Liberal Harkin ignites sparks in Magic Valley

By Drew DeSilver and Steve Crump

TWIN FALLS — George Jaker's known Sen. Tom Harkin for years. Kathy Boian's never met the man. But they'll both be part of the largest delegation of Magic Valley Democrats to the state convention in Lewiston next June, pledged to vote for a presidential candidate who is, by all accounts, the most liberal in the Democratic spectrum this year.

"The more I read, the better he sounded," said Boian, an elementary school teacher from Shoshone and regional president of the Idaho Education Association. "The other candidates seemed to be to be paying lip-service to education. Harkin is committed to it."

"I've been associated with Sen. Harkin since 1985," said Jaker, a Bush-area farmer who has worked with the American Agriculture Movement. "His belief in protecting economies. That's why I support him."

Harkin, a two-term senator from Iowa, won 22 of the 48 Magic Valley Democratic delegates chosen to the state convention Tuesday night, and edged former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas statewide. His supporters ranged the spectrum, from anti-nuclear activist Bill Chisholm of Buhl to Mike Cramey of Oakley, former chairman of Idaho Potato Commission.

"The thing to remember is that the people who attend Democratic caucuses are committed Democrats," said Randy Staplus, a Boise journalist and author of "The Idaho Political Almanac." "These

Clinton, Tsongas search for support down South

The Associated Press

DEERFIELD BEACH, Fla. — Along Florida's "conco coast" of retirement communities, the idea of limiting Social Security increases is political poison.

So Bill Clinton's suggestion that his chief Democratic rival might want to limit cost-of-living increases in entitlement programs drew gasps from the hundreds of retirees assembled at their poolside social hall.

Clinton's visit was part of a pre-emptive strike against Paul Tsongas, who hopes for a come-from-behind Florida win and strong showings elsewhere in the South.

Retirement communities, which include thousands of seniors from the Northeast, are where Tsongas has a chance to make inroads as he tries to keep Clinton from making too good a showing in next week's Super Tuesday primaries. Six of the 11 contests will be in Clinton's native South, including delegate-rich Florida and Texas.

With little time and lots of catching up to do, Tsongas must choose his targets carefully. He can take cues from the lessons of years past, including 1988 Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis' successful primary campaigns in Florida and Texas.

In addition, surveys of voters in the contests held so far offer Tsongas a roadmap to potential pockets of support in the South.

Tsongas, the former Massachusetts senator, heads into Super Tuesday with momentum from a New-Hampshire win and his successful showings this week in Maryland, Utah and Washington.

"Paul doesn't need a lot of golds," said Massachusetts Democratic Chairman Steven Grossman. "But he does need to show everybody that he is a credible national candidate."

Eight-five percent of Florida's population was born elsewhere, making it a

Data-killing virus found in Twin Falls computers

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Michelangelo has been reported in Twin Falls.

The computer virus — not the painter — was lurking in two computers H&R Block bought late last year. They didn't work properly, so owner-manager Royce Abernathy asked a computer specialist to repair them.

Luke Malone of Information Management Systems found Michelangelo in the system. It was the first time he has located the "virus," but since then, he has found it in three other computers.

A computer virus is a small program that spreads itself from computer to computer. It carries out functions beyond the operator's control.

In Michelangelo's case, the program writes over computer hard disks and wipes files out of existence. It will go into action whenever a user prints or prints of the Renaissance artist Michelangelo.

It only affects standard personal computers, ones with disk operating systems (DOS) as their control systems.

"This is scary," Abernathy said. "For his business, the prospect of a computer crash on March 6 isn't pretty. Six months ago, you'd talk to people about viruses and they wouldn't know what you're talking about," Malone said.

Today, they know.

Companies have developed software designed to find and kill computer viruses. Such software is widely available from computer stores in the Magic Valley.

It's the surest way to prevent virus-induced glitches in a computer.

Another way to avoid the Michelangelo virus is to set your computer's clock ahead to March 7. That way, the computer will just skip the day that hooks Michelangelo into action.

And it's good to remember that computer viruses can be removed from hard disks.

Local computer companies have been getting a lot of calls lately about anti-virus software.

Leap second extends year

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — No sooner do we get leap days over with, and they announce it's time for a leap second.

An extra second will be added to the world's clocks June 30, according to the U.S. Naval Observatory, which keeps the nation's official time.

The combination of a leap day and a leap second will make 1992 the longest year since 1972, when a leap day and two leap seconds were added.

This will be the fifth leap second added since 1972, when scientists decided to let their extremely accurate atomic clocks run independently of the rotation of the earth and then adjust them periodically.

The clocks use the vibration of specific atoms to measure time.

Type A temperament may appear before birth

Dallas Morning News

Type-A temperament may begin developing even before birth, according to the first study to look at the relationship between normal mothers' and newborns' personalities.

Newborns whose mothers scored high on one measure of Type A behavior cried more during an examination than children of Type B women, scientists from Boston City Hospital and Clemon University reported in the journal "Pediatrics." The study is to be published Thursday.

All 72 women in the study were patients of a health maintenance organization in Cambridge, Mass. Their babies were examined 48 hours after birth, too soon for the mothers' parenting styles to have made much of an impact, the researchers said. And the mothers were similar in terms of education, income, health habits and lifestyle — other factors that could influence a baby's temperament.

"It's so speculative at this point," the study's lead author, Dr. Steven Parker, said in a telephone interview. "We don't know if it was genetic, or if it was differences in the intrauterine environment of women who were Type A."

Type A people are considered to be impatient, competitive, hard-driving and more involved in their jobs. Type B people usually are characterized as more laid-back.

Type A women probably secrete higher levels of hormones, such as adrenaline, in response to stress, which could influence fetal development, said Parker, director of the newborn nursery at Boston City Hospital. His co-author was Dr. David Barrett of the College of Education at Clemon.

Kerrey quits Demo chase

Knight-Ridder News-Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska, the Vietnam War hero who plucked into the presidential race almost on impulse last year, decided Wednesday to withdraw after running out of money and votes, campaign sources said.

The first of the five major Democratic candidates to abandon the chase, Kerrey appears to be acknowledging that his one-note platform on national health insurance and the fuzziness of his overall message failed to stir voter passions.

Kerrey returned to Washington Wednesday after a fleeting appearance in Florida and on TV. His campaign issued no official explanation. A formal announcement is expected today.

Snow blankets Colorado Rockies, Wyoming; Texas wet

The Associated Press

Heavy rain caused flooding Wednesday in parts of Texas, heavy snow fell in the Colorado Rockies, and temperatures were unseasonably high from the Plains to the Appalachians.

Rain and occasional thunderstorms extended over eastern Texas and western Louisiana at midday. Rain also extended across Arkansas and eastern Oklahoma.

Up to 8 inches of rain hit parts of Houston, pushing bayous over their banks and inundating some highways. Several rural roads also were closed. Locally heavy rain had pushed Colorado Creek to over a foot above flood stage by noon near New Braunfels, Texas.

In the Colorado Rockies west of Denver, 3 to 4 inches of new snow had fallen by midday, with up to a foot possible in some areas. The storm had previously dropped 2 feet of snow west of Saguache in the mountains of southwestern Colorado.

The moisture ended weeks of drought in the Denver area and was welcomed by the ski industry and agriculture.

Rain over southeastern Wyoming during the morning changed to snow by early afternoon, with up to 6 inches of snow possible in the mountains by Thursday morning.

Rain in the west-central Plains changed to snow at higher elevations of the central and southern Rockies and into northern Arizona. Rain also extended over much of the central and northern Plains into the upper Mississippi Valley.

Elsewhere, rain extended over the northern Pacific Coast and the western Great Basin, the area that includes Nevada and northern Utah.

Showdown

Southern state by geography only. Its Democratic primary constituency includes thousands of Transplants from the Northeast, including a vibrant and politically active Jewish community.

"Florida is too big for anyone in a campaign of limited resources so he can hit the condos and the Jewish community," said Democratic consultant Vic Kamber. "You have to pick and choose but there are opportunities for him."

It was success in these groups that helped Dukakis to his win four years ago and one of the reasons Clinton was courting both constituencies Tuesday in advance of expected Tsongas forays.

A new poll showed Clinton leading Tsongas 27 percent to 21 percent, but a large undecided block remains. A plurality in the polls agreed with Tsongas' characterization of a Clinton-backed middle class tax cut as a " gimmick."

Already, a Clinton television ad mentions a Tsongas proposal to limit cost of living increases for entitlements and he brings it up on the stump as well.

Tsongas makes the case for keeping COLA at 1 percent below inflation in his detailed economic book, saying such a reduction is "not a great deal but would establish a record."

Political analysts say positions like that and a liberal social record, could hurt Tsongas.

How to immunize against computer virus

Knight-Ridder News-Service

If you think your computer might have the Michelangelo virus, the easiest way to avoid file loss is to leave your computer off on March 6.

If you're worried only about Michelangelo, there's a quick solution — the virus will strike next year, too — and it doesn't do anything about hundreds of other viruses.

Here's what computer experts recommend:

- Make extra copies of your floppy disks, and regularly copy the contents of your computer's hard disk onto floppies.
- Use anti-virus software to detect and eliminate viruses.
- Some recommended general anti-virus packages for home computers: The most recent versions of Central Point Anti-Virus and the Norton Anti-Virus.

Software designers have posted special anti-Michelangelo programs on widely used computer bulletin boards, such as CompuServe and Prodigy. From there, they may be downloaded for free.

people are a lot more likely to be receptive to Harkin's traditional Democratic message than people who vote for Democrats occasionally. Those people are more likely to support Tsongas.

Stapilus said Harkin was helped in southern-central Idaho by the support of state Sen. John Peavey of Carey, by his vocal opposition to nuclear power and by the backing of members of the Idaho Education Association.

But Boies, the only delegate from Lincoln County to the state convention, said there was no pressure from the teacher's union to support Harkin.

"We had a presidential candidate meeting sponsored by the IEA in Twin Falls, and all of the candidates sent taped messages," she said. "I pressed Harkin to talk in the hall from other teachers after that was that other candidates had more support."

"I supported Harkin because what he said made sense to me," she said. "And I believe he has a chance to beat President Bush."

Deeds-area farmer Phil Bare, elected as a Cassia County Harkin delegate, agreed.

"What we need more than anything is a change in the presidency, and that's why I'm working at it," he said.

"The hook has been ringing off the hook," Blake Micro Systems owner Steve Blake said.

A few years ago, computer viruses weren't common and little more than pranks. These days, there are more than 1,000 viruses. Malone says that the industry expects that 39,000 different viruses will be circulating.

