Council adopts salmon recovery plan

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — A sweeping, multimillion-dollar plan to rescue salmon runs in the Columbia and Snake rivers was unanimously approved Wednesday by the Northwest Power Planning Council.

Council members expect their plan to become the blueprint for a recovery plan to be developed under the Endangered Species Act by the National Marine Fisheries Service.

The plan, to be implemented immediately, allows water to flow through spillways on hydroelectric dams during spring, fish migration and places severe restrictions on commercial fishermen.

The council, made up of two representatives each from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, developed the plan at the request of the governors of the four states. The effort was the outgrowth of the region's "salmon summit" last year and was an attempt to avoid court-ordered conservation efforts like the ones that have proliferated in the dispute over protection of the northern spotted owl.

"I think the region deserves some credit for what we've done," said council member Ted Botiger of Washington.

Oregon said the 8-0 vote was important, especially because Montana's representatives were reluctant to go along. The Montanans complained that their state will receive no benefit from the plan, but will have to share in the cost.

"For them to gulp and offer their assistance in this is a really noble gesture and of great significance," Hallock said.

Montana's delegation was granted a one-day delay in the vote in order to discuss the issue with Gov. Stan Stephens. The Montana council members decided to go along with the plan because it seemed the best that could be developed, even though they are concerned that the flows through the dams and the fish harvest levels are too high.

"We want to be good neighbors, but we want to see that the sacrifices we make and the sacrifices we ask people to make are going to bear fruit," Montana council member Stan Grace said. "So I'm very nervous about how we spend that money."

Council member Angus Duncan of Oregon said the annual cost of the program is estimated at $220 million per year: $200 million for lost electricity generation and $20 million for a cut in salmon harvests.

In addition, he said, there will be an initial cost of $300 million to $320 million.

Jury acquits Smith in rape trial

The Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — William Kennedy Smith was acquitted Wednesday of sexual assault and battery in a case that focused national attention on date rape and put America's most famous family under a spotlight of scandal and scrutiny.

The jury took about 90 minutes to reject the allegations of a 30-year-old woman who said Smith chased her, toppled her on the lawn of the Kennedy's oceanfront estate and raped her under a full moon.

Smith wished a Merry Christmas to cheering supporters outside the courthouse.

"I want to thank the jurors," he said. "My life was in their hands and I'm so grateful." He also thanked the judge and said: "I have an enormous debt to the system and to God and I have a terrific faith in both of them."

Supporters of the woman condemned the cheering and the verdict.

Three members of the jury of four women and two men refused Wednesday night to talk publicly about the case.

"This has hurt all rape victims, and you're going to have a lot of victims that won't come forward because of what has been done to this woman," Robin Miller, who heads a group called Families Engaged Against Rape, said. "I'm so grateful."

Shortly after the verdict was announced, the accuser's lawyer, David Roth, read a statement from his client saying she had no regrets.

"All that I have endured is worth it if I've made it easier for one woman to make what for me was the only choice I could so that I could look at myself in the mirror, and more importantly my daughter as she grows up," said the woman, who is unmarried and has a 2-year-old daughter.

She said she had been inundated with letters and calls from around the world,

"from countless women who have suffered the same pain."

Roth said: "We accept the verdict. But not guilty does not equate to innocence."

Smith, 31, had taken the stand, adamantly denying the woman's charges. He pointed her as a sexually aggressive woman who initiated sex after they met at a night club during Easter weekend.

Smith grinned as the verdict was read and embraced his lawyer, Roy Black. Across the courtroom in the jury box, foreman Thomas Stearns Jr., 62, began to weep. Another juror, Lea Haller, 37, had tears streaming down her face.

There was no other reaction. The judge had warned spectators they would face punishment.

Smith's mother and other Kennedy family members were in the courtroom when the verdict was read. Among those absent was his uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, whose name had been sullied by his link to the case. Witnesses testified that he roused his son Patrick and Smith to go drinking early on March 30 at the disco where Smith said he was "picked up" by the woman.

The case was the latest in many crises for the Kennedys and a blow to the senator's political career, confirming his rumored life as a carouser. He promised his constituents he would reform.

'Major' non-compliance found at Gooding facility

By Kirk Mitchell

Times-News writer

GOODING — State inspectors have found Green Acres Training Center, a privately owned facility for the mentally retarded, to be understaffed and deficient in three of five areas.

"It's one of the major conditions out of compliance," said Jean Schoonover, bureau chief of the Bureau of Welfare Medical Programs for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Four state inspectors visited Green Acres on Nov. 5, and found numerous deficiencies, Schoonover said. The state issued a report on Green Acres on Nov. 27 and gave the facility 45 days to correct the problems.

The inspectors also found deficiencies at a companion facility, Green Acres Care Center, on Nov. 22. Schoonover said.

However, the report on the care center has not been completed yet, she said.

"It's extremely sad that when the state comes back they will find that all their concerns have been rectified," Green Acres Administrator, Julie Conrad, said Wednesday.

Conrad said the training center has 27 profoundly retarded residents from 4 to 21 years old. Please see CENTER/A2

Soviet Army joins Yeltsin

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Decisively defeating Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in the battle for the hearts and minds of the Soviet armed forces, Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin on Wednesday won top commanders over to his vision of a post-Soviet commonwealth, sources said.

Gorbachev, who made an emotional plea Tuesday to the officers for maintaining some vestiges of the unitary Soviet state, met with a debacle, according to the military sources.

"The army is on the side of the people, and the people have elected President Yeltsin," Gennady E. Buzhlin, the Russian leader's chief adviser, said triumphantly after Yeltsin addressed the Soviet military brass Wednesday.

Earlier in the day, there were reports two other republics, Armenia and Kirgizia, had joined the commonwealth formed by the three Slavic republics over the past weekend.

The different receptions awarded the presidents at the gathering of 500 commanders of divisions, army corps, two other republics and headquarters officers was a crucial setback in Gorbachev's bid to preserve both his job and the Soviet Union. They both would perish under Yeltsin's "Commonwealth of Independent States," the Slavic alliance formed over the weekend by Russia, Byelorussia and Ukraine to supersede the crumbling Soviet Union.

Large bank failure could topple FDIC

WASHINGTON — A single failure of a large bank could topple the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. into insolvency despite the agency's new authority to borrow $70 billion, a senior congressional official said Wednesday.

Charles A. Bowsher, head of the General Accounting Office, Congress' auditing and investigative agency, also said the Bush administration's effort to break the credit crunch by loosening bank accounting standards likely will further jeopardize the insurance fund.

The administration had said it expected the $70 billion would last through 1993. However, no so-called megabanks — the top dozen or so institutions in the country — are classified by the administration as likely to fail.

Mayor-elect Jordan off to running start

SAN FRANCISCO — For Mayor-elect Frank Jordan, ousting incumbent Art Agnos was the easy part.

Jordan

The hard part started Wednesday, when he began trying to keep his campaign promises to solve a threatening budget deficit, clean streets of trash and pantloaders and prove to business that San Francisco is a good place to do business.

"I have to make sure that I hit the ground running," said Jordan, who already has a Committee for San Francisco set up to recruit and recommend staff and appointments. First up is an estimated $91.7 million budget shortfall.

Mice victims of Alzheimer's disease

NEW YORK — Scientists have created mice that develop a version of Alzheimer's disease, a major step that should aid in studying the human version and finding treatments.

The brains of the mice contained abnormalities like those of Alzheimer's: protein-bearing deposits called plaques, nerve cell abnormalities called neurofibrillary tangles and brain cell degeneration.

"We have in the mouse brain what one would expect to see if mice got Alzheimer's disease," said Dr. Jon Gordon, professor of geriatrics and adult development at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York.

The mice, which developed the disease because researchers inserted a fragment of a human gene, also showed abnormal behavior, he said.

Columbus, WWII sprinkle new stamps

WASHINGTON — A series recalling the landing of Christopher Columbus, a sheet of 50 wildflower stamps and Olympic and World War II commemoratives will highlight 1992's new stamp issues, the Postal Service said Wednesday.

Stamps are "small, colorful portraits of Americans, tiny tributes to the history and culture of our country," said Postmaster General Anthony Frank.

There will be 126 new stamps in 1992, Frank told a news conference called to release most of the designs.

The sheet of 50 wildflower designs is the biggest single issue for the year, planned for release in June or July in Columbus, Ohio.

5 ex-hostages join Bush for ceremony

WASHINGTON — Five former American hostages recently freed in Lebanon will meet with President Bush Thursday and join him for the lighting of the national Christmas tree.

United Nations Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar and his special envoy, Giandomenico Picco, will also attend the Oval Office meeting, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Bush will meet with the three Americans released last week, Terry Anderson, Alann Steen and Joseph Ciციoppo, and two freed earlier this year, Thomas Sutherland and Jesse Turner, as well as members of their families. The former hostages and their family members will join Bush and his wife Barbara on the short journey down to the Elipse to light the Christmas tree.

Savings institutions' post meager profits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Savings institutions eked out a meager $272 million profit in the July-September quarter, but the industry suffered heavy losses in California, home to the nation's largest S&Ls; the government said Wednesday.

Profits at the country's 2,148 solvent thrift associations were down slightly from a revised $275 million in the second quarter, originally reported at a healthier $387 million, the Office of Thrift Supervision said.

Still, it was far better than the $774 million loss during the third quarter of 1990 and it marked the third consecutive quarterly profit by the industry, the first such string since 1986.

The agency said Idaho savings institutions showed a $700,000 profit for the quarter.

In a worrisome development, California S&Ls, which hold roughly a third of the thrift industry's assets, lost $127 million, the most of any state in the country. California was among 13 states posting losses.

Many of California's big thrift institutions — suffering from the same problem hurting commercial banks there — defaulted loans to commercial real estate projects. In an earlier report, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said the state's commercial banks lost $74 million during the quarter.

The trend could herald the development of a third problem region for financial institution failures, which swept Texas in the late 1980s and New England the past two years.

"It's an indication you have troubles developing ... out there in California."

"I would think everyone is worried when they see these kinds of numbers," said Charles A. Bowsher, head of the General Accounting Agency, Congress' accounting and investigative agency.

Timothy Ryan, director of the thrift office, attributed the string of earnings nationally to the government's continuing program to rescue insolvent S&Ls and to a sharp drop in the interest rates thrifths pay on deposits and other borrowed funds.

Court considers student lawsuits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court considered Wednesday whether sexually harassed students may sue their schools for monetary damages.

Never mentioned during the often arcane arguments was the underlying allegations that a Georgia teacher coerced a 10th-grade girl into having sex with him.

What the court must decide is whether Congress, when it passed a law known as Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, intended to let students sue for compensation over claims that they are victims of intentional sex discrimination.

"The logical implication is that all remedies are going to be available," Washington lawyer Joel Klein argued for Christine Franklin, who wants her lawsuit against Gwinnett County, Ga., schools reinstated. But Albert Pearson, the Athens, Ga., lawyer representing the county schools, said the 1972 law does not provide for such suits. The law bars sexual-bias-in-educational programs receiving federal aid.

Senators add home-state projects to highway bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Could this be a coincidence?
 North Dakota, Idaho, Rhode Island and New York had senators who held key positions at the table when congressional negotiators wrote the final version of the six-year, $151 billion highway and transit bill.

And North Dakota, Idaho, Rhode Island and New York came out of those mostly private negotiations with more than $25 million in earmarked road projects that weren't in the bills that either the Senate or the House had passed.

The transportation reauthorization bill that President Bush will soon sign into law represents a classic case of congressional logrolling.

The Senate, which had no special "demonstration" projects in its version of the bill, ended up with 83 of them valued at a collective $1 billion. Seventy-nine were dubbed "innovative" for their professed ability to demonstrate "innovative" techniques of highway construction and finance.

The House had inserted more than 400 such earmarked projects into its version of the bill to benefit the home districts of individual members.

Because there was no more money to be had, House members had to give way, trimming back the costs of their projects by about $1 billion to make room for the Senate.

The overall price tag remains at about $5 billion — for now. It is conceded that for most of the projects the newly authorized spending represents only "seed money" and that completion costs will total billions more.

Critics charge the specially designated projects are "pork barrel" spending, but they are widely regarded on Capitol Hill as highly visible and highly valued evidence that members of Congress are producing for their constituents.

Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., whose rural district is to receive millions of dollars in earmarked spending, said it was only right that those most directly involved have some say in how the money is to be spent rather than leave all of the choices to "faceless, nameless bureaucrats."

Symms, a senior committee Republican, got five earmarked projects costing at least $5.7 million. Most are to grade and surface roads throughout the state.

Idaho, whose Sen. Steve Symms is a senior committee Republican, got five earmarked projects costing at least $5.7 million. The projects include $18.5 million to rebuild a 13-mile stretch of U.S. 89 and $3.9 million to build a new 2.9-mile road in Bryden Canyon.

Rhode Island, represented on the panel by Republican John Chafee, has five projects earmarked with a total cost of at least $25 million. The projects include $2.4 million for the "historic rehabilitation of the Albion Bridge and Albion Trench Bridge."

New York, whose Democratic Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan led the Senate delegation at the conference, won at least $103.3 million in earmarked projects, including improvements to the Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive, the Hell's Gate Viaduct and Foley Square Plaza and the reconstruction of a ferry landing in Battery Park in Manhattan.

West Virginia had no Senate negotiators on the bill, but Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., chairs the Appropriations Committee and is the Senate president pro tempore. The state received $110 million to improve State Highway 9 from Martinsburg to the Virginia line and $50 million to build the Coal Fields Expressway from Beckley to the Virginia line.

Agency releases firm list

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Nuclear inspectors on Wednesday provided the United Nations with a list of European and American companies whose products were used in Iraq's secret program to build atomic weapons.

None of the companies was accused of knowingly supplying the Iraqi nuclear project. U.N. officials said the equipment and other materials could have been purchased through middlemen to hide the destination, and they stressed that many of the materials had wide applications outside nuclear work.

The most sensitive information appeared to come from European companies, primarily in Germany, but the U.S. chemical giant Du Pont Co. was on the list as an American subsidiary of a German concern, U.N. officials said. Asca Brown Boveri, a leading equipment manufacturer in Switzerland, also was named.

The United Nations did not release the list of companies, but officials who spoke on condition of anonymity confirmed the names of 10. Seven others were disclosed by the International Atomic Energy Agency, which prepared the report. It was not clear if those were the names in the report. The U.N. nuclear agency, which is based in Vienna, Austria, also released a statement saying other companies were not being identified yet while it continues its study of Iraqi nuclear documents seized by U.N. inspectors.

