Russian Cabinet vows to hold line

Los Angeles Times
MOSCOW — Russia's reformist government warned Sunday that it would resign unless it wins parliamentary backing for its radical economic program and sweeping powers to carry it out.
 After meeting through the day to discuss its severe setbacks in parliament, President Boris N. Yeltsin's Cabinet decided that, unless the Congress of People's Deputies reverses action stripping away its authority to rule by decree and endorses its reforms, it will have to quit.

"All members of the government came to the unanimous conclusion that, if no compromise is reached, the government will have to resign," Central Television reported late Sunday evening, quoting a top government official.
 In Washington, meanwhile, the White House national security adviser, indicated Sunday that the $24 billion international aid package recently announced for Russia could be curtailed if the Congress blocks the reforms.
 "The arrangement, however it comes out, has to be such that economic reforms can go forward," Brent Scowcroft said. "If, in fact, (the Russian) Congress gets control over economic policy, you can assume it will be less reformist, less dramatic than Yeltsin has planned. That would affect (the aid package)."

Expectations are strong that the Cabinet would survive the crisis — with its powers intact and even enhanced once the government's conservative critics have been ousted.
 A showdown is nonetheless now likely with the government's parliamentary critics over a resolution, approved Saturday, that would force Yeltsin to appoint a new prime minister within three months and then revoke his powers to rule by decree in transforming the country's economy.

The resolution also undermines the measures, present and planned, that the government intends to use to transform the centrally planned economy inherited from the old Soviet Union with its state ownership and bureaucratic management into one that is entrepreneur-led and driven by market forces.

In Ketchum, when the going gets tough, the tough get goofy

By Suzanne Huxford
 Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Things have gotten a mite serious at Ketchum City Council meetings in the past few months. So serious, in fact, that council members have taken steps to lighten the mood.

Enter Jack Williams, stage right. Williams has been appointed, officially, as Ketchum Court Jester.

Meetings begin with Williams quoting Will Rogers, often while wearing a silver top hat and one or three pointed jester's caps.

"Will Rogers had such a humorous viewpoint of the American scene, particularly the American political scene," Williams said. "It's hard to take yourself too seriously when you have that perspective."

"I was thinking Santa Claus might make an appearance this year," Williams said. "It's pretty much up to me. I just have to bring a little good humor, good will, to the council."

"Things were getting a little tense and we thought we needed to lighten things up a little," said Pam Ritzau, a first-term councilwoman who thought up the idea of having a court jester on the city council.

'Because of my age, and the fact that I don't take things too seriously, I tend to get away with acting silly.'

— Jack Williams

"We still manage to get pretty tense, but we're trying not to take ourselves so seriously, and Jack is the perfect person to help us do that," Williams said.

Williams, 60, is a professional photographer who for the past eight years has played Santa Claus for Ketchum kids. He says his experience as "Jolly Old Saint Jack" and the fact that he is somewhat famous around town for "pacification-type" letters to the editor about city issues qualifies him for the job.

Of course, it doesn't hurt that he can sing a mean "I'm a Little Teapot."

"I saw Pam and another council member eating lunch one day, and they were talking about the problems the council was having," Williams recalled.

"I started singing, 'I'm a little teapot, short and stout ... When I get all steamed up, I start to shout, Just tip me over and pour me out."

"We thought it would be a good idea for us to sing that at the council meetings. Out of that, I guess, came the idea to have a Court Jester."

"Because of my age, and the fact that I don't take things too seriously, I tend to get away with acting silly," Williams said.

"I'd like to say, of course, that I have a great impact on the mood of the meetings. But as soon as I get done with my little part, it gets really heavy again."

Although Williams has yet to reprise his celebrated "Teapot" role at a meeting, Ritzau and city administrator Jim Jaquet agree that Williams is taking the edge off some intense council sessions, where the mayor and council wrangle over issues ranging from employee firings to Sun Valley parking.

"He adds a little levity to what is sometimes too serious a business," Jaquet said.

"We welcome Jack."

Sometimes we can't see the forest for the trees in these meetings," Ritzau said. "There's a difference between taking issues seriously and taking ourselves seriously. We're trying not to take ourselves so seriously."

Radicals in Iran take major loss

TEHRAN, Iran — Iranian moderates swept toward a landslide victory in the parliament, edging out several leading hard-liners and opening a path for President Hashemi Rafsanjani's moves toward better relations with the West, the official Iranian news agency reported Sunday.

Several of Rafsanjani's key allies captured seats in the 270-seat Majlis, while well-known radicals such as parliament Speaker Mehdi Karrubi placed well down in the balloting and were likely to be shut out of the seats that they have used as a forum for maintaining the conservative line.

A total of 127 seats have been decided in the balloting so far, but the vote is still incomplete for — Tehran's major bloc of 30 seats and two other seats in the countryside. Radical clerics appeared to be headed for defeat in the capital city among the ballots counted so far. Radio Tehran reported late Sunday.

Tehran's early results speak of an easy victory for Rafsanjani's supporters, the Islamic Republic News Agency said, calling the results a "landslide" victory for the outspoken president who has angered the clerics by suggesting the adoption of a free-market economy and the development of better relations with Europe and with Iran's Arab neighbors.

Rafsanjani's reforms have in recent years been bogged down in the Majlis, where a hard-line majority has been able to block Cabinet appointments and water down many of the president's key legislative programs.

Only about 80 members of the last Majlis could be counted on to back the president, although he often pushed through legislation by swinging independent votes, diplomats and analysts said.

Seats in at least 68 constituencies will be decided in a runoff election because no candidates secured a majority the first time around, but results so far indicate a clear trend toward Rafsanjani's Society of Combatant Clergymen, or Khomeinist.

The top vote-getter in Tehran was a popular television cleric, Ali Akbar Hosseini, a mild-mannered mullah who draws millions of viewers for his Saturday night program on Islam and the family.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says an upper level trough of low pressure along the West Coast continued to spread moisture inland over Idaho Sunday. The moisture, accompanied by afternoon heating, will produce scattered showers and a slight chance of thundershowers across the state into midweek.

Scattered showers Saturday night and Sunday morning produced some light amounts of precipitation. Totals include .02 in Coeur d'Alene, .03 in Grangeville, .17 in McCall, .04 in Pocatello, and a trace in Boise.

Low temperatures Sunday morning were on the mild side due to the cloud cover. By late morning, under mostly cloudy skies, the mercury was generally in the lower 50s to lower 60s in the valleys and upper 40s to lower 50s in mountain sections. The warmest temperature in the state was 79 at Hagerman, Red River and Port Hill recorded the lowest at 31.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 98 degrees at Phoenix and Lake Havasu City, Ariz. The lowest was 3 degrees at Devils Lake, N.D.

Moisture continues across much of United States

The Associated Press

Rain fell across much of the East and South and in parts of the West on Sunday. Snow and freezing rain hit the northern Plains and parts of the Great Lakes region.

But the rain and thundershowers that struck the Southeastern states Saturday continued Sunday and spread across the eastern Gulf states.

Along the Atlantic coast, widely scattered rain showers fell from New England to Florida. In northern New England more snow fell, but not nearly as much as the 6 to 8 inches recorded in some areas Saturday.

Rain showers and thundershowers dappled the southern Atlantic states, the eastern Gulf states, the Appalachian mountains and the mid-Atlantic region Sunday morning.

Rain also fell on southern New England, the northern and central Pacific coasts, and over northwest Texas.

Freezing rain and snow fell on the Nebraska panhandle, Lower Michigan, the eastern half of Upper Michigan and across parts of the northern Plains. Snow also fell in Maine.

Heavier rainfall totals during the six hours ending at noon included 1 inch at Fort Knox, Ky., and 0.79 of an inch at Key West, Fla. Sault Ste Marie, Mich., received 2 inches of snow during the same period.

The low of 13 at St. Cloud, Minn., tied the 1974 record for the date.

Reform

The Cabinet will submit its reform program to the Congress today, government officials said, and it will ask not only for approval of the new measures but for the withdrawal of the earlier resolution.

Yeltsin was not present at the meeting, though he is currently prime minister as well as president, but the Cabinet is clearly counting heavily on his participation in the debate when the Congress reconvenes. Yeltsin may meet Monday morning with Russian Khabulatur, chairman of the Russian parliament, to discuss terms of a compromise. Central Television reported.

Yegor T. Gaidar, first deputy prime minister and the government's economic strategist, said after the Cabinet meeting that the ministers are determined, despite the sharp criticism they encountered in parliament, to pursue the radical program they undertook five months ago.

"We realistically assessed the situation and agreed to coordinate actions so the process of realizing the reforms is not paralyzed," Gaidar told the Interfax news agency. "We will not agree to become a rubber stamp (as parliament wishes) that merely confirms that reforms are under way. If this happens, we will definitely resign."

But Gaidar expressed optimism, as did other government insiders, that the Cabinet could overcome the parliamentary hostility.

"I am sure that at the moment we have agreed on effective cooperation on jointly solving all the problems," Gaidar said after talks with legislative leaders.

Silt clogs Bitterroot waterways

HAMILTON, Mont. (AP) — A study shows that many of the streams in the Bitterroot National Forest are in much worse shape than officials thought.

Jary Decker, a hydrologist for the forest who conducted the study, says the streams are choked with more sediment than they can handle.

He said only one-third of the forest's timber-producing land has streams healthy enough to allow normal planning for routine timber sales, and most of that is in the headwaters areas drainages that have no roads or other developments.

Another one-third of the Bitterroot land that is supposed to yield timber is off-limits for the foreseeable future, Decker said. The reason is because logging and road construction already have dumped 10 times as much silt into the streams as forest standards allow.

The other one-third of the forest's 400,000-acre timber base probably has streams that are at, or over, acceptable silt levels, he said, although officials need more field work to be sure.

Decker said the problems occurred because of past practices in the forest. "We're finding out watersheds aren't in as good a shape as we thought," added Chuck Prusa, a forest resource staff officer. "The results kind of bays us alarmed."

Those results have derailed most of the forest's proposed five-year timber plan for the first half of the 1990s. Of 44 projects, only five were in drainages that Decker's analysis said were healthy.

Eight were in drainages already too damaged, and the rest were in areas where there was too little data, and little margin for error.

Officials say that means they will be selling less timber, but they can't yet say how much less.

Caldwell man had been shot in head

CALDWELL — A Caldwell man whose body was found in a dry irrigation ditch on Saturday had been shot several times in the head and chest, Canyon County Sheriff's Capt. Dave Rowe said.

The remains of Corey Lynn Shaddy, 22, were found about 11 a.m. Saturday. A farmer was spraying to run water into a ditch about four miles northwest of Middleton when he spotted Shaddy's body, Rowe said. He said the farmer burned weeds and grass along the ditch earlier this month, which accounted for a number of burps on the body.

An autopsy was scheduled today, but Rowe said Shaddy clearly was murdered. He said there were "several people that we're looking pretty strongly at" as suspects, but no arrest was imminent and an investigation was continuing.

Remains believed to be downed pilot

LEWISTON — Authorities are investigating the possibility that a body found in the Snake River in Idaho County could be that of a helicopter pilot who crashed near Hells Canyon Dam last month.

No identification was on the partially clothed body of a white male found Saturday. Idaho County Sheriff's Deputy Frank Gerren pulled the body from the river below Granite Creek Rapids, about eight miles downstream from the crash site, a sheriff's dispatcher said Sunday.

The body was taken to Lewiston for an autopsy, scheduled today.

Report criticizes appeals process plan

MISSOULA, Mont. — A federal report says a plan by the Bush administration to eliminate the Forest Service's appeals process might prevent "meaningful public comment" on timber sales.

The report by the Congressional Research Service, the information-gathering arm of Congress, said the plan may force protesters into court, greatly increasing delays in timber cutting and making timber supplies less certain.

