Juvenile center: Twin Falls project?

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

JEROME — The proposed regional juvenile detention center may become a Twin Falls County project, with county taxpayers being asked to pick up the tab. The members of the five-county juvenile detention center board decided at Wednesday's meeting to ask their county commissioners to give Twin Falls County control of a state grant to build the center. Representatives from the other counties — Gooding, Jerome, Camas and Blaine — all

Taxpayers may be asked to pay for construction of new detention facility seemed confident the plan would gain approval. The other counties would then contract with Twin Falls County and pay on a per-person basis to use the facility. If the move is approved, Twin Falls County would get control of a $740,000 state grant to build the center. But an architect has already told the board that construction from the ground up will cost about $1.2 million. The counties already have spent $119,000 to buy a building on Addison Avenue East that the city of Twin Falls has said it can't use. That decision has been appealed and is now in the hands of 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbut. To make up the projected $487,000 shortfall, Twin Falls County voters would be asked to approve a bond issue, perhaps as soon as early summer, Twin Falls County Commissioner Marvin Templeman said. The other counties aren't willing to put up the money, and Twin Falls County needs to move forward as quickly as possible, Commissioner Norma Hlass said.

Question for the governor

Bickel School's snickerdoodles help repair Statehouse fire damage

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Snickerdoodles — 3-inch-diameter cinnamon cookies — will help rebuild Idaho's Statehouse. Bickel Elementary School students sold nearly 100 dozen of them, raised almost $400 and handed the check over to Gov. Cecil Andrus on Wednesday to help the state pay its $100,000 insurance deductible on repairs to the Statehouse caused by a $4.5 million fire on New Year's Day.

"You've done a tremendous amount of work," Andrus said. "Thank you, girls and boys." He told the students that what they did was in character with how Idahoans take care of their neighbors in times of need. Bickel fourth-grader teacher Kathy Uhrig — who coordinated the fund-raising project — said her Idaho history students take field trips to the Capitol every year. "Other Twin Falls elementary schools also had fund-raisers: Mothers of Morningside Elementary School students baked a dozen cupcakes each for a bake sale. Lincoln Elementary students brought aluminum cans for recycling and Harrison Elementary had a bake sale. In all, the Twin Falls schools raised $861 for the Capitol restoration. Mike Despot, the Capitol's director of building services, said he arrived at the Statehouse minutes after the fire was reported. "It was just heart-sickening to see that," he said. Temperatures inside the building melted aluminum cans, reaching 1,400 degrees, Despot said.

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — The College of Southern Idaho came back from five-point second-half deficit to defeat Texas' South Plains College 87-84 in overtime Wednesday night in the quarterfinals of the National Junior College Athletic Association Men's Basketball Tournament. The victory put the Eagles into the semifinals of the tournament, scheduled for Friday night. CSI, which had not led in the game since early in the first half, regained the lead by as many as three points in the final minute of regulation, only to have South Plains tie it just before time expired. State Demo chiefs wait on 2nd shoe

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Even as Bill Clinton pulls ahead of the Democratic presidential field, an Associated Press survey indicates nagging unease among some state party officials that there may be another "shoe to fall" regarding the Arkansas governor. "The fact the Republicans are so quiet about Clinton probably means they have something they're waiting to use," said Kansas Democratic chairman John Bird. "That's what worries me."

Paul Tsongas, one of Clinton's remaining rivals, disavowed Wednesday an aide's statement that he would stay in the race anticipating that some new controversy may yet throw Clinton for a loop. "Whoever said that speaks for himself or herself — not me," said Tsongas.

Clinton

Interviews with 30 Democratic party chairmen in all regions of the country found widespread acceptance that Clinton is close to clinching the presidential nomination. "It would be very hard to stop him," said Illinois Democratic chairman Gary LaPaille. Victories in Illinois and Michigan on Tuesday provided Clinton a major boost.

Many state leaders said they are nervous following a period of the campaign in which Clinton nearly stalled out during a variety of controversies. Others felt the toughest issues have already been aired and that Clinton was stronger for having faced

U.S. has plan to hit Iraq arms plants

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has drawn up plans for a bombing strike that could be carried out against Iraq weapons facilities if Saddam Hussein keeps blocking U.N. destruction of his arsenals, U.S. officials say. The plans also call for possible seizure of Iraq's bank assets in the United States and in other allied countries, expansion of the ban on Iraqi helicopter flights in northern Iraq, and an increase of U.N. inspections in Iraq to include monitoring human rights violations. Money from the seized assets could be used to keep the financially pressed U.N. inspection and destruction team going. The contingency plans are part of a broader strategy — likely to be announced within weeks — to further erode the Iraqi president's standing in his country, said the officials. They commented only on condition of anonymity. "A decision to bomb would depend in part on the outcome of a trip by a U.N. team to Iraq this Saturday to destroy equipment for building Scud missiles. Iraq prevented the team from carrying out its mission last month, prompting the Security Council to warn that further defiance would result in serious consequences. "This next inspection could be the trigger," said one official. By agreement with U.N. allies, any U.S. action "would be a limited, specific strike," said another official who is familiar with the administration's thinking. Iraq would be given notice of the raid to avoid harm to civilians, he added. The United States maintains bomber forces in the Persian Gulf region, both on land and on the aircraft carrier USS America which is currently in Gulf waters. But Assistant Secretary of State Edward P. Djerejian, asked Tuesday during a congressional hearing about policy on Iraq, appeared to rule out any immediate attack. First, he said that, given Saddam's "chest and retreat strategy, the time has come to truly reinforce the (U.N.) inspection regime inside Iraq." But when Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ill., said he understood that no military action was under active consideration, Djerejian answered, "That is basically a correct statement."

After 17 months, stalker kills woman in courthouse

The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — She told authorities he threatened her for 17 months, raped her repeatedly, threatened her with a gun, kept her from going to church. For the last two weeks of her life, Shitely Lowery managed to get free, but he caught up with her, a last time, in a courthouse hallway. Police said Benjamin Franklin, 32, planned a butcher-joint 19 times into Ms. Lowery on the seventh floor of the Milwaukee County Courthouse, where she had gone on the morning of March 9 seeking a permanent restraining order. She drew white crapsine for help from

For Ms. Lowery, 51, a bus driver, the nightmare was a passenger who followed her home. Her daughter says Ms. Lowery invited him in, and he pulled a gun and raped her. He also threatened to kill her. Five children and Ms. Lowery was too frightened to go to authorities until last month, she daughter said. "He raped me and threatened my life," Ms. Lowery wrote in a petition seeking a restraining order to keep him away. "He has raped me before and threatened me with a gun. He follows me 24 hours a day and threatens my life. Tore my clothes off Won't let me go to church." Police described Franklin as Ms. Lowery's ex-boyfriend. Mrs. Davis says the man moved into her mother's home and refused to leave. When her family and bodyguards moved her into a new apartment last month while he was gone, Ms. Lowery hid in a garage at work. Mrs. Davis said she took Lowery's apartment when she drove her mother to the courthouse that rainy March morning. She waited in her van outside because her mother feared more for her daughter's safety than her own. After lunchtime came and went, Mrs. Please see STABBING/A2

Weather summary

Blustery winds pelt an edge on 50-degree temperatures in the Magic Valley on Wednesday.

Winds were in the 15 to 25 mile an hour range at times and made normally mild temperatures seem far less comfortable. Skies were partly cloudy much of the day, although no precipitation fell during daylight hours.

Similar conditions are in store for winter's final day today, as spring arrives with the vernal equinox at 1:48 a.m. MST on Friday.

A cold trough of low pressure over Wyoming continued to spread moisture into eastern counties. Wednesday some rain and snow fell over the central mountains and fog patches were reported on Mullan Pass in the panhandle.

Pocatiello's 28 inch was the most precipitation reported in the state. Other reports included 21 at Rexburg, 15 at Lowell, 0.5 at Malad, 1.8 at Mullan, .02 at Moscow, .04 at Grangeville and .02 at Stanley.

Wind gusts reached 22 miles an hour at Challis and 18 mph at Sorens Springs.

The warmest temperature in the state Wednesday was 62 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley reported the coldest at 18 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Wednesday, the highest temperature was 94 degrees at McAllen, Texas. The lowest was 8 degrees below zero at Watertown, N.Y.

Heavy rains soak wide areas across South, Midwest

The Associated Press

Heavy rains soaked much of the South and parts of the Midwest on Wednesday and a small tornado touched down near Memphis, Tenn.

Snow fell steadily in the northern Plains.

A cold front moving across the Northeast on Tuesday afternoon dropped temperatures rapidly. The southern Plains and Southwest states were generally warm and sunny.

The Memphis-area tornado struck in the morning. It injured at least three people, uprooted trees and flipped several recreational vehicles.

Elsewhere in the South, showers and thunderstorms, often heavy, fell throughout the day in southeastern Texas, Mississippi and southern Alabama.

Hard rains also soaked Missouri, Kansas and northern Arkansas. The 1.62 inches of rain recorded in Kansas City, Mo., by 10 p.m. flooded streets and broke the 1891 record for the date - nearly half an inch.

In the northern Plains, 4 to 7 inches of snow had fallen in western South Dakota's Black Hills by late morning, and 8 inches was measured in central Wyoming. Snow also fell in Colorado and Montana.

Temperatures dipped below freezing overnight in the northern Plains, Great Basin, Great Lakes region, northern New England and upstate New York.

Across the southern Plains, overnight temperatures were mild, and sunny skies and strong winds pushed highs into the 70s and 80s Wednesday afternoon.

The low for the nation Wednesday morning was 8 degrees below zero at Ely, Minn., and Watertown, N.Y.

Brazil slide Shoe kills scores

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A landslide buried part of a hillside shantytown in a southeastern city on Wednesday, killing at least 32 people and burying many more, a rescue official said.

Police said the death toll could rise to 150.

"We have reports that dozens of people, most of them children, some of our people say 200, couldn't get away and were buried alive," said Police Chief Paulo Mansur. "We won't know how many for days."

The disaster took place at an outlying district of Belfort, the capital of Minas Gerais state 290 miles northwest of Rio.

About 400 brick and wooden shacks were destroyed in the BarraGina slum, home to 1,000 of the shantytown's 40,000 residents.

the adversary.

"He's been looked at pretty carefully," Grady Stumbo of Kentucky said of Clinton. "They've taken their best shot and he's survived. I think Bill Clinton has proved that he's a winner and can take criticism."

"There is not as much doubt as there is fear," said John Roehrkich, chairman of the Iowa Democratic party. He cited a "lingering apprehension as to whether there's another shoe to fall."

"There's always a possibility," said Gene Bushmann, Missouri chairman, "of who knows," he added "maybe there's dirt on Bush, for heaven's sake."

It's at the state party level that the tremors are felt most acutely by officials concerned about the impact the presidential contest will have on other races.

"Everyone's created an expectation that there's more," said Todd Otis, chairman of Minnesota's Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party. "If there is, it concerns me. But I don't have any reason to believe there is."

The Arkansas governor pulled ahead of the field despite whispers and allegations about his sex life, his avoidance of the Vietnam-era draft and financial dealings involving Clinton or his wife.

In recent days, former California Gov. Jerry Brown went on the offensive, accusing Clinton of funneling money to his wife's law firm for state business. Clinton and his wife, Hillary, heatedly denied the charge.

Brown has portrayed Clinton as vulnerable to Republican attacks in the fall, insisting, "This business of second-rate people not good for the Democratic Party," he said.

Longway stayed out of that exchange but repeatedly referred to himself as the only electable candidate, a characterization designed to remind Democrats that Clinton's personal problems could torpedo his chances against President Bush.

Clinton's strongest supporters among state-party chairs insisted that his primary victories in his native South and neutral Midwest prove voters care more about his program than his personal life.

"I think they've done everything they can to Bill Clinton," said Charles Whitehead, former party chairman in Florida. "I think what he's been through has been good for him and good for his campaign."

Of one thing Democrats were in agreement: whether there is more or not, Republicans will do their best to make Clinton's personal life an issue in the general election.

"They'll try to make Clinton look like a draft dodger," said Rhonda Roberts, chair of the Alaska Democratic Party.

"It will be an ugly negative campaign," said Ed Simms, Georgia Democratic Party chairman.

"We're not getting it otherwise," Bliss said.

Frustration is building, as the counties enter their 18th month without a permanent juvenile detention facility. Even after a site is chosen and money is found, construction will take about a year.

Twin Falls County is now holding male juveniles at the Twin Falls County fairgrounds and renting hotel rooms for females.

Twin Falls County had 18 juveniles in detention Wednesday.

If Twin Falls County gets control of the project, it may ask voters to pay for a facility bigger than the 12-bed center currently proposed, he said.

Hempleman and Bliss said many county residents have told them 12 beds are not enough to handle the area's growing juvenile crime problem.

The other counties would still have guaranteed access to the regional facility, although the exact terms of that access have yet to be ironed out.

Blaine County prosecutor and board Chairman Ned Williamson said access should be based on risk, meaning more dangerous kids would be given priority over juveniles already in the center.

Such a system would require the cooperation of judges, who are the final word in whether or not a juvenile is detained, Williamson said.

An advisory board with a representative from each county would be chosen to oversee the project.

If area commissioners give Twin Falls County control of the bond but voters there reject a bond proposal, the board will revert to its current form and start looking for other sources of money, Williamson said.

"I don't know where we'd go after that," Bliss said. "We're really against a wall now."

Gene splicers find promising CF treatment

BOSTON (AP) — Cystic fibrosis patient Ian Ferguson says he usually would become winded running up a flight of stairs.

But after receiving a genetically engineered protein, he could pound up three flights without losing his breath.

Ferguson, a 27-year-old architect from Rockville, Md., was one of 16 people who tested the new medicine.

About 50,000 Americans have the inherited illness, which is often fatal by age 30. Until now, it has been treated mostly by giving antibiotics to prevent infections and pounding on patients' chests to loosen mucus buildup.

The medicine, deoxyribonuclease, or DNase, is a copy of a natural human protein and administered in an aerosol spray that is breathed through the mouth. Researchers from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md.,

Where to get information

The Associated Press

For more information about the new cystic-fibrosis treatment, call the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation at 800-FIGHT-CF, or write 6931 Arlington Rd., No. 200, Bethesda, MD, 20814.

conducted the first test of the medicine's effectiveness. They reported their findings in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

"It's not a cure, but there is no question it works," said Dr. Ronald G. Crystal, who directed the study.

The medicine's maker, Genentech Inc., plans to seek federal permission to sell the drug in early 1993. It is currently available only in carefully controlled studies.

"Normally, I would be winded running up one flight," said Ferguson.

"When I was on it, it made a big difference in my general feeling of well being. ... I started gaining weight, which is very important."

Ferguson took the medicine for just six days during the preliminary study, and he hopes it will be approved quickly for routine use. "This is something everybody with CF would like to be able to take," he said.

The treatment is one of several promising approaches to controlling the disease.

DNase is now being tested on 900 people at 50 hospitals around the country.

"This is very exciting," commented Dr. Robert Beall of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. "There was a very significant improvement in pulmonary function. We think this could have an impact on the disease."

The new treatment is a natural human protein, produced in quantity by gene splicing, that breaks down the genetic material DNA.

In people with cystic fibrosis, the cells lining the lungs absorb too much water. This dries out the mucus, making it thick and hard to cough up. Bacteria grows in the mucus.

While blood cells fight this infection. When these cells die, they release their DNA into the mucus. This makes the mucus even thicker and stringy, severely hindering breathing.

When breathed in a nasal spray, DNase attacks this leftover DNA, thinning out the mucus.

In the study, patients noticed a 10-percent to 20-percent improvement in their lung function with no apparent side effects.

"Two-thirds of the patients tell you they feel better," said Crystal. "Their chests feel less heavy."

The patients took DNase or a placebo spray for six days. Crystal said that even though neither the doctors nor the patients knew which was administered, the quick improvement in their breathing left little doubt when they got the real drug.

Lack of customers close 56 hospitals in 1990

WASHINGTON (AP) — A relatively small number of hospitals are going out of business every year, but contrary to some claims from the medical community, low payments from Medicare are not to blame, government officials said Wednesday.

In general, the hospitals are closing because they don't have enough customers, and that's largely a function of the decisions of doctors and patients on where to get treatment, said a Department of Health and Human Services report.

"The short answer to why hospitals closed is that doctors stopped referring patients to those institutions and sent them elsewhere," said Richard P. Kussner, inspector general of the department.

"We have repeatedly heard that low Medicare reimbursement rates are causing many of the nation's hospitals to close their doors," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House subcommittee on oversight and investigations that is looking into the matter.

"This is largely a myth," Dingell said.

The department records for 1990 show that 56 hospitals closed, half of them were in rural areas and the other half in cities.

Typically, these hospitals were small and mostly empty. For example, the average failed urban hospital had 93 beds and a 30.5 percent occupancy rate. The national average for all urban hospitals is 245 beds with a 56.6 percent occupancy rate.

Study: Radiation doesn't cause new cancer

BOSTON (AP) — Getting radiation therapy to treat breast cancer does not significantly increase a woman's risk of suffering another tumor later in life, a study concludes.

Women who survive an initial bout of breast cancer face about three times the usual risk of experiencing another new case of this form of cancer. However, the latest study shows that radiation therapy is usually not to blame.

The researchers found that fewer than 3 percent of all second breast cancers can be attributed to previous radiation therapy.

Standard therapy for breast cancer often includes surgery to remove the cancerous lump, followed with radiation to the breast to kill any lingering tumor cells. During the treatment, however, the second breast may also be exposed to low levels of radiation.

The latest study was intended to see if this unintended exposure increased the risk of tumors occurring years later in the opposite breast. It found that a significantly increased risk was apparent only in those who were treated for breast cancer before age 45.

Dr. John D. Boice Jr. of the National Cancer Institute, who directed the study, noted that 86 percent of all women treated for breast cancer are over age 45.

"The vast majority of women with breast cancer appear to be at very, very minimal risk of developing a second tumor related at all to the radiation treatment they might receive," he said.

His study was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine. It was based on a review of 41,109 women who were diagnosed with breast cancer in Connecticut between 1935 and 1982.

The doctors reviewed the records of 655 women who developed a second breast cancer. Their radiation exposure was compared with that of 1,189 women who stayed cancer-free.

Overall, 23 percent of the women who got a second breast cancer had received radiation therapy, compared with 20 percent of the comparison group. However, those who were under age 45 when treated had about a 60 percent increase in risk of a second breast cancer.

Boice noted that cancer experts have recently grown more concerned about shielding women's breasts from exposure during radiation treatment and tests.

"Our paper shows that those practices should be encouraged for the opposite breast, particularly for women who are young," he said.

White House offers loan choice to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Wednesday said it had offered Israel $300 million in housing loan guarantees with "no questions asked," but stood firm in rejecting further help unless Israel yielded and forswore starting new settlements.

The offer, described by a State Department spokeswoman as "very fair and balanced," would stop Israel from starting new settlements on the West Bank in Gaza and in East Jerusalem — a step the Likud government was very unlikely to take.

Surgery helps ease severe heartburn

BOSTON (AP) — Surgery is the best way to treat severe heartburn, but combinations of medicine also do a good job of relieving this common misery, research has shown.

While heartburn surgery has been around for many years, interest has often been reluctant to recommend it because they doubted it works well.

But research at Veterans Affairs hospitals found that the operation is extremely effective, relieving heartburn for most patients with severe symptoms.

