooperation on regional and global affairs, but touched only lightly on the differences between their nations.

The symbolic beginning of U.S. relations with Japan's new government, which has been in office for less than a week, came in a 50-minute meeting in the prime minister's official residence.

Miyazawa, a colleague of Baker from the time each man was head of his country's treasury, set a businesslike tone at the outset of the discussion by announcing that he would speak to the secretary of state in Japanese and through an official translator although he can speak fluent English. A Japanese official present said Baker laughed at this decision by his old friend.

Each side began the discussion by making a number of requests of the other. Baker, who is on a nine-day tour of Asia, asked for Japanese help on problems regarding China, North Korea and the Middle East, as well as international economic problems, such as such bilateral issues as exports of auto parts to the United States and a Japanese contribution to the U.S. supercollider research program.

Miyazawa asked for U.S. help in solving the issue of four Japanese islands that have been occupied by the Soviet Union since World War II, and for U.S. forbearance on the touchy issue of rice imports.

Noting the importance of ties between two nations that together account for 40 percent of world economic output, Baker said in a speech here Monday that "nothing is more fundamental to the security of the region to global economic growth and indeed to the effectiveness of the post-Cold War international system than the U.S.-Japan relationship." Baker quoted appropriately the frequent assertion of Mike Mansfield, former U.S. ambassador to Japan, that the U.S. relationship with Japan, is "our most important bilateral relationship, bar none."

"There are always some problems between Japan and the United States," Baker was quoted by Japanese officials as saying to Foreign Minister Michio Watanabe. But he went on to say, according to this account, that "we have the mechanisms to solve them; we are going to solve them."

In his talk with Miyazawa, Baker said that a trip to Asia by President Bush, which was called off last week, will be rescheduled "before long." U.S. briefers refused to be specific about timing in discussions with reporters, but an official traveling with Baker said the presidential trip here is expected to take place within the next two months. Bush's sudden postponement of the long-planned Asian journey has come under fire in the region.

Bush runs Respect dead heat with Demo

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush ran in a dead heat with an unnamed Democrat in a national poll released Monday that showed another drop in the president's approval rating and clear dissatisfaction with the nation's direction.

The survey found domestic issues dominating the list of voters' concerns, a finding that augurs well for Democrats who have been trying to paint Bush as a globetrotting diplomat who spends too little time worrying about the homefront.

Coming on the heels of off-year elections that put the White House on the defensive, the monthly Times Mirror Center for the People & the Press survey provided fresh evidence of a dramatic shift in the national political landscape caused by persistent economic worries.

A number of polls over the last month have shown Bush's support slipping.

"This is the first time that Bush's reelection prospects appear directly threatened by the public's mounting unease at the country's economic prospects and the order of the Bush administration's priorities," the center said in its written analysis of the survey results.

"Until this most recent survey, his positive poll numbers, mounting electoral target... has been virtually unchallenged."

Eight months ago, at the end of the Persian Gulf war, the Times Mirror survey showed Bush with an 84 percent approval rating.

At Arlington, Bush said ideals of democracy add freedom that Americans have fought to defend are taking root around the world.

"In the Western Hemisphere, 98 percent of the people now live in democracies. In Africa, people line up to vote at one-man state colleges. Europeans, East and West, unite in ways never thought possible," Bush said.

"Age-old enemies of the Middle East finally sit face-to-face to seek an end-to-arms-bidding-stalemate. Soviet Union may now throw off the dead hand of communism, and the time is coming when those last few totalitarian states will fade into historical oblivion."

"The United States will always be a force for peace in the world," he declared.

Bush laid a large flower wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns, a monument to the war dead whose names were lost in the chaos of battle. An Army bugler played "Taps" and top military and civilian officials stood at attention.

Later, at a memorial service at an adjacent amphitheater, Bush said: "On this cold autumn day in this hallowed place of honor, we gather to convey our nation's gratitude for those who risked their lives for the

- Every adult will be literate. Fourteen percent said this goal could be reached.

Study: Drug treatment stops development of heart failure

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — For the first time, a medical treatment has been shown to stop the development of congestive heart failure, a disorder that could benefit 1 million Americans, according to a major study released Monday.

Researchers found that a variety of drugs called ACE-inhibitors can prevent — at least temporarily — the start of heart failure symptoms in people with damaged hearts.

Last August, the same team disclosed that the treatment can significantly improve the survival of people who already suffer from heart failure, a major killer that afflicts about 2 million Americans.

Now, the latest results show that the same medicine can forestall the development of heart failure in the estimated 1 million people who are at high risk of the disease because of injury to their left ventricle, the heart's main pumping chamber. Such damage commonly results from heart attacks, chronic high blood pressure and heart inflammation, among other causes.

"The key issue is: Can we prevent people from getting heart failure? We found an approximately 37 percent reduction in the development of heart failure among those who took ACE inhibitors," said Dr. Salim Yusuf of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute.

The five-year study was conducted on 4,228 people at 83 hospitals in the United States, Canada and Belgium. Yusuf presented the results at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association.

Half of the people in the study took enalapril, one form of ACE inhibitor, while the rest got placebos. The study's findings included:

- Among those getting the ACE inhibitors, 436 developed heart failure, compared with 638 in the comparison group.
- Taking ACE inhibitors reduced the heart attack rate by 23 percent.
- There were 247 deaths from heart disease in those taking the drugs and 282 deaths in the comparison group. This difference, though encouraging, was considered not quite large enough to be statistically meaningful.
- The risk of being hospitalized was 36 percent lower in those taking the drug.

"This is good news," commented Dr. Eugene Braunwald of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. "When doctors have patients with heart disease who have a high chance of going into heart failure, they should give high consideration to using ACE inhibitors before overt failure occurs."

Avoiding heart attacks a tall order; short people reportedly more at risk

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Add one more injustice to life's unfairnesses: Short people are more likely to suffer heart attacks.

"The taller you are, the less your risk of heart attack," said Patricia Heber, who presented a study on the subject Monday.

For every extra inch of height, she found, people's heart attack risk goes down 3 percent. This means that someone 5-foot-10 is 9 percent less likely than someone 5-foot-7 to suffer a heart attack.

So what should short folks do about it? Just try harder, the experts recommend.

"I wish I was taller," quipped 5-foot-9 Dr. Michael R. Rosen of Columbia University.

However, he and others suggested that shorter folks pay more attention to reducing their risk by concentrating on factors under their control, such as cholesterol and blood pressure.

"Hopefully, short people will exercise more, and eat better to get around it that way," said Rosen.

The study was released at the annual scientific meeting of the American Heart Association. It was conducted by Hebert and colleagues from the Physicians' Health Study at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

In the study, men under 5-foot-7 had about 70 percent more heart attacks than those over 6-foot-1.

Just why this is so is unclear. However, short people might be at higher risk because their blood vessels are skinnier, so they are more prone to becoming clogged.

The researchers cautioned that just being tall is no guarantee of escaping heart trouble. Taller folks should still watch their diets and

New York targeting diplomats who haven't paid parking fines

WASHINGTON (AP) — After 10 years in the mistaken belief that diplomats were exempt from paying parking tickets, the city of New York is going after the deadbeats with a green light from the State Department.

Diplomats at consulates and U.N. missions have run up $6.3 million in unpaid parking tickets over the last three years, rivaling the nearly $7 million the District of Columbia is seeking to collect.

As in Washington, New York City records show the scofflaws are led by the Soviet Union and include a heavy proportion of U.S. foreign aid recipients and wealthy oil states.

The effort began after city officials saw an Associated Press story last week noting that Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., had threatened to cut the foreign aid of countries that persist in thumbing their noses at parking fines.

While diplomats are protected from arrest under diplomatic immunity, they are expected to abide by local laws in the city where they are assigned, including paying fines and traffic tickets.

"Everybody here had been under the impression they had diplomatic immunity, and that we couldn't collect," said Jametig Sadik-Khan, an official in New York City's transportation department.

The policy of writing off diplomats' parking fines as uncollectable dates back at least a decade, she said. But last week's story alerted the city to the fact that the State Department was helping the District of Columbia collect unpaid parking fines.

Now, New York's Transportation Commissioner Lucius Riccio is "revved up" to go after the violators. "There's a lot of money here to be collected," she said.

Aiding that push is a change in the issuance of diplomatic license plates.

The State Department will begin in April issuing the distinctive red, white and blue plates on a one-year basis, instead of the current three-year registration. That means countries that fail to pay parking fines will be subject to having their tags revoked, Sadik-Khan said.

"Now that State is pushing this more aggressively, we want to be involved," said Joe DePlasso, a New York Transportation Department spokesman. "We want them to park legally."

In 1990, New York records show the 152 cars assigned to the Soviet U.N. mission among 11,402 parking tickets — all unpaid. The tab comes to $364,000.

Israel, the largest recipient of U.S. foreign aid, gets more than $3 billion a year from its chief benefactor. But the country owes New York City $91,000 in unpaid parking fines from last year.

Several wealthy Arab states also are in arrears: $24,000 for Saudi Arabia, $13,000 for Kuwait, $28,000 for the United Arab Emirates and $39,000 for Qatar.

Top U.S. aid recipients with unpaid parking tabs include Greece, which owes New York $88,000 for outstanding 1990 tickets; Turkey, with nearly $50,000; and Egypt, with $47,000.

Ex-Bakker aide freed from jail

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — After serving 20 months for fraud and conspiracy in the PTL scandal, Richard Dortch said he wants to put his life back together.

Monday was the first full day of freedom for Dortch, once a top aide to Jim Bakker and now a minister to troubled professionals.

After three years of asking forgiveness for his actions at PTL, Dortch said he has decided to stop "beating myself up about it" and move on.

Dortch is returning to Life Challenge Inc., a ministry he opened in Clearwater before he went to prison in 1990. The New Covenant Church of Fort Myers sponsors his modest, two-room office.

In prison, Dortch said he met lawyers who knew the law but ignored it; bankers who knew financial transactions are scrutinized but chose to risk cheating anyway; professionals not used to recognizing and confronting their own weaknesses.

"If I was a migraine sufferer, I would talk to my physician," he said.

The study, directed by Julie E. Buring of the Harvard Medical School in Boston, was presented Monday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association. It found a statistical association between migraine headaches and strokes. It did not directly address the question of what might be causing the disorders.

But Manson said the study suggests that the blood vessels of the people at risk may contract and expand more than the blood vessels of others.

Such changes in blood vessel size are linked to migraines and can cause strokes if the blood vessels constrict too much, she said.

Another possibility is that the high-risk individuals are prone to more clumping of blood cells called platelets, which help to form clots. The most common form of stroke, called ischemic strokes, occurs when clots impede blood flow in one of the arteries nourishing the brain.

Migraines may have link to strokes

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Men who get migraine headaches are twice as likely as others to have a stroke, providing possible clues to the causes of the disorders, doctors said Monday.

"We're not implying that migraines themselves are causing stroke, but rather that migraines may be a marker for increased risk of stroke," said Dr. JoAnn E. Manson, one of the authors of the study.

The researchers' preliminary finding that points to a need for further research. She also said the findings would apply to women as well as men.

Dr. Seymour Diamond of the Diamond Headache Clinic in Chicago, the nation's oldest and largest private headache clinic, said the finding was "very significant and very important."

"It shows that people with migraines have more unstable or fragile blood vessels," he said. The study suggests that using aspirin or other drugs to prevent migraines might help prevent strokes, Diamond said.

Test of unarmed missile successful

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — An unarmed, intercontinental ballistic missile successfully delivered dummy warheads to targets 4,200 miles across the Pacific Ocean on Monday, the Air Force said.

The Minuteman III was launched at 2:19 a.m. from Vandenberg Air Force Base, 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles. It delivered several dummy warheads to targets in the Kwajalein Missile Range in the Marshall Islands area a half-hour later, the Air Force said.

The launch was conducted by a 24-member task force from the 90th Missile Wing based at F.E. Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming.

'Gone with the Wind' author stirs up gaels across the sea

NEW YORK (AP) — In her sequel to "Gone with the Wind," Alexandra Ripley didn't want to offend black Americans with stereotypes from the 19th-century South.

So she moved "Scarlett" across the ocean — and offended some Irish-Americans with stereotypes from 19th-century Ireland.

Ripley, her critics charge, doesn't give a damn about the Catholic Irish peasantry of the 1870s; she portrays them as "fickle, ignorant and violent race, prone to treachery and the most outrageous superstitions," according to the weekly Irish Echo.

"It's not politically correct to have stereotypes of black people, so she replaced them with stereotypes of Irish people," says Peter King, a Long Island political official active in Irish-American affairs. "We've advanced enough so that we don't react to ev-

Book full of stereo-typical Irish

NEW YORK (AP) — Some critics complain that "Scarlett" is full of clichéd dialogue by stereotyped Irish characters.

Irish America magazine cited the wake of Scarlett's uncle as an example.

A priest tells Scarlett O'Hara, "Ah, it was a grand confession he made. I've never heard a better. A fine man Daniel O'Hara was. We'll not see his like again in our lifetimes."

Another O'Hara relative says: "And do you not remember, Jim, the time Daniel and his brother Patrick, God rest his soul, took the Englishman's prize pig and carried it down to the peat bog to farrow."

"Twelve little ones and all of them squealing, and the sow as fierce as any wild boar? The land agent was shaking and the Englishman cursing, and all the rest of the world laughing at the show."

Which led Niall O'Dowd, publisher of Irish America magazine, to conclude: "All this faith and bourgeois lends the book an air of pure ridicule."

ing. "In 'Scarlett' — No. 1 on The New York Times best-seller list — the heroine, separated from Rhet Butler and pregnant with his child, sails off to Ireland. There, she reclaims her ancestral home (the original Tara) in County Meath, restores the village of Ballyhara and is honored as 'The O'Hara.' But she sniffs at the peasants' thatched cottages as 'too ... too ... peasanty' and is seduced by the fox hunts and 'big houses' of the Protestant Anglo-Irish aristocracy. She even falls for the Irish equivalent of a carpebagger — an English rack-rent landlord.

The bog Irish, meanwhile, are constantly fighting, singing, dancing, gunnaming and, of course, drinking. When Scarlett is about to give birth on Halloween, her priest cousin urges her to stay home and "If you're really feeling Irish, have a supper of whiskey washed down with ale."

Writing in Newsday, M.G. Lord termed it "jarring and anti-Catholic to have a parody of a priest urging a pregnant woman to go on a bender."

When the crops fail, the hysterical, ungrateful villagers blame Scarlett and her "changing" daughter and besiege their house. "The voices were so close, so inhuman, so like the yowling of a wild-beast," Scarlett thinks. In addition, Irish America magazine has accused Ripley of anachronisms and inaccuracies.

Ripley writes, for example, that some prosperous Irish-American families lighted every room in their new house with Waterford crystal chandeliers — even though the Waterford Crystal industry was not developed until after World War II. And she apparently confuses the Gaelic word seachán, which means "mind yourself," with seanchas, which means the "old tradition."

There are few blacks in "Scarlett," and none of the slave dialect and racist attitude that outraged many blacks about Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind."

Ripley has said she deliberately steered clear of race: "That's one reason I was so fond of happy to get to Ireland where everybody was white, so I did not have to deal with that," she has said. Instead, she had to deal with hundreds of years of accumulated religious and class hatred.

Ripley is said by her publisher, Warner Books, to be out of the country and unavailable for comment. Her editor, Maureen Egan, calls inaccuracies "a funny charge, because she did a lot of research, and I mean A LOT of research." Research, in fact, was said to be one reason the book was published a year later than planned.

Jewish, African-American groups mobilize against Duke

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With former Klan leader David Duke making a strong run for governor, get-out-the-vote efforts in Louisiana's black communities are the strongest since the early days of the civil rights movement.

"History is going to be made," said the Rev. Zedden Bridges, president of the political arm of the International National Association of Black Ministers of New Orleans.

"We are going to get the vote out as never before. The get-out-the-vote strategy for Saturday's gubernatorial runoff against former Gov. Edwin Edwards also is intense, but more subtle. In Jewish communities since Duke's strong showing in the Oct. 19 primary.

"We are being extraordinarily careful not to violate the tax exempt status that prevents us from campaigning for a candidate through our synagogues," said Rabbi Edward P. Cohn of Temple Sinai, Louisiana's largest Jewish congregation.

"As individuals, however, there is tremendous work going on in everything from voter registration to getting people to vote absentee ballots to raising money."