The report Wednesday went to the U.N. Special Commission, which is in charge of dismantling Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

In a related development, U.N. weapons inspectors in Iraq reported Wednesday that they discovered a chemical weapon production site hidden in a sugar factory in Mosul. The factory escaped allied bombing during the Gulf War.

Hans Blix, director of the International Atomic Energy Agency, asked U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to determine whether the list should be made public.

A spokesman at Du Pont's headquarters in Wilmington, Del., said that was the case with a special Du Pont vacuum pump oil used at one of Iraq's sites.

Leybold Vacuum Products Inc. of Export, Pa., a subsidiary of the Leybold AG engineering company of Hanau, Germany, was put on the list for supplying electron-beam welding equipment that Iraqis used in building uranium-enrichment centrifuges. Centrifuges are used to separate uranium-into-highly-enriched-uranium, used for warheads, and lower quality uranium.

Leybold said its American subsidiary obtained a U.S. Commerce Department license in 1987 to export an electron-beam welder to Iraq for repairing military equipment.

Many of the companies identified by the U.N. sources were cited for producing equipment used in the centrifuges.

For instance, officials said Iraq obtained slow turning machines built by HH Metallform of Germany and high frequency converters from Acomel GmbH and Co. KG of Switzerland.

EC leaders expand powers

MAASTRICHT, Netherlands (AP) — With turmoil gripping the eastern half of their continent, European Community leaders have agreed to expand their powers to help achieve greater stability and prosperity.

Leaders of the 12-nation trading bloc hammered out a compromise in the early hours of Wednesday setting up a looser federation with a common foreign policy and a single currency by 1999.

The accord, marking a turning point in the community's 34-year history, was fashioned only after Britain was exempted from the single currency and rules governing workers' rights and other labor conditions.

Even with the British reservations, the accord marked a great stride forward.

"It's a strengthening of what is already the area of prosperity and stability in Europe," said Peter Ludlow, director of the Brussels-based Center for European Policy Studies.

The leaders were spurred initially to give their economic club more powers by fear of competition from Japan and the United States.

The nations agreed in 1985 to create a single market late next year by tearing down barriers preventing the free flow of money, people, goods and services.

But they felt they needed more, and set out to create an economic and monetary union with a European Central Bank and a sole currency.

A community report last year said a single currency — instead of 11 different ones — would increase productivity by 5 percent of the community's economic output, which was $6.4 trillion last year. It predicted the monetary union also would help lower inflation and spur economic activity.

And, it said, businesses in the community would save $13 billion a year in foreign exchange costs incurred by changing one currency, like the German mark, for another one.

To add political muscle to their economic strength, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French President Francois Mitterrand revived the decades-old dream of a united Europe.

They sought a transfer of national sovereignty to the community.

Tibetan refugees protest Chinese premier's visit

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Chinese Premier Li Peng opened an official visit to India on Wednesday against a clamor of protest from Tibetan refugees demanding their country's freedom from Chinese rule.

Li's visit — the first by a Chinese premier in 31 years — brought together the leaders of a billion people, nearly a third of humanity.

Both sides considered the occasion a milestone in relations, though neither expected to resolve the border dispute that led the world's two most populous nations to war in 1962.

Police said they arrested 230 people as helmeted officers broke up demonstrations with tear gas and bamboo staves and sealed off two Tibetan exile camps. About a dozen people were injured in the police actions, witnesses said.

One hundred more Tibetans and their Indian supporters have been put under preventative detention since Sunday.

U.S. rids South Korea of weapons

SEOUL, South Korea — Stepping up the pressure on North Korea to prove that it is not developing nuclear bombs, South Korea disclosed Wednesday that U.S. atomic weapons have been removed from its soil.

It also offered to open U.S. military bases here to inspection if North Korea will allow the simultaneous inspection of its nuclear complexes.

Royals trade ace to Mets in 5-player deal

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Two-time Cy Young Award winner Bret Saberhagen was traded to the New York Mets by the Kansas City Royals for Kevin McReynolds and Gregg Jefferies in a five-player deal Wednesday night.

The biggest trade of the winter meeting was sent into orbit when Miller to Kansas City and second baseman Bill Peccola to the Mets.

The Mets came to the meetings looking for a pitcher and they got one of the best in the baseball, Saberhagen, 13-8 last season, won the American League Cy Young Award in 1985 when he was 23-6 and in 1985 with a 20-6 mark.

"I know the New York Mets have made some big deals in their history but none involving so many quality players," Mets general manager Al Harazin said. "Saberhagen is one of the three or four best pitchers in baseball."

What was also a difficult thing... Royals GM Herk Robinson said. "We have finished six of the last two seasons so if Bret Saberhagen won four more Cy Young Awards and we did win it doesn't mean a thing."

He joins a starting rotation which, in addition to Dwight Gooden, David Cone, and Sid Fernandez.

Mariners pick up much-needed power

The Associated Press

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — The Seattle Mariners finally made their big move, and it wasn't to Florida.

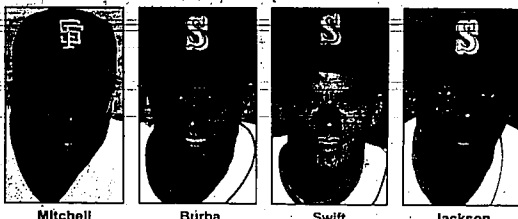

Instead, as many teams packed up and left the winter meetings Wednesday, the shakiest franchise in baseball found a foundation player in Kevin Mitchell.

The Mariners traded three pitchers to San Francisco for Mitchell and a minor leaguer, solving the best deal of the week until the end. Mitchell has hit 109 home runs in three years, and made his debut in the Kingdome, the Florida Suncoast Dome or wherever the Mariners might wind up.

For commissioner Fay Vincent, there is an even more pressing matter. He said he would soon meet with NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue and NBA commissioner David Stern to talk about AIDS.

"We think it is appropriate for us to come together," Vincent said. "I'm sure each of us can contribute something. Each of us has a lot to learn."

Vincent made his remarks following a joint owners meeting. In other business, Vincent said it was up to the New York Yankees' partners to pick a successor for Robert Niderlander to run the team. Niderlander is resigning Dec. 6; Vincent did not comment on the possibility of George Steinbrenner returning.

While the owners met, three other swaps were worked out, starting when Kansas City's Todd Benezinger moved to Los Angeles for Chris Gwynn.

Later, Philadelphia's Bruce Ruffin and Milwaukee's Dale Sveum traded places and then Cincinnati made its fourth trade of the off-season, sending John Wetteland to Montreal for Dave Martinez in a five-player deal.

Tom Kelly, meanwhile, was rewarded for being the AL manager of the year and leading Minnesota to the World Series championship when the Twins gave him a one-year contract extension through 1994. Mitchell is also signed through 1994, at $3.5 million per season. Even with Mariners owner Jeff Smulyan struggling to sell the team for $100 million, he said he wasn't hesitant about spending a lot of money on Mitchell.

"We needed someone like him," Smulyan said. "He's worth it."

It cost the Mariners more than money. To get Mitchell and minor league pitcher Mike Remlinger, Seattle gave up relievers Bill Swift, Mike Jackson and Dave Burba.

"Our main priority was finding a right-handed, No. 4 hitter," Mariners general manager Woody Woodward said. "With Kevin hitting behind Ken Griffey Jr., our entire lineup has become a lot more potent."

The Mariners and Giants talked during the season about a trade for Mitchell, but Seattle balked when San Francisco wanted starter Erik Hanson. The teams met several times this week, and completed the deal in the early hours Wednesday after four more meetings.

Mitchell was the subject of several trade rumors recently, including a possible trip to Texas for reliever Jeff Russell. Most moves were put on hold until Monday, when it was announced that criminal charges would not be filed against Mitchell in an alleged rape involving his former girlfriend.

Jerome heads north for pair in Panhandle

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins approach the one-third season mark by hosting Caldwell and invading Minico this weekend while Jerome takes inter-district competition to its maximum with a tour to the Panhandle.

Those games along with a northside-southside duel with Carey at Hansen Friday highlight a 23-game boys schedule that offers only two conference games.

Both the league games come in the A-4 division with Shoshone traveling to Richfield Friday and Glenns Ferry hosting Valley Saturday.

Actually, there are as many league games going tonight with the Canyon Conference offering Filer at Gooding and Glenns Ferry at Kimberly. A non-league set tonight has Jackpot invading Hansen.

Jerome will be playing in Kellogg Friday night and moving a little south to play at Moscow Saturday.

"We're starting to get a little football out of our systems now. But it's going to take a while longer," said Twin Falls Coach Ben Allen after his Bruins evened themselves up at 2-2 against Skyline Tuesday.

Friday's task is Caldwell generally and Glen Bowers specifically.

"Everyone tells us Bowers is one of the better players in the state if not the best," said Allen of the 6-3 guard who had 37 points against Idaho Falls last weekend.

The Cougars also have 6-2 Steve Garman, son of former Caldwell standout and major league pitcher Mike Garman. He had 22

Malad, Kuna take over leads in basketball poll

The Associated Press

Malad and Kuna both moved to the top of their divisions in this week's Associated Press Idaho boys high school basketball poll, but in decidedly different ways.

Malad knocked off the previous No. 1 team in A-3 to move to the top of that division, but Kuna climbed to the top of the A-2 rankings by default.

Idaho sportswriters and broadcasters ranked Malad first on the strength of its 74-6 victory over previously top-ranked Teion of Driggs, giving the Dragons seven of 10 first-place votes and 47 of 50 possible points.

Kuna, third among A-2 team in the preseason rankings, moved to the top of the division after the previous No. 1 and No. 2 teams, Burley and Sugar-Salem, lost in the opening week of play.

Coeur d'Alene and Wilder held their top positions in A-1 and A-4.

In A-1, Coeur d'Alene got seven first-place votes and 44 points. The Vikings were followed by Blackfoot with two first-place votes and 36 points.

Meridian and Capital of Boise, neither of which was ranked in the AP preseason poll two weeks ago, entered the rankings at third and fourth, while Highland of Pocatello slipped from second to fifth after splitting its first two games of the season.

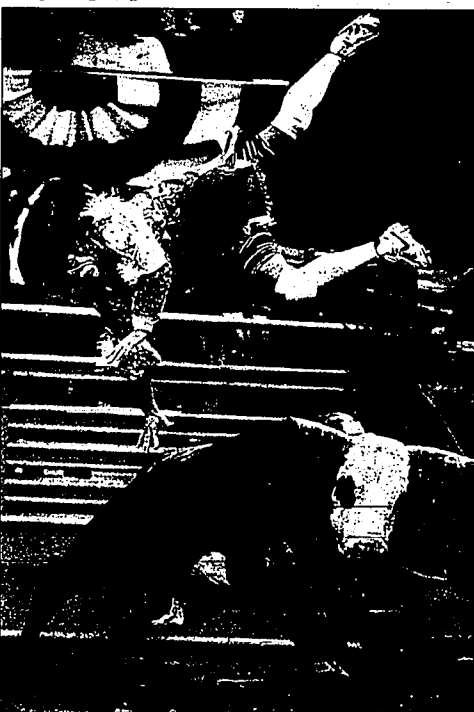

Twin Falls and Centennial of Meridian ranked third and fifth in the preseason poll, fell out of the rankings.

In A-2, Kuna jumped ahead of Burley with six first-place votes and 42 points, compared to one first-place vote and 25 points for the Bobcats.

Wood River of Valley and Jerome climbed into the top five, replacing Sugar-Salem and Salmon, while defending state champion Bishop Kelly of Boise slipped from fourth to fifth.

CSI road trip will challenge unbeaten marks

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

If you accept the given basketball theory that upsets can only happen at home, the matter of Southern Idaho's men and women's basketball teams has the opportunity to disappoint Salt Lake Community College and Utah Valley this weekend.

Both teams will be taking undefeated records into major tests this weekend. Coach Ben Stroud's women will be playing at 5:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday with the men's games starting at 7:30 p.m.

Salt Lake awaits Friday night's tests with a 9-2 record in the men's division and 5-3 in women's. Utah Valley's women, Saturday's foes, currently are unbeaten and ranked sixth in the nation while the Wolverine men are 9-1 with that one loss coming not unsurprisingly by four points in St. George to Dixie.

Both CSI coaches say the philosophy of win at home and break through the road will be in effect. But that is more applicable to the women than the men because, under Scenic West Conference rules, only four women's teams advance to the regional finals.

Eight men's teams go to regionals and it would be virtually impossible to keep CSI out of that.

But, the men want to protect their No. 1 ranking and remain undefeated. Also, there's the matter of the Utah champion hosting this year's tournament and the probably would be to the rest of the region's advantage to have it someplace other than Orem or

Heat halts losing streak against Cavs

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Rony Seikaly scored 8 of his 20 points in the final 2:35, including the go-ahead free throw with 12.7 seconds left, as the Miami Heat snapped a 5-game losing streak with a 105-103 victory over Cleveland Cavaliers on Wednesday night.

Pro basketball

Terrell Brandon and Mark Price each had six points during a 21-5 run that put Cleveland in front 95-94 with 2:50 remaining in the game, the Cavaliers' first lead since the first quarter.

Two free throws by Seikaly, who also grabbed 24 rebounds, and a running jumper by Glen Rice, who finished with 21 points, put the Heat ahead 98-95 with 2:13 remaining.

Cleveland's Henry James and Seikaly exchanged baskets before John Williams made a free throw and Price, who led the Cavaliers with 21 points, added two more foul shots to tie the game at 100-100 with 48.8 seconds to play.

Seikaly sank two free throws to put Miami back in front, but Larry Nance's dunk re-tied the score with 30.2 seconds left.

Seikaly hit the first of two free throws with 12.7 seconds to go for a 102-102 lead. He missed the second, but Jimbo Coles banked the ball out of bounds off Nance to allow Miami to keep possession.

Seikaly was fouled on the inbounds pass and hit one of two free throws for a 104-102 lead with 8.6 seconds left.

against Idaho Falls "and the rest of the team got 13," Allen said.

Allen said the work ethic of his team allows him to view the 2-2 record as satisfactory.

