Beating the deadline

Diana Mettler puts the finishing touches on her tax return before mailing it Wednesday evening in Twin Falls, above. In Washington, D.C., at right, a bound and gagged Jerry Hanlon, left, is pulled by Houston Hancock in a protest outside Internal Revenue Service offices. They were demonstrating in favor of the Taxpayers Bill of Rights which would allow citizens to sue the IRS and collect civil damages.

Late filing yields bonus of donuts

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A few quick steps and a flick of the wrist in a festive post office ended months of anticipation for a lot of people on Wednesday, the last day to file tax returns.

David Grosshans stopped in on his way to his second job at 5:10 p.m., he dropped sent his income tax return in the large canvas bins the Postal Service provided. He knew it would be a wait more than a month ago.

"That's when he figured out he owed the government money.

"I thought I would just wait," Grosshans said.

About 20 percent of Idaho taxpayers will file their returns today. Internal Revenue Service spokeswoman Merry Trudeau said. Most of them owe the government money.

Many taxpayers skip the post office and go to IRS offices for help filing their tax-extension forms, she said.

"At the Twin Falls Post Office, coffee, soda pop, a local radio station and 250 dozen donuts greeted late filers. Post offices in Twin Falls, Burley and Hailey postmarked letters as late as 11:59 p.m.

It only ends the pain.

Tami Gooding dropped her tax returns into the slot well after 5 p.m.

"I figure they don't need it any sooner," she said. "I usually have to wait until the last minute before we have the money."

She and her husband, Mike, own the T.V. Doctor, a television repairing and trading business. Self-employment makes tax day tougher, she said.

But not everybody waited until the last minute because he had to write a

Millie boosts Bush income

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Profits from the bestseller "Millie's Book" pushed the income of President Bush and his wife, Barbara, to $1.3 million last year, according to tax returns released Wednesday.

They gave more than half the money to charity and paid $204,841 in federal taxes.

The first lady's book, purporting to be told through the eyes of her pet spaniel, earned $389,176 — more than quadruple the president's salary of $200,000.

Ethics panel 'heard every imaginable story'

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The wife of one lawmaker cried as she recounted the toll on her husband of the House check-writing scandal.

The son of another was taunted by his school bus driver, who said he guessed the father's checks bounced higher than the ball that the boy was juggling to school.

These are among the pleadings heard in recent days by the six members of the ethics committee who sifted through the appeals of more than 150 of their colleagues caught up in the House bad check scandal.

"We heard every imaginable story in the world," said Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., one of the six.

Another, Rep. Porter J. Goss, R-Fla., said he felt the anxiety every time he went to the House floor to vote — a journey he likened to a 30-second bombing run.

"There was a lot of flak from all sides," he said. "Members would ask, 'When is it going to be over?'" They wanted to find out how their appeals were going. We got in and got out as quickly as possible."

The committee members would not place a name with any anecdote, saying that to do so would violate a confidentiality. But they offered a rich mosaic of the scandal's personal toll and political damage.

Some described their spouses as "extremely upset."

A member's wife broke down in tears. Rep. James V. Hansen of Utah, the ranking Republican on the ethics committee, told a news conference.

"He (the member) doesn't want to go out on that kind of note. I've seen a lot of tears in a lot of eyes."

The next shoe drops today, when the ethics committee releases a list of current and former lawmakers who wrote at least one bad check on their House bank accounts over a 39-month period ending last Oct. 3.

On April 1, the committee identified the 22 "abusers," who repeatedly overdraw their checking accounts by significant amounts.

Mistaken indictment leads to million-dollar claim

By Brad Boylston
Times-News writer

Another claim — C1

TWIN FALLS — Imagine being the wife of a police officer, and opening the your weekend newspaper to learn you have mistakenly been indicted by a grand jury on felony drug charges.

That's what happened to Carmela A. Miller of Twin Falls in December. Miller, the wife of Twin Falls Police Cpl. Tim Miller, was the victim of a mistaken identity that, she says, has damaged her reputation to the tune of $1 million.

She has filed a tort claim against Twin Falls city and county and the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement, demanding that amount to atone for the mix-up.

Twin Falls County Public Defender Mike Wood put Carmela Miller on the witness stand Friday morning as an example of what he calls the "cavalier attitude" with which Deputy Prosecutor Frank Nichols handled a grand jury that indicted 39 Twin Falls County residents on felony drug charges in December.

Miller, 28, was somehow confused with another woman with the same birth date named Carmen Miller. It was Carmela's name that appeared on a grand jury indictment for delivery of cocaine and was printed in the newspaper the next morning.

Testifying in 5th District Court Wednesday, Miller said she went to the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics office the following Monday to clear up the problem.

"I was shocked," she said. "I said, 'You've got the wrong person.'"

Even though the arrest warrant she was shown had a copy of her driver's license, Carmela Miller was able to convince the agent at the narcotics office that she was not the one the grand jury wanted arrested.

A computer check revealed the other woman with the similar name, she said.

Later that week, after contacting an attorney, Carmela Miller said she called Nichols and asked for a copy of the warrant for her arrest.

Nichols told her there was no warrant for her arrest, she said.

Wood and three other defense attorneys are arguing for dismissal of more than 20 drug indictments handed up by that grand jury in December. Final arguments on those motions are scheduled before 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbut Thursday morning.

Nichols said after Wednesday's proceedings that he doesn't know how Carmela Miller's driver's license got into the court file, or why she was the one whose name appeared on the indictment and arrest warrant.

He filed a motion to change the name, making Carmen Miller the one indicted, Nichols said.

Weather summary

High pressure continued to be the dominant feature across Idaho Wednesday, the National Weather Service said. The high was centered over the Pacific Northwest and the Great Lakes. It brought clear, dry weather with light to moderate easterly winds. A few showers were mostly sunny except for partly cloudy to the extreme south. A few thunderstorms were also indicated by radar in the southeast and along the southern border. Afternoon temperatures were above normal again with highs in the 60s and 70s.

The warmest temperature in the state Wednesday was 81 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley and Dixie reported the coldest at 23 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Wednesday, the highest temperature was 88 degrees in Columbia, S.C., and at Phoenix, Calif. Bird and Lake Havasu City, Ariz. The lowest was 4 degrees below zero at Rangely, Maine.

Rain scattered across West, central states

Rain and thunderstorms spread across the central part of the nation Wednesday, and showers also were scattered over parts of the West.

Temperatures remained chilly across the Great Lakes and the Northeast.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms extended from central Oklahoma through southern Illinois and the Tennessee Valley during the afternoon.

Thunderstorms also reached from northeastern Missouri to central Iowa. Hail an inch in diameter fell at Columbia, Mo. Smaller hail fell in central Iowa at Carlisle, the National Weather Service said.

A few thunderstorms spread across northern Illinois and northern Indiana during the afternoon. Showers also were scattered from Nebraska to Minnesota.

In the West, showers were scattered across western Washington, western Oregon and the northern half of California. A few showers also developed over Utah and south-central Montana.

Forecasts

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Partly cloudy today. Highs 70 to 75. South winds 10 mph. Tonight increasing clouds with a chance of showers or thunderstorms towards daybreak. Lows 40 to 45.

Friday: mostly cloudy and windy with a chance of showers or thunderstorms. Cooler with highs in the lower 60s.

Saturday: Partly cloudy today. Highs in the mid-60s. Tonight increasing clouds with a chance of showers or thunderstorms towards daybreak. Lows near 30. Friday mostly cloudy and windy with showers and a chance of thunderstorms. Cooler with highs in the mid-50s.

Extended forecast: Southern Idaho - Partly cloudy, windy and cool Saturday. Chance of rain showers east. Fair and breezy east Sunday. Warmer west. Mostly cloudy Monday with a chance of rain showers. Highs in the 50s Saturday, 55 to 65 Sunday and Monday. Lows in the 30s.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah - Fair to partly cloudy today and tonight. Highs near 70. Lows in the 40s. Friday increasing clouds with a slight chance of showers or thunderstorms late in the day. South winds 15-25 mph developing. Highs in the mid-70s.

Nevada: A slight chance of showers north and partly cloudy east with a slight chance of showers in the afternoon. Mostly cloudy east tonight and Friday. Highs in the 60s to mid-70s except slightly cooler locally in the east. Lows in the 30s to mid-40s.

Strong southerly wind blew warm air across the southern Plains and middle Mississippi Valley, but a cold front was crossing the central Plains and strong northwesterly wind behind the front brought cooler air.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 70s and lower 80s over much of the area from the Gulf Coast states to the middle Mississippi Valley.

But afternoon temperatures were only in the 30s and 40s in the upper Great Lakes region and the upper Mississippi Valley, and mostly in the 40s across the northern Atlantic Coast states.

There was a sharp contrast in temperatures on either side of the cold front in parts of Iowa, with readings at 3 p.m. EDT ranging from 46 at Mason City to 82 at Des Moines. The two cities are about 120 miles apart.

Wednesday morning's lows dipped into the freezing range across much of the Great Lakes region and Northeast, with readings in the teens in upstate New York and northern New England. Alpena, Mich., tied its record low of 22 for a third straight day. Wednesday's low for the Lower 48 states was 13 at Greenville, Maine.

years ago, but the black mourning clothes were gone.

There are 1 million foreigners in the nation of 4.2 million people, but many said they felt no fear over the international confrontation and did not plan to flee.

An American employee of the Panamanian D and G Oil Field Services Co. near Ajdabia, 700 miles east of Tripoli, said he and about 50 other American co-workers were on the job as usual. The man, from Louisiana, spoke on condition his name not be used for fear of reprisals.

"Everybody's pretty much staying put," he said.

Nations around the world heeded the call to isolate Libya.

Belgium, Brazil, Denmark, Italy, Japan, Sweden, Germany and France asked Libyan diplomats to leave. Countries across Europe and the Middle East canceled all flights to Tripoli. Switzerland said it will join in the sanctions despite its tradition of neutrality. Washington has diplomatic relations with Tripoli.

More than 3,000 Russian military advisers, technicians and their family members began flying home from Libya and diplomats were expected to follow soon, said the Russian Foreign Ministry in Moscow. It was unclear whether Libyan diplomats in Moscow were leaving.

A senior State Department official said three of the 12 diplomats at Libya's U.N. mission must leave by April 25.

Libya planned "reciprocal sanctions" against nations sending Libyan diplomats home, according to the official news agency JANA.

Only Iraq - under a broader U.N. embargo itself - rejected the sanctions. Sudan's parliament rejected them, but it was not immediately clear whether the government would not abide by the sanctions or side with the lawmakers.

Most governments in the region, including Morocco, Jordan and Egypt, joined in grounding flights.

Egyptian air controllers twice turned away Libyan jets as they tried to enter its airspace. Italy's air force said it scrambled warplanes to intercept a Libyan airliner approaching Italian airspace.

Muhammad al-Fayzi pledged to continue seeking a diplomatic settlement to the crisis.

Timmy Shea, 2, is lifted from a hole in a neighbor's yard and into the arms of his mother, Pamela. He was cold but otherwise unharmed after being missing for two hours.

TV reporter finds boy who fell into hole

PEMBROKE, Mass. (AP) - A television news reporter found the 2-year-old son of a sportscaster Wednesday in a hole where the child had fallen.

Ron Sanders, a reporter for WHDH-TV, said he and a cameraman were on their way to another assignment when he noticed a police helicopter circling the area.

"He called his editor, who told him that Timmy Shea had been reported missing. He is the son of Dave Shea, who is host of a morning talk show on WEEI-AM and a hockey show during Boston Bruins telecasts on the New England Sports Network.

"There was a hole, and I saw something red and gold that resembled a jacket," Sanders said. "I said, 'Are you in there?' And he said, 'Yeah.'"

Police Chief Richard Willis said Timmy disappeared while playing with his 4-year-old brother in a neighbor's yard.

Willis said the hole was about eight inches wide and led to a miniature cave about 6 1/2 feet deep and 6 feet wide. Timmy, who was missing for 2 1/2 hours, suffered an abrasion under his left eye and was shaken up, Willis said.

"It's nice to do something constructive," said Sanders, an acquaintance of Shea. "I'm very thankful that boy was found. I'm very happy for the parents."

After deducting taxes, she donated $789,176 to the Barbara Bush Literary Foundation.

Her autobiography, "Looking Forward," produced $2.718 in profits, and half of that was paid to his literary agent.

Commenting on the overwhelming preference for Mrs. Bush's book over the president's White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said jokingly, "This is somewhat embarrassing, but the president is reading it very slowly."

Vice President Dan Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, released returns reporting payment of $45,271 in taxes on income of $181,632.

Despite the president's opposition to federal financing of congressional campaigns, both Bush and his wife earned $1 of their taxes for a presidential campaign fund that will give him $55.2 million for the general election.

Aside from his White House salary, Bush and his wife reported $197,047 in income from a blind trust containing holdings dating from his days as a Texas oilman. They also reported $1,151 in interest and $1,359 from other sources.

Their adjusted-gross income totaled $1,324,456, from which they claimed itemized deductions of $669,484. Altogether, they gave $818,802 - nearly 62 percent of 1988 earnings - to 48 charities.

Since federal law restricts charitable deductions to 50 percent of adjusted gross income, the Bushes were left with a $156,575 carryover that can be taken over the next five years.

The federal taxes they paid - $24,884 - amounted to 1.5 percent of their income.

Aside from their federal tax, the Bushes paid $4,190 in state taxes from investments of their blind trust. The Bushes are exempted by law from local taxes in the District of Columbia. Moreover, they claim their legal voting residence is in Texas, which imposes no personal-income or capital-gains tax.

Last year, the Bushes' income was $452,732 on which they paid $99,241 in taxes.

The government withheld $66,034 last year from Bush's paycheck, and the first family sent in an additional $145,000 in estimated tax payments.

before the grand jury knew who the proper person was, Nichols said.

The Miller mix-up is just one of a litany of on-again-off-again Wood cases. In November and December, the county paid Nichols with the understanding that the drug task force would reimburse the county, Wright said.

In January, the county commissioners decided to borrow money from another county fund to pay Nichols' $2,500 per month salary. The county is still waiting to be paid back for those three months, she said.

For the past two months, he has been paid out of the Twin Falls County prosecutor's budget, but that office won't have enough money to make its payroll through the rest of this fiscal year, Wright said.

Wood insists Nichols had no financial interest in getting indictments, because the drug cases could result in property being seized and filling the drug task force coffers that paid him. That conflict of interest invalidates the indictments, Wood says.

Bau Nichols and witnesses from the drug task force said he was never paid on the basis of his work with the drug task force. Although he was on special assignment to the drug task force, Nichols was always part of the county prosecutor's office, Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said.

Workers prepare pipe for use in their efforts to stop flooding in an underground tunnel system in downtown Chicago Wednesday.

Parts of Loop regain electricity as crews try to halt water flow

CHICAGO (AP) — Electricity flowed back into parts of the downtown Loop on Wednesday as wary businesses tried to begin running for the first time since flooded tunnels created a multimillion-dollar urban nightmare.

But as many as 60 downtown buildings were still without electricity and people in those that did have lights weren't certain what the day would bring.

"We're backing up our computers, taking files," said Toni Harrtlich, who returned to her office at the Civic Federation for the first time since Monday. She yeamed for a computer equipped for batteries: "This is it. I'm buying a laptop."

At the Chicago Board of Trade, one of the world's largest commodities exchanges, traders in their colorful jackets and badges mingled in hallways with rubber-booted crews still working to pump water from the building's basement. The board operated a shortened session Wednesday.