A joint statement by Louisiana's highest ranking black religious leaders — from the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. in Baton Rouge, the African Methodist Episcopal Church in New Orleans, the Church of God in Christ in Lafayette and the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church in Shreveport — endorsed Edwards for governor and launched a statewide effort to defeat Duke.

"Duke's overt race baiting brings out the worst instincts in people and plays on fear and ignorance," said a joint statement from the leaders. "We will unite with responsible citizens on Nov. 16 to put him back under the sheet and swastika where he belongs."

Duke, a maverick Republican who describes himself now as a born-again Christian, is a former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard. He once openly expressed Nazi views but says those days are behind him.

Duke

With Duke expected to get the majority of the white vote, political consultant Renard Rochon said Edwards will need to double his white vote in the primary to 33 percent and get every black vote available.

Strong black support for Edwards is a given in the election, said Democratic state Rep. Sherman Copelin. A 35 percent white vote for Edwards is well within reason, he said.

"It's amazing. Go in the barrooms, the beauty shops, the clubs, anywhere you will find people working for votes," Copelin said.

Black voters didn't believe white voters would back Duke to the extent they did in the primary, said Rep. Bill Jefferson, D-La.

"Edwards didn't get as big a black vote as he could have in the primary because black voters just didn't take Duke that seriously," he said.

Black voters also didn't believe white voters would back Duke to the extent they did, Bridges said.

"We just didn't know there were that many white people who still were that prejudiced against us," Bridges said. "Evidently we were wrong, but we won't make that mistake again. In the churches, the social halls, the streets, you're going to really see people working this time."

Louisiana has 2.2 million registered voters, of which a little more than 625,000 are black and 1.6 million are white, said the state Department of Elections and Registration.

Of the 625,000 black voters, about 32,000 registered after the October primary.

The state has at least 17,000 but under 20,000 Jews, Cohn said.

Black voters alone wouldn't defeat Duke, analysts said. Some state officials expressed concern over the effects of a strong racial split in the election.

Congressman opts for U.S. Senate seat

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Democratic Congressman Wayne Owens announced Monday he will forego a bid for a fourth term in Utah's 2nd District and run in 1992 for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Republican Jake Garn.

Republicans were quick to denounce Owens' decision, claiming he was reneging on a promise to his constituents and to Garn that he would not seek the post.

The conservative darling of many urban voters and the frequent adversary of development-minded rural interests said he expects to face a negative Republican campaign.

Owens blamed the GOP-dominated Legislature, saying its recent reapportionment had robbed him of Democratic support in his urban, political diverse district.

"The mean-spirited Republicans in the Legislature gave me an excuse to run" by realigning the district's western boundaries and putting traditionally Democratic areas from the 2nd District and adding them to the heavily Republican 3rd District.

"That is an excuse to run for the Senate, but it's not a reason ... and there are overpowering reasons to run for the U.S. Senate," said Owens, who is in his third consecutive term after serving a fourth in 1972-74.

But Bruce Hough, chairman of the Utah Republican Party, called that "pure balderdash."

"This is really vintage Wayne

Owens. He is acting on a personal ambition to be a U.S. senator, a position he has coveted for many years," Hough said.

Hough said the 2nd District still was evenly divided among Republicans, Democrats and independents.

A state-Democratic-Party analysis indicated last week that Owens had lost only about a percent of his supporters to the 3rd District.

"I feel I have been betrayed by a very close personal friend," Garn said, because Owens had promised him he would not run for the Senate.

Garn said Washington is plagued by politicians on both sides of the aisle who hold double standards in their personal and public lives, and who allow personal ambition to obscure their responsibilities.

"I think Congressman Owens fits in both of these categories," Garn said.

Official pleads no contest to tree theft

HOUSTON (AP) — A city councilman pleaded no contest Monday to reduced charges just before he was to go on trial for felling the theft of a magnolia tree from an alleged crack house bulldozed on his orders.

Councilman Ben Reyes agreed to pay the owner $1,000 and was given three months' deferred adjudication, a type of probation that if served successfully would eliminate the indictment from records.

Reyes was indicted May 30 on the theft charge and two charges of criminal mischief in connection with the razing of abandoned buildings. He maintained the buildings were drug dealing sites.

In August, just a week before the trial was to begin, authorities dropped the criminal mischief charges and rescheduled the theft case.

The tree allegedly was replanted in Reyes' yard, where it died.

WHO: 75% of AIDS comes from heterosexual sex

Mine violence claims 69 lives

GENEVA (AP) - Heterosexual sex has caused the infection of 75 percent of people with the AIDS virus worldwide, and the infection is now rising in Western countries, the World Health Organization said Monday.

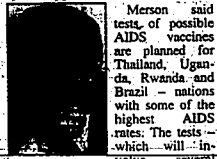

The majority of the heterosexually infected people are in the developing world, particularly in Africa, and it still remains only a small percentage of cases in North America and Europe, the Geneva-based agency said in an extensive report.

The U.N. group says up to 5,000 people are infected each day around the world, and officials fear an increase in pregnant women infecting their babies.

Concern about heterosexual transmission of the AIDS virus was heightened after basketball star Magic Johnson announced Thursday he had the HIV virus and said he had no homosexual affairs.

In the United States, 3 percent of men and 34 percent of women contracted the virus from a person of the opposite sex, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"It is not easy to change sexual behavior, but hopefully with more people like Magic Johnson coming out and talking about their illness everyone will realize they are at risk and take more care," said Dr. Michael Merson, head of the U.N. health agency's AIDS program.

Merson said tests of possible AIDS vaccines are planned for Thailand, Uganda, Rwanda and Brazil - nations with some of the highest AIDS rates. The tests - which will involve several thousand volunteers - mark a departure from previous approaches favoring early testing on animals.

About a dozen potential vaccines to slow or halt the onset of AIDS are being tested in the United States and Europe, and several more may be available. The testing not scheduled to begin for at least a year.

Merson, however, advised against having too much hope for the vaccines.

"The major point is that we're not going to have a vaccine today and we're not going to have a vaccine tomorrow," Merson said. "We have to do everything we can to inform the public now of the risks and the need for safer sex."

It usually takes about 10 years before a person with HIV to show the full signs of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which attacks the immune system and leads to death.

Merson said an estimated 8-10 million adults carry the human immunodeficiency virus that leads to AIDS. The agency has predicted 40 million adults and children will have HIV by 2000, and a growing percentage may be children or people infected through heterosexual sex.

course was "overwhelmingly responsible for the spread of HIV in sub-Saharan Africa, where an estimated 6 million people already have the HIV virus and 900,000 babies have been infected by their mothers."

In Asia and Latin America, the virus is also spread mainly through heterosexual practices, said the agency, reporting a 40-fold increase in reported AIDS cases in Central America since 1988.

In the United States and Europe where homosexual men and intravenous drug users account for most cases - WHO and other agencies' statistics indicate a rise in heterosexual cases.

About 100,000 HIV infections have been reported in the United States since 1985 because of heterosexual sex. From this figure, there were 3,100 AIDS cases that were reported last year, compared with 250 such cases reported in 1985.

In Western Europe, 1,309 AIDS cases through heterosexual sex were reported last year, compared with 149 cases six years ago, WHO officials said.

The Pan American Health Organization also said the number of infections from heterosexual relations is on the rise in the Western Hemisphere.

WHO also said a rise in female AIDS sufferers has led to a "striking increase" in mother-to-child transmission.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Rival black factions at a gold mine waged a night-long battle with homemade weapons, leaving 29 dead Monday in a huge compound surrounded with violence for the past week.

The latest clash at the President Steve Gold Mine mine marked the third night of rampages since Nov. 3, when workers supporting a national general strike tried to stop other miners from reporting for duty.

The initial battle a week ago seemed linked to the political issue of the strike. But the latest fighting appeared to be revenge attacks carried out almost entirely along tribal lines.

Sixty-nine blacks have been killed and 177 injured in the violence, Roussouw said.

Group wants Aussies in from sun

SYDNEY, Australia - An anti-cancer group appealed Monday for Australians to take a four-hour midday break from the sun to ease the highest rate of skin cancer in the world.

The New South Wales state Cancer Council suggests restructuring school activities to keep pupils out of the sun between 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., the worst hours for ultraviolet radiation.

People traditionally suffer the most radiation damage during their childhood, the council said.

The latest figures show 140,000 new cases of melanoma develop in Australia each year, basically from cumulative ultraviolet radiation. The incidence ranges from 25 per 100,000 in Tasmania, a state off the southeast coast, to 45 per 100,000 in subtropical Queensland.

Court clears way for Hell's Angels run

MELBOURNE, Australia - A court ruled Monday that visa applications by Hell's Angels members cannot be rejected just because they belong to the motorcycle group.

The Federal Court said Immigration Department has been "unreasonable" in delaying handling requests by 19 Hell's Angels members who want to attend a "World Run" in Adelaide, scheduled to start Friday. It ordered the authorities to re-evaluate the visa requests by Tuesday afternoon.

The court also ordered Immigration authorities to reconsider four applications rejected earlier.

The court was told a British man spent Sunday night in jail after he was arrested at Adelaide airport when authorities learned of his membership in the motorcycle club.

Israeli soldiers kill 4 armed guerrillas

JERUSALEM - Israeli soldiers killed four heavily armed guerrillas who entered from Egypt Monday in the first clash-along the lightly patrolled border in nearly a year, the army command said.

Israeli soldiers often intercept armed Arab attackers crossing into the Jewish state, but few incursions occur from Egypt, the only Arab nation with a peace accord with Israel.

A military patrol spotted the guerrillas in the western part of the Negev desert in southern Israel, said a short statement.

The guerrillas, who crossed into Israel from the Sinai desert, carried five Soviet-designed Kalashnikov assault rifles, ammunition and dozens of hand grenades, it said.

The guerrillas were killed following a chase, said the army, which did not give an exact location for the incident. No Israeli casualties were reported.

Soviets say debt now $81 billion

MOSCOW (AP) - The Soviet Union's foreign debt has topped $81 billion, far higher than previously reported, according to news reports Monday.

The independent Interfax news agency said the figure was disclosed during a closed-door meeting today of the committee formed to run the country after the failed hard-line coup in August.

The Soviet foreign debt had been put at $65 billion to $68 billion just last week.

Interfax said that most of the debt has piled up since President Mikhail S. Gorbachev assumed power in 1985, but it did not give a specific figure.

Gorbachev's predecessors were conservative borrowers and promptly paid their debts. Until very recently the Soviet Union had been considered a good credit risk.

But now the West is increasingly concerned that the Soviet Union will not be able to meet its payments, and Western investors are holding back because of fears of Soviet insolvency.

Interfax said the Soviet debt stood at $47.2 billion convertible rubles, which at the official exchange rate is more than $81 billion. That figure does not include up to 18 billion convertible rubles, or $31 billion, that is owed to former East Bloc countries that once were considered Soviet satellites.

The ruble as a rule is not convertible, but government currency can be exchanged at an officially set rate.

The consequences of the Soviet Union's hard currency crunch can be felt throughout the economy and society. Because of the shortfall, factories cannot buy needed Western parts for production. Some medicines and syringes that traditionally were purchased abroad can no longer be bought.

A worker inspects the structure's inside after an international team of scientists achieved sustained nuclear fusion in a weekend experiment near London.

Scientists want $5 billion fusion reactor after experiment's success

LONDON (AP) — European scientists in pursuit of nuclear fusion's "clean and unlimited" energy said Monday they will appeal for $5 billion to build a reactor for experiments by a consortium of nations, including the United States.

The scientists were thrilled by an experiment on Saturday in which they said they achieved fusion for two seconds and produced about 1.7 megawatts of power for nearly a second.

The commercial production of fusion power in decades away, but it promises an boundless source energy. The main fuel used in fusion can easily be extracted from water, and scientists also say that the process is much safer than the nuclear fission that powers today's nuclear plants.

Scientists from 14 European countries took part in Saturday's experiment at the Joint European Torus, or JET, nuclear research center, 50 miles north of London.

The United States, the Soviet Union and Japan had long been working on their own to achieve the same results.

An American scientist said Monday that U.S. research has been hampered by tight budgets.

Dr. Ronald C. Davidson, head of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory at Princeton University in New Jersey, said the European breakthrough would not change the American timetable for similar experiments.

He also said he hoped the success would stimulate worldwide interest in fusion as a possible alternative fuel.

The proposed International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor is supported by the Soviets, Americans, Japanese and the European Community.

The experimental nuclear fusion reactor would cost $5 billion, but the scientists say it would be worth it.

At the news conference Monday, Alan Gibson, associate director of JET, said: "We are in the business here of establishing energy options for the next century."

"Fusion has in its favor ... the largest fuel reserves on the planet."

The scientists want their countries to put up the $5 billion.

But they said many politicians are reluctant to become committed to the research because it will not bear fruit for years.

Muslim region rejects Yeltsin's declared state of emergency

GROZNY, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Separatists in the southern Chechen-Ingush region fired automatic weapons to celebrate the Russian legislature's refusal Monday to approve Boris Yeltsin's state-of-emergency in their Muslim enclave.

Gen. Dzhokar Dudayev, formerly a bomber pilot in the Soviet air force and now president of the Chechen-Ingush region, had threatened terrorist attacks on Moscow's nuclear power stations and subways if the decree was not repealed.

The 177-4 vote Monday against Yeltsin by the usually pliant Russian lawmakers was the first major show of no confidence in Yeltsin since his election in June as president of the Russian Federation — a mosaic of scores of restless ethnic groups scattered among the Russian majority.

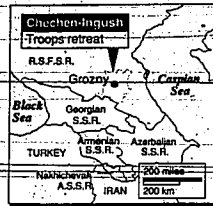

The legislature's rebuff was likely to damage Yeltsin's authority, which was greatly enhanced by his successful opposition to hard-liners who tried to oust Soviet President, Mikhail S. Gorbachev in August. The vote was not binding, but may force Yeltsin to withdraw his decree.

Yeltsin did not attend the debate and had no immediate comment on the resolution, which also called for negotiations toward a political solution. Dudayev said he was asked to take part in talks and was prepared to do so.

Two Yeltsin-allies, Russian parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov and Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, the author of the decree, reversed their earlier defense of the crackdown. They backed the lawmakers.

U.S. diplomats back to Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — U.S. diplomats returned Monday to Cambodia's capital after a 16-year absence as part of an international effort to maintain a cease-fire in a devastating civil war and bring free elections.

ing force, the limited number of troops he was able to send to the region to enforce his decree, and the failure of his representatives to carry out an order to arrest Dudayev showed his government to be weak in areas not dominated by ethnic Russians.

In the Chechen-Ingush capital of Grozny, cheering militants fired their automatic weapons in the air and honked car horns to celebrate the Russian retreat.

Dudayev said the Russian vote represented a "victory for democracy and truth." There was no sign of compromise from the Chechen-Ingush leaders on their Nov. 2 independence declaration from the Russian Federation.

Dubrovnik too dangerous for monitors, EC claims

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav federal forces attacked the Adriatic port of Dubrovnik by land and sea on Monday, and the European Community said it would pull its monitors out of the besieged port in secessionist Croatia.

The whole of Dubrovnik is ablaze and surrounded by smoke, Croatian radio reported.

In eastern Croatia, Serbian-led federal soldiers appeared close to winning a 3-month-old battle for the Danube River town of Vukovar.

The ceaseless advances on Dubrovnik and Vukovar appeared to be bringing the army close to capturing two cities with great symbolic and strategic importance to both sides in the 4½-month old civil war, in which more than 1,700 people have died.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman said the cities had been "plunged into total war" and called for peacekeeping troops.

It could not be determined immediately whether Tudjman had changed Croatia's position that peacekeepers should be used only on the republic's borders, not to separate fighters within the republic.

Serbian leaders in Belgrade called for U.N. peacekeepers on Saturday after the European Community imposed sanctions, but U.N. officials have said it would wait until the EC requests such a move. The EC sanctions were aimed mainly at Serbia, which has rejected an EC peace plan.

The fighting began after Croatia declared independence June 25. Croatia has lost about one-third of its territory in the fighting. Croatia's 600,000 Serbs fear persecution in an independent Croatia, while Croatia says the neighboring Socialist republic of Serbia is using the minority issue to increase its territory.