"It's a form of vandalism," Malone said. "This time it's on computers."

Court takes up Montana remap dispute

Nation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sparsely populated Montana squared off with the federal government Wednesday in a Supreme Court case testing the constitutionality of the congressional formula for distributing House seats among the states.

Lawyers tossed about references to complex mathematical formulas as they debated whether the system unfairly violates the "one-person, one-vote" principle of equal representation.

The justices, expected to decide the case by July, were told by the administration that the formula while not perfect — is a reasonable way to give voters representation in Congress.

Montana said it will be short-changed unfairly if its number of House seats is reduced from two to one.

Montana "has been over-represented for some time" because of the formula it now challenges, said Solicitor General Kenneth W. Starr, the administration's chief courtroom lawyer.

He said there is "a certain artificiality" in Montana's call to abandon a system that had served the Western state well in the past.

Whatever takes its place will not produce congressional districts of equal size unless the House is expanded into "an Athenian assembly," Starr said.

It is quite wrong to believe that this court's articulation of one-person, one-vote is applicable in this setting when the standards of absolute equality can't be achieved," he said.

The government has said it is impossible to achieve equal representation since the Constitution does not let states share House members and a vast expanse of the House is unrealistic.

Attorney General Marc Racicot of Montana said the House would have to be expanded to 8,600 members to produce equal equality.

But, he said, Montana favors a fair formula to lessen disparities.

"How can we expect the system to be equal if some rules do not apply to Congress," he said. "We should strive to make each citizen equal."

"Apportionment at the national level is poisoned" by the current formula, he said.

Based on the 1990 census, Montana is due to lose one of its two House seats this year.

Under the present formula, the ideal congressional district would have 570,000 people. If Montana loses a seat, it would be left with a statewide district of some 800,000 people.

If the high court upholds a lower court ruling in favor of Montana, the state would keep its two House seats and Washington state would lose the ninth seat it was assigned under the latest census.

Laughter filled the state courtroom Wednesday as the justices and lawyers acknowledged that some dealing with formulas that only math wizards could understand fully.

Racicot said Montana wants to replace the current formula — known as the method of equal proportions — with one called the method of harmonic means.

U.S. says Russia will qualify for IMF help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Russia can expect to qualify for around $5 billion in assistance once it becomes a member of the International Monetary Fund, the Bush administration said Wednesday.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said that assistance during an application in which he warned Congress that the consequences of failing to approve more financial support for the IMF would be "extremely adverse."

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., assured director Oliver Stone, right, that he sees no obstacles to releasing government documents on John F. Kennedy's assassination.

Director applauds release of documents

WASHINGTON (AP) — "JFK" director Oliver Stone said Wednesday during a tour of official Washington that "Congress deserves an Oscar" for moving to release intelligence documents on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Stone met with key lawmakers and administration officials to promote an opening of the assassination records.

"This is a great day and it gives me an enormous sense of optimism," said Stone after a meeting with Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Boren assured Stone in the closed-door session that he sees no legislative or administrative obstacles to the release of tens of thousands of CIA, FBI and military documents relating to the 1963 assassination.

Other than the occasional blacking out of an undercover agent's name, Boren said virtually all the secret material relating to the assassination can be made public. He said a panel of historians could be tasked to review documents in cases where public release is unclear.

"JFK," nominated for eight Academy awards, puts forth what Stone calls an "alternative scenario" to the Kennedy assassination — that challenges official conclusions that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone. The film theorizes that Kennedy was murdered in an ambush arranged by elements of the U.S. military and intelligence communities.

At the end of the movie, a printed message informs viewers that volumes of assassination-related documents are locked up and inaccessible to researchers.

Boren predicted the documents would do little to change the current official conclusions about the assassination. Stone is withholding judgment.

Study: Exam could cut colon cancer death rate

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors could lower the death rate from colon and rectal cancer by 30 percent if they checked all older Americans once every 10 years with widely available viewing scopes, a study concludes.

Many health organizations already recommend routine use of this exam, known as sigmoidoscopy. However, some experts disagree, and the new research is the first carefully conducted study to show that it actually saves lives.

"We now have clear-cut evidence of a very substantial reduction in mortality risk associated with screening," said Dr. Joe V. Selby, who directed the study.

Using the scope, doctors and nurses can see ominous growths in the colon and rectum before they become cancerous. Removal of these growths, called polyps, eliminates the cancer risk.

The exam costs about $100 to $200 and is now performed on about 1 in 5 older Americans.

"There has been a huge debate over whether sigmoidoscopy ought to be routinely done," said Dr. Daniel Nixon of the American Cancer Society. "This seems to be good evidence that indeed it should be."

Doctors say the biggest drawback to the exam — and the reason many people avoid it — is its discomfort. The slender viewing tube, inserted through the anus, can produce a feeling similar to severe abdominal cramps as it navigates turns in the bowel.

The risk of colon cancer starts to climb around age 55. The study suggests that typically the polyps take 10 years to become cancerous.

Selby recommended that everyone get this test around age 50 and have it repeated once a decade.

"If we screen at age 50, we will catch all these cancers in a pre-malignant stage," he said.

Bribes unapparent

MIAMI (AP) — CIA informants told the agency Mangel Noriega was not involved in a bribery scheme that forms a central part of the drug indictment against the deposed Panamanian ruler, according to a document read in court Wednesday.

A CIA summary said a $4 million bribe by Colombian drug barons to protect a drug laboratory under construction in Panama was paid only to Noriega's underling Julian Melo,

Jury finds infertility doctor guilty on 52 counts of fraud, perjury

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A federal jury Wednesday convicted infertility doctor Cecil Jacobson on 52 counts of fraud and perjury. The verdict came in a case in which the prosecution alleged that Jacobson may have fathered as many as 75 children through artificial insemination. Jacobson, 55, appeared to show no emotion when the verdict was announced after four days of deliberations. He faces up to 280 years in prison and $500,000 in fines when he's sentenced May 8. Jacobson, who is credited with introducing amniocentesis in the United States to diagnose defects in unborn babies, was charged with defrauding patients by artificially inseminating them with his own sperm while claiming to use other donors. He also was charged with tricking patients into believing they were pregnant when they were not. "I spent my life trying to help women have children," Jacobson said after the verdict. "It's a shock to be found guilty of trying to help people. ... I certainly did not helpfully or intentionally harm anyone. ... I did not break any law." But jury foreman Daniel Richard told reporters outside the courtroom that he was convinced that Jacobson lied when he testified in his own defense. "We knew he was lying to those patients," Richard said. Juror Deborah Earman said jurors were "huffed" by the size and complexity of the case but that the evidence against Jacobson was overwhelming. "I think that he was a good man," she told reporters after the verdict. "It was obvious that he went wrong somewhere and mis-treated a lot of women. He definitely did some wrong."

U.S. anchors defensive barrier on French colonial possession

Editor's note: This is another of a series of articles concerning events during World War II which occurred 50 years ago this week.

Knight-Ridder News Service
On March 7, 1942, Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch Jr. of the U.S. Army arrived at Noumea, the capital of New Caledonia, a French colonial possession in the South Pacific. Located south of the New Hebrides and east of Rockhampton in Australia, it became the anchor for the U.S. defensive barrier north of New Zealand. The Japanese were advancing against Port Moresby in New Guinea and had future plans for extending their own domain farther south in order to cut the supply line between the United States and Australia. Patch had been delayed by a bout of pneumonia that kept him in Trinidad during February (at this time, in order to fly from Washington to the South Pacific, one had to go via the Caribbean across Africa and India to Australia).

Patch had been born at Fort Huachuca in the New Mexico Territory in 1889, where his father, a retired Army captain, ran the trading post. He graduated from West Point in 1913 and commanded a machine gun battalion in France during World War I. He graduated from the Army War College in 1932. A tough infantry officer, he would eventually command the Seventh Army in Europe during the last year of the war. His current command, Task Force 6814, had sailed from New York for Melbourne on Jan. 22, Numbering 20,000 men and women; its main combat elements were the 132nd and 182nd Infantry Regiments. The Army had recently shifted from "square" divisions with four regiments to "triangular" divisions with only three regiments. Patch had been one of those who had pioneered the triangular division concept in the 1930s. His two regiments in New Caledonia were also National Guard units—the 132nd from Illinois and the 182nd from Massachusetts. They had been inducted into federal service in March and January 1941 respectively. In April 1942, a third "surplus" regiment, the 164th Infantry from the North Dakota National Guard, would arrive to form a new division; the American Caledonia Division, which would become famous as the "Americal" Division. This division would be the first Army division to take the offensive in World War II, landing on Guadalcanal during the heavy fighting of October-November 1942. Thereafter, it would fight in the Northern Solomons and in the liberation of the Philippines. Another of how division would carry the name "Americal" into battle in Vietnam 25 years later. At the moment, however, Patch's mission was defensive. His troops were to reinforce the island's garrison, which consisted of 1,400 Free French troops and a company of Australian commandos. Without these American troops, the French authorities refused to build new airfields on the island for fear that they would provoke a Japanese attack. The French were right. The establishment of U.S. bases in the South Pacific did draw Japanese attention, leading them to "avenge" themselves and suffer their first check at the Battle of the Coral Sea in May.

Sullivan, Demos spar over health plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan denounced President Bush's health care proposals Wednesday as Senate Democrats assailed the plan for providing universal coverage. Sullivan contended that Bush's package of tax incentives and modest insurance regulation would help families pay for coverage and allow most of the 36 million people without health coverage to obtain it. "We trust the market to work, with the president's proposals," Sullivan said.

He underwent hostile questioning before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, where the chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and other Democrats supported plans accepting reforms that would apply strict cost controls and ensure coverage for everyone. "No health reform is worthy of the name unless it meets two basic tests: It must guarantee coverage for every American and it must put reasonable limits on health care costs," Kennedy said. "The administration's plan passes neither test."

Kenney chided Sullivan for the Bush administration's failure to submit a bill containing the president's proposals. At the heart of the proposals are tax credits for the poor, refundable vouchers for the purchase of $3,750 worth of health insurance. For middle-class families, Bush's plan would offer a $3,750 tax deduction which Kennedy said would be worth just $563 to an average family in the 15 percent marginal tax bracket. He said that would barely cover one-tenth of a family's health care costs.

Televangelist tries to halt investigation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A television evangelist who says faith is rewarded with wealth went to court Wednesday in his fight to keep the state from obtaining financial records of his World of Faith Outreach Center Church. U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks heard arguments on behalf of evangelist Robert Tilton on whether to extend a temporary restraining order against state Attorney General Dan Morales.