Other crews struggled to stop the flow of the Chicago River into a hole in an aging, 50-mile freight tunnel system. A section of tunnel ruptured Monday, allowing millions of gallons of murky, fishy water to flow into Loop basements. Heavy rain interrupted work for a time during the morning but the sun was out in the afternoon.

Two truckloads of stone and sandbags were dumped into a shaft dug near the leak site, the latest effort to block off the ruptured section of tunnel.

A diver entered the water early Wednesday to survey the area where the river was draining into the tunnel, but was pulled out immediately because the current proved too strong.

All street parking was banned indefinitely in much of the city's downtown.

"We're saying that onsite parking is no longer appropriate, given the need to get pumping equipment in and out and to take the flow of traffic," mayor aide Dave Mostera said.

On Tuesday, Mayor Richard M. Daley said the crack that caused the flood, costing businesses tens of millions in losses, could have been fixed for a mere $10,000. He fired the department chief he held responsible.

Gov. James Edgar declared the city a state disaster area and asked the federal government for emergency relief. Officials of the Federal Emergency Management Agency began arriving Tuesday from Washington to begin surveying damage.

Much of the Loop remained crippled Wednesday, with many of the city's major institutions — Marshall Field's department store, the Palmer House Hotel, the Art Institute of Chicago, to name a few — still shuttered.

Commonwealth Edison said it hoped to have power restored to many of the buildings that were still backed out by Thursday morning. But severe electrical problems will keep more than 20 buildings out of service for a longer period.

The utility already has spent about $5 million dealing with the disaster, Peikus said.

Position of sleep lowers SIDS risk

NEW YORK (AP) — Healthy infants should be put to sleep on their sides or backs, rather than their stomachs, to decrease their risk of sudden infant death syndrome, the American Academy of Pediatrics said Wednesday.

Studies from several countries have found a slightly elevated risk of SIDS from sleeping on the stomach, the most common position American babies are put in, doctors said.

At a press conference at an academy meeting, doctors stressed that the recommendation applies only to healthy, full-term babies who lack any of several conditions that would suggest they should sleep on their stomachs instead.

Babies with any kind of breathing problem or who vomit excessively should probably stay on their stomachs, said Dr. John Brooks, a member of the academy task force that developed the recommendation.

Parents with questions should talk to their pediatricians, he said.

He also said parents should not be too concerned if a baby refuses to sleep on its side or back.

Top drug unavailable

DALLAS (AP) — A drug long available in Europe but not yet in the United States is the most effective — by far — for preventing heart rhythm disturbances that cause cardiac arrest, a leading cause of death, researchers said Wednesday.

"I'll be amazed if sotalol doesn't become the drug that everyone uses first to control this condition," said Dr. Jay W. Mason of the University of Utah, who directed the study.

Doctors randomly assigned 486 patients to receive sotalol or one of six other medicines. "The drugs fell into two groups — sotalol and all the rest. It was really that clear," said Mason.

The medicine, called sotalol, reduced these life-threatening heart problems by 50 percent. Such disturbances are estimated to cause 400,000 deaths in the United States annually.

Hotel magnate starts jail term

LEXINGTON, KY. (AP) — Lorna Helmsley held on to her lavish lifestyle until the end Wednesday, when she reported to a federal prison on Tax Day and became simply No. 15113-054.

The 71-year-old hotel magnate, who likes to boast in advertisements that "I won't be treated like another room number," was spirited to Kentucky in the company's Boeing 727 jet before dawn.

The plane landed in Louisville, and she arrived at the prison in Lexington, 80 miles to the east, at about 4:15 a.m. Mrs. Helmsley, sentenced to four years for tax evasion, slipped by reporters and into the minimum-security Federal Medical Center for women. She'll have to serve at least one-third of the sentence.

AZT prolongs life when taken early

BOSTON (AP) — People infected with the AIDS virus live longer if they take the drug AZT before AIDS symptoms develop, a study concludes.

That contradicts another study, released in February, that found no survival advantage to starting AZT treatment early.

The latest study concludes that early treatment with AZT and a pneumonia-fighting medicine "improves survival in addition to slowing the progression to AIDS."

The study, directed by Dr. Neil M.H. Graham of Johns Hopkins University, is published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Factory numbers typify sluggish recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Production at the nation's factories, mines and utilities edged 0.2 percent higher in March; the government said in a report reflecting sluggish recovery.

The slight rise in the Federal Reserve's index of industrial production followed a stronger 0.5 percent advance in February. They were the first back-to-back gains since June and July.

However, the increases followed three declines and a month of no change and, total industrial output in March was 1 percent below the level in September.

"I believe we're in a recovery, but it's very slow. It seems like the economy is moving two steps forward and one step back," said economist Evelina Tainer of Prime Economic Consulting in Chicago.

"Our economy is so huge that it cannot turn on a dime like a sports car. It turns slowly and awkwardly, like an aircraft carrier," said economist John M. Albertine, a Washington-based consultant.

'I believe we're in a recovery, but it's very slow. It seems like the economy is moving two steps forward and one step back.'

— Evelina Tainer, economist for Prime Economic Consulting in Chicago

Meanwhile, a Commerce Department report for February showed a 1.4 percent increase in business sales, the best in 10 months; and no change in business inventories.

Economists took the combination as a positive sign for stronger economic growth by this summer. If sales stay strong, factories soon will be forced to increase production to restock empty shelves and backlogs.

The Federal Reserve said production in March was bolstered by a 2.1 percent jump in utility output, but largely to ease unusually chilly temperatures in many parts of the country.

Factory production rose a scant 0.1 percent. Mining output, which includes production at oil wells, fell 0.2 percent.

Output of durable factory goods, big-ticket items expected to last three or more years, rose 0.1 percent while the output of non-durable goods increased 0.2 percent.

Within durable goods, increased production of trucks, appliances and furniture helped offset a 3.4 percent drop in auto output.

Overall, the Fed said its industrial production index in March stood at 107.2 percent of its 1987 base, up from 106.9 percent in February.

In an accompanying report, the Fed said the opening rate at factories, mines and utilities rose to 78.1 percent of capacity, up from 78 percent in February.

Russian aid depends on quality of reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the International Monetary Fund said Wednesday that billions of dollars in aid to Russia could begin flowing by July, but warned that the size of the package will be linked to the quality of the country's economic reforms.

IMF Managing Director Michael Camdessus suggested that his agency and the World Bank stood ready to provide about $45 billion over four years to Russia and the other former Soviet republics.

But he said it was critical for the reform to maintain steady progress.

ment will depend on the strength of the "economic reform" program, Camdessus told reporters. "The stronger the program, the stronger the financing will be."

Camdessus stressed that his estimates of aid were only ballpark figures. But they represented the first glimpse officials have been willing to provide of the amount of Western assistance being contemplated in coming years for the 15 former republics.

Camdessus said that the IMF was looking at providing $25 billion to $30 billion to Russia and the other republics through 1995. That would be in addition to $12 billion to $15 billion available over this period, he said.

President Bush earlier this month announced a $24 billion assistance package for Russia. That amount included a $6 billion fund to stabilize the ruble and $18 billion to help the Russians buy critically needed imports. Of the $18 billion, $6 billion is expected to be provided by the IMF and World Bank, with the rest coming from rich Western countries — including the United States, Germany and Japan — in the form of direct aid, loan guarantees and rescheduling of debt.

Camdessus said his estimate of $20 billion for the other republics this year would be composed of the same types of assistance that were being offered to Russia. Camdessus said the world has a tremendous stake in a successful economic reform.

He estimated that output in the former Soviet Union fell by 17 percent last year because of the turmoil. He said halting that decline and boosting growth in the area to 4 percent annually would raise worldwide growth by 2 percentage points. That growth—estimated this year at just 1.4 percent.

"In our interdependent world, growth in any country is linked to growth in all through trade," he said.

Camdessus said that IMF officials would travel to Moscow in May to negotiate the terms of an economic adjustment program and predicted that the program, necessary for a country to receive aid, could win IMF approval by July.

10-year-old rescues brother, sister

WINTER GARDEN, Fla. (AP) — Ten-year-old Stacy Thomas says she carried her 1-year-old sister out of their burning house, then ran back inside to save a 4-year-old brother, because they're special to me.

"She's very brave," Stacy's mother, Evelyn Thomas, said Tuesday. "She kept her head when I was going crazy."

Most of the family's nine children ran from the two-story house after

Ms. Thomas discovered the fire. Stacy carried her younger sister to a sun room, a half block away, then ran back home and picked up her younger brother, who appeared to have not followed the others out of the house because he panicked.

"I was scared," said Stacy. "I didn't want them to die."

Stacy was treated for smoke inhalation and minor injuries at a hospital.

Carrier Wasp had major role in Malta sting

(Editor's note: This is another in a series of articles describing events during World War II 50 years ago this week.)

Carrier News Service

At 14,700 tons, Wasp was smaller than the U.S. carriers fighting in the Pacific. This was because she was designed to fit within the total limit on carrier tonnage set by the interwar arms control treaties. Wasp was slower because of less powerful engines, and she lacked armor and anti-torpedo protection.

Wasp was part of Task Force 99, which also included the battleship Washington, the heavy cruisers Wichita and Tuscaloosa and the destroyers of Destroyer Squadron 8. TF 99 had left Casco Bay, Maine, March 26. Its mission was to retrieve the British Home Fleet, which had been weakened by 2 1/2 years of war. Wasp soon parted company from the rest of the task force. Prime Minister Winston Churchill had made a personal appeal to President Franklin Roosevelt to allow the Wasp to sail to the Mediterranean with a British escort to reinforce Malta's battered defenses. The Royal Navy did not have a carrier available for the mission. Four British carriers had already been sunk in the war.

Wasp sailed south from Scapa Flow toward Gibraltar on April 14, guarded by the British battleship Renown, two cruisers and six destroyers. It reached its flying-off point southeast of Majorca late on the 19th, some 400 miles from Malta. This was almost the Spitfire's maximum range. The Axis had 400 German and 200 Italian combat aircraft on Sicily. The plan was to launch the Spitfires beyond the range of enemy air attack. In this, the mission was a success. The Wasp was not spotted.

However, the Spitfires were spotted by German radar as they approached Malta, and the Axis air units went into action. That day, over 300 Axis sorties were sent against the island and 30 of the Spitfires were lost.

Within the next three days, every one of the Spitfires was knocked out of action, most hit on the ground. Malta had been subjected to heavy air attacks for so long, the stone revetments in which planes were to be parked for protection had been blasted to rubble. The airfields were heavily cratered. Workshops, crash trucks, gasoline tankers and hangars had been destroyed.

The ability of Malta to operate as a base was breaking down. On April 2, the island had marked its 2,000th air raid. On April 16, King George VI awarded Malta the George Cross for the collective heroism of its population.

Yet Malta's strategic value meant that every effort had to be made to keep the island in the war. It lay across the supply route from Italy to North Africa. When Malta lacked offensive power, Gen. Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps could get the fuel and munitions needed to drive the Allies back towards Egypt.

Go on May 9, Wasp and the British carrier Eagle sent 64 Spitfires to Malta.

These survivors the Axis assault and formed the basis for Malta's rebirth as an Allied stronghold.

Brown: Let me light your fire

ERIE, Penn. (AP) — Presidential hopeful Jerry Brown urged Democrats on Wednesday to shock Washington into action on health care and jobs by giving him a victory in the state.

"What we have to do is light a fire, create some grassroots power and pressure that cannot be ignored," Brown told a crowd in the town square as he campaigned in advance of the April 28 Pennsylvania primary.

That's what the Pennsylvania primary is all about," the former California governor said. "I'm not going to be silenced. We're not going to be stopped. We the people want real change."

Brown, jumped by rival Bill Clinton in New York's primary two weeks ago and more recently in Virginia caucuses, acknowledged that Clinton's lead now looks insurmountable.

But Brown was going after the union vote in Pennsylvania, undisputed by Clinton's long lead and support for the Arkansas governor this week from the political arm of the AFL-CIO.

Brown said he wanted to be a "voice" at the Democratic National Convention for neglected Americans who have no hope of job protection, better wages or health care.

"They'll have to open that convention and hear from us," Brown told reporters. He hit on national health care throughout the day — reviving a theme that helped Sen. Harris Wofford win in an upset last year in Pennsylvania. Brown told a radio talk show host his campaign was a "personal grassroots movement" and said a vote for him could "change the nature" of the Democratic platform, the nature of the general election."

He said a good showing by him in Pennsylvania, with its 169 Democratic delegates, and such upcoming primary states as Indiana, Ohio and California would give the Democratic Party the "spine and spunk and energy" to fight "the complacency" in Washington.

7,000 Alaskans support Perot

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Some 7,000 Alaskans signed petitions to support Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, far more than needed to put him on the presidential ballot this fall, a supporter said Wednesday.

Perot supporter Tamara Hardy said voters "who have been apathetic are just coming out of the woodwork" to sign the petitions for the Texas businessman and independent candidate.

Hardy said he will be a candidate if supporters succeed in putting him on the ballot in all 50 states.

"He is one step closer because of Alaska's petitions," said Hardy, who came here from Dallas to take charge of the petition drive.

Getting on the ballot would require the signatures of 2,000 registered voters. The state will review petitions before Perot is certified for the ballot.

Education report seems headed in wrong direction

There's nothing like a committee to attract people with grievances.

Case in point: The current round of hearings on "Schools for 2000 and Beyond," the Idaho Department of Education's proposed blueprint for Idaho public schools into the 21st century.

The document is a distillation of three reports written last year that addressed why Idaho schools don't work better. Their conclusions were different, but what the reports had in common was the message that schools must be accountable and education must be based on performance.

A committee appointed by Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans will take the result of the hearings and distill them into a final report.

But if the comments at a hearing in Twin Falls earlier this week were any indication, the draft document is already in danger of being amended into yet another overblown, meaningless and useless report, filled with edspac and quickly forgotten.

Why doesn't it address the arts?

Why doesn't it talk about religion in the schools?

Why doesn't it say more about early childhood training?

Teacher management of student affairs?

Those questions, it seems to us, miss the point.

If "Schools for 2000 and Beyond," in its final version, is worth the paper it's printed on, it will be a short, direct and succinct statement of what Idaho schools need to do.

The draft report is a 75-page catalog of goals and methods for achieving them. Ideally, we would like to see it about one-10th as long. It certainly shouldn't get bulkier than it is.

And it should say this:

- Idaho schools must shift to a performance-based system where outcome counts.
- It must judge its students not by how long they've been here but what they know.
- Idaho education must make sure that first-graders are ready, socially and emotionally, to learn when they get to school.
- Parent participation should be central to the education process, not window dressing.
- Every kid in every school in the state should have access to computers, not for 10 minutes week but as an integral part of the teaching of other subjects.
- A premium should be placed on science and math education, and teachers who excel in those subjects should be paid accordingly.
- School boards and the administrators they hire must be held accountable not merely for the smooth operation of their schools, but for what students learn in them.
- Schools do best when the people who run them are the best.

Idaho's education bureaucracy should not make decisions for them.

Idaho should be able to attract the best teachers, but quality of instruction — and not quantity of compensation — should drive Idaho's classroom personnel policies.

Many of those points are in the report as it stands. It's a common-sense approach. We hope it survives that way.

The education president? Evidence appears slim

Ignorance. Any trained physician — from the most parochial small-town sawbones to the most prescription-crazed, fee-inflating Park Avenue internist — will tell you that ignorance is the greatest public health menace in America today.

It is why, for all that this nation spends a greater share of its wealth on health care than any country on Earth, it still has a life expectancy lower and infant mortality rates higher than many industrial nations.