Ross Gorte, coauthor of the report with attorney Pamela Baldwin, said the Forest Service's own statistics do not back the administration's claim that many timber sale appeals are frivolous, time consuming and costly. "The administrative appeals process has been a valuable tool for the Forest Service," Gorte said in a telephone interview last week with the Missoulian. "Most appeals appear to be justified."

"Appeals have not significantly reduced the volume of timber sold," said Gorte, a specialist in natural resources policy. "The clash of values in our national forests won't go away if the appeals process goes away. We simply will see more litigation and less timber on the market."

Ketchum lodge heads to auction block

KETCHUM — Boulder Mountain Hotel, a 57-room Ketchum lodge mired in debt since it was built in 1989, is scheduled to be auctioned off April 21 in a trustee's sale at First American Title Co.

Steering Hotels Corp., a San Luis Obispo, Calif., company that has been operating the Boulder Mountain Hotel, will continue to operate it despite an expected ownership change, general manager Jeff Decker said. "Frankly it's a good hotel," Decker said. "It was basically built under bankruptcy."

Mexitate Industrial asbestos plant and scores of foundries and chemical plants. "You should be here at night when that plant there releases clouds of black smoke and the whole area smells, for hours," said Jose Delgado.

He has lived in the neighborhood for more than 21 years, and his hobby is to plant trees that rarely survive.

Two blocks from the school, Bonifacio Valerio Tovar, 50, sits in his small home, gaunt and tired after a trip to the Oncological Hospital for chemotherapy treatment.

He worked for 21 years loading sacks of cement on trucks next to an asbestos plant.

He recently had lung surgery. "But he says he hasn't been told what his problem is. Doctors never tell you what you have. They told me to go the Secretary of Labor, get an attorney and sue the company, but all I want to do now is get well."

In the state hospital nearby, Dr. Elvin Espadas said Valerio Tovar has a tumor in his lung, caused by the asbestos. She said he may have a year to live. She advised him to consult an attorney. "I was thinking of his family."

Valerio Tovar's pension comes to about $80 a month. His job pays about $5 a day.

Espadas said environmental contamination in the industrial area is the biggest cause of bronchial illness, especially among children.

The Mexican capital, home to more than 16 million people, three million cars and nearly 30,000 industrial plants.

In recent weeks, as ozone and other contaminants soared past the danger point, the government instituted measures that included banning private vehicles for at least two days a week, reducing industrial activity, and a crash program to switch government vehicles to natural gas.

The government also gave factories six months to come up with programs to reduce emissions within the next two years or move out of the Valley of Mexico.

Most of the companies, including the Anahuac Cement plant, claim they operate within the established standards set by the government. Anahuac director Diaz Padilla said the company has reduced dust and chemical emissions and is investing nearly $2 million yearly in pollution control equipment.

"But even the minimum standards set now are still too dangerous," Enrique Campuzano, assistant director of the Air Quality Commission of the Secretary of Urban Development, Ecology.

Across the railroad tracks lead the cement factory, Maria del Martinez, who has lived in the neighborhood since 1952, a tiny patch of vegetables in front of her house and remarked that the factory is not as bad as it used to be.

"Before, all of my plants died from the dust," she said.

Activist who doused self with gas gives up

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who said she was protesting the use of taxes to support war surrendered Sunday, one day after dousing her body with gasoline and threatening to set herself on fire in front of the United Nations.

Linne Gunther, 41, of San Lorenzo, Calif., threw several large lighters out the door of a white van parked in front of the U.N. before emerging Sunday morning.

Gunther, who is the daughter of Owen Chamberlain, a Nobel Prize-winning nuclear physicist turned peace activist, put her hands up and walked stiffly with police into the U.N. Secretariat building, before being taken by ambulance to Bellevue Hospital.

"We believed she was serious," said Detective Anton Petrak, one of the police negotiators. "She was repeatedly dousing herself with gasoline throughout the night and she was holding a cigarette lighter in each hand."

Chief of Patrol Mario Selvaggi said she would be charged with attempted arson, reckless endangerment and possession of an incendiary device. Police removed three gallons cans of gasoline from her van.

Gunther drove the wrong way up First Avenue and into the U.N.'s circular driveway Saturday morning, nearly crashing into a guard.

She got out, poured gasoline over herself and climbed back in locking the doors and threatening to light herself, said police Sgt. Norris Holoman. She hung a sign in the windshield claiming she had explosives.

She told police she was protesting American taxes going towards the Persian Gulf War.

Linne Gunther, 41, leaves her van Sunday after surrendering to New York police. She had threatened to set herself on fire in protest of using taxes to fund war efforts.

ver heat-retardant suits surrounded the van and attempted to talk her out. Several emergency vehicles were on the scene throughout the night. Three of the van's tires were deflated so it couldn't be moved.

"Her moods would shift. At times she would be easygoing and then she appeared agitated," Petrak said. "She was afraid that we were going to break into her van."

At one point, Gunther asked to see news coverage of her protest. Police showed her footage from a television monitor placed in the U.N. driveway.

Her brother, Owen Chamberlain, of Ithaca, N.Y., spoke with her by telephone shortly before she gave up.

Police said Chamberlain's 71-year-old father also had been contacted. The elder Chamberlain, who won the Nobel Prize in 1959 for discovering the anti-proton, is a professor emeritus at the University of California, Berkeley. He began his career doing atomic research during World War II, and worked at a laboratory in Manhattan Project, which developed the atomic bomb.

He since has argued in favor of a nuclear freeze, arms control and disarmament. Calls Sunday to his campus office weren't immediately returned.

Stars, environmentalists walk for Walden Woods

CONCORD, Mass. (AP) — Woods Project, which Henley Musician Don Henley led about 1,000 volunteers on a walk Sunday in the area immortalized in the writings of Henry David Thoreau.

Also walking were former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas and actors Ed Begley Jr., Harry Hamlin and Kirstie Alley.

"They called for a halt to proposed development in the pristine woodland that provided the setting and subject for much of Thoreau's 19th century writings."

"This is a place where Thoreau worked and walked and lived and had the message of living simply so that others may simply live," Begley told an enthusiastic crowd before the hike.

The Boston-based Walden

Project, which Henley founded in 1990, sponsored the walk to raise money to buy property in the area.

Walden in the 1840s, Thoreau, who is credited with starting the American conservation movement, lived in an isolated cabin in Walden Woods from 1845 to 1847.

About 60 percent of the 2,680-acre forest has been preserved by the state, the towns of Concord and Lincoln, and local land trusts. The rest is privately owned and the Walden Woods Project hopes to acquire much of it.

Earlier this year, the group achieved a major goal with the purchase of 25 acres from developer Philip DeNormandie, who had planned to build condominiums.

Bush wants unions to stop using some fees on politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush plans to order federal contractors Monday to stop notices at job sites telling union members to pay for political activities they oppose.

As the president signs an executive order to that effect, the Labor Department will announce a new rule requiring unions to report separately how much they spend for political activities, lobbying and contract negotiations, a White House source said Sunday.

Such measures, strongly opposed by unions, will curtail their support of Democratic candidates in this election year. Unions endorse far more Democrats than Republicans.

The White House source said an estimated 3 million workers out of 19 million with labor contracts are in union or agency shops where they must pay dues to a union while remaining a non-member.

He said a published report that the new rules will deprive the unions of $2.4 billion "is probably in the ballpark." Plans by the president first were reported by The New York Times.

The president's order will require federal contractors to stop asking union members to pay for collective bargaining and representation on labor management issues, not for other union activities.

Unions cannot use dues for direct campaign contributions under federal law, but it can be used for telephone banks, newsletters and get-out-the-vote drives.

The unions will not be available to union members, even if they object to the union's political activities.

The individual in the Supreme Court case, electronics technician Harry E. Beck, will be at the White House event on Monday, the administration official said.

The president had only been in office for a few months when he proposed that the change be made through legislation, as part of his campaign finance package.

Pope selects Denver for youth day visit

DENVER (AP) — Pope John Paul II said Sunday he would travel to Denver for the Roman Catholic Church's eighth annual world youth day next year, his first U.S. trip in six years.

Denver edged out Buffalo, N.Y., and Minneapolis-St. Paul to play host to the papal visit, which will coincide with the weeklong youth conference in August 1993.

"I have selected the city of Denver, in the noted Rocky Mountains, in the state of Colorado, which has not been included on the itinerary of my previous apostolic trips" to the United States, the pope told 30,000 worshippers at an open-air Palm Sunday Mass at Vatican City.

Catholics rejoiced as they heard the news during church services across Colorado.

"I think it will be a dream come true," said Renee Fajardo of Denver.

"It's a once-in-a-lifetime experience," said 17-year-old Tara Needbone of Northglenn.

She said she hoped the visit and the conference would help young people address such issues as racism and drug abuse.

A U.S. bishops' statement said Denver was an "attractive" location for Hispanics in the southwestern United States and Central America.

Surveys indicate the U.S. Catholic Church will be 50 percent Hispanic by 2020.

Denver has about 275,000 Hispanics, the largest population of the three cities considered for the conference.

Its Catholic population is estimated at 330,000.

Gov. Roy Romer, heralded Colorado's victory at an outdoor news conference with Denver Archbishop J. Francis Stafford.

Romer said the youth conference would be a chance for Colorado residents of all religions to plan for the future.

"Ultimately, matters of the spirit do shape our values whether privately or governmentally," he told the crowd of about 100.

Fugitive banker blamed for R.I. bank collapse surrenders

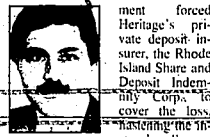

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A fugitive banker accused of embezzling $13 million and setting off Rhode Island's banking collapse surrendered early Sunday after 17 months on the run.

Joseph Mollicone Jr., 48, gave himself up to authorities at 1 a.m. at his home in attorney Theodore DiLuglio Sr., whose nephew is married to the banker's daughter, Attorney General James O'Neill said.

The prosecutor said he and DiLuglio had negotiated the arrest for more than five weeks but could shed no light on where Mollicone had been since his disappearance.

Mollicone vanished shortly after auditors questioned him about $13 million in loans that were never entered in his Heritage Loan & Investment Bank's computer system.

Mollicone's alleged embezzle-

Mollicone (The corporation's eventual failure forced Bruce G. Sundrun on Jan. 1, 1991, to close the 45 banks and credit unions insured by RISDC.

Nine institutions have yet to receive the loans. The banks' clients had cashed checks and deposited records as part of the embezzlement.

In his absence, he was charged in state and federal warrants.

O'Neill said Mollicone would be arraigned, possibly on Monday, on the embezzlement charge and a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Time scraps founder's format

NEW YORK (AP) — Time magazine, the nation's biggest and oldest newsweekly, is scrapping the format its founder created in favor of one that will put short news summaries in front, long stories in the middle and reviews in back.

The redesign, showing up in this week's issue, caps months of self-examination which magazine designers prodded made of hundreds of carefully selected readers and nonreaders.

Managing Editor Henry Muller said the new look accommodates Time's evolution from a magazine that mainly summarizes the news to one that emphasizes investigation, analysis and stories that "go beyond the news."

Time, with a weekly circulation of 4.6 million and more advertising than rivals Newsweek or U.S. News & World Report, is Time Warner Inc.'s flagship magazine.

Its color format, created by Time founder Henry R. Luce in 1923, divided the magazine into sections called Nation, World, Business and several smaller departments.

Valley schools ponder next move

Budget crunch means lean future for most districts

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local school district budgets are the main casualties of the Idaho Legislature's bruising battle over education funding.

From Twin Falls to Burley, Jerome to Rupert, the message from district superintendents is the same: The 1992-93 school year will be one of the leanest in years.

"There will be less money available per student," said Twin Falls Superintendent Terrell Donich.