Heartburn — what doctors call gastroesophageal reflux disease — occurs when stomach acid flows the wrong way from the stomach into the esophagus. It creates a burning sensation in the center of the chest.

The operation is intended to create a valve at the end of the esophagus by wrapping part of the stomach around the end of the esophagus.

Heartburn is one of the most frequent of all medical complaints, affecting up to 40 percent of Americans at least once a month.

Over the 'Hump': Sustained aerial supply operation begins

Editor's note: This is another in a series of articles concerning events of World War II which occurred 50 years ago this week.

Knight-Ridder News Service

On March 21, 1942, the first airlift of supplies was made through the Himalayas, from India to China by a DC-3 operated by the China National Aviation Corporation.

U.S. military flights would commence within the next few weeks. This was inaugurated the greatest sustained aerial supply operation in history.

The flight path was over the "Hump," a great mass of rock that ran southward across the main east-west range of the Himalayas. It consisted of ridges, gorges and mountain peaks, including the 22,800-foot high Tali mountain. The 500-mile route was subject to fog and clouds, monsoons in the summer and ice at high altitudes. Heavily loaded planes had to thread their way through the mountains since they could not get high enough to fly over many of the ridges.

Japanese fighters based in Burma tried to intercept the transports, but were unable to operate consistently over the Hump. The transports were also supported by American and Chinese fighter aircraft, in particular the famed Flying Tigers, whose own survival in China depended on getting the supplies through.

This difficult operation was an example of strategy overcoming geography.

The Japanese advance into Burma, which had been launched in late January, had closed the Burma Road. Rangoon fell on March 7. The Burma Road had been since 1938 the only land supply route from India to China.

It ran from the port at Rangoon through Mandalay and Lashio to Kunming in Yunnan Province. Japan had been at war with China since 1937, and the bulk of its army would spend the war on the mainland. It was in the interests of the United States and Britain to keep them there, which meant keeping the Chinese army in the field.

Air bases had to be built at both ends of the run. British engineers and Indian natives constructed six air bases among the tea plantations in Upper Assam, while thousands of Chinese coolies labored to build runways and revetments around Kunming at an altitude of more than a mile above sea level.

The greatest bottlenecks, however, were still on the ground. To get to the Assam airfields required a 1,500-mile railroad trip from the ports at Karachi and Bombay. The Indian rail system was already overloaded by the war effort, and the section through Bengal was only a single track line.

In the air the standard transports were the twin-engine C-46 Commando and C-47 Skytrain and the four-engine C-54 Skymaster. Eventually, B-24 Liberators and even B-29 Superfortress heavy bombers were pressed into service.

Cargoes consisted of fuel, ammunition, metal ores and machinery of all kinds, including earth movers and spare parts for American combat aircraft fighting over China. It became the major priority of the USAAF Air Transport Command.

Conditions for the pilots and ground crews were grim. They lived in mud huts, had an unsatisfactory diet, were plagued by leeches and were prone to malaria and dysentery. Yet they pushed themselves to the limit.

The Hump operation went on around the clock, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Eventually, it built up to the point where the tonnage carried by air surpassed what had been carried over land on the Burma Road.

Judge sets Helmsley's check-in time for tax day

NEW YORK (AP) — Hotel queen Leona Helmsley, convicted of evading $1.4 million in taxes, lost her bid to stay out of prison and was ordered Wednesday to begin serving her four-year sentence on tax day — April 15.

The 71-year-old wife of billionaire Harry Helmsley was dressed in black for her resentencing, which was followed by a near-fainting spell.

She begged for mercy from U.S. District Judge Thomas Gageau, maintaining that separating her from her sickly, 83-year-old husband would kill them both.

"He has nobody in the world," she sobbed.

"All he's got is me."

She sat stoically, shaking her head, as the judge refused to eliminate or reduce the prison term imposed after her 1989 conviction.

But she almost collapsed as she left the Manhattan federal courthouse, holding by a side door. A aide caught her and helped her into a waiting limousine.

Church: Kennedy still married to Joan

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who plans to marry Washington attorney Victoria Reggie this year, remains married to his first wife in the eyes of the Roman Catholic Church, Cardinal Bernard F. Law said.

Kennedy, 60, divorced his wife, Joan, in 1982. They have three children, Kara, Edward Jr., and Patrick. Reggie, 38, a longtime friend of the Kennedy family, has two children from a marriage that ended in divorce in 1990.

"Senator Kennedy, in the eyes of the church, is married and, as long as he is married, he is not free to enter into another marriage," Law said.

U.N. envoy seeks cease-fire for Nagorno-Karabakh visit

BAKU, Azerbaijan (AP) — U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance said Wednesday he is seeking a temporary cease-fire between Armenia and Azerbaijan to allow him to visit the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Both sides continued to bombard each other's towns in and around Nagorno-Karabakh, despite the latest efforts to end the bloodiest ethnic conflict in the former Soviet Union.

Three people were killed and 10 wounded in rocket attacks on the Azerbaijani city of Fenter near Nagorno-Karabakh, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

Sporadic shelling also was reported in several villages.

Armenian reports said Stepanakert, Nagorno-Karabakh's capital, was struck by rockets from Shusha, the predominantly Azerbaijani city in the enclave, killing two people and wounding 15.

Food and water have nearly run out in Stepanakert, and "panic is rising" there, ITAR-Tass reported.

Armenia condemned the continued blockade of food and energy by Azerbaijan, saying 700 tons of beef, 7.1 million gallons of gasoline and 9.1 million gallons of diesel fuel have been seized by Azerbaijanis in recent days, the news agency said.

The blockade "is in violation of international law and has reached intolerable limits," the Armenian Foreign Ministry said.

"Its purpose is to widen the war in Nagorno-Karabakh by drawing Armenia into the conflict."

Vance, who was sent on a fact-finding mission by U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, met for a second day with Azerbaijan Prime Minister Ganan Gasanov.

Vance, a former U.S. secretary of state, told reporters he wanted to visit Nagorno-Karabakh on Friday.

Iraq allows Green Party

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraq, which waged environmental warfare in the Persian Gulf conflict, now has an officially sanctioned Green Party, Baghdad radio reported Wednesday.

The radio said the party, called al-Khadra or Green, was formed under the guidelines for new parties by President Saddam Hussein.

The radio quoted new party chairman Madhar Aref as saying in an interview with the Baghdad newspaper Babel that the objective of the party was to protect the environment at home, in the Arab world and overseas.

Police free U.S. businessman; Muslims take 2 more women

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police attacked a bungalow with guns and grenades Wednesday and freed an American businessman kidnapped two months ago.

Sharpshooters shot two captors dead as they brandished weapons and threatened to kill their blindfolded and chained hostage.

Police said at least 12 suspected kidnapers were killed in a series of raids on six leftist hideouts in the effort to find Michael Barnes, vice president of Philippine Geothermal Inc. Three policemen were wounded and two women were arrested.

In the southern Philippines, meanwhile, police said Muslim separatists kidnapped two American women and an Australian mother and daughter on Tuesday and demanded about $75,000 and four rifles for their return. Officials said negotiations for their release were under way Wednesday.

Tuesday's kidnaping occurred on the southern island of Jolo.

Officials identified the hostages as Carol Allen and Tracy Rectanus of the United States and Australian Lynette Cook and her 3-year-old daughter, Cherie.

Mrs. Cook's other daughter, Elise, 3, was freed late Tuesday and returned unharmed to her father, the Rev. Steve Cook, a Protestant minister in Jolo.

Allen and Rectanus, whose home towns were unavailable, were visiting from Manila, where they teach at a school for children of Protestant missionaries.

Germany bids farewell to U.S. Army VII Corps

STUTTGART, Germany (AP) — Germany on Wednesday bade farewell to the U.S. Army's VII Corps, the formidable fighting force whose soldiers battled on the Normandy beaches and in the Gulf War.

The 72,000 VII Corps soldiers, the largest U.S. Army Corps stationed in Europe, had been headquartered in Stuttgart since October 1951.

"I will miss you. I didn't want you to leave," said Stuttgart Mayor Manfred Hommel, the son of Erwin Rommel, the "Desert Fox" commander of German forces in North Africa in World War II.

The fall of the Iron Curtain and the collapse of communism ended the mission of the VII Corps, which will be officially deactivated in April in the United States as part of the U.S. forces drawdown in Europe.

From 72,000 troops, the VII Corps has dwindled to fewer than 1,000 soldiers.

The day of farewells opened with a ceremony in Stuttgart's City Theater, with the U.S. Army Band and a choir performing "Gershwin's Melody."

Prince Andrew, Sarah may separate

LONDON (AP) — Newspapers said Wednesday that reports of "Fergie's" friendship with a Texas oilman were too much for the troubled marriage of Prince Andrew and the Duchess of York, and the two were about to separate.

Buckingham Palace refused to comment on reports in the Daily Mail and other newspapers that the duchess, the former Sarah Ferguson, was determined to separate from Prince Andrew, the second of Queen Elizabeth II's three sons.

The reports of an impending separation, attributed to unnamed sources in royal circles, said the duchess was expected to get custody of the couple's two young daughters.

Sunninghill Park, the Yorks' home near Windsor Castle, 20 miles west of central London, was besieged by reporters and photographers Wednesday. The 32-year-old duchess ignored shouts of journalists as she took her 3-year-old daughter, Princess Beatrice, to school and brought her home. Andrew, also 32, did not respond to questions as he went to and from classes at the nearby Army Staff College.

Grounds for divorce or not; no means no

DEAR ABBY: Your statement, "No always means NO," is sound advice when it comes to sexual favors. However, your statement, "Being married to a person does not entitle one to sexual favors" is misleading.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

Persistent and unjustifiable refusal to engage in marital relations by either spouse could be considered desertion, abandonment, or cruel and inhuman treatment, thereby establishing grounds for divorce. Since the law varies from state to state, the factual circumstances of a particular case would be controlling. Perhaps you should have mentioned that.

- R. KARL SPALVINS, ATTORNEY AT LAW, KNOXVILLE, TENN.

DEAR ATTORNEY SPALVINS: The key words in your statement are: "persistent" and "unjustifiable," in which case I would have to agree with you - and the law.

I said, "Both parties must be willing - or it's no go." If either party is too tired, too angry or just "not in the mood" for love, occasionally, it's understandable, and therefore forgivable.

When sex is forced, it is humiliating and traumatic - and the law calls it spousal rape.

DEAR ABBY: I have a boyfriend problem. He keeps promising me that we will get married. Well, we now have a 3-month-old son, and we aren't married yet.

We have been together a year and three months; I have set a date that we both agree on; then he breaks it off and delays our wedding. What should I do?

- NEEDS HELP IN OHIO

DEAR NEEDS HELP: Face it, your boyfriend (the father of your son) is not ready for marriage. However, whether or not he is "ready for marriage," he has a legal obligation to contribute to the support of his son according to the laws of your state.

You are foolish to believe a fellow who consistently breaks his promise. It would appear that his son may grow up before he does.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for the limerick collector:

There was an old lady named Myrtle

Who bought herself a new girdle.

She held in her breath,

It squeezed her to death.

TWIN FALLS - Donors supported the Red Cross Blood Drawing in Twin Falls recently by meeting the 120-pint quota both days.

The blood drive was held March 2 and 3 at the Presbyterian Church. Ola Cannon, chairman, said 130 pints were received Monday and 122 pints were received Tuesday. Except for one minor complication, all donated blood types were credited for the good turnout, Cannon said.

Shirley Bolster received a 20-gallon donor pin, Margaret Pratt and James Bondurant each received 11-gallon pins. Other pins were given to Russell Schwarz for 8 gallons; Marilee D. Allison and George Gilmore, 6 gallons; Walter Bowman, Michele Dameron and Joanne Smutney, all 5 gallons; William R. Bruce, 3 gallons; Erik Clark, Lorie, Oliver, Richard Carrier and Roxanne Mumt, all 2 gallons; Michael O'Dell, Lorida Newton, Jeff Kathfleisch, Coleen Holsinsky, Paul Brown and Stephanie David, all 1 gallon.

Nine people donated for the first time on Monday, and 20 donated for the first time on Tuesday.

The next drawing is set for May 4 and 5 at the First Presbyterian Church.

DONA VISTA, Pa. - Michelle Diaz and Jon L. Lenker were married Feb. 28 at the Baptist Church in Dona Vista, Pa.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Diaz of Dona Vista, and parents of the bridegroom are John F. Lenker of Rio Vista, Calif., and Kathy M. Wilkins of Twin Falls.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Twin Falls High School. He is currently attending the Naval Nuclear School in Idaho Falls, and will be stationed in Idaho Falls for the next six months. He is employed at the U.S. Navy Nuclear School at INEL in Idaho Falls.

The newlyweds reside in Idaho Falls. A reception will be held from 2 to 6 p.m. Saturday at the home of Charles and Linda Wilkins in Bliss.

1-week desktop publishing class planned at CSI

TWIN FALLS - "The PageMaker Campus," a one-week intensive course in Desktop Publishing, will be offered Monday through March 27 in the Canyon Building drafting lab at the College of Southern Idaho.

The workshop will go beyond the keystroke proficiency required to operate the program. Participants will learn how to decide which software feature, how to make design decisions, how to interface with word processing and graphic programs, scanners, printers and how to apply the program to specific work situations.

The program is being sponsored by CSI in conjunction with The Dotson Institute. It is suggested specifically by the Citrus Corporation for training in the integrated technologies of Desktop Publishing.

The class will meet from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, and the cost is $695. For more information or to pre-register, call 733-9554, Ext. 119.

Now, US WEST is helping more Idahoans do big business in small towns.

Who says you have to be in a big city to do big business? Over the right communications system, any business can look like a Fortune 500 company.

That's why US WEST is investing more than $39 million annually for communications system improvements in Idaho. It's an investment that provides helpful services like US WEST Conference Calling, Call Waiting, Voice Messaging and FAX capabilities. As well as US WEST Cellular phones and more convenient Yellow Pages.

These new service improvements will not only provide added convenience for individual customers, but they'll also foster growth in businesses and communities throughout Idaho. No matter how big they are, or more importantly, how big they want to be.

Now the graveyard is fertile with Myrtle.

NEA quietly brings fine arts to Idaho

Julie Fanselow

Reprinted with permission of The Wall Street Journal, copyright 1992, Dow Jones & Co. Inc. All rights reserved.

John Frohnmayer resigned as head of the National Endowment for the Arts on Feb. 21, one day after Republican presidential candidate Pat Buchanan slammed the Bush administration for subsidizing "filthy and blasphemous art."

The endowment has faced unceasing fire from critics. During an extraordinary exchange on "This Week With David Brinkley" two days after Mr. Frohnmayer's resignation, the three journalists on Mr. Brinkley's panel — George Will, Sam Donaldson and Cokie Roberts — all said that they thought that arts groups should stand on their own without federal funding.

But critics and pundits who question the NEA's existence are ignoring the endowment's role in supporting the arts in small-town and rural America. In spring 1990, the Idaho Commission on the Arts distributed grants totaling $447,219. Of that amount, 38 percent — nearly $170,000 — came directly from the National Endowment.

That $170,000 represented more than five times as much as the endowment gave the University of Pennsylvania's Institute of Contemporary Art to help fund the infamous exhibit by photographer Robert Mapplethorpe. That show, which included seven or eight homoerotic images (out of 120 photos), touched off the arts funding flap.

Where did the money go in Idaho? Well, $42,520 went to the Idaho Dance Arts Alliance, which used its funds to run workshops for children. Lincoln Elementary School in Twin Falls received $1,300 for an artists-in-residence program that in the past six years has brought in a mime, a dancer, a storyteller, a painter and a puppeteer to its classrooms. Principal Ted Popplewell says the visitors help children realize it is possible to make a living in the arts, and teachers have also seen improvement in the students' social skills and self-esteem following the artists' residencies.

The College of Southern Idaho used its $3,900 grant to fund its annual Arts on Tour series, which regularly features such bastions of performing arts morality as Brigham Young University's International Dancers and a holiday run of "The Nutcracker." The Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind received $825, which paid for an on-campus performance and workshop by a professional ballet troupe. Arts programs "give the students another type of language," says school Superintendent Jim Rainier. "It expands their horizons."

The NEA gives direct grants to arts organizations, too, and the University of Idaho's Lionel Hampton/Chevron Jazz Festival is one such recipient. Lynn Skinner, festival director, said the $15,000 received from the NEA in 1991 helped bring big-name jazz stars, including Al Jarreau and Herbie Mann, to campus, where they performed and offered dozens of workshops. Since the Mapplethorpe incident, the NEA has been painted in broad brushstrokes as a shameless peddler of pornography. The Rev. Donald Willtmon's American Family Association, through intensive direct-mail campaigns and full-page advertisements, has called for the agency's abolition. Mr. Willtmon says artists have no more right to be federally funded than do truck drivers or carpenters.

NEA critics ignore the good the arts endowment has done. In 1965, when the endowment began, there were 60 local arts councils in the United States; today, there are more than 3,000. In 1965, there were 110 professional orchestras in the United States; today, there are at least 220. "American Playhouse" and "Live From Lincoln Center" are other endowment-supported projects that reach every American with access to public television.

It would be simplistic to tie the nation's flowering of cultural activity solely to the NEA. But those grants have made a difference, not just to the Eastern art elite and not just to starving artists. In its 27 years, the NEA has given more than 90,000 grants. Fewer than 25 have generated "controversy."

Those who would abolish the NEA need only look to places like Idaho to learn that most of the time the endowment does its job quietly and well, bringing arts to every American. It should be allowed to continue to do so.

Editorial

If jump is inevitable, say so and get down to business

If Twin Falls city and county officials are waiting for a consensus to form on the Robbie Knievel question, they're in for a long wait.

Some people — mainly those who have something to gain from putting on an extravagant sideshow — are enthusiastic about having Knievel jump the Snake River Canyon.

Another group — those who think the Knievel family has caused Twin Falls enough trouble already — is opposed.

Neither group is likely to give in. So the officials involved are going to have to make up their own minds and live with the consequences.

No amount of studying and wind-testing will change that.

Local officials are holding an all-comers meeting today for public agencies that may be affected by the jump. That's probably a good move. If you're not enough bureaucratic heads-in-one-pot, maybe they'll reach the critical mass necessary to say no.

Another good move was the lengthy set of written questions that officials have posed to Knievel. If nothing else, it warns him that Twin Falls won't be the patsy it was when his dad came to town.

Less helpful was last month's junket to watch Knievel jump over pickup trucks at a California car lot. We can't quite grasp the similarity between that penny-ante hop and the grand spectacle that's supposed to put Twin Falls on the map.

None of these fact-finding endeavors will take local officials off the hook. They eventually have to make the decision, and they might as well get on with it.

Our preference on that issue is no secret. We're firmly in the camp that recalls what happened in 1974, when Knievel's father attempted the same jump: the beer-soaked biker gangs, the destruction of property, the public nudity, the rowdiness, the deaths, the intimidation of the local populace and the stacks of unpaid bills.

Judging by what local officials have said in public, however, it seems likely they'll approve the jump. We still think such a decision would be dumber than dirt, but we recognize the difficulty of stopping a stampede once the smell of money is in the air.

If that's what is to be, officials should say so and put their energy into protecting the community from another shelling.

This time, let nothing be left to chance. Move the jump away from residential areas so that the crowds can't make life miserable for property owners.