Life expectancy in the United States was 54 in 1920. It is almost 76 today. This has far more to do with the eradication of the public's ignorance than with the development of new obstetrical skills, miracle drugs, microsurgery or hospital technology.

Far more lives have been saved by teaching people about the avoidance of contamination, the dangers of lead water pipes, food spoilage, elementary diet, the preventability and recognition of syphilis, the proper distance of an outhouse from a well, modern infant care, than have been saved by Sir Alexander Fleming and his green mold, the pharmaceutical industry or the cutting skills of all the millionaire celebrity surgeons in Texas.

If there is one great barrier that keeps us as citizens and patients from better utilizing the costly magnificence of our present health-care infrastructure, it is the ignorance we all suffer in the face of its logistic complexities.

Do we have a wart looked at to rule out malignant carcinoma if it means figuring out whether it will require a $1,500 co-payment, three second opinions, pre-approval by health plan administrators and three green forms and one pink sheet, a triplicate of the anesthetist's fee estimate or a lengthy bus ride to the MIVCO's designated wart specialist?

Now it is 1992, almost 100 years after we learned to pasteurize milk, and if a desperate female teen-ager goes into a federally supported clinic, health-care workers with 100 times Pasteur's knowledge must sit and look stupid if she asks about the process of terminating a pregnancy. The best advice she'll get is from her friend Mavis, who heard from a boy on the street that drinking turpentine will do it.

Yet this contempt for science and human intelligence has been carried one more appalling step by the Bush administration, and I'm not making this up. Blue Cross-Blue Shield just sent a book called "Taking Care of Your Child" to 275,000 people enrolled in its health plan for federal employees. But before it could go, National Bush's Office of Personnel Management, in a decision of Cro-Magnon stupidity, ordered censored from the 525-page best seller a five-page chapter on birth control.

This way, any vulnerable adolescent child who gets hold of it will just have to believe her boyfriend when he tells her you can't get pregnant in the back seat of a car if it's not raining.

And Bush wanted to be the education president. He has instead committed the nation to official policies as antithetical to education as snake worship and the reading of frog entrails.

The new federal program to educate the nation about AIDS had the mention of "sex" and "condoms" banned from its message. This is slightly more insane than — and almost as malignant in spirit as — Pat Buchanan's claim to the personal apostolic revelation that AIDS is the vengeance of God.

Let's keep calm in Hagerman

As is typical of many small communities such as Hagerman, there are some serious problems that only can be solved through a resolve.

Hagerman has an antiquated water system, which will be costly to correct. The water and sewer has been an ongoing problem for more than 10 years. Police protection has been an issue reported by the news media more than once in recent years. The argument has been over whether Hagerman should have its own police officer vs. Gooding County Sheriff's Office providing protection.

Being the mayor of Hagerman is about as tough a job as you will find. I am sure former mayors would attest to that fact. It is a thankless job and you will never make everyone happy. I am sure the salary is not enough compensation to endure the heat I have seen the former mayors contend with.

Before the citizens of Hagerman consider recalling Mayor Martin, they need to consider who more qualified would be willing to replace him.

I realize Jim Martin has not handled some issues put before him recently the way the council or those who were involved would prefer he handle them. Maybe this is something that the council should discuss, in a private session, without the input of the citizens.

Mayor Martin made some campaign promises that he has been trying to live up to, unlike many politicians whose campaign promises are soon forgotten. He has tried to resolve some of Hagerman's most pressing problems and, as is always to be expected with making changes, made a few enemies along the way.

I think the mayor could be accused of being overzealous or a little harsh in making decisions. Being new to the job, he is learning procedures and the limits of his authority, but is this a reason to recall him? Those who advocate his recall should ask themselves if they would put themselves in Mr. Martin's position. Would they be willing to take the heat?

I personally regret Rolle Zollinger's decision to resign. I feel he has been an asset to the council in the eight years he has served. He is fair and unbiased and has done an excellent job. I would hope that he would reconsider his resignation, as I would hope the citizens would reconsider their recall movement.

I think everyone needs to slow down, regroup, reconsider, relax and try not to take everything so seriously that it becomes blown out of proportion.

Vote for Bevan as prosecutor

I have known Richard and Pam Bevan and their families for many years, and I can attest to their interest and dedication where the well-being of citizens of Twin Falls County is concerned.

Rich was born and raised in Twin Falls and returned several years ago to make this his family home. As we all know, life is much more complicated today than in past years, and it pleases me that Richard Bevan feels the responsibility to do whatever it takes in the role of prosecuting attorney in order that we may enjoy our way of life, which (as he says) "is what we rest of the country."

Whom we elect as Twin Falls County prosecuting attorney is extremely important. Richard Bevan is qualified for the post and will represent us well. Please give Richard every consideration when you cast your vote. I will.

History deserves coverage

When a public gathering occurs relating to our way of life in Twin Falls County, it should be newsworthy, especially if attended by some 60 citizens.

My particular point of reference is directed at the lack of news coverage given to groups dedicated to the preservation of history in Twin Falls County. In spite of phone calls and news releases, mention has yet to be made of a meeting held April 2 in the KMYT Community Room.

The event, sponsored by the Twin Falls County Historic Preservation Commission, was the culmination of several months of determined effort to locate and document sites and buildings of local historic importance in Twin Falls County.

Fortunately, the Idaho State Historical Society, the mayor of Twin Falls and the county commissioners think the group's efforts have merit.

Acting Idaho State Historical Society Director Ken Swanson had the following to say: "Your group is on the cutting edge of preserving our local history."

More than 60 people attended the ceremony, during which 64 certificates were awarded indicating placement on the Local Register. Twin Falls Mayor Howard Allen and County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman were in attendance. Mayor Allen accepted certificates for city-owned buildings on the Local Register.

Russ Eively, commission chair, thanked everyone for their cooperation and interest in preserving our local history.

Members of the Twin Falls County Historic Preservation Commission were available to answer questions and offer assistance.

A grant from the National Historic Preservation Commission provided funding, said Mary Edger, chairman of the Local Register committee. The group now hopes those individuals receiving certificates will consider pursuing inclusion on the National Register of Historic Places.

Thank you for allowing me the space to make our efforts and successes known.

Give Judge Becker 2nd chance

This letter is in support of Judge Becker. Yes, I acknowledge he lied? What, practicing alcoholic doesn't? It's not unusual for an alcoholic to think he can do it himself (false pride), but they usually fail — although a few have succeeded.

I lost two jobs because of my alcoholism — one 22 years ago when there was little help available and one when I received help but still lost my job anyway. If the companies would have kept me, I feel I would have continued to be a productive worker.

I know of many people that because of their alcoholism and getting help for it have come out to be better husbands, friends and workers because they had to really look at themselves and make some changes.

I hope Judge Becker is allowed to retain his judgeship because my 21 years of experience in the field says he will be a better person and judge.

I feel he has suffered enough with what he and his family have been through.

Push for water protection

A situation is looming that we as the citizenry of southern Idaho must take steps to correct before the problem becomes irreversible or too costly to correct in terms of local economy and personal costs. The ongoing drought and the continued issuance of new well permits is putting our underground water supply in serious jeopardy with wells and springs drying up all around us.

According to the State Department of Water Resources in Twin Falls, more than 100 new drilling permits have been issued this year with many more approved permits waiting to be drilled. Unless people protest, applications will continue to be granted with no limitations in sight.

Two springs in the immediate area of the Hagerman City spring have dried up in the last two weeks, and the city's spring itself is much lower. The local fish hatcheries are experiencing flow reductions of 30 to 50 percent of normal. Wells all over southern Idaho are being lowered to much lower depths to find the water table, but yet we continue to drill more new wells.

In the last legislative session, a bill was proposed by Sen. Leland Nonhoff-Twin Falls but was thrown out before it went anywhere due to eastern Idaho influences. Our state director of Water Resources, Mr. Keith Higginson, knows this is a political hotbed and refuses to act on a moratorium. We need to let him know that it is time to quit playing politics and do his job to protect our aquifer. Is it fair for his department to continue to issue permits for new wells and have a farmer invest thousands of dollars into a well-pump-and-land clearing and somebody be told to cease using it? We need to get Mr. Higginson's attention!

Moratoriums were issued in the Cassia area years ago when they experienced trouble and recently in the Wood River Valley. The Lost River area experienced problems last year and had to be settled in court between the neighboring farmers. Where was the state and do they really feel the aquifer is an endless supply of water? It is time now to save our way of life and economy. Please speak out by calling or writing to your local boards of county commissioners, your legislators and Mr. Higginson at the State Department of Water Resources, Statehouse Mall, Boise. If we give him the political support to make a decision for a moratorium and groundwater study, maybe — just maybe — we can save our water supply.

Briefly

Peace urged in Bosnia-Herzegovina

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance, whose shuttle diplomacy led to a truce in Croatia's civil war, arrived Wednesday seeking peace in troubled Bosnia-Herzegovina. "War is not the answer. It will be ruinous for all sides," the former U.S. secretary of state told reporters in Belgrade, the Serbian and Yugoslav capital. "The situation in Bosnia is very, very serious and gives all of us great concern."
In Finland, the United States proposed that the Serb-dominated federal government be suspended from the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe if it doesn't stop fomenting violence in Bosnia-Herzegovina.
Meanwhile, sporadic fighting continued in Bosnia, where minority Serbs backed by the federal army are fighting the statehood won by majority Muslims and Croats.

Muslim guerrillas strengthen hold

KABUL, Afghanistan — Hard-line Muslim guerrillas on Wednesday took control of the country's largest military base, raising doubts about the future of a U.N.-sponsored plan to end the 13-year-old civil war.
Guerrilla groups urged troops loyal to the Communist-style government of President Najibullah to accept a general amnesty and surrender, although they denied any plans to overrun the capital, Kabul.
Nevertheless, the Russian Embassy ordered the evacuation of half of its 40-member staff, said Russian diplomats who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Territorial leader reportedly killed

MOSCOW — The leader of the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh was killed accidentally by a bullet from an automatic rifle, local government investigators said Wednesday, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.
The brief dispatch offered no other details about the death Tuesday of Artur Mkrtchyan, 34, chairman of the Nagorno-Karabakh parliament and leader of the region's fight for independence from Azerbaijan.
Earlier reports said the 34-year-old Mkrtchyan was shot by unknown assailants in his apartment in Stepanakert, capital of the predominantly Christian Armenian enclave within Muslim Azerbaijan.

Nelson Mandela thanks Jews for help

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Nelson Mandela, criticized by the Jewish community for embracing PLO leader Yasser Arafat, on Wednesday thanked Jews for helping the black liberation movement.
Mandela said the biblical story of Moses leading the Jews from Egyptian slavery inspired black South Africans today.
"As a movement, the ANC recognizes the particularly outstanding contribution that the South African Jewish community has made to the struggle for freedom and social justice," Mandela said.

Fundamentalist faces 10-year term

ALGIERS, Algeria — A leader of Algeria's banned Muslim fundamentalist movement was sentenced in absentia Wednesday to 10 years in prison for distributing subversive documents.
A military court also fined Mohammed Said about $3,000.
Said, a member of the ruling council of the Islamic Salvation Front, is believed to have been in hiding for the past two months.
The front was poised to win control of Parliament before an army-led crackdown began in January. It was banned in February, and most of its leaders are in jail.

North Korean leader wants U.S. embassy

PYONGYANG, North Korea (AP) — North Koreans marked Kim Il Sung's 80th birthday Wednesday with dancing, fireworks and celebrations in the streets, and the Communist dictator was quoted as saying it's time for better relations with the United States.
"There is spring between the people of our country and the people of the United States, spring begins," Kim was quoted as saying in the Washington Times. "My wish is to establish (a U.S. Embassy in Pyongyang) as quickly as possible."
He also reportedly said North Korea would turn over more remains of U.S. soldiers from the 1950-53 Korean War.
Tens of thousands of North Koreans danced in Pyongyang's streets to celebrate the birthday of the only leader this nation has had since the Korean peninsula was divided in 1945. Over four decades, he has become the object of a slavish personality cult.
Fireworks lasted more than two hours, and neon signs flashed socialist slogans.

Kim

An editorial in the Workers (Communist) Party newspaper Rodong Shinmun said of Kim: "There is no problem on earth which he cannot solve."
Kim's remarks to the Washington Times appeared to be part of Pyongyang's new policy of pursuing détente with Japan and the United States, which it has called its "imperialist enemies," and with South Korea, which it has called a U.S. puppet.
But among North Koreans, the effects of decades of anti-American rhetoric still are evident.
"Even the children in kindergarten — they all know that the United States wants to bring war again," said Kim Duc Sun, 77.

Japanese take well to former Soviet leader

TOKYO (AP) — He came, he spoke, and he will go home a richer man.
One year after becoming the first Soviet leader since World War II to visit Japan, former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is making a triumphant return; only this time for Gorbachev through a 12-day visit with his wife, Raisa. Gorbachev already has had meetings with everyone from Emperor Akihito and Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa to media moguls and Mickey Mouse.

Crowds have packed auditoriums to hear his speeches, which are dominated by the themes he chose during his historic visit as Kremlin chief a year ago — increased aid and patience regarding a territorial dispute that has long chilled bilateral relations.
Sources contacted by The Associated Press estimated Gorbachev could go home $300,000-$400,000 richer than when he came. His hosts refuse to officially confirm or deny the figures.

Winnie Mandela resigns from ANC post

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Winnie Mandela stepped down Wednesday as social welfare director of the African National Congress, saying it was in the best interest of the party. There was no mention of her position on the ANC's governing body or the national executive.

Sharptails take liking to South Hills

By Larry Hovey, Times-News writer

'...43 of the 47 we released simply walked out (of their release pens) and slowly meandered out of sight. They basically stayed together as a group and that was the thing we wanted.'

— Randy Smith, Fish and Game biologist

JEROME — The first phase of a three-year project to try to re-establish Columbia sharp-tail grouse on historic range in the South Hills has reached a better than satisfactory conclusion.

A total of 47 sharp-tails — 28 of them males — from eastern Idaho were translocated from eastern Idaho in a trap and carry project as the Idaho Department of Fish and Game hopes to increase the state's dwindling population base and hunting opportunity.

Currently, sharp-tails have been pretty well eliminated except for a remnant population in the Emmett area and huntable numbers in southeastern Idaho. "Everytime I go into the (translocation) area, I become very optimistic," says department Biologist Randy Smith. "It seems like ideal sharp-tail habitat to me and I think we have a good chance of having some excellent sharp-tail hunting there in future years."

Idaho also is providing some seed stock for eastern Oregon and the two departments are using varying methods of handling the releases.

Smith said Idaho is going with "a soft release" in which the birds are left in a box undisturbed at the release site for about an hour. After they appear to have settled in well, a rope raises a gate from a considerable distance away, keeping man away from the moment of release and keeping everything low keyed.

"That has allowed the birds to come out at Please see GROUSE/B2

Call your partner over the airwaves

The following conversation, or one like it, between two hunters on opposite ridges has probably occurred more than once.

Both hunters are shouting at the top of their lungs to be understood.
1st Hunter, "I got to stop and eat."
2nd Hunter, "I knew you would get sore feet."
1st Hunter, "Boy that was some buck."
2nd Hunter, "Yes, some luck. Let's head to town."

David Hocklander
Hunting

1st Hunter, "Think you have one down? Was it a pretty shot?"
2nd Hunter, "Okay, see you at the parking lot."