The temporary order has hindered Morales' legal team from investigating allegations of fraud against the church based in Farmers Branch, north of Dallas. Tilton's practice of encouraging viewers to make "votes of faith" and promising that God will give them wealth in return first came under national scrutiny after he was featured in a segment on ABC's "PrimeTime Live."

Tilton's World of Faith Sunday broadcasts and Success-N-Life program draw thousands of viewers around the country each week. The church has attracted about 8,000 members.

High court sets date to hear abortion case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court will hear arguments April 22 in a closely watched abortion case from Pennsylvania, the court clerk said Wednesday. The case will be heard from 10 to 11 a.m. that Wednesday — making it the next-to-last case argued during the 1991-92 term. Advocates on both sides of the abortion debate have said they expect the court to use the Pennsylvania case to underline, if not overturn, its landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision legalizing abortion. The justices are expected to take their final vote in the case in a closed-door conference April 24. An announcement of their decision is expected by July. The state law under study requires: Doctors to tell women seeking abortions about fetal development and alternatives to abortion. A 24-hour waiting period for abortions. Detailed record-keeping by physicians, subject to public disclosure, of each abortion performed. Women in most cases to notify their husbands of abortion plans.

Shelley voters authorize bond issue

SHELLEY — City voters have overwhelmingly authorized a 20-year, $900,000 bond issue to help upgrade Shelley's aging water and sewer system.

The 401-09 vote Tuesday showed Shelley residents were fed up with sewer backups and the lack of water pressure, City Clerk Merlin Price said.

The new water pressure also poses problems for firefighters, Price said. The old system has been in place for almost 30 years, Price said, but the city of 4,000 has grown significantly in that time and might have had to impose a moratorium on new construction if the bond had not passed.

AIDS group to continue minus grant

BOISE — The Idaho AIDS Foundation vows it will carry on, even though it biggest federal grant has been cut in half.

Julie Bernatovich, secretary for the AIDS Foundation board of directors, said Tuesday the group was happy to get anything they could. "You always like to see more, but there are other ways to obtain money," she said.

The foundation will receive $11,900 of this year's $26,900 grant, which used to go entirely to the Boise-based group. Its budget had run about $50,000 annually.

"I think the foundation is clearly on the mend, and I'm confident that the money they get from us will help them tremendously," said John Glaza, supervisor of the state's programs for AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Former councilman pleads innocent

BOISE — A former Eagle councilman has pleaded innocent to grand theft charges in connection with nearly $4,000 in missing city funds.

Tom Minow will stand trial May 13 before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail.

He is charged with four counts of grand theft by unauthorized control. If convicted, he faces a maximum sentence of 56 years in prison.

Minow is accused of illegally cashing four city-issued checks totaling $3,939 between November 1989 and July 1991.

City officials said Minow has returned about $3,000, but hasn't publicly admitted any wrongdoing.

Unwanted shrubs will be torched

BOISE — Boise National Forest officials who want to burn out unwanted vegetation will run fire down from the sky.

"We always used fairly common ways of burning undesirable shrubs and smaller trees, but this will be one of the first times the Boise National Forest has used a helicopter," said Steve Raddatz, zone fire manager for the forest.

"Because of the unseasonably warm and dry weather, this is the earliest that we have ever attempted this type of burning."

The agency plans to burn 1,300 acres in the Pool Creek area, 35 miles northeast of Boise along the Middle Fork of the Boise River. Subsequent debris-burning is slated for the Meadow Creek area near Idaho City and Smith Creek north of Smith's Ferry. A total 1,200 acres would be involved among those two.

$2 million cut from Andrus prison budget

BOISE (AP) — Legislative budget writers on Wednesday whacked $2 million from the proposed prison budget, yielding to pressure to begin erasing the multimillion-dollar deficit in their 1993 state budget.

The vote came as the House neared final legislative action on state support for higher education. That $139-million bill already approved by the Senate, cuts for $500,000 more than Gov. Cecil Andrus proposed.

But it was more liberal spending in education areas that generated the looming red ink in the new budget and prompted the late drive on the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee to bring total spending back in line.

Nearly half the cuts in the prison plan came from scrapping the cash Andrus proposed to operate another 190-cell unit at the main prison complex south of Boise and two probation and parole officers to handle high-risk sex offenders.

Supporters of the cuts defended the action, saying it appeared neither the new work center of the prison unit would be ready for operation in the next budget year which runs through mid-1993.

But Democratic critics warned the reductions were "risky and unreasonable," with federal court orders requiring action to "prevent inmate overcrowding and provide adequate inmate services."

Retiring Democratic Sen. Ron Beitelbacher of Grangeville said cutting the governor's proposal severely and probation officers to that was ill-advised.

"These sex offenders who are out there need more supervision, not less," Beitelbacher said. "If I were running for re-election, the last thing I would want would be to have something happen in one of my communities and have street for less supervision of these sex offenders."

The cuts did significantly reduce the projected gap between the actual budget being drafted by the House Senate panel and the conservative Senate Target Republican legislative budget have set.

Based on committee decisions still awaiting ratification by both houses but covering 93 percent of all general tax spending, the legislative spending plan is about $3.3 million over the 1993 target.

Senate Republican leaders said earlier this week that they could accept an actual budget just $2 million or $3 million over their target.

A key piece of the overall plan, however, is a public school and package that is $5 million below the governor's recommended and concurred by supporters as unacceptable to the state Senate, where Democrats and a handful of Republicans have solidified behind the Andrus proposal.

EchoHawk meets child advocates

BOISE (AP) — Child advocates met with Attorney General Larry EchoHawk on his proposal to provide state funding for a special prosecutor in his office to pursue child sexual abuse cases.

The Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee was expected to consider EchoHawk's request this week for $724,000 in state funding to pay for an attorney to be man of a three-member child sexual abuse task force. The task force would help local prosecutors and law enforcement agencies prepare child abuse cases. Besides the attorney, the team would include an investigator and a "protocol coordinator" to work with all levels.

Both those positions would be financed by grant money under EchoHawk's plan, funding for the attorney was included in the Gov. Andrus' executive budget recommendation to lawmakers for the spending year that begins July 1.

On Wednesday, EchoHawk met with members of the Sexual Abuse Now Enlist, or SANE, in treatment program for child sexual abuse victims based in Ada and Canyon counties.

Committee votes to end requirement

BOISE (AP) — The House Education Committee voted to abolish a requirement that school districts must decide if home schools are providing an education comparable to public private or parochial schools.

There was only one dissenting vote Wednesday, from Rep. Molly Lizechko, D-Boise, as the committee approved the legislation sponsored by Rep. Fred Timman, R-Boise.

State laws require children between the ages of 7 and 15 to attend a public, private or parochial school unless they are being comparably instructed at home. What represents "comparable" education has been widely debated.

Timman said the requirement does nothing but cause controversy.

"We'd love to remove a redundancy in the legal process," said Timman. "We need to create an atmosphere where we have a spirit of cooperation and create a win-win situation. There is a definite frustration on both sides."

Department of Education official Bob Dutton said there is no state definition of "comparable" education, only that the determination must be made by the districts.

Rep. Frances Field, R-Grand View, said she was concerned about removing all review of home education. And Lizechko said she thought accountability should be left in the law.

1st-degree murder charges dropped

MOSCOW (AP) — Kaitly Spencer walked away from her first-degree murder trial a free woman Wednesday after the charge against her was dropped by 2nd District Judge John Bongertson.

Blaine County Prosecutor Craig Mosman wrapped up the case against Spencer, 28, on Tuesday for the March 9, 1991, shooting death of Potlatch-area farmer Ronald Boone, 45.

Mosman called 37 witnesses over six days of testimony in an attempt to prove that Spencer helped her boyfriend, Roger Dale Bates, kill Boone at his farm near Potlatch.

Bates was called for the first time as a witness on Wednesday, public defender Michael Henegen asked Bongertson to acquit Spencer. The judge agreed with Henegen's argument that Mosman had failed to present enough evidence that Spencer helped in Boone's slaying.

Nissan to buy parts from U.S. suppliers

TOKYO — Nissan Motor Co. said Wednesday it will buy auto parts from about 320 American suppliers this year, or twice as many as 1991.

The aim is to raise the U.S. content of Nissan models assembled in the United States, said Masamichi Mogi, spokesman of the Tokyo-based Nissan, Japan's second largest automaker.

Mogi also said Nissan will buy parts from about 140 new U.S. suppliers for a minivan being jointly developed by Nissan and Ford Motor Co., the second largest U.S. auto maker. A Ford plant is to produce 130,000 of the minivans annually.

U.N. might find role in Korean dispute

SEOUL, South Korea — A top U.S. official said Wednesday that the United Nations may have to become involved in the intractable controversy on the Korean peninsula if North Korea doesn't allow inspections by June.

The Communist North has agreed in principle to allow inspections of its secret nuclear facilities, but says time is needed to work out the details. South Korea and the West are concerned that the North is nearly able to produce nuclear warheads and is stalling to pursue this aim.

Experts dig to find newsmen's remains

PHUM-KANDAOL, Cambodia — Sifting through tons of earth, U.S. military experts are hoping to find the remains of five newsmen believed executed 22 years ago during the Indochina war.

The excavation is one of five MIA searches approved by the Phnom Penh government this year. Eight U.S. civilians, 82 U.S. servicemen and 28 people from other countries are listed as missing in Cambodia.

The Americans, aided by local workers and soldiers, hope to determine the fates of newsmen for the NBC and CBS television networks who were captured by the Khmer Rouge and Vietnamese Communists May 31, 1970 and reportedly killed a day later.

Explosion traps 300 miners, kills 87

ZONGULDAK, Turkey — Heavy smoke and pockets of methane gas blocked rescue workers Wednesday from reaching about 300 workers trapped by a coal mine explosion.

Officials said 87 miners were known dead and hopes were dwindling for the stranded men.

Court bans Islamic Salvation Front

ALGIERS, Algeria — A court Wednesday banned the Islamic Salvation Front, the fundamentalist party that was poised to win control of Parliament before an army-led crackdown began in January.

The Front, legalized in 1989 when Algeria scrapped a one-party system, said through a lawyer that it would appeal the administrative court ruling to Algeria's Supreme Court.

"This is a serious mistake," said the lawyer Ali-Yahia Abdoune. "A large party like the Front, with its big base of popular support, can't be stopped by legal measures."

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — In an effort to prevent more ethnic violence, police teamed up with the Serb-led army Wednesday to patrol streets that separate Serb and Muslim neighborhoods in Sarajevo.