And that, Donich said, probably will mean larger classes, fewer teachers, scarcer or more outdated supplies, or some combination of those options.

The Twin Falls district will look at leaving some teaching positions empty to save money, he said.

Details will come in the next few months, as districts prepare their budgets for the 1993 fiscal year.

After weeks of struggle, the Legislature agreed last month to give $497 million in General Fund money to the state's 113 districts. That's about $36 million more than various dedicated accounts; that means slightly more than $531 million will be distributed to the schools.

However, $2 million of that money is earmarked for the Schools 2000 Committee to continue its education-reform efforts.

After expenses for transportation, state-paid employees, benefits and other special programs are deducted, about $368.3 million is left for classroom operations.

How much of that money any one district will receive depends on the number of students and the amount of taxable property within the district.

Although the $497-million is $10 million higher than the current year's appropriation, quirks in the funding formula mean most Magic Valley school districts will lose money. And if enrollment increases, even a small increase in state aid may mean less money per student.

Under the school funding formula, the more students a district has, the more state aid it gets. The more taxable property it has — and hence, the more it can raise through local property taxes — the less state aid it gets.

To estimate how much money individual Magic Valley districts will get, The Times-News ran enrollment figures as of Feb. 15, 1992, and property-value figures as of Dec. 31, 1991, through the formula. The results are shown in the accompanying chart.

Because they're based on current enrollment, not projected future enrollment, the estimates are only educated guesses. But they do show what will probably happen in each district if enrollment stays the same.

And they indicate that most local districts will take substantial hits.

"I don't know what we're going to do," said Norman Hurst, superintendent of the Cassia County District. "It's not very much to work with."

Cassia County will receive about $90,000 less from the state next year than this year. That, Hurst said, will probably mean leaving some teaching positions unfilled next year to save money.

"We're taking a good look at two or three staff positions at schools where enrollment looks like it will be down," Hurst said. "Please see SCHOOLS/A5"

State spending on schools

Most Magic Valley school districts can expect less state money in 1992-93 than this year.

Sen. Craig slates town meeting for April 20

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Larry Craig will hold a town meeting here on Monday, April 20, on federal issues of concern to Twin Falls-area residents.

The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in Room 108 of the Aspen Building on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho.

"Town meetings are one of the best ways I know of staying in touch with the real concerns of Idahoans," the Idaho Republican said. "Polls don't tell you what's really on people's minds. Face to face meetings do."

Jerome's irrigation water for residents, farms begins soon

JEROME — Jerome residents can expect irrigation water to be available the first week of May.

"Ditch diggers are out cleaning ditches and flushing the ditches the last week of May," said John Cook, director of the city street department.

City residents are asked not to use the ditch water until after May 1 in order to allow enough water to adequately flush the ditches, he said.

In areas outside the city, water will be available for irrigation purposes April 13 and 14, according to Ted Dishel, director of the North Side Canal Co.

Deadline nears for filing with Golf Advisory Board

TWIN FALLS — Those interested in filing an opening on the city Golf Advisory Board are urged to send a letter to the city by May 10.

Letters should be addressed to the city of Twin Falls, P.O. Box 1433, a golf course spokesman said.

Exploration firm returns to creek for more drilling

KETCHUM — Gold prospectors plan to return to the West Fork of Warm Springs Creek this summer for more exploratory drilling.

BioMine, Inc., a minerals exploration corporation based in California, began exploratory drilling on its patented claims west of Ketchum last summer. The firm dug pit excavations for core drilling at three sites that were later reclaimed and revegetated.

A new proposal, filed with the Ketchum Ranger District, seeks permission to drill 15 through 30 holes in four areas over the next two years. An estimated 2.5 miles of access routes would be constructed.

The Forest Service is preparing an environmental assessment on the proposal and public comment is requested.

"The first step in this process is to identify any concerns and issues the public feels we need to address in the environmental assessment," said Ketchum District Ranger Alan Pinkerton.

He noted that mining and related activities are the rights governed by the 1872 Mining Law.

A discussion paper on BioMine's proposal is available at the Ketchum Ranger District office on Sun Valley Road and at Sawtooth National Forest headquarters, 2647 Kimberly Road East in Twin Falls.

Written comments on the project should be mailed to the Ketchum Ranger District, P.O. Box 2356, Ketchum, ID 83340.

Middle school expert to speak to parents Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — An expert on middle school education will speak and answer questions at a parent meeting 8 p.m. Tuesday at O'Leary Junior High.

Pit bull's 2nd attack injures 11-year-old Jerome girl

JEROME — A pit bull dog in Jerome attacked and bit an 11-year-old girl as she tried to help a friend earlier this week, Jerome Police reported.

April Brock received multiple bites and paw cuts from a dog owned by Gomy Benavidez, 200 East F St. in Jerome. The Brock girl was bitten on the arms, shoulders and in the groin area.

She was taken to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center for treatment and released.

This is the second incident of the dog attacking someone, Officer Harold Applewhite said.

According to a city ordinance, a pet owner can be cited if a dog has a history of two or three attacks on people, and the animal could be destroyed, Applewhite said.

Pair won't halt illegal work along stream banks

By N.S. Nokkventved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Property owners on Billingsley Creek have refused to halt illegal work along stream banks that would harm wildlife and fish habitat, a state official says.

When meetings with the owners and orders to halt bank-clearing work failed, the Idaho Department of Water Resources turned to legal action against landowners Roger and George Crandlemire, said Terry Blau of the department's Twin Falls office.

Responding to a report that someone was clearing the stream bank along property belonging to the Crandlemires, the department issued a "cease-and-desist order," Blau said.

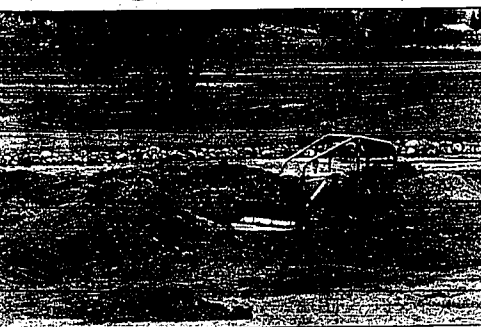

When the owners did not heed the order, the department turned the case over to Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson.

Blau said he and Roger Crandlemire, who lives in Eagle, and George Crandlemire, of Ketchum, about the requirements to get a permit before making any stream channel alterations. The Crandlemires assured Blau they wouldn't do anything in the stream channel without a permit, Blau said.

Sometime later a bulldozer was seen working in the stream, he said, and Blau issued a cease-and-desist order. He met with the owners, who seemed willing to cooperate and agreed to repair damage, Blau said.

"Apparently they kept working," he said. Later he got another call from a neighbor that someone was dumping dirt and rock in the stream and was removing plants along the stream, Blau said.

issued a cease-and-desist order. He met with the owners, who seemed willing to cooperate and agreed to repair damage, Blau said.

"Apparently they kept working," he said. Later he got another call from a neighbor that someone was dumping dirt and rock in the stream and was removing plants along the stream, Blau said.

The department documented that additional work had been done in the stream after the cease-and-desist order had been issued.

That's when he turned the case over to Nelson, Blau said.

An equipment operator identified as Dan Peterson at Blau's home pleaded guilty and was fined $100.

But when Blau visited the site Wednesday with the owners and federal and state officials, more work without a permit had been done along the creek, he said.

Nelson did not return repeated phone calls to The Times-News last week, and the Crandlemires couldn't be reached for comment.

"They haven't benefited any fish habitat," said Fred Partridge, fish biologist with Region 4 of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

The owners' landscaping project included removing the overhanging vegetation along the creek banks, an action that destroyed habitat for small birds and mammals and removed shade over the water, he said.

Woody debris removed from the stream once provided habitat for the insects that many fish feed on. The rock rip-rap along the creek provides no hiding cover for fish, Partridge said.

But the effects on fish in Billingsley Creek most likely will be only in the immediate vicinity of the work, Partridge said. It won't hurt popular fishing holes farther upstream.

Where They Stand

Health Care Reform

State Sen. Mike Crapo of Idaho Falls, left, and Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn, right, are running for the Republican nomination for the 2nd Congressional District.

Crapo — Crapo opposes any kind of national health care system, favoring a network of incentives and reforms to lower the cost of health care.

"Instead of taxing people to take care of them, let's give them tax credits to let them take care of themselves and make their own health-care decisions in the free market," he said last week in Twin Falls.

Crapo proposes refundable income-tax credits for health insurance premiums; expanding deductibility of medical expenses; and allowing people to set up tax-free "individual medical accounts" similar to individual retirement accounts, which they could use for catastrophic medical expenses.

He also wants to reduce federal regulation of health care providers, saying that administrative costs account for 25 to 30 percent of all medical costs.

Unlike many of his fellow attorneys, Crapo endorses liability reform in malpractice cases. He would limit the amount of damages plaintiffs could recover for "pain and suffering," shorten the time period within which people could sue, and limit the fees attorneys could recover in such cases.

Crapo supports expansion of nurse practitioner programs and encouragement of family practice programs in rural areas to make health care more accessible to rural residents.

Glenn — Glenn, who also opposes a national health care system, released a 10-point reform plan last week.

Topping his list is reduction of the federal tax burden, which Glenn called "the single most necessary step we should take to make health care and all other necessary commodities more affordable."

Glenn endorses individual medical accounts, developing uniform claim forms and electronic billing systems to reduce paperwork, and tax incentives for small employers to provide health insurance to their workers. He supports liability reform but says a non-lawyer like himself is more likely to aggressively push it in Congress.

Other elements of Glenn's plan include amending antitrust laws to encourage cooperation between hospitals, physicians and other health care providers, and making it easier for drug companies to bring new and generic drugs onto the market.

He advocates banning state-mandated insurance coverage, such as an Idaho law requiring insurers who cover mastectomies to also cover mammograms.

To relieve the shortage of physicians in rural areas, Glenn supports a bill to allow physicians, nurses, nurse practitioners and physicians' assistants to deduct up to $5,000 in interest on their student loans for up to three years if they practiced in rural areas during that time.

Paper emphasizes campaign issues

If you're like most people (that is, if you're neither employed by a political candidate nor related to one), you're probably looking forward to the 1992 campaigns with a mixture of boredom and disgust.

You're tired of politicians who trot out the same platitudes they used the last time around and who spend most of their time bashing their opponents.

"Why," you ask, "can't they talk about the issues?"

We at The Times-News feel the same way. We're tired of writing stories about standard stump speeches that do little to help voters differentiate between the candidates.

So this year, we've decided not to. Instead, we're going to experiment with a different way of covering campaigns.

In today's paper you'll find the first in a series we call "Where They Stand." The series will run between now and Primary Day, May 26.

Drawing from position papers, public speeches and personal interviews, each installment will describe the views of candidates in a given primary race on a specific issue area. We'll do this for as many candidates as we can, from the U.S. Senate to the county commission, on as many issues as we can get them to talk about.

Instead of reporting where Candidate Joe Blow went yesterday, we hope to tell you what he thinks about issues you care about.

We also hope our issue-oriented coverage will encourage candidates to talk less about how rotten their opponents are and more about what they believe and want to accomplish.

Of course, there's more to a campaign than position statements, which can sometimes be little more than pious but empty rhetoric. We'll try as best we can to pin candidates down on specifics: (It's easy to say you want to reduce government spending, but exactly what programs are you ready to cut?)

We'll also run stories that look at whether candidates records match their rhetoric. And we'll still cover some personal appearances, major policy speeches and debates.

We hope you'll find this approach more interesting and more useful as you make your choices over the next six weeks. Let us know if we succeed. If not, we'll keep doing it. If not, we'll head back to the drawing board.

'Embarrassing' records may be off-limits

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake County officials are proposing an ordinance to close government records that "could engender shame, humiliation or embarrassment."