It seems that yelling has its limitations as a means of communicating with a hunting companion. But there are many times when we want to be able to reach out and touch our companion on the next ridge.

"Jim, you will have to climb higher to get above the rock cliffs ahead of you."

"Bill, there are two hunters on the ridge above you so let's hunt down to the river." The possibilities are endless. Some hunters have developed hand signals for basic ideas, but most of us just try to guess what each other is doing or going to do. But there is another option: two-way radios.

Portable CB radios are the most common and well known. CB's are affordable with quality radios available for under $75. CB's operate at a frequency of 27MHz which allows the signal to bend over uneven terrain. With 5 watts of power CB's can reach out about 5 miles under favorable conditions. Top of the line models feature rechargeable batteries, a rubber antenna, and 40 channels.

But the CB's have drawbacks. First, their susceptibility to signal interference is infamous. "Skip" from other users can ride over your transmission and high levels of sun activity can render CB's useless for days at a time.

Secondly, CB's are notorious for their power appetites, draining batteries in 5 watt gulps. Some models offer a low power setting to help extend battery life but range is then compromised.

Another line of two-way radios you may not have seen are the 49MHz models. The higher frequency improves clarity and gets the signals out of the "dirty" CB zone. They have the lowest cost per unit and some models have headsets for hand free operation.

Unfortunately these light weight radios do have a serious liability. Their power limits them to 1/3 mile or less, too restrictive for most in the field uses.

Perhaps the best two-way radios for public use are higher frequency versions like the 462 MHz (UHF) SportCom and the 151 MHz (VHF) Ranger. Both offer 1 watt of power which gives them a line-of-sight range of around 2 miles.

For those of us who have struggled to understand a conversation on a CB, the telephone like quality of these radio will be appreciated. The high frequency makes transmissions crisp and clear with silent standby.

The low power usage coupled with rechargeable NiCad batteries keep these radios on line from dawn to dusk. They are really the best of both the CB's and the 49 MHz models. The radios are light, under a pound, and offer a choice of two channels.

Of course, there is a price to pay for this quality but it may not be as bad as you think. The SportCom is under $200 and the Ranger is under $150. Not a prohibitive price but enough to make you think over the purchase.

Also the higher frequencies do not bend well, so transmissions must be close to line-of-sight making communications from the bottom of one canyon to another unlikely.

I tested the SportCom for two weeks and found it to be all that it claimed. I could communicate clearly with my son a mile and a half across town. A more open line-of-sight will improve performance. The radio was well built and the flexible antenna made it easy to carry and handle.

Now the real sticker to any one of these radio options is that one radio does you no good at all. You have to have two and that of course doubles the investment.

A solution is to convince your hunting companions to buy their own. You can also borrow radios from these partners when hunting with others.

The 462MHz and the 151MHz require a

Low snowpack in the Big Wood River watershed means another low year for Magic Reservoir. Fish and Game plans to plant fingerlings and catchables, but a few larger holdover trout remain from other years.

State plans big changes to limits, seasons on area fishing waters

By Stu Murrell, Idaho Fish and Game

JEROME — The drought has dramatically affected fish management in Region 4.

Fred Partridge, regional fisheries manager, said a number of waters will not be stocked, and others planted with greater numbers to adjust for varying water conditions.

Drought has also affected the areas which can be fished year-round on reservoir. Regulations state that fishing is only allowed to the edge of slack water on these year-around ponds, lakes and reservoirs. A stream or river running into the upper part of these reservoir, such as Magic and Anderson Ranch, is not open until the general season on May 23.

A number of fishermen have been found fishing these closed waters in recent weeks.

Anglers are reminded the Bruneau River and its tributaries are no on a general season status, opening May 23. These streams have been year-around in the past. They also are classified as wild trout waters with a two-trout limit.

Following is a list of Region 4 fishing areas with a brief comment on their water status and management plans.

- Fish Creek reservoir — Dry in the fall of 1991. No planting this year unless unusual rains occur.
- Little Wood Reservoir — Fish and Game department has 2,000 acre foot water right so has retained water throughout the year, providing good fishing in the fall of 1991 and this past winter. The reservoir will be planted with fingerlings and catchables.

• Magic Reservoir — Very low water with some minimum pool available.

Early plants of fingerlings and catchables to provide spring/early summer fisheries.

Some larger holdover trout remain.

• Mormon Reservoir — So low will not even be used for irrigation in 1992. Some water available. Early plants of catchables to provide early spring/summer fishery.

• Thorn Creek Reservoir — Extremely low. No plants. Does not open until May 23.

• Little Camas Reservoir. Very low; already drawn down for irrigation. No plants.

• Anderson Ranch Reservoir — Very low and will be drawn down to minimum pool of 29,000 acre feet. Plant with kokanee fingerlings and catchable trout.

• Dog Creek Reservoir — Fish and Game reservoir that retains water. Planted with more than normal number of catchable trout.

• Morrow Reservoir — Dry. No plants.

• Brny Lake — Dry, no plants.

• Blair Trail Diversion — Retains some water. Planted with catchables.

• Bruneau Dunes Lakes — Good water supply from department pumps on Snake River. Has populations of bluegill and largemouth bass that maintain themselves.

• Roseworth Reservoir. Low water. Early catchable trout plants for spring and early summer fishing. Some larger holdover trout.

Study of Idaho wolverines switches from tracking to monitoring feeding

The Associated Press

BOISE — Research biologists for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game ended their first trapping session with three wolverines caught and radio-collared in central Idaho.

The trapping is part of a study funded by the U.S. Forest Service in the Sawtooth, Chautauque and Boise national forests. The research, focusing on the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, is an effort to learn about the ecology and population status of the elusive animals.

Research biologist Jeff Copeland trapped the first wolverine Feb. 4. A radio-transmitting collar was put on the animal and it was released near the southern edge of the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness.

The wolverine later slipped out of the collar, which was recovered after being located by an aerial telemetry flight.

Another flight in late March revealed that a female caught March 12 and recaptured twice during the next two weeks had traveled six miles out of the area and climbed to an elevation of 9,000 feet.

Another adult female caught March 28 was fitted with a radio-collar and a peritoneal implant transmitter — a small radio surgically implanted in the animal's abdominal cavity.

Researchers often prefer to use peritoneal transmitters on animals that live in dense brush or burrows or spend much time in water.

Wolverines find the collars fairly easy to get off since they have relatively small heads and thick necks.

Fish and Game's trapping operation ended March 30 to avoid stress to female wolverines that are pregnant or with young. A survey using infrared-triggered cameras to photograph wolverines and other scavengers feeding on carrion bait stations will continue, the department said.

The wolverine is a "species of special concern" for Fish and Game, a "sensitive species" under Forest Service rules and a candidate for listing as threatened or endangered under the federal Endangered Species Act.

"These classifications are in place because it is a rare predator with a declining amount of habitat," biologist Craig Groves, manager of Idaho Fish and Game's Conservation Data Center.

"We expect that the study will help us learn enough about Idaho's wolverine population to avoid an eventual listing as threatened or endangered."

Salmon plan seen helping Canadians

The Associated Press

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — A U.S. decision restricting salmon fishing along the West Coast will give the British Columbia resort fishing industry a boost, industry spokesmen say.

But they also worry it may result in U.S. trawlers demanding a bigger share of the Canadian commercial catch.

The decision also shows conservation of the salmon habitat in British Columbia is essential if the salmon fishing industry is to remain viable, say industry officials.

"There is a lesson there," said Jack Nicol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union. "Never dam your salmon rivers, search your logging rivers, when urbanization is taking place, don't bulldoze into the rivers and don't poison the rivers."

Faced with the extinction of some salmon stocks and the endangerment of others, the U.S. Pacific Fishery Management Council decided recently that West Coast fishermen will be restricted to about half of last year's harvest — the worst on record.

The council set a quota of only 100,000 coho and 40,000 chinook salmon for the area from Tillamook, Ore., to the Strait of Juan de Fuca, at the Washington-Canadian border.

For the southern portion of the West Coast, the take will be even smaller — about 85,000 coho and less than 20,000 chinook. The council banned fishing altogether in a 450-mile-long zone off Columbia and Oregon.

By comparison, Canadians will be able to take about 1.8 million coho this year — more than 10 times the U.S. harvest.

For Canadian resort owners, the restrictions mean money in the bank.

"Everybody from the little motels and gas stations, marinas and campgrounds right through the whole business system serving the sport fisherman is going to benefit from it," said Howard Paish, of the sport fishing advisory board.

Phil Eby, executive director of the Fishing Vessel Owners Association, said the restrictions could increase American demands for a bigger share of the Fraser River sockeye fishery.

The 1985 treaty that regulates Canadian and U.S. fishing will be renegotiated this fall. U.S. fishermen want changes to the treaty to get an additional 500,000 sockeye, and want as much as half the total Fraser catch.

Buhl couple helps capture lion cubs roaming Pocatello

The Associated Press

POCATELLO — Two of the three mountain lions that worried residents on the outskirts of Pocatello have been captured.

Some Ross Park Zoo visitors spotted the two young lions near the zoo on Sunday. They were lounging in a tree right above their head.

The cubs, both male, are extremely thin and too young to be away from their mother. They are about six months old, while most stay with their mother until they are up to two years old.

Idaho Fish and Game officials guessed their mother was the one hit by a car on March 13. Two days later, three cubs started appearing on people's porches and in the roads in the Johnny Creek area.

Little is known about the third cub. The two were taken to a large cage behind the cougar display at the zoo.

After tracking them for weeks, their capture was easy, said Phil Cooper, Fish and Game. Mr. and Mrs. Brent Somers of the Buhl area were the surprised couple who sighted the cubs about 3:30 p.m. Sunday.

The woman walked out of the zoo and said something like, "Look at the mountain lions in the tree," said Cooper said. One cub was lured to sleep in the tree with a tranquilizer dart while officers hit the other one on the run with a dart.

"Boy, they are thin," zoo director Ray England said. "Their fur makes them look bigger, but if that was gone you could see their ribs would poke through their skin just like this."

Officials ponder sheep deaths

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Wildlife investigators and an animal pathologist have scoured a mountain ridge northeast of Las Vegas in hopes of learning what killed 13 desert bighorn sheep in 1990.

"The next step is to wait for the lab reports," said Rob Buonamici, assistant law enforcement chief for the Nevada Department of Wildlife. "We'll just wait and see."

Buonamici headed a team that was flown by helicopter Tuesday to a ridge at the 6,000-foot level of the Mormon Mountains, 65 miles northeast of Las Vegas.

Hunter Jack Anderson, who accompanied the team, discovered the sheep carcasses in the remote area in November 1990.

"The investigative team that visited the area Tuesday included wildlife officials from Nevada and an animal pathologist from California."

Only sun-bleached bones, some skulls and remnants of matted wool remained at the scene. The scene was marked by charred trunks of pinyon pines and junipers, possible victims of a lightning-caused wildfire.

Anderson said the trees had been charred when he found the carcasses, but photographs he took at the scene and some taken later by game wardens showed no evidence the sheep had been burned.

Investigators found no evidence of bullets after scanning the area with metal detectors.

Mark Anderson, a veterinary pathologist from the University of California-Davis, collected soil samples where the carcasses had lain. He also gathered water samples from three man-made water facilities used by wildlife within 1/8 mile of the ridge.

A toxicologist is expected to spend about two weeks analyzing the samples to determine if they contain excessive levels of heavy metals, poisons or other hazardous materials that could have killed the sheep, Mark Anderson said.

Efforts to protect salmon in early dam building days failed miserably

BOISE (AP) — When the crusade for more power in the growing Northwest produced the colossal Hells Canyon hydro-dam system a generation ago, preservation of the region's salmon runs was little more than an afterthought.

"In those days, it wasn't as big an issue," said Monte Richards, retired Idaho Fish and Game regional fisheries manager. "People had been building dams for years, but there wasn't that much information about their effects."

The fact is, developers had to rely on untested theories about how the fish would continue making the 900-mile migration between their Idaho spawning beds and the Pacific Ocean.

At the same time, the pressure to generate electricity drowned out the concerns of fishery experts that the runs would never survive the concrete choke-hold that was tightening on the Snake River. "The political pressure of the day was overwhelming," said Steve Huffaker, fisheries bureau chief for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "The only thing the fish folks could do was get mitigation, and it didn't work."

When Idaho Power Co. won permission to begin building the complex of Brownlee, Oxbow and Hells Canyon dams in 1955, the Federal Power Commission required it to ship migrating fish around Brownlee, the first of three to be completed.

At 395 feet high, the dam could not use a salmon ladder so the experts called for an untested plastic "skimmer" net to be strung across the reservoir to catch the young fish and deposit them downstream.

"That was the theory," said Jim Bruce, former Idaho Power chairman and a company attorney when Brownlee was built. "The problem is, the small fish didn't make it downstream to the net. There wasn't enough of a current and they got lost in the reservoir."

The $6 million net system was scrapped in 1962, in effect writing off future fish migrations to the Boise, Payette and Weiser River drainages.

For Oxbow, completed in 1961, the experts turned to a cement fish trap that was to enable migrating salmon to get past the dam.

But in what was nicknamed "The Oxbow Incident," the trap failed as the fish chook headed its way, and thousands of fish died in the splash pool below the dam.

By the time Hells Canyon Dam was finished in 1968, prospects for any migration above the complex had disappeared.

"I think that above Hells Canyon, it's a lost cause," Huffaker said. "We don't have the technology to collect the little fish going down and there's a lot of habitat degradation. I think that's history."

To counter that effect, Idaho Power paid for salmon and steelhead hatcheries at Oxbow, Rapid River above Riggs and Niagara Springs near Buhl.

"their own pace," Smith said. "In fact, 43 of the 47 we released simply walked out and slowly meandered out of sight. They basically stayed together as a group and that was the thing we wanted. In other releases we simply have opened the boxes and basically shaken the birds out. They become disoriented and there has to be some trauma."

But if the Idaho birds had it good, consider the Oregon-bound sharpshins.

"They (Oregon) are putting out decoys and during that hour of waiting to the transport box for waiting, Oregon is playing 'sharpshin music' (bird sounds) over a stereo system," Smith said.

Smith said the two states will be testing preliminary release results to see how the velvet glove approach worked.

"We feel the soft release approach is good," said Smith. "But if the Oregon results indicate their way had better results, we will try to create the artificial lek release site, too."

All of the females and four of the males were fitted with radio collars before release. The first major result of the study will be an idea of reproduction this spring.

"I was able to locate some birds through telemetry Tuesday morning when we were releasing our final shipment for this year," Smith said. "We hope to have a full-time technician on site by May 1. We must be very cautious about disturbing the females if we find them nesting."

Smith said he felt good production this year would indicate transplaning schemes and habitat selection were correct.

Current plans call for relocation of 40 to 50 birds in supplemental plantings the next two springs.

Meanwhile, Smith said the region is wrapping up trapping and radioing in the reservoir.

"We need a better handle on the birds' brood and nesting habitat and general summer range selections," he said.

Bird projects continue later this week with the annual Canada goose breeding pair aerial census along Snake River and the region's major goose-producing waterways.

Federal agency seeks comment on wolf plan for Yellowstone

The Associated Press

An environmental impact statement being prepared for the area around Yellowstone Park is the latest test of whether Americans are willing to share their country with the wolf.

Congress directed the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to prepare a draft environmental impact statement on the possible reintroduction of gray wolves to the Yellowstone ecosystem in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho.

The gray wolf's smaller cousin, the red wolf, is being returned to the wild in small numbers in the Southeast.

The gray wolf is making its own return to northern Montana, spreading south from Canada. There is another small population in northern Minnesota.