"But we're still struggling right now. We need to find what is our tempo for us and to stay in it," the coach said. "I don't know myself what that would be yet but it's somewhere between walking the ball downcourt and humming it down. Right now what we're having too many turnovers."

Allen said turnovers and free throws continue to be the bone of the team.

"When you go to some else's floor and get 36 free throws, you should win. But we only hit 20 of 36 at Capital while they were 29-36 and that, along with the turnovers, decided the game," Allen said.

"Actually, we've had 18 turnovers the past two games and that total is really not too bad in high school. But it's more when we are making them. We're making them continue."

"Against Capital we got back to within three with 1:31 left in the game and only got two shots after that. The rest of the possessions resulted in turnovers."

Allen said Minico is unknown since the Spartans schedule didn't start until last week.

"But we know that Minico likes to beat Twin Falls and the Spartans will play hard against us," he added. Burley will be renewing some acquaintances in Eastern Idaho; traveling to Snake River Friday and coming home to host Marsh Valley Saturday. Both should be good tests for the Bobcats who are 1-1.

Bull becomes the first Magic Valley team to test the Knights at Bishop Kelly. The first two, Wood River and Jerome, gained a split in close games.

Filer also heads west, playing the Pilgrims in New Plymouth while Murrough will be home to the Bliss Braves. Mountain Home sends its junior varsity team to compete with Shoshone, 1-0, will test the Tigers in Richfield 1-3.

Hansen, 3-1, appears to be a contender in the Magic Valley Conference, losing only to A-2 Kimberly. Carey debuted impressively against Moeck. It could be a preview of the relative strengths of the two Class A-4 divisions in this district.

Saturday finds Bull coming home to host the Middleton Vikings, a team that trimmed him by 16 last week.

Wood River, 2-1, will take on the Gawwain Spartans, while Beelo goes east to play at Soda Springs.

Filer remains in the third district, meeting Payette. Kimberly draws an eastern Idaho juggernaut in the Justin Jones-led Malad Dragons. Carey again crosses paths with the Wolves in Castleford's home debut.

In another north-south battle, Bliss will invade Hansen while Hageman climbs the hill to play at Wendell.

Minico drops opener to Bonneville

The Times-News

RUPERT — Brian Harrington scored 16 of his 25 points in the second half to lead Bonneville, playing its fifth game of the season, past Minico in its opener 61-58 in boys basketball Wednesday.

"The Spartans, who trailed by as many as 10 points the first half, had two chances to steal the victory in the closing seconds. Minico, trailing 59-58, missed the front end of a one-and-one free-throw situation with six seconds showing. The rebound bounced off a Bonneville player out of bounds. Minico then missed its field goal try and fouled to set up Bonneville's final points.

Steve Stephens tallied 18 points for the Spartans. Doug Manning added 14 and Chris Dixon 13.

Kemp takes break from backup QB role

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Name an NFL quarterback and Jeff Kemp probably backed him up. And if he wasn't a backup, he was a backup's backup.

In 11 NFL seasons, Kemp has played behind Pat Haden and Dan Fouts, and Steve Fuller and Kelly Stouffer. And Dave Krieg, and Steve Bartkowski.

And that's before he was acquired by the Philadelphia Eagles two months ago. On Sunday, Kemp becomes the Eagles' 11th starter this season when Philadelphia plays the Dallas Cowboys.

He has been waiting to play for so long, he doesn't even have answer questions about how many quarterbacks he's backed up.

"It's easier to name the ones I haven't," he said. "If figures that a team in desperate need of a quarterback would end up with a career backup like Kemp.

First Randall Cunningham went down, then Jim McMahon. Rookie Brad Goebel was given a shot and so was Pat Ryan. McMahon came back but fractured four ribs last week in the Eagles' victory over the New York Giants.

Kemp came in, led the Eagles to their 19-14 victory, and is now at the controls of the hottest team in football. The Eagles (9-5) have a six-game winning streak as they prepare for the Cowboys (9-5). "I'd like to be a starter, the 32-year-old Kemp said he's never thought of himself as backup. After all, he has started 27 games since signing with the Los Angeles Rams as a free agent in 1981.

"I wouldn't be much of a quarterback if I didn't think of myself as a starter, because I am one," said Kemp, the son of former pro quarterback Jack Kemp—now the Secretary of Housing. "The minute I'm on the field I'm a starter. You have to be able to handle backing up. And in that sense I've never let myself become so frustrated that I wasn't ready. I still want to be a starter. That's the way you think, the way you prepare, the way you play."

His best season was 1984, when he started 13 of 14 games for the Rams and led them to the playoffs before they lost in the first round to the New York Giants. He also started five games for Seattle this season in place of Kreig before the Seahawks released him.

"I've been through a lot and I think I've learned a lot of things, so I'm thankful to be able to back up sitting on the bench, getting thrown in and then getting put back on the bench," Kemp said. "I don't like that, but I can handle it. The situation now is a great one because this team is so strong. The loss of Jim is significant to this team. I think his spirit and competitiveness, battling adversity through his injuries is a part of what got this team rolling. I want to carry that on in any way I can."

Playing for a team with the league's best defense also helps Kemp's mindset.

"You do have a certain confidence and it's a great feeling to know that you have a defense that will secure a lead when you get ahead," Kemp said.

Father-steered Heisman favorite away from hoops

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—Great times come wrapped in strange packages. That may explain how Desmond Howard almost became a basketball player.

And, who knows, he might have been a great basketball player, too. But you don't want to see the Heisman Trophy for playing basketball.

The Heisman goes to the nation's outstanding college football player, and Howard is a virtual cinch to claim the award Saturday night. The Michigan split end already has won the Walter Camp and Maxwell awards.

But it might never have happened if Howard's father, J.D., hadn't been quick to spot an obvious talent. Howard was interested mainly in basketball when he enrolled in Cleveland's St. Joseph's High School.

"Desmond was a good basketball player," J.D. Howard recalled. "That's why he wanted to go to St. Joseph's. But after he scored five touchdowns in his first football ball game, I said, 'Maybe we better rethink this thing.'"

By the young Howard's time on the basketball court wasn't completely wasted. It was on the basketball team that he became friends with a tall, raw-boned kid named Elvis Grbac.

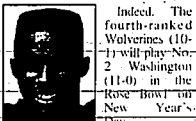

In the 11th grade, after some prodding by his pal, Grbac tried out for the football team. His inexperience showed, but they let him play quarterback where his main function was to hand the ball off to Howard, a dynamite tailback in those days.

"We lived in different parts of town," Grbac said. "We aren't that close socially, but we've had this friendship right from the start because of sports."

When the college recruiters began swooping down on Howard, he made it clear he wasn't going anywhere without Grbac. Ohio State was willing. So was Michigan.

"At the time I was being recruited, Ohio State had just fired Earle Bruce and was bringing in John Cooper," Howard said. "I didn't want to be part of a rebuilding program. I wanted to be part of a program that was already established so I could go to a Rose Bowl."

"I think my decision has definitely worked in my favor thus far."

Howard and Grbac, both of whom have a season of eligibility remaining, have so far combined for 31 touchdowns.

But it might never have happened if Howard's father, J.D., hadn't been quick to spot an obvious talent. Howard was interested mainly in basketball when he enrolled in Cleveland's St. Joseph's High School.

Desmond has probably been as good as anybody put in that position. Michigan coach Gary Meyer said, "And he's had a good supporting cast. That guy throwing the ball to him isn't shabby."

Several of Howard's catches will be talked about for years. The diving catch in the end zone to seal a victory against Notre Dame was probably the most dramatic.

But his signature piece came in the final regular season game against arch-rival Ohio State, the team that lost out on Howard.

In the second quarter, Howard hauled in a punt and returned it 93 yards for a touchdown to put Michigan ahead 24-3. It was the longest punt return in school history, and maybe one that will be remembered until another Wolverine wins a Heisman.

As he reached the back of the end zone, Howard struck the familiar pose of the player on the Heisman Trophy.

It was the first time anyone could remember the normally quiet Howard doing anything so out of character. It was something the Wolverines don't normally indulge in.

Love of the game couldn't help golfer keep privileges

The Associated Press

A bad thing happened to a very good guy just the other day. Mike Donald lost his PGA Tour playing privileges.

It was hardly headline news. It never is when a journeyman fails to win a tournament or enough money one season to keep his place in line for the next, then blows a second chance at keeping his card by failing to place among the top 45 finishers in the tour's year-ending stop-and-go tournament.

It happens to a dozen guys like Donald every year. Guys who spend entire careers in the chorus, then step forward one day to solo and nothing comes out. Then they simply disappear off the face of the turf.

And just about the time he drove his ball out of bounds off the ninth tee Monday, it dawned on 36-year-old Mike Donald that after all these seasons it could happen to him.

"I figured I was pretty much done right then and there," he said by telephone Tuesday from Florida. "I birdied the last two holes, but by the time I got there, I knew I was through."

Donald eventually carded 73 in his final round at the PGA Tour Qualifying tournament, missing the cut by five strokes. He went straight to the parking lot, changed shoes, and drove aimlessly around Orlando, Fla., for several hours, trying to convince himself that nothing much had really changed.

"I told myself the story has been written for '91 and now it was time to bear down and pretend I'm a rookie again, I told myself," he recalled. "That instead of shooting for the moon, it was time to start taking steps one at a time again."

Donald was always good at that. For the better part of 12 seasons, he was one of the players always glimpsed off to one side, wide-eyed and nervous, charged past on the way to this championship or that. He was the kind of guy who was happy walking behind them, happy for them, happy for himself, happy to be just where he was.

On the practice range over the years, fellow pro's told Donald that he was crazy to lug his game to nearly three dozen tournaments every season instead of picking his spots. They meant well, but they were mistaking desire for need: Donald simply loved to play.

He was in his 10th season when he captured his one and only PGA title—the 1989 Anheuser Busch Classic—en route to his best single-year winnings ($430,232) and his highest clamber up the money ladder (22nd-place). But to his surprise, "I simply didn't make. Donald, feel any differently.

He didn't play any differently than he had at other times—before, and since—and that only served to reinforce his notion that all the fun was in the chase. And Donald's life continued traveling smoothly along that arc until the following June, when he missed a putt on the 90th hole that would have won the U.S. Open.

After surviving 72 holes and an 18-hole playoff, he lost to Hale Irwin in sudden death.

The wheels didn't come off immediately—a month later, Donald tied with a fellow pro's for second place in the Buick Open—but he started 1991 in a skid and never got himself righted the rest of the year.

"To be honest, my game wasn't terrible. But nothing really good happened all year, maybe because I was trying to hard," he said. "Golf's such a delicate little game and it doesn't take much to throw you off. I tried to make sure I didn't get involved with a lot of things."

In truth, he behaved downright admirably. Donald accepted a few lucrative corporate outings and a trip to play in Sweden because he could bring his parents along. But he turned down plenty of other overseas trips with hefty appearance fees and several endorsement offers to concentrate on golf.

What he couldn't have anticipated, however, was the change from within.

M's boss' buying tip: Get serious

Seattle Times

MIAMI-BEACH, Fla. — Investors are coming out of the woodwork in an effort to buy the Seattle Mariners.

All the early bidders probably should have stayed there.

Owner Jeff Smulyan, who put the team up for sale for $100 million last Friday, said he has received several offers.

Forgive him if he doesn't jump for joy.

One would-be owner marched into Mariner offices and announced he would write a check for $100 million on the spot. The only catch was Smulyan couldn't cash it unless the Kingdome roof was priced off before Opening Day.

Several others have thrown their names Smulyan's way, but he doesn't consider any of the offers serious.

"I've had some faxes," Smulyan said at baseball's winter meetings

Tuesday. "I know enough from buying and selling businesses that there are a lot of people out there who want publicity.

"I assume they have a good idea when somebody's serious."

Smulyan said he continues to operate under the assumption a local buyer will come forth before March 27.

A local buyer — anyone willing to buy the team and abide by the Kingdome lease — must be approved by baseball owners.

Smulyan suggested that Seattle's stingy baseball economy could prompt a special acceptance standard. The current requirement is a net worth of $100 million for any ownership group. With revenue shortfalls in Seattle, "maybe it should be a billion of net worth," Smulyan said. "Or 2 billion."

Smulyan said his requirement is far less stringent.

"I think our standard is basically if the check clears."

Team-by-team look at winter meetings

MIAMI-BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A team-by-team summary of Wednesday's activities at the winter meetings:

American League Baltimore
The Orioles turned down an offer by the Dodgers of Kal Daniels for Randy Milligan. Baltimore is looking for help at second base.

Boston
The Red Sox are not interested in free agent Danny Tarabull, keeping their focus on starting pitcher Frank Viola still is being considered.

California
Whitney Herzig says if he can't resign Kirk McCaskill, he might go after free agent Rick Sutcliffe.

Chicago
The White Sox left the meetings pursuing free agent pitchers Jack Morris, Frank Viola and Tim Lincecum.

Cleveland
The Indians have designated right-hander Doug Jones for re-assignment.

Detroit
The Tigers are considering talking to free agent Dave Winfield. He could be used as a DH and outfielder.

Kansas City
The Royals think outfielder Chris Gwynn has a chance to be an everyday player. The Royals are still talking to the agent for Danny Tarabull. But their offer is for only one year. Tarabull would want the right to become a free agent after the 1992 season if he re-signs with the Royals.

Milwaukee
The Brewers acquired left-hander Bruce Ruffin from the Phillies for infielder Dale Sveum. Ruffin was 4-7 for the Phillies last season with a 3.78 ERA in 31 games.

Minnesota
The Twins have extended manager Tom Kelly's contract through the 1994 season. Kelly had signed a two-year contract extension on Sept. 12 that ran through 1993.

Most of the trade talks with the Yankees have involved outfielder Roberto Kelly. One report had the Pirates asking for Kelly, center fielder Bernie Williams and a pitching prospect for Barry Bonds.

Oakland
Ron Darling wants a two-year deal for about $4 million.

Seattle
It was thought the Mariners might have to give up Erik Hanson to get Kevin Mitchell. But they were able to get the outfielder for Bill Swift, Mike Jackson and Dave Burba, keeping the starting rotation strong.

Texas
Manager Bobby Valentine said the Rangers were never shopping second baseman Jolyn Franco despite rumors.

Toronto
The Blue Jays continue to pursue free agent pitchers Jack Morris and Frank Viola. The Blue Jays named Joe Sieps as their midwest scouting supervisor. He replaces Don Welke who was appointed advance scout earlier this week.