Make sure local authorities control admission, security and all other circumstances of the event. And make sure Knievel and his promoters, not local agencies and individuals — are responsible for the bills.

Twin Falls was not to be had by another?

Don't blame species law

While much space has been given lately to critics of the Endangered Species Act, little has been given to the whole story. The Endangered Species Act has acquired an ill-deserved reputation for bureaucratic might. It has been blamed for both our economic and political woes.

The truth is that endangered species may play a role in controversies, but needless waste and questionable economics are as much to blame.

In the present stream of criticism, the 1973 law is nearly unrecognizable. It is portrayed as hugely expensive, generating constant conflict and unable to protect species. In fact, among more than 600 protected species, 17 have been reclassified from endangered to threatened or moved off the list entirely. 60 more are recovering though not yet reclassified and an unknown, but significant number have been saved from almost certain extinction had the law not existed.

Critics say it has cost too much. Last year, the Fish and Wildlife Service got its largest appropriation — $39 million — to administer the law for hundreds of species. The average cost of one mile of urban interstate is $39 million. Too much?

Protecting owls will cost jobs. But jobs have already been lost by the thousands due to automation of the mills and exporting of raw logs rather than processed timber.

Without protection of the owl and its habitat (already reduced to about one-tenth of its original extent), the eventual outcome will be no jobs and no old-growth forests. The question is whether there is a compromise that will save some of both. The Endangered Species Act forces the search for it.

With all the hype from 11 organizations determined to gut the act, it is hard to separate the facts from the fiction. We must remember that less than 1 percent of Endangered Species Act-related projects reviewed by the Fish and Wildlife Service were blocked or withdrawn. The act is not a threat to well-managed development. Thousands of projects were reviewed during the last 13 years to determine their potential impact on endangered species; only 52 were deemed too damaging to proceed.

Please remember these things. The continued survival of many species depends on your awareness and support.

Clear up confusion on pay

It appears there may be confusion over how the county has incurred a bill for more than $20,000 for unpaid overtime apparently owed to some county employees.

First, it was not a lack of training which caused the problem. Even since governmental agencies have been liable to the rules and regulations of the Fair Labor Standards Act in 1986, all county officials responsible for hiring and supervising employees have attended numerous workshops dealing with the nuances of administering the law. County officials are familiar with the law. In fact, it is interesting the problems have arisen in the sheriff's office, since shortly after he was elected, the sheriff spent two hours with a blackboard and chalk, explaining to the commissioners his familiarity with the law.

One of the facts learned at these workshops is that the clerk's office is considered the official source of all payroll records in the county and all payroll information for the county must be submitted to this office. Some time ago the commissioners requested that all records pertaining to payroll, vacation time, sick leave and overtime hours be submitted to the clerk's office monthly. All offices complied except the sheriff's office, which cited an inability to reconcile their records for the mandatory 28-day work period with the monthly payroll period of the county.

A second factor is that the commissioners have officially discouraged overtime for years because it is very expensive. By failing to submit records and by giving his employees compensatory time off for their overtime hours worked, no one outside the sheriff's office was aware of the liability the county was incurring.

After numerous requests for the records and suggestions he check with other counties to develop a reporting system and concerns about the potential liability in the sheriff's office, the commissioners requested the county's outside auditor review the sheriff's payroll records and develop a system of reporting the information to the clerk. The Labor Department became involved after receiving an anonymous request to review the payroll records in the sheriff's office.

The results of these concurrent reviews have provided some ways for both the sheriff and the county to improve their methods of compliance with the Fair Labor Standards Act. However, with the cooperation and compliance of most departments, it is most unfair to blame all county officials for the actions of one.

few advances which were abused, but there were 404 growers involved in this loss. Those that may have received advances and abused them had little, if any, effect on the overall financial condition of Hawkins Ltd.

The newspaper story seems to suggest the failure to charge interest on and collect accounts receivable as another act of generosity to the farmer. There was a very basic reason the accounts receivable were not billed or collected and that is the fact that they were fictitious.

Each time the farmer sold beans, the debt due for seed and fertilizer was collected. Many of the fictitious accounts receivable were made up of advances which were only book entries. These advances never went to farmers. The pumped-up accounts receivable were another method, used to offset missing beans on the balance sheet.

The Times-News did refer to 33 checks being written to growers who did not receive them; actually, the number was 66 checks and 30,000 cwt of beans were written out of inventory with that number. The same week in May 1988, 40,000 cwt of beans were simply written off the daily position record of the warehouse and between 100 and 200 bean boxes containing dirt and culls were stacked in the warehouse to add to the bean inventory.

In the first week of May 1988, there were between 110,000 and 120,000 cwt of beans, that is 53 million in beans, written out of the inventory or added to inventory with dirt and culls. The farmers were not involved in any of those activities, nor was generosity involved as The Times-News headline suggests.

The general farm community who traded with Hawkins Ltd. had absolutely nothing to do with the management of Hawkins Ltd., and the use of the word generosity in a headline is a misstatement. The good ol' boy balcony really should be ended and reality take over in relation to this whole affair.

Halt wasteful foreign aid

Joseph Stalin of the Soviet Union authored a book in 1945 in which he suggested that America finance a large foreign aid program at the end of World War II. Earl Browder, head of the Communist Party in America, wrote a book that same year urging that America undertake a gigantic program of industrialization and "all-around modernization in all the devastated and undeveloped areas of the world."

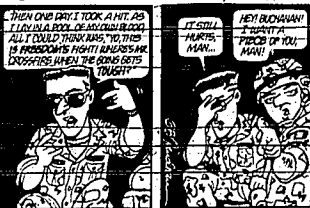

It was claimed many years ago that these enemies of America wanted us to build the industrial capacity of other nations in order to eliminate American productive superiority. World markets and much of the domestic market would be taken away from America. Our great gold reserves would be stripped from us.

It didn't take long. In 1950, the United States produced 47 percent of the world's steel and owned 42 percent of the free world's gold reserves. By 1972, we produced only 19 percent of the steel and were left with only 8 percent of the free world's gold. By 1982, the United States was subsidizing the reconstruction of steel plants in Communist China while tens of thousands of our own steel workers were being laid off. More recently, we gave hundreds of millions to Mexico to modernize their steel industry even though 56 percent of our steel workers had lost their jobs.

A foreign aid has no place in the government our founders gave us. Americans have no right to take income from their neighbors without their consent to finance foreign governments and subsidize competing economies.

Don't call it generosity

During the past week, the appearance of Jerry Hawkins in criminal court in Twin Falls and the newspaper story that followed leave an impression that should be corrected. As attorney for 150 of the growers in the Class Action, I feel the record must be set straight. Excessive banking really should not be the constant statement that advances to growers caused the collapse of the warehouse is nonsense. There may have been a

Idaho

Idaho can't supply enough water to flush salmon to sea

BOISE (AP) - Idaho could drain its extensive system of reservoirs dry and still not offer up enough water to save the region's disappearing salmon runs, a federal panel has learned.

So the best solution remains the so-called "Idaho plan" of drawing down lower Snake River reservoirs, Wayne Haas of the state Department of Water Resources told a sockeye salmon recovery committee meeting Wednesday in Boise.

"You can't pour water on this thing," he said. "You'd have to drain every reservoir in the (Idaho) system. The only other alternative is to lower the pools."

The committee is meeting in the major cities in Oregon, Washington and Idaho to elicit public opinion on the National Marine Fisheries Service's endangered species ruling for the Snake River sockeye.

Only four adult fish made it back to their historic spawning ground at Idaho's Redfish Lake last year, and biologists hope the fertilized eggs from the one female can sustain the run.

Thousands of young salmon die on the way from Idaho to the Pacific Ocean because the water flowing through the dams on the lower Snake and Columbia rivers moves too slowly, Haas said.

Biologists have determined that 140,000 cubic feet per second of water must flow through the dams in the spring to rocket the young salmon smolts through in the desired 152-hour time.

The combined active storage in the major reservoirs of Idaho is only 4.8 million acre-feet of water, Haas said. In ample water years, the necessary travel time could be reached without endangering the state's water supply, but in the current drought it would mean losing vital supplies.

Last March, Gov. Cecil Andrus advised the Salmon Summit convened by Ore. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., that drawing down the lower Snake River reservoirs could increase the water velocity through the pools and have the same effect as flushing water.

Lower Granite Reservoir near Lewiston is being drawn down right now to test the effects on the dams and adjacent roads and levees, as well as marking how fast the stream velocity is through the low reservoir. Little Goose Reservoir will soon be lowered by 20 feet.

The Idaho proposal decreases the Snake reservoirs by 802,000 acre-feet from a storage of 1.76 million acre-feet of average pool. It achieves the right travel time and does not require changing the dam spillways, Haas said.

District won't discipline principal for turning off fire alarm

BOISE (AP) - No disciplinary action will be taken against the Boise High School principal who shut off a fire alarm during a recent fire at the school's gym, Boise School District Superintendent Barney Parker said.

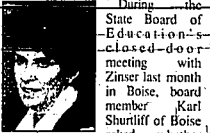

Blossom Turk said all students were out of the gym and fire fighters were on their way when she turned the alarm off March 6.

"I pushed the button so the awful noise would stop," she said.

The fire caused minimal damage. Fire officials said the school's head janitor asked them in late February whether the school could silence manually operated alarms. The fire department said no.

UI account paid bar exam fees

MOSCOW (AP) - University of Idaho President Elizabeth Zinser says she does not believe her discretionary account is subject to Gov. Cecil Andrus' ban on the use of state funds for professional licenses.

During the State Board of Education's closed-door meeting with Zinser last month in Boise, board member Karl Shurtliff of Boise asked whether Zinser was paying $530 in state bar exam fees for the school's special projects director for internal affairs, Georgia Yuan, violated Andrus' 4-year-old executive order.

In a letter to the board's executive director, Rayburn Barton, Zinser said she agreed to pay Yuan's bar exam fees when Yuan was hired. Yuan, who previously was a Pullman, Wash., lawyer, was hired in 1990.

"While she is not university counsel, her work on policy development benefits from her legal training," Zinser wrote. "She wanted to remain current and become a member of the Idaho bar. I concurred."

Zinser said the governor's order prohibits using state funds for professional licenses, but that Yuan's bar exam fees came from a university endowment fund that she can use at her discretion.

"We believe these funds are not restricted by the governor's order," she wrote in her letter dated Feb. 24 that Barton released after the Lewiston Tribune requested it through the state's open records law.

In her letter, Zinser said she assumed the board's attorney or internal auditors had reviewed whether expenditures from the discretionary account complied with the governor's ban.

"As in all matters, I have attempted to be frank and open about the decisions we make and the reasoning used," Zinser wrote. "If this payment from (the fund) is deemed inconsistent with the executive order, I shall make corrections."

Shurtliff said Tuesday he doesn't intend to pursue the issue.

"I wanted an answer and I got an answer," he said. "I don't know that I am satisfied. I will plug it in the data base. It's not a critical or significant issue. It's one more element of information into the data base."

Hydro project hearing finds sole supporter

SHELLEY (AP) - Only one party at a federal hearing on the city of Idaho Falls' proposed hydroelectric project on the Snake River spoke in favor of the plan - Idaho Falls.

Karina Balmforth, 14, has lived near Shelley along one of the last free-flowing stretches of the river all her life. She can get away when she wants and can see all kinds of wildlife.

"It's so peaceful," she told officials from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission at the Tuesday gathering.

Ms. Balmforth was among more than two dozen people who denounced Idaho Falls' longstanding $40 million proposal to build a hydro plant west of Shelley.

FERC seeks public opinion on a draft environmental impact study that recommends Idaho Falls be denied a construction permit.

The draft cited what it termed unacceptable environmental damage to wetlands that are important wildlife habitat.

Caucus results upheld

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho Democratic Party committee has ruled that Bonneville County's disputed presidential preference caucus was conducted in substantial compliance with all rules governing delegate selection.

Several Bonneville County Democrats complained last week that they were shut out of the March 3 caucus because it was run improperly.

The protesters alleged they were not given a second chance to switch their support for Democratic presidential candidates. The 128 caucus participants were allowed to switch once after an initial roll call, but were denied another opportunity after their second choice failed to reach the required 15-percent threshold for state delegates, their complaint said.

The Democratic Party Rules and Bylaws Committee rejected the claim Wednesday. Committee Chairman Dan Williams said confusion at the caucus was regrettable.

GOP ignores Andrus, holds firm on school support

BOISE (AP) — Republican budget writers on Wednesday ignored Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' signals of compromise and reaffirmed their leadership's scaled-back public school aid package for the coming year.

Supporters said the new proposal represented "half a loaf that's better than no loaf at all." But Andrus quickly labeled it unacceptable.

The $196.9 million support plan, $5 million less than Andrus proposed, cleared the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee on a party-line vote after a Democratic alternative was rejected.

Schools received $487.5 million in state aid this year, and education interests had requested over $330 million for 1993-1994.

But Moscow Rep. James Leguis, a moderate Republican who generally backs increased state support for education, said the intransigence of the House Republican majority made considering any higher amount of state aid "a waste of our time and taxpayers' money."

While Andrus had indicated earlier this week that a resolution of the increasingly partisan dispute might be negotiated, neither the approved GOP plan nor the latest Democratic alternative offered much hint of compromise.

Republicans remained adamant that spending any more on schools would create a deficit that only a general tax increase could erase. Democrats contended $501.9 million was still the minimum needed to maintain basic school operations and continue the campaign for education reform.

"We possibly looked under every rock," said Senate Finance Chairman Atwell Parry, R-Melba. "I just couldn't find other funding."

After a coalition of Senate Democrats and moderate Republicans defeated a $396.9 million proposal that included no cash for school reform, GOP leaders shifted $2 million from basic classroom support to reform initiatives 16 counties that opposition.

The bill also offers the prospect of another $5 million in state support, but only if the treasury runs a surplus on June 30, 1993. Even then, that cash would only be of value for the 1993-1994 school year — not the year lawmakers are budgeting for now.

Andrus called the approach a modest step toward reform but a giant step backward for overall education support.

Defense says bar owner not a drug dealer

POCATELLO (AP) — The defense attorney for a Pocatello bar owner accused of cocaine trafficking says his client is a hard-working businessman arrested on circumstantial evidence.

But U.S. District Magistrate Steve Dunn on Monday refused to release John Andrus, 38, on bond pending a May 5 jury trial.

Andrus faces federal charges from an alleged drug conspiracy masterminded by twin brothers Dwayne Keith Filzen, and Wayne Rodney Heim, 43.

The twins were arrested in February and scheduled to appear in federal court again on additional charges in a "superseding" indictment handed down last week by a grand jury.

The bar owner faces separate state charges stemming from the case. Until his arrest on the federal charges on Monday, Andrus was free on a $40,000 property bond.

The four men and two women — Lisa Crystal, 27, and Dyan Patrice Jones, 37 — have pleaded innocent to related charges. Police are searching for Stanley Earl Reed, charged with one count of conspiracy to deliver cocaine.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Monte Stiles contended Andrus was a key trafficker and his Oasis Bar was the hub of drug sales and gambling involving prominent Pocatello businessmen.

Stiles noted a pound of cocaine was found buried in Andrus' back yard and it was doubtful he had no knowledge of it.

Judge's service not relevant, court says

BOISE (AP) — Rejecting the claim that a magistrate judge who serves with the Idaho National Guard violated the state constitution, the federal Court of Appeals has denied a motion for a new trial in a Gem County case.

Norman Hardman was found guilty by jury of the misdemeanor offenses of obstructing and harassing a police officer. A magistrate who is a guardsman bound Hardman over for trial.

Hardman filed a motion for a new trial on the basis the prosecutor withheld vindictive evidence, but the district court denied it. Hardman then appealed, challenging the validity of the hearing based on the judge's military service.

Arson, homicide suspect bound over

BOISE (AP) — A Boise woman who is a suspect in a triple-homicide arson which killed her family has been bound over for arraignment on a grand theft charge, court officials say.

Robin Rowe on Wednesday was scheduled for a March 23 arraignment before 4th District Judge Deborah Bail.

Police say Rowe is a suspect in a Feb. 10 arson fire in which her two children and husband died. No charges have been filed in that case.

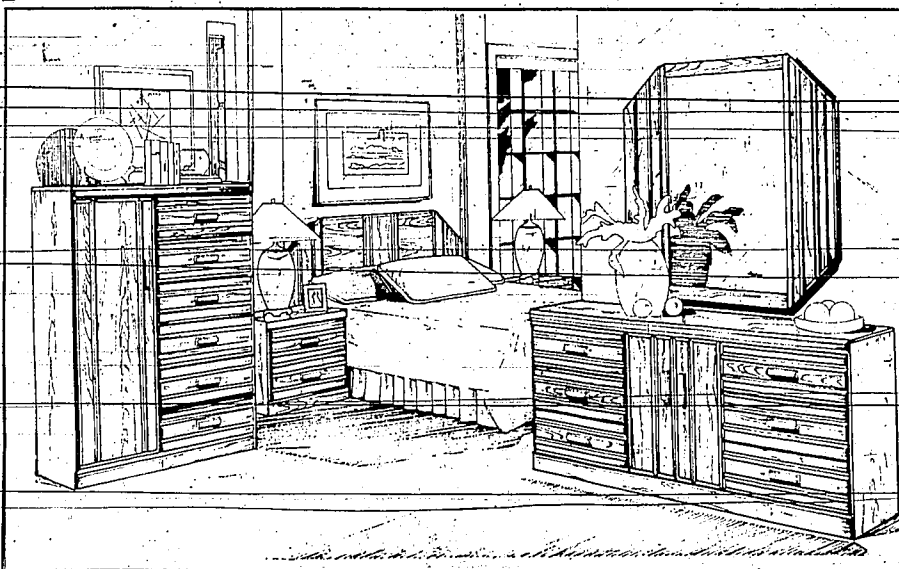

The grand theft charge is in connection with about $1,000 in cash stolen from the Boise YWCA where Rowe worked.

House OKs changing school-fund formula

By Karen Irwin
and Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE - The Idaho House of Representatives on Wednesday narrowly approved changing the formula for distributing state money to public schools - a change that would benefit larger school districts at the expense of smaller ones.

The measure was approved 43-40, Republicans voted 30-25 for the bill, but only 13 of the 28 House Democrats favored it.

If passed by the Senate and signed into law by the governor, the bill would shift $3.6 million from small school districts to big districts over the next three years. Forty-two schools districts would gain funding, 79 would lose and three would remain the same.

Rep. Freeman Duncan, R-Coeur d'Alene, a supporter of the measure, said as long as the state public school budget goes up by at least $3.6 million over three years, no district will lose money.

"Obviously, we support it from the basis that everybody is trying to get all districts to change to a 20-to-1 (student-to-teacher) ratio and some districts are paid more to do that," said Twin Falls Superintendent Terrell Donicht, whose district would have gained $62,889 in state funds last year if the new formula had been in place.

"Larger schools aren't being paid on the same level as smaller ones," he said. "Hopefully it would let us have smaller class sizes."

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," said Shoshone Superintendent Stephen Palaniuk, whose district would have lost $24,641 if the revised formula had been in effect during the 1990-91 school year. "I'm not sure we are really able to provide a fair and equitable education. Smaller schools can't."

Transfer tax bill heads to vote in committee

BOISE - A bill that would allow Blaine County and other resort counties to levy real-estate transfer taxes is scheduled for a vote this morning in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee.