A draft ordinance states that any record where a "readily identifiable individual" named in a "delicate matter that could engender shame, humiliation or embarrassment ... In accordance with accepted standards of social propriety" would be off-limits to the public and press.

In addition, county officials may require that those seeking records get prior permission from people mentioned in the records. County officials could also inform people whose records are requested.

Jeff Hunt, attorney for the Society of Professional Journalists, said the objects to the "shame" language and provisions regarding permission because they aren't consistent with a new state law.

"They could close off practically anything with these three provisions," Hunt said. "I can't imagine the county would want to enact such a law."

The 19-page draft comes in the wake of legislative approval of a series of amendments to the Government Records Access and Management Act (GRAMA) in February.

The act, which becomes law July 1, sets in place new classifications for government records and procedures for obtaining them.

Gavin Anderson, deputy Salt Lake County attorney, said Saturday that the shame provision isn't meant to keep documents private as public by GRAMA defined.

He said he only wants to protect the privacy of individuals named in county records.

Under the new law, the list of public documents includes initial police reports, tax and land descriptions. Anderson said the shame provision is meant for gray areas of the law and was based on a few Utah Supreme Court cases involving the right of privacy.

How state delegation voted

WASHINGTON — Here are the votes of Idaho's senators and representatives on major legislation in Congress this past week.

A "Y" means the member voted for the measure; an "N" means the member voted against the measure; an "A" means the member did not vote; a "P" means the member voted present, and an "R" means a member resigned.

SENATE VOTES:
TO URGE THE PRESIDENT TO SHOW LEADERSHIP ON ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION
 The Senate approved, 87-11, a resolution urging President Bush to attend the United Nations-sponsored Earth Summit in Brazil in June and demonstrate leadership in reducing pollution that contributes to global warming. (H. Con. Res. 292)
 Craig (R)-N
 Symms (R)-N
TO CUT DEFENSE BY MORE THAN THE PRESIDENT HAS REQUESTED FOR FISCAL 1993
 The Senate failed to pass, 45-50, an amendment to the 1993 budget requested by President Bush. Bush has requested a $50 billion cut over six years, while the amendment called for an additional $8.2 billion in budget authority and $4.2 billion in outlays for fiscal 1993 in areas that would not have affected the defense personnel paybill. (Amendment to S. Con. Res. 106)
 Craig (R)-N
 Symms (R)-N

HOUSE VOTES:
TO BAR FREE MASS MAILINGS BY MEMBERS OF CONGRESS OUTSIDE THEIR DISTRICT
 The House passed, 408-8, a bill to bar free mass mailings by members of Congress outside their district. The bill would require members to pay for the cost of mailing materials to residents outside their districts. The Republican-led move was designed in part to level the playing field between incumbents and challengers during an election year. (H.R. 4104)
 LaRocco (D)-Y
 Stallings (D)-Y
TO REFORM CONGRESSIONAL CAMPAIGN SPENDING PRACTICES
 The House passed, 259-165, a House and Senate conference package of reforms calling for voluntary spending limits for campaigns and public matching funds for House candidates who stay within the limits. It also would limit contributions from political action committees (PACs) and would close other loopholes in current rules governing contributions. The measure is designed to restore public confidence in a process thought to be tainted by special interests and an weighted in favor of incumbents. (S.3)

 LaRocco (D)-Y
 Stallings (D)-Y
TO REFORM THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE HOUSE BY APPOINTING PROFESSIONAL MANAGERS
 The House passed, 269-81, a Democratic plan to create two new professional positions to oversee the non-legislative operations of the House: a director and an inspector general. The plan was developed in response to the management problems exposed by the House banking and post office scandals. Republicans failed in their efforts to go further and include legislative reform in this initiative. (H. Res. 423)
 LaRocco (D)-Y
 Stallings (D)-Y
TO DOUBLE THE EARNINGS LIMIT FOR OLDER WORKERS BEFORE THEIR SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS GET REDUCED
 The House passed, 340-68, a series of amendments to the Older Americans Resource Act. One would increase from $10,000 to $20,000 over five years the ceiling on wages of older workers which triggers a reduction in their Social Security benefits. For every $3 earned under the current limit, $1 is lost in benefits. Another amendment would increase some widows' benefits under Social Security. (H.R. 2367)

Schools

 School Board will meet tonight to discuss the issue, he said.
Will Brown, Jerome County District superintendent, said staff cuts probably aren't in the cards for his district, but teachers probably will get cost-of-living salary increases.
 Brown's district will get about $52,000 less state aid next year. Reduced services and delayed replacement of textbooks and supplies are possibilities, Brown said.

"To tell you the truth, we're so tight right now that we feel we're hurting education now because of lack of supplies," he said. "It's going to be a bad year for Jerome education and Idaho education."

The news isn't bad for every district.

Four Magic Valley districts — Blaine County, Camas County, Dietrich and Three Creek — likely will receive small funding increases. For Camas, Dietrich and Three Creek, that's because property values have stayed the same or increased only slightly. Blaine County will get about $15,000 more next year, because it is one of a handful of districts around the state that is "floored."

That, explained district treasurer Mike Chatterton, means Blaine is guaranteed not to receive less money per "support" unit — a measure roughly equivalent to a classroom — than it got the previous year.

Because Blaine County's sky-high property values and relatively few students, it would end up owing the state money if it went through the current formula.

Chatterton estimated that Blaine would get about $146,000 next fiscal year. That represents less than 5 percent of the district's total budget, which Chatterton said would be about $11.9 million next fiscal year.

"When they talk about state funding, we don't get excited because we don't get any anyway," he said.

Comparing the amount of state school support for this year and next year can be tricky. Last year's $487 million appropriation contained some $12 million earmarked for "one-time" expenses. That one-time money has been removed from the fiscal 1993 appropriation.

Several legislators around this past session felt they had wanted schools not to count on getting any one-time funds in the future. When that is taken out of consideration, they said, the $497 million represents a substantial increase in funding.

Twin Falls' Donich doesn't buy that argument.

"The checks don't come in with 'one-time' written on them," he said. In passing the school budget, the Legislature argued that it couldn't afford to give any more right now. It promised, in a statement of legislative intent, to give schools $5 million more next January if there was enough revenue.

Donich, however, characterized that approach as nickel-and-diming the public schools.

"Instead of cutting everything to the bone, we would rather have them pass a law telling us what we don't have to do next year," he said. "Driver's ed, transportation, gifted and talented — what program don't you want anymore?"

Sportsquote

“I wasn't beating very many guys, so I decided to change a few things in my swing on the front nine. I didn't want to finish last like I did at the TPC. I wanted to shoot a halfway decent round.”

— Mark Calcavecchia, on his score of 29 on the back nine of Sunday's Masters Golf Tournament

The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — It isn't just a hot streak; Freddie is for real.
Fred Couples, he of the easy swing and the easy-going, California laid-back manner, confirmed his stature as a golf superstar, the brightest of them all, with a two-stroke victory Sunday in the Masters. He did it on the strength of a closing 2-under-par 70 — and about two blades of grass.

Those were the sprigs on a steep bank, a few inches above the surface of Raes Creek, that stopped his ball a foot short of backing into the water on the 12th hole.
A brilliantly lofted little chip enabled Couples to save par — and his lead — from that precarious position and sent him into the last six holes at Augusta National with a two-shot advantage.

Couples brought it home in style, in sharp contrast to the putting problems that embarrassed him over the final nine holes of the 1990 PGA Championship at Shoal Creek.

...This time he ran in a 10-foot birdie putt on the 14th that all but slammed the door on his challengers and assured the Masters of its first American winner since Larry Mize in 1987.

Couples, now 32 and just reaching his golfing maturity, scored his third victory in the tournament at Augusta National.

It was at that time, in the U.S. Open, that Couples began a streak that now has produced 20 finishes of sixth or better in 25 worldwide starts. In that period, he has collected $2,666,725 in worldwide earnings.

The $270,000 he collected for this title also gave Couples $1,000,000 already this year, the most ever at this stage of a season.

Couples also broke Europe's string of four consecutive victories and six of the last nine in the Masters.

If there was any downside to the triumph that lifted Couples to a new plateau of achievement, it is that it came at the expense of his mentor and Ryder Cup teammate Ray Floyd, who finished second and who had struck ahead of Couples in the tournament.

Third-round leader Craig Parry collapsed with a final 78, six over par, and tied for 13th.

The indomitable Floyd was trying to add a second green jacket and a fifth major championship to his Hall of Fame record and, at age 49, attempting to become not only the oldest Masters champion but the oldest man to win any was happening before them.

As Floyd, grim-faced as ever, grinding away as only he can, fought his way to a round of 71, they saluted him with warmth and respect previously reserved for only two others, Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer.

Floyd received standing ovations as he approached Amen Corner, where Couples would survive disaster, again after his two-putt birdie on the 15th; and on every green thereafter.

But the birdies he had to have eluded him; his chances became more remote as the holes slipped by and eventually disappeared at the 18th.

Floyd waited for Couples at the 18th, was the first man to reach him when it was all over, and hugged the young man he helped reach the top of the golfing world.

"Fred has a game that can win this tournament as many times as a Nicklaus or a Palmer," Floyd marveled later.
Floyd's game for both birdies on the 15th and 16th holes was a masterpiece.

It took a hard look at the leaderboard after the birdies at 15 and 16 and thought maybe I'd have to get another," Pavin said.

"I thought I had to get to 11 under to have a chance."
But he didn't make it.
O'Meara, with a final round 70, and Sluman (71) tied at 280; giving the United States the first five finishers.

Aussies were down under

The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Almost, again, for Aussies at Augusta.

Craig Parry blamed the crowd and Ian Baker-Finch blamed his putter. Whatever the reasons, the contenders from Down Under were no match for Fred Couples on Masters Sunday.

"We both fell over at the wrong time," Baker-Finch said.
Like countryman Greg Norman, the runner-up in 1986 and '87, Parry and Baker-Finch missed a chance at becoming the first Australian to wear the green blazer.

Baker-Finch stumbled to a 2-over-par 74 and finished at 281, six shots behind Couples. Parry, who had a three-stroke lead before three-putting Nos. 3, 4 and 5, skied to 78 and finished at 282.

Parry complained that the fans made noise when he was swinging, refused to acknowledge his good shots and tried to distract him by playing their own golf.

"The spectators were so one-eyed, it was very hard to play out there," Parry said in Aussie-speak. "I was on the green on No. 3, and someone started coughing on my backswing. It was all day. It never stopped. If a good shot goes on the green, at least applaud."

Parry hit par on 17, but as he approached, he needed 36 putts. Couples took 28, which accounts for the eight-stroke margin between them in the final round.

Baker-Finch, hailed by Norman as the world's best putter, also suffered on the green.

"I three-putted the third hole from about 15 feet, and I just lost all sense of judgment on my speed from there. On the next I don't think I worked putts to the hole."

No one else had enough bounce to mount a threat down the stretch, either. Nick Price, Bruce Lietzke, Ted Schulz and Jeff Sluman all started the round on the leader board but shot 71 or above. Raymond Floyd fell out of a tie for the top with Couples on No. 10, bogeyed the 12 and was only briefly as close as one shot after that.

Young — almost, but not quite — holds Indians hitless

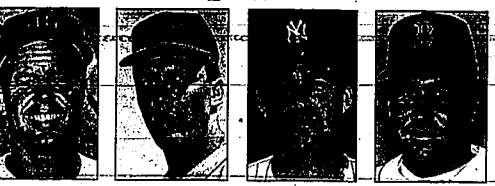

The Associated Press

Some might say, "You don't get an official no-hitter."
Young pitched eight no-hit innings Sunday for Boston but lost 2-1 to Cleveland in the first game of a doubleheader. Unfortunately for Young, the no-hit rules were changed last season by Major League Baseball.