National League Atlanta
Free agent Olin Nixon wants at least $7.5 million for three years.

Chicago
The Red Sox have expressed some interest in pitcher Shawn Boskie.

Cincinnati
The Reds added some outfield help by acquiring center fielder Dave Martinez along with reliever Scott Ruskin and minor league infielder Willie Greene from Montreal for right-handers John Wetteland and Bill Rife.

Houston
The Astros are interested in Cincinnati outfielders Billy Halper and Glenn Briggs.

Los Angeles
The Dodgers moved to solving their first base opening by acquiring first baseman Todd Benningler from Kansas City for Chris Cwynn and Don Domingo Mota.

Montreal
The Expos think John Wetteland, acquired from the Reds in a five-player deal, has a chance to be in the starting rotation.

New York
Craig Fenech, the agent for Frank Viola, says he has not heard from the Mets. ... The Mets are interested in free-agent pitcher Joe Hesketh.

Philadelphia
The Phillies traded left-hander Bruce Ruffin to the Brewers for infielder Dale Sveum. Sveum hit .241 last season with four homers and 43 RBIs in 90 games.

Pittsburgh
The Pirates were scheduled to talk to Barry Bonds' agent before the end of the meetings.

St. Louis
There's a possibility Pedro Guerrero will return to the Cardinals since he has found little interest on the free agent market.

San Diego
The Padres, one of the main contenders for Danny Tarabull, don't expect the free agent to make a decision this week.

San Francisco
The Giants were hoping to get pitcher Erik Hanson in the deal that sent Kevin Mitchell to Seattle for pitchers Bill Swift, Mike Jackson and Mike Remlinger.

Ohio basketball team puts halt to losing streak at 130 games

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The school bus, with its horn honking and a strobe light flashing on top, slowly pulled through the little town of Bettsville. There were girls hanging out of every window cheering that they were No. 1.

"I sat there thinking that the night before we had lost by 53 points," says Bettsville basketball coach Russ Hagerty. "I guess we really were No. 2."

Pardon the Bettsville Bobcats if they don't quite have the hang of winning. After all, through more than five seasons and 130 games, they had never known what it was like to not lose. But that all changed two weeks ago, when they beat Lakeside Danbury 24-17. The last time Bettsville won before that was a 36-31 victory over New Riegel on Feb. 18, 1985.

"Our first game this year, we lost to Fremont St. Joseph," said Hagerty, starting his third year as Bettsville's coach. "We got beat 63-15 and I have to admit I was depressed. We had put in a lot of time in preparing for the season and then went out and lost badly."

That was in the opening round of a tournament. The next night, the Bobcats met Danbury in the consolation game.

"I know that 24-17 score is kind of low, but we stilled the last 24 minutes of the first half and again the last three minutes of the game because we lost two regulars to fouls," Hagerty said.

"After the game, the senior was crying. The girls all got together and hugged each other. We had maybe 30 people there and they came out of the stands and joined us on the floor."

"What really made it worth remember ing for me was that some of the girls came over and thanked me for helping them to know what it was like to win."

Ben Riley, one of three sophomores on the eight-person varsity, led the way with 12 points.

The team's lone senior, Angie Huffman, said, "I could walk on water right now." She had never won in 64 previous varsity games.

"It was like an angel off our shoulders," Hagerty says.

"Not everybody was thrilled, however. Hagerty said a Bettsville fan congratulated him, but added that they were a little disappointed the streak didn't continue. Why? Because the national record is believed to be 144 losses in a row by Carbondale (Pa.) Sacred Heart. The fan had hoped the Bobcats would get the national record before winning.

Bettsville is one of the smallest high schools in Ohio, with only 47 girls in the top four grades. A girls' basketball team was started in the early 1970s. In two decades of play, the team had won nine games going into this season.

But now Hagerty says his program, currently with a 1-3 record, has the national record in girls' summer program and the development of a junior high team has piqued interest in the team. Three freshmen see a lot of playing time on the varsity.

Hagerty says the team's next goal is to win a sectional tournament game.

With four games over the next eight days, confidence is at an all-time high.

Hagerty, now with a career record of 1-45, says, "I could see us winning the next three."

French Davis Cup star rolls into quarterfinals

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Guy Forget, one of the stars of France's Davis Cup triumph, led the way into the quarterfinals by defeating Grand Slam Cup Wednesday with a 6-3, 6-3 victory over Jamie Yeagor.

Forget was down 0-3 to his Peruvian opponent in the second set, then won six straight games for the match.

Ten days ago, Forget provided the clinching point in France's victory over the United States.

"I thought I was tired after the Davis Cup but I was able to get pumped up for this match," Forget said. "When he broke me in the second set I was able to bounce back."

American David Wheaton moved into the quarterfinals by defeating Dutchman Paul Haarhuis 1-6, 6-3, 6-2, but his fellow American Aaron Krickstein lost to Todd Woodbridge of Australia 6-3, 6-3.

Wimbledon winner Michael Stich of Germany downed Goran Pripic, a Croatian-born player, 6-4, 6-3, in 62 minutes, and next will face Forget. The Frenchman has a 3-0 lifetime mark against Stich.

Wheaton plays Woodbridge Friday for a spot in the semifinals.

Woodbridge, replacing the ailing Boris Becker in the tournament, almost doubled his 1991 earnings with a guaranteed $300,000 just for reaching the second round. He had $358,679 in winnings this year from official tournament play and is the lowest ranked player of the 16 competing here at No. 78.

However, by making the round of 16 in the Australian Open and the third round of Wimbledon and the U.S. Open, he gained enough points to rank 19th in the Grand Slam Cup's scoring system.

When Becker and U.S. Open champion Stefan Edberg bowed out, and Andre Agassi declined the invitation, Woodbridge moved into the final draw.

The tournament supposedly is for the top finishers from the four Grand Slam tournaments.

However, of the four Grand Slam champions, only Stich is still in competition.

Becker, the Australian Open winner, pulled out with the after-effects of a virus which forced him to default the European Community Championship final on Sunday against Krickstein.

Edberg, the No. 1 ranked player in the world, pulled out because of tendonitis in a knee, and defending champion and ATP championship winner, Pete Sampras did not qualify.

French Open winner Jim Courier bowed out late Tuesday, losing 6-4, 6-2 to Steve Michael Chang.

It was the third round tournament Becker has been forced to miss in the past five weeks because of illness.

Last month, he had to bow out of the Paris Open in the third round because of fever and the flu. He returned to compete in the ATP championship but failed to make it out of the preliminary round.

Chang is to meet Patrick McEnroe on Thursday in one of the quarterfinals. Their match Thursday sends Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland against Ivan Lendl.

Hlasek beat Jimmy Connors Tuesday night. Connors was later fined $1,000 by the Grand Slam Cup committee for an audible obscenity in an argument in the third set of his 0-6, 6-4, 6-4 loss.

Buhl teachers, board to meet again

The Times-News

BUHL — Negotiators in the stalled Buhl School District contract talks will be trying to iron out their differences at the bargaining table once again.

Negotiators for the teachers' union and the School Board will be meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday at the school district office.

The teachers want the board to accept an agreement worked out in a fact-finding report, while the board says it is unable to.

Most recently, board members had a bulletin concerning their position passed out in town.

School Board Chairman Lee Popplewell and Superintendent Eugene Pyles could not be reached for comment.

On Monday, teachers asked the board to accept the fact-finding report, saying they felt the agreement was a compromise between both sides.

Buhl Education Association Vice President Brad Greene said he had no idea if progress would be made at the Thursday meeting.

"Unless I'm wrong, I guess it would be their turn to submit an offer," Greene said.

"The last time we spoke Monday night, they said they'd go back to the School Board to discuss certain things about our offer, which was the fact-finding report. They said they'd be talking about slight changes."

The teachers and board hired negotiators to settle their difference this fall. After several talks, the committee produced a report, which the teachers said they would abide by.

The teachers and board have agreed on a 1.85 percent increase in base salary, while medical and dental insurance will be paid by the district.

On Monday, the board made a few other concessions, agreeing to carry over one day paid personal leave to the following year. This would allow five days of personal leave to accumulate and be taken off in one year.

Several issues remain unsettled, and the school board is unwilling to negotiate them, according to the bulletin. They include the teachers' wish to create a professional development account to help pay teachers for further education.

Also not agreed upon is the teachers' desire for a formative assistance program, allowing teachers time out of the classroom to attend workshops and visit other classes.

On this issue, the bulletin states "the school district has a great deal of professional development activities for its teachers" already in place.

But Sue Melanson, BEA president, said formerly the board supported the idea of helping teachers professional growth.

"It was only later that the board took the counter-productive position that these were non-negotiable," Melanson said. "The district statement to the fact finders that they already had a professional development committee came as a surprise to most teachers."

Greene said teachers are becoming frustrated at being at loggerheads with the board.

"We are rapidly running out of alternatives," Greene said. "It doesn't seem if they're in the compromising mood, and I don't think we are. I don't know. It's another school year in Buhl."

Universal cuts staff; recession takes its toll

TWIN FALLS — Universal Frozen Foods, facing a slowdown in sales due to recessionary times in other parts of the country, is cutting costs and a few employees.

Universal has laid off nine of its office staff locally and three in Boise as part of a cost-cutting move, Vice President of Operations Sam Lowman said.

"The layoff is not very severe, but it's still a very difficult thing to do," Lowman said.

Universal's parent company, Wisconsin-based Universal Foods Corp., posted a record year. But frozen foods, such as the specialty french fries made in Twin Falls' plant, are having rough sledding because of a weak fast-food industry.

The company employs 2,600 people in its frozen foods division. About 1,500 of those are in Twin Falls.

Kimberly man dies after heart attack, auto accident

TWIN FALLS — The only person to survive a Saturday accident that killed four Twin Falls residents has died of a heart attack brought on by his injuries.

Peter Tracy, 74, of Kimberly died at 2:30 a.m. Wednesday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Twin Falls County Coroner Cal Edwards said.

Tracy was northbound on U.S. Highway 93 north of Hollister Saturday when he was struck head-on by a pickup passing from the other direction.

All four people in the pickup died instantly.

Tracy's heart attack was the result of extensive trauma and internal bleeding caused by his injuries, Edwards said.

Jerome man undergoes surgery after face injury

JEROME — A Jerome man underwent surgery Wednesday to repair damage done to his face during an early morning attack on Jerome's Main Street.

Jake Roberts, 21, was hit in the face with an unknown object shortly after 1:11 a.m. Wednesday as he and a woman left a restaurant, according to a police report taken by officer Earl Knutsen.

Rusty Addey, 24, of Jerome was arrested after police interviewed Roberts at the hospital. Addey was charged with aggravated battery and bond was set at $10,000, according to Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan.

Twin Falls woman survives day filled with problems

TWIN FALLS — Tuesday was not a good day for Jo Ann Loveland of Twin Falls.

First, she learned that her uncle who was like a second father to her had died. Then her car broke down as she returned from a seminar in Boise and had to be towed into Twin Falls.

When she finally got home, her house was on fire.

Eleven fire fighters arrived sometime after 11 p.m. and battled the fire for an hour or more, Filer Fire Chief Bud Compher said.

The house, located south of Twin Falls, suffered extensive smoke damage, Compher said. Two of Loveland's cats died and four more were taken to the veterinarian in critical condition.

Fortunately, her three dogs were staying with a friend, Loveland said.

Police to unload 60 bikes during Saturday auction

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls city police department will move about fifty dozen bicycles from inside its garage to underneath area Christmas trees this weekend with the twice-a-year bicycle auction.

About 60 bikes, many in excellent condition, will be sold to the highest bidder Saturday, Dec. 14, at 1 p.m. in the police station, 356 Third Ave. East.

The selection of bikes for this sale is the biggest the department has ever seen, said Lt. Bill Stonemets. Racing bikes, dirt bikes, mountain bikes, children's bikes — all either lost or stolen and left unclaimed at the police department — will be sold, with the money going into the city's general fund.

Bubble rubble

Working in a bubble-like environment is fine for Dave Taylor, preparing to coat a house with an exterior finishing. The partner in T.J. Exteriors said applying the coating requires a minimum temperature of 40 degrees and without the help of mother nature the crew has to create its own warm weather using plastic sheeting and gas heaters. Covering this two-story house on Candlewood Circle in Twin Falls took an entire work day, according to Taylor.

BLM cracking down on dumping

New ranger to be responsible for patrol of German Lake area

By Terri McAfee
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The federal government is cracking down on dumping at German Lake north of Rupert.

Bureau of Land Management officials hope a new ranger in the area will reduce unauthorized dumping on public lands — dumping that has cost many thousands of dollars to clean up.

Jerry Quinn, the area manager for the Snake River Resource Area, said the new ranger, Mark Gaul, will have the power to make arrests on BLM land.

"He will be highly visible," Quinn said at a recent BLM meeting in Burley. "We have never been able to stay on top of occurrences of vandalism. The presence of the ranger should help deter that."

Even after years of clean-up efforts, BLM officials said pesticide containers remaining at German Lake will cost more than $12,000 to clean up.

Ken Knowles, BLM hazardous control manager for the Burley District, said that the remaining 800 five-gallon pesticide containers will cost about $15 apiece to cart away.

"We have cleaned up at least 3,500 cans from 1988 to 1989," Knowles said. But more containers were dumped before all of the original cans could be hauled away.

"I don't know if it is ignorance on the part of people who use pesticides or what," Knowles said.

The cans will be disposed of in the Cassia County landfill, Knowles said.

Cassia County Commissioner John Adams, a member of the Burley District Advisory Council from Oakley, said he fears dumping on public lands will increase if a regional landfill replaces local landfills.

"It may through a burden on public lands again," Adams said. "I think all the counties are concerned."

State legislators see just how far a buck can go

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Six Magic Valley legislators went to a science fair Wednesday night at Morningside Elementary School.

But they weren't there to learn how to identify the constellation Ursa Major — look for the Big Dipper — polish their math skills on a CD-ROM learning program, or find out what happens to a balloon when it's immersed in liquid nitrogen.

Region 4 school superintendents and school boards brought the exhibits and the legislators together to show them where some of the money they've appropriated for public education has gone, and implicitly to make the case for more in the future.

Such meetings are traditional in the weeks before the Legislature convenes, as various groups try to persuade lawmakers to send more state dollars their way.