Under the bill, sponsored by Rep. Clint Stennett, D-Ketchum, 60 percent of voters in a resort county would be able to impose a one-half percent tax on buyers of real estate within the county.

The tax could rise by no more than one-half percent a year, up to a maximum of 2 percent, and could last no more than six years.

Blaine County officials and residents told the committee they need the tax to pay for infrastructure improvements and enhanced county-wide services necessitated by tourists and part-time residents. Bonner and Valley counties could also impose such a tax under the bill.

Couple seeks money to pay for son's spine operation

BURLEY - Funds are being raised to help a Burley couple afford costs of a spine operation for their 3-year-old son.

Jordan Koyle, who has cerebral palsy, is scheduled for the operation that may enable him to walk at Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City later this month.

The son of Brad and Jana Koyle, Jordan was diagnosed with mild cerebral palsy when he was 18 months old.

The Koyles say their medical insurance will not pay for the operation estimated at $25,000 and are hopeful Medicaid will pick up at least some of the costs.

Contributions may be made in Jordan's care at First Interstate Bank, 102 W. Main St., in Burley.

Twin Falls conferences will dismiss classes early Friday

TWIN FALLS - Students in the Twin Falls School District will be dismissed at 1:15 p.m. Friday for parent-teacher conferences.

Busing will be provided. Kindergarten students will not attend class at all on Friday.

Spring vacation begins Monday, and classes will resume the following Monday.

Blaine County men sentenced to penitentiary for grand theft

HAILEY - Two Blaine County men who pleaded guilty to grand theft charges involving Twin Falls merchants have been sentenced to serve time in the Idaho State Penitentiary.

Former Sun Valley Co. employee Dennis J. Beaupre, 29, was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary. He had pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit grand theft with Johnny Ray Grider, 26, who pleaded guilty to grand theft. Grider was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary.

The two men were accused of purchasing housewares and electronic appliances from Twin Falls merchants with bad checks and then selling the merchandise in Blaine County.

Both men were sentenced by 5th District Judge James J. May on Monday, according to Blaine County Chief Deputy Prosecutor Fritz Haemmerle.

Wreck near Burley sends Magic Valley pair to hospital

BURLEY - Two Magic Valley men remained hospitalized Wednesday, one day after being injured in an accident near Burley.

Bernhard Nielson, a College of Southern Idaho exchange student living in Filer, remained in serious condition at LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Moises Garcia, 23, of Rupert was reported in satisfactory condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital.

The two were injured when their car went off the road at 5:13 p.m. Tuesday while eastbound on U.S. Highway 30 near Burley, according to the Cassia County Sheriff's Office.

The accident is still being investigated, and no further information was available.

Conservative Beck says he can beat Stallings in race for U.S. Senate

By Karen Irwin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A former state legislator from Boise announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate Wednesday, vowing to send Congressman Richard Stallings "back to being a mediocre history teacher" at Ricks College.

Beck, a conservative 40-year-old Boise real estate agent, told a small group of supporters at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport that he opposes national health insurance and wants lower taxes for families.

Beck the GOP nomination to succeed U.S. Sen. Steve Symms, who is retiring.

Beck's Twin Falls stop was one of a dozen he's making over a 48-hour period throughout the state to announce his candidacy.

He's vying with Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne and Boise stockbroker Milton Erhart for the GOP nomination to succeed U.S. Sen. Steve Symms, who is retiring.

The winner will likely take Stallings, a Democrat who has served in the House of Representatives since 1985, in the November election.

Beck lost his bid for a fourth term in the state Senate two years ago because of his support for House Bill 625 in the 1990 Legislature - legislation that would have banned most abortions in Idaho.

"The right to life is an unalienable right and I will continue to fight for the right to live," he said.

He said abortion could be an issue in the primary because he is staunchly anti-abortion, while Kempthorne and Erhart have different positions.

Erhart is so-called pro-choice and others have characterized Kempthorne as

Andrus asks local leaders for education reform support

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus came to Twin Falls Wednesday to ask for support for his public school budget, calling it a test of support for education reform.

Republicans in the Legislature are at a near standoff with Andrus over public school aid for next year. Andrus and his fellow Democrats want $501.9 million for public schools, including $5 million for educational reform - but Republicans are offering $499.9 million.

"You're going to have to take the bit in your teeth and call your legislators," Andrus told the Twin Falls Rotary Club.

Later in the day, he talked to a group of business leaders and government officials.

Andrus' wide-ranging talk at the later meeting also touched on child abuse prosecution. He wants to firm up that prosecution through the rest of his term, and criticized Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter in the process.

Baxter, a Republican, refused to reply to Andrus' criticism, saying that the issue was too complex to be boiled down to a few statements.

Noting that Baxter isn't running for reelection, Andrus said, "she has been a problem in your county. You'll get a new one, and that will help with this near-bargaining problem."

Baxter said: "I have no idea what he's talking about or in what context, or in what category."

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare last year published a report that said the rate of sex abuse prosecution in Twin Falls County is among the state's lowest. The rate was based on cases that Health and Welfare substantiated.

But Baxter said she had "significant questions" about the report. Very few of the cases Health and Welfare reported in the county made it to her desk, she said at the time.

After a deputy prosecutor met with Health and Welfare, Baxter eventually declined to comment. Local Health and Welfare officials earlier declined to criticize Baxter's office.

Anne McNevin, the department's local family and children's services program manager, said, "The work we do is better than the paper that we leave."

Senate votes to repeal Idaho's 90% attendance rule

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE - Although the 90 percent attendance rule for public schools is new history, senators who voted Wednesday to repeal the controversial Idaho Board of Education rule say they don't want to send the message that going to school isn't important.

Quite the opposite, said Sen. Denton

Darrington, R-DeLo, a junior high school teacher in Burley when he isn't a legislator.

"My view is that a kid should be in school every day unless he has an excused absence," said Darrington, who co-sponsored the bill to repeal the 90 percent rule along with Sen. Bruce Sweeney, D-Lewiston.

The problem, Darrington and Sweeney said, is that the 90 percent rule doesn't lead to anything. In fact, they said, it does the opposite - leading students to believe regular attendance isn't all that important.

The rule, which the board adopted in the mid-1980s, requires students to attend at least 90 percent of the meetings of a class to receive any credit for that class. Since semesters are around 90 days long, that means students had to attend at least 81 days of class.

But critics of the rule, including Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, say students have turned the rule on its head. They've figured out that they can miss up to nine days of school per semester and still get credit for the class, said Black, who sponsored the Public officials tout service, participation to CSI students

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — While watching his friends die all around him during the Korean War, Jesse Berain vowed that if he survived he would dedicate his life to others.

Since then, Berain — a former Twin Falls resident — has worked 36 years in public service, he told College of Southern Idaho students Wednesday at the school's annual U.S. Appreciation Day.

Berain, now a special assistant for Hispanic affairs to Idaho Republican Party Chairman Phil Batt, has seen first hand how getting politically involved can help make positive changes, he said.

Student Sen. Tom Garcia said the meeting was intended to get more students to participate in government. He said studies have shown that students are the most articulate voters.

"It's time that people organize and get out and vote," Garcia said.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter and County Clerk Linda Wright also spoke Wednesday.

In 1955, Berain landed a job in Twin Falls thinning beets. He was so tired after work that he didn't have the strength to eat dinner, he said.

He remembers sitting around talking with Hispanic workers who wished they had a Spanish radio program.

It's time that people organize and get out and vote.

— Tom Garcia, CSI student senator

Berain told his friends he would make it happen and later talked to KTFI radio officials.

"I got them to sponsor a program in 1956," he said. "I can be done."

He told students not to let other people make decisions for them, that they should get involved and make things happen.

President Bush gave Berain, who now lives in Boise, a "Thousand Points of Light" award for his public service.

"The political system is our system and we should be involved to change that system to do the kind of things we care about," he said.

Berain worked for the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Bureau of Land Management, enforcing anti-discrimination laws in Idaho.

He retired 1 1/2 years ago and plans to run for the Legislature, he said.

Baxter, a Republican serving her second term as Twin Falls County's chief lawyer, said she ran for the prosecutor's office when she was 28 and without the votes of young people like herself, it is unlikely she would have been elected.

She told students that she ran a door-to-door, heart-to-heart campaign.

"It was important to find out what people were concerned about, and it was apparent to her that many people thought no one cared about their needs," she said.

But Baxter placed the emphasis on each person to come forward and make their needs and desires known.

"When you have a concern, you can talk to me personally," Baxter said. "You only have to make a phone call."

Elected officials are interested in personal issues, she said.

Wright, a Republican serving her first term, said when she was younger she couldn't wait to turn 21 so she could vote.

"Voting to me is just such a special right," she said.

Young people only have to wait until they turn 18 to vote now, she said.

Anyone who has lived in the county 30 days can vote here, she said. The county has 44 precincts, each with a registrar assigned to register voters.

If someone has voted within the past four years and has not moved or changed his name, he does not have to re-register to vote, she said.

Wright said only 3,000 of 12,000 qualified voters voted in the last election.

"So you see it is time we get concerned and come out and cast your ballot," she said.

Burley Republican on performance audits: Once more, with feeling

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Rep. Bruce Newcomb is nothing if not persistent.

For the past two years, the Burley Republican has been unable to get a bill authorizing the Legislature to audit the performance of state agencies enacted into law.

Newcomb

Last year, a performance-audit bill that Newcomb sponsored cleared the House and the Senate but was vetoed by Gov. Cecil Andrus. The bill he introduced this session passed the House but was bottled up in a Senate committee.

So Newcomb's decided to take a different tact.

On Wednesday, the House approved a constitutional amendment that would permit the Legislature to appoint an inspector general, with the power to — you guessed it — conduct performance audits on every branch, agency or subdivision of state government.

The inspector general, who would have to be a certified, public accountant, would report to both the Legislature and the governor but could only be removed by the Legislature.

"The public is demanding that there be accountability," Newcomb said. "We've tried other avenues on this, so I would point out to the Legislature that if this passes, the Legislature wouldn't be able to implement it until 1993, so the governor won't have to answer to anything until 1994."

Newcomb and other Republicans have charged that the Legislature's Democrats oppose performance audits because they fear they might embarrass Andrus, whose term ends in January 1995.

The only person to speak against the bill, in fact, was Minority Leader Jim Stoeckhoff. D-Sandpoint. Stoeckhoff said he didn't mind the idea of performance audits but would rather have outside contractors, not a new bureaucracy, do them.

"The private sector doesn't understand the difference between government and the private sector," Newcomb responded. "You're not just looking at the bottom line. You're looking at providing a service and meeting your mission statement."

The proposed amendment, which requires a two-thirds vote of both the House and the Senate, just managed to attract the 56 votes it needed in the 84-member House.

All those votes were Republican, which makes the bill's future in the Senate — which is split 21-21 between Democrats and Republicans — iffy at best.

Newcomb was optimistic, though, that his proposal would pass the Senate and go before the voters this November.

"I think this one has enough wiggle room that they can get behind it," he said after the vote.

Several representatives switched back and forth before the final tally showed the bill had just enough votes to pass. Rep. Cecil Guld, R-Buhl — who doubles as Newcomb's wife — then brought down the House when she asked, in mock-innocence, "Mr. Speaker, would it be too late to change my vote?"

To her husband's relief, Guld stayed in the "aye" column.

Formula

Nine of the 12 Magic Valley representatives in the House voted against the bill, including Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, a member of the House Education Committee.

"Any time you take from someone and give to someone else, somebody gets hurt," he said.

But co-sponsor, W.O. "Bill" Taylor, R-Nampa, said arguments over school size missed the point. "It's a fairness issue," he said.

Rep. Hiram Steiger, R-Boise, said the current formula is unfair because it sends more state funding to rural schools.

"For the last 12 years (since the formula was changed), small schools have had the advantage of getting thousands of dollars more per classroom unit," he said.

But Black didn't buy that argument.

"It costs proportionately more to provide the same services. There are certain fixed costs that stay the same no matter how many students you have in class," he said.

"One of the things that happens is that people feel big is better, but I don't think so," said Superintendent Michael Stefanie, whose Dietrich School District would have lost $14,109 last year. "Our school, for example, has a zero dropout rate. If you see that as a criterion I wonder if we ought to get more than the big schools."

"If we will love that much money something will have to give," he said. "The programs will be tightened up. The rich get rich. The poor get poor."

Norman Hurst, superintendent of the Magic Valley's second-largest school district, said the change wouldn't mean much to the Cassia County schools.

"I don't have that strong a feeling about it one way or another," he said. "If we have an increase of $8,000, that is an insignificant amount. We get about $9 million in state funds."

short, Andrus predicted a plethora of override levies on property taxes. If the Legislature comes around to his side, he predicted an improved educational system.

School reform isn't optional, he said at the afternoon meeting with the business leaders and government officials.

"We have to do it," he said. "We have to get rid of some of those deadheads who are standing in the way."

Andrus wants to use money for smaller school reforms, such as various class sizes, at a dozen or so school districts in the state to prove the reforms work.

"Then the rest of the state will demand it," he said.

He also called for reducing the number of superintendents throughout the state.

"I think it's ridiculous to have 113 superintendents in this state," he said. He suggested that only 40 or 50 are necessary.

in the middle," Beck said.

Kempthorne has said he supports abortion only in cases of rape, incest or when the life of the mother is in jeopardy.

Beck said he'd oppose federally imposed employment quotas.

"Bigotry is wrong, however, equality is right," he said. "We don't need quota bills."

He said he would support President Bush's tax cut for the middle class, but added that it was not enough.

Overtaxing of American is forcing both spouses to work and consequently cutting down on time available to spend with children, Beck said.

He said Congress should abolish the National Endowment for the Arts, an agency that conservatives say supports obscene art.

Stallings votes for the blasphemous and pornographic material from the NEA," he said.

Beck also promised to make an issue of congressional check-bouncing. Stallings has admitted that he wrote six non-sufficient funds checks on the non-defunct House Bank.

"An inadvertent error? I don't know," he said. "I happen to keep track of my checks. They set themselves up as regal royal aristocrats."

"We need to kick the bums out and get a new set of bums to reform the system," he added.

who voted against the bill, said it was important to maintain some standard, no matter how imperfect.

"We're looking at half a billion dollars for the public schools," Gung said. "If the taxpayers are going to be putting in that much money, the kids should have to be there."

Repeat supporters don't dispute that, but say the issue is best resolved on the local, not the state, level.

"I hope the state board stays out of this," Darrington said. "It should be the local boards' responsibility to adopt attendance policies that let the kids know they should be in school every day unless they have a good reason."

The House is scheduled to vote today on a companion bill that would give local school districts full responsibility.

Besides encouraging skipping school, Darrington said, the rule makes it difficult for students to participate in out-of-classroom activities, such as debate club or student government.

Sweeney added that students having trouble in school, who are more likely to skip class anyway, often miss more than nine days, despite it isn't worth staying in school if they can't get any credit and drop out completely.

"We were hurting the best and the poorest students," he said. "The best students need to be challenged, not forced to stay in the classroom, and the system doesn't allow for that. Meanwhile, the poorest students are effectively eliminated from the system."

Ironically, Sweeney made the motion last session that killed a similar bill. But he says that since then, he's become convinced that the 90-percent attendance rule was counterproductive.

The repeal, which passed the House 75-8 two weeks ago, passed the Senate Wednesday on a 33-7 vote. Sen. Terry Haun, D-Emmett, who voted against the bill, said it was important to maintain some standard, no matter how imperfect.

"We're looking at half a billion dollars for the public schools," Gung said. "If the taxpayers are going to be putting in that much money, the kids should have to be there."

Repeat supporters don't dispute that, but say the issue is best resolved on the local, not the state, level.

"I hope the state board stays out of this," Darrington said. "It should be the local boards' responsibility to adopt attendance policies that let the kids know they should be in school every day unless they have a good reason."

Paul A. Schwarz
EDEN — Paul August Schwarz, 68, of Eden, went to rest in the arms of his Lord and Savior on Tuesday, March 17, 1992, in Mesa, Ariz.

He and his wife had been winter residents in Arizona for the past 12 years. He was born June 5, 1923, in Eden. He was a lifetime member of the Eden-Trinity Lutheran Church.

His life focused around his church, family and friends. He did not seek the world's acclaim, his goal was to rear his children with respect and love. He was a devoted husband, father and grandfather. His greatest joy came from worshipping with his family, supporting them at sporting events, fishing and being surrounded by them at picnics and dinners. He greatly loved his grandchildren, Xavria, Mandy and Lindi, and looked forward to the birth of an expected grandchild.

He will be sorely missed by his wife, Mary, with whom he shared his life for over 43 years. He also leaves behind his son, Rusty of Eden, with whom he farmed for about 20 years. His daughters, Toni Chapman of Kimberly and Cindy Morrison of Twin Falls, also deeply feel the void that their father's death has left. He has left us with many treasured memories of love, compassion and good natured company.

Paul held a number of offices at his church. He was instrumental in establishing the First Segregation Fire District and served as a director for 16 years. He was a member of the Eden American Legion and proudly defended his country during World War II, for which he received a Purple Heart.

He was preceded in death by his father and mother, T.J. and Alma Schwarz. Other family members that grieve his passing are his sisters, Lillian Schutte of Twin Falls, Irma Martons and Melba Hagemann of Eden and Florence Luiz of Royal City, Wash.; his brothers, Larry of Hazelton and Berrie of Salmon. He is also survived by 22 nieces and nephews and many dear friends.

Funeral services are pending. A memorial fund has been established and can be directed to the Trinity Lutheran Church in Eden.

School board accepts Minidoka County calendar for next year

By Laurie Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - Next year's Minidoka County School District calendar has been accepted by the school board.

Spokesman for the calendar committee, John "Doc" Dockter, presented the School Board with the committee's recommendation, asking that the proposed dates stay the same for several years.

"Our main goal was to coincide with Cassia County," Dockter said.

"It has come to our attention that there are a number of problems when one district is out of school and the other is in, such as children visiting and parents who work in one district and their children attend schools in the other district."

Another goal of the committee was to set up a multi-year calendar, according to Dockter.

"Parents who plan vacations in advance want to know when spring break is going to be next year, and also the city needs to know when school will let out, so they can plan their summer activities," he said.

School will begin on Aug. 26, and will let out for Labor Day on Sept. 7, Nov. 26 and 27 were set aside for Thanksgiving break.

Classes will let out on Dec. 23 for Christmas vacation with school re-opening on Jan. 4. Presidents Day vacation will be Feb. 15 and Spring break will be March 15 to 19. Good Friday holiday will be April 9, and school will conclude on May 28.

Also at the same school board meeting 13 bids were received for the removal of contaminated soil at the Heyburn bus garage. Fuel tanks were removed from that site earlier this year, and contaminated soil was discovered.

Of the 13 bids, the highest was over $28,000. The contract was awarded to Kloepper, Inc. of Paul which bid $12,910.

"We really appreciate the bid Kloepper has given us," Assistant Superintendent Bert Nixon. "We feel that it's really a donation to the school district in a way."

John Kloepper said his firm will haul the contaminated soil to the landfill for $3.50 a yard, and bring in fill dirt and compact it for $2.65 a yard.

The Minidoka County Landfill will donate the fill dirt, and the County will also donate gravel for the project.

Nixon said the contamination is not widespread, so the cleanup should not take long. Kloepper told the board the project should not take them more than a week to complete.

Public hearing will address trade offers for state land

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - Four separate trade offers involving 683 acres of state land at the southeast base of Bald Mountain will be discussed in a public hearing at the Blaine County Courthouse tonight.