An eight-man committee on statistical accuracy, chaired by commissioner Fay Vincent, ruled on what qualifies as a no-hitter for Major League Baseball.

The panel voted unanimously to define no-hitters as games of nine innings or more that end with no hits. That dropped 50 disputed games from the list, leaving 225 no-hitters in major-league history.

"It's irrelevant, because we lost the game," Young said. "A no-hitter is supposed to be where you strike out the last guy, and the catcher comes out and jumps in your arms. A loss is a loss.

Only three pitchers in baseball history have thrown complete games without giving up a hit or lose. They are Ken Johnson, Houston Colt 45's, April 23, 1964; Steve Barber, Baltimore Orioles, April 30, 1967; and Andy Hawkins, New York Yankees, July 1, 1990.

There have been 38 shortened no-hitters and 12 games in which pitchers threw nine no-hit innings only to give up a hit in extra would be correct."

But just about everywhere Haddix goes, he's introduced as the man who tossed 12 perfect innings and a no-hitter. He got used to the fame.

"They didn't get any hits. Game's over. People can make rules all they want," Young said.

"But I look at seven walks and I don't feel I pitched that well. Sure, there were no hits, but I still put seven guys on base. It's kind of anticlimactic."

The no-hit romances even wiped out on the family last season.

The Perez brothers, Melido and Pascual, each tossed rain-shortened no-hitters. Melido's came last year and was part of a record nine no-hitters — until the ruling reduced the number to seven.

"I don't know why the commissioner took away my no-hitter," said Melido, who pitched six hitless innings for the White Sox at Yankee Stadium on July 12, 1990. "It doesn't make sense."

Sabatini repeats at Bausch & Lomb

The Associated Press

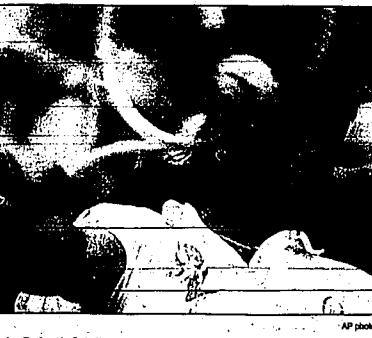

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. — Gabriela Sabatini successfully defended her title in the Bausch & Lomb Championships on Sunday, beating top seed Steffi Graf in the final of the $350,000 clay-court tournament for the third time in four years.

The 6-2, 1-6, 6-3 victory was the seventh for Sabatini in the last eight meetings between the world's second- and third-ranked women and gave her a four-lead tour four tournament titles this season.

The 1-hour, 46-minute match was the second of the day for both players, who won rain-delayed semifinals in the morning at Amelia Island Plantation. Sabatini, who also beat Graf in the final here in 1989 and 1991, earned $70,000.

The rivalry between the players is the biggest on the women's tour and Sunday reflected how competitive it is.

Sabatini dominated early. Graf was overpowering during the middle portion of the match, and Sabatini came on strong again at the end.

Gabriela Sabatini delivers a backhand against top-seeded Steffi Graf during Sunday's Bausch & Lomb Championships.

Graf has lost only 23 singles matches since January 1987 with 11 of those setbacks coming against Sabatini, who had to win Sunday to retain the No. 3 ranking.
Graf reached the final here for the fourth consecutive year and sixth

Angels' Schofield shuffles off to Mets

New York Daily News

NEW YORK — After waiting with growing impatience for more than a year for Kevin Elster to regain his arm strength, the New York Mets acquired defensive shortstop Dick Schofield from the California Angels on Sunday for minor-league pitcher Julio Valera and a player to be named later.

To make room on the roster for the 29-year-old Schofield, the Mets will place outfielder Vince Coleman on the disabled list. Coleman, who strained his left hamstring Thursday running out a bunt against the St. Louis Cardinals, said he will be back on "the 16th of May."

The trade for what Manager Jeff Torborg termed an "everyday player" is bad news for Elster. But he accepted it without flinching.

"There's no use acting like a baby," Elster said, "and I don't want to cause any more controversy than there is. I look at it as a positive addition for our team. He's a good guy."

"I'm sure (Torborg) will play it by ear — who's hot, who's not, who's hitting. I'm not really surprised, because he was leaning toward it."

Management contends that the trade might provide some needed rest and relieve some pressure on Elster, who underwent arthroscopic surgery in September 1990 to repair the anterior capsule and labrum in his right shoulder. Management felt that he had not been his old self since then, but Elster said again Sunday

Jays win battle of birds

TORONTO (AP) — David Wells pitched four-hit ball over seven innings as the undefeated Toronto Blue Jays won their sixth straight game 3-1 over the Baltimore Orioles.

Wells (1-0) allowed one run, struck out two, walked two and hit a team-record three batters as the Blue Jays continued the best start in club history. Duane Ward replaced Tom Henke to start the ninth and finished for his third save.

Baltimore loser Jose Mesa (0-1) pitched 5 1/3 innings, allowing two runs on seven hits, with four strikeouts and a walk.

Pat Borders started the Toronto fifth with a double to left-center and Manuel Lee walked before Devon White singled home Borders to put the Blue Jays ahead 2-1.

Yankees 5, Tigers 1

DETROIT — New York remained unbeaten as Mel Hall had two hits and drove in three runs to help beat winless Detroit.

The Yankees are 5-0, their best start since 1988, while the Tigers' 0-6 record is their worst since 1959.

Scott Sanderson (2-0) pitched 6-2/3 innings for the win, allowing one run on six hits and three walks. John Habyan finished for his first save.

Scott Aldred (0-1) took the sixth straight loss for Tiger starting pitcher. Detroit's starters have an ERA of 9.24.

Mariners 2, Royals 1

SEATTLE — Erik Hanson gave up one run in eight-plus innings as Seattle completed a three-game sweep against Kansas City. The Royals' 0-6 start is the worst in club's 24-year history.

Hanson (1-1) followed up teammate Randy Johnson's 1-0, four-hit shutout of the Royals on Saturday night with another strong performance. Hanson struck out four and walked three in beating Mike Boddicker (0-1), who lost his season's debut. Boddicker gave up six hits, gave in the first two innings — in 1-1/3 innings.

White Sox 6, Athletics 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Jack McDowell weathered a three-homer barrage, including two more by Mark McGwire, as Chicago beat Oakland, handing the Athletics their first loss of the year.

McDowell connected for the fourth straight game, giving him five home runs this season, and Jose Canseco also homered for the A's. Oakland had won its first five games, its best start since going 11-0 to open 1981.

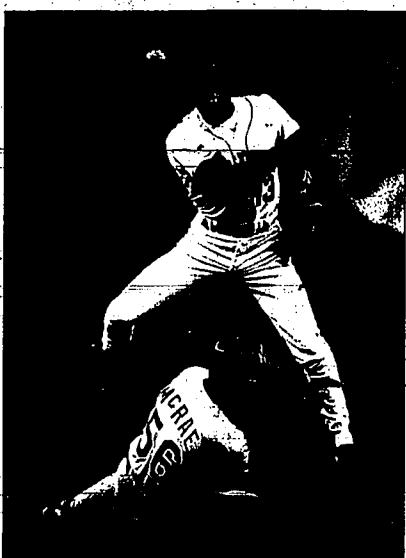

McDowell (2-0) gave up four runs on eight hits in eight innings. He walked none and struck out three in his 10th career start.

Angels 13, Brewers 9

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Rene Gonzalez hit a three-run homer and a double in his California debut.

Mark Langston, a 19-game winner last year, reeled through five innings, hurt by the Angels' 13th and 14th crosstowners.

Tennis

Graf and Sanchez Vicario, the No. 3 seed, were tied 6-6 in the first set when a thunderstorm halted play on Saturday. The match resumed with a morning tiebreaker that Sanchez won 7-6. A pulled leg muscle, however, limited Sanchez Vicario's mobility the rest of the way.

Graf took control of the match with a service break for a 4-3 lead in the second set.

"It felt worse and worse as the match went on," said Sanchez

Vicario, who doubted she could have played another singles match on Sunday if she had beaten Graf.

There was more chance of no than yes. Sanchez Vicario injured her right leg when she fell during a rally in the opening set on Saturday. Her thigh was wrapped on Sunday and twice received attention from a trainer.

Trade

Continued from A6 that his arm feels fine and that he is able to make the required throws from shortstop.

General Manager Al Harazin called the deal "unusual" and admitted that the club had hoped to avoid making it.

He did not want to add another $1.5 million salary to his bloated payroll, either. But Harazin said there was a window to make a deal that might close later.

"We cannot win without a quality shortstop," Harazin said.

"I always liked Schofield. I thought he was the best defensive shortstop of the people who were available."

Schofield, a career .332 hitter, certainly can't offer the Mets much offense.

He totaled 200 homers over the last five full seasons — including none in 1990 — after being a career-high 13 in 1986.

Glavine narrowly misses 2nd shutout

National League

ATLANTA (AP) — Cy Young Award winner Tom Glavine came within two outs of his second straight shutout-pitching the Atlanta Braves past the San Francisco Giants 6-2 Sunday.

Glavine, who beat Houston 2-0 with a two-hitter on opening day, took a six-hitter and a 6-0 lead into the ninth inning. But Robby Thompson and Kirt Manringing singled him on out, and Tom Glavine scored when first baseman Sid Bream made a wild throw to second on a slow grounder by pinch hitter Craig Colbert.

Expos 8, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Ivan Calderon homered and drove in four runs as the Montreal Expos banged around Bret Saberhagen again in a beat up New York, sending the Mets to their worst start at home since 1962.

Not since their first-ever season, during which they lost a record 120 games, had the Expos dropped behind three at home. Montreal swept the three-game series, outscoring New York 21-4. Last year, the Expos were just 4-14 against New York.

Saberhagen (0-2), the two-time Cy Young Award winner acquired from Kansas City in a major winter trade, allowed seven runs on six hits in 4-2/3 innings. He was pounded by St. Louis in his Mets' debut, giving up seven runs on nine hits in 1-1/3 innings.

Pirates 6, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Barry Bonds hit the ninth homer of his season in the Pittsburgh Pirates' past the Philadelphia Phillies.

Bonds homered for the third straight game, a three-run shot in the sixth inning of Terry Mulholland (0-2). Bonds is 5 of 16 lifetime against Mulholland with four home runs and eight RBIs.

There was more chance of no than yes. Sanchez Vicario injured her right leg when she fell during a rally in the opening set on Saturday. Her thigh was wrapped on Sunday and twice received attention from a trainer.

Cubs 4, Cardinals 2

CHICAGO — Hector Villanueva's three-run homer in the seventh inning powered the Chicago Cubs over the St. Louis Cardinals in a tight Wild Card game. It was 35 degrees and a 20-mile wind blowing in from center field lowered the chill factor to 15 degrees under a bright, sunny sky.

National League

Omar Olivares (1-1) walked Sammy Sosa to open the seventh and Dwight Gooden singled. Villanueva's first home run fought the strong wind and barely made it over the left field fence.

Greg Maddux (2-0) pitched seven-plus innings and gave up nine hits, Heathcliff Slocum pitched 1 2/3 innings for his first save.

Reds 5, Astros 4

HOUSTON — Pitcher Tom Browning capped a four-run rally in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly and Bill Doran drove in three runs as the Cincinnati Reds beat the Houston Astros 5-4.

Browning (2-0) wound up the winner, going 5 2/3 innings and giving up three runs. Nolin Charlton, the fourth Reds pitcher, worked the ninth for his third save. Jeff Bagwell led off the Astros' ninth with a home run against Charlton, but the next three batters made outs.

Pat Harnisch (0-2) led a 3-0 lead in the fifth.