U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance, arriving in the Serbian and federal capital, Belgrade, said the scattered violence in Bosnia-Herzegovina would not affect the scheduled deployment of thousands of U.N. peacekeepers this month.

Fire shuts down Russian nuclear plant; past problems disclosed

MOSCOW (AP) — A Russian nuclear power plant was shut down Wednesday following a fire caused by a short circuit, and officials disclosed that two Chernobyl-type plants were ordered to reduce energy output last year because they didn't meet safety standards.

The incidents underscored a growing concern over the safety of nuclear power stations in Russia and elsewhere across the former Soviet Union.

No radiation was released in the fire at the Balakovskaya power plant in southern Russia, near the Kazakhstan border, officials said.

An Energy-Ministry spokesman, Sergei Yermakov, said the safety of the plant was not endangered and radiation levels inside and outside it were normal, ITAR-Tass said.

The plant's safety system shut the reactor down automatically at 1:08 a.m., ITAR-Tass said. Firefighters and plant employees extinguished the blaze in 40 minutes, the news agency reported.

Other ministry officials said the fire was caused by a short circuit outside the reactor, which is a so-called VVER or "pressurized" water type, considered safer than the RBMK, or graphite-moderated reactor involved in the world's worst nuclear accident at Chernobyl, Ukraine, in 1986.

According to official data, there were 50 unplanned shutdowns linked to minor problems at the Balakovskaya plant in 1991.

The cutbacks in output at two other plants took place last year at two stations using RBMK reactors — Leningradskaya, near Russia's second largest city, St. Petersburg; and Kurskaya, near the city of Kursk in western Russia.

The cutbacks were disclosed for the first time Wednesday by Sergei Adamehik, head of power plant safety for the new Presidential Committee on Nuclear Safety.

"These blocks were built when our country had its own standards that did not correspond with the international approach. We can say one thing about these blocks, they are unprepared to localize and prevent an accident," he told a news conference.

Officials ordered two generating units at each plant to reduce output to 70 percent of capacity in 1991, Adamehik said. These units are equipped with the oldest type of RBMK reactors.

The restrictions will continue to apply in 1992, apart from one unit at the Leningradskaya plant. The committee has decided its output might be increased, if safety measures are taken.

It added, however, that the newer RBMKs at Kurskaya "correspond more with international safety standards."

Europe races to stop ozone hole expansion

BERLIN (AP) — With a sky-is-falling urgency, European nations are rushing to ban ozone-eating chemicals after a study said a vast hole may open over their continent this winter.

In recent weeks, startling new data have prompted governments to shave years off their timetables for banning chemicals that weaken the earth's natural sunscreen.

"It's time to understand that sensible people don't utter dire warnings unless they are really very scared," said British scientist Joe Farman, who in 1985 discovered the only known ozone hole, over the Antarctic.

On March 23, the 12-member European Community is expected to ban production and consumption of ozone-eating chemicals by 1995 and reduce their use by 85 percent by the end of the next year.

The EC's environment ministers endorsed the proposals during a meeting in Portugal on Feb. 22. The community said it will seek to get the rest of the world to follow suit.

The action followed President Bush's Feb. 11 order for a U.S. ban on chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, by 1995.

Azerbaijanis mourn amid gunfire

AGDAM, Azerbaijan (AP) — Walls of mourning mixed with gunfire Wednesday as Azerbaijanis buried their dead and fighting ebbed closer to this city bordering the disputed region of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Azerbaijan's government condemned last week's Armenian assault on the town of Khodzhalyn as "deliberate genocide" and accused Commonwealth troops of complicity. The Commonwealth armed forces denied involvement.

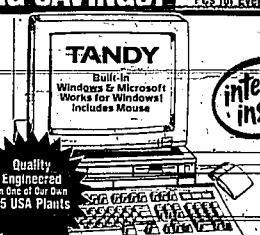

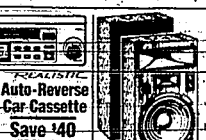

Presidents Boris Yeltsin of Russia and Nursultan Nazarbayev of Kazakhstan made urgent appeals for a cease-fire in the bloodiest ethnic conflict in the former Soviet Union, Nazarbayev said he was "especially stunned" by the attack on Khodzhalyn.

Magic Valley

Senate backs minimum stream flows

The Associated Press

BOISE — The state Senate has endorsed Water Resources Board directives setting minimum flows on Magic Valley and northern Idaho streams.

The bill covering on the six stream flow appropriations goes to the House next. The minimum flow appropriations are intended to assure that other claims on the streams do not reduce their viability as fisheries and recreational waters.

Wednesday's Senate action came over the objections of conservative Republican Stan Hawkins of Ucon and others. The lawmakers contended the process of reviewing the board actions was so flawed as to make legislative review useless.

But Senate Resources and Environment

Which streams will be affected

The Senate endorsed minimum flows on these streams Wednesday:

- The Big Wood River from Warm Springs Creek to the Bellvue diversion
- The Big Wood River from the Sawtooth National Recreational Area boundary to Warm Springs Creek
- The South Thousand Springs

channel from the Idaho Power Thousand Springs Plant to the Snake River.

- Springs and Sand Springs creeks in the Snake River Canyon.
- Sculpin Springs Creek in the Snake River Canyon.
- The North Fork East River in Bonner County.

Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, and others maintained it was important for the Legislature to review and validate or reject actions involving one of the state's most critical resources.

Hawkins also contended the original stream flow legislation was intended to stop water transfers out of state and restrict use of flowing water throughout Idaho.

Noh argued that the legislative review was imposed to assure those concerned that state agencies such as the Water Resources Board of the Fish and Game Commission would not abuse the authority to obtain minimum flows. And he emphasized that if any group believes that ability is being abused, it can press for rejection of the flows in the Legislature.

Idaho Legislature

The full Senate delayed action on legislation declaring reaches of the Selway and Middle Fork of the Salmon rivers within wilderness boundaries as outstanding resource waters. As such they would be subject to protection against deteriorating water quality.

Bungee-jumpers take a leap this weekend

TWIN FALLS — Downtown shoppers can experience first-hand the newest thrill sport this weekend.

As part of a downtown Twin Falls promotion, Cowabungee Bros. Inc. of Sun Valley will be set up for bungee-jumping cranes. Cowabungee ties huge elastic bungee cord to waist or ankle harnesses and hauls its customers 125 to 150 feet in the air.

"Then you jump out and go yahoo," says Jan Crawford of Cowabungee Bros. The elastic cord catches jumpers before they hit the ground and springs them back up into the air.

The company will be on hand from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday in the parking lot behind Obenchain Insurance, 264 Main Ave. S.

Jumps cost $35 for a body harness, and $50 for an ankle harness. Discounts are available at downtown merchants.

The company limits jumps to those without heart, back or neck problems, and weigh between 100 and 250 pounds. Pregnant women can't jump, and kids under 18 years of age have to have their parents' permission.

Gooding County deputy arrests 4 wanted in Colorado

BLISS — A Gooding County deputy sheriff Tuesday night arrested two boys and two adults wanted by Colorado authorities.

Deputy Shaun Gough arrested Ethan K. Rinke, 14, of Windsor, Colo., and Donna Heiser, 23, of Canon City, Colo., along with two 17-year-old boys on felony burglary warrants from Colorado, Gooding County dispatcher Rita Matthews said Wednesday.

After seeing a car bearing Colorado license plates parked outside a gasoline station near Bliss, Gough approached the vehicle and checked the driver's licenses of the occupants, Matthews said.

A computer check showed the occupants of the car were wanted by Colorado authorities, Matthews said.

Officers found knives in the car, Matthews said.

40 Jerome students walk out to protest note for tourney

JEROME — Jerome High School students staged a walkout Wednesday to protest having to bring a note from parents before being allowed to attend the state Class A-2 boys' basketball tournament in Meridian today.

About 40 students gathered on the football field at the beginning of the school day. Principal Carrol Matthews confronted the students, telling them to go back to class if anybody wanted to go to the game, Nancy Churchman, chairman of the school board, said.

Matthews could not be reached for comment.

"I strongly support the school policy that we need a note from parents approving a student to go to the game. We need a record of where the kids are, and where the parents want them to be," Churchman said. "If there was even an accident, we could end in a lawsuit," she said.

The students were out of class less than five minutes and many of them didn't even know why they were all out on the football field, Churchman said.

In past years, high school students were dismissed to attend the state tournament without a note. School officials elected this year to enforce the school policy requiring a note from parents, Churchman said.

Future Farmers chapter plans 'slave auction' to raise funds

RUPERT — If you want to buy a slave, Minico High School is the place to find one today.

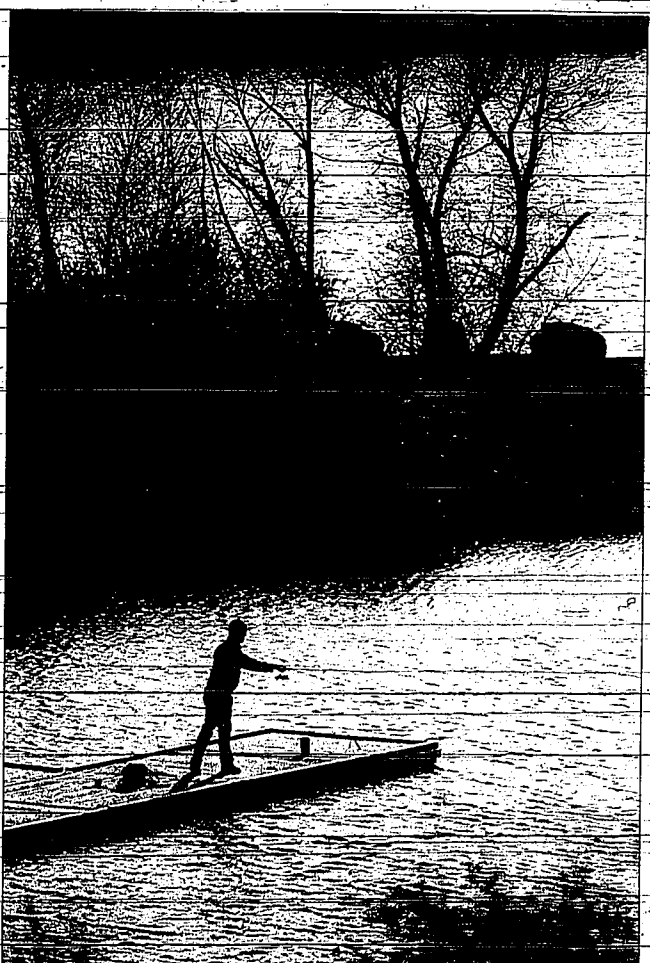

A slave auction will be held at the school tonight, part of a fund-raising event from the Minico chapter of Future Farmers of America.