The FWS is going to great lengths to overcome the strong polarization which has surrounded the proposed reintroduction.

On one side are environmentalists who say the wolf is part of the natural system and belongs in it.

Opponents center around the livestock industry, which is worried, with some justification, a wolf population will take a share of the 120,000 sheep, 80,000 cattle and 1,200 horses which spend at least part of the year grazing in the national forests around Yellowstone.

Supporters of the reintroduction concede wolves do prey on livestock and Defenders of Wildlife has established a $100,000 fund to compensate ranchers for losses to wolves.

Immigrants brought their fear of the European wolf with them across the Atlantic.

In North America the animal is nowhere near as fearsome as some claim. Attacks on humans are rare and some claim there has never been a documented case of a wolf killing a man in the United States, although literature is full of stories about such attacks.

Adult wolves weigh from 80 to 100 pounds and are typically gray, or black. They generally prey on deer, moose and elk, taking the weak, the sick and the young if all possible.

They are the smallest of the great predators or claws mounted on mountain lions or bears.

They compensate by hunting in packs, making up in numbers what they lack in individual ability. The packs have a highly developed social structure and usually only the top female produces cubs, which are cared for by the entire pack.

The United States' recovery plan for the wolf, under the Endangered Species Act, calls for 10 packs, totalling 100 to 150 animals, in each of three areas of the northern Rocky Mountains.

The three areas are north-west Montana, central Idaho and Yellowstone.

Once the packs have held their own for three years, the animals would be removed from the endangered-species list and state wildlife agencies would manage them like any other resident wildlife.

Planning for the possible reintroduction of wolves in the Yellowstone area will continue through the fall of 1993. A final environmental impact statement is due in 1994.

Those interested in getting involved in the process or being kept informed should write the Gray Wolf EIS, P.O. Box 8017, Helena, MT 59601.

Wyoming elk plan draws fire

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Wyoming Game and Fish Department officials want to shorten the bull elk hunting season in the Jackson area to increase the number of bulls in the area, but opposition is mounting to the plan.

Under the proposal, the 16-day reduction in the season's length would come during the fall "rut" or mating season.

However, a Jackson-based group maintains the proposal would be hard on the economy and that there are other ways to increase the number of bulls in the herds. Calculations indicate that the outfitting industry contributes $5.6 million to Teton County annually, Scott Woods, vice chairman of the "Wyoming Coalition" said.

The season currently runs 51 days, and Game and Fish officials believe reducing it by 16 days is the best option for boosting the number of bulls, said Dave Moody, wildlife management coordinator for the agency's Jackson office.

Moody said bulls are particularly vulnerable during the rut and can be "called in" by skillful hunters imitating the elk's mating calls.

By shortening the season, Game and Fish officials hope to double the bull-to-cow ratios, which have fallen below optimum levels in some of the Jackson Hole elk herds.

World's bears are running out of room

Los Angeles Times

MISSOULA, Mont. — Is there room for bears in a crowded world? Experts worry the world's grizzly bear population is declining at an alarming rate. At the approach of the 21st Century, there are fewer bears remaining on the planet than there are people in San Diego or Phoenix. Every four days the world adds more people than there are surviving bears. Today, six of eight species of the legendary animals are declining in numbers, sometimes frighteningly so, as the human population increases.

So, will there be a place for bears in the future?

Probably not. But then again... maybe. So say the experts.

"We're running out of habitat because there are just too damned many two-legged bears. We're doing to the grizzly in North America what the grizzly did to those bears before it. We're a better species and we're wiping them out," says Charles Jonkel, a Montana zoologist and co-founder of the International Conference on Bear Research and Management.

"We're going to lose all the bears," Jonkel continues. "It's just a matter of time. The world is getting poorer and more crowded. And that makes people ornery. And there's nothing on God's green Earth we can do about it."

It's not altogether natural, however, for naturalists to surrender a cause while the Earth still grows green. Not without a fight.

And so when the world's most distinguished 450 ursine scientists and advocates gathered here recently, some hope brightened the gloom. It was the ninth such gathering of world experts in a quarter century. Maybe there will be time for nine more, or 90. No one was taking bets.

"If I want to know how the bears are doing, I ask, 'How are the people doing?' They are indicator species for each other. When the people start struggling you can pretty much figure the bears are, too. When people are crowded, same with the bears. What's good habitat for loggers is good habitat for bears; when the loggers start running out of trees, the bears are in trouble."

The country philosopher is Lance Olsen, the leader of the Montana-based Great Bear Foundation, a North America's grizzly bears, which are known elsewhere in the world as brown bears.

Like many of the other experts, Olsen can argue the future either way. The very thing that is so troubling — the scarcity of bears and places for them to roam — offers the hope now for saving them: They have become valuable because they are so few. And they are valuable not just for themselves. They have come to symbolize the shrinking domain of healthy forests, clean water, wildness and freedom.

"This planet is becoming so small and people are realizing if they wreck it, there is nowhere else to go. Like many human emotions, this doesn't come out until what you have is almost gone," said Christopher Servheen, grizzly bear recovery coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, one of the foremost bear experts in the world.

He is co-chairman of bear research of the Swiss-based International Union for the Conservation of Nature. In the spring of 1993, his group plans to publish an action plan for saving the world's bears.

Many of the scientists think the benchmark test looms just outside of town here, in the great remaining wild tracts of the Rocky Mountains. Barely 100 years ago, the mountains and the plains extending in both directions — from the Pacific Coast into the Midwest, were home to 50,000 or more grizzlies. Today there are fewer than 1,000 — maybe far fewer — in isolated high-mountain pockets of Montana, Wyoming, Idaho and maybe in the Cascades of Washington.

For 11 years, the federal government has been trying to preserve these bears. They have each other. The bears must be heavily managed in the world. The cost has been about $1 million a year, or more than $1,000 per bear. Literally hundreds of scientists and activists are devoted to the cause.

Most of the leading experts on the future of the grizzly in the Lower 48 states say this: If the United States with its growing environmentalist movement, with still unimpaired energy of its federal government — cannot preserve an endangered bear, what country can?

City dwellers may hold the key. Scientists like Stephen R. Kellert of the Yale University School of Forestry and Environmental Studies say that government officials in the West have been "in too conservative" in rallying urban support for efforts to save bears. Kellert's studies show that wildlife has many friends and few critics in the cities — an abstract kinship, perhaps, but a passionate one.

Rural areas adjacent to the remaining bear sanctuaries, on the other hand, generate significant land-user opposition to protecting both habitat and the bears themselves. And to date, that is where most of the public hearings and political decisions about bear conservation are made.

California, the only state with the grizzly bear on its flag, is illustrative of how fast a bear population can be eliminated. About 10,000 of the animals roamed the valleys and foothills of California at the time of the Gold Rush in 1849. The last known California grizzly was killed in 1910.

Outside of the West and interior Alaska, the grizzly is known as the brown bear, but it is the same species. The total estimated world population is 180,000 and declining.

In many regards it is impossible to generalize about bears. But in other ways it is easy.

"We're not going to convince the people of the world they should save the forests for the bears. We've got to convince them to save the forests for their own good. And that will be good for the bear," said Servheen.

"It's the same in Malaysia as Burma, as in the U.S. or France. I can close my eyes and beam myself from Libby, Mont., to Lahad Datu, Borneo. And it's the same economy: It's a resource-based timber economy. If they run out of timber, they run out of jobs. In Lahad Datu the same as in Libby. And they are.

"We have maybe 20 years. This generation — our's — will be the one that decides the fate of the bear."

Easter raffle benefits

terminally ill children

TWIN FALLS — A large hand-painted Easter basket containing stuffed animals and other goodies will be raffled off this weekend with the proceeds benefiting terminally ill children.

The basket will be on display at the Blue Lakes Mall from 1 p.m.-6 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and tickets can be purchased for $1 or six for $5.

The money will be donated to the Wishing Star Foundation, an organization that grants wishes to youngsters with incurable illnesses.

The raffle is sponsored by Friends of Amanda, an ad hoc citizens group formed after the January death of a 2-year-old Twin Falls girl.

Company's $806,000 quarter loss better than last year's

BOISE — With housing starts on the upswing, TJ International Inc. reported a first-quarter loss of $806,000, an improvement from the $1.9 million loss a year earlier for the specialty building products company.

The company, which owns a Norco Windows Inc. plant in Twin Falls, also forecast a return to the black in the second quarter.

"Prospects are definitely looking up for our company and its products, both in the short- and long-term," Walt Minnick, TJ International president and chief executive officer, said Tuesday in a prepared statement.

"The deepest recession in our industry since 1945 finally seems to be ending," Minnick said.

TJ International's fortunes are closely tied to the North American home-construction industry, which has been mired in its worst slump since the end of World War II.

But recent statistics show new home starts are increasing. And TJ International reported Tuesday that sales during the three months through March 28 jumped 67 percent to $75.6 million from $45.3 million in the first quarter of 1991.

The first-quarter loss amounted to 16 cents per share of common stock, compared with a 33-cent loss in the first three months of 1991.

Skier visits rise 52% during Sun Valley's 1991-92 season

SUN VALLEY — Idaho's most famous ski resort has closed its books on a very good season, with skier visits up 52 percent to 360,120.

"During a recession year, this level of skier increase is testimony to the consistent quality of snow we were able to produce day after day throughout the ski season," Wallace Hoffman, general manager, said in a news release.

The ski season, which ended last weekend, was the 10th best in Sun Valley's history.

Operators credited the new $8 million automated snow-making system, which allowed the resort to guarantee skiing despite Idaho's continuing drought.

Work already is under way on several improvements for next season, including a new base lodge at the bottom of Warm Springs on Bald Mountain.

Hearing on phone discount proposals is rescheduled

BOISE — A public hearing to consider toll discount proposals on calls between five of Albion Telephone Co.'s exchanges and U S West Communications' Burley-Decio exchange has been changed.

The hearing, originally set for 1:30 p.m., will begin instead at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, April 29, in the commission hearing room at 472 W. Washington St.

The hearing will be on a proposal by Albion Telephone patrons in Albion, Almo, Elba, Malta and Raft River to pay a flat fee to call Burley and Decio, depending on their distance from Burley. In return, they would receive a 35 percent daytime and 15 percent evening discount off existing toll rates.

U S West opposes the proposal and wants Albion Telephone to give customers a credit against their local exchange bills based on the volume of calls they place to Burley.

Southern Idaho drought worsens

Lincoln County likely faces 21-day water supply from Magic Reservoir

By Stephen Stuebner
Special to the Times-News

BOISE — Perhaps the Soil Conservation Service's snowpack report put it best: "The winter of 1991-92 will be remembered in southern Idaho as the one that never happened."

Unseasonably warm temperatures and skimpy mountain snowpack through the first four months of 1992 will cause "critical" water shortages for Lincoln County and southern Twin Falls County farmers this summer, officials said Wednesday.

State and federal officials outlined a "bleak" outlook for southern Idaho agriculture in the monthly meeting of the state Water Supply Committee.

"We're looking at the worst year we've had in this six-year drought scenario," said Hal Anderson, chief of technical services for the Idaho Water Resources Department.

The south side of the Snake River and the Big Wood area will be in an extremely tight situation ... and we're looking at an all-time low for the Boise River area. You can tell your grandkids about this one and say, 'I was there.'"

Lincoln County farmers who depend on irrigation supplies from Magic Reservoir will likely face a 21-day supply of water, according to Big Wood Canal Co. officials. Farmers in that area have faced marginal water conditions in five out of the last six years.

"What can we say? It doesn't look good," said Linda Lezamiz, a Lincoln County dairy farmer. "When you're talking 20 days of water — total — I don't care who it is, you can't grow anything on that."

Farmers on the Salmon Tract in Twin Falls County also will face major shortages, officials said. Snowpack readings for that area hit an all-time record low on April 11, said Ron Abramovich, hydrologist for the Soil Conservation Service.

"Many sites south of the Snake River are reporting new historical minimums for snowpack and water content," he said.

Residents sued for loan fraud settle with HUD

By Phil Sahm

TWIN FALLS — Thirty-two Magic Valley residents accused of loan fraud by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development have settled their case before it went to trial.

Court documents obtained from U.S. District Court in Las Vegas did not list terms of the March settlement. But an attorney for many of the defendants said the agreement disclaims any guilt on their part.

Twin Falls accountant David M. Cooper, who was a defendant in the case, said Wednesday that he could not talk about the settlement.

Woman says she talked man out of murder-suicide

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Randall Wilkins' former girlfriend testified at his preliminary hearing on Tuesday, telling the court how he held a gun to her neck and threatened to kill them both.

Wilkins, 31, is accused of assault with intent to commit a serious felony following an April 1 incident at the Ketchum apartment of Susan Gockel when he allegedly held her at gunpoint and said he was going to kill her.

Visibly shaken and distraught, Gockel testified that there was a knock on her door at about 5:45 p.m. that day and when she asked who it was, the response was, "Sun Valley Flood."

"I opened the door and it was Randy," said Gockel, fighting back sobs.

Wilkins was under a court protection order at the time forbidding him to contact his ex-girlfriend, who accused him of battery in February.

"I screamed right away. He came in the door and said, 'Don't scream. I'm going to kill you, and I'm going to kill me,'" she recalled.

"Did you believe him?" asked Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney Fritz Haemmerle.

"I thought he was going to kill us both," Gockel responded. "He said, 'I have to now, because it's attempted murder.' That's when I really got scared."

Dressed in a suit and tie, Wilkins watched impassively as Gockel tearfully detailed a 35-minute ordeal during which her life was threatened "15 or 20 times," and a black handgun was held to her throat for 10 seconds with the safety off.

Gockel said she was finally able to convince Wilkins to let her leave the apartment to go to work, telling him she would go to counseling with him.

"I told him he didn't have to do this — we could work things out," she said.

Judge Barry Wood, who presided over the preliminary hearing, ordered that Wilkins be bound over to 5th District Court to answer the charges. Wilkins remains in custody at Blaine County Jail under a $1 million bond.

Committee's report doesn't satisfy Friends of Amanda

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A probe into the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's child care practices doesn't satisfy the founders of a group that called for the investigation two months ago.

"This lays no blame, and someone is to blame for Amanda's death," Connie Mischner of Buhl said.

Mischner and Paulette Jackson formed a citizen group called Friends of Amanda after 2-year-old Amanda Hostetler of Twin Falls died in January of suspected child abuse.

Public outcry over the case and pressure by Friends of Amanda resulted in a community review panel that looked into the Hostetler case and several other cases handled by Health and Welfare.

That panel released a two-and-a-half-page report Tuesday that includes a dozen recommendations for improving child care in the community.

Jackson said the recommendations are the same ones given by Friends of Amanda to the panel's chairman, Jerome County Sheriff Larry Cold, at a meeting several weeks ago.

"These are good recommendations, but who's going to implement them?" Jackson asked Wednesday after reading the report.

Health and Welfare Regional Director Steven Woodworth said Tuesday that the department will move forward with the recommendations as quickly as possible.

The list of suggestions includes improving public access to the state child care system and strengthening the network between state and local agencies.

As promised, the report did not touch specifically on the Hostetler case because of pending criminal charges involving Amanda's mother and a Twin Falls man living with them at the time of the toddler's death.

Police reported after the child died that Health and Welfare workers had been sent to Amanda's home on several occasions, but found nothing unusual.