Padres 5, Dodgers 4

SAN DIEGO — Gary Sheffield homered and drove in a career-high five runs, including the game-winner with a two-out single in the ninth inning as San Diego bounced back to beat Los Angeles for its third straight victory.

Sheffield hit the ninth homer of his season in the top of the ninth to tie the Padres' two-out, two-run single off Randy Myers (1-0) made it 4-4.

But Sheffield, whose error at third base helped the Dodgers come back in the top of the ninth, won't win it in the bottom of the ninth. Kurt Stillwell led off with an infield single against Roger McDowell (0-2) and moved up on a sacrifice by pinch-hitter Thomas Howard. Gary Sheffield was intentional.

Walked. Sheffield followed with a line single to right for his third hit of the game. Sheffield earlier hit a three-run homer, and is 6 for 11 with eight RBIs in his last three games.

A: A big find of high-quality graphite was discovered long ago in Sibéria. It made the best pencils. They were given exotic names such as Koh-I-Noor and

Ethnic mix in Bosnia-Herzegovina boils over

The Washington Post

LOZNICA, Yugoslavia — Milica Vlado makes little attempt to hide her disgust over the frenzy of land-grabbing and ethnic terror in Bosnia-Herzegovina, just across the Drina River from this Serbian town.

"It is very ugly and it is very sad what is happening," she said. Vlado, head of the local Red Cross in Loznica, has been across the river and seen for herself the aftermath of a violent rampage carried out mostly by armed groups of Serb militants.

The Red Cross here, which is run by well-meaning, middle-aged Serbian women such as Vlado, is struggling to find shelter for the estimated 12,000 refugees who in the past four days have driven, walked, waded or swum across from Bosnia to escape the violence.

Bosnia-Herzegovina, a mountainous region of 4.4 million people whose independence was recognized by Washington and the European Community last week, is perhaps the most ethnically muddled state in Europe. Slavic Muslims make up 44 percent of the population, with Orthodox Serbs at 31 percent and Roman Catholic Croats 17 percent.

The key to last week's eruption of violence across the region is the refusal of Serb militants to accept a state that exists outside of Yugoslavia. Their refusal to become a minority within a newly independent nation has been given teeth by the arrival from the Serbian republic of highly trained guerrillas units.

United Nations officials, alarmed by a refugee crisis that they fear is surging out of control, estimate that fighting in the past week has forced more than 50,000 people in Bosnia to abandon their homes.

A peace agreement signed Sunday in the Bosnian capital, Sarajevo, offered some hope that fighting might be brought under control. The agreement, brokered by the European Community and signed by Muslim, Croat and Serb leaders, set a cease-fire for midnight Sunday night.

It also was agreed that artillery should be withdrawn from battle areas and placed under the control of EC monitors.

All paramilitary forces are to be disbanded under supervision of the European Community, the agreement says. It adds that ethnic leaders will continue talks on dividing the region into three autonomous zones.

Scores of previous peace agreements, however, have quickly fallen apart in Yugoslavia. In the past week across much of Bosnia-Herzegovina, a new dynamic of violence appears to have been unleashed. Ethnic leaders themselves have said that it is becoming difficult for them to control their own people.

The swelling tide of refugees is the most visible signal that events could be slipping out of control. In struggling columns of several hundred families, men, women and children can be seen walking along highways and sleeping in forests.

Relief workers say many of the refugees are Muslims fleeing towns that have been seized or are under attack by Serbian gunmen.

Zvornik, a nearby Bosnian town that until last week had a Muslim majority was overrun and shot up by Serb guerrillas.

Serb gunmen seized the local radio station, renaming it "Serbian Free Radio Zvornik," according to refugees here. They said guerrillas broadcast demands that all Muslims surrender their weapons. Serbian folk music was played over the speakers mounted in the minarets of the city's mosque, refugees said.

It is unclear how many people were Killed in the town, Vlado, the Serbian Red Cross official here, said she was in Zvornik on Friday, and Serbian guerrilla leaders would not discuss the numbers of dead. Across Bosnia in the past week, the death toll is estimated at more than 150. "I saw a truck going around to pick up bodies on the street. I don't know how many there were."

What makes Bosnia's ethnic mix volatile is that Muslims, Serbs and Croats live together on the same streets and in the same apartment buildings in many city and towns.

Zvornik, for instance, was a hodgepodge of ethnicity. One Serb fighter who was shot in the arm while fighting for Zvornik acknowledged from his hospital bed here on Saturday that "dividing the town is impossible."

Serbia, with more than 9 million people, dominates what is left of the Yugoslav federation after the secession in the past year of four of its six republics.

Militant Serbs in Bosnia also have the tacit support of the Serb-dominated Yugoslav army, which has 100,000 soldiers stationed inside Bosnia, which last week became a separate country. Besides men in arms, army bases in Bosnia are stocked with a huge arsenal of tanks, artillery and fighter aircraft.

When the United States and the European Community formally recognized Bosnia as a state last week, local Serb leaders there proclaimed their own state within a state. More importantly, imported Serbian guerrillas immediately launched what appeared to be a well-coordinated military effort to annex land and eject Muslim inhabitants from a broad swath of territory.

Muslim leaders in Bosnia say that the Yugoslav army is standing by and tacitly co-operating in the land grab. Western diplomats say that the government of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic appears to be orchestrating the campaign to dismember Bosnia.

Compounding Bosnia's problems, a major armed conflict between the Yugoslav army and well-armed Croatian forces erupted last week in western regions of the state. In effect, the conflict is a proxy war between Serbia and Croatia.

As deadline nears, Libya will close borders

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya announced Sunday it will sever all contact with the outside world for 24 hours before U.N. sanctions take effect.

Arab leaders, meanwhile, continued efforts to find a way to head off the sanctions, which would include embargoes on arms sales and commercial air traffic to Libya.

The official IANA news agency distributed a statement saying Libya would cut all international travel and communication links Tuesday as a sign of mourning for a 1986 U.S. air strike that killed 41 Libyans.

The U.N. Security Council has given Libya until Wednesday, the sixth anniversary of the air raid, to surrender two alleged intelligence agents. The men are charged in the bombing of a 1988 Pan Am jumbo jet over Lockerbie, Scotland.

Libyan leader Muammar Gaddafi apparently chose to observe the air raid anniversary a day early to avoid the U.N. sanctions over shadowing his gesture.

The Security Council is demanding Libya surrender the two Lockerbie suspects for trial in the United States or Britain and produce proof of his renounced all forms of terrorism. The council also wants Tripoli to cooperate with France in trying four other Libyans accused of killing 171 people in the 1989 bombing of a French airliner over Niger.

Libya has agreed only to turn over the Lockerbie suspects to a neutral country — an offer rejected by the West. Gaddafi blames the men of his bombing on Egyptian intelligence.

Libya's foreign minister, Ibrahim al-Bishari, met Saturday with U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali in Geneva and said he offered proposals for ending the standoff. He refused to provide any details.

After a meeting in Tripoli with President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt on Sunday, Gaddafi said they discussed new proposals to resolve the dispute. He did not elaborate.

When asked whether he believed the West would attack Libya, Gaddafi said, "Not unless they go mad, but then what would be the use of an attack?"

Mubarak, a close ally of the West, has been urging Libya to return to negotiations. But Egyptian officials have indicated many times that there was little Cairo could do unless Libya surrendered the suspects.

Elsewhere, the foreign ministers of seven Arab nations planned to meet in Rabat, Morocco, late Sunday to seek ways to defuse the confrontation.

Iraq attack still possible, U.S. warns

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — White House national security adviser Brent Scowcroft said Sunday he would not rule out military action against Iraq if it tries to prevent U-2 reconnaissance flights, now being carried out under United Nations auspices.

Scowcroft said recent military preparations by Baghdad in northern Iraq, including new antiaircraft missile emplacements, were "very ominous." Speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press," he warned that the Iraqis "will not get away with anything."

The U-2 surveillance aircraft belong to the United States and are manned by Americans, but they display U.N. markings and fly over Iraq territory to monitor Iraq's chemical, biological, nuclear and ballistic weapons capabilities.

Iraq warned against the overflights in a letter to the United Nations last week, calling them "unjustified" and saying they could lead to "unfortunate incidents."

Iraq recently activated the antiaircraft batteries in the country's northern Kurdish zone, reserved by the allies for their own air operations, and sent Iraqi combat planes into the skies, from airfields near Baghdad, for the first time since the Persian Gulf War. Iraq also has been building up ground forces between the Kurdish zone and the Iraqi-Turkish border.

The Bush administration is "talking with our allies" about an appropriate response, Scowcroft said. Asked whether that might be military action, he said he "would not rule it out." The U.N. Security Council warned Baghdad Friday that failure to guarantee the safety of the reconnaissance flights would have "serious consequences."

In other remarks about Iraq, CIA Director Robert M. Gates said in an interview with Time magazine that Saddam probably has "a couple of hundred Scud missiles" still hidden away.

There are ways to beat the blues

Editor's note: JoAnn Larsen is on vacation. The following is one of her columns from the past.

You know, of course, that blue days are inevitable. If you live, say, to be 75 years old, your life will span 27,393 days. Some of those days have got to be blah.

JoAnn Larsen
Psychology

Sometimes getting through the rotten days may be as simple as pulling yourself out of a mood you've settled into. Next time you're feeling low and life is dreary, select from these pickups to get yourself going again.

Take a walk and pay special attention to all that comes to you through your five senses. Experience the ordinary. There is much that is unusual and different if you look for it.

Hang a "Do Not Disturb" sign on the bathroom door and take a nice, long bubble bath. Bathing is good therapy for soothing rattled nerves and ragged egos.

Reopen the door to an old friendship or write a letter to an old friend or relative.

Leaf through your family photo album and count your blessings.

Change your environment. If you've been indoors all day, get some fresh air. See a movie. Visit a museum. Plan a picnic. Take a hike or ride a bike. Or make a dinner date with a friend.

Learn something new. Pick something you can master in a short time. Learn, say, the lyrics to a song. Or try a challenging recipe.

Remember that it happened to you. Think back on a time when you had to deal with about how much worse it could have been.

Reward yourself for all the good work you've been doing with something special you've wanted for a long time.

Keep a "Happiness Calendar." Buy a calendar with big blank squares for every day of the year and record when, where and with whom you've been most happy. Then read your calendar on your "blah" days.

Decide it's "Be Good To Yourself Time." Indulge yourself with your favorite treat or buy yourself a present - a special book, a bottle or bubbling bath oil, a bouquet of flowers.

Ask for a hug. "It's not hard to find a warm lap; once you admit that you need one," observes Gloria Norris and Jo Ann Miller, authors of an article entitled, "Are You a Mess from Stress?" Just ask yourself: Who are the most caring people in your life? Your husband? Your wife? Your mother? A good friend? Perhaps even your children.

When you're tired and overwrought, tell other people what would help and give them the chance to care for you occasionally, whether it's serving you breakfast in bed or just giving you a warm hug.

Do something different. For today, shop at a different TV program, call someone you haven't talked to in a while or arrange to meet a friend for lunch.

Find something absorbing to do. Please see LARSEN/B3

"The joke goes, Twin Falls is about 20 years behind. I started climbing 18 years ago, and at the time we were like, the lunatic fringe or something. Here, it's kind of the same thing, but it's starting to go a little mainstream, they're starting to accept it."

Dierkes Lake gains reputation among area rock climbers

By Julie Fasselow
Times-News correspondent

For years, southern Idaho's city of Kootenai has served as an international rock climbing destination. But in the past few months, Twin Falls' own Dierkes Lake has gained a toehold as a top climbing site.

Visit the park on any weekend, and you'll likely see agile artists working Dierkes' sheer basalt cliffs like painters coloring a canvas.

With 34 recorded climbing routes, Dierkes is attracting people from as far away as Boise and the Wood River Valley. Even a few Europeans already.