LOCAL STORE OWNERS JOIN FORCES WITH NATIONAL FIRM

Danny D's furniture store has joined with Land and Sky of Lincoln, Nebraska, a national distributing firm, to bring you the ultimate in flotation sleep. Their research department has produced some important bio-mechanical data on proper sleep surface allowing a sleeping body to maintain a posture similar to that of a standing body. Most available sleep surfaces make this posture nearly impossible. Unyielding inner-spring mattresses restrict blood supply and causes tossing and turning, unsupported flotation sleep does not provide optimum spinal alignment and the result is the new NATURALIZER IMPRESSION. It contours three distinct sections: head, spine and leg section providing varying levels of support. The result is near-perfect body alignment defined by physicians and chiropractors as the ideal sleeping posture, the comfort and rejuvenating powers of the Naturalizer Impression are so pronounced that you body savors the experience during sleep and draws upon it throughout the day. Never has sleep been this comfortable or responsive even with partners of varying weights.

Owners of Danny D's state that this mattress starts around $299 and can be put in a soft sided bed or the bookcase wood frame waterbed.

The NATURALIZER IMPRESSION mattress is only available at Danny D's in the Lynwood Shopping Center, Twin Falls, Idaho.

OAS delegation meets officials

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Political and military leaders opposed to Jean-Bertrand Aristide on Monday gave foreign envoys a long list of supposed abuses by the deposed president, parliamentary sources said.

The head of the Organization of American States delegation said he was trying to convince Aristide's opponents to allow the return of Haiti's first democratically elected leader.

Aristide, 38, a former parish priest who is extremely popular among the masses but despised by the military, was deposed in a Sept. 30 military coup after only seven months in office.

On Monday, Aristide was in Cochabamba, Bolivia, to meet with pro-democratic supporters from Latin America.

The 14-member OAS team held a two-hour talk with interim Prime Minister Jean-Jacques Honorat, who described the session as "cordial" but declined further comment. The diplomats later met with the military chief, Brig. Gen. Raoul Cedras.

The country's provisional government hopes to persuade the OAS to drop its demand that Aristide be reinstated and halt an economic embargo of Haiti, according to parliamentary sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Conference recognizes Minico High students

RUPERT — Jenny Mortensen, Joy Phillips and Donna Heischel of Minico High School are among the 10-member All-Great State Conference cross country team. In addition, Spartan Coach Reddington was named coach of the year.

Mortensen, with a time of 20:01, was tops in her division. Phillips and Heischel finished sixth and eighth, respectively, in the standings. A pair of volleyballers, Tiffani Davis, a hitter, and setter Nina Bair, garnered honorable mention for Minico as well.

Utah coach follows surgery by completing marathon

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Utah coach Rick Majerus, who two years ago underwent multiple cardiac bypass surgery, finished his first marathon here Sunday.

The 43-year-old coach, who credits diet and exercise for transforming his once-rundown frame into that of a much thinner distance runner, finished the 26.2-mile race in five hours, 54 minutes and 29 seconds.

Majerus, whose Runnin' Utes went 30-4 last season and made it to the NCAA's "Sweet 16," finished 837th. "You feel like quitting every step of the way from 17 miles on," he said immediately after the race.

He returned to his hotel, looking forward to a hot tub and doing nothing for five hours except lay there, Majerus said. "I'll be like a beached whale."

Iceland nationals visit CSI

By Larry Elvey, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's one-game exhibition season begins and ends with the Golden Eagles hosting the Iceland National Team at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

In a rarity due to the compact international schedule tours, CSI Coach Fred Trenkle was able to take a look at Iceland in a loss at College of Idaho. But he isn't sure what he was seeing.

"They were a bone-tired team," said Trenkle, noting that for the most part they fulfilled the expected international look of mature, physical athletes.

"They just got off the plane after 21 hours and played Washington and the next night they played in Oregon after busing down from Seattle all day. Then they were in Caldwell. Jet lag, travel and competition simply had wrung them out."

"Two days off should them. Then they'll play Boise State (tonight) and have a relatively short drive here. It should be closer to the true Iceland Olympic Team," the coach said.

Trenkle worries about things like that because his Eagles face the same tortured road beginning Wednesday night.

By 4 a.m. Thursday the Eagles will be on the road for Salt Lake City, flying from there to Baltimore for a two-game stand against perennial powers Hagerstown and Allegany junior colleges Friday and Saturday.

They return Sunday night, play Lewis and Clark jayvees Tuesday, then wind up the eight days with a home game against Rocky Mountain College of Helena, Mont.

"I know a schedule like that takes it out of a team physically and emotionally," said Trenkle who thus empathizes with Iceland.

"They have those mature, strong athletes who play physically. The night I saw them play, they hit just one of 10 three-pointers but I know they were 8-16 against Washington. They didn't have great quickness," Trenkle said, adding that few international teams don't have three-point shooters anymore. "That could be a place we see a big change in them. We have to defend the perimeter."

Iceland usually starts 6-8 Magerus Mathison, 6-1 Henning Hemingsson, 6-8 Civanovic, Brad Branson, 6-2 J. Bardur Eithersson and 6-4 Nokki Mar Jonsson.

Based on his one look at the team, Trenkle said it appeared Bradason is the major inside scoring threat. "But he'll come outside, too."

CSI seems to be getting healthier as point guard Lance Jackson practiced without taping his foot Monday.

Fans are reminded that this exhibition is not part of the regular schedule. It is called "CSI Foundation Night," in which there are no reserved seats or season passes. Iceland requires a rather large show payment. The remainder of proceeds will go into CSI's total scholarship fund, which awards stipends outside of athletics.

Sun Valley ski opener delayed

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY — Saturday was to have been the earliest opening day for skiing in Bald Mountain's 55-year history.

However, Mother Nature has stepped to dish out warmer-than-expected temperatures that even the resort's $8 million automated snow making system can't keep up with.

Instead of the Nov. 16 opening date, Bald Mountain will open the Warm Springs side of the mountain on Nov. 23, still a week earlier than the usual Thanksgiving opening.

Open runs will include Upper College, Flying Squirrel, and Mid- and Lower-Warm Springs and can be skied at reduced rates.

Redskins' QB outshines high-profile peers

The Associated Press

HERNDON, Va. — Mark Rypien doesn't remind many people of Dan Marino, Jim Kelly, Joe Montana or any of the NFL's other marquee passers. The Washington Redskins really don't care.

"I think Mark has helped lead us, and he's been a big part of it," coach Joe Gibbs said Monday in reflecting on the touchdown passes and 442 yards Rypien accumulated in Sunday's 56-17 rout of Atlanta. "He's going to continue as he plays to show everybody.... I think I've felt real good about Ryp for a long time."

But Rypien's occasionally erratic performances make it difficult to realize that the Redskins have won 22 of his last 25 regular-season starts. Or that Monday's performance against Rypien is the NFL's winningest active regular-season quarterback with a 28-11 (.717) mark.

Even as Washington has run off its unbeaten streak, critics have complained that Rypien wasn't up to leading the team to a Super Bowl. A lackluster performance against the Philadelphia Eagles in Week 4 provided ammunition for those who say he can't play well in pressure games.

In several of Washington's other wins, particularly against the Chicago Bears, the focus was on the Redskins' third-ranked

Threatt tries filling Magic's shoes

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Now playing point guard for the Los Angeles Lakers: Sedale Threatt.

A smaller version of Magic Johnson? "No, no way," Threatt said. "I'm just going to go out and try to distribute the ball, play the way Magic would on the fast break."

Little did Threatt know on Oct. 2 when he went from Seattle to L.A. for three future second-round draft choices that he'd be the team's starting point guard, what with Magic around.

But that's the case since Johnson announced last Thursday he was retiring after testing positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

Like most of his teammates, Threatt didn't do very well Friday night at Phoenix in his first game since Johnson's retirement.

Besides being only 6-foot-2 to Magic's 6-9, Threatt had a very un-Magic like performance — 7 points, 2 assists and 2 rebounds in a 113-85 loss.

But Sunday night against Minnesota, Threatt was much better — 27 points, 14 assists and two rebounds in a 96-86 win.

"The game at Phoenix, we were all real down, so I came out tonight and really wanted to turn it up," Threatt said afterward. "They were setting some good picks on the side and I got my shot. I had four turnovers, though. I'm going to have to work on that."

At age 30, Threatt said he's not under pressure despite the circumstances.

"If I would have been a rookie in this situation, there would be a lot of pressure," he said. "I'm an old veteran in this league. I know what goes on around here. I'm just going out and trying to win."

Threatt was a sixth-round draft choice of the Philadelphia 76ers in 1983 after playing at West Virginia Tech. He played more than three seasons with the 76ers before being traded to Chicago, where he played briefly before moving to Seattle.

Before this season, he averaged 8.6 points and a little less than three assists in 544 regular-season games. In five games with the Lakers, he's averaging 17.6 points, 7.6 assists and 5.0 rebounds.

Threatt came to the Lakers tabbed as a backup to Johnson who would also play some at shooting guard.

He had no qualms about his role.

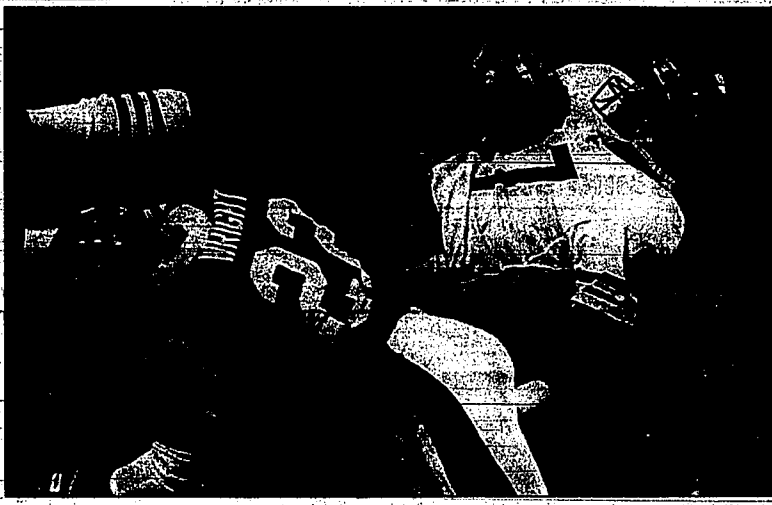

"That's the only reason I came here, playing with Magic, no question about it," Threatt said. "He said with me and another guy, we could win it all. It was real positive talking to him."

"It's devastating, really, I just wanted to be a part of all this."

Bears' offense continues to roll

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Chicago Bears overcame their offensive problems and, for the second successive week, overcame a challenge to their NFC Central supremacy.

Neal Anderson's 6-yard run and Jim Harbaugh's 7-yard pass to Anthony Morgan capped the Bears' opening two drives — the first-time all-season they've scored on two consecutive marches — and Chicago took control of the division Monday night with a 34-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

Anderson, who rushed for 91 yards, added a 24-yard touchdown run and Lemuel Stinson returned an interception 34 yards for a TD as the Bears scored more than 21 points for the first time this season. Chicago had five drives of at least 10 plays and didn't have to punt until 10 minutes remained.

Chicago (8-2), which beat Detroit last week, has won four straight to take a two-game lead over the Lions. The Bears are seeking their seventh NFC Central title in the last eight seasons.

The Vikings (5-6), the only team besides the Bears to win the Central crown since 1984, fell 34 games back. Minnesota is 18-21 since winning the '89 title. The Vikings had won 23 of their previous 29 games — including three straight against Chicago — at the Metrodome.

As usual, Chicago's defense was tough, allowing 20 points or fewer for the ninth time in 10 games. Turnovers set up 10 of Minnesota's points. Chicago has won 86 of its last 88 games when holding opponents under 18 points, including all seven this season.

Kevin Butler added field goals of 50 and 41 yards for the Bears, who won a Monday night road game for only the third time in 17 tries.

After Minnesota went 80 yards on the game's first series, with Darrin Nelson's 6-yard touchdown run giving the Vikings their only lead, the Bears used Anderson's running and Harbaugh's short passing to take control.

Anderson rushed nine times for 42 yards on a 13-play, 80-yard drive that ate up 9:03. A 19-yard interference penalty on Reggie Rutland on third-and-11 kept alive a drive that ended with Anderson's 6-yard run.

The Vikings were unable to advance on their next possession but appeared to have recovered a fumbled punt return by Mark Green, who was substituting for injured return man Johnny Bailey. However, John Magnus took the ball away from Minnesota's Audrey McMillan.

Chicago then went 68 yards in 15 plays in a drive that took 8:09. Harbaugh had 11-yard passes to James Thornton and Morgan and an 8-yarder to Tom Weddle on third-and-7 before hitting Morgan for the TD.

Bowl picture starts getting a little clearer

The Associated Press

Notre Dame is headed to the Sugar Bowl, Penn State will play Tennessee in the Fiesta Bowl and Florida State will probably go to the Cotton Bowl if it loses to Miami, several bowl and school sources said Monday.

Although official announcements won't be made until Sunday, most major matchups apparently fell into place after Notre Dame's 35-34 loss to Tennessee on Saturday.

Sources said Notre Dame will play Florida in the Sugar Bowl even if the 12-ranked Irish lose to No. 8 Penn State on Saturday. No. 5 Florida can clinch the outright Southeastern Conference title — and the automatic Sugar Bowl berth that goes with it — by beating Kentucky this week.

Sixers hold off Bucks' surge

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Long-range shooting led the key Monday night as the Philadelphia 76ers finished with seven 3-point goals, one more than Milwaukee, to edge the Bucks 102-99.

Hersey Hawkins led all scorers with 21 points, including 3-for-4 3-pointers, as the 76ers led the Bucks, who rallied from 23 points down in the second quarter to make the game close at the end.

The 76ers won their fourth consecutive game and took the lead over New York and Orlando in the Atlantic Division, despite losing their first two games.

Philadelphia connected on seven of 11 3-point shots. Milwaukee made six of 14. "If the shots are there, nobody's going to have to tell us to shoot them," said Hawkins, who became the first Philadelphia player other than Charles Barkley to lead the 76ers in scoring this season.

The shooting impressed Philadelphia head coach Jim Lynnam. "Both teams were making their 3-pointers," Lynnam said. "Hersey made some big ones, and Ron Anderson hit one when we really needed it."

The 76ers led 89-83 in the fourth period, but the Bucks closed to 94-93 on a 3-point by Jay Humphries with 1:18 left. A jumper by Johnny Dawkins and a hook shot by Manute Bol gave Philadelphia a five-point lead with 17 seconds left.

Two free throws each by Armon Gilliam and Dawkins completed the scoring. Milwaukee coach Bob Harris said he will switch some starters to force more effective defense.

"I guess I'm going to have to change the lineup," Harris said. "I'm not satisfied with the way we're playing defense."

"We got off to a very slow start," said Harris, whose team committed 17 turnovers in the first half, and finished with 17. "We played well in the second half, because we took better care of the ball," he said.

Barkley led 17 points and 15 rebounds, although he left the game with an injured right ankle with 3:21 left in the third quarter. He returned with 10:56 remaining in the fourth in his final game.

Milwaukee, which got 20 points from Moses Malone and 18 from Dale Ellis, trailed 63-43 one minute into the second half, but Alvin Robertson scored six points during a 12-2 spurt, moving the Bucks within 10 with 5:49 remaining in the third period.

Chicago (7-2) going into Monday night isn't quite on that level. The next two in line, Dallas and Detroit (each 6-4), are still building, and the Cowboys must face the Giants and Redskins on the road the next two weeks.

The Cowboys and Lions are young, and Detroit is awful on the road and seemingly losing confidence. "We have to take a long look at the direction we're headed," coach Wayne Fontes said after the 30-21 loss to 2-8 Tampa Bay.

The Eagles can do something if they can keep Jim McMahon healthy (they're 5-1) with one, 0-4 without. The Giants have talent, but not incentive; the Falcons (always) and the Vikings (usually) are erratic.

World Series MVP files for free agency

NEW YORK (AP) — World Series MVP Jack Morris and suspended Atlanta outfielder Otis Nixon were among the five players looking to raise their salary to a record $7 million to raise the total to a record $97 million.

Meanwhile, the Pittsburgh Pirates made a late $18.5 million, four-year offer to outfielder Doug Bonilla, who filed for free agency on the first possible day. The offer was rejected Friday by Bonilla's agent, Dennis Gilbert.