Jackson said she understands the need Please see REPORT/C2

Woman alleges SWAT team abused daughter during arrest

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When a SWAT team went to South Park in December to arrest a Twin Falls man on felony drug charges, officers handcuffed a mentally ill, physically disabled woman and forced her to the floor at gunpoint, according to a tort claim filed against Twin Falls County.

The Dec. 20 raid came after a secret grand jury indicted 39 Twin Falls County residents and a co-woy of local officers fanned out over the area to arrest those accused.

A SWAT team armed with weapons and a search warrant went to 1122 S. Washington St., Apt. 25, looking for Daniel Castillo and Manuel Marcs.

When the officers got there, the residents opened the door and slammed it shut when they realized the people outside were officers, said Don Walden, director of the Magic Valley Drug Task Force.

The team broke in and handcuffed everyone as a safety precaution while serving an arrest warrant on one of the men, Walden said.

Forcing everyone to the floor is a routine procedure when officers don't know who is in the house, "especially in the labor camp. You can get in some serious trouble out there," he said.

But Damian says in her tort claim that she was never shown a warrant.

Her disabled daughter "could not respond to the demands made that she fall on her face on the floor, she was frightened and crying, and the police would not listen to my warnings that she was incapable of response," the claim says.

Damian wants $50,000 for her daughter and $20,000 for herself to compensate for "the emotional distress caused from being required to watch the physical abuse of my daughter," the claim says.

The claim is filed against Twin Falls city and county and the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics. If it remains unsettled by August, Damian can file suit in district court.

Walden acknowledged that Damian and her daughter were probably "scared to death" by the presence of a SWAT team in their home, but they were never physically abused in any way, he said.

Cassia County's proposed sex education program irks trio

By Laurie Rasmussen
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Three Cassia County parents say they are unhappy with a proposed sex education program at the schools.

The three, Karla Harmon, JaNan Nilsson and Marilyn Searle, say the current health textbook, along with a few extras, is good enough.

The state is leaving it up to each school district to decide what type of health and sex education program or curriculum they choose to use.

The district-appointed Health and Human Relations Committee recently recommended to the school board that a program called Teen Aid be added to the existing health curriculum and used at the eighth and tenth grades.

White Harmon, Neilson and Searle believe Teen Aid has some value, they feel they have a better solution.

The three say that with a little modification, the health textbook, Teen Health Decisions for Healthy Living — would work for both the junior and senior high students and save the district a lot of money.

They suggest using the curriculum in the seventh and tenth grades, and adding a paragraph on abortion and one on contraception.

In the case of contraception we would like a paragraph added to indicate that it is not effective, and a paragraph about abortion to indicate that it has serious side effects," stated Neilson, who has a bachelor's degree in secondary education.

The junior high hard bound health text covers fetal development, date rape, reproduction, sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS, to name a few, according to Neilson.

"I think that people have been led to believe that their children are getting no sexual information, when the truth is that the health curriculum has quite a bit," Neilson said.

Linda Petersen, who has served on the Health and Human Relations Committee for nearly a year, said the group made a good recommendation.

"I believe that anyone who would go through Teen Aid page by page and then go through the health book page by page would be strong on abstinence, commitment and family-based values in Teen Aid," she said.

"You can't get that from a textbook. They have to be sterile and neutral," Minidoka County School District has been using Sex Respect as their sex education program for a good year now, and they feel it's a really place to start.

"It's a student-parent friendly type of program," said Minidoka School Board Trustee Russ Holland. "It's a good practice to start, but I don't think it's good enough. Sooner or later we're going to have to have more than Sex Respect offered."

Harmon, a Burley mother, is worried about the feelings of children and the parents who wish to skip the health classes while the program is being taught.

"I feel we have the right to teach our children the way we want to teach them," Harmon said. "I think we should have the choice to allow our children to participate in the class or keep them out. I just worry about them. Will they be teased because they're in the library when everyone else is in the class?"

The Health and Human Relations Committee is recommending that parents have the option of withholding their child from any of the classroom sessions.

The board will make its decision on the committee's recommendation in May.

Opponents to adding a new sex education program have been promoting their plan for more than two months, but to little avail, according to Searle.

"I don't think the committee opened the health book until we began putting some pressure on one of the committee members," said Searle, a Burley pharmacist. "I think the committee did really hard; they spent a lot of time on this, but I feel they went back wards in their approach."

Health and Welfare eyes canyon-side site for Region V headquarters

By Steve Cump
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There's a canyon-side Region V headquarters for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare on the horizon, to be built without a dime of the taxpayers' money.

The state of Idaho is negotiating a lease with a Twin Falls developer on a 34,400-square-foot structure to be built on the north side of Pole Line Road, west of the new Target Stores outlet, according to Jim Jeffries of the Idaho Division of Public Works.

The building would belong to a development company, whose owners include Twin Falls attorney Kent Taylor, Jeffries said Wednesday.

"We're really close (to a deal), but we're not quite there yet," Jeffries said.

Taylor, who has been involved in developing other commercial real estate in north Twin Falls, could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

According to Steven Woodworth, Region V director for Health and Welfare, the structure is intended as a one-stop center for services his agency offers in Twin Falls.

"We're going to have the regional administration there, Family and Children's Services, the medical program, child-support enforcement, Emergency Medical Services, DEQ (the Division of Environmental Quality)," he said. "The idea is to have all of our offices in one location."

Woodworth said the leases on the half-dozen buildings Health and Welfare now occupies in Twin Falls expire Dec. 31, so his agency wants to have a new facility ready by New Year's Day.

"We've pretty well got the plans laid out," Jeffries said. "But before the lease can be signed, the plans have to be approved by the state, the city and the Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council."

Once the lease is signed, Jeffries estimated the building would take about five months to complete.

Jeffries' department issued bid specifications for the project, and Health and Welfare told prospective contractors what was needed. The developer was chosen on the basis of its ability to meet the specifications at the lowest cost, Woodworth said.

Work has already begun on another privately funded building in Twin Falls that will be leased to the state: the work release center for convicted felons on Washington Street South.

On April 1, 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt ruled that for the project to qualify as a governmental facility, Twin Falls' zoning ordinance requires that it be owned by the state.

Neither the Twin Falls City Council, which controls zoning regulations, nor the Idaho Department of Correction, which has a lease on the building, has decided what action to take next.

Drought

Continued from C1 (elevation 6,880 feet) is registering zero, and it melted two months early. Abramovich said. The site yielded 3.6 inches of moisture this year, compared to 8.4 inches in 1977, the previous benchmark-low drought year.

All is not gloom and doom, however, for farmers who draw irrigation water from the Snake River, officials said.

"The Bureau of Reclamation is in the upper Snake — Jackson Lake, Palisades and American Falls — combined with 40 percent of capacity. Combined with the spring runoff, the reservoirs should supply most irrigation demands, according to U.S. Bureau of Reclamation officials.

On another positive note, whitewater recreation forecasts for the Salmon River indicate a near-normal season. Snowpack in the Salmon is as high as anywhere in the state at 60-70 percent.

"If the river systems are so large, they must be drought-proof," said Doug Tims, president of the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association.

"They tell us we've been in a drought for the last six years, but the whitewater rafting business has been growing and we've had good water conditions all summer long."

There will be no whitewater season on the Owyhee or Bruneau rivers, officials said. The Owyhee snowpack registered only 11 percent, the Bruneau was 31 percent on April 1.

National Weather Service officials said the Owyhee and Bruneau rivers are a factor that has caused drought pains in the last five years. The 30-day forecast calls for above-normal temperatures and below-normal precipitation. The 90-day outlook predicts higher temperatures and near-normal precipitation.

Water officials recalled that in 1977, heavy rain in May and July helped farmers raise a crop with meager water supplies. But Anderson noted, "We can't count on heavy precipitation in July. It's a pretty rare occurrence."

Ranchers also may feel the pinch this summer if federal or state authorities require them to pull livestock off public lands earlier than normal.

Wayne Patton of the U.S. Forest Service said early cutbacks are a distinct possibility, depending on summer rain and range conditions in August.

Kathlyn Talbot, program specialist for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Twin Falls County has prepared a "flash" report indicating it may seek a disaster declaration due to the drought.

If the county has an average of 35 percent crop losses, farmers would be eligible for emergency Farm Home Administration loans, she said.

The ASCS also expects applications for financial assistance for buying livestock feed from Cama and Lincoln counties, among others, she said. A new federal disaster-relief program may provide additional financial assistance for 1992 crop losses, she said.

Encouraging farmers to contact their local ASCS office for more information.

Continued from C1 discuss the agreement," Cooper said. Cooper's attorney, John Hohnhorst, said, however, that the settlement was favorable to his client.

"We feel that the case was settled in terms that were extremely favorable to the defendants," Hohnhorst said.

The settlement amounts to less than the expected cost of trying the case in federal court in Las Vegas, he said.

The Twin Falls defendants maintained their innocence from the start of the case and the agreement contains a specific disclaimer of guilt, Hohnhorst said. He represented virtually all of the Twin Falls defendants.

Attempts to reach other defendants in the case were unsuccessful Wednesday. A spokesman for the Justice Department, which represented HUD in the case, could not be reached for comment.

In 1989, HUD sued the 32 Magic Valley residents for triple-damages and civil penalties totaling $6.8 million. The agency accused the group of falsifying applications for HUD-insured loans to buy four-plexes in Las Vegas.

The group paid $6,000 to $9,000 each to Las Vegas real estate agent Richardaley, who helped arrange the loans, according to the suit.aley maintained a 1 percent interest in the four-plexes with an option to buy out the Twin Falls investors, HUD claimed.

The investors were to make $8,000 apiece if they bought the four-plexes, the suit claimed.aley agreed to pay $110,000 for each of the 24 four-plexes, but had arranged loans of up to $140,000 for the investors to buy the four-plexes, HUD claimed.

The suit charged that the group signed documents saying they planned to live in the four-plexes, making them eligible for HUD loans of up to 97 percent of the mortgage.

If the 32 had bought the four-plexes as investments, they would have been eligible for loans of up to only 85 percent of the mortgage.

Former Twin Falls mayor and city councilman Doug Vollmer, who was one of the defendants, said in October 1989 that the group planned to use the four-plexes as vacation homes, but whenaley exercised his option to buy the condominiums, the investors had to sell and take their profits.

HUD also claimed that Vollmer and Twin Falls real estate developer Richard Messersmith solicited people to buy the four-plexes. The suit claimed that Vollmer and Messersmith were paid $10,000 apiece for soliciting investors.

Vollmer, Messersmith and the other defendants contend that they were duped into signing documents that they did not know contained false information. They say the mortgage company through whichaley arranged the loans, Mortgages Inc., is responsible for the false information on the documents.

Continued from C1 for secrecy regarding information on the legal action in Amanda's case.

But she and Misenheimer want the names of the case worker or workers who they say failed to protect Amanda.

"I want that person fired and their name publicized so they can't go to another county and do this to another kid," Misenheimer said.

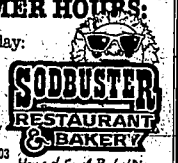

She characterized the report as "a whitewash" that was not the impartial review they were promised.

Gold declined to comment on what the panel found when it looked at how the Amanda Hostetler case was handled by Health and Welfare, but he did say that no serious violations of department policies were found in any of the cases examined.

Jackson and Misenheimer say they will take their concerns to Gov. Cecil Andrus, who endorsed the report's recommendations Tuesday.

No date has been set, but the women say Andrus has agreed to meet with them. Before going to Boise, they say they'll have another Friends of Amanda meeting to take gather other opinions and suggestions to take to the governor.

Bellevue may move ahead with LID plans despite protests

By Deborah Shimkus Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE - Disgruntled property owners packed Bellevue City Hall last week to voice their objection to the formation of a Local Improvement District to pave city streets.

But in spite of the protests, the City Council says it may likely go through with the project. "We don't have to have (residents) approval to do it," said Councilman Ernie Fortis.

Though the City Council is only in the beginning stages of considering the LID, engineers flagged both sides of Seventh Street early last week, bringing the issue to the attention of residents who oppose the project which they would help pay for.

Approximately 22 blocks in the city are currently accessed by dirt roads or unplatted alleys. The city council is proposing forming the Local Improvement District or LID in which all property owners whose lots front one of these streets will share in the cost to have it paved.

The city has received a cost estimate of $56,000 to complete the project. Under a LID, the cost per property owner would probably be less than $500 per lot, depending on whether the street is paved (full construction or just spray and gravel), said Mayor Dennis Wright.

The city will pay 20 percent to 25 percent of the entire cost; so all taxpayers of the community will be contributing to the project, he said.

But many residents feel they should not have to carry the burden of paying for the new roads. "I don't care if you want to put a road in there; I just don't want to have to pay for it," said property owner Nora Ruggles.

Some council members explained that the property values would increase with paved streets, but several residents said they were perfectly happy with their quiet, dirt roads.

It is inevitable that these streets will be paved, said property owner Linda Johnston.

"Proportionately, my lots will be worth more than the cost of the road," she said.

The city has an ordinance which stipulates that developers must assure access to property according to city specifications, according to Wright. And those specifications include paving.

But that ordinance has not been enforced in years, leaving the city with 117 lots for which there is no proper access, he said.

"What we have inherited is this situation of about 24 blocks which should have been taken care of when they were opened up," Wright said. "The city council is trying to clean up a problem as intensively as possible, he added.

Residents spent over an hour trying to convince the council to leave their particular streets alone, or find some other way to fund the project.

"This was a low blow because the last meeting was so positive," said councilwoman Joanna Ehmtraut, referring to a meeting last month in which the room was filled with supporters of the LID.

"We have to respect what they (opponents) say," said Councilwoman Hety Morgan.

But the council may go ahead with the LID, despite recent protests. There is no way to satisfy 100 percent of the people, said Wright.

"We can either forget all about it, or bite the bullet and go with it," he said.

An LID may be formed with a two-thirds majority vote by the council, or by allowing all affected people to have an election on the situation, Wright said.

Wright will poll the council members this week to determine what direction to take.

In other business, the City Council selected Forsgren and Associates as engineers for the city's new Downtown Redevelopment project.

Trustee openings in regional school districts

The Times-News

The following are trustee openings and their length of terms in regional school districts. Due to a recent change in state law, trustees now have until Friday to file their declarations of candidacy. Two school districts - those in Blaine and Minidoka counties - will not follow the new deadline. Those districts are requiring candidates to file their petitions by May 1.

Some districts said they were inconvenienced by the change in and just barely could comply. All openings are for three-year terms, unless otherwise specified.

BLAINE COUNTY

Blaine County School District petitions for candidates will be distributed by the District Office on Friday. Eight signatures are required, and petitions must be filed by 5 p.m. on May 1.

The current board members are: Zone 1, Robb Peck, who has served since 1986 and is seeking re-election.

Zone 2, Lita Sullivan has served since 1988 and will run again for a two-year term.

Zone 3, Board Chairman Frank Rowland has served since 1977 and does not plan to run for re-election.

Zone 4, Lynn Flickinger has served since 1988 and intends to run for re-election for a two-year term of office.

Zone 5, Trish Wilson has been a board member since 1989 and will run for a one-year term of office.

Polling places will be open from noon till 8 p.m. at Carey School, Bellevue Elementary, Hemingway Elementary and Wood River Junior High.

CAMAS COUNTY

Camas County School District, Fairfield, deadline for candidates to file is Friday.

One seat is up; Zone 1, Jim Rice.

ELMORE COUNTY

Glenns Ferry Joint District School Board Clerk Jane Grey says the change in law nearly caused her to miss the date for giving notice of trustee openings and filing dates.

"I had to fax our papers to the Mountain Home News, which publishes a couple days later and barely slipped in under the deadline," Grey said.