But this year, Twin Falls Superintendent Terrell Donicht said the 21 Magic Valley school districts in Region 4 decided on a different approach.

"At most of these, you sit 'em down, tell 'em what you want, maybe have a few questions and let 'em go," Donicht said. "This time, we wanted them to have a good time — get them into a school and see what kinds of programs are going on."

The most spectacular exhibit was the Star Lab, an inflatable miniature planetarium. The College of Southern Idaho's Herrett Museum loans out the Star Lab, which costs about $11,000, to schools throughout southern Idaho.

As the lights dimmed inside the Star Lab, Morningside teacher Linda Grubbs explained that it can be used to teach other things besides astronomy. The inner workings of a cell then flashed onto the ceiling of the Star Lab and began rotating slowly.

"The kids love it," Grubbs said. "Most of them have never had the opportunity to see a planetarium before."

Other exhibits included an interactive computerized mathematics teaching program, a computer that contained the entire World Book Encyclopedia on a single CD-ROM compact disc and an exhibit from Blaine County that demonstrated physics principles using inexpensive shop equipment.

Board waives fees for student groups to use facilities

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two new Twin Falls School District policies will allow student groups and clubs to meet in the school free during daytime hours.

Twin Falls School Board members voted Tuesday night to approve a policy that allows all student groups that comply with district rules to meet in the district's schools.

The second, related policy permits groups such Brownies and Boy Scouts to meet in district schools without having to pay a custodial fee if they meet between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. on any school day.

The policies follow a controversy involving a Buhl school group called Youth Alive, which won the right to hold meetings at Twin Falls High after the School Board initially rejected their request.

On Sept. 10, U.S. District Court Judge Marion Callister of Boise, ruled that the federal Equal Access Act and the First Amendment took precedence over a state law that prohibited an religious group from using schools for meetings.

The district — caught between conflicting laws — only wanted a court ruling to guide their policy decisions and will not appeal, Superintendent Terrell Donicht has said.

Clubs or groups that are not student-based will have to continue paying fees.

The equal-access policy establishes rules and conditions whereby clubs not sponsored or controlled by the district can meet.

"The school shall not sponsor clubs which advocate particular religious, or political beliefs or ideas," the resolution says. Clubs not sponsored by the district must have a school employee oversee their meetings.

Principals can prohibit clubs that disrupt school activities, the resolution says.

Other equal access rules follow:
• Club members must apply to hold meetings.
• Only students enrolled at a given school can participate in the club activities.
• As rooms are available, clubs can meet from 7 a.m. to 8 a.m., during lunch and from 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. on days when school is in session. With special permission the clubs can meet at other times.
• No "bussing" of students at club activities is permitted.
• Clubs cannot use school facilities to raise money.

Rupert resident asks officials to decrease her property taxes

By Terri McAffee
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — A Rupert resident asked Minidoka County Commissioners to decrease her property taxes, saying her home has fallen in value because of a neighbor's menagerie.

"Kim Belliston told the commissioners that her property is not worth its current assessed value because she lives next to Myrtle Kelly, who harbors dozens of dogs and other animals on her property.

"Had we known of her existence, we would not have bought it," Belliston said. "The property was purchased in winter when the ground was covered with snow, and the animals were 'less visible,' she said.

In late October, Belliston, who lives on the south side of Kelly's property, signed a criminal complaint against the Rupert woman. She charged that Kelly was disturbing the peace with her animals.

Assessor Max Vaughn recommended no change in this year's taxes but promised to watch for a trend in decreasing value in some sales in the neighborhood for the next six months. A possibility exists for a devaluation of some property in that area, he said.

In another matter, three residents — John Chase, Ivaan Eliason and Betty Bigelow — protested the new solid waste fee of $40.

Chairman Clarence Bellem explained that the fee is not only for the solid waste that is going into the current landfill, but also for the closing of the Bureau of Land Management site visited in March.

"The only hope offered by the commissioners was that the fees would only last for about 18 months until a regional landfill site is available.

Commissioners did remove the fee from property owned by Eliason that has no house on it.

"Mike Streeter, the county's auditor, told the commissioners that the county was healthy in some areas and ailing in others.

"The general fund balance has grown and that is good," Streeter said. "The special revenue fund balance has grown and that is not so good. The special revenue fund is the fund that pays the indigent claims. It was $548,931 in excess of its projected needs.

County Clerk Duane Smith summarized a Solid Waste Task Force meeting that he attended, saying the state did not provide much assistance to counties hoping to make landfills meet new federal requirements.

The state's Department of Environmental Quality does not have the staff to be anything more than a consultant to the counties, Smith said.

The task force agreed to seek legislative support and to work with DEQ and the governor.

Officials weigh options of INEL waste

By N.S. Nokedzevich
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Though officials have detailed plans to clean up radioactive and chemical waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, they don't know what to do with the waste.

State, INEL and federal Department of Energy officials were in town Wednesday to discuss plans to clean up radioactive and chemical contamination of the INEL's Radioactive Waste Management Complex.

Of the proposed projects at INEL, the waste buried at the complex is the state's highest priority.

From 1954 to 1970, plutonium-contaminated wastes from the department's Rocky Flats nuclear weapons factory in Colorado were buried willy-nilly, along with wastes from INEL, in shallow pits and trenches at INEL.

According to federal records, this waste contained 216 tons of uranium, 805 pounds of plutonium and 33 pounds of americium.

Officials believe the barrels and boxes containing the waste have deteriorated beyond any expectation of integrity. Plutonium traces have been found in sediment layers 110 feet below the surface, and organic solvents have moved into the Snake River Plain Aquifer.

Federal officials have promised Idaho it would clean up this waste since 1970. It now plans to start on one of those pits, P-19.

It is the first of its kind in the nation. The department proposes to dig up the waste and extract contaminants, but just what will happen to those contaminants once they are isolated is not known, Jim Solecki of the Energy Department said. The department hopes to remove 90 percent or more of the plutonium and americium, which will be stored at INEL, pending a permanent disposal solution.

Peter Rickards, a Twin Falls podiatrist, questioned the department's intentions with the waste. The department could legally bury that waste at INEL. And the state has no legal authority to stop the reburial, he charged.

Dean Nygard of the state Division of Environmental Quality disagreed. An agreement with the state, the department and the Environmental Protection Agency, which governs the cleanup, requires that all three parties agree to the final disposition of the waste. But the cleanup plans are an "interim measure" and do not include a decision on final disposition of the waste. That decision will be made later, Nygard said.

Solecki said the department has no plans to rebury any recovered plutonium and americium.

But a proposed disposal site in New Mexico for plutonium-contaminated waste will not accept any waste generated before 1970.

Officials also discussed proposed plans for two other cleanup projects. One is to clean up in barrels and boxes stored on an asphalt pad and covered with dirt. This pile, known as PAD A — consists of mixed radioactive and chemical waste from 1972 to 1978.

A 1989 study showed the barrels had rust pinholes, but an inner plastic lining had released no contamination.

A third project involves removing organic solvent vapors from below the Radioactive Waste Management Complex. Solvents have leaked from deteriorated waste containers and have moved as vapors down to the aquifer.

Kimberly firefighters get 'protection'

By Sheila Tokumaru
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Firefighters for the city of Kimberly will soon have a fire, medical and fire insurance. Fire Chief Jerry Morton and the Kimberly City Council.

Morton demonstrated a personal alarm monitor at a recent board meeting, saying they could save the lives of Kimberly firefighters.

The monitors are designed to set off an alarm should a firefighter become immobilized for any reason. The council approved the purchase of four monitors.

City Auditor Thomas Condie of Condie Brown and Co. called the city a "strong financial-based community" in his presentation of this year's audit.

Condie commended the Kimberly City Council members on their hard work to keep within the city budget even after making street improvements and buying a new fire truck.

Mayor Jesse Fosdy spoke briefly about the 1% initiative concerning its effects on the city. He said the tax proposal would cause Kimberly to lose nearly $54,000 in property tax revenues.

Such a substantial decrease would greatly affect the quality of not only the city's streets but also the police and fire departments.

Representatives from Sensus Technologies Inc. introduced the council to the idea of water metering. At present the city does not possess water meters and must charge a flat rate to all city water users. Installation of water meters would help to conserve water and control waste.

At present, city water users must share the cost of water used, with a metering system on the council and pay for only the water they use.

Sensus spokesmen encouraged the council to send city employee Ken Story and a council member to observe the meters in use.

The council voted to renew beer wine and liquor licenses. After discussion by the council and a favorable referral from the police force, the council approved a transfer of the beer license from Beard Bros. to new owner Gary Bodilly, doing business as Bodilly's Food Market.

Hailey residents to pay more for trash collection

By Linnea Polichetti
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council approved an increase in the monthly garbage disposal fee from $7 to $8.88.

The increase was requested by Wood River Rubbish Inc. because dumping fees at Blaine County Landfill will increase on Jan. 1 from $1.25 to $3 per yard.

Council members refused to approve an additional 6 percent rate hike requested by Wood River Rubbish to increase the disposal company's profit margin.

Mayor Keith Roark pointed out that since the inception of mandatory garbage pick-up, the number of Hailey customers has almost doubled and the city performs the monthly billing and collection for the firm.

Wood River Rubbish stated at present the owner is only making a 6 percent return on investment.

He would gladly run a monopoly business at a 6 percent rate of return in today's business climate if it had more customers in the same territory.

as before with no accounting costs," Roark said.

Keeping an eye on the future Roark also stated "there is no doubt that in the future we're going to be paying substantially more for solid waste management."

The council also agreed there is no need at this time to increase the 14-cent per customer fee the city receives to defray the cost of billing for the garbage service.

Susan Burnham of Bell-Walker Engineers presented an update on the present facilities study.

The Riverside waste treatment plant and the Woodsdale plant currently process 145 gallons of waste per person per day — which is higher than a normal average of about 120 gallons.

At the current rate, Burnham estimates the plants will meet or exceed capacity in 1995.

One of the causes of the higher-than-average demand on the waste treatment facilities is the need to run water continually in winter months to prevent freezing of water pipes.

The engineering firm will next prepare a report on ways to solve the current waste disposal problems and also to anticipate the effect of population growth over the next two decades. The report will take two to three months to be completed.

In another matter, the council has been considering implementing a water metering system due to what Roark terms "excessive water consumption" in Hailey.

"Before we can ask anyone to obligate themselves to water meters, we should make sure we have a water system of integrity," Roark added.

The council decided to postpone any action till the water system is evaluated this spring to identify and repair leaks.

City Attorney Steve Crabtree presented a proposed election reform ordinance which was read for the first time.

The ordinance requires a council candidate to run for a specifically numbered council seat. It also requires a majority vote to win and provides for run-off elections to achieve a majority when necessary.

The council will vote on the ordinance after its third reading.

Hispanic education committee making strides in Burley

By Laurie Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — A Hispanic education committee that was started at Burley High School last year is making large strides.

Principal John Billetz gave a presentation to the Cassia County School Board at their Monday meeting, saying the committee is working to improve communication between the Hispanic community and Hispanic parents.

The group is putting out a monthly newsletter for the Hispanic students and their parents.

The newsletter includes the names of Hispanic honor-roll students, information on scholarships and anything else that will increase educational and cultural awareness, according to Billetz.

The committee is comprised of faculty members and community leaders.

"We hope to build self-esteem in our Hispanic students," Billetz said. "We hope to build that with individual positive reinforcement by complimenting students on such things as good grades, new tennis shoes, and we feel we are doing a good job of that."

relationships and easing tensions among Hispanics in the community.

Superintendent Norman Hurst said the program has been especially useful since 13 percent of students enrolled this year are Hispanic.

"There are 82 Hispanic students in Burley High School this year," Hurst said. "One year ago seven percent of the students at the school were Hispanic; so we are concerned. We are concerned about the drop out rate."

In other business: Hurst said children who enter school in the district must be five or six "by Aug. 15, depending if they are entering kindergarten or first grade. New proposed legislation would move the date to Sept. 1."

Hurst said he is also concerned over proposed legislation that would strike the provision that allows local school districts to receive reimbursement for transporting students less than 1 1/2 miles from the school. He said he is concerned because there are certain areas within the district since it is safer for some children to ride a bus in some areas closer to school than walk.

In another matter, Hurst said the school was participating along with six other school districts in the state in the Headstart program.

The program would track students as they progress through Headstart and into the public school system. Hurst said there would be 20 to 25 students involved in this program within the Cassia School District.

Library starts foundation to purchase books

By Phil Sablin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With tax season just around the corner, the Twin Falls Public Library Foundation knows how library patrons can lower their taxes and buy library books too.

The foundation has started a permanent book endowment program whereby patrons can contribute $300 — tax deductible — from which the library foundation will buy a book a year, forever, in the donor's name.

"That's right, forever," said Library Director Arlan Call. The foundation will bank the $300 and collect interest on it. Books will be bought from the interest that the money earns.

"Every year for forever the foundation will add one book in the subject area of the donor's choice," he said. "Fifty years from now, the foundation will be buying books in your name," he said.

Donors can establish an endowment in their name, or in memory of someone else. And it's tax deductible under Idaho law, Call said.

For example, a foundation brochure states that if someone in the 28 percent tax bracket starts an endowment, he will reduce his federal and state taxes by $109 plus get a state tax credit of $100. This means their $300 endowment would actually cost $91 out of pocket, Call said.

"For a little out of pocket, you can give a substantial donation," he said.

In the 15 percent tax bracket, for lower-income earners, the out-of-pocket expense is $135, while for those higher-income earners in the 31 percent tax bracket the out-of-pocket cost will be $82, the brochure states.

The library tries to buy 4,000 to 5,000 new books a year — roughly 10 percent of the titles published, Call said. But with tight budgets of recent years, the library has bought closer to 8 percent of the titles published, he said.

The "book endowment" can help buy those other titles that the library needs but cannot afford.

At current interest rates, the $300 would not earn enough in a year to buy an average book. But the library foundation will make up the difference, Call said.

When interest rates rise, the $300 would earn enough to cover a larger cost of a book.

The foundation has other tax-deductible plans. For more information contact the library at 733-2964.

Those who want to take advantage of the book endowment to cover their tax load for this year must do so by Dec. 31. But taxpayers certainly can use the program next year and in years following that, Call said.

Magic Valley/Idaho Not many Buhl residents show for meeting about sewer plan

By Bertilla L. Redfern
Times-News correspondent

BUHL - Only a handful of people showed up at a hearing on adding new homes to the city's sewerage system, at this week's Buhl City Council meeting.