"They (the FFA students) will do things such as pick rocks, move main lines, clean sheds or rake leaves, just to name a few," FFA adviser Steve Bott said.

Between 50 and 60 FFA members will be sold. Each slave sold will provide eight hours of work for the buyer, Bott said.

The auction will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at the high school.

Niagara Springs State Park raises rates to battle vandalism

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Last year, 81,000 visitors in 32,400 vehicles visited Niagara Springs State Park for free. This year that number...

Beginning April 1, visitors will pay $2 per vehicle to drive into the 92-acre area.

Mainly, park officials are hoping by raising the rates...

they can get a handle on an ever-increasing problem with vandalism.

"Things have gotten out of hand in the last couple of years, and so we're kind of clamping down on it this year," said park manager Kevin Lynott. "We're hoping that the people who have been vandalizing will stay away."

The area has been losing facilities because of public...

Centennial Park construction bids exceed expectations

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Bids to build a boat ramp, docks and parking lot for Centennial Waterfront Park came in higher than the county commissioners had hoped Wednesday.

But with a little more money from a state grant, the county might just be able to build the park.

The commissioners opened bids Wednesday and the low bid of $71,351 came from PMF Inc. of Twin Falls. The bid included building a parking lot, boat dock and concrete boat ramp, Commissioner Jim Fraley said.

The boat ramp likely will be 14 feet wide instead of the 28 feet originally planned, Fraley said. Building a 28-foot wide ramp would cost almost $16,000 more and the county does not have that much money, he said.

Actually, the county has about $50,000 left from a state Waterways Improvement Fund grant. But the state might give an extra $7,500 and combined with $15,000 budgeted for the project in the county Parks and Recreation fund, the project can barely be done, Fraley said.

County officials must write the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation and ask for a 15 percent override, or $7,500, on the remaining $50,000. State officials said Wednesday that they think the money might be available, Fraley said.

The county likely will learn next week and award the contract to PMF then, he said. The county has until the end of May to spend the grant money.

Two other companies, Summit Construction and Gordon Paving, both of Twin Falls, also bid on the project, Fraley said.

Sun Valley man escapes burning van unscathed

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A Sun Valley man was rescued early Wednesday morning when the van he was sleeping in caught fire.

Joe Simonds, 32, was sleeping in his friend's van parked near the Creekside Bar and Grill when the vehicle burst into flames at about midnight. Ketchum Fire Chief Tom Johnson reported.

"He had lit the propane burner inside and his jacket was draped above it," Johnson explained. "After he went to sleep the jacket caught fire. He was lucky somebody came along and found him."

Bill Nagle, manager of Creekside, noticed smoke coming out of the van and used a fire extinguisher from the restaurant to fight the blaze.

When the hood caught inside the van, he opened it up and pulled Simonds from the vehicle, Johnson said.

"He obviously saved his life," the fire chief added.

A Ketchum Area Rapid Transit bus driver, Mike Shipp, radioed a report of the fire to the Ketchum Fire Department, which responded with a fire truck and ambulance at 12:02 a.m.

Simonds was transported to Moritz Community Hospital, where he was treated for smoke inhalation and released.

House panel rejects 'resort cities' property tax relief bill

By Drew DeSivler
Times-News writer

BOISE — The state House Revenue and Taxation Committee Wednesday turned back an attempt by Sen. John Peavey to give Blaine County residents some additional property-tax relief.

Peavey, a Democrat from Carey, came to the committee with a bill that would have allowed counties containing resort cities the option of raising the maximum benefit under the 50/50 homeowners' exemption from $50,000 to $100,000.

Blaine County contains two resort cities as defined in existing state law, Ketchum and Sun Valley. Although two other counties, Valley and Bannock, also contain resort cities, property values there have not skyrocketed in recent years (the way they have in Blaine). "It's a really unique situation over there," Peavey said. "People bought houses for $60,000 or $70,000 ten years ago that are now worth $200,000 or $250,000. The values are just crazy."

Raising the maximum homeowners' exemption, he said, would aid moderate-income people while placing more of the BOISE — A few hours before Tuesday's Democratic county caucuses began, most of the Statehouse press corps took part in a pool on who the top three finishers would be.

Nearly everyone picked Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey first, with a heavy margin. The conventional wisdom was that Kerrey's active state organization, combined with the support he received from many state legislators and his visit to Boise on Monday, would see him

In a survey on popular endearments, "precious" tied with "beautiful." But not way up on the list. "Honey" remains No. 1.

Q. Both my wife and I come from broken homes. What are the odds we'll stay together?
A. Statistically, 60 percent. It'd be 75 percent, if only one set of parents had split up. And 85 percent, if neither set had done so. Our Love and War man heavily discounts such data, might mention. Statistics record life what but rarely the why.

Q. Who's that said, "Two heads are better than one"?
A. Check out the fourth chapter of Ecclesiastes. That's pretty close.

Chiropractor frees boys from bed-wetting misery

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from "Desperate Mom," whose 20-year-old son still wets the bed, I was compelled to write. Since her son has seen doctors and tried medications, and they have had no positive results, maybe she should do what I did. I took my 15-year-old twin sons (both daily bed-wetters) to a chiropractor, and within a month, both boys were completely cured of their bed-wetting.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

I don't want to embarrass my boys or the medical doctors in my community, so if you use this letter in your column, just sign me a TRUE BELIEVER in SOUTH CAROLINA.

DEAR TRUE BELIEVER: I believe you. I have several hundred letters bearing the same message concerning chiropractors.

I am well aware that some in the medical profession will criticize me for giving what sounds like a "commercial" for chiropractors — the "stepchildren" of the medical profession — but I would be less than honest if I did not publish your letter. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My son was still wetting the bed at 16. I took him to urologists, psychologists, nephrologists, and even to a hypnotist. Guess what cured him? A pediatric nephrologist who prescribed a nasal spray called DDAVP and ordered no liquids after 5 p.m. I am enclosing a piece from North Shore magazine, which explains the nasal spray better than I can.

"BETTER NEWS FOR BED-

"Bed-wetting is a simple fact of childhood; at age 3, 40 percent of all children cannot control their bladders consistently while they sleep.

"By age 5 or 6, bed-wetting is less frequent. Fortunately, chronic bed-wetting at this age may be treatable, suggests a Danish study, recently published by the American Urological Association in Dallas. "The ability to hold urine through the night appears to be regulated by an antidiuretic hormone that is insufficient in some children."

"A new, prescription medication — DDAVP Nasal Spray (desmopressin acetate) — stimulates this hormone, keeping children dry at night."

"Dr. Kenneth Miller, a pediatric nephrologist in Des Plaines, Ill., has studied the effects of DDAVP on his patients, and has found that the majority of children taking this medication continue to be dry even after medication is terminated."

Abby, I am not getting anything. I just want to share an idea that worked for us.

— MRS. D.S.B., ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA.

DEAR MRS. D.S.B.: Many others wrote to praise the DDAVP nasal spray.

"Most teen-agers do not know the facts about drugs, AIDS, and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy. It's all in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, 'What Every Teen Should Know.' To order send a business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 112, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)"

College basketball roundup — B3

Nevada visits Montana on Thursday night for a game to determine which team will host the Big Sky Conference basketball tournament March 12-14.

But Montana State (13-3 overall, 5-9 Big Sky), still trying to scratch its way into the six-team Big Sky tournament field, sees in the Wolf Pack-Grizzlies game some opportunities of its own.

The Bobcats need to win both their weekend home games against Northern Arizona (7-18, 3-11) and Nevada (17-8, 10-9) to qualify for the final available berth in the postseason playoffs.

Coach Mick Durham said he hopes the focus on tonight's battle to host the tournament will be enough to make Nevada overlook what by Saturday night will be a meaningless game for the Wolf Pack.

"I don't expect that we're Nevada's big concern entering the weekend," Durham said. "They have a chance to win the league at Montana."

That, to say the least, is the big concern on Wolf Pack head coach Len Stevens' mind: Nevada beat the Grizzlies 89-67 in Reno on

Feb. 1 in what Stevens called "a spectacular team effort."

"Everyone did the little things we needed to win," he said.

(Junior center) Ric Herrin was flying all over the place. We ran down every loose ball to create extra possessions. That was the difference."

But Montana (23-3, 12-2) will be playing Thursday night before perhaps the Big Sky's loudest and rowdiest fans at Missouri's Dahlberg Arena, Nevada's 12-1 at home but only 4-7 on the road, and Montana coach Blaine Taylor said the Grizzlies will be better prepared this time around.

"I thought when we played in Reno we were a step slow," Taylor said. "I would like to think that we will be a lot better physically ready to go Thursday night."

The matchups for what amounts to the Big Sky regular season title game are tough to beat.

Montana has the league's top shot blocker and No. 3 rebounder in Daren Engellant, its fourth and fifth best assist men in Roger Fasting and Keith Crawford and the most accurate 3-point shooter and No. 4 man-in-steals in Delvon Anderson.

Nevada's Herrin is fifth in rebounding and third in field goal percentage.

Senior guard Kevin Soares, the all-time Big Sky career assist-record holder, leads in both assists and steals, while junior backcourt mate Bryan Thomasson has made more 3-point field goals than anyone in the conference.

As a team, the Grizzlies lead the Big Sky in scoring defense, scoring margin, offensive and defensive field goal percentage, defensive rebounding and rebound margin.

The Wolf Pack is atop league statistics in scoring offense.

Moller hoop tourney to be held in Rupert

RUPERT — A basketball tournament, slated for next weekend, will be dedicated to Mini-Cassia's fallen soldier.

The first annual Andrew Moller invitational basketball tournament will be held in Rupert on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 13, 14 and 15.

"Andrew was always looking out for the little guy," said Doris Mani, who is one of the four organizers of the three days of events. The other three organizers include Mani's husband Steve and Mike and Laura Twiss. They have also received help from area merchants and individual area residents.

"We wanted to do something in memory of Andrew, and we wanted to do something for other kids too," Mani said. "Steve is a reserve police officer. He sees kids without anything to do and he wanted to see something for these kids to do, to get them off the streets."

The tournament, which is dedicated to Moller will be hosted by the St. Nicholas Catholic Church in Rupert. The money raised from the tournament will go into the St. Nicholas Andrew Moller Scholarship fund. Mani said the scholarship fund will be for the average student. "There doesn't seem to be a scholarship to help the average student," Mani said. "Most of the scholarships go to students who excel. We wanted this one to be different."