The hearing, which will include opportunities for public testimony, begins at 7 p.m. in the second-floor Planning and Zoning Conference Room.

"We invited each person who made a proposal to describe their offer at the hearing," said Jay Bildeau, chief of the Idaho Department of Lands Bureau of Real Estate.

Only one trade proposal for the land has been formally addressed by the State Board of Land Commissioners, which has the authority to make the swap.

Heidi Baldwin, a Ketchum real estate agent, proposed a three-way trade last July involving her 40-acre mining claim on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and Forest Service lands in the Lime Creek area near Hill City. Baldwin would get 16 to 20 acres of the state land in Clear Creek Canyon in exchange for her mining claims, which the state would then trade for the Forest Service grazing lands in Lime Creek.

Opposition to Baldwin's proposal at the Land Board's meeting in January, and subsequent offers of other exchanges, prompted the Board to request public hearings. The hearing in Boise will be followed by a second public hearing in Boise on April 6.

Dennis Perron, owner of Perron's Market in Ketchum, has proposed trading 525 acres near the Interstate 84 interchange north of Twin Falls for the entire 683 acres of state land in Clear Creek, which lies west of Highway 75 just two miles south of Ketchum.

Perron is in the process of acquiring the 1-84 interchange land from the Bureau of Land Management in exchange for property he owns in Slaughterhouse Gulch east of Bellevue.

Bildeau noted that over 300 acres of the 1-84 interchange land lies within the highway right-of-way and would be of questionable value to the state, which already owns a mile-and-a-half of Highway 75 frontage in that area.

Staff analysis of Perron's proposal, he said, suggests that the 525 acres north of Twin Falls would be worth just 36 acres in Clear Creek Canyon in exchange.

Complicating the exchange proposals is the fact that the state land in Clear Creek Canyon currently has no assigned legal access. Without access, the Department of Lands has determined that the value of the 43 acres closest to Highway 75 is worth $388,000, or $9,000 an acre.

With access, the same parcel of land would be worth $1.1 million, or $25,500 an acre.

In her exchange proposal, Baldwin has included an offer of access to the adjoining 640 acres of state land. This would increase the value of the remaining state land from $708,000 to $1.6 million, according to the Department of Lands.

A third proposal, recently put forward by the Biedeback family, also offers the state access. The Biedebacks own the Highway 75 frontage that blocks in the state land in Clear Creek Canyon. They have offered, through attorney Jim Jones, to give the state as much of their land along the highway as it will take to acquire the 43-acre parcel in Clear Creek.

The state would retain ownership of the 640 acres of land further west and have access to it, according to the proposal.

The BLM has also expressed interest in both the 43-acre and 640-acre parcels, Bildeau said.

A "conceptual exchange plan agreement" for land swaps between the state and the Shoshone District of the BLM included the Clear Creek parcels as ones the federal public lands agency would like to acquire.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game and the Wood River Environmental Alliance have both opposed exchanging the state lands into private ownership because of the potential loss of wildlife habitat.

Principal looks to fill kindergarten post

By Laurie Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - A kindergarten teacher at Memorial Elementary will be leaving the district and the state in April.

Margaret Trahem, a six-year veteran teacher with the Minidoka School District, has asked to be released from her contract on April 3 - before the end of the school year.

Trahem and her family will be moving to Des Moines, Iowa, where her husband will be employed.

Principal Charles Baker said it is with regret the board will see Trahem leave, but he is looking at two people who could fill her position for the remainder of the school year.

"She has been with me at Memorial since we first began the kindergarten program, and I hate to see her go," Baker said. "I hired her as a music teacher when the kindergarten job came up, she wanted to take it. She has been a wonderful teacher."

Also at the school board meeting: The board approved a trustee resolution for the upcoming elections. Zone two and three are up for election this year. Currently, Russ Holland and Warren Snyder hold those positions. Neither of the incumbents have stated if they plan to run again. The deadline to file is May 1.

The board voted to provide the Minico Business Club with $3,944, nearly half of the money needed to cover expenses for the students who plan to attend a National Conference April 28 to May 3 in Cincinnati.

Three-year adviser Cheryl Killey told the board that 13 students have met the qualifications and plan to attend the conference.

Under the direction of district officials, the board planned a sealed bid sale of surplus items from the remodeling of the district office, which was completed recently. Assistant Superintendent Bert Nixon said the deadline for submitting sealed bids will be April 14 at 1 p.m.

Trustees approved the appointment of two volunteer coaches for the Minico softball program. They will be Kenna Kowitz and Carol Davis.

Motorcycle club sponsors annual rally

CALDWELL - The Idaho Vintage Motorcycle Club is sponsoring its annual rally this weekend.

Classic and antique motorcycle enthusiasts from 10 states and Canada will attend the two-day event that features an open house, ride, banquet, indoor show and swap meet.

The rally gets under way Saturday at 1:30 p.m. and includes a ride to the Snake River and Lake Lowell slated for 3 p.m. The banquet will be at 6 p.m. at Jade Gardens.

Antique bikes will be featured at a show at 10 a.m. at the high school, 23rd and Blaine on Sunday.

There is a $3 admission. Bikes date to 1910 and classics, dirt bikes, and road racers from the 1920s to the 1970s will also be featured.

Interested people are invited to enter the show, sell bikes or parts in the swap meet. All entries must be at least 10 years old and no customized or chopper bikes are allowed.

There will also be a display of vintage bicycles with about 40 from 1905 to the 1960s.

Entries may be anything from rusty old junkers to restored show bikes. For more information, call Richard Renstrom at 459-8786.

Ranger district seeks comment on grazing allotment

CLAYTON - The Yankees' Fork Ranger District of the Challis National Forest is looking for public comment on new grazing allotment management plans.

Forest officials propose to develop new allotment management plans for the Basin Creek, Little Basin Creek, Peach Creek and Thompson Creek grazing allotments. They also propose to open the Upper Hardin Creek watershed to cattle grazing.

CSI beats South Plains in OT

By Mike Maller

Times-News sports editor

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — By keeping his head while falling on his behind, Craig Tyson helped College of Southern Idaho clinch an 87-84 overtime win over South Plains of Texas at Hutchinson Sports Arena Wednesday night.

Tyson's falling down assist of a Clayton Johnson layup with five seconds left put the Golden Eagles in the semifinals of the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament.

The Eagles have today off before facing Three Rivers of Poplar Bluff, Mo., at 6 p.m.-MST Friday.

Decided closely, Tyson called high in the air to snare a long pass-breaking pass from Lance Jackson. Coming to a horizontal landing, Tyson flipped a six-foot pass to Johnson before moving enough for a travelling call.

"As I was falling down I saw him," Tyson said. "He ran to an open spot. I saw the yellow jersey. I just got it to him the best way I could."

South Plains' Kirby Williams got off a 3-point attempt at the buzzer that went a couple inches long of a tying basket.

The Eagles never trailed in the overtime but seldom led in the second half of regulation.

CSI's relentless pressure on defense wore the Texans down but not out. The Eagles only missed scoring was an 8.0 run that gave CSI a 72-69 lead with 3:29 left.

"We just don't play the kind of game to blow people out," said CSI Coach Fred Trenkle.

Two missed shots and two missed free throws kept the Eagles from increasing that edge and ending the game in regulation.

Artie Griffin's putback of a missed free throw tied the game for South Plains with 55 seconds left.

A pass into a crowd gave the Texans the ball back with 23 seconds to go. CSI's defense kept South Plains from getting off anything better than a hurried 3-point attempt with five seconds remaining.

In the overtime, CSI got the tip and a basket from Jackson. The Texans answered, but a 3-pointer by Jackson gave the Eagles the lead for good.

South Plains' biggest player was 6-5, 215-pound Terry Alexander, who hurt the Eagles with 23 points.

Even without a towering inside presence, the Texans led by eight at halftime and again with 1:34 to play in the game.

"Quickness always has a way of taking things away from you," Trenkle said. "But even the biggest leads of South Plains didn't look solid."

CSI scored the first six points of the second half and had several runs that just

Auto racer dies after crash in endurance championship

SEBRING, Fla. — Mark Kent died of injuries suffered Wednesday in a crash during opening practice for the IMSA Firestone Firehawk Endurance Championship Grand Sports race.

Kent's BMW M3 went off course at a turn at Sebring International Raceway. The car slammed into a safety barrier before coming to rest against a spectator camping bus located in a parking area.

Safety crews removed the Kent, and he was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center where he was pronounced dead. No spectator injuries were reported.

Holyfield's older brother dies after shooting in Atlanta

ATLANTA — Willie Holyfield, older brother of heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield, was shot and killed early Wednesday at his home in southwest Atlanta, police said.

"Homicide Sgt. Tom King said Willie Holyfield's brother-in-law, Michael Lucas, 35, was arrested and charged with murder."

King said Lucas, who lived around the corner from Willie Holyfield, came to the house about 4 a.m. armed with a .12-gauge shotgun.

Hospital upgrades condition of California's Matt Keough

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Matt Keough's condition was upgraded today from serious to fair as the California Angels pitcher continued to recover from being hit in the head by a foul ball.

Keough was scheduled to move out of the intensive care unit into a regular room late Wednesday at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

Further tests were planned on Keough, who underwent emergency brain surgery Monday night, hours after being hit in the right temple while sitting in the dugout during an exhibition game between California and San Francisco. He was taken off the critical list Tuesday.

Duke opens against Fighting Camels

The Associated Press

Not since UCLA's dynasty ended in 1973, with the Bruins winning their seventh consecutive title and ninth in 10 years, has a team won two straight NCAA basketball championships. Duke wants to end the drought.

The Blue Devils, who beat Kansas in the 1991 title game, were ranked No. 1 every week this season and are seeded No. 4 in the tournament. They open defense of their title against Campbell on Thursday in the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C.

"This is the first time we know we can win the national championship," Duke guard Brian Davis said. "In the past, maybe there's been some apprehension. There have been some other good teams."

"We know how it's done, we know how to get there. All the things that we needed, we can provide."

Duke has gotten to the Final Four in five of the past six years, including losses in the title games to Louisville in 1986 and UNLV in 1990.

The Blue Devils (28-2) should have little trouble with the Fighting Camels (19-11), a small Baptist school located 35 miles south of Raleigh, N.C.

Camels' coach Billy Lee doesn't hold out much hope for his players.

"We're in a sword fight with a pocket knife," Lee said.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, recalling that the Blue Devils were nearly upset by Mississippi Valley State in the first round in 1986, isn't so sure his team will breeze past Campbell.

"We have to be ready to go," he said. "Campbell's had a great year."

The Duke-Campbell game is the third of four games at the Greensboro Coliseum. It will be preceded by Seton Hall (21-8) vs. La Salle (20-10) and Missouri (20-8) vs. West Virginia (20-11) and followed by Texas (23-11) vs. Iowa (18-10).

In the Southeast Regional at Cincinnati, it's North Carolina (21-9) vs. Miami, Ohio (23-7), Alabama (25-8) vs. Stanford (18-10), Ohio State (23-5) vs. Mississippi Valley State (16-13) and Nebraska (19-9) vs. Connecticut (19-9).

In the Midwest Regional at Milwaukee, the pairings are Arkansas (25-7) vs. Murray State (17-12), Memphis State (20-10) vs. Pepperdine (23-6), Georgia Tech (21-11) vs. Houston (25-5) and Southern Cal (23-5) vs. Northeast Louisiana (19-9).

In the West Regional at Boise, the matchups are Georgetown (21-9)-South Florida (19-9), Florida State (20-9)-Montana (27-3), LSU (20-9)-Brigham Young (25-6), and Indiana (23-6)-Eastern Illinois (17-13).

Boise regional boasts some of biggest stars

The Associated Press

BOISE — Bob Knight, Dale Brown, John Thompson, Staquell O'Neal and Lorenzo Mourning.

When it comes to fiery coaches and towering all-Americans, no NCAA first-round tournament site can match Boise.

"I think this is as exciting as any of the brackets when you look at those coaches and some of the players," Florida State coach Pat Kennedy said.

An unhappy Knight brings his fifth-ranked Indiana Hoosiers to Idaho after losing to Purdue 61-59 in their season finale, probably blowing a No. 1 tournament seed in the process.

Instead, Indiana heads West as the No. 2 seed, behind UCLA, which is playing in the Tempe, Ariz., half of the bracket.

Knight wouldn't talk after the loss to Purdue and he skipped his weekly radio show Monday night.

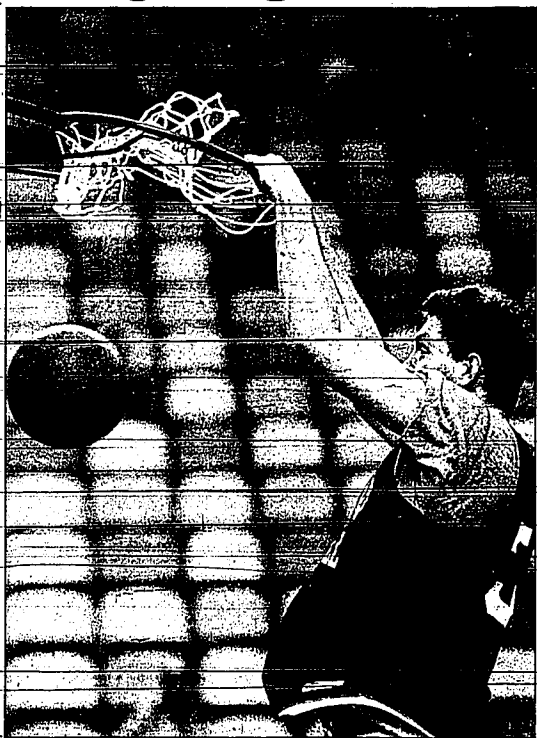

It will be awhile before he's heard from in Idaho, too. His team will be the last of the eight to hold a news conference at Boise State University Monday morning.

Indiana (22-6) plays tournament newcomer Eastern Illinois (17-13) in the final first-round game tonight.

If Indiana wins as expected, Knight could go up against Dale Brown's Louisiana State team in the second round Saturday. To say Knight and Brown aren't friends is a major understatement.

But the two have one thing in common. Both are coming off emotional bench displays and both are not pleased with the recent developments involving their teams.

While Indiana has lost two of its last three games, a brawl in the Tigers' Southeastern Conference quarterfinal game against Tennessee last Friday sent Brown running onto the court.

Above, Stanford center Adam Keefe slams home a basket during practice Wednesday in Cincinnati's Riverfront Coliseum. Stanford meets Alabama today. NFL owners change decision on instant replay

The Associated Press

PHOENIX — After six seasons of overseeing on-field officials, the controversial instant replay was killed by NFL owners Wednesday, a move one of the league's most influential officials labeled stupid and others called avoidable.

After five years of barely surviving by the minimum votes needed, replay was shelved for the 1992 season when it fell four votes short of the 21 needed from the 28 teams.

Upon further review by the NFL office, which will begin immediately, it could be reinstated with changes as early as 1993. But for now, it's gone, generating the same emotions on its demise as it did during its existence.

"I perceive it as stupidity on the part of our league," said Jim Finks, president of the New Orleans Saints and chairman of the rules-making committee. That body had approved replay by a 4-3 margin after voting against it last year.

"I think it's a step backward for the National Football League," Finks said. "I think we're going to regret the day we voted it down and I think we'll have it back in. It's been a real tool that other sports would like to have."

Opponents didn't see it that way. "In theory instant replay is great. In practice it stinks," Philadelphia Eagles owner Norman Braman said.

"I think we brought the human element back to the game," said Ralph Wilson, owner of the Buffalo Bills, another of the 11 teams to vote against it. "The officials on the field are part of it and I think we gave them a vote of confidence."

Instant replay was first instituted for the 1986 season after being pushed for years by Tex Schramm, former president of the Dallas Cowboys and Finks' predecessor as head of the competition committee. It was approved then for a year by the bare minimum of 21 votes.

But calls were uneven and delays annoyed players and fans. Replay barely survived through five more years as Schramm and commissioners Pete Rozelle and Paul Tagliabue pushed for renewal.

This year though, neither Tagliabue, Finks nor any other of the "strong proponents could save it, even in the face of highly visible correct calls."

January's Super Bowl, replay negated a touchdown call by Washington's Art Monk.

"I think they're going to be more embarrassed than ever next year, because you're going to have some obviously wrong calls that could be overturned and in 10 seconds and they're going to make the difference in games," ABC announcer Al Michaels said.

Golden Eagles hope to stay perfect against Dixie

By Karen Lewis

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho baseball team hopes to improve its record to 7-0 against Dixie College Friday and Saturday.

CSI and Dixie will play double headers each day at 1 p.m. at Frontier Field in Twin Falls.

Earlier this year the 13-8 Golden Eagles beat Dixie 3-1 and 7-4 at Dixie and 42-4 in a tournament in Mesquite, Nev., and Coach Jim Walker sees no reason why this weekend should be any different.

Dixie will be coming off a double header Thursday at Ricks and then will play four games here, Walker said. The Rebels' overloaded schedule should play right into the hands of CSI.

Walker said Dixie will be forced to use up its pitchers, while CSI can go with strong, rested starters. But he said if the Golden Eagles let the Rebels stay close, they could win.

"They can find a way to get a big hit, although their pitching talent is way down this year," he said.

Last weekend, when the Eagles posted a 4-4 mark at the TVCC Invitational, the CSI pitchers realized they can't blow the opponent away with a 90 mph fast ball, they have to use some savvy, Walker said.

"We've found out in the last couple of weeks who and what role most people will play on the team," Walker said. "Over the weekend we had some good pitching performances; they're really come on."

One reason the pitching improved this weekend, Walker said, was because pitching coach John Hughes and Walker called the pitches.

"If we don't, they don't play," he said. Thirty scouts were at the tournament last weekend and alluded to the lack of pitching and the passiveness of the players at the tournament he said.

"We've been a very passive club," Walker said. "We show very little emotion when we play. Personally, I'm a rah-rah guy."

Ball State-Utah matchup in NIT pits coach against former team

The Associated Press

Ball State's first round National Invitation Tournament matchup at Utah tonight comes complete with a little extra baggage.

... This is a well-thought-out, discussed and unique matchup they have made.

Ball State coach Dick Hunsaker said, "It's not an afterthought. We will have one of the most unique games in the entire postseason."

What makes it special is that Utah coach Rick Majerus coached at Ball State for two years and led the Cardinals to their best record ever (29-3) in 1988-89 with some of the same players he will be facing Thursday.

Purdue (16-14), Richmond (22-7) at Florida (16-12), Rhode Island (20-9) at Vanderbilt (15-14), Southern Illinois (22-7) at Boston College (16-13), Long Beach State (18-11) at Texas Christian (22-10), Louisiana Tech (23-7) at New Mexico (18-12), and Arizona State (18-13) at UC Santa Barbara (20-8).

The first round, which began Wednesday night with six games, will be completed Friday night with James Madison (21-10) at Rutgers (15-14).

Minnesota was at Washington State in the late game.

Ball State has had 20 victory seasons in each of Hunsaker's three years as head coach. That matches the Cardinals' three 20-plus seasons in the last three years.

reaching the NCAA's round of 16 in 1990 before losing to eventual champion Nevada Las Vegas 69-67, and losing to Cincinnati 82-55 in the first round of the NIT last year.

With 24 victories this season, they had hoped to return to the NCAA, but were left out of the 64-team field. In the NIT, they hope to prove the snub was a mistake.