A feasibility study on adding part of the northwest end of Buhl was recently completed, and the City Council was looking for public input to determine what direction to take next.

City engineer Scott Bybee said it has become increasingly difficult to obtain permits for new septic systems to replace outdated ones, as the criteria for requirements continue to change.

Many on the northwest side of town have mound septic systems, because of the shallow rock, and those systems are not proving to be very effective, according to the study.

The problems have hampered growth in the area and decreased property values, according to one resident at the hearing who recently had his home appraised.

The area studied involves 258 people living in 105 dwellings and four businesses. The area is out of the city limits, but in the city's impact area.

Four alternatives were considered in the study. One method is to do nothing. Bybee said if there isn't any interest in the project, the city may choose that option. Another alternative would be to continue to install septic tanks and drain fields as mound systems. A third option would be to construct a collector sewer system to tie into city facilities. The last alternative is to phase construction of the collector system over a two- to five-year period.

Bybee said he preferred the last method, although it wouldn't come cheaply. He estimated the costs to be $1,179,205.

Should there prove to be enough interest in this project, funding will have to be considered. Bybee said at this point, it could be funded through a grant or a public bond. But without enough public interest, he said a project this costly will fail before it gets off the ground. Then nothing will be done to prevent potential groundwater contamination, according to the study.

Bybee urged residents to respond to the study.

In other business: A local real estate agent, Jim Barker, is ready to go to phase II of his approved plans for the Apple Valley Acres Subdivision. Before he can start putting in water lines, he has been asked by the Department of Environmental Quality to obtain a letter from the city stating their intent to serve the subdivision with city water.

According to Mayor Ted Pence, many requirements may have changed since the subdivision was approved in 1985. Pence asked Barker to provide information on the original approved plans; council members can study all the other questions that have come up.

But in order to not hold up Barker, council members agreed to send the DEQ a letter stating their intent to serve the subdivision with city water. However, they also specifically wanted the letter to clarify restrictions, only committing to the nine lots currently in the subdivision.

Kevin Parnell came to the meeting to dispute the $2,400 charge to hook up to the city's sewer system; Parnell recently completed a 24-unit apartment complex in Buhl. He said already had existing service on the block where the apartments were constructed. Parnell said the laws governing new construction do not apply to him.

City's attorney Bill Nungester said there is not much clarification in the city's codes regarding this issue. After some debate, council members decided they may need to revise the codes to clarify requirements.

Council members suggested Parnell pay the $2,400 fee. After they have studied and clarified hook up fees for new and existing construction, they will reimburse him if they determine the fee is not applicable.

Eldridge was reappointed by the mayor to serve one year as the city's building inspector. Eldridge's 3-month term expired the end of November.

Two city ordinances were amended, allowing city residents a choice on door-to-door delivery of handbills and circulars.

Residents will soon be able to register with the city clerk in order to receive or stop delivery of such articles.

Former M-K worker alleges age, sex discrimination

BOISE (AP) - A woman terminated by Morrison Knudsen Co. last year after 12 years with the company has filed a $465,000 lawsuit, alleging age and sex discrimination. Boise attorney Robert C. Hunley Jr. filed the lawsuit Wednesday in U.S. District Court for Sharon Zimmerman.

The woman alleged that she had a good work record with M-K until she was fired at the age of 42 and replaced by a younger man who was given essentially the same duties. Jess Hawley, M-K spokesman, said he hasn't reviewed the complaint and the company has a policy of declining comment on pending litigation.

Zimmerman claimed her termination violated federal laws against age and sex discrimination. Besides $465,000 in direct damages, Zimmerman said she will be "permanently and irreparably harmed" by loss of employment benefits, including pension and deferred tax benefits.

Idahoans spend less for care

BOISE (AP) - The average Idaho family spends less on its annual income on health care than families in 46 other states, and officials say the rural nature of the state helps keep medical expenses down.

A new study by the Families USA Foundation showed the average family in Idaho is spending only 9.8 percent of its income this year on health care, a full two percentage points below the national average of 11.8 percent. Only Alaska at 9 percent and Wyoming at 9.7 percent were lower. Vermont families matched the outlay of their counterparts in Idaho at 9.8 percent. "There's a lot of rural areas involved so you don't wind up with high-priced specialists," Foundation spokesman Arnold Bennett said on Wednesday. "Doctors charge less in rural areas."

The foundation estimated the average income for an Idaho family this year at $30,725 with $3,067 of that going for health care. That was the lowest amount in the nation, but because income in the other states were proportionately larger than Idaho's, the percentage devoted to health costs was lower. In Alaska the average was $3,846, Wyoming $3,174 and Vermont $3,649.

The report said general taxes to support government health programs, including those of the Pentagon and Department of Veterans Affairs, constitute 40 percent of the nation's health-care costs.

Out-of-pocket expenses for doctors, prescriptions and other items are 32 percent, insurance premiums 17 percent, the Medicare payroll tax 9 percent and Medicare premiums 3 percent.

While Wyoming families used a smaller share of their income than Idaho families, the average in the other border states was substantially higher. Nevada topped the list at 11.6 percent or $3,897 followed by Oregon at 11.4 or $3,900, Montana at 10.6 or $3,154, Utah 10.2 percent or $3,682 and Washington 10 percent or $3,710.

But during a congressional hearing Tuesday in Coeur d'Alene, health care remained a major concern of Idahoans.

 What's what?

POSTPONE SADNESS?
 Both you and your partner get depressed from time to time, presumably, but rarely at the same time. That's suggested by a study at the University of Oslo.

Theorists surmise therefrom that people who suffer only the normal ups and downs are capable of postponing depression until a more convenient time. Do you buy that?

Court tosses Lafferty verdict: Utah may retry

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal appeals court has left Utah prosecutors with a difficult task if they decide to retry Ron Lafferty for two 1984 murders.

Lafferty

After seven years, prosecutors would have to locate witnesses and ask them to remember the events surrounding the grisly slayings.

The three-judge appellate panel ruled the court applied the wrong legal standard of review in declaring Lafferty, who suffered some mental impairment after a jailhouse suicide attempt, competent to stand trial.

Lafferty also believed he would lose powers given to him by God if he relied on attorneys, physicians and others, his attorney had argued.

The state has 10 days from the ruling to ask for a new hearing by the entire 10-judge appellate bench. Lafferty will remain at Utah State Prison while the state decides.

Mr. Lafferty's parents, Jim and LaRae Wright of Kimberly, Idaho, were frustrated by the ruling and said a retrial would be a "waste of the Utah taxpayers' money."

Worse, said Jim Wright, a new trial would "revictimize the victims again."

There will be more pain, suffering, anguish and concern," he said. "It will be traumatic on my family. But I don't expect it to be devastating."

Lafferty is retried, the greatest challenge could be finding witnesses not jogging their memories about the murders.

Difficult, yes, but not impossible, said Utah County Attorney Kay Bryson.

There's no denying there is potential for any number of difficulties that may not have been present during the first trial," Bryson said. "But there is no reason that with some extraordinary effort this couldn't be prosecuted and represented successfully."

Salt Lake County attorneys have retired more than a dozen cases in recent years because appeals courts have overturned convictions years after the crimes were committed.

In the event of a new trial, lawyers could raise the issue of Lafferty's competency now, but not his competence during the original trial. And the prosecution could, as has happened in the past, negotiate a plea bargain.

In the Lafferty case, most of the witnesses were police officers or government employees of one kind or another, Bryson said. "People may have moved beyond the state of Utah, but they are people whose locations can be traced," he said.

The state won't have to track down the two key witnesses in the trial, Ricky Knapp and Chip Carnes are still incarcerated in prison for their role in the murders.

Bride's mom fed up with no-shows

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

DEAR ABBY: I can certainly sympathize with "Pressured in Pennsylvania" who wanted a "no-child" wedding. All of the invitations to my daughter's wedding last month were worded in the correct way and addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." We assumed that by not including "and family," we would have no trouble.

Wrong! Friends whom we had not seen in a number of years, and would have welcomed with open arms, announced that they were coming 500 miles to the wedding and bringing their married daughter (who was invited) and her three small children (who were definitely not invited). I fell to me to telephone long-distance and tell them that the children were not included in the invitation. They said they had never heard of such a thing, and if the children weren't such a thing, they wouldn't be coming either. I stood my ground and said: "I was sorry, but that's the way it was. They never came." Also, my daughter and I spent an entire weekend calling people who had failed to RSVP. A number of them told us they thought that if they were not planning to attend, they did not need to respond. (What did they think the stamp on the return envelope was for?) Several accepted but never showed up.

Abby, I think it's time to change the rules. Tacky or not, if I ever have to do this again, I will state on the invitations:

"Sorry, adults only. Please respond with a yes or no. A stamped envelope is included for your convenience."

And finally, the ultimate in tacky: "No-shows will be billed for the amount charged per person, by the caterer."

(In our case, it was $30 per head, and we were out several hundred dollars and a lot of food went to waste because of those thoughtless people.) Thank you for listening because I really needed to get this off my chest! If you print this, please do not use my name.

- OUTRAGED IN OREGON

DEAR OUTRAGED: My mail over the years indicates that many people do not understand what RSVP means. Perhaps the following would be preferable: "Please respond with a YES, we will be there" or "NO, we will not attend." A stamped envelope is enclosed for your convenience.

P.S. Many people have written to say, "We thought it wasn't necessary to respond because we cannot attend." Others in equal numbers wrote to say, "We didn't respond because we will be there."

DEAR ABBY: We would like to pass along a family tradition we start each Christmas and birthday, we go through our daughter Kristin's toys. With her help, we decide which toys she doesn't play with - or has outgrown - and would like to give to less fortunate children. In addition to the obvious benefit of children getting toys they might not otherwise receive, it teaches our own child the joy of sharing.

So instead of selling those old but good-as-new toys your children have outgrown - or boxing them up to store in the back of your closet or attic - give them to your local charity. After all, isn't the joy of giving worth far more than a couple of bucks made from a garage sale?

- THE MC ALBENEN FAMILY, CHARLESTON AFB, S.C.

DEAR MC ALBENEN FAMILY: Hooray for you. May each successive holiday season be happier than the previous one. You deserve it.

Abby's family recipes are included in her cookbooklet. Send a long, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

The 'write' way to send holiday greetings

By Ellen Creager
Knight-Ridder News Service.

"Dear friends," the perky holiday letter begins. "This year has been so busy since Geoffrey's film played at Cannes. I moved up to concertmaster with the Philharmonic and Gigi's book climbed to No. 1 on the Times list! It's been a non-stop whirl!"

Blech! Bragging is bad taste in holiday letters, unless you're longing to shorten your mailing list next year.

Sending photocopied holiday letters in general is a dicey proposition. They've become widely accepted in these time-warp times, but they're often on the verge of hokey, sappy, pretentious or depressing.

"You have to give a balance," says Merle Kindred, who teaches a class in Grosse Pointe, Mich., on how to write fabulous holiday letters and streamline one's holiday mailings. "There isn't so much a stigma as there used to be to sending photocopied letters. I'll still make a personal note on the card, so it fulfills the obligation without the time."

Kindred suggests that for those with fewer than 50 cards to send, a handwritten note is preferable.

But please, don't just send a card with only a signature, unless you see the person regularly. "It's nice to get funny or pretty cards. But it's also nice to communicate," he says.

One option for the busy might be to whittle your list by dropping those you haven't heard from in years.

If you decide to go ahead and write a holiday letter, here are some tips:

• Keep it to one page. You're not that interesting, or someone would have written a book about you by now. Either whip up your own type-written or legibly handwritten letter, or go to a printer for a fancier version.

Or let each family member pen one paragraph about his or her year, then sign it and decorate it. The one-page rule applies even if you've got six kids.

• Know your audience. "You have to find the middle ground between Aunt Mabel and your wild and woolly cousin Rod," says Kindred, who is a partner and marketing manager at Garfield Kindred Associates, an architectural firm in Mt. Clemens. "Letters should be a slice of life. It doesn't all have to be upbeat."

• Humor works. "A good joke, a little cartoon are wonderful," Kindred says. "Many people don't write because they act in the role of critic. They feel they need big accomplishments before they write a letter. Even if nothing momentous has occurred, your family and friends still would like to hear from you."

If, by chance, something momentous HAS occurred, especially something bad, friends will understand if you write the difficult news in a one-size-fits-all letter.

Stock market records small gain after swoon from last 6 sessions

The Associated Press
NEW YORK—The stock market turned down Wednesday following a bit after the decline of the past six sessions.
 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 71.56 points over the last six trading days, edged up 1.56 to 2,865.38.
 Volume on the Big Board came to an estimated 206.01 million shares as of 4 p.m. EST, against 191.83 million at the same time Tuesday.
 Analysts said some traders were cautiously shopping for "bargains" as the Dow Jones industrials hovered around their lowest levels since last spring.
 "Fire buying didn't stir up much excitement, given persistent worries about the state and direction of the economy. Questions have also arisen in the past couple of days over whether the Federal Reserve has any plans to credit further in the near future."
 Interest rates showed mixed and small changes Wednesday in the market for long-term government bonds.

Overdue loan payments inch up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surge in loan delinquencies moderated from July through September, but the number of overdue payments still inched up for the sixth straight quarterly increase, a trade group reported Wednesday.

The American Bankers Association said consumer loan delinquencies edged up to a seasonally adjusted 2.74 percent as of Sept. 30. The rate was 2.73 percent at the end of June and 2.5 percent a year ago.

These results reflect the moderation in the recession that occurred last summer, said ABA chief economist Robert Dugger. "However, we do not yet see a reversal in the generally upward trend in consumer credit delinquencies that began in the mid-1980s."

In fact, the third-quarter rate was the highest since a 2.88 percent rate in the third quarter of 1989. That had been the highest level of delinquencies since the second quarter of 1980.

A loan payment 30 days or more overdue is considered delinquent.

The rate is derived from a survey of 800 banks in the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. It represents a composite of seven types of closed-end loans: two kinds of auto loans, personal loans, recreational vehicle loans, mobile home loans, property improvement loans and closed-end home equity loans.

Although the delinquency rate on personal loans declined from 3.46 percent at the end of June, the 3.36 percent rate still was the highest in the third quarter survey.