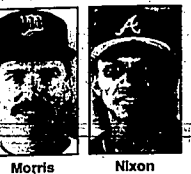

Starting Tuesday, I will contact all the teams that have contacted us," Gilbert said. "I will start making appointments with them and see what they have to say."

Pirates general manager Larry Dougherty declined to comment Monday on the offer or confirm that it had been made. Bonilla has said he was "99.9 percent" certain he would leave Pittsburgh.

The total of free agents broke the previous record of 96, set last year. Others filing Monday were Minnesota second baseman Al Newman, Twins catcher Junior Ortiz and California outfielder Max Venable.

Several more players were eligible to file by the midnight deadline, including Twins third baseman Mike Pagliaro, Los Angeles catcher Gary Carter and Houston pitcher Mike Scott.

Morris had a 1993 option for $3.65 million but one day after that option was not exercised.

Morris and Nixon pitching 10 shutout innings against Atlanta in Game 7 of the World Series, he decided not to exercise it. Twins general manager Andy MacPhail has said he hoped to re-sign Morris, who is looking to raise his salary to the $5 million-or-year range.

"I'm not optimistic at the moment," Morris' agent, Richard Moss, said Monday. "I had several conversations with Andy and the one we agreed on was that if anyone deserves to be at or near the top of salary structure, it's Jack Morris. What I take this all to mean is they just haven't decided whether to pay the money, that's all."

MacPhail was in Florida and did not want to get agitated about the top-paid pitcher is Roger Clemens of Boston, who averages $5.38 million beginning next season. Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets is second at $5.15 million.

Philadelphia's Charles Barkley muscled through Milwaukee's Moses Malone...

Maybe it wasn't a very good idea to add two more teams to the playoffs. With mediocrity as entrenched as it is in this sport, why dunk two just one of 1991 NFL season now and let Washington, Houston, New Orleans and Buffalo play for the title? The standings tell the story. Going into Monday night's Chicago-Milwaukee game, there were five teams in each conference (over .500) and one of them, Detroit (6-4) has lost quarterback Rodney Peete for the season and its 100,000 owners, where it has been outscored 330-34.

The Redskins, Oilers, Saints and Bills have all but severed up their divisions, leaving, as the main suspense for the rest of 1991: Can Washington (10-0) become just the second team ever to finish unbeaten? Who will win the AFC West?

The 5-5 include the Jets, who managed to lose to the previously winless Colts. Sunday, giving up as many touchdowns (four) as Indianapolis had managed 16 weeks in 17 games.

Pencil in the Bills (9-1), Oilers (8-2) and probably three West teams — the Chiefs, Broncos and Raiders — for the playoffs.

But they're likely to be playing in Rich Stadium in January. That means a grind-it-out team like Kansas City (which beat Buffalo 33-6 in Arrowhead) probably had a better shot at keeping them from the Super Bowl than run-and-shoot Houston, for example.

Can anyone beat Washington? New Orleans (6-1) has plenty of defense, but not much offense, and the Vikings (usually) are erratic.

Thoughts of upset linger in Vols' minds

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee coach Johnny Majors may be ready to concentrate on Mississippi, but he will take Volunter fans a little longer to forget Saturday's improbable victory over Notre Dame.

"After we make our awards and recognitions, it's time to move on," Majors said.

In the second half, Tennessee assigned more players to stop the run and hoped Irish quarterback Ricky Mirer wouldn't pass them silly.

"They shut down our running game and forced us to pass," Mirer said. "They gave us luck on every series. You're looking for I've never seen before. They caught us even just when we were about to adjust."

Mirer said the Irish weren't trying to sit on their lead. "It's not that we wanted to put them on early. Tennessee just became more aggressive up front."

The defense contributed in other ways, especially with the play that turned the game around and the one that preserved the victory, both blocked field goals.

Floyd Miley picked up the "daryl" by "Daryl" and "ran 85 yards" for a touchdown in the winning second-half drive. Mirer and Jeremy Lincoln blocked that would have been the winning field goal on the final play of the game.

Former UNLV guard still bouncing around

The Associated Press

The next basketball stop for Anderson Hunt probably will be Europe, a haven for expatriate American players.

"So why declare? Why not stay at UNLV, play a year at the point and learn the position? That's what Tankaran wanted to know, adding that the person responsible for Hunt leaving early 'ought to be shot.'"

Agent Leigh Steinberg, who represented Anthony, said when he's the one place he probably ought to be in the backcourt at UNLV. There's plenty of room for him there, but it's the one place he can't play.

He'd be a senior now, the floor general, the guy who had been to two straight NCAA championship games. He'd be the one around whom Jerry Tankaran could be around reconstruction of the Runtin-Retur.

Instead, he is in limbo, undrafted cut from two NBA training camps, a man without a team and running out of choices and chances. He got caught in basketball's revolving door, betwixt and between.

Hunt's preference was the NBA. With a year of college eligibility remaining, he has an option. Many players bounce around while the pro grabbed teammates Larry Johnson, Stacey Augmon, Greg Anthony and George Ackles and left him behind.

A's slugger's twin continues struggle toward big leagues

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — It's the kind of question you learn to expect when you're the identical twin brother of Jose Canseco.

"A lot of times people come up and ask me, 'Why aren't you in the major leagues? Why aren't you as great as your brother?'" said Ozzie Canseco, the older of the Canseco brothers by two minutes but years behind on the baseball diamond.

"They don't realize I was a pitcher for many years," he said. "I have a lot of catching up to do."

Ozzie Canseco, 27, has spent the last seven years trying to catch up to his superstar brother.

Jose has appeared in three World Series, won an MVP award, hit 209 homers and become the only player in major-league history to hit 40 homers and steal 40 bases in a season.

Ozzie, meanwhile, has remained obscure in places like Onondaga, N.Y., Madison, Wis., and even Osaka, Japan. Except for nine games with the A's in 1990, Ozzie has never played above Class AA in this country.

"From what Jose told me, when they came out of high school they were pretty similar," said Karl Kuehl, Oakland's director of player personnel. "They're not similar anymore."

Ozzie said it all goes back to his days as a pitcher, which began in high school. He was drafted by the New York Yankees in 1983 and pitched for almost four years in the minor leagues.

"I was very unhappy all through that minor league as a pitcher," admitted Ozzie, who has been in Montgomery over the past week to watch the federal trial of a dispute between his brother and a former baseball card show promoter.

"I knew I had the talents to do something else. I could run well, I had tremendous power, I could throw well to third and I could play the outfield."

Ozzie is convinced that he has the same physical talents as his brother.

"Exactly the same," he said. "It's just a matter of experience and knowledge, which I did not get a chance to obtain because of the fact I was pitching."

Ozzie Canseco, shown in 1990 with Oakland's AA affiliate Huntsville Stars, says his progress was slowed because he started out as a pitcher.

And there's something else.

"They have different personalities," Kuehl said. "I feel Jose's personality is better suited to become an elite athlete than his brother's. I've seen Jose when he gets mad. When somebody knocks him down, that's when he's at his best. He's just awesome when you rile him."

Ozzie switched to the outfield when he pitched.

But Kuehl said the differences between Ozzie and Jose are more profound.

"They're genetic twins so they're genetically identical," he said. "But have you ever looked at them side by side? ... Jose got into weight training earlier and you can tell that by his build."

"What I have seen also is Jose has a lot better range of motion, flexibility, etc. He's a faster runner, quite a bit faster," Kuehl said. "Jose has that great, short swing. His brother is awfully strong and can hit a ball a long way, but he doesn't have the same quality swing as Jose

Colts' coach savors 1st victory

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Skies were overcast outside the Indianapolis Colts headquarters Monday, but coach Rick Venturi's outlook brightened the room the day after his team's first victory of the season.

"The sun is certainly shining in Indianapolis today," Venturi said at his first weekly news conference as a winning pro coach.

The Colts suffered through nine straight losses to open the season, the first five under coach Ron Meyer, before coming away with a 28-27 victory over the New York Jets on Sunday.

"It's a real credit to guys who can survive, who can persist through tough times. Nobody likes to be the butt of jokes," Venturi said. "It's a real credit to guys to be able to fight through that tough period. Anybody can be a frontrunner."

"I'm basically going to give a game ball to everyone in this building."

You can bet Eric Dickerson won't be getting one, though, and not just because he wasn't in the building

Monday. The talented but subordinate running back is home in Malibu, Calif., sitting out a four-week suspension Venturi handed down last week after Dickerson left a practice early. He also was fined one week's pay in addition to the four weeks' pay he'll lose with the suspension.

Venturi moved up the timing of his news conference Monday, possibly to catch a plane. The Indianapolis News reported he, general manager Jim Irsay and four other members of the Colts organization were flying on team owner Robert Irsay's plane to San Francisco for an arbitration hearing Tuesday.

Dickerson refused to discuss the Colts' organization or the arbitration hearing.

The Colts' only comment came in a brief statement: "Pursuant to the terms of the collective bargaining agreement, Eric Dickerson has requested expedited arbitration with respect to his fine and suspension, and the Indianapolis Colts have agreed. The Colts expect the arbitrator to uphold the club's position."

"On 'The Eric Dickerson Show' broadcast Monday on local radio station WIBC the running back said he had watched part of the Colts' victory via satellite. He said he also watched an episode of 'Star Trek.'"

"I thought they played hard, and I'm glad they won. No matter what, I'm still a part of that team, and I want to win," Dickerson said.

"I talked to a couple of players yesterday. They were happy. They were like, 'I can't believe we won.'"

Dickerson said.

Equally hard to believe was that the Colts scored four touchdowns after going five games without managing even one. Jessie Hester scored on a 49-yard pass from Jeff George with 1:07 left in the first half.

Clayton Verdin then returned the kickoff to open the second half 88 yards to tie the score 14-14.

"It's uplifting," Verdin said Monday while strolling through the building. "We ended the first half with a touchdown and we opened the half with a touchdown."

Ivy Leaguer nears receiving fame

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Vikings used their seventh-round draft choice in 1982 to take an unknown tight end from Brown. Not exactly a major football power.

As is the case with most middle-round draftees, Steve Jordan was confident in his ability but didn't know if he would make the team. Tight end wasn't a position of need for the Vikings; who had a young star in Joe Sencoski and an outstanding blocker in Bob Bruce.

"Salaries were low then," Jordan said. "I had a degree in engineering and Procter and Gamble offered me $27,000. The Vikings offered me $33,000 and it was a close call. I just said, 'I want to see if I can do it.'"

He can.

Jordan entered Monday night's game against the Chicago Bears needing six receptions to become only the ninth tight end in NFL history to catch 400 passes. He went into the game 33 catches behind Bears center Mike Ditka, whose 42nd catch for tight ends and who is still the only player at that position in the Hall of Fame.

Last week, Jordan moved past

Sammy White into second place on Minnesota's all-time receiving list. Jordan's 400th reception would tie him with Ahmad Rashad for No. 1.

"It's meaningful. It's significant, although now is not a good time to be thinking about individual records because we're trying to get into the playoffs hunt," Jordan said.

"But the biggest thing for me is that Sammy White and Ahmad Rashad are a couple of guys I was fortunate to play with and practice with. I looked up to and patterned my play after. Those guys are significant. I'm fortunate to be in their league."

Major PGA victors face off in Hawaii

KAUAI LAGOONS, Hawaii (AP) — John Daly has his strategy set for Tuesday's $1 million PGA Grand Slam of Golf.

"Grip it and rip it, fire at the flags and not worry about anything," Daly said Monday.

Daly qualified for the 36-hole event by winning the PGA Championship. He will compete against the winners of the other three major tournaments — Masters Champ Payne Stewart and British Open winner Ian Baker-Finch.

Of the four, only Stewart has played the Jack Nicklaus-designed Kiolo Course at Kauai Lagoons Golf & Racket Club. Stewart has some advice for his competitors.

"I wouldn't want to spend much of the next two days in the rough," Stewart said. "It's of major quality. It's good old Bermuda grass rough, which is very difficult to play out of. The person that wins come Wednesday will not have spent much time in it."

Stewart said the course is in great condition and will make it possible to gamble on some holes, particularly the par-4 16th and par-3 13th.

"There's about 8 yards in front of the green," on 16, said Stewart. "You can hit a driver and bank it off the right banking and earn down onto the green and actually make an albatross there with a hole-in-one.

"I don't think you're going to see that happen. I think most of us will play in mid-iron off the tee and a sand wedge in between the penalty for not hitting the perfect tee shot and getting the right bounce is you end up in the ocean."

Baker-Finch may have been closer to the mark when he said "just teeing off on the 16th is a gamble."

The golfers said while the $400,000 first prize is great incentive, coveting bragging rights over the other major tournament winners is better motivation, since even the loser earns $150,000.

"Bragging rights sounds good," Baker-Finch said with a laugh. "But the money is fantastic."

Threatt

Now, he'll be a big part, much bigger than he imagined.

If Threatt can never be Magic Johnson, he has something in common with the rest of the league's players. Neither.

"Early in my career, a big part of everything we did — he had the ball, we posted him up, a lot of what we did defensively was based on his size and his ability," coach Mike Dunleavy said.

"We're going to have to do a lot of things differently."

Like starting Sedale Threatt.

"He's already done a good job," Dunleavy said. "He's going to do a better job for us."

ATP only a warmup for Agassi

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Defending his title at the ATP Tour World Championships will be only a warmup for Andre Agassi.

"It's very important, but the Davis Cup is more important than anything else this year," Agassi said Monday.

Agassi will lead the United States in the Davis Cup final against France Nov. 29-Dec. 1 at Lyon.

"I am looking forward to the Davis Cup final and I wasn't all that concerned about being here or not," Agassi said.

Agassi has dropped to No. 8 in the world rankings, and at one point was in danger of not qualifying for the showcase tournament of the top eight players in the world.

The $2.25 million tournament is the year-ending event on the Association of Tennis Professionals circuit. The winner can collect as much as $1.08 million.

The eight players are split into two groups, playing each other in a round-robin format with the top two in each group advancing into the semifinals.

Stefan Edberg, No. 1 in the world, withdrew because of a knee injury, forcing organizers to reshuffle the two groups.

Agassi's group now consists of Germans Boris Becker and Michael Stich; the Wimbledon champion, and Pete Sampras, the other singles player on the U.S. Davis Cup team.

Rypien

defensive unit, not Rypien and his receivers.

But Sunday's game, in which Rypien threw touchdown passes of 82, 64, and 61 yards and mixed third place in the NFL's quarterback rankings, may have chased some of the doubters.

"I don't know what more he can do," said wide receiver Gary Clark, who hooked up with Rypien for three scoring passes of 40, 13 and 14 yards.

"He's been good, it's done."

Without a doubt, Rypien was helped by Atlanta's all-or-nothing defense, which is predicated on rushing the quarterback and preventing him from passing. If the quarterback has time to throw — and Rypien wasn't sacked — he often finds his receivers in one-on-one coverage.

Sunday, he usually found them two or three steps behind their defenders.

"I think our line did a good job, and it takes our receivers being sharp," Gibbs said. "But one of Mark's qualities is he avoids the sack and knows where to get rid of the ball, and he's done that consistently."

Gibbs has waxed eloquent on more than one occasion this season about the spirit of cooperation and comradery on his team this year.

Near the end of Sunday's game, Rypien gave him another anecdote by passing on a chance to reenter the contest and break Sammy Baugh's team record of 446 yards passing.

"I hadn't taken him out, and he had his jacket on, and I asked him whether he wanted to go back in and take a shot at it," Gibbs said. "I was sort of surprised by his answer."

Rypien said he didn't want to risk an injury and that he was putting the team's accomplishments ahead of individual marks.

"That tells you a lot about him," Gibbs said. "You continue to see things. How much is he going to improve? Are you winning games? Are you continuing to see improvement in him?"

The answers, Gibbs says, are increasingly obvious to anyone who watches the Redskins.

"The point is, he'll continue to progress, Gibbs said. "People are either going to get excited or not."

Bowls

One source said the Sugar Bowl was even willing to take Notre Dame (8-2) with three losses because of the television drawing power and the fact that the Irish haven't been to New Orleans in 11 years. The Sugar got poor TV ratings on ABC last January when its Tennessee-Virginia telecast competed with NBC's national title game between Colorado and Notre Dame at the Orange Bowl.

Sources also said Penn-State will meet No. 10 Tennessee in the Fiesta regardless of what they do this weekend. The Vols then plays Mississippi on Saturday.