"We have to put the disappointment of not making the NCAA's behind us and go out and try to beat our old coach at Utah," Cardinals' senior Keith Stallone said.

"We want to show coach Majerus how much Chandler (Thompson), Mike Spicer and I have improved."

Wisconsin-Green Bay, the winning team not to make the NCAA, also feels slighted at being omitted and will try and take out its disappointment on its NIT opponents.

"I believe we belong," coach Dick Bennett said. "It leaves the impression that our season wasn't special and I think that's unfair to everybody connected with the team."

Well-balanced Eagles poised to repeat as regional track champs

By Jeff Hoskinson, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Coming off an eighth-place finish at the NJCAA indoor championships, the College of Southern Idaho enters the outdoor track and field season full of optimism.

"Our girls did a fantastic job at Nationals," said Eagles Coach Rick Neill. "We are hoping that the success will carry over to the outdoor season."

Added optimism comes from the cast of athletes Neill has assembled for this year's squad.

"On paper, we have one of the best teams ever. Hopefully we will be able to do it on the track."

The Eagles enter the 1992 season as the defending Region 18 champions on the men's side and appear to have what it will take to defend that title.

For the first time in a while, the Eagles have a well-balanced team. "We have people who should be able to score points at the region meet in every event," Neill said.

The men have 12 athletes back from last year's championship team. The ladies return only two, but replaced up quality freshmen.

Leading the way are sophomores Roger Thomas, Wakeen Ponds, Lonnie Rogers, Mark Sanchez, and Benny Covarrubia.

Thomas and Covarrubia lead a solid crew of middle and long distance runners who proved their worth during the cross country season by finishing second in the region. Thomas already has two top eight finishes in the indoor national meet in the 800-meter and 1,000-yard runs.

Thomas is the defending region champion in the 10,000 meters, but was only the No. 3 man on the cross country team. Ahead of him were freshmen Jon Biles and Clyde Goodrich.

Last fall he finished fourth at the region — cross country — meet. Goodrich, a farmer from Oakley, provided the squad with leadership during the cross country season where he finished 10th in the region.

Sophomores Mark Mathis, Travis Shew, and Stacey Thomas give the Eagles added experience with freshmen Jeff Lien and Ryan Clark.

Mathis finished third in the statechampionship last spring and Thomas was second in the 10,000. Transfer Corey Bramley and Terry Ballard could help the Eagles pick up points at the regionals.

Ponds and Rogers lead a formidable crew of sprinters and hurdlers. The duo returns as champions in the 100, 200, and 400. Ponds collected the two short sprint titles and Rogers claimed the long sprint.

Joining them in the sprints are freshmen Dennis Atkinson and Richard Jones. Atkinson, of Middleton, was the Idaho A-1 400-meter champion last spring. Jones, of Kent, Wash., was the 1000-meter champion two years ago. Last year the Eagles were in need of hurdlers. This year they have four: Scott Miller and Nathan Burnside are the leaders with Justin Garner and Robert Fowler not far behind.

In the jumping events, the Eagles will miss Will Dozier, who finished in the top four nationally in the long and triple jumps last year. Trying to fill in are freshmen Harry Tillman, Monay Green, and Lance Chavez.

Tillman, of Fountain, Colo., was that state's champion in the long jump. Green, Richland, Washington, and Chavez, of Mountain Home, are state champions in the triple jump.

One area the Eagles were weak last year was the throwing events. Over the summer Neill went out and found a crew of throwers.

Sanchez leads the way in the throwing events for the Eagles. He is the school record holder in the javelin and has looked good in practice. Joining Sanchez are sophomores Jared Rye and Chris Bandy and freshmen Jorge Ballerino, Chris Coburn, Bryan

Severin, Lloyd Tibebu, and Scott Zandel.

Rye and Coburn are expected to be the leaders in the hammer with Ballerino and Severin joining Sanchez in the javelin. Bandy, Zandel and Tibebu will be looked upon to provide points in the long and discus.

Roundout the men's team are the guys who do everything — the decathletes. Brad Duke leads the group and is joined by freshmen Garner and Eric Nyberg. Garner was the 10th place finisher in the pentathlon at the outdoor nationals.

The women are led by freshmen Michelle Jensen, Brady Morrison, Julie Welker, Terra Barter, Heather Wilks, and sophomore Margeret Kielczewska. All six placed at the indoor nationals.

400 indoors and eighth in the 200. Morrison, Filer, was fourth in the pentathlon and should finish on the top five in the heptathlon at the outdoor meet.

Welker, of Leon, Idaho, was fourth in the 800 and will be looking to duplicate that feat outdoors. Barter is from Sarlat, British Columbia, Canada and just missed making the final of the 400 indoors. Outdoors she will compete in the 400 hurdles. Wilks, of Salt Lake City, competed in the indoor meet in the 200.

The foursome of Bynum, Welker, Wilks, and Barter combine to give the Eagles one of the best 6000-meter relay teams in the country. They finished fifth at the indoor meet in that event.

Kielczewska was an all-American last year in the shot and repeated that indoors this year. Neill is hoping for a repeat performance outdoors.

Jensen will be expected to provide added strength in the sprints and jumps. Malden, the Eagles' second thrower to face the Vikings with.

Cleveland's cold shooting gives Celtics win

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Doc Brown hit the winning three-point play with 32 seconds left, and Cleveland missed two 3-point shots in the last five seconds as the Boston Celtics beat the Cavaliers 96-94 Wednesday night.

The loss broke a five-game winning streak for the Cavaliers, who played without Brad Doughty, their top scorer and rebounder, because of a stomach ailment.

The Celtics, led by Kevin McHale and Reggie Lewis with 20 points each, took a 93-88 lead on Larry Bird's 14-footer with 1:10 left. Five consecutive points by Larry Nance, who led Cleveland with 24 points, tied the score 93-93 with 46 seconds to go.

Brown then scored on a give-and-go with Bird, was fouled by John Williams and sank the free throw. Nance made one free throw with 15 seconds left and missed the second, but the ball went out of bounds off Lewis.

Pistons 91, 76ers 85. AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Dennis Rodman had 16 points and 25 rebounds, and Detroit took advantage of Charles Barkley's ejection to beat Philadelphia.

"The victory was the eighth in nine games for the Pistons and the fifth loss in six outings for the 76ers."

The game was tied 76-76 with 8:38 to play before two baskets by Darrell Walker, sandwiched around Armon Gilliam's free throw, gave the Pistons an 80-77 lead with 6:07 left.

Bill Lumberg's jumper gave the Pistons an 86-81 edge with 1:50 left before Barkley was ejected by referee Bill Sarj for arguing a no-call on a drive to the basket a few minutes earlier.

Magic 99, Hawks 96. ATLANTA (AP) — Scott Skiles hit four free throws in the final 13 seconds as Orlando snapped a six-game road losing streak by defeating Atlanta.

Skiles' two free throws, with 12.8 seconds left, gave the Magic a 97-96 lead, their first since the second quarter.

The Hawks didn't get a shot off on their first possession as Rumeal Robinson's pass was stolen by Anthony Bowie.

Pacers 116, Heat 111. OT. MIAMI (AP) — Michael Williams scored 26 points, including seven free throws in overtime, as Indiana scored its final 12 points from the line against Miami.

Chuck Person scored 27 points and Reggie Miller 23 for the Pacers, who pulled 12 games in front of the Heat in the Eastern Conference playoff race. Glen Rice had 21 of his 26 points in the first half and Rony Seakaly finished with 24 points and 14 rebounds for Miami.

Spurs 118, Kings 89. SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sean Elliott scored 26 points, including eight during a 20-2 run midway through the game, as San Antonio handed Sacramento its 10th consecutive loss.

David Robinson, playing with a sprained left hand, had 14 points and 15 rebounds for the Spurs, who moved within two games of Midwest Division-leading Utah. Mitch Richmond scored 20 points for the Kings, now an NBA-worst 4-30 on the road.

Clippers 117, Mavericks 86. DALLAS (AP) — Dornay Manning scored eight of his 23 points during a 30-19 second-quarter burst that lifted Los Angeles past Dallas, which lost its 11th consecutive game.

The Clippers, who got 22 points from Ron Harper, won for the eighth time in 12 games and have four victories in their last seven road games. Larry Brown's record improved to 12-7 since taking over as coach of the Clippers on Feb. 5.

Mavericks coach Richie Adubato again failed in a bid for his 100th career victory.

Three Rivers College of Poplar Bluff, Mo., joined College of Southern Idaho in the NJCAA semifinals by topping Sullivan of Louisville, Ky., 102-59 in a wire-to-wire running battle Wednesday night.

A pair of steals and dunks put Three Rivers in the lead to stay with three minutes to go.

Both teams stayed in high gear throughout the game, keeping the key warm while snow fell outside.

Three Rivers got 27 points from 6-5 sophomore Shon Peck-Love, 23 out of 6-4 freshman Belvis Noland and 19 by 6-7 freshman Brian Braves.

Both teams shot 60 percent from the field. Sullivan got in trouble with 28 turnovers.

In the afternoon session, Butler County Kansas and Champlain of Burlington, Vt., moved into the quarterfinals with victories.

Butler needed a pair of free throws by point guard Brad Pryor with four seconds to go to clinch a 68-64 win over Chowan College of Murfreesboro, N.C.

The Grizzlies kept their lead near double figures throughout much of the second half, but struggled enough to let Chowan pull within two points several times.

Butler County Kansas and Champlain of Burlington, Vt., moved into the quarterfinals with victories.

Butler needed a pair of free throws by point guard Brad Pryor with four seconds to go to clinch a 68-64 win over Chowan College of Murfreesboro, N.C.

The Grizzlies kept their lead near double figures throughout much of the second half, but struggled enough to let Chowan pull within two points several times.

With five seconds to play, the Braves brought the deficit to two points on a free throw by Corey Baker. The Chowan guard, who was fouled working for a 3-point shot, missed his second try intentionally, but the ball failed to touch the rim, causing a turnover.

Pryor was fouled on the inbounds play.

Champlain got 25 points from 6-3 forward Jerome Womack and 20 by 5-10 guard Jimmie Smith.

Casper made only 38 percent of its shots from the field, but scored five more points from the free throw line.

In the first loser-out game of the tournament, Wakuh Valley shot 59 percent from the floor in beating San Jacinto 92-75.

James Duckery, a 6-7 sophomore, had 31 points to lead five Warriors in double figures.

Bobby Knight greets well-wisher in Boise Wednesday.

Knight leads Indiana as No. 2 seed in West

BOISE (AP) — Bob Knight didn't have a lot of good things to say about his team, but he insisted he didn't cancel an awards banquet to punish his players.

"I wasn't going to use that as a tool with my players. I would have added a banquet or two, rather than take one away," he said. "My players are so happy they didn't have this banquet. The coaches are happy. The banquet has become a happy thing."

Knight's fifth-ranked Indiana Hoosiers came to Boise after a devastating 61-59 loss to Purdue on Sunday. The loss not only cost the Hoosiers a share of the Big Ten title, it likely knocked them out of the No. 1 seed in the NCAA Midwest Regional.

Instead, they were sent to the West where they'll face the No. 2 seed, behind UTEA. The Hoosiers play Eastern Illinois in Thursday night.

Except for a brief interview Tuesday with an Indiana newspaper, the news conference Wednesday night was the first time Knight had spoken to reporters since the loss on Sunday. He skipped the post-game interview and his Monday night radio show.

The day after the loss to Purdue, Knight canceled the team's annual awards dinner, scheduled next month.

Nolan Ryan handles Tigers as Rangers win, 8-3

The Associated Press

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Nolan Ryan gave up two runs in 4 1/2 innings in his third appearance of the spring and Juan Rodriguez lumbered leading off a five-run seventh inning Wednesday as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 8-3. Ryan gave up two hits, struck out four and walked five. One of the two runs against him was unearned.

Mets 9, Dodgers 8

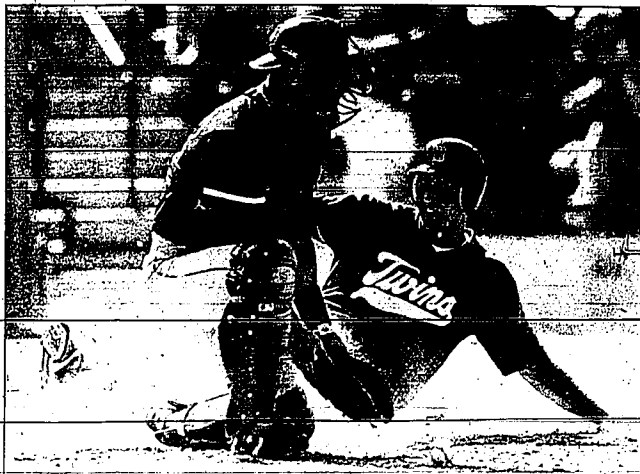

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Three errors led to four unearned runs, including the game-winner in the 12th inning. Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run homer against his former team, and Brett Butler, Kat Daniel and Mike Piazza all homered for the Dodgers. Strawberry's was his third this spring and second against the Mets.

Expos 10, Yankees 9

Red Sox 5, Pirates 3

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Hensley Meulens hit a grand slam in a five-run seventh inning, putting the Yankees ahead 8-6. Jesse Barfield hit a two-run homer in the sixth and Mike Gallego and Randy Venette hit solo homers.

Twins runner Terry Jorgensen scores as Red Sox catcher John Flaherty bobbles the ball.

Tom Brunansky and Luis Rivera hit solo home runs in the eighth inning of Mike Roessler. Wade Boggs drove in two runs for Boston, and Jack Clark had three hits. Greg Harris allowed one hit in two shutout innings. Barry Bonds had three hits for Pittsburgh.

Blue Jays 7, Royals 1

HAINES CITY, Fla. (AP) — Jack Morris allowed one hit and an unearned run in five innings as Kansas City lost its fourth straight. Candy Maldonado had three singles and drove in three runs for the Blue Jays.

Twins 6, White Sox 3

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Chili Davis hit a tie-breaking home run off Wilson Alvarez leading off the eighth. The Twins added two runs in the ninth on Shane Mack's RBI single and a passed-ball by Ron Karkovice with a runner of third.

Chicago starter Jack McDowell allowed three runs — one earned — and four hits in five innings, struck out six and walked four.

Reds 6, Cardinals 4

PLANT CITY, Fla. (AP) — Rookie outfielder Reggie Sanders had three hits, including a home run off Mark Clark and single in a run-in the fourth. Jose Rijo (3-0) pitched two innings of hitless relief.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Eddie Tucker hit a go-ahead sacrifice fly in the sixth inning, and Daryl Kile, Jimmy Jones and Joe Boever combined on a three-hitter.

Angels 5, Mariners 4

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — California, which already has lost pitcher Matt Keough to an errant ball, had another scare when reliever Randy Harvey was hit on the right arm by a line drive off the bat of Greg Briley in the ninth.

Harvey was removed from the game but was not seriously injured. Left-hander Tim Lincecum relieved, induced Jeff Schiefer to hit into a double play that scored Rich Amaral, then struck out Patrick Lennson to end the game.

Brewers (ss) 9, Giants (ss) 4

CHANDLER, Ariz. (AP) — Robin Yount hit three doubles, including a two-run drive in the fourth inning. Yount also singled and scored three runs. James Austin (1-0), Milwaukee scored three runs in the ninth, but the game ended when Jim Tatum was thrown out trying to score, on a throw from left fielder Derrick May — to shortstop Rey Sanchez to catcher Hector Villanueva.

Sankee's second pitcher, pitched 1-3 innings of one-hit, shutout relief. Randy Veres (2-1) gave up three runs and six hits in five innings.

Giants (ss) 10, Padres 6

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The Giants scored 10 runs on nine hits off Greg Harris in the first. Will Clark had a single and a three-run double in the inning, and 11 runs scored with two outs. The inning included an RBI double by Darren Lewis, a two-run single by Chris James and RBI singles by Johnny Thompson, Kirt Manwaring, Robby Burkett and Cory Snyder.

Cubs 4, Brewers (ss) 3

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Mike Morgan allowed two hits in five shutout innings. Chicago scored three runs in the first off Narceson Elvira on RBI singles by George Bell, Hector Alvarez and Gary Scott. Chien Walker's RBI triple made it 4-0 in the fifth.

Athletics 6, Indians 1

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Joe Slocum pitched six shutout innings, and Oakland broke open a scoreless game with five unearned runs in the fifth inning. Slocum allowed four hits, struck out one and walked none.

Russian football team loses conclusively to Western Maryland

The Baltimore Sun

MOSCOW — In a thrilling last-minute drive, quarterback Pavel Cherniavsky marched his Russian all-stars downfield, with one quick pass after another, finally connecting in the end zone for his team's first score on the game's next-to-last play.

For a moment, you could almost forget that his opponents are the Green Terrors of Western Maryland College — who scored 47 points in the previous 59 minutes. The crowd went wild. The organ boomed. The extra-point try succeeded.

Well, we had to score at least once, touch-down. A somewhat-less-than-exhilarant Cherniavsky said after the game this week. "How do I feel? The score will tell you."

The Western Maryland football team had come to Moscow to show off the American game, and at 47-7 it was a learning experience for the collection of Russian players cobbling together from the fledgling Euro-Asiatic League of American Football.

"It was an enormous lesson," Cherniavsky said. "First, we have to work much, much harder. The game was held in a large, beautiful auditorium — (points that bounce off the ceiling don't count), and it attracted a crowd of about 2,000, most of whom proved to be die-hard football fans.

American football started here 3 1/2 years ago, and the fans were more knowledgeable and more vituperative than might have been expected.

At the end of the first half, for instance, in a typical series of Russian plays, the home team ran back a kickoff 40 yards to the Western Maryland 42. This was the deepest the Russians had penetrated, and the crowd began cheering and screaming.

The next play was an incomplete pass — and the cheerers immediately turned to derisive whistles. Whatever their desired effect was, the next play was an interception and the wee Russian threat had evaporated.

"The Russians are not playing very well," Viktor Novikov, the father of center Sergei Novikov, said a few minutes later. "I advised my friend, and I'm somewhat ashamed."

But then he brightened. "We'll lose today, but in a year and a half, we'll win 10 times over," he said. "Football will be popular here because Russians do well in sports that use force."

"Football is a marvelous game," said Isabella Novrozova, 18, whose brother Yuri Malkov is an offensive lineman. "It's a play it's not well developed here. Of course, we would like the Russians to win, but it's a pleasure just to observe, the Americans as well."

Dale Sprague, the Western Maryland coach, said after the game that his team's passing attack was off, but that its running game went well.

"We played against a class bunch of gentlemen," he said. "They have some very good athletes. They're very hard-nosed. They're going to be a good football team in a couple of years."

Western Maryland is the first college team to play here. The NCAA Division III team had a 3-5 record in 1991, but made the big Russians anxious.

Cherniavsky said he hadn't slept for three nights before the game, trying to absorb the lessons imparted by John Robinson, a former Denver Broncos coach imported to help pull the Russians together.

"He's the best quarterback they've got, but he got awfully rattled in the beginning," Robinson said afterward. "And, anyway, that's not the answer to bring teams over here and blow their brains out. Somebody's got to take time and teach them from the bottom up."

Rain puts damper on Players tournament

By Jim Sarni

Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Alan Mills, the tournament referee for the Lipton International Players Championship, knows a little about rain. Mills' summer job is tournament referee at Wimbledon, where rain is the bane of the British tradition as strawberries and cream.