Catholic high school students from Blackfoot, Chubbuck, Wendell, Hagerman, Boise, Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Aberdeen, Mountain Home, Jerome and American Falls will make up the 20 teams that will participate in the invitational games. The dedication ceremony will be held in the Minico High School gymnasium at 6 p.m. on Friday. Games will begin on Friday afternoon and will be played at East and West Minico Junior Highs and The Civic Center.

Hey Bo! It's no laughing matter

Injury puts Jackson's career in doubt

The Associated Press

Say it ain't so, Bo.

Tell us your baseball career may not be over.

That was the speculation Wednesday after the Chicago White Sox slugger hobbled on the basepaths in an intrasquad game at Sarasota, Fla. Despite months of rehabilitation, Jackson apparently has not recovered from a hip injury that sidelined him almost all of last season.

While Jackson dismissed his running problems, team trainer Herm Schneider admitted he was disappointed.

"To be truthful, I think I may've been expecting a hair more," Schneider said. "I know he can hit; I don't know if he can run. Sometimes, I see enough that I think he can get by. Other times, I don't know."

After striking out twice, Jackson singled up the middle in his third plate appearance. But he hobbled all the way to first base, and barely got off the bag when Warren Newson followed with a grounder back to pitcher Wayne Edwards.

Jackson said he didn't go all out because it was only an intrasquad game. He said the real test begins Thursday when the White Sox open their exhibition season against Pittsburgh.

"When I got the hit and saw it was through, I really didn't run. I just coasted to first base," Jackson said. "I didn't go flat out. I really didn't think about it."

"It's no big deal. Tomorrow, it gets serious. If I get a hit tomorrow, I think I'll be running a little harder."

The White Sox only have to evaluate Jackson and decide whether to keep him or cut him. If they release him before March 15, they owe him nothing. If they keep him, Jackson gets a guaranteed salary of $910,000, plus $10,000 extra for every game he's available, up to 150 games.

At Plant City, Fla., the Cincinnati Reds signed first baseman Hal Morris to a one-year deal and renewed the contract of catcher Joe Oliver.

Morris batted .318 last season, losing the National League batting title to Atlanta's Terry Pendleton by less than .001. He had 14 home runs and 59 runs.

Owners delay decision on sale of Mariners to Japanese group

The Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Baseball owners delayed a decision on a Japanese-led offer to buy the Seattle Mariners and decided Wednesday to formulate a counterproposal.

The ownership committee, a group made up of officials from eight teams and the two league presidents, spent two hours discussing the offer for the Mariners from a group 60 percent financed by Hiroshi Yamauchi, president of Nintendo Co. Ltd. of Kyoto, Japan.

"Issues were considered which called for further conversation with the Seattle group," said committee chairman Fred Kuhlman of the St. Louis Cardinals.

A participant in the meeting, speaking on the condition he not be identified, said the committee would give the Seattle group a counteroffer when they meet. The person

U. of Nevada regents schedule Maxson questioning

The Associated Press

CARSON CITY, Nev. — University of Nevada regents have scheduled a closed-door session March 12 in Reno to question UNLV president Robert Maxson about coach Jerry Tarkanian's resignation.

Regents' Chairwoman Carolyn Sparks issued a one-page news release stating the personnel session is to "allow Dr. Maxson to answer any questions or concerns the Board of Regents may have concerning UNLV."

University spokeswoman Pam Galloway said the meeting would be held in compliance with Nevada's open meeting law. The law limits closed sessions to discussions of personnel, any alleged misconduct or the mental and physical health of a person under review.

While Maxson and Tarkanian are obvious subjects of discussion, Galloway said "I don't know if they are going to discuss one person or 10."

Some regents have called for an official inquiry into the UNLV athletics program. But regent June Whitley says Maxson has said privately he'd quit if they ordered an independent probe into Tarkanian's resignation.

Tarkanian wants an investigation into reports the UNLV administration leaked information damaging to the basketball program in an effort to get rid of him.

Maxson says he has no problem with a personnel session. He also denies threatening to quit, adding he will cooperate if regents decided on an outside investigation.

"No one will question the collective wisdom of the board," he said.

Maxson also said Monday that the university had spent $600,000 in legal fees in the current probe into allegations of NCAA infractions at UNLV and he felt that was enough.

Whitley declined to name the regent who told her of Maxson's alleged threat, saying only that she learned of it during the board's regular meeting last week in Las Vegas.

During last Friday's session, regent Lonnie Hammargren of Las Vegas called for an independent investigation, but failed to win support from the board.

Regent Jill Derby of Gardnerville asked board chairwoman Sparks to call a closed-personnel session between the board and Maxson. Derby said the public perception is that the regents don't care about the public good.

Derby said she didn't view the session as a critique of Maxson, but rather as a chance for Maxson to brief the board on the situation.

Majerus: Man of many words ... eats them

The Associated Press

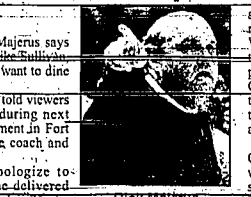

CHEYENNE, Wyo. — Utah coach Rick Majerus says he got a dinner date with Wyoming Gov. Mike Sullivan but the governor can't imagine why he would want to dine with the coach.

During his weekly television show Majerus told viewers that Sullivan was inviting him to dinner during next week's Western Athletic Conference tournament in Fort Collins, Colo., to ease tensions between the coach and Wyoming athletic director Paul Roach.

Roach has demanded that Majerus apologize to Wyoming fans and officials for a tirade he delivered during the Utah-Wyoming game in Laramie on Jan. 25.

During the game Majerus pointed the official scorers' table and unleashed a stream of profanity after scorers mistakenly awarded Utah just two points for a three-point shot.

On Sunday the coach told those watching his television show that "I have a letter en route from the governor of Wyoming inviting me to go to dinner with him when we play up in Fort Collins, Colo., and kinda saying that to some extent, that is a heckin' big (event) is a temple in a capot."

But the governor told the Casper Star-Tribune that while a member of his staff said somebody had called suggesting the dinner, he has no plans to dine with Majerus.

"I said, 'Why would I be interested in having dinner with Rick Majerus?' The last time I saw Rick Majerus was his shouting obscenities at him," Sullivan said. "And it's the last two or three days of the Legislature and I can think of no good reason why I would have dinner with Rick Majerus."

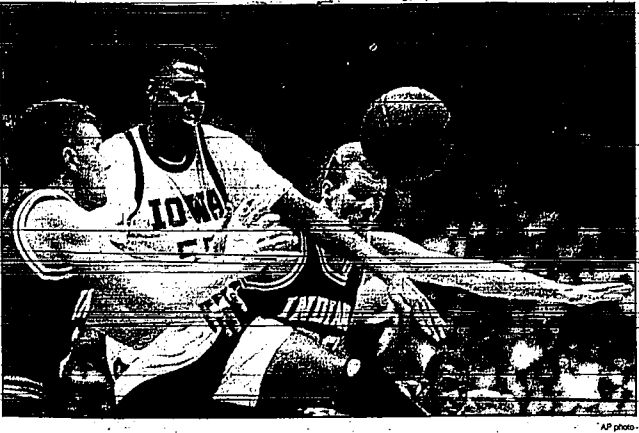

Sullivan, who was in the stands at the Utah-Wyoming game at which Majerus exploded, said "it wasn't a pretty sight."

During his television show the Utah coach also said he planned to have his lawyers write Roach.

"I'm not going to look for any kind of legal action, but I want to cause him some misery and pain so the next poor guy down the line doesn't have someone go off and release something like this," Majerus said.

The Utah coach also took a shot at Wyomingites during his show.

"I like Wyoming; I like the people. I like going to Wyoming," he said. "I mean, you can't like them if they're giving around drinking beer and they got shotguns in their car and they're really nice people."

Activists pledge to continue protests

The Associated Press

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Four animal-rights activists, arrested while protesting bison research at West Yellowstone last week, pleaded innocent Tuesday and said they would do the same again if necessary.

"If they attempt to reinstate the research, we will be out there again," said D.J. Schubert, a Fund for Animals investigator from Silver Spring, Md., after appearing in Gallatin County Justice Court. However, state officials last week said the research project was concluded shortly after the activists were arrested.

Missoula residents Allison Slater, 22; Bill Haskins, 34; and Vincent Collins, 24, along with Schubert, were arrested Friday morning on misdemeanor charges of obstructing a peace officer and possessing a game animal.

"We're confident we're not guilty. We were simply protesting," Schubert, 29, said.

The four allegedly prevented researchers from taking tissue samples from six dead bison by sitting on top of the animals. The group also allegedly interfered with a helicopter that transported the bison from the South Fork of the Madison River to the town dump. The bison were among 22 killed by game wardens near Yellowstone. Veterinary researchers from Texas A&M University were examining the carcasses to determine what diseases infect the animals.

But Schubert said that reasoning doesn't warrant the slaughter of bison. "A lack of scientific proof that bison spread disease to cattle and other animals seems to have been overlooked, he said.

"The slaughter was completely unjustified," Schubert said. Haskins said he decided to join the protesters after years of working through the animal rights system.

"It's time to turn the volume up on the issue," Haskins said.

Slater, an Earth First! member, told Judge Scott Wyckman know she may be in his court again before her June 14 trial.

"What happens if I'm arrested again before I go to trial on this charge?" asked Slater.

After a short pause, Wyckman said it would "obviously affect bond conditions."

Summer trial dates were set for all four protesters, but attorneys said they will likely be consolidated into one trial.

Goat hunting 'a ways off'

Harvest not feasible until numbers go up

By Larry Hovey Times-News writer

JEROME — Mountain goat hunting definitely remains a ways off in Region 4 according to an aerial survey taken by the Fish and Game Department last week.

Biologist Bruce Palmer spent two days trying to find goats in Unit 49 from a helicopter. The goat habitat in the Pioneer range is considered largely to be from Trail Creek summit to Little Argosy Creek.

In the two days, Palmer counted 10 goats, two being last spring's offspring. From the count and going by some tracks seen, Palmer said he estimates that the area contains a maximum of 20 goats, too few to absorb any harvest.

Mountain goat hunting isn't in the near future in Region 4. A recent survey found just 10 goats in that area.

Palmer said wind velocities up to 40 knots prevented the survey from reaching all the nooks and crannies of the rocky terrain.

The survey indicated a slight increase from statistics compiled in 1983 but leaves the question of why populations aren't rebounding.

"We are working with the Forest Service to try to determine what is holding the population down," Palmer said. "We believe that the unit contains more than adequate habitat to maintain a larger population but something seems to be keeping numbers low."