After Notre Dame lost to Tennessee, it became clear that the winner of Saturday's game between No. 1 Florida State and No. 2 Miami would play the Big Eight champion either No. 1 Nebraska or No. 16 Colorado in the Orange Bowl.

What wasn't clear, then was where the Florida State-Miami loser would go.

On Monday, however, sources said Florida State was leaning toward the Cotton Bowl if it loses to Miami. The other Cotton bid goes to the Southwest Conference champ, which will be Texas A&M if the 13th-ranked Aggies can win two of their last three games.

If Florida State beats Miami, sources said, the Hurricanes will end up in the Cotton or Blockbuster Bowl. Whichever of those bowls doesn't get Miami will probably invite No. 7 Alabama.

There has been speculation that the Cotton Bowl would shy away from Miami because of the Hurricanes' heavily criticized behavior in last year's game against Texas. But sources said Monday that the Cotton might invite Miami again if the Hurricanes lose to Florida State.

Sources also said that No. 6 California appears to be headed to the Citrus Bowl for a meeting with the Atlantic Coast Conference champion, most likely No. 15 Clemson.

The Cotton, Orange, Sugar, Fiesta and Citrus bowls are held on New Year's Day, while the Blockbuster is Dec. 28.

The Orange offers the most money ($42 million per team), followed by the Sugar ($3.6 million), Cotton ($3.1 million), Fiesta ($2 million) and Citrus ($1.5 million). However, the Blockbuster may increase its payout to $3 million per team to get a more attractive pairing.

Bowl and school officials wouldn't allow their names to be used because agreements aren't supposed to be made before 1 p.m. MST Sunday. Bowls that violate the rule are subject to a $250,000 fine by the Football Bowl Association.

Twin Falls School Board faced with plan-B option

Chances are, the Twin Falls School Board will decide tonight to put a bond issue on the ballot. The bond issue will name a bond issue like the recommendation that filtered up through a series of public meetings: Build an elementary school; build space room for 250 more kids at Robert Stuart Junior High; and add classrooms, an auditorium and a gym to the high school.

Such a decision will disappoint many who had hoped new facilities would invite curriculum improvements. This is a stop-gap, a Band-Aid measure. It will make room for a growing student body but won't do much else.

Yet the School Board seems to have little choice. The series of meetings that ended last week suggested almost no hope of community consensus for a more ambitious project.

The stop-gap option's chief advantage is the price. At a little more than $8 million, it's far easier to swallow than the $20 million bond issue that voters rejected in May.

And, though the project would do almost nothing to improve learning opportunities, it would prevent the almost certain decline in education quality that would result from inaction. Simply put, if the community doesn't want year-round schools, split sessions or another flock of portable classrooms, it must build something. This proposal is not the best choice, but it is the most affordable.

If the board does decide on this route, we have some suggestions for making the most of it:

- Locate the new elementary school at the south end of town and make that plan public from the start. The reasons are both political and practical.
- South-end residents have endured cramped, aging grade schools as long as their patience will tolerate. Proposing another new school in the north or east would court their wrath.
- North-end residents, however, probably can be persuaded that a school in the south would benefit everyone by relieving pressure on community-wide. Furthermore, a fine new school in the south may attract population growth there, away from the congested north end.
- Put the gymnasium and the auditorium on their own ballot items, separate from the main proposal. That way, if some voters perceive these ancillary facilities as frills, they won't drag down the whole project.
- Although this project won't allow a full conversion to middle schools, administrators say they can adopt many of the beneficial middle school concepts within the buildings they have. The board should encourage that movement.
- As quickly as possible, lead the community's attention away from what has become a divisive and distracting issue, and toward what is more productive and important new buildings: working to give Twin Falls youngsters the best education possible.

Baker trip shows new attention to Asia

This week's Asian trip by Secretary of State James A. Baker III is a rarity for an administration preoccupied with Europe and the Middle East.

If Baker, like a proud tourist, stuck stickers on his bags every time he visited foreign nations, it would be a sight indeed — 62 in less than three years.

But only eight would be Asian. The collapse of communism in Eastern Europe and the search for peace in the Middle East are the issues that have kept Baker on the road.

Now, he and President Bush have decided the time has come to turn their attention to the Far East, a region, where, as Baker points out, the United States has fought three wars in the past half century.

In his speech Monday to the Japan Institute for Foreign Affairs, Baker laid out a U.S. vision of the Pacific region's role in the post-Cold War world.

What he spelled out was a complexity of relationships based on strong economic ties and continuing military imperatives.

Baker pointed out that U.S. trade with the Pacific region is one third greater than commerce with any other region outside the Atlantic. In fact, U.S. exports to Thailand exceed those to the Soviet Union.

Donald M. Rothberg

He also bluntly told the Japanese that unless something is done to even out trade between them and the United States, "we will not be able to sustain our political partnership."

The reference was obvious to his Japanese audience. Japan accounts for 67 percent of the U.S. trade deficit. Before he returns to Washington, Baker also will visit China which now ranks second to Japan among the countries that run large trade surpluses with the United States.

Baker didn't limit his remarks to the economic relationships.

The Korean peninsula is the site of the last major Cold War confrontation, with thousands of troops from the North and South still facing each other in a long but uneasy truce.

The two Koreas now talk to each other and there has been hope their discussions would defuse the military confrontation.

But Baker focused more on reports that North Korea is pushing ahead with efforts to develop nuclear weapons.

"The very real danger of nuclear proliferation on the Korean peninsula is now the number one threat to security in Northeast Asia," said Baker.

He called for cooperation among major powers — the United States, Japan, the Soviet Union and China — to offer assurances to both Koreas that could lead to eliminating the threat of nuclear proliferation in the region.

But America's vision of Asia doesn't necessarily conform to the view of the Asian powers.

It's not at all clear, for example, that Koreans in the North or South will welcome big-power solutions to their problems.

And while Baker met with senior officials of the new Japanese government led by Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa, there was no sign after those discussions of any movement on the difficult trade questions.

For example, did the question of Japan's ban on imports of rice come up?

"There's a need to liberalize the rice market," said a senior State Department official who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity. "We made that point."

But he could offer no hint that the Japanese were willing to do anything about it.

Donald M. Rothberg covers diplomatic affairs for The Associated Press and is traveling in Asia with Baker.

In remembering Pearl Harbor, the first obligation is to our veterans

Remember Pearl Harbor.

The starkly simple rallying words didn't mean "Remember Pearl Harbor" — only if it doesn't offend the Japanese.

The "date will live in infamy," President Franklin Roosevelt told an outraged Congress the day after Dec. 7, 1941, although he dared not admit how horrendous the losses were that America suffered in the devastating sneak attack on a nation at peace. (A total of 2,403 American soldiers and sailors and more than 1,200 civilians were killed Dec. 7; 21 ships were lost and 328 planes destroyed or damaged.)

Nor could Roosevelt have known when he spoke to Congress how many uncountable millions of people would die before the Pacific war that the Japanese started on Dec. 7 was finally over.

Roosevelt didn't say, the "date will live in infamy" — but we'd better not say so because the Japanese might get angry and stop buying up pieces of the United States they couldn't get by fighting.

No one wants the 50th anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack to be turned into an anti-

Joan Beck

Japanese bash. The anniversary should be — as it is now planned — a quiet and solemn remembrance.

After three days of low-key ceremonies, President Bush, himself shot down by Japanese in 1944, will speak early on the morning of Dec. 7 at the U.S. Arizona Memorial in Pearl Harbor. The low, white, understated structure rests over the rusted hulk of the battleship the Japanese sank during the surprise bombing. Still on board are the 1,117 sailors and marines whose tomb the ship will always be.

There will be services for the public at the National Memorial Cemetery of the Pacific (the Punchbowl), white-crossed with the grave markers of so many of our World War II dead. Later, the Honolulu Symphony Orchestra will give the first performances of the "Pearl Harbor Overture," written for this occasion.

With careful tact, the United States quietly decided not to invite foreign officials to share in the ceremonies — even those from nations who were our enemies during the long, bloody fighting Pearl Harbor started. One reason was to avoid including the Japanese — which would have been an unforgivable insult to the American dead, to veterans and to their survivors.

Honolulu mayor Frank F. Fasi has been quoted as saying the Japanese should apologize for Pearl Harbor and then be invited to the ceremonies. Some Japanese have snapped back that it is the Americans who should apologize — for Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

What troubles many Americans is that the Japanese have never truly acknowledged their responsibility for Pearl Harbor and the subsequent war, or the bloody conquests earlier in Asia. In public statements and in textbooks, the Japanese seem to see themselves as victims of the war, not instigators. And they refuse to admit that if they had not started the war with the United States by attacking Pearl Harbor, the Americans would not have had to end it with the atomic bombs.

The Japanese — and the rest of the world — should remember those who fought against Nagasaki bombings. But the Japanese should also admit that the two bombs saved the Americans an estimated million casualties the scheduled invasion of the Japanese islands would have cost. And they should understand that four times as many dead and wounded were projected among the Japanese.

Americans long ago put aside their anger at Pearl Harbor and the bitter enmity of the fighting to help the Japanese rebuild their nation into what is now a proud and arrogant superpower. It shouldn't cost us our history to have done so.

Dec. 7 belongs to the veterans who fought in World War II and to those who loved them and love them still. Not to remember and honor them, to push aside the stories of their courage and weary sacrifices, to fuzze their truth about the enemy they had to fight so those who launched the sneak attack will seem less distasteful and inexcusable. Above all else, we owe World War II veterans their history.

Few World War II veterans got homecoming parades; they slipped home quietly one by one, by bus or train or helicopter. When their unlimited enough months of service to be discharged. Then they started to work to make up for the lost and terrible years. They went to college in record numbers. They built strong families, suburbs, new schools, new industries, record prosperity. And they paid billions of dollars in taxes to help the nations whose cruel ambitions had made the fighting necessary.

To rob them now of recognition because the Japanese exercise so much economic power in the United States, won't advertise in issues of magazines with Pearl Harbor stories and accuse us of Japan-bashing is unthinkable.

America owes an incalculable debt to World War II veterans. If they cannot be remembered without showing the Japanese as the militant aggressors they were, that's no reason to rewrite history or ignore it. Our first obligation is to our veterans, not our Japanese critics.

Try to keep fine educators

I was an elementary school principal for 22 years in Washington state. As part of my duties, I evaluated teachers and support staff and feel that I can recognize good productive teachers and administrators.

I've substitute taught at the Hansen grade and high schools, Kimberly High School and all six elementary schools in Twin Falls.

I also taught full time at the sixth grade in the Lincoln Elementary with Ted Poppelwell and a great staff of teachers, custodians and cooks.

In all this work over the past two years, I am impressed with the quality of people working with the children in the three communities.

It is my hope that the proper priorities will be met to keep these fine educators in the area.

Let's not ignore soccer team

I can relate to Mr. R. L. "Nick" Nicholson's letter on Nov. 8 — the Bruins deserve more support. Not only does the football team, which is doing an outstanding job this year, deserve more support, but also to the high school soccer team which made it to the state tournament in Boise this year; a fact I'm sure few people were even aware of.

At least the football team has the support of the local media, which is something the soccer team has yet to know or receive. They did print the scores of the games we played in the briefs of the sports section. Yes, we did even make it on the second or third page sometimes, but not too unusual to find names misspelled or facts that were printed wrong.

Perhaps if the people of the community would learn a little more about the sport of soccer, they would discover the dedication and determination of the young people who play it.

The young people of this community work hard in whatever sport they have decided to participate in, but it would be nice if they would receive the support they all deserve.

Idaho needs innovative health care approach

Pete Skamser
Reader comment

Moreover, we need to take a fresh look at our health care situation and seek innovative approaches.

One such idea is the Shared Cost Option for Private Employers being operated in Denver. SCOPE, tailored for businesses with 50 or fewer workers, features a high deductible and co-payment (a combined $2,750) but pays 100 percent of preventive services. Employers must pay at least 25 percent of the cost to be eligible for the policy. Premiums for a worker 44 years old and his family are $145 a month, about 40 percent cheaper than conventional group coverage.

Expensive mandated measures such as have been passed in Oregon and proposed in California to force small businesses to buy health insurance for their employees will not solve the fundamental problem of soaring costs. These will only break the backs of small businesses already struggling with thin profits during a recession and burden the taxpayer with the rest of the tab.

Insurance underwriting reforms could make group health insurance more available to small businesses. In California and elsewhere, the insurance industry has supported legislation to restrict rate increases, pool high-risk workers and guarantee continuity of coverage to small-group policyholders.

Most small business owners recognize the value in providing health benefits to attract and retain good employees, but the majority of those who don't provide employee insurance have such marginal profits that the cost would put them out of business, according to a nationwide survey conducted in 1989 by the National Federation of Independent Business. The survey found that among its members who do not offer health insurance, the median annual income of the business was only about $20,000.

Given that reality, it seems obvious that if Idaho opts for the mandated approach being considered by other states, which would force most businesses to purchase health insurance for their employees, we could find ourselves with a large segment of the small business workforce who are both uninsured and unemployed. Someone making $20,000 a year from a business is very likely to close that business if faced with the prospect of buying health insurance for workers as a condition of doing business.

Health insurance cost is the primary culprit causing our problem. Solving the dilemma with an expensive, far-reaching program could prove to be far too costly for Idaho.

Pete Skamser, a member of the state-sponsored HCR 23 Task Force, is the state director of the 6,200 member National Federation of Independent Business/Idaho, the largest small-business organization in the state. Nationally, the NFIB has more than 560,000 members and offices in 50 states.

Salmon plan not ready yet

HELENA (AP) — The Northwest Power Planning Council is unlikely to act this week on a plan for preserving dwindling salmon runs in the Columbia River basin, a member said.

The eight-member council had been expected to discuss possible changes in the proposal and adopt a plan at its Helena meeting.

John Brenden, one of two Montana members, said Monday that the council may make some changes in the plan at its three-day session beginning Tuesday.

But no final decision on the plan is likely until one of the council's next two meetings in Portland later this month and in December, he said.

"We have to reach public comment and proposed amendments," Brenden said. "To go back and fit them in with this draft proposal, it's just going to take some time."

"We don't want to be hurried to go through this draft plan," he added. "We want to make the least amount of mistakes as possible so it can be a successful plan. If two or three weeks of delay can help toward that end, then we can wait."

Some of the requested changes in the plan will come from Brenden and Montana's other council member, Stan Grace.

They want to make sure the plan for safeguarding fall and spring and summer chinook and Snake River sockeye salmon in the region does not ignore impacts on endangered bald eagles and state-protected bull trout in Montana.

The plan recommends decreasing water levels behind Libby and Hungry Horse dams, in northwestern Montana, to maintain adequate flow for spawning salmon downstream.

Brenden and Grace maintain the plan could reduce fish populations and harm eagles that rely on fish for their survival. They also say the proposal will decrease power generation in Montana, a critical times and damage recreation in the northwest corner of the state.

"They want a provision in the plan guaranteeing protection for important species in Montana."

Seiffert, Williams eye Stallings' seat

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Coming soon to the 2nd Congressional District race: Democrats. State Auditor J.D. Williams moved closer to officially announcing his candidacy for the U.S. House of Representatives Monday, releasing a list of 352 people on an exploratory committee. Also Monday, former Keetchum mayor Gerald Seiffert said he would declare his candidacy today for the seat being vacated by Rep. Richard Stallings. Since Stallings announced in July he'd give up his seat to the Senate, no Democrat has formally declared his intention to seek the office. Stallings has held from the Democrats since 1985. That changed Monday as Williams unveiled an advisory committee of Idaho Democratic notables, chaired by former Gov. John V. Evans of Burley. Attorney General Larry Echo Hawk, former State

Auditor Joe R. Williams, former 2nd District Rep. Ralph Harding and Bethine Church, widow of former Sen. Frank Church, are listed as co-chairmen. Among the prominent names on Williams' committee are Twin Falls County Democratic Chairman Ken Pederson, Blaine County Prosecutor Ned Williamson, former Attorney General Tony Park, Sen. Patricia McDermott of Pocatello, and Sen. Claire Wetherell of Mountain Home.

"I've worked closely with J.D. for several years, and I've gained a lot of respect for the man and his family," Evans said. "He's the kind of leader Idahoans can rely on and support." Williams' committee includes at least one member from each county in the 2nd District, as well as several Democratic state legislators who live in the 1st District. Expect slower traffic along I-84, Idaho-25

SHOSHONE — Heads up if you're driving on Interstate 84 or Idaho Highway 25 today.