The lowest incidence of delinquency — 0.85 percent — involved open-end home equity lines of credit, which stood at 0.90 in June. Dugger said lower interest rates may have helped households with variable rate loans such as lines of credit to pay down debts.

Closed-end home equity loan delinquencies, on the other hand, rose to 1.87 percent in September, from 1.70 percent three months earlier.

Although the number of credit card delinquencies decreased to 3.19 percent in September, from 3.23 percent in June, the rate increased in dollar terms to 4.54 percent from 4.48 percent.

The survey also found that late payments on auto loans from dealers fell to 2.87 percent from 2.95 percent. But delinquencies on auto loans from banks rose to 2.43 percent from 2.25 percent.

Late payments for personal loans dropped to 3.36 percent from 3.48 percent.

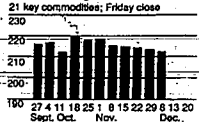

Regionally, closed-end loan delinquencies were highest in three New England states: Rhode Island, 5.85 percent; Massachusetts, 5.19 percent; and Connecticut, 5.11 percent.

They were lowest in Wyoming, 1.22 percent; Washington, 1.34 percent; and Colorado, 1.44 percent.

Network computing firm records best growth year

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Novell Inc. reported net revenues of $640.1 million for the 1991 fiscal year, up 29 percent from the $497.5 million of the previous year, and credited accelerated growth in its network computing services.

"What made 1991 our most successful yet in accelerating the growth of network computing by meeting the needs of our users for integrating their computer systems," said Raymond J. Noorda, chairman, president and chief executive officer.

"We see this success in the response of customers to our products, in the willingness of other vendors to recognize computer needs, and in our steadily expanding partnerships with vendors across the computing marketplace," he said.

Net income for the fiscal year that ended Oct. 26 was $162.5 million, up 72 percent from the $94.3 of 1990.

Earnings in fiscal 1991 were $1.10 per share, compared to 68 cents the year before.

For the fourth quarter, net revenue was $187.2 million, up 33 percent from $140.5 million in the same period of 1990. Net income was $30.6 million, up from $22.6 in 1990.

Earnings for the fourth quarter increased to 34 cents a share from 23 cents. Sequentially, fourth-quarter 1991 revenue increased by 11 percent over the third quarter, with third-quarter earnings up 18 percent.

Novell, which trades on NASDAQ, is an operating system software company and developer of NetWare network computing products that manage and control the sharing of services, data and applications among computer workgroups, departmental networks, and businesswide information systems.

Nevada economy expected to recover slowly

CARSON CITY (AP) — Nevada's economy is recovering and will improve throughout 1992, but without the big growth rates of the 1980s, a state Employment Security Department researcher says.

Jim Hanna, the ESD's chief of research, also said in a report that the national economic downturn which started in mid-1990 "could not have come at a worse time for the Nevada economy."

Hanna said that when the recession arrived, Nevada was just concluding a construction boom that produced a big increase in casino and tourism capacity.

"While there were several planned developments that would have taken up some of the slack, the combination of the national economic recession and hostilities in the Gulf put most of them on hold," he said.

Hanna said the result was predictable:

employment growth slowed in Nevada, which lags behind all other states in job growth.

By September, the over-the-year growth rate dropped to less than 1 percent with only 4,100 new jobs being created. A year earlier, the growth was 7.1 percent with 42,200 new jobs.

With the sharp drop in job growth, unemployment increased. Hanna said the rate fluctuated in the 5 percent range during the first half of 1990 and then gradually increased until it hit 6.4 percent last May. Since then there has been a slight downward trend.

Besides the improvement in the jobless rate, Hanna said seasonally adjusted employment has been slowly increasing since summer after dropping since the end of 1990.

He said the key area is construction employment, which is no longer dropping and should improve with the start of projects such as the huge MGM Grand theme park in Las Vegas.

Hanna also said jobless insurance claims have been falling since March, providing another sign "of an economy on the mend."

"While it appears the economy is recovering and should continue to improve throughout 1992, it is not expected to quickly return to earlier growth rates," he said.

Hanna said preliminary estimates indicate growth will be in the range of 2 percent to 2.5 percent for 1991, followed by moderate recovery in 1992.

Main reasons for the slow Nevada recovery are the weakness of the national economy and continuing problems in California, he said.

Hanna added that the big increases in gaming and tourism capacity in Nevada must be "fully absorbed," something that will depend largely on the national and California economic recoveries.

Troubled GM plans changes

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., the nation's leading industrial corporation, signaled Wednesday that profound changes are planned for its North American automotive business.

A terse announcement by GM about the changes didn't provide details, but industry analysts said the plan likely would include plant closings, new cost-cutting steps and perhaps a senior-level shakeup. The business has been squeezed particularly hard by the recession.

"General Motors has developed a comprehensive program to improve profitability and efficiency in 1992 and beyond," Chairman Robert C. Stempel said in the announcement. "This program includes major actions related to GM's North American Operations."

GM has been losing enormous amounts of money on its American automotive business. The company's declining fortunes have become one of the most visible symbols of the recession that is plaguing many areas of the country.

The company's stock, a symbolic barometer of the health of U.S. manufacturing, has been under especially intense pressure recently, falling to $27.625 a share on Monday, a 4-year low. The stock closed higher at $28.50 on Tuesday but was down to $27.75 as of midday today.

The company's statement today said the changes planned for the automotive operations, endorsed by the GM board of directors Monday, could result in an accounting charge to earnings to pay for the restructuring.

The amount wasn't specified but the statement said it would be smaller than the one-time $2.1 billion charge the automaker took in the third quarter of 1990.

The statement said details of the plan would be issued Dec. 18.

Rumors have been circulating for weeks about what GM will possibly do to shrink in response to the national economic contraction, which has forced many of the nation's biggest and best-known companies to scale back.

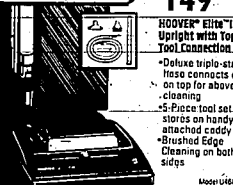

International Business Machines Corp., for example, announced radical restructuring a few weeks ago to become more competitive, which will include 20,000 job eliminations next year.

Bond-rating houses in New York have warned that GM's high credit rating, which is crucial to its company's ability to borrow money at competitive rates, may be downgraded if action isn't taken to cut costs and become more profitable.

GM doesn't say specifically, but analysts have predicted that GM is losing money at the annual rate of $5 billion to $6 billion in North America. During the first nine months of this year, GM lost $2.2 billion, with profits in its finance, computer, services and electronics subsidiaries watering down the huge automotive losses.

Smoking cartoon camel as familiar to children as Mickey Mouse

NEW YORK (AP) — A cartoon character used to promote Camel cigarettes is as familiar to 6-year-olds as Mickey Mouse and has led to a sharp rise in smoking the brand among teen-agers, studies show.

The studies found the cartoon camel, called Old Joe and referred to in ads as a "smooth character," was recognized much more often by children than by adults.

"The studies strongly suggest that advertising causes children to become addicted to cigarettes," said John P. Pierce of the University of California, San Diego, an author of one of the studies.

Cigarette makers deny they are targeting children and say that brand recognition does not mean children are buying the cigarettes. But the studies show Camels are smoked by a higher percentage of children who smoke than of adults, matching closely the brand recognition, researchers said Tuesday.

"The studies are being published Wednesday in a special issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association devoted exclusively to the health dangers of smoking," the journal's editor, Dr. George D. Lundberg, said the studies "provide important ammunition for health advocates."

"The data on advertising effectiveness shows an overwhelming success in penetrating the illegal children's tobacco market," Lundberg said in an interview.

"I believe the Congress of the United States will now have to act, to protect the public health, by banning the advertising and promotion of tobacco products in all forms. We didn't have the data before, nearly as much. Now we have them."

"Cigarette advertising is the moral equivalent of a national campaign to 'Drive Drunk — Just for the Fuel of It,'" said Rep. Henry Waxman, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment.

"Enticing children, Third World populations and disadvantaged members of our own society to smoke is the only way for tobacco companies to make up for the number of smokers who quit or die," the California Democrat said in an editorial published in the journal.

In a statement issued in response to the journal, the Tobacco Institute, the industry's Washington advocacy organization, said: "Recognition of advertising logos or characters does not automatically translate into purchase of the product. Simply because one sees and recognizes a cigarette ad does not mean that the person will smoke because of the ad."

Dr. Paul Fischer of the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta asked 229 children ages 3 to 6 to match pictures of 22 logos to the products they represented. Ninety-one percent of 6-year-olds correctly identified the character, and almost exactly as many as were able to identify the Mickey Mouse logo of the Disney Channel.

"And think of this — Joe Smooth has never been on television," said Pierce.

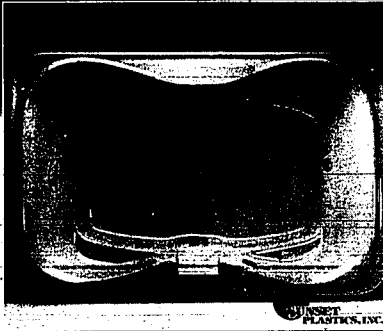

But common 35-year-olds, 37 percent identified the Camel cigarette character.

In another study, Dr. Joseph R. DiFranza and colleagues, also of the Medical College of Georgia, found that Camel's character wasn't as well recognized by adults as by teens. Ninety-eight percent of high school students recognized it, compared with 67 percent of adults.

A whole lot of wishing goes into Christmas list

With Christmas only 13 days away, it is time again to indulge in the lighter side of wishful thinking with the compilation of the 5th Annual Hunter's Wish List.

I have had an enjoyable year with some fair bird hunting. But when it came to putting big game steaks on the dinner table, I fell on hard and humbling times. But my investment was not wasted since I now have an impressive collection of mint condition tags including deer, elk, antelope, and bear.

David Hocklander
Hunting

So, my first item on the Wish List is a recipe for preparing these tags so that they resemble a tenderloin. Besides they are high in fiber, low in calories and even contain important minerals if you throw in the wire.

As mentioned, I had an impossible time trying to cross paths with a deer this fall. Perhaps I need to try a new strategy. I have experienced success duck hunting with the decoys. Maybe my deer hunting would improve if I "decked" out a likely deer spot.

So, the second item on the Wish List is a cheap portable set of deer decoys.

Now the third item on the Wish List will be needed only if the second item, the deer decoys, fail to attract a buck. In that eventuality I will also need a recipe for foam deer decoys.

When my wife noticed that I was working on this list, she commented that surely there would be something on the list in camouflage. So the fourth item is just that, something in camouflage. It doesn't matter what since no one will be able to see it anyway.

A pheasant call is next on the Wish List. Not just any call but a little known, hard to find model that, it is claimed when properly blown, sounds precisely like a bushel of corn. The call has also

Bighorns transplanted to avoid disease

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

JEROME — As far as the rest of the United States is concerned, Idaho is now the "gene pool" for California-Desert Bighorn sheep transplanting.

And toward preserving that species, the Idaho Fish and Game Department wants to spread its resources as wide and diverse habitat as possible.

British Columbia provided Idaho's seed stock more than 25 years ago and has announced it will allow no more out of its native herd.

But thanks to the great success along the Bruner and Owyhee river valleys, Idaho now boasts 20 percent of the known remnants of the species, which has more than tripled in the past 20 years on the North American continent.

The idea of spreading them out into all possible areas would guard against a disease epidemic or natural disaster that could annihilate any one of the population pockets at any time.

The department completed its biggest bighorn trapping and transplanting project last week in Owyhee County with the animals being spread around from Unit 54 (Cassia Division) in Twin Falls County to several other places — including North Dakota.

Wildlife managers are becoming adept at moving these animals with the introduction of the helicopter-delivered net gun the key reason. At the same time, the robust productivity of the Owyhee herds indicates that this population pruning through translocations is good for both the taker and the giver.

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager, and members of the Sawtooth National Forest staff, presided over the release of 16 bighorns in the Dry Creek drainage of the South Hills, immediately below Haultough.

The department put three plantings into the Big Cottonwood Canyon in the late 1980s. Some of those descendants have wandered into the Big Cedar and Little Cedar canyons. Dry Canyon heads up immediately west of those three drainages and it is hoped there will be some interchange between the old and the new.

The Big Cottonwood plantings haven't taken hold as well as had been expected despite very encouraging signs of herd productivity each spring.

"For some reason, adult mortality in the area has run much higher than any place else," says Kvale. "The norm is for the mortality to hit hardest among lambs and older animals."

In the past two years, the securing of radio transmitters that change signals when the animal dies will give the department a chance to recover some carcasses and perhaps ascertain the reasons for death.

"We have found some dead animals but it's always been too late" for an autopsy to pinpoint the culprit, Kvale said.

A yearling California Desert Bighorn sheep and ewe from Owyhee County leap out of an Idaho Fish and Game Department transportation crate and head for the freedom of a new home on Dry Creek canyon in the South Hills.

"Previously, we went on position. If a transmitter apparently hadn't moved for a while, we figured something had happened to the animal but we'd get in too late. With these new transmitters — the signal changes within 24 hours of death — we can get a helicopter in a lot quicker."

One thing the department feels certain of — the sheep aren't bringing any major problems in with them.

"Not only is the Owyhee herd among the most productive, it also is the most disease free among wild populations anywhere," Kvale said. "Those are two reasons we feel that keeping the Owyhee herds pruned back and under range capacity through transplanting might be the best thing we're doing for the sheep."

The department paid particular attention to placing the sheep on public land that had not been under sheep grazing allotment for over 40 years.

"We have many more sites that would be excellent transplant candidates but they

Pneumonia outbreak takes heavy toll on Wyoming herd

The Associated Press

DUBOIS, Wyo. — The effects of a major pneumonia outbreak in the Whiskey Mountain bighorn sheep herd near here appear to be worse than first thought, according to state wildlife experts.

Ever since 400 sheep were killed when the disease swept through the herd last winter during a frigid storm, the remaining herd of about 500 animals has been slowly regenerating.

But hunters in the area reported seeing far fewer lambs than usual and despite a reduction in permits this season, hunter success rates are down considerably from last season.

"We had hopes that limiting the number of permits would maintain hunter success rates," said Wyoming Game and Fish biologist Tom Ryder. "The drop in hunter success combined with the low number of lambs and yearlings we're seeing is a pretty good indication of how serious this outbreak was. Prior to the outbreak there were plenty of lambs and yearlings."

The state agency plans to begin a study later this month to determine just how well the herd is recovering, according to an article in the department's Wyoming Wildlife News.