Two seats open: Zone 2, incumbent Ken Thompson and newcomer Skip Owens. Zone 3, Nancy Blankens, who has picked up filing papers.

Candidates must file by 5 p.m. Friday. Declarations for candidacy may be picked up at Glenns Ferry School between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. on Thursday and till 5 p.m. on Friday.

Grey can be reached at 366-7436 for further information. Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. on May 19 at the Hammert Community Center for voters in Zone 3 and at the Glenns Ferry City Hall for those in Zone 2.

GOODING COUNTY

Candidates for school board trustees must file their declarations of intent by Friday to be on the ballot for the May 19 election.

Write-in candidates must file by 5 p.m. on May 13, five days prior to the election.

In uncontested races, trustees will call a special board meeting within three days before the election - probably on Monday, May 18 - to declare no election and also to declare the uncontested candidate as the trustee for the office.

Bliss Joint District - Three incumbents are up for election this year.

In Zone 1, Dianne Butler has taken a declaration form to run for her second three-year term. In Zone 3, Michael Voy has taken a form to run for his second three-year term. Allison Janss also has taken a form to run for election in Zone 3.

In Zone 4, Mike Victor is seeking election to complete the remaining two terms of Mona Allen, who moved out of the zone. Victor was appointed last year to take Allen's seat on the board.

On May 19, polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at the school cafeteria.

Gooding Joint District - Martha Oberle of Zone 4 has taken out a form to file for re-election. She is seeking her third three-year term.

On May 19, polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at the District School Administration Office, 507 Idaho St. in Gooding.

Hagerman Joint District - In Zone 2, Board Chairman Pat Russell is filing for re-election. He seeks his third three-year term.

In Zone 3, Rolly Zollinger also is seeking re-election for a third three-year term. On May 19, the polls will be open from 2 to 8 p.m. at the Prince Memorial Gymnasium. Wendell District - In Zone 1, Emily Lake said Tuesday that she is still undecided about seeking reelection for a three-year term. She was elected a year ago to serve the remaining year in the term of Elaine Daniels, who moved out of the zone.

In Zone 5, Fred Prins is running for reelection. He has served one three-year term.

On May 19, polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at the high school gymnasium.

JEROME COUNTY

Valley District, Hazelton, One three-year trustee seat is up for election on the Valley school board.

Zone 5, John Brune, 3-year trustee.

LINCOLN COUNTY

Dietrich District - School officials plan to notify candidates of the early filing date.

The information received from the state concerning the filing change was not received in time to comply with the advising procedures, said Superintendent Mike Stefania. "Our local newspaper is published weekly, on Wednesday. The advertisements will be published in the next two editions of the local paper."

Seats up for election include: in Zone 1, Randy McCowen; in Zone 2, Pat Nigley. No other petitions have been taken out.

Shoshone District - Two seats are up: Zone 2, Sue Bryant; Zone 3, Jack Sologova.

MINIDOKA COUNTY

Minidoka County School District officials will allow trustees to declare their candidacy till May 1.

Two seats are up: Zone 2, Warren Snyder; Zone 3, 11-year trustee Russ Holland.

According to administration officials there have been four petitions taken out for Zone 2 and one for Zone 3, but none of them have been received to the central office.

The voting place for zone 3 will be Pershing Elementary and the voting places for Zone 2 will be West Main County Junior High, the John Otman residence at 1450 W. 360 S. in Jerome County and the Kay Jones residence at 600 W. 1050 N. in Lincoln County.

Cassia County School District's deadline is Friday for petitions for candidacy.

Two seats are up: Zone 1, KaRa Robinson; Zone 2, Board Chairman Kent Fleicher.

Both trustees plan to run again for an additional term and have served one term.

There have been no other petitions taken out of the central office for either of the zoned positions.

The voting places for Zone 1 are Haney's seed in Murtaugh, Burley High school and Oakley High school. The voting place for Zone 2 is Southwest Elementary in Burley.

Hill City man accused of violating riparian ordinance

By Michael Hofferber Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - A Hill City man has been charged with violating Blaine County's riparian management ordinance by cutting down a stand of cottonwood trees along the Big Wood River.

A criminal complaint against Pat Bennett was filed last week by Fritz Haemmerle, Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney. It alleges that Bennett cut down trees within the county's 75-foot setback on property near the Deer Creek Road north of Hailey owned by Dr. Donald Levin.

The misdemeanor charge is Blaine County's first alleged offense of its 1991 riparian management ordinance, designed to preserve stream side areas in their natural state.

John Gaedert, assistant county planner, investigated the cottonwood cut earlier this spring and inventoried approximately 60 trees cut down within the 75-foot setback.

"There were a lot more outside the setback," he said. "Dr. Levin testified that he authorized just two or three trees to be cut down."

If he is found guilty of violating the county ordinance, Bennett could face fines of up to $300 or six months in jail.

Blaine County's riparian ordinance was also tested before the county planning and zoning commission last week when property owner Frank Everett sought a variance to build a home within 40 feet of the Big Wood.

Everett claimed that being restricted from building within 75 feet of the river on his four-acre lot north of Ketchum would be an undo-hardship. The commission disagreed unanimously, with John McDonald abstaining, and denied the variance.

Andrus signs interim protection but calls it cover for candidates

Boyd

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has reluctantly signed legislation providing another year of interim protection for the Henry's Fork of the Snake River.

But in announcing his decision on Wednesday, the governor agreed that the bill merely offered "protection for political candidates" who helped defeat a plan to protect permanently key reaches in the eastern Idaho basin.

That permanent plan, the product of some four years of review by the Water Resource Board, cleared the state Senate but was narrowly defeated in the House amid an eleven-hour attack from interests considering developments on the internationally famous trout stream.

"It is unfortunate that some special interests that did not choose to participate or comment during the Board's consideration of the matter flooded the Legislature with much false information... a last minute effort that caused it to fail by a scant three votes," Andrus said.

Because the vote in the House was so close, Andrus said in a letter to retiring House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Genesee, that he is recommending the Water Resource Board make only the changes it sees as truly necessary and then resubmit the plan for legislative ratification next year.

He also told Boyd he was advising the board to make the permanent protection plan an issue in the November election by determining the stand of legislative candidates during a new round of hearings on the issue.

"My suggestion is that such meetings and hearings attempt to determine the attitudes of legislative candidates and that such information be made available to the public prior to the November elections," Andrus wrote. "Much misinformation and outright falsehoods were used to defeat permanent protection."

Andrus, who had made permanent protection one of his priorities this past winter, said he was optimistic that requests for development exemptions from the conditions of interim protection would be limited during the coming year.

Senate Resources and Environment Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, a staunch supporter of permanent protection, was a leader in the unsuccessful campaign to deny opponents the political cover of the interim protection bill on the session's final day.

Noh argued that federal law already prohibits any development on the Henry's Fork basin that it was unlikely that federal approval for any development proposals elsewhere in the basin could be obtained before a new permanent plan is considered next year.

Supporters of retired Army Lt. Col. James "Bo" Griz filed petitions on Wednesday that contain enough signatures to place Griz name as an independent presidential candidate on Idaho's November general election ballot.

Petitions containing an estimated 6,000 signatures were filed with the secretary of state to qualify Griz, 43, of Sandy Valley, Nev., and his running mate Cy Mineet of Kerrville, Texas, as an independent presidential ticket.

Griz, who has campaigned for president in a number of other states, is a highly decorated Green Beret who made forays into Southeast Asia in search of American prisoners of war in the 1960s. He is the Populist Party's 1992 presidential candidate.

Under state law, independent candidates must file petitions with the signatures of nearly 5,000 unverified signatures to qualify for the general election ballot.

Elsewhere on the political campaign, Republican senatorial candidate Milt Erhart continued pitching his plan to eliminate the federal deficit, telling the Meridian Chamber of Commerce he is the only GOP primary candidate with "a real, workable plan."

It calls for a three-year freeze in federal spending coupled with creation of a civilian commission with authority to cut $150 billion a year in wasteful spending.

The Boise stockbroker, who faces Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne and former state Sen. Red Beck of Boise for the nomination, wants oil companies to buy 5 percent of their fuel from American farmers in the form of ethanol and Japan and Germany to pay $50 billion each for U.S. military presence within their borders.

He also proposes a 10 percent investment tax credit for products that are at least 80 percent American made.

The three are vying to succeed retiring Republican Sen. Steve Symms. Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings faces Panhandle businessman Matt Schaffer for the Democratic nomination.

In the race to succeed Stallings in Congress, Democratic frontrunner J.D. Williams, the state auditor, named eastern Idaho political operative Randy Furniss as his campaign manager. Furniss, who currently runs a public affairs consulting firm, was a field representative for eight years for the late U.S. Sen. Frank Church and Stallings' chief of staff for four years.

Williams faces former Ketchum Mayor Jerry Seiffert for the Democratic nomination while Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls faces Ada County Commissioner Gary Glenn for the GOP nomination.

Lady said of Phillips, "He's a loving father and he loves his wife and treated them good."

He told Boise DEA agents that Jack told him about their drug robberies, and a "sting" was set up, using the Nampa address at which Jack was arrested.

Lady admitted that although he set up the Phillips drug incident with Jack, he never discussed it with Baldwin. He said until a few days ago, he'd never seen the sheriff or talked with him.

But he said Jack several times mentioned "the sheriff" was his partner in the drug crimes. On one of the tape recordings, Jack said to Lady, "I went into Idaho County on a hunting trip, and as soon as they entered the county, Jack told him they were safe from the sheriff's men because that's where the sheriff lives."

After legally taking a deer each, Lady said he and Jack shot at another Jack illegally killed a second deer, Lady said, but said they didn't have to worry about prosecution because Jack knew the sheriff and other officials.

Lady signed an agreement with the federal drug agency in which he agreed not to take any more stings during undercover work. He admitted illegally killing the deer, purchasing "crank" in an effort to get his employees to use or buy it and later trying to sell the illegal drug in a Boise bar.

"He said he has not been promised immunity from prosecution for his testimony in the case."

Lady testified he didn't really plan to sell the drug. "I was trying to get them to think I was a real bad guy," he said, to further his undercover drug work.

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — Two more appeals have been filed to stop timber sales in eastern Idaho's Targhee National Forest.

Seven environmental and sportsmen's groups have filed a joint appeal of the Dugway Ghost-South Split Creek salvage timber sale. And another group, the Naive Ecosystem Council of Willow Creek, Mont. has filed a separate appeal of the same Forest Service timber sale.

Meanwhile, representatives of the Intermountain Forest Industry Association have been meeting with workers at the Idaho Forest Industries stud mill in St. Anthony to support the Forest Service's move to eliminate the appeals process.

The groups appealing the sale include the Region 6 Wildlife Council in Rexburg, the Henry's Fork Foundation, Greater Yellowstone Coalition, the Wilderness Society, Idaho chapter of the Sierra Club, Idaho Conservation League and Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition.

Witness didn't talk to officer about deal

BOISE (AP) — A key witness in the drug robbery trial of Idaho County Sheriff Randy Baldwin said Wednesday he never saw or talked to Baldwin prior to the sheriff's arrest along with another man in a drug "sting" at Nampa.

Undercover drug informant Dean Lady testified that he provided false information to Lamonte Duane Jack, Baldwin's codefendant, that led to the arrest of Jack and Baldwin last Dec. 20 at Nampa.

Baldwin, 37, and Jack, 45, are charged with breaking into a Nampa home, under surveillance from narcotics officers, and trying to sell $75,000 in cash, three pounds of marijuana and two ounces of cocaine.

Lady told officials of the Federal Drug Enforcement Agency that Jack told him that he and "his buddy" who Jack described as a sheriff, robbed under a $2,000 debt he owed Jack, Lady told a jury of nine women and three men that he provided an address supposedly that of a drug dealer.

Lady said he told Jack the alleged drug dealer, identified by Lady as Dan Phillips, sold about a shoebox of cocaine each month, but admitted he made that up to appear more important.

There has been no testimony of the Dec. 20 arrest yet, but police and drug agents said earlier they arrested Jack as he came out of the house. Baldwin fled the scene and was arrested later near the Nampa bus station.

The jury listened to two secret recordings made by Lady as he and Jack talked about robbing Phillips to sell the drug. "I was trying to get them to think I was a real bad guy," he said, to further his undercover drug work.

Sheriff denies listening to killer's telephone calls with his attorneys

OROPINO (AP) — Clearwater County Sheriff Nick Albers has denied allegations that he listened to calls between the murderer Gene Francis Stuart and attorneys while Stuart was in the Orofino jail.

Albers testified Tuesday before 2nd District Judge Ronald Schilling during the seventh day of a hearing on Stuart's claim that jail officials violated his rights by eavesdropping on his telephone conversations in 1981.

Schilling is considering whether enough evidence exists to warrant a new trial for Stuart, 40, in the Sept. 19, 1981, beating death of 3-year-old Robert Miller of Orofino, the son of a woman he was living with.

Stuart's attorney, Robert Kinney, contends Albers' department gleaned evidence from his client's calls and used it to support the murder charge.

The Idaho Supreme Court ordered an evidentiary hearing in 1990.

Albers acknowledged he "listened" to two house calls and tape recorded them; all between Stuart and members of his family, in the interest of jail security.

But during more than four hours on the stand, the sheriff said he did not monitor or record Stuart's calls with attorneys and knew nothing about anyone else on his staff eavesdropping on such calls.

A number of former sheriff's employees testified earlier that they participated in or knew about covert monitoring and recording of Stuart's calls.

Besides calls he personally listened to, Albers said his chief investigative deputy in 1981, Robert Harrelson, may have listened to one of Stuart's telephone conversations with family members. Harrelson, now Albers' chief deputy, insisted earlier Tuesday that the limited phone monitoring was done because Stuart posed an escape risk.

"I don't know if it was me or the sheriff who said record the calls," Harrelson said.

Boise woman stands trial for deaths

BOISE — Robin Lee Row has been ordered to stand trial on three counts of first-degree murder for the Feb. 10 fire that killed her husband and two children.

Mrs. Row, 34, of Boise, is scheduled to be arraigned April 22 before 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzman for the deaths of Randy Row, 34, Tabitha Cornellier, 8, and Joshua Cornellier, 10.

All three died of smoke inhalation in the duplex fire. "There are many pieces of evidence that in themselves do not constitute probable cause," Ada County Magistrate Terry McDaniel said Tuesday at the end of the all-day preliminary hearing. "But when all these factors are taken together, I think there's sufficient cause for me to believe Robin Lee Row committed the offense."

Canadians drop Christmas tree probe

BOISE — Canadian trade officials have dropped their investigation into charges that Pacific Northwest Christmas tree growers dumped trees on the British Columbia market at below cost.

"Their statements on this issue were that the amount of dumping was negligible, if anything," said Bryan Oakland, executive director of the Northwest Christmas Tree Association in Salem, Ore. British Columbia growers filed the dumping complaint with their government late last year, and Canadian trade officials sent inquiries to Washington and Idaho growers, asking who they were selling to and how much they were charging.

$100,000 in damages sought in suit

MOSCOW — A lawsuit seeking more than $100,000 in damages from state and Idaho County officials has been filed on behalf of one of the young girls 70-year-old Jesse Howard Fleury was convicted of molesting.

Fleury was sentenced to at least 10 years in prison for sexually abusing two girls between the ages of 6 and 9 in Latah County last year while on probation for an earlier child molestation conviction in Idaho County.