Idaho Transportation Department workers will be taking pavement samples for testing on I-84 between Burley and the Snake River bridge to the east and on Idaho 25 between Paul and Rupert.

Crews will take core samples from the roadways for testing and research to determine structural adequacy. The information obtained will be used in the design of upcoming resurfacing projects.

The pavement sampling on I-84 will last several days, during which time one lane of the interstate will be closed near the paving site. Sampling from Paul to Rupert on Idaho 25 should wrap up this afternoon.

Council seeks comment on grant application for sewer

TWIN FALLS — Those who want to comment on the City's application for a $300,000 grant to build a sewer line and improve Victory Avenue and Rose Street can do so tonight.

The City Council plans a public hearing to take comments tonight in City Hall. The hearing starts at 6 p.m.

The $300,000 would be an Idaho Community Development Block Grant.

Deadline to reserve license numbers just around corner

TWIN FALLS — You're running out of time to reserve license plate numbers for the new Idaho vehicle tags to be issued next year.

Through Nov. 29, anyone may reserve any remaining tag numbers up to 21 20,000 in the motor vehicle department of the Twin Falls County assessor's office. The fee is $2.

The state will issue a series of new plates starting Dec. 2.

License numbers are on a first-come, first-served basis. Holders of current plates have already had the chance to keep those numbers.

The $2 fee is only for reserving plates. License holders don't get their new plates until their current registrations expire.

Further information can be obtained by phoning the auto license department at 736-4012.

Freedom Inn invites public to Thanksgiving dinner

TWIN FALLS — Those who don't have a place to go for Thanksgiving dinner, or who do not have family in the area, are welcome at the Freedom Inn.

Workers at the establishment, Mike Murphy, said he will put on Thanksgiving dinner for those who need it. He might do the same for Christmas, too.

The tavern also is collecting to help put together baskets for the needy for Christmas. Those who wish to contribute are urged to do so.

The Freedom Inn is located at 1880 Kimberly Road.

BLM ends Shoshone predator study; ready to start in Burley

SHOSHONE — The Bureau of Land Management has just wrapped up an environmental assessment of its predator control activities in the agency's Shoshone District, and is getting ready to make a similar study in the Burley District.

The BLM is doing the studies to measure predator control and alternatives on federal land administered by the agency.

A copy of the environment assessment of the Shoshone District is available upon request. A final decision will not be made until a 30-day comment period has expired.

Anyone who wants a copy can get one by contacting Paul McClain at the Shoshone District office. The telephone number is 886-2206.

Meanwhile, the Burley District is preparing a similar assessment, and welcomes public comment.

After that statement is completed, it too will be circulated by public comment.

Further information can be obtained by phoning Chris Keetchum of the Burley District at 678-5314.

Man killed outside bar

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A 27-year-old Twin Falls man was shot and killed early Monday morning in front of the Four Haus tavern, Twin Falls Police Lt. Jim Kistler said.

Edward Alvarado of Heyburn Avenue West was found dead by police shortly before 1 a.m. outside the tavern, which is located at 127 South Park Ave., Kistler said.

An autopsy was scheduled for today in Pocatello, Kistler said. Further details on the incident were still sketchy Monday afternoon, he said.

There were between seven and nine people in the South Park Tavern at the time of the shooting, Kistler said.

"So far we've just heard bits and pieces," Kistler said. "We're talking with people, reinterviewing them, trying to get more information."

P&Z considers 8-plexes today

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Planning and Zoning Commission is set to hear a request tonight to allow construction of a eight-plex apartment project on property now owned by the College of Southern Idaho Foundation north of the CSI campus.

The commission will meet in the council chambers at City Hall at 7 p.m. The public is invited.

An Oregon company, Pacific Housing Corp., wants to build the project, deemed to relieve the shortage of low- and middle-income rental housing in Twin Falls. City Community Development Director LaMar Orton said Monday the request is basically the same as the one the company made earlier this fall for a site in northeastern Twin Falls.

That proposal drew fire from residents near the Locust Street site on which Pacific Housing proposed to build. The company wanted to put up 160 eight-plexes there, but neighbors protested loudly — saying the project was of too high a density for the area.

By a tie vote last month, the planning commission rejected the required zoning change that would have made the project possible.

Rents reportedly would have ranged from $340 to $390 a month.

When that proposal went under, CSI Foundation members approached Pacific Housing about building the project on land north of the college.

Proposal: No new schools until '96

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A member of the Twin Falls School District's planning committee is proposing a cure for classroom overcrowding that includes year-round schooling, middle schools — and no new buildings until after 1996.

The plan envisions eventually building a second high school and a third middle school when they are needed, said attorney Dennis Voorhees.

Superintendent Terrell Doniecht said he will recommend tonight that the Twin Falls School Board approve a $8.2 million facilities plan that includes building a new elementary school, adding on to Robert Stuart Junior High School and adding on a new auditorium, a practice gym and 10 classrooms at Twin Falls High School.

The public is invited to the 7 p.m. meeting at the district's headquarters, 201 Main Ave. W.

Voorhees' plan would create affordable space immediately, "precludes series of divisive, failed initiatives" and "satisfies deep-rooted and widely held community interest in year-round education," he said in a letter to board member David Sess.

Under Voorhees' proposal: • Stuart and O'Leary Junior Highs would be reconfigured as middle schools.

• All elementary schools would use a middle-school approach to teaching sixth-graders.

• Between May and August 1992, the School Board would hold a bond issue election to expand Stuart and add a new auditorium, practice gym and classrooms at the high school.

• Perrine Elementary would become the test site of a modified year-round schedule under which all students would get July the hottest month of the year off. Enrollment would be voluntary and drawn from several different elementary school zones.

• The district would convert other grade schools to year-round schedules, depending on the success of the Perrine program and the demonstrated need. If unsuccessful, the district would eventually build a new elementary school.

• When all property taxes linked to past bond issues are retired after 1996, the district would call a bond issue election for a second high school in 1998 that would compare in size and in offerings to the current high school.

The high school would be built south of Addison Avenue west of Blue Lakes Boulevard.

At that point, ninth-graders would be moved up to the high

Fish farmer's hydro application sparks war

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Nobody pulled a gun, but a water war erupted nonetheless Monday at Niagara Springs.

The fate of a few cubic feet per second of water brought more than 30 people to an on-site show-and-tell by a fish farmer who wants to generate electricity at his hatchery near Niagara Springs.

The 30-onlookers — long-time farmers, Idaho Department of Fish and Game officers and others who have gone to Niagara Springs for decades — didn't worry too much about the hydroelectric project. They didn't like how Boise fish farmer Earl Hardy divides his water out of Niagara Springs.

In fact, Niagara Springs activist Bob Burks said he would drop his protest to Hardy's application if he started measuring his water where he takes it out of Niagara Springs and change a diversion structure.

Hardy's attorney, William Ringert of Boise, said Hardy would install a water-measuring device at the diversion if he gets the hydro permit.

That doesn't mean they struck an agreement. In fact, they argued several times Monday while touring Hardy's site.

The dispute starts where Niagara Springs erupts from the north side of the Snake River Canyon and plunges headlong under a bridge to popular Niagara Springs Park. A visitor can stop on the bridge and look up at the water cascading out of the desert canyon walls.

Then the visitor can turn around and see Hardy's diversion structure and an Idaho Power concrete diversion dam. In 1988, Idaho Power and the Army Corps of Engineers agreed to revamp the diversion dam and make it less visible but they never acted on that agreement.

On Monday, Hardy's gates were completely open, a sore spot with farmer Burks.

With thousands of cubic feet per second flowing in the nearby Snake River, the dispute centers around whether Hardy is taking a few more cubic feet per second than he's supposed to out of the creek that flows past Niagara Springs Park.

Hardy measures his water where it leaves his fish hatchery, arguing that the fish ponds don't lose any water. By his measurement, he's taking what he has a right to use.

City Council newcomer eager to stir up changes

By Elodie Maller
Times-News writer

HOLLISTER — One of two city officials in Idaho elected by a coin toss last week says now that he's on the Hollister City Council, things are going to change.

But Hollister's mayor, says Edwin Padgett just better be ready to put in the work.

Three years after moving to Hollister and after two years of sitting through nearly every City Council meeting in the 12-foot-by-12-foot City Hall, Padgett, a farm mechanic, was elected to a two-year term by the toss of a coin after he received the same number of write-in votes — five — as Del McDonald last Tuesday.

Under Idaho law, ties in municipal races are resolved by flipping a coin. A deadlock in Stanley was also settled that way last week.

"I was pleased," Padgett said. "When I was going to meetings before, I could help people be more informed, but I really didn't have a vote as far as making decisions. So even if I knew what the people wanted, I couldn't help."

That's Padgett's main complaint against 10-year Hollister Mayor Steve Taylor. Taylor, Padgett says, isn't being open enough with townspeople about city business.

In fact, Padgett says 29 Hollister residents were so unhappy with Taylor that they signed a petition to recall him, and the rest of the City Council, last spring.

Taylor says Padgett's recollection is faulty.

"Somebody can be upset about something, and they run around town and get everyone up in arms, but when you discuss it, it's not actually what goes on," he said.

Padgett also complains that most council members haven't been in the habit of attending meetings.

But City Clerk Cheryl David said since she's taken office in June, council members

Letter to Desert Storm troops may end up as march to the altar

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations, you've done it again! You can now put another notch in your "success column" for Operation Dear Abby.

Last Thanksgiving, I wrote a letter to "Army Servicemen" and they wrote to the Persian Gulf as a part of your letter-writing campaign. I never really expected a reply, but I received one from Lt. Patrick E. Fortune, which I answered promptly. We soon learned that we had a lot in common: His name is Patrick, my name is Patty; he's Irish-Catholic, I'm Irish-Catholic; he's one of seven kids, I'm one of seven kids; he went to an all-boys Catholic school, I went to an all-girls-Catholic school; we both have dreamed of biking through Ireland. We also share many of the same beliefs about God, family and values.

When Pat returned to the states, we started talking on the telephone. We have had three and four-hour long conversations. (Don't ask about our telephone bills!) I finally broke down and told him that I was absolutely nuts about him! He then confessed that he felt the same way about me.

We finally met in Cincinnati over the Labor Day weekend and had a sensational time. We knew there was no doubt about it - we were right for each other.

Pat sent me a plane ticket so I could visit him at Fort Bragg, and our romance flourished. He will get out of the service in about six months, after which he plans to move to Milwaukee and make spoiling me a full-time job. That's wonderful because he's the most important person in my life.

So, Dear Abby, that's the saga of Pat and Patty. How can I ever thank you?

- PATTY TREACY, GREENFIELD, WIS.

DEAR PATTY: You just did.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend and I have been friends for 6 1/2 years. I am a single man who has never been married, and my best friend is a married woman with two children. Her husband's job allows him to be home only three nights a week. I even stay at her home about 50 percent of the time. Her husband has no objections to my staying in their home. In fact, we get along very well.

Dear Abby

The problem is that everyone thinks it is abnormal for us to "hang out" as much as we do. We do not have sex, and never will; we are not attracted to each other sexually at all. We are just good friends and that's all. So, what do you think, Abby? Is our relationship normal or not? I hope you will print this so our friends will know that two people of the opposite sex can be good friends - and that's all.

- BUGGED IN BARSTOW
DEAR BUGGED: It is indeed unusual for a single man and a married woman who are not romantically involved to spend so much time together. It is also out of the ordinary for the woman's husband to be as secure and generous about his wife's close friendship with another man.

And yes, people of the opposite sex can be friends - and that's all. It is not necessarily "abnormal," but it is unusual.

DEAR ABBY: I recently remarried. My new husband was also previously married. How should I introduce my first husband's relatives who are my former in-laws? I am very friendly with my ex-husband's nieces and nephews, too.

SECOND-TIME AROUND
DEAR SECOND: There is no reason to call attention to the fact that you were formerly related by marriage. Just introduce your ex-in-laws - nieces and nephews - as "dear" or "old" friends, and save the explanatory details for subsequent meetings.

World War I veteran McMahon dies

BOISE (AP) — Idaho veteran Mary McMahon's sharpest memory of World War I was the chaotic day her train was pulling out of a depot in Poland.

The train, the last planned out of a war zone, was covered with people trying to escape the warfare. And Polish women ran alongside the train, holding out their babies, trying to get them to safety.

She was 104 when she died of natural causes Monday at the Idaho State Veterans Home, appropriately enough on Veterans Day. She might have been the oldest of the 3,000 surviving women who served as nurses, clerks or in support roles in "the war to end all wars."

Stream protection program 'absurd'

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Environmentalists denounced a 3-year-old program intended to protect Idaho's waterways as a farce, but representatives of several state and federal land-management agencies said the process has produced encouraging results.

At a hearing Thursday in Coeur d'Alene for nominations for "stream segments of concern" comments were made about the program, part of a 1988 agreement among loggers, environmentalists, regulators and others.

The stream segment designation is intended to protect waterways from becoming clogged with silt or contaminated by other pollutants.

"It's time to wake up and smell the coffee," David Hunt said.

The elementary school counselor from Coeur d'Alene said the program is just "not working."

David Bodner, a member of a Boundary County group called Boundary Backpackers, said the procedures established by the agreement don't allow the public a voice in deciding which of the state's waterways receive protection.

"It feels like the process disappears into a smoke-filled back room in Boise," Bodner said. "It's a farce the way it stands right now."

The agreement calls for meetings every two years to allow residents to nominate sections of stream for protection.

A committee in Boise reviews the nominations and makes recommendations to the governor, who makes the final selection.

During the first round of meetings in 1989, residents nominated 800 streams, with 200 ultimately designated "segments of concern."

Land-management officials defend the program.

"Things seem to be a little better out there," said Jim Colla, the forest practices coordinator for the Idaho Department of Lands. "There's a higher level of awareness

FBI investigation taking toll on mayor

WALLACE (AP) — Wallace Mayor Maurice "Moe" Pellissier says his decision to resign is based largely on the concern he is a suspect in the FBI's investigation into criminal activities in the Silver Valley.

Pellissier, 57, said he believes the FBI is targeting him because prostitution and gambling thrived in Wallace during part of his six-year term.

And the Chamber of Commerce managed a lucrative fund that was financed by the city's brothels, the Coeur d'Alene Press reports.

The pressure of the federal scrutiny is taking its toll, he said.

"I can't take it anymore," Pellissier said. "It gets to the point where you can't handle it, and I can't."

Pellissier's lifelong friendship with Shoshone County Sheriff Frank Crnkovich also has drawn FBI attention, he said.

Crnkovich is one of three officials named by the FBI as possible suspects of public corruption following a gambling raid on 58 Silver Valley bars in June. The sheriff, county Prosecutor Jack Rose and former Prosecutor John Cossel insist they are innocent.

Pellissier believes the men, including himself, stand the chance of being ruined financially by the cost of legal defense.

"If they call me, they can do whatever they want. I'm going to plead no contest because I can't afford to defend myself," he said. "I'll live out a year in jail before I spend every dime I've got to defend myself against something I didn't do wrong."

Pellissier said he was interviewed by FBI agents about gambling, prostitution and drug activities. Yet, like the other possible suspects, he has not been called as a witness by a federal grand jury to determine possible indictments.

FBI special agent Wayne Manis, who has coordinated the ongoing, two-year investigation, declined to comment on Pellissier.

The mayor, who also served as a Wallace city councilman for 10 years, said he plans to leave City Hall Jan. 15. He retired from his job with the state Department of Transportation last week.

He said the city's budgetary woes also contributed to his decision.

Wallace has been financially strapped since the mines shut down and many residents quit paying property taxes.

Many are more than two years delinquent, he said.

The state allows property owners to be remiss for three years before counties can confiscate their land.

"I've eaten up the reserve to keep the city going. I can't do it any longer," he said.

"I've had enough" between the FBI and the city's financial situation, Pellissier insists both he and Crnkovich are innocent victims of political intrigue.

Five disgruntled former deputies set the FBI investigation in motion to seek revenge, he said.

Aerial survey of INEL promising, crew says

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Two teams of scientists are flying over the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in helicopters this fall, looking for faster, cheaper and safer ways to find buried waste.

"It's very successful so far," said Reva Hyde, who is managing the helicopter tests for EG&G Idaho Inc., the U.S. Department of Energy's primary private contractor at the INEL. "I see a real promise for our site as well as others."