Rain ruined Wimbledon last summer, and the dark clouds seem to be following Mills.

Persistent showers delayed play at Lipton for seven hours Friday. Instead of the 52 scheduled matches, only 13 were played on Friday (the 13th no less).

"The rain hurts a lot because Lipton is only a 10-day tournament," Mills said. "There's not as much built-in time to catch up there as at Wimbledon, which is two weeks."

Lipton is also a 96-draw with 32 seeds getting byes into the second round. None of the big stars can play until they get opponents.

Jimmy Connors, Boris Becker, Jennifer Capriati and Monica Seles were all supposed to play for Saturday's expected capacity crowd, but they must wait a day for their opponents.

Saturday's marquee names included defending champion Jim Courier, Andre Agassi, Pete Sampras, Michael Chang, Steffi Graf and Gabriela Sabatini.

The women will be scheduled to complete the second round Saturday, are now a round behind and will have to play each day through Thursday's semifinals.

"The men are scheduled to complete the second round Sunday."

Lipton will use 14 courts instead of 12 — adding 10 matches to the schedule — for the next few days.

It was a hard day's night, but a happy one, for Bryan Shelton: He arrived at Lipton at 9 a.m. but did not get on the court until after 6 p.m.

San Diego State snubs Tarkanian for Fuller

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tony Fuller, a 10-year assistant coach at UCLA and Pepperdine, was named San Diego State's new basketball coach today, ending a month of speculation that Jerry Tarkanian would get the job.

Fuller will continue to assist UCLA in the NCAA tournament while beginning his coaching duties with San Diego State. San Diego State athletic director Fred Miller said he and UCLA coach Jim Harrick agreed to the arrangement Tuesday night.

"This is something I have prepared for and practiced for for 10 long years," said Fuller, 33.

'This was just an attractive job. I wouldn't leave where I was for just anything.'

— Tony Fuller

leaving UCLA after four years, Fuller said he is optimistic about the Aztecs' program.

Fuller's task will be immense. He takes over a team that finished 2-26, including a 21-game losing streak.

Jim Brandenburg was fired on Feb. 11 and replaced on an interim basis by Jim Harrick Jr. Harrick, the son of the UCLA coach, will remain at San Diego State as one of Fuller's assistant coaches.

Miller refused to confirm that Tarkanian had been recommended for the job at one point, replying a question directed to Fuller about Tarkanian, saying, "Our gear is forward, we're not looking back."

Hearn, Barkley go toe-to-toe once again

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Thomas Hearn has never watched the tape of his fight with Fran Barkley. Maybe he doesn't like horror movies.

The 35-year-old Hearn was once a favorite to retain the WBA light-heavyweight championship against Barkley, whose IBF super middleweight title won't be at stake.

Hearn was a much stronger favorite to beat Barkley in June 6, 1988, and for two rounds and part of a third, he looked like a sure winner.

A reporter's notes on that fight read: Round 1 — "Barkley cut over left eye. Both winging punches, Hearn's edge in the toe-to-toe exchange."

"No man alive can make me walk away from this game," Hearn said. "Only God can tell me when it is time to move."

After Hearn lost to Barkley he almost got knocked out before winning a 12-round split decision against James Kinchen on Nov. 4, 1988. He then fought a 12-round draw with Snare Ray Leonard on June 12, 1989. Leonard had stopped him in the 14th round in 1981.

Hearn's only other loss came when he was stopped in the third round by Marvelous Marvin Hagler in 1985.

"When the history books open up, people will see there are only three guys who ever knocked out Tommy Hearn: Leonard, Hagler and Fran Barkley," the challenger said.

"When they open it up this time, it is going to be Fran Barkley twice."

Barkley lost the middleweight title on a 12-round decision to Roberto Duran on Feb. 24, 1989. He then lost a 12-round decision to Michael Spinks in a bid for the IBF middleweight title on Aug. 14, 1989.

"My eye's fine," Barkley said. "No money or anything is going to make me risk my eyesight."

Barkley won two fights against medicine opposition in 1991, then got a shot at the WBC super middleweight title, which he won by knocking out Darrin Van Horn in the second round last Jan. 10.

Hearn became the WBC light-heavyweight champion by scoring a 12-round decision over Virgil Hill June 4, 1991. He also has held the WBA welterweight and WBC super-lightweight, middleweight and light-heavyweight titles.

Shelton, of Atlanta. "It's always good to face a top player early in a tournament, before they have a chance to get rolling. Agassi is a good front-runner."

"I have some good memories of Key Biscayne," Shelton said. "It's one of the best tournaments I've ever played."

Rosalynd Fairbank-Nideffer and Isabelle Demongest split tiebreakers and appeared to be headed for a final one before Fairbank, up 4-3, broke Demongest and served out the two-hour, 50-minute match 6-7 (7-4), 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

Ramesh Krishnan, one of five men who have played all eight Lipton, defeated Martin Jaite 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

Robert Seguso is playing doubles with Stefan Edberg. "I hope to keep the Swedish thing going," said Seguso, who won the French Open with Andrej Panjic one year ago.

Fewer than 500 tickets remain for Saturday and Sunday, fewer than 400 for Monday. Grounds passes will be sold.

Shelton gets his reward Saturday night: his first match against Agassi. "I've never played Agassi, but this is a good time to play him," said Shelton.

Hot loads harmful to eyes, rifle

When the round went off I knew immediately something was wrong. The report of this shot sounded different from the previous shots and a smoke trail appeared. As the bullet approached the target, my suspicions were confirmed when my shooting companion tried unsuccessfully to lift the bolt on the 220 Swift.

David Hocklander
Hunting

When the action of the Mauser was finally opened, with some gentle persuasion at the shop, the primer was completely gone. It was obvious the rifle had experienced some severe pressures. Needless to say that particular load was too "hot," probably setting some speed record.

One of the advantages of handloading is being able to push bullet speeds to the safe limits of your equipment. But loads that develop excessive pressure are dangerous and must be recognized and reduced.

Anyone who uses firearms must be aware of the signs of hot loads exhibiting high pressure. For the handloader, it's a critical skill in developing a new load.

High pressures must also be watched for when shooting old loads in a new gun, when shooting borrowed loads in your gun, or when shooting loads under different weather conditions. For maximum loads, the change in temperature from winter to summer can create some excessive pressures.

Perhaps the best signs of high pressure come from the primer. The primer is the weakest part of the cartridge and is first to exhibit the effects of a hot load. A flattened primer is the most common sign.

The primer will flow, filling the primer pocket while flattening itself against the bolt face.

Compare the fired primer to an unfired one to better identify the degree of deformation. Sometimes the primer will crater, flowing around the firing pin. Cratering can also be a characteristic of some actions. If this is the case, the cratering will be consistent with all loads.

Early thaw leads to road closures

TWIN FALLS — An early spring thaw in the Kootenai Range west of the Sawtooth National Forest has prompted closure of several area roads and trails to avoid damage.

Roads that will be posted as closed this week include Lake Creek Road, Eagle Creek Road, Warm Springs Road and Adams Gulch Road.

Trails that have been closed include Fox Creek Loop Trail, Adams Gulch Trail, Lane's Trail, Maloney-Greenhorn Creek Trail and Frontier Mountain Trail.

The closures will remain in effect until the trails and roads dry out, Clark reported. Fines may be issued to those who violate the closures.

The Twin Falls Ranger District has temporarily closed and placed a special order on Dry Creek Road, the South Fork of Shoshone Creek, Langford Flat and the Rogerson Road on top of Deadline Ridge. Signs are posted in these areas.

Beginning fly-fishing course to be offered at CSI

TWIN FALLS — A beginning fly fishing class which will include practical fishing experience, begins April 1 through the College of Southern Idaho's Continuing Education Division.

There will be four sessions, the first meeting in Room 202 of the Canyon Building from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Equipment needed will be discussed in the opening session.

The class will meet Wednesdays and Saturdays and the fee is $35.

Further information can be obtained by phoning 733-9534, extension 272.

Commercial fisherman provides help in keeping trash fish out of Emerald Commercial fisherman Rulon Thompson hauls a seine full of carp and suckers out of Emerald Lake.

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

BURLEY — An annual visit by a commercial fisherman might be just what the Idaho Department of Fish and Game needs to keep trash fish in Emerald Lake somewhat under control.

The department invited Rulon Thompson to try his luck in the lake that actually was created to provide fill for Interstate 80 — now Interstate 84 — near Burley. Thompson made two seine sweeps and came up with about six tons of trash fish, mostly carp with a smaller mix of suckers.

"We wanted to see how he'd do and we felt he did pretty well," said Fred Partridge, Fish & Game's regional fisheries manager. "But I guess right now it is more profitable to catch more suckers from the (human) consumptive market. He has a contract to provide other species to a local fertilizer plant. I guess the carp and whatever else came up went there."

"All the fish appeared to be in great shape," Partridge said of the wintering conditions in the small impoundment that is sometimes frozen over. "We didn't see any of the monster carp we've found in other reservoirs but I'd guess some of them reached about 18 pounds."

The lake, located six miles northeast of Burley and four miles east of Rupert, gets heavy by Mini-Cassia fisherman.

"We saw a few channel catfish and some of the rainbow brook stick (rainbow trout) out of Ennis, Mont., federal hatchery and some catchable trout. They were sorted out and returned to the lake," Partridge said.

Partridge said the department had toyed with the idea of a chemical treatment of the lake to knock down the large trash fish population and reduce food competition for planted sports fish.

"But the lake is still connected to the canal system so every year or two there would be a major (trash fish) reinfestation," Partridge said.

"This commercial fishing method is something we can use to keep the biomass down," Partridge said. "It could never eliminate the trash fish, but it probably is a preferable method to treatment."

With the help of the Magic Valley Bass Club, the department was able to transfer some one- and two-pound bullheads from Murtagh Lake to Emerald. Partridge said Emerald would soon be receiving its spring allotment of catchable sized trout.

"We've already started planting at Dierkes Lake and other areas that have water," he said.

Injured mountain lion recovers, returns home

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

JEROME — A young mountain lion is back roaming the Boise River's South Fork drainage this week, thanks to a cooperative effort among a houndsman, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and a Twin Falls veterinarian.

The mountain lion returned to her native haunts after a brief conflict with man that saw her spend a little time in a Pocatello zoo for convalescing convalescence.

The story began Jan. 8 when houndsman Pete Lerma of Kuna was running his pack in a pursuit-only chase. During the run, Lerma spotted the young cougar and couldn't help but notice her progress was impeded by a small trap that clung stubbornly to her front foot.

Lerma contacted Fish and Game's Region 4 Northside biologist, Bruce Palmer, to tell of the situation and the two men and Fairfield Conservation Officer Barb Slott set up a mercy mission for the next day.

It didn't take long for the hounds to catch the cougar's trail and not a lot longer before the cat was pushed into a huge pine tree.

Palmer used a dart gun to tranquilize the mountain lion. The trap was removed and field first-aid applied before the run to a Twin Falls veterinarian got under way.

Bill Strodel was able to repair most of the damage but was forced to remove one toe.

The mountain lion then was taken to Ross Park Zoo in Pocatello where it convalesced until doctors felt it was healthy enough to make the long way home.

She was released over the weekend.

F&G proposes changes in deer-hunting regulations

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

JEROME — Deer-hunting regulations are the most numerous changes that Idaho Department of Fish and Game will run past Magic Valley sportsmen at three public hearings later this month.

And while they're there to hear about local things, the sportsmen will be asked to provide some public insight into three major issues being studied by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission.

The regulations established at the commission's April and

July meetings will be the most important enacted in the state ever as — for the first time — they will cover two years.

The hearings will be held in Twin Falls and Burley late this month and in the Wood River Valley early in April. Sites, times and dates will be announced.

Craig Kyle, Region 4 wildlife manager for Fish & Game, said the major issues the commission is interested in include:

• Opening the archery deer season on Aug. 24, a week earlier than this past fall, and retain Sept. 24 as the closing date.

"We have received inquiry from bowmen asking why they can't have a week before the elk season to concentrate on deer. It would be a change from the current five-year plan" Kvale said.

• Allowing some controlled "any-buck" harvest in Units 41, 42 and 56 (Sublett), which had two-point restrictions on buck harvest last year.

"We feel in one year we saw considerably less hunter pressure and saw more bucks come through the season," Kvale said. "We feel it was enough to allow some limited trophy hunting as our adult buck segment should have grown."

• That change would allow 20 antlered tags for an "any weapon" hunt in Unit 56.

In spring, true anglers turn to midge fishing

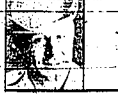

It's midge season on nearly all types of Idaho waters.

The Big Wood River is being fished with midge pupae and midge larvae for some whitefish as is the South Fork of the Snake River. Over in Boise, the midge pupae are catching not only trout but bluegill, even a few bass.

I know it's only March, but the fish are anticipating spring. Check the buds on your flies — I know some that have already broken and are starting to leaf. Forsythia is budding in somewhere in Hagerman, I'm sure.

There are dozens of midge species. The adults vary greatly in size from one type to the next, running from one-sixteenth of an inch to 1 1/2 inches or better in adult form.

The giant tipulidae as a pupae looks like a small cigar, up to 2 1/2 inches long. In some waters, especially in the spring, these big ugly flies fished rolling along the bottom are devastating to the big brown trout. The high roilly waters of stream runoff dislodge them from their muddy environs.

Fishing

This may be the simplest big nymph in the world to tie. A heavy fur-dubbed body in a medium brown heavily accented catches fish. A real thick elastic body will work also. No hackle, no tail, no flashbon, no rib — just a smooth cigar-shaped, fur critter.

It amazes people. In a somewhat smaller version, it works on the Big Wood, the Little Wood, the South Fork of the Boise, Big Snooky — just to name a few.

Most midges are mud snuggles. Typical pupae representations are attached by 1/32 to 1/16 through 1/16 holes in a standard precast shape.

The modern trend is ever smaller. Some people fish size 24 midge pupae, but oddly enough, when the flies are this small, a larger artificial representative works quite well. In the Columbia Basin lakes, natural insects approximate size 16 and 18 hooks but a size 10 or 12 imitation will catch as many or more fish than smaller patterns.

More fish are caught on larvae and pupae imitations than adult imitations — at least most of the time.

Midge pupae have come into their own on streams in the last few years. A hot fly spreading out of Montana is the Serendipity. It is a very simple tie but very effective drifted tight along the stream life technique — just like granddad use to use.

I sometimes believe that fish are becoming tired of the woolly buggers, marbous and flashy movement artificials we throw out day after day. It is just a fancy, but the small sparse net diptera (midge) pupae strikes me as lean cuisine for trout.

The Serendipity is very similar to the standard midge-pupae developed for lake

Hunting mishap rate not as bad as it seems

The Associated Press

In New York State, in one nightmarish stretch last fall, a man shot his mother and two fathers killed their sons — in each case, mistaking their kin for deer.

One grief-stricken father committed suicide.

It all conjured visions of woods flowing with blood, of legions of trigger-happy hunters shooting anything and everything that moves, occasionally killing game, occasionally killing friends and relatives.

There's one problem with that scenario: National statistics indicate it's not necessarily true.

Accidental shootings have been cut by more than half in the past 20 years, primarily because hunters in 46 states must now take safety courses before getting a license, according to a hunting organization.

"These accidents are a true tragedy," says Clair Huff, executive vice president of the North American Hunter Education Association. "It's just poor judgment by the hunter. By the same token, we have to look at the number of lives we have been instrumental in saving."

Last year, 99 people were killed by hunters, and 47 hunters accidentally killed themselves, according to the HEA. The toll — the lowest ever, according to the HEA — rivals the 148 combat deaths the country suffered in the Gulf War.

By another measure, five times as many people died in recreational boating accidents as the 157 hunters killed in 1989, according to numbers compiled by the National Safety Council.

Accidental shootings totaled 1,564 in 1990, a drop of 58 percent from 20 years ago, Huff said. This, he noted, is apportioned among 17 million licensed hunters. Most accidents happen in the pursuit of big game; there is no precise figure just for deer hunters.

Only Alaska, Massachusetts, Minnesota and South Carolina do not have mandatory safety courses for hunters. All offer voluntary education.

"Hunting is really not that high risk. It's an illusion of public perception," said Robert Byrne of the Wildlife Management Institute, a Washington-based conservation group.

But anti-hunting forces readily accept this illusion.

"On a lot of levels, it's simply as bloody spot," said Elliot Katz, president of In Defense of Animals. "In our society, it's barbaric and outdated."

And it is difficult to explain how a two-legged human can be mistaken, however rarely, for a four-legged deer, or a bear, or a turkey. Yet these accidents happened.

A distraught Gene Bulak, 41, of Taberg, N.Y., committed suicide Nov. 24 after he killed his son Michael, 18, with a shotgun blast to the head.

Biologists want to kill 1,200 elk that summer in Tetons

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — A booming elk population in and around Grand Teton National Park has state and federal wildlife biologists proposing that 2,500 of the animals be taken by hunters this fall.

Of that total, about 1,200 of the animals are thought to summer in the national park.

There currently are an estimated 9,000 elk in the area, and the biologists say the population will jump to about 12,500 after spring calving in the National Elk Refuge.

In the long run the biologists would like to see the number of elk that winter on the refuge and summer in and around the national park brought down to 7,500.

The plan adopted Monday by the Wyoming Game and Fish Commission calls for hunters this fall to try to kill 1,200 of the estimated 3,500 elk that summer in Grand Teton, another 700 from the Gros Ventre and Teton Wilderness herds, and some 600 that live on the northern end of the elk refuge just east of Jackson.

To accomplish those goals, some hunters would be allowed to venture within the park's boundaries to stalk elk.

If Gov. Mike Sullivan and the regional director of the National Park Service endorse the plan, the Game and Fish Department will issue 2,400 elk licenses that would take hunters onto park lands.

"The success rate very well could come up to the 50 percent level" needed to reach the goal of culling 1,200 elk from the park, said Tom Toman, the agency's Jackson district supervisor.

The proposed hunts involving park lands would be staggered, with 400 hunters being allowed to begin in Area 75 and 76 on Oct. 15, another 300 setting out Nov. 1, and 200 beginning Nov. 16.

Those who draw licenses for Area 79, which also is within park boundaries, would be allowed to begin hunting Oct. 24.

Spring catches up with early snow

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Conditions for snowmobiling and Nordisking are reported marginal in the Sawtooth National Forest.

Snow depths in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area range from 6 inches at Stanley, 9 inches at North Fork, 10 inches at Prairie Creek to 5 1/2 inches on the top of Galena Summit.

But very good spring skiing conditions are reported at the ski resorts in the forest. There are 49 inches of snow at the top of Sun Valley's Bald Mountain and 50 inches on the runs at Pomerelle Ski Area on Mount Harrison.

Soldier Mountain and Magic

Mountain are both closed for the season.

"Avalanche hazard is generally rated low at all elevations, with some moderate danger possible in the afternoons.

Since avalanche hazard conditions can change quickly, anyone venturing out on mountain sides should call 622-8027 for a daily update.

The SNRA Visitor Center north of Ketchum will be closed weekends in April. The center will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. until May 1 when seven-day-a-week service resumes.

Environmental stress might be cause of bighorn sheep mortality

NAMPA (AP) — Idaho's bighorn sheep may not be suffering from dying from bacteria as much as environmental stress, state veterinarians say.