"We do have some concerns of overgrazing by sheep and cattle in some areas of certain fragile basins," he said. "We believe there is some impacting of the fall forage for goats."

"Last year we found one goat that appeared to have been poached in upper Box Canyon Lake but the animal had decomposed considerable and we could never determine positively if it was the result of poaching. The carcass was out in the middle of a meadow, which is unusual and gave us the impression of an illegal kill."

Palmer said Region 6 conducted a survey in unit 50, which is the other side of the unit 49 range. That survey found goat numbers still low and very similar to those of 10 years ago.

Hunter education is for everyone

With the arrival of the spring weather comes the now expected inquiries from the 10- and 11-year-olds as to the date of the next Hunter Education class.

Most of these young people have grown up in homes where hunting is a family tradition. They are anxious to become an active part of all that hunting entails. For these young people, completion of the Hunter Education class is the only way to legally obtain that first hunting license.

David Hocklander Hunting

But is Hunter Education only for these prospective hunters? At one time that may have been true but not any more.

The current Hunter Education program is a valuable educational experience for any young person growing up in Idaho.

The program curriculum not only includes training in responsible and safe hunting, but it also includes a variety of topics critical to anyone who plans to enjoy the outdoors.

The most valuable of all the lessons taught in the Hunter Education program are those dealing with safety. These safety lessons are applicable to many outdoor activities besides hunting.

Students are taught boating and water safety. They are introduced to the silent killer "hypothermia" and taught how to avoid its attack and how to help another who may have ignored its threat. This is to a hunter.

Students are taught to deal with being lost and how to survive until help arrives. They are encouraged to assemble a survival kit to take with them whenever they venture into the field.

Often these young people are also taught basic first aid skills such as CPR.

Last but not least, they are taught respect for firearms and how to handle and use them safely. One of the realities of living in Idaho is that our children will at some time or another come in contact with a firearm. It is important that they know how to handle that encounter safely, even if it involves nothing more than knowing how to check to see if the firearm is loaded.

Just as important is the situation in which the youngster does wish to learn to shoot a firearm. Current state law does not require that such a youngster complete the Hunter Education program before they can participate in a shooting activity. But for a parent to allow a youngster to do so with such safety training can only be deemed irresponsible.

Some my children may never choose to hunt, but I am very glad that they have all completed the Hunter Education program. Each of them can now safely handle a firearm. They have some insight into the meaning of "conservation" and the responsibility we all have in wisely using our natural resources.

No change in bear baiting fees

TWIN FALLS — A new fee for bear baiting permits on the Sawtooth National Forest will not be charged this year pending a final recommendation by the Idaho black bear management task force.

The task force currently is developing all-encompassing fees and regulations for bear hunting throughout the state.

The $45 special use fee was scheduled to go into effect March 1.

"The forest will use the free permit used in previous years," said Howard Hudak, acting range and wildlife staff officer for the Sawtooth.

Authorization permits will be available during the early part of March at the Sawtooth offices in Twin Falls, Fairfield, Ketchum and the Sawtooth National recreation area headquarters visitor center. Permits are issued on a first-come, first-served basis.

Bear baiting permits may be issued to more than one applicant for a certain area and do not provide exclusive use of an area for hunting.

The permits require that bear bait be biodegradable and/or removed at the end of the season.

The permit will help the Forest Service identify which are bait stations and what is litter.

One permit will be issued allowing the permittee to have up to a maximum of three bait stations. Tags will be issued with each permit. It is required the tags identify the permit holder near the bait location. Tags must be posted within 50 feet of each bait station in easy view.

The permit is not required for hunting, said Hudak. "Currently the Idaho Department of Fish and Game allows bear baiting anytime during the hunting season. Bear baiters must receive the landowners permission prior to baiting."

Company plans Grizzly Park near Yellowstone

The Associated Press

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. — Visitors to Yellowstone National Park may have a better chance to see bears in the future, although not in the wild.

Firchold Land Corp. plans to break ground this spring on a $27.2 million theme park in West Yellowstone. Depending on your viewpoint, the Grizzly Park project will either protect or exploit the black bear and the threatened grizzly bear.

Grizzly Park, scheduled to open in the summer of 1993, initially will have a visitor's center, a 300-seat theater that shows films about Yellowstone's grizzlies, and at least two indoor exhibits on captive bears. A new post office, hotel, shops and restaurants also are planned.

"I don't see Yellowstone visitation changing dramatically. What I do see is a change in the number of people who stop in West Yellowstone."

— Lewis Robinson, developer

Robinson said the park will stabilize West Yellowstone's economy, create up to 375 jobs and generate revenue for a town dependent on tourism.

Feelings about Grizzly Park are mixed. While community leaders know they can't stop growth, some worry that it's happening too fast.

"Just don't think people want to see a big, grandiose, hoopla development," said Clyde Seely, owner of Three Bear Lodge. "A lot of people talk about that over the counter. They like West Yellowstone the way it is."

West Yellowstone annexed the 87-acre park site in December. It's just south of the west entrance to Yellowstone National Park.

Grizzly Park is expected to draw 800,000 of the 2 million people who visit Yellowstone each year.

"I don't see Yellowstone visitation changing dramatically," Robinson said. "What I do see is a change in the number of people who stop in West Yellowstone."

West Yellowstone's economy will benefit from the park, Seely said, but it also could ruin the area's pristine nature.

"The most common comment we hear is we don't want to become another Jackson Hole (Wyoming)," he said. "When franchises come, that is a sign you aren't isolated anymore, and people like to come to isolated places."

Grizzly Park also will help wild bears because a portion of its profits — from 1 percent to 5 percent — will be given to grizzly bear research, Robinson said.

Confused cougar finds way into hotel garage

The Associated Press

VICTORIA, British Columbia — A lost and confused cougar was nabbed Tuesday in the underground parking garage of the Staty Empress Hotel.

"It must have heard about our safari package," joked hotel spokeswoman Debra Cappbell. "Other than the Queen, that was our most unusual sighting."

The cougar was scotched and removed.

Conservation officer Bob Smirl said authorities had been pursuing the cougar after several reported sightings in recent days but hadn't been able to find it.

neighborhood south of downtown had been told to watch for the cougar after it was spotted early Monday morning near Beacon Hill Park.

It started prowling again (Monday night), Smirl said, and was seen by a cab driver and an Empress parking lot attendant as it walked into the hotel's underground garage.

"It was pretty stressed out and had crawled under some humungous air pipes," Smirl said. "I had to crawl in on my hands and knees and shoot three tranquilizer darts into its rear end."

The big female, which weighed about 120 pounds, took an hour to fall asleep.

"We handcuffed it and dragged it out," Smirl said, adding that the animal would be taken to a wilderness area and released.

"The permit is not required for hunting," said Hudak. "Currently the Idaho Department of Fish and Game allows bear baiting anytime during the hunting season. Bear baiters must receive the landowners permission prior to baiting."

Wolf sightings become more common in park country

The Associated Press

CODY, Wyo. — Wolves likely will return to the Yellowstone ecosystem on their own before a proposal to have man return them is completed, according to the regional director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Galen Bitterbaugh's expectations come as possible wolf sightings are growing in the mountains and forests between Cody and the Montana border.

While a U.S. Bureau of Land Management employee reported a possible sighting in that area earlier this month, his report followed two other sightings considered reliable by wildlife biologists.

Both came from people "who'd consider to be reliable witnesses," said Wyoming Game and Fish Department biologist Larry Roop. "Considering all three of the sightings, there seems to be something in the area."

Game and Fish officials referred the two sightings they received to the Fish and Wildlife Service, which oversees protected species.

Wolves, absent from the Yellowstone region for decades, are considered endangered. FWS Wolf Recovery Coordinator Steve Egitz said there are many sightings of lone wolves before any animals set up permanent residence in an area.

Warm weather puts damper on winter activities

Snow sports give way to hiking, biking

Foot trail links Ketchum, Stanley

TWIN FALLS — Warm weather is converting the Sawtooth National Forest from a winter to summer recreation area.

More and more bare ground is showing up and opportunities for mountain biking and hiking at lower elevations are increasing in popularity.

Avalanche hazard remains low in the mornings, rising to high by the noon hour. Late-season skiers are advised to get on the slopes early before the slopes soften.

Backcountry travelers may obtain information on current avalanche and weather conditions by calling the Ketchum ranger code phone according to 208-629-8022.

The Sawtooth National Recreation Area visitor center repairs snowmobiling fine on groomed trails. Snowmobiling is not recommended off track.

Nordic enthusiasts may want to try the Alturas Lake road, which is snow packed and firm. Groomed trails are good during the early morning but soften and turn slushy by 10:30 a.m.

Snow depths on the SNRA range from 24 inches at North Fork, 28 inches at Prairie Creek, 33 inches at Galena Summit and 14 inches to Stanley ranger station.

Pomerelle Ski reports the best skiing of the season with 81 inches on top and 75 inches at the base. The resort is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Next week from March 3 through March 7, will be the last week for night skiing. The resort phone number is 638-5553.

The Burley district reports Nordic trails marked and set for the weekend. Skiers are advised to be careful in the backcountry. Magic Mountain is now closed due to inadequate snow cover. Any additional snowfall may allow it to reopen by the weekend. Marty Jacobs at 423-6221 has more information.

The Twin Falls district reports Nordic skiing fair with the best on the short loop of Rock Creek trail and Magic Nordic trail.

Snowmobiling is recommended in the Monument Peak and Grouse Spring area. Snow isn't adequate for snowmobiling on many ridgelines west of Deadline Ridge.

The Fairfield district reports snowmobiling conditions as marginal over Wells summit and fair over Couch summit.

Soldier Mountain reports good spring-skiing conditions. The resort is open Friday through Sunday. More information may be obtained by calling 764-2300.

Recreationists are reminded that many forest side roads are not officially open until May 1 to prevent early-season damage. Seasonal road closures still remain in effect and visitors are reminded to stop by a Sawtooth district office for a free travel plan map.

Pomerelle Ski reports the best skiing of the season with 81 inches on top and 75 inches at the base. The resort is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Next week from March 3 through March 7, will be the last week for night skiing.

The Burley district reports Nordic trails marked and set for the weekend. Skiers are advised to be careful in the backcountry. Magic Mountain is now closed due to inadequate snow cover. Any additional snowfall may allow it to reopen by the weekend. Marty Jacobs at 423-6221 has more information.

The Twin Falls district reports Nordic skiing fair with the best on the short loop of Rock Creek trail and Magic Nordic trail.