Since October, crews from two different government contractors have been using two different methods of looking for buried waste beneath the Arco desert.

A helicopter crew from Martin Marietta has been using heat sensors to find burial pits. The theory is that buried steel, plastic or any other material will give off a different heat reading than untouched soil.

A crew from EBASCO is using magnetic and electromagnetic equipment to find buried waste that includes iron or other metals. The EBASCO crews should continue aerial tests for another week or so, Hyde said.

INEL technicians will study the results of the aerial tests, which the Energy Department earmarked $1 million to conduct this fall. A recommendation to the agency is due by Feb. 21. The goal is to figure out which systems work best to find buried waste sites.

"We may have a need for both," Hyde said.

The idea of aerial monitoring is nothing new. Thermal equipment has been used to find minerals and shallow grave sites and was used during the Gulf War to locate buried mines.

But only recent advances in the computer equipment used to read aerial data have allowed the Energy Department to use the equipment to look for buried waste.

The Energy Department decided to test the idea at a variety of INEL burial areas, including a site where Navy explosives were buried in the 1940s and 1950s.

Tests also are being conducted at the Radioactive Waste Management Complex, where plutonium-contaminated waste was dumped until 1970.

Sisters appeal convictions in theater popcorn caper

REXBURG (AP) — Two sisters are appealing their convictions stemming from an incident for bringing popcorn into a movie theater.

Greg Moeller, attorney for Joan Bowman and Susan Anderson, filed appeals Thursday asking the 7th District Court to overturn the sisters' convictions and, a magistrate's refusal to suppress evidence and acquit them.

Moeller said the decision to appeal wasn't easy because of the light sentences Bowman and Anderson received — a day in jail and $50 in fines.

"It was a tough decision. It was their decision," he said.

In the appeals, Moeller asserts the arrests were illegal because the women didn't commit offenses in the officers' presence and that some evidence should be suppressed because the arrests were unconstitutional.

The appeals also contend the judge should have excused four prospective jurors because they were members of a ward in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in which Hancock is a bishop.

J.D. Hancock, Rexburg city prosecutor, couldn't be reached for comment Friday.

In the so-called "popcorn caper," Bowman, 46, formerly of Idaho Falls and now of Layton, Utah, and Anderson, 42, of Rexburg, were convicted Sept. 26 on charges resulting from an incident at the Holiday Theatre on Memorial Day.

The manager wanted the women to leave because they had brought in popcorn from a neighboring theater.

Ricks won't raise entrance standards yet

REXBURG (AP) — Despite exceeding its 7,500-student enrollment cap for the fourth year in a row, Ricks College has no plans to toughen its admission standards, Admissions Director Gordon Westenskov says.

But Ricks, a private two-year school, owned and operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, also has no plans for lifting its enrollment cap.

"Church leaders have encouraged us to stay right around 7,500," Westenskov said. "This is difficult to do because if we admit 7,500, we'll come up short, since some accepted students decide to go elsewhere."

Ricks' enrollment reached an all-time high of 7,968 this fall, or 172 students more than last year.

College officials are pleased with the school's popularity, but they realize enrollment pressure will continue to grow.

"The number of LDS high school seniors is escalating," Westenskov said. "It's a blessing to be a church school, but it's going to be more challenging."

There were about 66,000 Mormon high school seniors last year in the United States and Canada. By 1996, there will be 86,000 seniors, he said. Ricks students come from all 50 states and 34 foreign countries.

About 1,500 applicants were denied admission this year because their applications were submitted late or they failed to meet the school's moral standards.

Military's legacy awaits space

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's military history sits in a locked room in the basement of the Idaho Historical Museum in Julia Davis Park.

It is painstakingly preserved, awaiting the day when the museum has space to display it.

Veterans hope that day will be soon. "Any time that we can salvage anything from our history, it's important," said Mel Napier, adjutant for the American Legion of Idaho.

When the day will arrive depends on funding of a new museum wing, which must be approved by the Idaho Legislature.

"The military gallery in the proposed addition would have two purposes," Museum Director Ken Swanson said. "It would tell the story of the military in Idaho and the stories of Idahoans in the military."

"The items we have now are the end product of nearly 110 years of collecting and have never been properly displayed."

The gallery would occupy about half the proposed 9,000-square-foot addition, Swanson said.

If approved during the upcoming legislative session, it could open in 1994.

DOE gives state $100,000 grant

BOISE (AP) — Idaho has received a one-year, $100,000 U.S. Department of Energy planning grant to develop cooperation among state universities and government laboratories in energy-related research.

The grant is through the Energy Department's Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research, or EPSCoR.

It will finance a survey of energy research and related facilities for development of cooperative agreements between researchers, including those at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Pacific Northwest Laboratories in Richland, Wash., Idaho State University and the University of Idaho.

The long-term objective of the grant is to develop plans for future research in energy production by balancing basic research, applied research and commercialization efforts.

Most of the research programs will investigate alternative fuels and energy sources and will attempt to integrate them with new methods of handling waste and other energy byproducts.

POLICE PROTEST

Indianapolis police said they needed more money. Nobody paid attention. They left their locked patrol cars parked all around the City County Building with lights flashing and sirens wailing. Everybody paid attention. The money? No, not right away. Eventually, though.

ON THE BUS

Under continuing discussion is why men boarding a bus tend to take seats behind the driver while women are inclined to choose the opposite side. Women want to look at shop win-downs as they pass, some say. Sounds reasonable. It's the pattern in Great Britain, too, where buses move on the left. Psychologists who crave deeper meanings, though, contend it's because most men still assume the driver's role, most women assume the passenger's position.

Somebody stole Franz Josef Haydn's skull. An amateur, Viennese philologist, it was. He wanted to examine the bumps on the head of the great composer's remains.

He'd checked the skulls of a lot of criminals, he said, but hadn't got his hands on head bones of a genius.

That's the sort of thing that made Charles Lindbergh, Albert Einstein and numerous other notables instill an secret interest.

Brewery workers say beer ads contribute to sexual harassment

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Five female brewery workers said in lawsuits against Stroh Brewing Co. the company's television ads featuring bikini-clad women contributed to sexual harassment on the job.

An advertising industry leader said the lawsuits apparently were the first of their type. One of the lawsuits says: "The conduct of Stroh's is so extreme and outrageous that it passes the bounds of decency and is utterly intolerable in the civilized community."

The five women, one of whom has been laid off, say they were subjected to verbal and physical confrontations by male coworkers and supervisors that caused them severe mental and physical stress.

Some of the lawsuits filed this past Friday claim Stroh has produced "sexist, degrading, promotion posters, and advertisements."

George Kuehn, senior vice president for the Detroit-based company, said he couldn't comment on the lawsuits. However, he added, "I can say Stroh, for more than 10 years has maintained and enforced a definite policy against discrimination, including sexual harassment."

He also said company officials said they were not aware of any previous lawsuits that "link advertising to a hostile environment."

Attorney Lori Peterson, representing the women, said the company's advertising helped create a climate in which sexual harassment was more easily tolerated. DeWitt Helm, president of the Association of National Advertisers in New York, said he believed these were the first lawsuits of their type.

"To associate sexual harassment with the advertising of an employer's product, I think, is a little far-fetched and bizarre," he said. "I just don't see a cause-and-effect in this whole scenario."

Four of the lawsuits filed against the brewing company and several male employees seek compensatory damages in excess of $50,000 on nine causes of action. The fifth, filed by Lana Haston of Shoreview, seeks in excess of $50,000 on each of 11 causes of action.

Haston, 36, who was hired in 1986 and has been laid off, was sexually assaulted by a foreman at the St. Paul brewery.

An American Indian, Haston also claims she was discriminated against because of her race and because of a disability.

Stroh is the nation's fourth-largest brewing company and employs about 3,600 people nationwide. There are 398 employees at the St. Paul brewery, including 47 women.

Last year, Stroh spent $19.1 million on advertising. Peterson cited one of the ads for Old Milwaukee, known as the "It Does Get Better" ad, as an example of advertising contributing to a climate conducive to harassment. In the ad, scantily clad women from the "Sweedish Bikini Team" parachute with beer into a team's parachute occupied by men who have taken a large gold nugget and a crate of lobsters.

Lange on a tractor?

Knight-Ridder News Service

Q Doesn't passionate Jessica Lange feel stifled playing mom down on that farm in Virginia?

A Lange is content on the 110-acre farm that she shares with actor and playwright Sam Shepard.

There she enjoys the "regular existence," and he pursues his off-camera passions of breeding horses, playing polo and parenting when he's not off making some movies.

Lange, 42, is mother to a 10-year-old daughter with Mikhail Baryshnikov and a daughter, 5, and a son, 4, with Shepard.

However, she admits to a continuing struggle with the "absolute dichotomy of responsibility and desire."

"... After a couple of months I'm ready to go mad. I can't wait to go on location, start a movie, study a character — anything that gives me a release."

"Surviving all this is her relationship with Shepard. ... the only monogamous relationship I've had in my life."

Q Has Michael Crawford, the Broadway star of "Phantom of the Opera," found any new characters to develop?

A Crawford has invented several ways to re-create himself, but most successfully as a solo artist. He has spent much of this year on an American concert tour. "I've got a new career," said the Englishman.

"I had never done a concert in my life. ... I was scared to death." Crawford also recently cut an album of Andrew Lloyd-Webber songs with the Royal Symphony Orchestra and awaits action on Jessica Lange Struggles with choices the film version of "Phantom," in which he'll star.

No kidding about Arsenio's age

By Bettelou Peterson
Knight-Ridder News Service

Q How old is Arsenio Hall? My friend says no older than 33. I heard Arsenio say he was 46. — D.S., Canyon Country, Calif.

A He may have said it but he didn't mean it. He was 32 last Feb. 12.

Q What can you tell me about Omri Katz, who stars in "Eerie, Indiana"? Where can I write to him? — E.S., Highland Park, N.J.

A Katz is 15, born in Los Angeles, Calif., and made his TV-bow in commercials at 3. He spent a year in Israel (his parents are Israelis), then returned to the U.S. and commercials at 5. He's done various guest roles but he's best known as John Ross Ewing III, J.R.'s son, in "Dallas." Write: NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, CA. 91523.

Q Where in Indiana is "Eerie, Indiana" filmed? Where can I write the show? I find it pleasantly different. I hope it makes it. — A.M., Portland, Ore.

A Eerie's Indiana is strictly Los Angeles and environs. Early returns did not bode well for the show, which has been clobbered by "60 Minutes." If NBC has faith in it, they'll move it, but don't count on it. For the address, see above.

This kid show's incorporated

BURBANK, Calif. — "Kids Incorporated," the award-winning musical series about the young members of a rock 'n' roll band, has returned to The Disney Channel for its sixth season with 20 new half-hour episodes.

"Kids Incorporated" uniquely combines popular music and dance with issues that are common to young people today. Elements such as comedy and light drama are then used to create an appealing, fast-paced, half-hour show that has garnered a loyal audience.

The show revolves around five young members of a musical group who perform in the dance club, The Palace. A talented cast is led by returning members Kenny Ford, who is 14 years old, and 12-year-old Love Hewitt. Joining them are newcomers Eric Balfour, who is 14; 12-year-old Anastasia Horne, and 11-year-old Haylie Johnson. Sean O'Riordan is the club owner and young businessman who help The Kids navigate the sometimes-difficult territory of growing up, and five new dancers round out the cast. "Kids Incorporated" airs week-days on The Disney Channel.

Paul, Tess and Egan on "As the World Turns" — L.C. Marietta, Ga.

A. Hayley Barr is Courtney; Scott DeFrelas, Andy; Parker Posey, Tess; Greg Watkins, Egan. Andy Kavovitz, now out of the show, was Paul.

Write to Soap Stars, Detroit Free Press, 321 W. Lafayette Blvd., Detroit, MI, 48226.

Q. Whose can I reach Marlena (Oscar Hall) of "Days of Our Lives"? Give some info on her.

A. Hall, 43 on Oct. 31; was born in Milwaukee, raised in Lake Worth, Fla., and studied psychology in college before turning to acting. She was Barbara Anderson on "The Young & the Restless," 1973-75, before joining "Days" as Marlena Evans in 1976. She left 11 years later to do "Our House," her first prime-time series. That lasted until 1988. After that, she did an occasional TV guest role until she returned to "Days" in July. Hall has a twin sister, Andrea, who worked briefly on "Days" as Marlena's twin Samantha. Write: NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Q. Who plays Courtney, Andy.

Whose dog did you say it was?

"That's My Dog," heralded by America's canines (and their humans) as the hottest new prospect this fall, has just signed comic Steve Skrovan as host for the show.

Skrovan has served as host on such shows as Fox Network's "Totally Hidden Video" and MTV's "Mouth to Mouth." In addition, he's been featured as a political humorist on NBC's "Sunday Morning."

James Ackerman, FAM's director of original programming, cites Skrovan's incredibly quick wit and glib tongue as the perfect addition to the off-center "That's My Dog."

"There's so much spontaneity in the show," Ackerman said.

"Anything can happen in a show that includes not just people, but people and their dogs. You need someone with a quick wit to make it work. Steve's perfect for that sort of thing."

"That's My Dog" airs Sundays, with encore presentations on Thursdays on The Family Channel.

It's a dog's life for casting secretary Jill Kantowitz, who spends a lot of time waiting around the casting office.

'Brooklyn Bridge' makes jump to TV

By Bettelou Peterson
Knight-Ridder News Service

Q. We love the new CBS program "Brooklyn Bridge." Where can we write to Gary David Goldberg, the creator of the show, to let him know we think he's got a winner?

A. "Bridge" was well received by critics but it's having a tough time finding an audience, though it is doing better in the heartland than the experts predicted because of its New York-Jewish background. CBS has been moving it around in the hope that audiences will find it. Write Goldberg, in care of Paramount Television, 5555 Melrose Ave., Los Angeles, CA, 90038-3197.

Q. Where is "Northern Exposure" filmed? It certainly isn't Alaska. It is all wrong. Since the credits list a Cine Nevada, I presume it is in Reno/Lake Tahoe?

A. You presume wrong. Roslyn, Wash., pop. 938, stands in for fictional Cicely, Alaska, in the series. Co-creator John Fahy said filming in Alaska was impossible because of the weather. Roslyn was picked because of its Alaska-like look: "huge fir trees and snow-capped mountains in the background." Interiors are filmed in warehouses in Redmond, a Seattle suburb.

So far, no Alaskans have complained that their state is being maligned by having Washington sub for it.

And Roslyn loves the show. Locals can be seen as extras in many episodes.

Snowboarding's kicking up tracks

News USA

The excitement and challenge of ocean surfing combined with the exhilaration and adrenaline of downhill skiing has made snowboarding winter's fastest growing sport.

It is easy to learn and can be enjoyed by all ages because snowboards, like skis and surfboards, come in all sizes, shapes and flexibilities so that they offer slower or faster speeds and different levels of control for both packed ski slopes and deeper powder.

Snowboarding began in the 1960s with a toy called the Snurfer. By the early 1980s, true snowboards had evolved when manufacturers started using ski lamination technology and added high-tech plastic bases and metal edges. This allowed riders to use the boards on hard snow at ski areas, not just in backwoods powder.

Now, snowboarding has become the fastest growing winter sport in the world as people everywhere are discovering the wild sensation of surfing down a mountain.

This year American ski resorts expect about 300,000 new snowboarders to join the 500,000 already active in this sport. More than 80 percent of all U.S. ski areas offer unlimited snowboarding.

For more beginners, renting a snowboard and boots is the most practical approach to getting out-fitted the first few times out. Although renting in town before you leave may save time, getting set up at the mountain will let you exchange equipment should there be a problem. And most ski areas have convenient and inexpensive packages for equipment rentals, lessons and lift tickets.

A good board for beginners is one that is soft flexing, has a turned-up tail and is about two-thirds of your height.

Boots and bindings are either soft systems, which use snowboots that buckle into a shell binding, or hard systems, which have a stiff boot clamped into a plate binding.

Both are fine for learning, although most instructors prefer the soft system for beginners, because they are more comfortable and more forgiving of errors.

Skylark is enhanced with curved panels, accents

FLINT, Mich. — Sweeping lines and curves create a sensuous, distinctly American look for the all-new 1992 Buick Skylark coupes and sedans.