"We could see a gap in the age class distribution of the herd and poor lamb survival for the next few years," Ryder said. "There's still a lot of questions to be answered and we'd like to wait until we get our classification completed to be sure, but it's likely that we'll have to keep the number of available permits at a conservative level for the next couple of years."

The outbreak will have short-term and long-term effects on the herd, he said.

In the short term, sheep that survived the outbreak will be in below-average physical condition, making them more susceptible to stress and disease. In the long term, poor lamb and yearling survival means fewer older rams in six to seven years.

"Finding an older, mature ram six or seven years from now will be more difficult than it has in the past," the biologist said.

Despite the outbreak's toll on the herd, things could have been worse, said Tom Thorne, the agency's veterinarian.

"We're actually pretty lucky — we could have lost the entire herd and its migratory patterns," he said. Sheep are traditional animals and older ewes and rams teach young sheep where to go at what times of year, Thorne explained.

Gary Butler, the agency's habitat branch supervisor, said some good might come from the outbreak.

"It may well be the catalyst we needed to get the Forest Service, BLM (U.S. Bureau of Land Management) and our agency working together on some large scale habitat improvement in the area, which would help keep the sheep in good shape and make them less vulnerable to diseases like pneumonia," Butler said.

Commission adopts regulations on big game farms

The Associated Press

BOISE — Raising big game on farms is becoming a big business in Idaho, and the Idaho Fish and Game Commission wants the practice regulated more closely.

Officials said new rules and regulations adopted Thursday are designed to guard against the transmission of disease from imported animals, both to the state's wildlife and domestic varieties.

Regulations on the importation of big game animals for commercial purposes were approved Thursday. From now on, anyone wishing to import live wildlife into the state must first get an import permit from the Division of Animal Industries from the state Department of Agriculture, and also must have a commercial big game farm license from Fish and Game.

The commission also directed the staff to prepare for the January meeting additional regulations requiring disease testing prior to intrastate movement of animals. The commission also wants to require all zoos importing animals to have mandatory disease testing.

The state Department of Fish and Game said the practice of big game farming is growing. This year, the agency issued 81 licenses for commercial game farms. There is some sale of the meat produced, but the growing market for antlers also is stimulating sales; the commission was advised.

Furbearing animals imported for fur farming purposes are exempt from the new regulations. Native and exotic game birds require an import permit but are exempt from the requirement for a commercial game farm license.

The staff also is working on additions to the regulations for some sort of permanent marking system for commercial game farms, such as tattoos. Commercial game farms also might be required to provide for annual inspection of animals, including disease testing.

Department officials said the new regulations were adopted to cut down on

Steelhead season, bighorn lottery set at final meeting

The Associated Press

BOISE — The 1992 spring steelhead season will open Jan. 1 and run through March 31 on the Salmon River downstream from Long Tom Creek and through April 30 on all other steelhead waters.

The Fish and Game Commission, wrapping up its final meeting of the year in Boise on Friday, also approved a bighorn sheep lottery hunt and renewed the bighorn sheep tag auction program.

Steelhead anglers will be allowed two fish a day and four in possession. The season limit will be six on the Salmon and Clearwater rivers and 10 on the Little Salmon and Snake rivers.

The commission voted 4-1 to approve the newly authorized lottery hunt for bighorn sheep. Commission spokesman Jack Trueblood said the lottery will be run by the Foundation for North American Wild Sheep and only Idahoans and the foundation's members will be eligible to purchase the $10 licenses.

The proceeds from the lottery will underwrite research into solving disease problems between wild and domestic animals.

The auction of a second bighorn sheep tag to the highest bidder was reauthorized after lawmakers last winter eliminated the requirement that the minimum bid for the tag had to be $30,000. Proceeds from the auction are earmarked for bighorn sheep management and research.

The auction and lottery proposals have come under some criticism from groups objecting to the merchandising of Idaho's natural resources.

In other action, the commission made permanent its Mountain Elk tag program to help ease pressure in 14 remote hunting units in central Idaho.

The program, chosen over options of shortening seasons or imposing controlled hunts, restricts hunters to hunting only in their designated tag area — mountain, Panhandle or regular.

In the past, holders of Panhandle tags could hunt with bows or muzzleloaders in any special hunts set up for those weapons, and regular tag holders could hunt with primitive weapons during the Panhandle season.

BLM, university to study owls in cutover forests

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — Scientists are embarking on a $4.6 million study in southern Oregon to see if foresters can cut timber without destroying the habitat of the northern spotted owl.

"We hope to get much closer to some real answers of what are indeed the owl's habitat needs," Dean Bibbes, Oregon and Washington state director of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, said.

Researchers will take detailed measurements of existing stands to understand what makes them attractive to owls, develop logging methods to reproduce those characteristics, and develop computer models that can estimate timber yields, said John C. Tappeiner, a silviculturist at Oregon State University.

The study will be conducted over the next 10 years on the BLM's Medford District, neighboring private lands, and much of the Rogue River and Siskiyou national forests. A research partnership between the BLM and Oregon State that is based at the university's College of Forestry in Corvallis is funding the work.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service declared the owl a threatened species last year because of heavy logging in the old-growth forests where it predominantly lives.

Scientists have said the owl needs the protection of predators provided by a forest with various levels of canopy, large trees with cavities for nesting, and downed logs that provide habitat for the rodents that owls feed on. The features are generally found in old-growth forests that haven't been logged, though they have been shaped by fire and storms.

Plans for preserving habitat for the owl have concentrated on creating large unbroken blocks of old growth. The plans threaten to devastate the timber industry in Washington, Oregon and Northern California.

Winter recreation conditions improving

TWIN FALLS — Winter recreation conditions continue to improve on all parts of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Current snow depths on the Recreation Area range from 16 inches at North Fork to 20 inches at Prairie Creek. Galena Summit has 38 inches of snow.

Upper College, Flying Squirrel, Seattle Ridge and Warm Springs runs are all open on Mt. Baldy where there is currently a 31-inch base on top. Information on snow conditions may be obtained by calling 800-635-4150.

High temperatures in Sun Valley/Ketchum have been ranging from 19 to 29 degrees. Avalanche danger is currently rated moderate to low. Downhill skiing is reported excellent on groomed, powder runs at Pomerelle Ski Resort on Mt. Harrison, Nordic trails at Conner Flat and Howell Creek have been signed and groomed for cross-country skiers.

Visitors traveling Howell Canyon road should have chains and snow tires.

The Fairfield district reports marginal conditions for Nordic skiing. Soldier Mountain has set a target date for opening Dec. 19 if the weather cooperates for snowmaking. The resort information number is 764-2260.

Snowmobiling is good in the higher country and only roads are accessible in the lower elevation. Snowmobile and Nordic trails (Rock-Creek-Penstemon-Centennial) have been groomed. The Twin Falls district and conditions are considered very good.

Magic Mountain Ski Resort is open Friday through Sunday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Information number 423-6221.

Twin Falls district and north Sawtooth districts Christmas permits can be purchased through Dec. 21. Access to the tree-cut area is limited to snowmachines or snowshoes.

Winter road closures are in effect several areas of the forest. A travel plan map is available at district offices.

Lake cleanup must happen soon, residents say

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — People who live near Lake Coeur d'Alene say a massive cleanup of the lake and its tributaries needs to get started quickly.

"For those of us who sit and daily watch the problems with the water, it's going to be pretty hard for us to sit on our hands for the next two to 10 years and wait for these studies to be done," said Rogene Hingson of Post Falls.

"I know a lot of people that are going to say, 'Hey, wait a minute, can't we put something on the line immediately, if not sooner?'"

Hingson was among about 30 residents who met with planners for a massive cleanup of the lake, contaminated with metals after a century of mining in a nearby Silver Valley.

One resident said the regional economy would suffer if the burden of cleaning up the 3,700 square-mile lake region is put on the mining and timber industries.

"They're important not only to Idaho, but they're important to the whole nation," said Ruth Johnson of Hayden Lake. "It would be very easy to go overboard."

Officials plan further investigation of outfitter

RENO (AP) — An Idaho outfitter who pleaded guilty to wildlife violations in Henderson is being investigated for similar offenses in northern Nevada and other Western states, state wildlife officials said Tuesday.

Edward Panus pleaded guilty in Henderson Justice Court on Monday to fraudulently obtaining a hunting license and a desert bighorn sheep tag. He served two days in the Clark County Jail and paid fines and penalties totaling $3,595, officials said.

Panus, 42, of Afton, N.Y., operated Seven Devils Outfitters in Riggins, Idaho, authorities said.

Chris Healy, Nevada Department of Wildlife spokesman, said Panus submitted one legitimate application for a 1991 bighorn sheep tag, but used his father's social security number and altered the date of birth and physical description to match his own on another application.

"He applied legally under his own name, then he used his father's name and altered the information so if he received the tag, it would look like he was the man," Healy said.

Panus was arrested by game wardens when he went to pick up the tag last week, Healy said. Healy said Panus' arrest culminated a six-month investigation that began in June with an anonymous call to the department's Operation Game Thief Hotline.

"Many honest sportsmen from around the country apply for Nevada tags year after year with no guarantee of ever receiving one," said Rob Buonamici, the department's hotline coordinator. "Individuals like Panus steal an opportunity for what usually is a once-in-a-lifetime hunt."

The department received 178 applications for the two non-resident bighorn sheep tags allotted in the Clark County area this year. Seven resident tags were available, for which there were 182 applicants.

Bighorns

either are part of or adjacent to sheep adjudications," Kvale said. "The department policy remains that no wild sheep will be exposed to possible transmittal of domestic sheep diseases."

The net gun also helps managers get exactly the mix they want for transplanting.

"Basically we've learned that yearling rams are about as old as you want to take. The mature rams will batter the other sheep during transport in trucks. And, if you don't watch it, they'll smash your fingers if you get careless in removing (plywood) partitions," Kvale said. "The yearling rams are rambunctious enough."

In last week's shipment to the South Hills, there were three yearling rams, 10 ewes and three lambs of the year.

"The previous way of chasing a herd into a ground net trap and taking whatever you're left with isn't nearly as convenient," Kvale said. Additionally, stress and trauma are considerably reduced for the animals.

Although there has been some complaint from Idaho hunters about sheep being sent out of state, Kvale said establishment of a California bighorn herd in North Dakota makes good sense from a biological safeguard standpoint.

"Plus," he notes, "Idaho is restricted by the amount of habitat that is available at the present time."

The state has adopted a management policy that has California bighorns south of Snake River and the rest of the state reserved for Rocky Mountain sheep.

"A lot of historical range remains in southern Idaho from the Sublett area through Shoshone Basin and then on the other side of U.S. Highway 93," Kvale said. "But all of it is in close proximity to domestic sheep grazing."

If Nevada picked up some Owyhee sheep last week and no one can complain about that. Two batches Nevada went to the work and expense of importing from British Columbia years ago, wandered into Idaho and stayed.

If technology can help the department straighten out the "adult mortality" problem in the South Hills, the area will become another trophy hunting opportunity for state sportsmen soon after.

Farms

the possibility of transmission of disease, such as brucellosis and tuberculosis, through imported animals.

The new regulations stipulate that the Fish and Game director will maintain an approved list of species which may be imported. "Any prohibited species shall not be possessed, imported, transported, released, sold, bartered or traded within Idaho," except as specifically authorized, the rule says.

Owners of prohibited species prior to Jan. 1 may continue to possess the prohibited animal, for the life of that animal, but the animal may not be held, transported, released, sold, bartered or traded within Idaho.

The prohibited species can be transported out of the state if the owner meets state and federal regulations.

Approved species include Rocky Mountain, Roosevelt and Manitoba elk; reindeer-caribou; Rocky Mountain mule deer; pronghorn antelope; bison-buffalo; fallow, sika and Muntjac deer; wild turkey; ptarmigan; Columbian sharp-tailed grouse along with blue, spruce and ruffed grouse; Gray-Hungarian and chukar partridge and wild quail. Reindeer-caribou are allowed only south of the Salmon River.

been known to attract cows, horses, and pigs.

I am not the best fisherman but I am sure I could improve my catch with the aid of the fish finder my friend recently installed on his jobboat. Fish are not only located on the screen, but are designated as to size, gender, and bait preference.

Now what is needed, the sixth Wish List item, is a bird locator. Such an instrument could detect hiding birds, distinguish between roosters and hens, and could also aid in finding downed birds. It would quickly replace the bird dog and would not require a kennel, proper scooper, or shots.

Much of the upland bird hunting is on private property requiring permission of the owner to hunt. Unfortunately we live in the day of the absentee owners whose names and addresses are often unknown. The seventh Wish List item is Hunter's "Owners' Manual" which would not only contain names, addresses, and phone numbers of land owners, but tips on how to best approach each owner for permission including acceptable bribes.

The eighth item on the Wish List is aimed at preserving peace in the home during the height of the hunting season. I would call it a "Honey Do Deferment Slip." Such a slip would entitle the bearer to put off until the end of a given season one requested home project without the fear of life threatening consequences. However the makers of the slip could not be responsible for damages inflicted on the bearer for projects not completed by the stated due date.

The final item this year is a "party hunting tag." Such a tag would allow three or four family members or friends to draw one game animal. All would be able to go and participate in the hunt. The first to see game could take the first shot and the others could shoot back-up or the group could take turns as opportunities arose.

In this way a single animal would provide a eventful hunt not for one individual but for three or four hunters even if the tag was never filled.

Merry Christmas!

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Simplicity is the most deceitful mistress that ever betrayed man."
— Henry Brooks Adams.

When you're lucky enough to get a favorable lead, don't flaunt it. You might steer the defenders to a switch you cannot control.
South was lucky to get a spade lead instead of a heart. Unfortunately his greed for overtricks clouded his judgment.
Accepting the free finesse, he won the first spade with his jack and led a diamond to West's ace. With little future promised by a shift to clubs, West shifted hopefully to hearts. This is the jack-giving defenders' four heart tricks.
How does South improve his chances of avoiding a heart shift? By hiding the fact that he's loaded in spades. At-lick-one, instead of accepting the free finesse, South should win dummy's ace. When West wins the diamond king, what should he do? By no means is it clear that he should shift to hearts, and the expected spade continuation is not only the game but an overtrick as well.
Patience pays! Take a free finesse early and you lose the game. Hide your strength from West, and you're likely to get the free finesse anyway.