Behind wire enclosures in Caldwell, a team of biologists are tracking a "bullet" that has decimated some of the herds.

"Although the state's bighorn population has reached about 5,000 animals, more than anytime in recent memory.

But the species' future is in question because bighorn populations tend to crash about every 30 years.

At the University of Idaho Caine Veterinary Teaching and Research Center in Caldwell, Dr. Dave Hunter, an Idaho Department of Fish and Game veterinarian, and Dr. Al Ward, a Caine microbiologist, are scrutinizing a captive herd of 11 animals.

"At this time we are evaluating the pasteurized haemolitic bacteria-in-lambs," Ward said, noting the bacteria cause pneumonia and kill the herds.

Some studies indicated domestic sheep may be the culprits that pass the bacteria and other parasites and viruses to bighorns.

However, the Caldwell tests are providing evidence healthy bighorns carry the pasteurella and a variety of parasites, even when not exposed to domestic animals.

"What we're seeing is that bighorn have present in their systems many bacteria that can surface when there are other stresses, like poor forage caused by drought or increased population density," Ward said.

Another possibility is the sheep can be stressed by elk and other animals in their natural range.

Bighorn birth rates in Salmon River herds have fallen from 40 to 50 lambs per 100 ewes to about five lambs per 100. Because two yearlings taken from ewes by hunters are the only detailed history at Caine, they are valuable in shedding light on how diseases develop in individual members.

The study of how disease is spread through wild and domestic animals is very important given the large amount of public land in the Northwest managed for multiple use.

At present, Hunter's recommendation is to not actively put domestic and wild animals together in immediate proximity.

"While we feel there is not a transmission risk, we cannot say that unequivocally.

The bighorn study is being conducted under the auspices of Idaho Fish and Game, the state Agriculture Department, Idaho Wool Growers and the UI Caine Center.

Death rate high among north Idaho bull elk

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Six of every 10 bull elk in areas with roads in Idaho's Clearwater River drainage didn't survive the hunting season, according to a recent two-year study.

In roadless areas, however, just 31 percent of the bulls were taken by hunters.

"Roadless areas give elk an edge," said Alan Christensen, wildlife program leader for the Forest Service's Southern Region based in Missoula.

But hunter numbers also figure into the equation, said Christensen, who is part of a new group of wildlife biologists who are defining and refining the notion of elk vulnerability.

"At some point, Montana may need to restrict the number of elk hunters," he said. "The ground is capable of sustaining only so many elk, but the interest in elk and elk hunting doesn't seem to have any limit."

Montana has 100,000 elk hunters, double the number of 25 years ago. The state's summer elk population is 125,000 — about 24,000 of which are taken during hunting season.

"The public can't get enough of elk," Christensen said.

And while elk are resilient and very adaptable, Christensen said he worries that they also are taken for granted.

"We have so many opportunities here, the hunting is so good here, that we forget about elk vulnerability," he said.

Christensen's group is taking a combined federal-state approach to elk management, with state game managers setting hunting seasons and regulations and federal land managers monitoring big-game habitat.

Roads, logging, cattle and subdivisions all make elk vulnerable, Christensen said. But so do high-tech hunters and large numbers of hunters.

"Wilderness and roadless areas do not automatically guarantee you a lot of big bulls," he said.

For example, in the southern half of Idaho's Lochsa River drainage, land protected as wilderness, bull elk numbers dropped from 203 in 1969 to 37 in 1989.

There were no new roads to contend with, Christensen said. Instead, the pressure came from a hunting season that ran during the mating season, when bulls are easily killed.

"The habitat was there, but the state of Idaho's hunting regulations did not protect the elk," he said.

"People are much more efficient in killing elk today than 25 years ago."

Idaho bull elk

Christensen said. "Nearly everyone uses artificial calls. Many people have four-wheel drives, and many others establish elaborate hunting camps in the backcountry.

"Just look at all the videos, clinics, high-tech gear, scents and camouflage," he said. "The success rates of hunters have doubled."

So have the number of hunters.

Mature bull elk in Montana's Bob Marshall Wilderness are in jeopardy because of the sheer number of hunters and the number of hunting opportunities," Christensen said. "We've got to take a look at what's happening there."

Elk habitat also has changed in recent years.

And as habitat dwindles in quantity and quality, the age and sex distribution in many elk herds have been sharply skewed in favor of young bulls and cows, he said.

fishing, the TDC. Somebody added a little hump black clump-of-deer hair above the thorax area and used it in the Madison River. They treat it like a revolution, but in the early '70s, the members of the Washington Fly Club were using the TDC the same way in the same waters.

"Another 'new' pattern that is used in midge waters to represent larvae is the San Juan worm.

"This tie is simply itself, a hunk of ultra chenille laced to an old-fashioned, style worm hook. It developed down in the Four Corners area for stream fishing, but if you are patient and literally inch it along a mud bottom of a desert lake, it will be picked off the bottom by trout.

A variety of colors is used, but an orange-red is the most popular. If you miss bait fishing with a worm but your social group won't let you throw live bait anymore, this is the fly-fishing equivalent.

Fishing adult midge imitations on the surface is the least productive technique — but it does have its days.

"One thing your dad knew was that darters don't have tails like mayflies. He tied his dry midge versions without. The best lake fisherman I knew with adult midges used a tailless black body and grizzly hackle, size 12 — period. I swear he could pull fish off the bottom. I put tails on one and he laughed himself silly catching 50 fish to my one.

I learn slowly, but I learn well.

A better stage for the surface fisherman is the emerging stage. The pupae 'shuck' and part of the emerging adult land just below the surface film as the thorax and wings thrust into the air. Trout are absolutely stunned when they are fooled by an artificial. One that I like is basically two flies on one hook.

The pupae of deer hair is tied in front of the pupae and the excess hair forms a single'shank of hair coiled forward over the eye. A stiff grizzly hackle, one size smaller than the hook designation is tied parachute-style around the base of the single wing. The deer or elk hair and the hackle support the forward swing allowing the pupae section to hang below the surface, just like the natural.

If you get caught in a midge hatch sometimes and don't have any patterns — because you didn't believe what I'm telling you — here are a couple of day-saving tricks.

For adult midges, clip the tail off an Adams, a Mosquito or Black Gnat dry fly.

For hanging emergers, clip the tail off a similar parachute style and bend the hook close to the hackle down about 30 degrees. A very small black Hare's Ear Pheasant Tail or A.P. Nymph with the tail clipped will work as a pupae imitator.

If you want to give midges a shot, go try Oster Lakes for experimenting.

Don't fish fast and try to anticipate what the fish are doing. If you see a lot of dimples, try pupae just below the surface — or the hanging emerger. If you see shucks — but no fish — then go to the bottom with pupae during midday. In early morning or late evening, try floating a line, a long-leader and raise the pupae slowly and steadily from bottom to surface.

Good luck.

In some cases the primer may actually rupture from the extreme pressure. Or, as in the case of my friends Rod 220 Swift, the primer may disintegrate.

It's a good time to remind everyone to use shooting glasses to avoid pieces of a blown primer from taking away your sight.

The case head will also tell a tale of high pressure in the form of shiny ejector marks. The high pressure will force the brass to flow into the bolt face so that when the bolt is rotated open the brass will be sheared from the base of the case head.

It is also possible that the primer pocket will be opened up by the pressure so that a new primer will no longer fit tightly.

This same excessive flow and expansion of the brass is what contributes to still bolt lift or cartridge ejection making this another sign of high pressure.

And finally, pay close attention every time you fire a round. How the round feels and sounds can sometimes be a clue that something is not right. Once the signs of high pressure have been identified, reduce the load or safely discard the rounds.

High velocity at the cost of high pressure is a dangerous trade-off. Besides, the most accurate load for most rifles is not the fastest load. So keep an eye on those primers and high pressure will not spoil your shooting day.

David Hocklander is a teacher at Gooding High School.

Ignition Gunite, 61, of New City, N.Y., shot and killed his 33-year-old son, Craig, on Nov. 30 with a rifle slug to the chest.

David Joseph Hose, 19, of Tarrytown, N.Y., mistook his mother for a deer and shot her twice in the chest with a .22-caliber rifle on Oct. 22. The woman, 47-year-old Takeko Hose, was pruning a fruit tree in her back yard. She survived, and Hose pleaded guilty to illegally discharging a firearm.

"You can't explain it other than to say they just weren't careful. It boggles me," said Michael O'Hara, who is in charge of teaching hunter safety in New York. "If all hunters just made sure of their target, we'd eliminate most accidents."

New York is one of 10 states that do not require hunters to wear blaze orange, which makes them less likely to be misidentified. None of those shot was wearing the splashy color.

But, said O'Hara, "Blaze orange isn't a bulletproof vest."

Some accidents seem to be a case of the mind playing tricks.

"If they took that extra second, then these accidents wouldn't occur."

"It's what's known in the industry as 'back fever,'" said Bill Allegretti, hunter education coordinator in Delaware. "You go out in the woods looking for a deer and you're going to see what you're looking for. We try to drill it into people to identify their target before they pull the trigger."

Those are the grieving sentiments of Kimberly Van Tassel of Roseau County, Minn., whose husband, George, was killed hunting in 1989. He was wearing a blaze orange outfit and was riding a three-wheeler through the woods when another hunter mistook the three-wheeler and fired fatal shots.

"If you're not sure and the deer gets away, isn't it better than killing someone?" Van Tassel told the Star Tribune of Minneapolis.

"If you're not 150 percent sure through the scope that it's a deer, then don't shoot," she said. "Remember that there's a loved one of somebody's out there. Think of that. And be damned sure before you pull the trigger."

Dow sinks during cautious session

The Associated Press NEW YORK — Stock prices were narrowly mixed Wednesday as investors moved cautiously in the Dow Jones average of 30...

session devoid of compelling economic news. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed down 1.79 to 4,254.25.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 8 on the New York Stock Exchange. Big Board volume totaled 190.81 million shares of...

4 p.m., against 1.87, 20 million, in construction and industrial production. But there was nothing to inspire investors in Wednesday's session.

Fed reports business optimism growing

WASHINGTON (AP)— After months of surveying the nation and finding little good economic news, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday that business sentiment is now "modestly more optimistic."

The Fed cited a number of hopeful signs, such as rising home sales, increased retail demand and even glimmers of a turnaround in manufacturing.

"However, both the central bank and the Bush administration stressed that the scattered signs of a strengthening economy, should be viewed cautiously."

because of restrictive Federal Reserve policies.

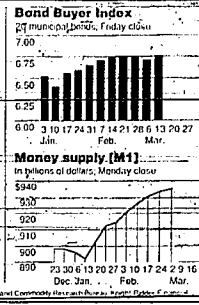

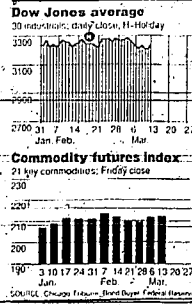

The Fed's latest survey of business conditions, conducted by its 12 regional banks early this month, found strength in sales, rising construction and retail sales but cautioned that there were still numerous pockets of weakness.

The Chicago Fed noted a "slow but increasingly widespread advance in the economy since the end of January" while St. Louis reported that most segments of the economy were growing.

The new survey, based on interviews before March 9, said manufacturing remained weak, with New York, Minneapolis and San Francisco still reporting layoffs.

On the negative side, the Fed characterized construction activity for such commercial projects as offices and shopping centers as "moribund." While residential mortgage lending was cited as a bright spot, the survey found little increase in bank loan demand in other areas.

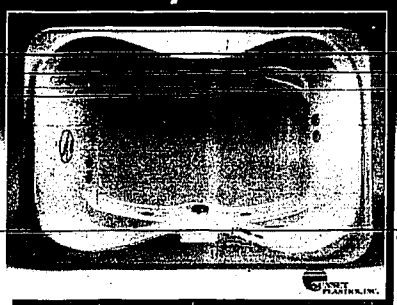

But even in the hard-hit manufacturing sector, the survey said that "several districts report glimmers of recovery in manufacturing, with improving expectations for future activity." The survey said Philadelphia, Richmond and Dallas reported modest gains in factory production of shipments.

Mandela says apartheid still alive, despite vote

South Africa apartheid referendum

Do you support continuation of the reform process which the state president began on Feb. 2, 1990, and which is aimed at a new constitution through negotiations?

South African white voters said:

AP

The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nelson Mandela said other blacks welcomed the stunning endorsement by whites for sharing power, but they said Wednesday that South Africa has a long way to go to become a democratic nation.

Mandela, leader of the African National Congress, the biggest black group, said apartheid is "very much alive" despite the overwhelming vote in a whites-only referendum Tuesday to support political reforms.

Whites voted 68.7 percent to 31.3 percent to forge ahead with talks that will end white rule and give South Africa's 30 million-member black majority voting rights for the first time. Nearly 86 of every 100 eligible voters turned out.

The margin of support for President F.W. de Klerk's reforms was much higher than expected and was a jolt to pro-apartheid white conservatives. De Klerk won 14 of the 15 electoral districts.

The vote was the most solid step whereby all that has been built since the days of Christ may be maintained for the good of all mankind, Prime Minister H.F. Verwoerd said in 1958.

As recently as 1988, de Klerk's predecessor P.W. Botha said he would never consider accepting a black government.

The country was carved up into "black" their own "nations," and millions of blacks were summarily deprived of citizenship and dumped in barren areas of the nation. Whites retained 87 percent of the land, insisting it had been empty until their forefathers settled it.

South Africa became notorious for its "hunger mentality" — a reference to the early white pioneers who circled their wagons to drive off attacking black tribesmen.

White leaders said they could fend off the entire world, often sneering at sanctions imposed in an attempt to force South Africa to abandon segregation. The country could live with sanctions, but much of its wealth and energy was devoted to primping up apartheid.

It has been a futile battle.

Five million whites, some opposed to apartheid, could not dominate 30 million blacks. Not even the most stringent apartheid laws could keep blacks in rural homelands and away from the cities where they came to look for work.

De Klerk stunned South Africans and the world when he announced in 1990 that apartheid would be scrapped by the same government that created and defended the system for four decades.

Although the lifestyles of whites have not changed much, the realities they grew up with crumbled all too overnight. Whites were no longer assured of the advantages, setting their apart as the ruling class.

Many whites, blinded by a lifetime of habit and prejudice, still don't see blacks as equals. But the white vote for reform shows, if nothing else, that some want to change.

De Klerk abolished major apartheid laws, but he was forced to go back to nervous whites and plead for a mandate after the National Party was trounced by the Conservatives in two special elections to fill parliament seats.

Conservatives "hampered" at the ANC's alliance with the Communist Party, warning whites they would lose their wealth to a Marxist government if reforms continued.

The government said the only way to bring peace and foreign investment was to negotiate a new deal with blacks, which would end white domination stretching back to the arrival of Dutch settlers in 1652.

Most whites were unshaken by warnings of communist rule.

"I can't see how they could even think of communism when you look at the rest of the world," said Jeanette du Plessis, a Johannesburg voter. "I can't see people would adopt that system here" — at least if sincerely hope not.

Abhy Gerald, who is also black, was more optimistic. "I think this is what I've been waiting for," he said.

When de Klerk came to power in August 1990, he was viewed as a stalwart of the governing National Party who would continue its policies of white domination. But within six months, he stunned the world by legalizing black opposition groups and freeing Mandela after 27 years in prison for trying to topple the white government.

South Africa witnesses a political miracle

By Barry Reif

The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The country that created apartheid and became a byword for racism around the globe has witnessed something of a political miracle.

At a time when rival ethnic groups are tearing each other apart in many nations, South Africa's whites voted to end their monopoly on power and seek a common future with the black majority.

The world has probably never before seen a people vote to give up power, especially when they still dominated a nation.

Whites gave President F.W. de Klerk a decisive mandate on Tuesday to scrap apartheid and negotiate a new constitution. The 69 percent vote for reform exceeded even the most optimistic predictions.

"The white electorate has risen above itself," de Klerk said.

Enormous problems must still be solved, however. Whites are not likely to surrender power overnight. Also, many want a veto on the power of a fully free, multiracial government and oppose drastic redistribution of wealth to correct inequities created by apartheid.

But they have taken a decisive step toward reconciliation that would have been unthinkable a few years ago.

For decades the white-minority government refused to see blacks as equals. White leaders concocted apartheid — a rigid system of legal, social and economic division to create blacks could never be more than laborers and servants.

The architects of apartheid claimed they were defending Western civilization and Christianity.

"Perhaps it was meant for us to have been planted here at the southern point of Africa ... so that from (us) ... might emanate the victory

What's changed; what hasn't since de Klerk became leader

The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Here is a look at the apartheid situation since President F.W. de Klerk took office in 1989 and major issues facing the nation's political leaders.

WHAT'S CHANGED

- Black opposition groups such as the African National Congress have been legalized. The government has begun negotiating to write a new constitution ending white rule.
- More than 1,000 political prisoners, including ANC leader Nelson Mandela, have been freed.
- Blacks, previously restricted to land ownership in 13 percent of the country, may buy land anywhere.
- Whites-only public schools may be integrated if 75 percent of parents vote in favor of the change.
- Neighborhoods, hospitals, public transportation, parks and other public facilities and buildings are no longer segregated.

WHAT HASN'T CHANGED

- The black majority may not be fully integrated in many institutions, reflecting the huge economic difference between the 3 million whites and 30 million blacks.

- Education largely remains segregated, and most blacks attend inferior schools.
- MAJOR ISSUES BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT AND ANC
 - Constitution: Both sides want a new constitution giving voting rights to the black majority. But the government favors safeguards to protect whites and other minorities.
 - Interim government: The government insists it must remain in power during the talks and any subsequent transition to maintain order. The ANC wants an interim government.
 - Economy: The government says only a free-market system can solve the country's economic problems. The ANC wants measures to compensate blacks for apartheid and favors state economic intervention.

If You Don't Come See Us, We Can't Save You Any Money!

LET'S TALK IMPORTS:
THE AVERAGE TRADE-IN IS 4 YEARS.

What will your trade-in be worth then?

Listed below is the NADA Book on 4 year imports:

1988 HONDA ACCORD LX 4 DOOR:	1988 MITSUBISHI GALANT:
NADA Avg. Retail.....$8950	NADA Avg. Retail.....$7900
1988 HYUNDAI GLS:	1988 NISSAN STANZA:

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"No one ever keeps a secret so well as a child!"
—Victor Hugo.

"He had no trouble making nine tricks against me," complained a duplicate buff. "How did your opponent manage to go down?"

"Maybe I kept my secrets better than you did," was the cryptic reply. "At both tables, West led his fourth heart to East's ace, South falsedrawing with the jack. At both tables, East returned the heart eight, West allowing South's heart queen to win. At this point, declarer must choose between playing spades and playing diamonds. If he plays diamonds, the clinch play is to knock out the diamond ace. If he has reason to believe hearts are 5-2, he's better off finishing in spades."

The winning declarer lost little time in taking the spade finesse; the loser went the other way and tried diamonds. What was the deciding factor?

At one table, West played his heart deuce on the second heart, after South had played his jack and queen at tricks one and two. South then knew that West had started with five hearts (the four was fourth best), so he took the spade finesse.

At the other table, West played the heart six instead of the deuce. This declarer was led to believe that hearts were 4-3 and, quite reasonably, led a diamond. West then cashed three more heart winners for one down.

In a hand replete with falsedraws, both Wests tried to conceal possession of the diamond ace. One went further by being deceptive about his heart length.