"Skylark has a distinct personality that relies on its complex underlying shape," said Wayne Kady, chief of Buick's exterior design studio for Skylark. "The basic theme is a wedge form enhanced with curved panels, accent lines and modified S-curves."

The vertical bar grille is inspired by the 1939 Buick. It's a tribute to that famous styling trend-setter. But the rest of the car explores the 1990s with free-flowing lines.

"We tried to design Skylark as if it were one continuous form," said Kady. "There is some family resemblance to other Buick models, but Skylark mostly goes its own way. There's just a touch of formality, as there should be in a Buick, but the shape is much more daring than on the previous models."

Newly designed interiors reflect the exterior themes. The instrument panel sweeps across the cockpit into the doors. On sedans the theme is carried into the rear-door panels, an unusual design element that deliberately echoes the flowing lines of the instrument panel and exterior.

All models come with a complete selection of analog gauges, including a tachometer. Bulb-mounted controls, with headlamps/turn signals on the left-side of the steering wheel and wipers on the right, are reshaped for better feel and operation. An AM/FM radio with cassette — also with large knobs — is standard. A compact disc player and graphic equalizer are available.

The seats are new with more form and contour for greater support. A 55/45 split bench is standard on sedans. Cloth-covered bucket seats are standard on coupes, optional on sedans, except on Gran Sport models. Manually adjustable reclining seats and split-justable lumbar support.

Those models with bucket seats include a floor console with automatic transmission shift lever, storage areas, front and rear cup holders, and coin and tissue holders are newly designed in a combination of leather and cloth, with articulating headrests. Four-way manual adjustment for driver (optional on Skylark coupe and sedan) is standard. The driver's seat also has a manually adjustable lumbar support.

The sedan with split bench seating has a column-mounted shift lever.

Winter weather preys on cars

ORLANDO, Fla. — Motorists are more likely to face car trouble during the winter driving season than at other times of the year, the American Automobile Association reports.

"Of the more than 21 million emergency road service calls AAA motor clubs received last year, the majority were made during the fall and winter months," said Paul Kindschy, AAA director of National Road Service.

AAA's most frequent call for help, accounting for 40 percent of calls, was for vehicles that would not start.

Mechanical failure serious enough to require towing was the second largest category of calls or 34 percent, followed by flat tires, 10 percent; lockouts, 10 percent; out of gas, 2 percent; and miscellaneous, 4 percent.

"Fall and winter are hard on improperly maintained automobiles," Kindschy said.

"Cold temperatures can increase wear on tires, belts and hoses; can render weak batteries useless; and cause inadequately powered engine cooling systems to freeze.

"Motorists unfortunate enough to experience a fall or winter breakdown can also find themselves facing life-threatening weather-inadequately equipped vehicles or unfamiliar surroundings," he added.

To help motorists prepare for the unexpected, AAA recommends the following tips to check out:

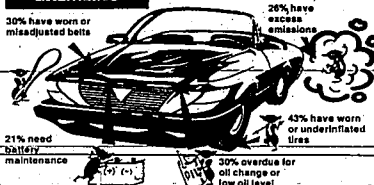

• Select your route on a map ahead of time and study it carefully. Monitor weather reports prior to a trip.

• Keep your vehicle in good mechanical condition, and have it checked by a qualified technician before starting a trip.

• Be sure the spare tire is properly inflated and in good condition and that you have the tools necessary to mount it.

• Carry emergency items in your car, including flashlight, washer fluid, ice scraper, flares, tool kit, shovel, first aid kit, jumper cables, blanket, boots, gloves and traction mats.

• Let others know your route, the time you are leaving and when you will arrive.

• If stranded, use vehicle warning lights, set the parking brake and turn the engine off.

• Raise the hood if it is safe to do so.

Because surroundings and hazards vary, use your best judgment in deciding whether to stay with your vehicle or to go for help.

POUND FOOLISH

BY ROBERT E. NELSON

Country Home Bureau/Games Magazine

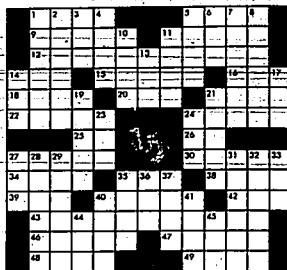

Four women went to work for the Sunset Valley Pound Cake Company and moved into adjacent homes on Butterfield Boulevard. As honored company employees, these women (whose first names were Betty, Dora, Flo, and Ida) and whose last names, not necessarily respectively, were King, Lopez, Martin, and Nolan) were allowed to take home a halfpound of pound cake each week. As a result, their husbands (Peter, Stan, Vince, and Walt) gained some weight (5, 7, 8, and 10 pounds, not necessarily respectively). From the clues below, can you determine the women's and men's full names, and the amount of weight each man gained as a result of his overindulgence in pound cake?

1. Peter, Mr. Lopez, Betty's husband, and the man who gained seven pounds often played bridge together.
2. Vince gained more weight than Mr. Martin, but less than Dora's husband.
3. Flo was glad her husband hadn't gained as much as Mr. Nolan, who in turn was glad he was the greatest weight-gainer of the four.
4. Peter said that his neighbor, Ida's husband, had gained more than either Stan or Mr. King.

Ask Adele

That first day on the job turned out to be a day to remember

By Pamela Howarth

It was my first day at "Adele's." As I contentedly handed rollers to the proprietress, she introduced me to her client, Mrs. Bradbury. "So this is Helen," echoed the old lady.

Helen's eyes swept from face to face in the mirror above her before she announced triumphantly, "Good—Heavens, Adele, you could be sisters!" And the three of us smiled.

Mrs. Bradbury was pleased with her own judgment, the hairdresser modestly murmured something about it making her feel so young; and I glowed at the promise that one day I might turn into such a beauty.

All day I hugged the thought to myself, itching to swap my long blonde mane for a helmet of golden curls and an air of sophistication to match.

It was David, the second stylist, who persuaded me to leave my hair alone.

"You're only a girl once, Helen. You've got the rest of your life to become a woman."

Mrs. Bradbury was only the first of a long line of clients to make the same observation. For quite a time, I was tickled pink; but as I grew up and became a hairdresser and manicurist in my own right, my feelings began to change.

After all, I was the one who was young and constantly hearing that a much older woman could be my sister didn't do much for my image.

The rot set in on Saturday morning when Mrs. Greenly turned up unexpectedly.

"My silly husband forgot to tell me we're invited out tonight," she twittered. "Could Adele possibly fit me in?"

"She's out this morning attending a niece's wedding," I apologized, "but I'll be fully booked all afternoon. Perhaps David or I ..."

In the end, she settled for me on the grounds that, as we were so alike, some of the Adele magic might have rubbed off on me.

To be fair, she was delighted with the result. "It's exactly as Adele would have done it," she declared, which left me feeling I had no identity of my own.

"Cheer up," said David, as we snatched a hasty cup of coffee together. "In a roundabout way, she was paying you a compliment."

"I know," I agreed, "but I'm sick of being Adele Mark Two. I'd like to be me, Helen — not somebody else's shadow."

"But you are, Helen," he insisted. "And it's you I'm asking out tonight. Just say you'll come and I promise not to mention Adele once."

The marvelous thing about a first date with someone you've known for three years is there's no awkwardness or disconcerting little discoveries.

Although David's invitation had come as a complete surprise, I found going out with him like putting on a pair of new shoes that felt as comfortable as slippers.

After all, it wasn't the start of a relationship but a development that took us onto another stage. Nobody was at all surprised when, almost a year later, we decided to get married.

5-minute fiction

"I hope you'll forgive me, Adele," David told her. "I'm running off with your right-hand girl."

"About time, too," she agreed warmly. "Anyone can see you're made for each other."

On the other side of town, we found a shop to rent with a flat above.

The day the signwriter came to inscribe David and Helen above the door, I was positively walking on air.

"Any advice, Adele?" David asked her as she'd come along to lend moral support.

"Be kind to yourselves," she began seriously. "Don't accept a booking after 4 o'clock on Saturdays, keep your accounts in apple-pie order, stock spans of everything and, if there's ever a problem, you know where I am."

"You're a gem," he said, kissing her on the cheek. "What would we do without you?"

"Very well indeed," with a wink without a flicker, she retorted airily as she slipped smartly into her car and drove away.

It was like a blessing and a perfect way to begin, but I was determined that we would stand on our own two feet and make a success of things by ourselves.

The first few months sped by, the only problem being the struggle to keep our accounts up to date. We were both hopeless at figures; but in response to David's "Why not ask Adele?" I'd sit up half the night battling with paper work without ever really getting things straight.

All the middle was promptly forgotten when, to my great joy, I discovered I might be pregnant — wanted to stand on the roof and proclaim it to the world, but David persuaded me to get it confirmed before we told a soul.

As I set off to get the result, David reminded me to call at the supplier's for a particular tint; but I was so thrilled to have my pregnancy confirmed that I scuttled straight home, forgetting the other errand altogether.

"No problem," David soothed. "We'll ask Adele."

"Can I tell her about the baby first?"

He shook his head as he dialed the number. "Let's get the business over and then you two can ..."

He broke off as the receiver was lifted at the other end. "Hello, Adele, you've never been more needed in your life — the books are in chaos, we're completely out of Venetian Sunset and Helen's bubbling over with the most wonderful news ..."

As he handed me the receiver, an all-time lump rose in my throat.

"Hello, Mom," I gabbled. "I'm going to have a baby. Oh, Mom, I'm so happy ..."

"Devil's Night and Other True Tales of Detroit," by Ze'ev Chafets (Vintage; $10).
In 1988, Detroit-born journalist Ze'ev Chafets revisited his hometown after emigrating to Israel, and compiled this gritty memoir. Chafets discovered that the city that once embodied the American dream had been reduced to a crumbling shell. As the U.S. auto industry declined, middle-class whites fled to the suburbs, leaving a city stripped of its economic base to poor, black workers who couldn't afford to leave. Attempts at urban renewal focused on big, glitzy riverfront projects rather than on the decaying commercial and residential neighborhoods. On Devil's Night (the night before Halloween), arson becomes a spectator sport in Detroit as scores of deserted houses and stores are torched by people whose hopes are limited to a few cheap thrills. Although he looks for hopeful signs amid the rubble, Chafets paints a grimly fascinating portrait of urban decay at its bleakest. "More Future Stuff," by Malcolm Abrams and Harriet Bernstein (Penguin; $12.99).

In this second catalogue of soon-to-be-released gadgets, Abrams and Bernstein state "somewhere, every day, someone has a bright idea that solves a problem, big or small, or adds something to enhance the human experience." But their enthusiasm masks their oversight the fact that many of these products represent solutions to problems that no one really has. Does anyone actually need a pool cue with an aiming line or a level-enhanced putter? Will orange cauliflower or an electric bike denture set truly enhance the human condition? The determinedly upbeat text misrepresents some of these products and leaves important questions about others unanswered. The basis of the "fat prevention drink" is a series of experiments that suggest that certain chemicals can slow the accumulation of fat in humans, which is not the same thing as "a drug that can reduce fat by up to 20 percent." A $15,000 robot companion for the blind may perform more tasks than a seeing-eye dog, but will it also be a companionship for the blind? "Future Stuff" passes, that necessity, isn't the only mother of invention,

Experts: Test before you buy

North American Precis Syndicate

Weekend woodsmen and part-time Paul Bunyans ready to trade in their axes for chain saws this fall will do well to take the move seriously. A reliable saw is a great firewood cutting timesaver and has plenty of tree felling and trimmer capabilities.

Mark Michaels, forestry engineer for Husqvarna Forest & Garden Co., manufacturer of chain saws, says you should "try before you buy."

"A chain saw is a sophisticated power tool. Just as you wouldn't buy a car or tractor without a test drive, you shouldn't purchase a saw 'without' trying it out," Michaels says.

To make sure you get the best value, Michaels recommends buying from a reputable dealer who sells and services chain saws. He says buyers should spend at least a half-hour talking with a salesman to learn about the saw's operations and maintenance. Further, Michaels says "know how much you are going to be using" the saw and the type and size of wood to be cut.

When comparing different models, buyers should look for qualities that will make the saw comfortable, quiet and reliable. Features to look for include vibration and noise dampening systems, good balance and well-designed handles will make your saw easier

Buy chain saw from a reputable dealer who sells, services, and safer to use. "Don't be misled by bar length," Michaels says. "That can make very different saws seem the same. Instead, look at engine size, weight and engine speed at maximum power as the first criteria for comparison."

Some chain saws offer features formerly found only on models designed for professional loggers.

To enhance safety, comfort, ease of use and durability, these features include:

- Solid state ignition, which eliminates the need for ignition tuneups;
- Anti-vibration handles;
- Manual and inertia-activated chain brakes;
- Steel ball bearing-supported crankshaft which contributes to a smoother running engine and higher cutting speeds;

• Gear-driven automatic oiler to assure bar and chain lubrication during extended operation;

• Symmetrical bar with allows cutting on either side and can double the life of the bar and chain.

"Insist that the dealer explain how the saw starts, operates and is maintained. Have him show you how to clean the air filter, mix gas and oil, add bar oil and assemble the bar and chain," Michaels says. "By the way, don't be alarmed if your new saw looks like it has already done some cutting."

"It's just a sign that the dealer has taken the time to check the saw and make adjustments," Michaels reassures.

Gardener asks about growing roses

Snips and starts for this week: Q: I love roses and I do live between Ketchum and Halley. Do they grow here, and how do you take care of them? I.M., Ketchum, Idaho.

A: Yes, roses grow all over the world. The trick is to choose varieties that are hardy enough for the climate. Right now you need to remove all the leaves and throw them in the trash; cut back the plant by about a third when the weather is going to be cold for the rest of the winter and match all around the rose with leaves, grass, bark chips or soil.

• Every kitchen needs an aloe plant. All the TV commercials say so. Well, they do not say that, particularly, but they do tout the benefits of aloe in a bazillion products, so it just makes sense to plant a 79-cent aloe on the windowsill and have it handy the next time you get a burn. The aloe in our kitchen is a whole family of descendants from a tiny little start someone gave our daughter when she graduated from high school, saying, "This is a perfect little plant for a dorm room - so well behaved!" But in no time at all Daughter was passing the overgrown plant back to Mom.

Countless branches have been cut for "sunburns, fried 'tlicker burns and every other dumb thing I've done to get myself burned, and still I must divide it regularly and give away aloe offspring to everyone I know. Try aloe for a plant that likes being ignored until you really need it.

The early freezing weather recently caught me off guard with my hoses right where I'd left them when I turned off the sprinklers. This brief recess in wintry weather will give us a chance to drain the hoses, wrap the faucets, winterize the lawnmower and other machinery, mulch the tender ornamentals and get the spring bulbs in the ground.

Man likes young women

Q. How do you get a man to see you in a new way? I'm very interested in a co-worker. We've known each other for almost a year now.

He treats me like a buddy. We are both in our early 30s and have many common interests. Other people in the office have commented on how we would be a perfect couple.

Here's the problem: He only dates very young women, between the ages of 18 and 21. In the time I've known him, I've never seen him go out with anyone older.

Everyone at work teases him about this. What can I do to get his attention?

Should I tell him older women make better lovers? Or should I try to make myself look younger?

A. No, I don't think you should tell him that.

It is true that most women become more responsive lovers

Ask Dr. Ruth

when they get older, but this is something he will have to find out for himself.

And you should not try to make yourself look like an 18-year-old because you'll only look silly.

Many men are interested in women your age. Some of those men are even younger than you.

Instead of putting so much effort into getting him to notice you, pay more attention to the other men around you.

This man sounds like he isn't ready to grow up sexually and you can't force him to do that.

Eventually he will have to date older women because 18-year-olds will stop going out with him, but why wait?

Santa line rings smiles of season

The phone rings, and it's Santa Claus!

Imagine the excitement of a call from the North Pole a few days before Christmas.

Parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles and friends can order this special Christmas gift by calling 1-900-933-SANTA (7268) from a touch-tone phone. (The cost is $1.50 per minute at an average of five minutes.

The return call to the child is free.) They arrange a specific time for the taped Santa call and a special, professionally produced Christmas message that includes the child's - or adult's - name and hometown.

At the appointed time, the Holidays bells and Christmas music ring as the child hears, "Ho, ho, ho, this is Santa and Mrs. Claus and we're taking time out of our busy schedule to call you from the North Pole."

Your mom and dad tell us you have been a very good boy this year...