Lauren plays off menswear theme

NEW YORK — It's going to be a dandy fall for those following Ralph Lauren's lead. At his show, Lauren sent out one English dandy after another with tunes from "My Fair Lady" as background music.

Take away the black bowlers, walking canes and monocles and you have some great looks, almost all playing off a menswear theme. Among the best:

Vest dresses: Vests that are long enough to be considered a dress, with the same detailing and most often worn over a white shirt and necktie.

Coat dresses: An item Lauren has always done well, he does even better with single and double-breasted styles, often in chalk-stripes of brown or more traditional gray and black.

- Riding outfits: The riding jackets, in vivid colors with velvet collars, and riding pants with suede patches inside the legs have a costume look when worn together. However, each individually would work easily into most wardrobes desiring a touch of panache.
- Black leather: Clearly enamored of soft, glove leather, Lauren offers it not only in the expected jacket but also in vests, pants and both vest dresses and coat dresses.
- Black bugle beads: For evening, Lauren takes the elongated, black jet beads and sews them in row upon row to create a simple band across the top of a sleeveless, long-column dress.

He also arranged them in horizontal rows all over a short

Health notes

UP IN SMOKE: Smoke gets in your eyes, and many of you don't like it. Fifty-four percent of U.S. nonsmokers say they are worried about serious health consequences of other people's cigarette smoke and favor a ban on smoking in public places, according to an Associated Press poll.

BREATHE EASY: Something else you shouldn't get a lungful of — fumes from new carpets. "To some the fumes are only unpleasant, but others can experience anxiety, malaise, dizziness, nausea and vomiting, headaches and other allergic reactions," says Penn State researcher Phyllis Bamer. Airing out rugs before installation and lots of ventilation are recommended.

DANCES WITH DESPAIR: More evidence about the problems of Native Americans: They suffer more physical and mental problems as teenagers than any other group and attempt suicide at four times the national rate, says a federal study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association. One in four Indian boys is a problem drinker by the end of high school, and 11 percent of the youths surveyed reported extreme hopelessness.

HEART AND SOUL: Don't expect to leave your heart in Japan — or leave with anyone else's. Japan currently allows virtually no organ transplants because of cultural concerns over the sharing of organs and what constitutes brain death, Investor's Business Daily reports.

SPRING IS IN THE AIR: Spring allergy season is about to begin. Because of the mild, wet winter, it is arriving up to a month early in many places, according to U.S. News & World Report. Maybe this year, someone will challenge the record for the highest speed of sneeze expelled droplets: 104 miles an hour, the magazine reports.

HEMOPHILIA HOPE: Good news for hemophiliacs: A genetic treatment for the blood disorder may be tested in humans within two years, researchers said after a meeting on the disease at the National Institutes of Health. Genetic treatment would enable hemophiliacs' blood to clot on its own without repeated injections of the substance that makes blood clot.

IN THE GENES: From that same scientific conference comes a report that sunlight may encourage skin cancer partly by impairing the immune system in genetically susceptible people. If so, the researcher involved says, a genetic test may one day be able to detect people at particular risk for skin cancer.

Poor judgment fuels anti-Japanese fire

DEAR ABBY: I was somewhat shocked when I read the poem in your column about the Japanese, written by George Dawson. Granted, you did say it was "longue-in-check," but I imagine that some Americans will take it seriously, since it appeared in "Dear Abby."

Right now, you can't imagine how difficult it is to be a Japanese-American; we feel the anger of other understandably frustrated Americans, and we are not helped by the careless talk of Japanese politicians, as well as some American journalists who are only too glad to fuel the anti-Japanese sentiment.

Your article did not help matters any; you should have at least stated somewhere that it is wrong to blame the Japanese for everything that goes wrong, but you didn't.

It was most ironic that your article appeared on Feb. 19 — exactly 50 years to the day that President Roosevelt signed an executive order forcing Japanese-Americans to relocate in prison camps throughout the West. Yet neither you, nor most other journalists, mentioned that fact.

Please, Abby, no more articles blaming the Japanese! Not all people know that "longue-in-check" means "irony, insincerity or whimsical exaggeration."

A JAPANESE-AMERICAN IN DENVER
DEAR JAPANESE-AMERICAN: I plead innocent to the charge of "Japanese bashing" — but guilty of using poor judgment to have assumed that all my readers would know what "longue-in-check" meant.

In 1980 I wrote: "To our everlasting shame, approximately 100,000 loyal American citizens were held in concentration camps for the duration of World War II. Their crime? They were of Japanese descent."

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a business (export-import) that requires constant traveling between the United States and Japan. He has offices in Tokyo and San Francisco, and we have homes in both places.

My husband and I thought George Dawson's poem was a wonderful piece of satire, and very timely. We had copies made and sent them to friends in Japan.

In these troubled times, I'd like to suggest that you, Abby, do the same.

—ADELINE, SAN FRANCISCO
DEAR ADELINE: Don't thank me. The poem was written by a professor of economics, and I found it in one of the New York Times. And to my regret, not everyone thought it was as humorous as you and I.

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband and I were invited to our son's house for our grandson's second birthday party. When we got there,

Dear Abby

my daughter-in-law ordered us to take our shoes off. I was infuriated since I was all dressed up.

Abby, if it hadn't been my grandson's birthday, I would have left. Well, all the guests were sitting in the living room in their stocking feet trying to be good sports and feeling embarrassed.

Her carpet is new, and, it's not white — it's pale pink. If it had been raining or snowing I could have understood, but it was dry outside.

Abby, have you ever been asked to take your shoes off in someone's home? And how would you react?

—TRYING TO BE A GOOD MOTHER-IN-LAW
DEAR TRYING: I have never been asked to remove my shoes in someone's home but if I had, I probably would have reacted much the same as you.

It was inconceivable of your daughter-in-law to have sprung the "shoes off" request without warning. Had you been forewarned, you might have brought your own slippers.

In time, the carpet will show a little soil and wear, and you won't be asked to be so careful.

Waving the flag for the good ol' U.S.A.

When I hear some loudmouth saying that the United States is no longer a world technology leader, I look him in the eye and say: "Hey! There's a worm pooping on your shirt!" Then I wipe the poop down. I spit on the top of his head.

Who to stand still while somebody cracks my country, not what appears to be capable of achievements such as the World's Fastest Lawn Mower.

That's right: The World's Fastest Lawn Mower is produced right here in the U.S.A. by Americans just like yourself except that you are probably normal, whereas they put a jet-powered helicopter engine on a riding lawnmower. I know this is true because — call me a courageous journalist, pioneer if you must — I drove it on my own personal lawn.

This event was arranged by Ken Thompson, a Miami-based sales representative for the Dixie Chopper brand of lawn mower. He wrote me a letter saying that the Dixie Chopper people had a special customized jet-powered model touring around the country, nationally, in the states, and it would be in my area, and he thought it would be a good idea if they brought it to my house in a sincere humanitarian effort to get free publicity. As a professional journalist trained to be constantly on the alert for stories that I can cover without leaving home, I said sure.

I've had an interest in lawn mowers for many years, and when I was invited to earn money by attempting to push my neighbors' lawns with our lawn mower, which was powered by the first gasoline engine ever built. I believe this was actually a stone engine. The only person who could start it consistently was my father, and he could do this only by wrapping the rope around the starter thing and dunking it in the better part of the creek, a process that required more time and energy than he would have expended if he'd cut the entire lawn with his teeth.

By about the 1,000th yank, he'd be dripping with sweat, ready to quit, and the lawn mower, sensing this, would go, and I quote: "Putt. Just once. But that was enough to goad my father into a furious yanking frenzy, transforming erstwhile well-thumbed-like from a mild-mannered, gentle Presbyterian minister into a violent red-faced lunatic, yanking away at this malevolent stone, which continued to go "Putt" at exactly the right tactical moment, until finally it got what it wanted, which was for my father to emit a burst of extremely-mild-profanity. Then—the lawn mower, knowing that it now had a funny story to tell down at the Lawn

Dave Barry

Mower Bar, would start.

Sometimes, in an effort to earn money, I'd push the stone lawn mower next door and ask Mrs. Reed if she wanted me to mow her lawn. She'd say yes, and I'd yank on the starter thing for a while, then sit down, exhausted and discouraged, and Mrs. Reed, who had been watching from her kitchen, would come out and give me a quarter. It was a living.

Lawn mower technology has come a long way since then, as I discovered when the Dixie Chopper trailer pulled up at my house and the crew wheeled out the World's Fastest Lawn Mower. It's a normal-looking commercial riding lawn mower except that it has what looks like a large industrial coffee-maker mounted horizontally on the back. This is a 150-horsepower turbine engine from a U.S. military Chinook helicopter. According to the crew, Warren Evans and Mark Meagher, it can easily make the lawn mower go more than 60 miles per hour. God alone knows what it could do in a Cuisinart.

After briefing me on the controls, the crew started the engine, which sonded like a giant vacuum cleaner, getting louder and louder like this: whooooooooooooo until it was shrieking and shooting flames out the back when I put on some car protection. I pushed the controls forward and WHOOOOOAAAAA...

Let me say, in all journalistic objectivity that I have never before experienced that level of acceleration in a lawn mower, or for that matter a commercial aircraft. Rocketing around my yard, watching centered in the Dixie Chopper people leap out of the way. I was thinking: "This is GREAT! I want to take this baby out on the INTERSTATE! I want to (WHUMP)."

OK, so I hit a tree. But the mower was undamaged, and so was I, and I was expected to mow the extremely high-speed lawn care, this is the lawn mower for you. The Dixie Chopper people said they'll make one for you just like it for only $29,000, which, according to my calculations, you could easily earn a simply not mowing Mrs. Reed's lawn 116,000 times.

Workshop focuses on assisting hyperactive children Larsen

TWIN FALLS - A daylong workshop on psychological and academic methods for assisting attention deficit and hyperactive children and adolescents is set for 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Weston Plaza Hotel, 1350 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Topics include self-esteem, anger control and social skills training, improving homework and test studying, reducing sibling rivalry, classroom techniques for teachers and numerous related issues. The presenter is John Taylor, Ph.D., author of "Helping Your Hyperactive Child" and two other books on this topic. At-the-door registration is $39 for parents and $79 for professionals. For more information, call the Attention Deficit Disorder Parent Support Group at 678-1693 or Sun-America Seminars, 503-364-9163.

Read a good book, do a crossword puzzle, people-watch or listen to or play your favorite piece of music.

• Buy something new. "It's nice if you can buy a yacht and sail it to Bermuda," says Barbara Holland, author of "Got the Blues?"

• But if a yacht is out of the question, she says, "Find a toy store and walk slowly up and down the aisles. Pick out a jigsaw puzzle or a set of jacks or a stuffed lion or a wind-up dog that runs around and barks."

• Besides being cheaper than a yacht, a toy "soothes the child in us all. It's an unexpected present from the hand of invisible parents and makes us feel cherished.... This treatment works especially well when you feel the world is all mortgages and baked beans."

• If you don't want a toy, buy a terrific shirt or blouse. Embrace the motto on one woman's T-shirt that read: "When the going gets tough, the tough go shopping."

• Give yourself a dollar bill or two and see how much you can squeeze from it. Art Cline, the author of the article "The Great Joy of Feeling Fine," offers these ideas for your dollar:

• Buy a ball or a Frisbee and find someone to throw it with.
• Buy a frame and put a pretty postcard in it.
• Get a photo you like blown up. Buy a tiny plant or a flower.
• Buy the best piece of fruit you can find and eat it slowly.

• Buy a gadget for your kitchen.
• Buy a copy of an interesting paperback and give it to a friend.

• Give the dollar away.
• Live in your todays and look around to see what you can enjoy right now. Dr. Harold Greenwald and Elizabeth Rich, authors of "The Happy Personality," tell a story of a woman who was told by her doctor she had inoperable cancer and, at most, six months to live.