Snowmobiling is recommended in the Monument Peak and Grouse Spring area. Snow isn't adequate for snowmobiling on many ridgelines west of Deadline Ridge.

The Fairfield district reports snowmobiling conditions as marginal over Wells summit and fair over Couch summit.

Soldier Mountain reports good spring-skiing conditions. The resort is open Friday through Sunday. More information may be obtained by calling 764-2300.

TWIN FALLS — Two potential valley-bottom, multi-purpose trail routes have been identified by a group of citizens interested in establishing a trail link between Ketchum and Stanley through the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

A non-motorized route begins at the SNRA headquarters, eight miles north of Ketchum, and follows much of the Boulder Mountain ski tour trail route to Galena Lodge.

From there, the trail climbs over Galena Summit to Pole Creek on the historic route used by early visitors to the Sawtooth Mountains.

The trail then links into a system of roads and trails on the west side of Stanley Valley, terminating at the Stanley ranger station.

A second route, identified for motorized traffic, begins at Baker Creek, about 15 miles north of Ketchum.

It follows a similar route to Galena Lodge along the Boulder Mountain trail and climbs over Galena Summit on the old road to Sawtooth Valley. The trail then links to the Centennial Trail route down the east-side of Sawtooth Valley to Fourth of July Creek, cross Highway 75 to the west side of the valley, and follows the Ducker Flat road to the Stanley ranger station.

The Sawtooth Valley route is currently part of the groomed snowmobile trail route connecting Stanley with Sawtooth City.

There are several possibilities for managing this trail, says Bill Vanderbilt, chairman of the seven-person task force that has been investigating the potential of establishing a trail since last summer.

These include creating one route open to both motorized and non-motorized travel; separate routes, one open to motorized, one non-motorized travel; and a combination of some sections open to both types of travel and other sections open only to non-motorized travel.

"We have solicited comments from affected landowners and permits along the potential route and from several organized interest groups throughout southern Idaho," said recreation planner Ken Brighton.

"Now we are interested in receiving comments from other interested parties. When all issues are resolved, the issues will be analyzed and a formal proposal made."

Much of the route in Sawtooth Valley currently exists. However, the trail would have to be marked and several stream-crossings constructed. In the Wood River Valley and over Galena summit, a good amount of construction would be required.

"We hope to construct and maintain the trail through individual and corporate donations to a trail foundation and through matching state and federal grants," said Vanderbilt. "A second phase of the project would include the construction and maintenance of rental huts along portions of the route not readily served by existing lodges or resorts."

Bill passage plates funds

BOISE — Wolverines, bluebirds, ground squirrels and raptors are a few of the 419 species of "nongame" wildlife which would benefit from passage of House Bill 698.

The bill would allow manufacture of a special automobile license plate and dedicate a portion of the proceeds to the management of nongame wildlife.

The optional plate, proposed to feature an illustration of Idaho wildlife, would have an initial registration fee and a renewal fee of $24. Each new or renewal purchase would result in $10 being placed in the dedicated account for nongame management and protection programs.

The Department of Fish and Game is responsible for nongame oversight as well as species pursued by hunters and anglers.

Although the sale of fishing and hunting licenses provides funds for department programs geared to game species, management of nongame is dependent on federal funding and the Idaho income tax checkoff.

This is a possible design for a license plate being considered in the Idaho Legislature. Sale of the plates would generate funding for Idaho's non-game wildlife program.

Legislative approval of the license plate would provide a source of funds as well as giving wildlife enthusiasts who don't hunt or fish a way to help support department nongame programs. Only Florida has established a similar program.

And they have some basic skills which allow them to safely enjoy the outdoors.

In some states a course in "conservation" is required in the middle schools. Indeed, some of the school districts in Idaho teach the Hunter Education program to all ten and eleven year olds.

It is somewhat ironic that in a state such as ours in which our natural resources are so important to our life style, that we have no required course which teaches our young people how to preserve that heritage.

And for the experienced adult hunter, the Hunter Education program has something for you and needs something from you. By taking a Hunter Education course you receive a valuable refresher in gun safety and hunter responsibility. Many neighboring states now require the completion of a hunter safety course before you can buy an out-of-state hunting license.

So if you plan to hunt in another state the class could be critical.

What the course and its instructor needs from you, is your help and assistance in teaching these often too large classes of enthusiastic young people. Most instructors would welcome at least one assistant for every ten students. And who knows, you may like it so well you will want to become an instructor yourself.

Court injunction could help save salmon

LEWISTON — Recent threat of a court injunction by the Port of Lewiston only enforces the opinion of Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited that drawing down the Snake River reservoir will prove the best biological solution to juvenile salmon survival.

In a press release, ISSU executive secretary, Mitch Sanchezeta said "if they are so sure there will be no biological benefits, our opinions is they would be willing to sacrifice the two week delay in barge transportation this year. They could then present the facts, after the drawdown test, proving that it doesn't work."

"The exact opposite is occurring," he continued. "It appears clear that these people are quite confident that a drawdown should occur in recent years and that upon completion of the necessary structural modifications, it will prove to be the least costly and most biologically sound alternative for recovering Idaho's dwindling salmon runs.

"ISSU and other fishery interests have always advocated and supported mitigation for Snake River shippers and irrigators using the lower Snake who will be affected by a drawdown," Sanchezeta said. "We know and understand that on one hand there may be some short term economic loss to river users, but on the other hand, we have always vowed to fight the bitter relocation and mitigation to help Idaho, Montana and Eastern Washington river shippers' welfare."

"However, if the court rules against the port and in favor of the drawdown, surely one of the questions that will arise is how much support should there be from fishery interests to press very hard for mitigation on behalf of those who supported the injunction?"

It is ironic that our organization could find itself intervening on the injunction litigation on behalf of the (Army) corps (of Engineers). Who knows, if the fishery interests decide to intervene on behalf of the corps, it would be such a strange relationship; the courtroom may fall down," Sanchezeta said.

On several occasions, Lewis said, "We haven't received any official word about sanctions being imposed. Vessels owners are not being charged and the boats are not being seized."

And when Taiwanese authorities do act, he said, some boat owners reportedly only are slapped with six-month license suspensions after the fishing season has ended.

Drift-net ban may not curtail illegal harvesting

SEATTLE (AP) — While the Bush administration is celebrating its diplomatic drift-net successes, at least one senior U.S. fisheries enforcement agent "is convinced" that the upcoming U.N. drift-net ban will stop the highly lucrative and illegal salmon harvesting by foreign drift-net vessels.

A December United Nations resolution bans drift netting by the end of the year.

Member nations will be responsible for enforcing the resolution, since the U.N. has no enforcement power. But Taiwan, one of the biggest drift-net nations, is a U.N. member and will not be bound by the resolution.

The U.N. ban "certainly could have a profound impact" on curtailing drift netting, said Wayne Lewis, National Marine Fisheries Service special agent in charge of the Pacific area, "but the ban will depend on flag-state enforcement to back it up."

Most illegal drift netting is done by 750 Japanese, South Korean and Taiwanese boats that legally use the nets to fish for squid and tuna but regularly stray into salmon waters.

Taiwanese law, as well as Japanese and South Korean, prohibits illegal drift-netting. Lewis said, but Taiwan has said it lacks the resources to enforce even its own regulations.

"Inhabitants of illegal fishing by Taiwanese and South Korean fleets occurs because authorities in those countries 'are unwilling or unable to take the action necessary to gain compliance from their drift-net fleet,'" Morris Palozzi, NMFS Office of Law Enforcement director, wrote in a July 18 memo.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg (N.J.) has written what he calls a lack of federal commitment to eradicating salmon piracy.

Identifying and catching violators isn't the problem, Cmdr. John McElwain, the Guard's chief spokesman, said in Washington. D.C.

Under bilateral agreements, drift-net enforcement depends on Taiwanese, Japanese and South Korean governments, he said. Once violations are found, "we have to turn to the flag state because" ... we don't have a prosecutorial role.

Lewis doesn't think foreign-drift-net enforcement will improve until owners of illegal drift-net vessels are punished.

"A Taiwanese fishery official told me his government has been very hard

F&G helps Ducks Unlimited

BOISE — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game paid $47,000 to Ducks Unlimited as partial payment on the Keho Lake waterfowl habitat project.

The funds were generated by the sale of artwork from waterfowl stamps.

Keho Lake is a 340-acre reservoir about 80 miles southeast of Calgary, Alberta, which includes six miles of shoreline and 1,200 acres of upland nesting habitat. It provides a staging area for ducks and geese and is a good producer of mallards, many of which migrate through Idaho.

Total cost of the project was $340,000, most of which was used to construct dikes to retain water in nesting areas, providing for the project was provided by the international conservation organization Ducks and Unlimited and will be repaid by funds from Idaho. The balance after the recent payment is $206,500.

30 elk moved from INEL

ARCO — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game moved 30 elk from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL) in February in response to a degradation problem on surrounding cropland.

The elk were started in pens, fired from pursuit helicopters, then blindfolded and hobbled by a second helicopter crew. The cows and calves were loaded into stings and flown to waiting trailers and hauled to Pebble Creek, southeast of Pocatello.

The problem is part of a herd estimated at 100 to 300 animals that moved off the INEL site to feed on crops, then seek refuge within the boundary.

The helicopter cost of the project was about $12,000 for the 30 elk, not including wages and expenses for the 40-person ground crew. Part of the cost will be paid by INEL.

Feds aid equipment purchase

BOISE — The Federal Bureau of Reclamation has granted the Idaho Department of Fish and Game $50,000 to buy equipment which can raise oxygen levels in reservoirs depleted due to recent years of below-normal water supplies.

The department will maintain the equipment for use on all public fishing waters. It expects to purchase approximately 24 units of three types. Each type performs differently in putting oxygen in water, allowing biologists to match the type of unit to the needs of a specific body of water and type of electrical power available.

EPA proposes fine in Utah

DENVER — The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed a $125,000 penalty against the southwestern Utah community of Washington for the destruction of nearly six acres of wetland for construction of the Green Springs Golf Course. The Army Corps of Engineers discovered in 1989 that the wetland had been bulldozed and filled with soil.

The agency said Monday that the city has cooperated in restoring the area and mitigating the harm done. The city has 20 days to respond to the proposed penalty.

14 plead innocent to charges

CASPER, Wyo. — Fourteen men from Wyoming, Canada and Minnesota pleaded innocent this week to counts of conspiracy to export wildlife and exportation of wildlife between October 1987 and January 1992.

The men were arraigned Wednesday before U.S. District Judge Clarence Brimmer. The men — including seven from Wyoming — were indicted by a grand jury for violations of the Lacey Act.