Ironically, reports Greenwald, the woman was relieved.
"Suddenly," the woman said, "the future was something I didn't have to worry about anymore. I didn't have to worry about what to do. I could do anything."

Fortunately, or unfortunately, the woman's doctor was wrong. When she returned for a checkup, there was no trace of cancer.

"For a few minutes," the woman told Greenwald, "I felt overwhelmed all over again by the responsibilities I used to worry about. And then I realized the same thing is waiting for all of us, whether in a year or in 50 years. If I could be so happy living every moment of the last six months, I could do the same in the future."

So, despite the fact she was going to live, this woman decided to be happy anyway. "To this day," Greenwald reports, "she perceives her life as a gift - a perception absolutely fundamental to the way happy people see their lives."

• On a final philosophical note, give yourself permission to fall apart, to lose it, to get stressed out once in a while. It's good for your character and for your psychological and physical health.

• Says one expert: "Falling apart can loosen the personality ... setting the stage for bouncing back - for reintegration." Once people recognize they have a problem, they can begin to mend.

Climbing

familiar with City of Rocks have reportedly trekked north to Twin Falls to take a look.

But some people have known about it for years. "People have probably been coming here forever," said Carol Kotchek, 36, of Ketchum.

Climbers praise the site's accessibility - it's possible to conquer a crag or two after work. The area also is sheltered from wind, and its overhanging cliffs make it possible to climb even in the rain.

For a long time, Diarkes was primarily known as a good site for "bouldering," a sport of non-technical climbs, usually just a few feet off the ground.

Even today, bouldering is a big draw. But over the past three years, noted Ketchum climber Dave Bingham, 35, and others have developed technical routes.

Many of the routes are challenging climbs that rank high on the Yosemite Decimal System, a method used to determine the difficulty of a climb. The most difficult climbs in the world now rate 5.14. Diarkes has routes ranging from 5.6 to 5.12-plus.

One recent sunny Sunday, Bingham adeptly scaled a 5.12 route, his movements calculated but fluid. Below him, a pile of rock rubble made the onlooker wonder just how secure Diarkes' ragged cliffs can be. Once back on the ground, Bingham affirmed this concern.

"For years," he never even thought of coming over to the cliffs here because they looked so loose," he said.

In addition, the climbers' skills were still developing and the wind looked steep and difficult. But as the climbers improved, they craved new challenges, and the rugged north cliff obliged.

Kotchek and Bingham both said the trend in climbing was toward shorter routes because the shorter route, the more difficult a climb can be.

Endurance and power are the name of the game on "big wall" climbs such as those tallied at Yosemite. But at Diarkes, fitness and gymnastic grace rule the rocks.

Mark and Tracey Weber of Hansen enjoy climbing as a couple. They've been doing it for years, long enough that their three young children play utterly unconcerned on terra firma while Mom and Dad hang by their fingers from the cliffs.

Mark grew up in California at a time when his high school offered rock-climbing classes with frequent field-trips to Yosemite. His first climbing rig consisted of metal rings from a snaffle horse bit and a piece of seat belt.

"The joke goes, Twin Falls is about 20 years behind," Mark said. "I started climbing 18 years ago, and at the time we were like, the Jungles fringe or something. Here, it's kind of the same thing, but it's starting to go a little mainstream, they're starting to accept it."

On one recent visit to Diarkes, the Webers climbed "Route 7" on a point overlooking the main lake. Mark, 31, had been up the route before, but it was the first time for Tracey, 29.

Mark led the climb, placing several bolts to hold their climbing

Increasing popularity may spur restrictions

By Julie Fanzelow
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS - The city of Twin Falls has made no move to restrict rock climbing at Diarkes Lake, although officials indicate that could change if the site continues to grow in popularity. But the superintendent of the City of Rocks National Reserve said he would caution the city against regulating rock climbing. "Once an agency takes on the responsibility, you can never back away from it," said Dave Pugh.

Chad Browning, who heads the Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Department, said the city has no ordinance against rock climbing at Diarkes.

"The people are kind of on their own down there," Browning said. "I suppose they just have to use common sense."

LaMar Orton, Twin Falls' community development director, oversees risk management for the city. He, too, said the city has made no move to restrict climbing - at least not yet.

"It is of concern," he added. "People have been climbing out there for years, but if we see this kind of increase, our liability is going to be increased. And we, as a city, are always very concerned about the liability exposures we have."

The city was approached by someone who wanted to teach rock climbing at Diarkes Lake. "We were concerned about liability concerns," Browning added.

Pugh oversees operations at City of Rocks, which tens of thousands of climbers flock each year. He said the National Park Service takes a largely hands-off approach toward all activity at the reserve, be it rock climbing, camping or hiking.

"We can't guarantee your safety when you're doing something inherently dangerous," he said, adding that the agency "long ago decided that if people want to climb, it's their business."

Pugh suggested Twin Falls officials stick to educating and advising climbers and policing the actions of any climbers who might endanger the lives of others.

Climbers can look out for their own safety - as well as the sport's future - by following these guidelines:

- Never climb until you have had proper training. "Certainly, no one should start climbing unless they've been introduced to the sport by someone who knows what they're doing, and that's not necessarily your good buddy," Pugh said.
- Never climb alone. Always climb with someone whose abilities are equal to or better than your own.
- Know the area you plan to climb.
- Do not overestimate your ability.
- Make sure all climbing equipment is in good condition.

The City of Rocks offers a detailed pamphlet on other climbing sites in the City of Rocks National Reserve, P.O. Box 169, Almo, ID 83312, or call 824-5519.

make it possible for nearly anyone to climb.

But all good climbers urge that anyone interested in taking up the sport first get lessons from a reputable source.

Diarkes isn't the place to learn, but plenty of other opportunities exist in southern Idaho. The College of Southern Idaho regularly offers classes at the City of Rocks, and a number of other mountaineering schools have set up shop there, too.

Some schools offering classes at the national reserve near Almo include Sawtooth Mountain Guides (774-3324), the Elephant's Perch (726-3492), Graylock Mountain Co. (342-5095) and Wyoming's famous Exam Mountain Guides (307) 733-2297.

Another source of climbing information is Sports Country at 135 Main Ave. E. in Twin Falls. The shop houses a collection of Mark Weber's diagrams of Diarkes climbing routes, and proprietor Carolyn Bair can special-order climbing gear.

ropes. On any technical climb, one person at the bottom serves as a belay while the lead climber "puts up the protection."

Once at the top, Mark watched intently as Tracey started up the 40-foot cliff. Her strong calf muscles strained as she reached for a ledge that couldn't be more than an inch wide.

Near the top, the wall pitched out at a near 120-degree angle, making the ascent even more difficult. "The rock is just trying to spit you off the whole time," Mark said afterward. "The handholds are just not that good."

"There you go, there you go," Mark told his wife as her right hand gripped a hold and her left foot found the ledge. A few seconds later, she was at the top.

Climbing might seem nerve-racking to the uninitiated, but for the Webers, part of the sport's appeal is the way it relieves stress. "When you're on the rock, you're not thinking of bills, kids, whatever," Tracey said.

Although rock climbing is not a sport for the timid, Mark said the extensive safety precautions taken

• Evening pinstripes. Already a popular daytime theme, Lauren takes the idea of pinstripes into the late night by interpreting them in black and silver beads.

• "Temp tattoos" popular for those not as daring.

Cher has more than her share. Madonna, Julia Roberts, Bruce Springsteen, Cher, Madonna, Michael Griffin, Steven Seidman and Mickey Rourke have them. President Kennedy was rumored to have had one from his Navy days - until Jackie made him remove it.

"Tattoos - or body art in uptown circles - have left their mark on mankind and, increasingly, womankind. No longer confined to sailors, biker babes and head-banging rockers, body art is happening. With decal-like tattoos, body art is not a lifetime commitment. Most decals fade in less than a week. And, with a little rubbing alcohol, they can be history in seconds."

Their fleeting nature has helped boost the popularity of "temp tattoos." Sales hit $10 million last year, according to B.L. Ochman, New York spokesman for Windstar International, makers of Tattoos to Go.

At $3.50 to $5 for a package of two, that's a lot of tattoos. (Real tattoos can range from about $60 to $300, depending on complexity of design.) The company's latest offerings include a line for kids and a rose design: perfumed tattoos that releases a rose scent for up to 36 hours.

Epilepsy League of Idaho searches for 'Winning Kid'

BOISE — The Epilepsy League of Idaho is in search of a winning child with epilepsy.

Any youngster between the ages of 6 and 11 who has epilepsy is eligible to enter the "Winning Kid" contest. The winner will represent the Epilepsy League in various functions throughout the year and will also be the league's entry in the Epilepsy Foundation of America Winning Kid contest. Logan Nichols of Meridian is the current "Winning Kid" of Idaho.

Contestants are chosen to dramatize the fact that most children with epilepsy can lead relatively normal lives with the help of medication and public understanding. About 50 to 60 percent of those with epilepsy can completely control their seizures. Approximately 7,000 Idaho children have the neurological disorder.

Contest entries should include a recent photograph of the child and a statement from a parent or guardian detailing why the child would be a good "Winning Kid."

Include the nature of the child's epilepsy and how the child has lived with the disorder. Mail to the Epilepsy League of Idaho, 310 W. Idaho St., Boise, Idaho 83702. Entries must be postmarked by April 30.

For more information, call 344-4340 or 1-800-237-6676.

A Special Story "My Dad"

My history in chiropractic includes my dad and four brothers. And the thought of becoming a chiropractor myself was first influenced by an incident that occurred when I was about 12 years old.

A husband and wife brought their 16 year old daughter into my father's office out of desperation. She had been diagnosed as having seizure of an unknown cause and was told there wasn't anything that could be done. Her parents brought her into my dad's office one Saturday. Her seizures became more frequent and they had no other alternative. I happened to be in the office at the time. With assistance from the girl's parents and myself, my father was able to take x-rays of her upper spine, which revealed a severe misalignment.

My father proceeded to make a specific adjustment to the girl's upper neck. She almost instantly relaxed and fell to sleep. On another occasion, my father had to resuscitate the young girl and became a local hero for the day.

To make a very long story short, the girl recovered. Her seizures gradually became less frequent and manageable. As time passed, I would inquire as to how she was doing. The last recollection of this particular case was after I entered chiropractic school and my dad told me she was a happy, healthy adult and was married with several children.

This story isn't about chiropractic curing seizures. It is a miraculous story of how powerful the body's intelligence is and given the opportunity, with no interference to the nervous system, it works!

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® BOBBY WOLFF

"Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen, as by little advantages that occur every day."
— Benjamin Franklin.

A reader writes: "I've heard some good things about the advantages of using negative doubles, but I refuse to adopt a system that takes away my opportunities to make penalty doubles. Can you amplify this subject?"

I can, and here's an example hand played at a recent duplicate:

If East and West are using negative doubles, West must pass South's overcall of two hearts. A double by West would promise moderate strength and support for the two unbid suits. And since a double cannot have two meanings in a specific situation, a pass is mandatory.

That doesn't mean that indiscreet overcalls must go unpunished. In today's example, East is obligated to "protect" his partner. With any normal opening bid and heart shortness, East must double. West then converts the double-to-a-penalty double.

The defense on this deal is merciless. After the two top spades and a spade ruff (East leads the nine as a suit preference), West cashes the diamond ace and East wins the jack. The heart shift comes next, and South is in dire straits. If he fineses, West wins and leads a second trump to eliminate a club ruff for down three. And if South reaches the trump finesse, the 800-point penalty is still available to the defense.

A pamphlet on negative doubles is available for $6.95 from Neg. Dbls. Box 831861, Richardson, TX 75183.