The complaint, filed Tuesday in 2nd District Court by Moscow attorney Roy Mosman, seeks $100,000 in special damages to cover the cost of counseling for the child, plus general damages in excess of $10,000 and attorney fees.

115 people apply for BSU presidency

BOISE — On the eve of its deadline, the state Board of Education had received 115 applications for the presidency at Boise State University. Most of the applicants are from the Midwest and the West, with smaller numbers for the South and West, board spokesman Bill Hargrove said Tuesday.

Applicants include university deans, vice presidents and presidents, corporate executives and lawyers, he said. The BSU presidential search committee will meet May 3 to narrow the field to about 20 candidates, said Roberta Fields of New Meadows, a state board member and committee chairwoman.

Lewiston schools recognize MLK Day

LEWISTON — In the face of a barrage of complaints, the Lewiston School Board has agreed to make Martin Luther King Day a holiday for the students. That reverses a decision made in March.

Students will still go to class the same number of days, with the school year extended from June 3 to June 4.

Before the Monday decision, Lewiston High School junior Kristi Washburn presented the panel with a petition bearing 400 signatures in favor of no school on that day.

Power failure leaves residents in dark

BOISE — About 3,500 Idaho Power Co. customers in eastern and southern Boise, including portions of downtown, lost power for about 35 minutes Wednesday when a substation failed.

Idaho Power spokesman Jim Taney said crews were performing some maintenance about 1 p.m. when an equipment overload occurred. The blackout affected many businesses and homes from Fort Boise just north of the state Capitol south to Interstate 84 near the airport and east to the edge of the city. Crews restored the power just after 1:30 p.m.

First lady lauds husband, reading tapes

SALT LAKE CITY — First lady Barbara Bush has her share of success and tribulation, embarrassment and pride at the White House, and she told all about them during a visit here Wednesday.

Before attending a Republican fund-raiser and campaigning for George Bush's reelection, Mrs. Bush took time to read to 22 children at a downtown Waldenbooks store.

The storytelling was to promote Mrs. Bush's new story cassettes, which feature her readings during a 1991 ABC Radio Network program as part of her literacy project.

At a $1,000-a-plate fund raising luncheon later, she told Utah Republicans they will have a key role in selecting her husband.

Compiled from wire reports.

Idaho/West Universities consider graduation date change

MOSCOW (AP) — At Gov. Cecil Andrus' urging, the state Board of Education has directed the University of Idaho and Idaho State University to stop holding graduation ceremonies on the same day starting next year.

Andrus

Rayburn Barton, the board's executive director, said he and the presidents of Idaho's four-year schools have been told by the board to develop a plan for alternate-day commencement starting in 1993.

"The board made it very clear that it expects this to be done," he wrote in a letter this week to Andrus. "It will be."

Last month, Carol Brockway, director of Twin Falls complained to Andrus about not being able to attend graduation ceremonies for her son at the University of Idaho and her daughter at ISU because both ceremonies are on May 16.

In response, Andrus said he understood Mrs. Brockway's frustration. He has repeatedly asked the Board of Education for a change so he could attend graduation ceremonies at all Idaho colleges and universities.

"I respectfully suggest that you direct your justifiable irritation at the members of the State Board of Education, and on each letter you send, please put a postscript: 'The Governor agrees with me,'" Andrus wrote to Mrs. Brockway.

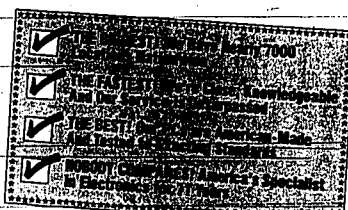

The governor said he tried to attend both schools' ceremonies last year, but was unable to make it to Pocatello because of heavy rain. This year, he said he will attend the ceremony at ISU but not at the University of Idaho.

The Moscow ceremony begins three hours before ISU's on May 15. Boise State's graduation ceremony is scheduled May 10 this year, at Lewis-Clark State College's ceremony is on May 15.

Michael Gallagher, ISU's academic vice president, said Tuesday the changing the policy probably would involve one school scheduling graduation a week before school ends.

Couple's marriage weathers man's winter of discontent

DEAR ABBY: Last winter, while in the throes of a mid-life crisis, "Walter," my husband of 29 years, was approached by a business associate who told him she was attracted to him, and would "like to know him better."

Six weeks later, on his birthday, she treated him to lunch - and more. As a gag, she blindfolded him and drove him to an expensive hotel, and took him to a room where she had lunch and a bottle of wine waiting. When he removed the blindfold, she explained that she had chosen a hotel room so they could eat and talk without having to worry about being seen! You have a pretty good idea of what happened during their three-hour lunch.

Two days later, she stopped by his office and told him she had been feeling guilty for not telling him she has genital herpes! She said she realized it was active again the day after they were together.

By some miracle, my husband did not catch the disease, but the next man she "wants to know better" might not be so lucky. I'm also happy to say that, after professional counseling, our marriage is on solid

DEAR ABBY: In response to the nursing-home administrator who once again chastised those of us who have parents in convalescent hospitals who don't visit long enough, or often enough:

I, for one, am tired of having stones thrown, from the likes of her, at those of us who have parents for whom we were caregivers for many years, until we could no longer handle the problem at home. (The "problem" being a parent who had numerous strokes that deteriorated her brain to the point that she completely lost all control of her bodily functions, and particularly one who no longer knew who we were.)

My loving mother's slow "death" began 12 years ago. Today, she hasn't a clue who I am, nor does she know her other daughter, son-in-law, grandchildren or great-grandchildren.

Yes, my visits are not very long. But I come often to make sure she is clean and comfortable, and that she has everything she wants and needs. The nursing home in which we have her is of fine quality, and I will not even go into the expense involved. I am not wealthy, nor are my sisters or brothers, but we regard this expense as a necessity - not a luxury. (We economize on other things.)

To visit our mother is no joy. It is extremely painful. I am a stranger to this lady who was once a dynamic, beautiful, brilliant woman. Now clinging to the memory of the person she was.

My mother "died" several years ago.

Spurs hire Tarkanian

Ex-UNLV coach sees 'tremendous potential'

Dallas Morning News

DALLAS — Owner Red McCombs had a little trouble with the name, but his heart and wallet were in the right place Wednesday when he announced Jerry Tarkanian as the San Antonio Spurs' new coach.

Tarkanian, 61, who grudgingly left Nevada-Las Vegas on March 3 with the highest winning percentage in college basketball history, will begin coaching the club next season. The Spurs will finish this season and the playoffs under interim coach Bob Bass, who replaced the fired Larry Brown in late January. Tarkanian is expected to attend camps and scout talent in June. McCombs said Tarkanian also will help Bass, the Spurs' vice president of basketball operations, for the rest of the season and during the playoffs, which begin next week.

"I want to say this is a very, very significant step for the franchise," McCombs said. "The more I talked to Coach Tarkanian, the more I became absolutely certain that this was the right move for him and this was the right move for this franchise."

Right move, perhaps, but wrong name: McCombs referred to his new coach as "Tarkington" at least six times during the San Antonio news conference. McCombs did make it clear the "Shark" was the man he wanted. Detroit coach Chuck Daly — who reportedly told his players this would be his final season with the Pistons — University of Texas coach Tom Penders and former Spurs coach Stan Albeck had been rumored as candidates.

McCombs said Tarkanian was "the only person I have talked to about this job."

Tarkanian said he "put out a feeler" about the job after Brown left. Tarkanian and McCombs met last week in Los Angeles when the Spurs played the Lakers at the Forum.

"There's tremendous potential here, and I hope we can put everything together."

Steinbrenner reportedly edges closer to returning to Yankees

NEW YORK — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has reportedly settled a dispute with a former team executive that could clear the way for Steinbrenner to resume running the club.

The Yankees fired former Kleiman chief operating officer on Feb. 21 because he refused to withdraw a lawsuit against commissioner Fay Vincent. Kleiman claimed Vincent unfairly prevented him from succeeding Steinbrenner as the team's manager-partner. Kleiman also has contended the Yankees owe him more than $1 million as the result of his firing.

Under the agreement reported by the New York Times on Thursday, Kleiman would receive the money from the Yankees and drop the lawsuit against Vincent that has been a roadblock in Steinbrenner's attempt to resume day-to-day control of the team.

Vincent banned Steinbrenner from operating the Yankees in July 1990 because the owner associated with a gambler.

Argentinian soccer star plays for charity, despite suspension

BUENOS AIRES — Argentina — in apparent defiance of his worldwide suspension for testing positive for cocaine following an Italian League soccer match last year, Diego Maradona played an exhibition Wednesday to raise funds for charity.

Maradona called the authorities of the International Federation of Association Football (FIFA) who tried to enforce his suspension "inhuman robots," and said that "nobody in Argentina will cry for (FIFA president) Joao Havelange when he dies."

Reed sparks BoSox win over Orioles

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Jody Reed broke an eight-inning tie with a two-run single Wednesday as the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-5 after wasting a three-run lead.

American League

With the score tied at 4, Tom Brunansky and Mo Vaughn singled off Storm Davis (0-1). Tim Lincecum sacrificed. Wade Boggs was walked intentionally with two outs and Reed singled off Mark Williamson for a 6-4 lead.

Greg Harris (1-0), who relieved after Baltimore's three-run seventh, got four outs for the victory and Jeff Reardon pitched the club for his first save, allowing a one-out homer to Chris Hoiles.

Blue Jays 2, Yankees 0

TORONTO (AP) — Jimmy Key and Tom Henke combined to shut out the Boston Pat Borders drove in one run and scored the other as the Blue Jays continued their torrid start.

Key (1-0) struck out two and walked two before yielding to Henke with one out in the ninth and a 2-1 count on Don Mattingly. Randy Velarde had led off the inning with a double, the third hit off Key; earlier, Mike Stanley and Charlie Hayes had singles.

Athletics 10, Royals 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Rickey Henderson and Jose Canseco kept Oakland close with lowering home runs and Scott Brosius' single capped a three-run seventh inning.

Jeff Parrott (3-0) got the victory with 2-3 innings in relief of Joe Soslarski, who gave up four runs in the fourth. The A's, who have won seven of their first nine, tied it 6-6 in the seventh on Willie Wilson's RBI single off Mike Magnante (0-1).

Mariners 6, White Sox 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Home runs by Ken Griffey Jr., Jeff Schaefer and Pete O'Brien powered Seattle. Rookie Dave Fleming (1-1) got the victory with six-hit pitching for 7 2-3 innings. He walked none and struck out four. Gene Hargis relieved Fleming, then Dennis Pawell and Mike Schooler pitched in the ninth for Seattle.

Griffey hit a two-run homer, his second, after Edgar Martinez walked in the fourth inning. After a rain delay of 1 hour, 20 minutes, Schaefer hit a two-run homer in the top of the fifth following Dave Valle's single. It was Schaefer's first homer of the season and second of his career, the other

Hammond, Roberts shine as Reds beat Braves 3-1; Sanders maintains streak

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Chris Hammond scattered four hits in eight innings as the Cincinnati Reds beat Atlanta 3-1 Wednesday for their first three-game sweep of the Braves at Riverfront Stadium since 1978.

Bip Roberts singled twice, drove in two runs and scored the other off Charlie Leibrandt (1-1).

Hammond (2-0) lasted eight innings for the first time in 20 major-league starts. Deion Sanders opened the game with a home run and had an eighth-inning triple, his fifth of the season.

Norm Charlton pitched a perfect ninth for his league-leading fifth save in six chances. Leibrandt gave up seven hits in 5 2-3 innings, walked four, hit a batter and threw away a pickoff attempt. The Braves had won eight of nine games in Cincinnati last season.

Roberts led off the first with a single, the seventh straight game he's opened by reaching base; Leibrandt then made 11 throws to first base before hitting Hal Morris with a pitch.

Leibrandt made two more throws to first to chase Morris back. First baseman Brian Hunter wasn't covering the base on the second one, and the ball bounced down the line for an error as Roberts scored.

Sanders extended his hitting streak to nine games by hitting a 1-2 pitch for his first homer. His two hits raised his NL-leading average to .447.

Cincinnati shortstop Barry Larkin left the game in the eighth after bruising his left arm.

Astros 5, Dodgers 4

HOUSTON (AP) — Rookie Scott Servais singled home the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning as the Houston Astros defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4 Wednesday to take two of three games in the series. With the score 4-4, Ken Caminiti led off the sixth with a walk off starter Bob Ojeda (0-2). Casey Candaele sacrificed Caminiti to second and Servais followed with a bloop single to right field.

The Dodgers took a 3-0 lead in the first, inning off winner Mark Portugal (1-0) on Eric Davis' two-run single and Dave Hanson's RBI single. The Astros rallied for two runs in the bottom of the inning on Pete Incaviglia's two-run double.

The Dodgers made it 4-2 in the second inning on a two-out triple by Brett Butler and an RBI single by Lenny Harris.

The Astros tied the score in their half of the second with a leadoff home run by Candaele, his first of the season, and Steve Finley's RBI single.

Portugal pitched six innings, allowing seven hits and four runs. Al Osoza and Doug

Bad news in Boston

Recession-plagued street departments struggle to patch up famed marathon route

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Runners in the Boston Marathon will have more to worry about than Heartbreak Hill and hitting the wall in this year's race.

How about Heartbreak Pothole? Or hitting the first budget cuts in recession-strapped cities along the marathon route have added some new obstacles to the old race course. "Certainly the surface of the road is something that's of extreme concern," said Dave McGilvray, technical coordinator for the Boston Athletic Association who inspects the race route every year.

"But we also understand that there are conditions beyond our control, i.e. budgets within these communities that aren't always able to go out there and put down a new coat."

Still, McGilvray said the conditions do not pose a hazard. "The assumption is they are probably in less fair condition today than they were yesterday. But people have driven the course and said conditions are such that they are very doable," McGilvray said.

The marathon begins at noon on Monday. Layoffs and budget cuts have made it tougher for the towns and cities on the route to keep up with maintenance and regularly resurface roads.

"At this stage of the game, we're still able to patch the holes and do our part of the street cleaning," said Boston Public Works Commissioner Joseph F. Casazza. "Are we getting down to the bottom of how many things we can do on a limited budget? Yes, absolutely."

In Hopkinton, where the marathon begins, the roads are in good shape, said highway department director Bob Bartlett.

"What's hurting me is there are other things I should be doing, but I have to concentrate on the marathon," Bartlett said. "I just wish I had a little extra manpower."

Bruins, Tigers play host to track invites

By Jeff Hoskinson
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The midway point in the prep track season occurs today with the running of the annual Angie Wyatt Invitational at Bruin Stadium and the J Club Invitational in Jerome.

Both meet brings together some of the top competition from around the area as well as from around the state.

The 13-team Wyatt Invitational will get underway at 1:30 p.m. with the field events. Running events are scheduled to begin around 2:30 p.m. In Jerome things get going at 3:30 p.m. with the field events and 4:30 p.m. with running events.

The Angie Wyatt meet brings together the Magic Valley's A-3 and A-4 schools for the first time this year. Bishop Kelly and a JV team from Twin Falls will also take part in the meet.

The meet should be a preview of the district competitions later this spring, along with strong showings expected from Bishop Kelly.

The top individuals to watch for come on the girls' side. Rena and Gina Miller and Heather Beard are three of the top athletes in the valley.

The Miller sisters of Declo could appear in anything from the 400 to the 3200, including the hurdles and even some field events. Beard, of Kimberly will showcase her talent in the distance events.

The J Club Invitational will pit the Tigers against Snake River, American Falls, Valliuve, Burley, Wood River, and Buhl.

Although the Tigers should be the team to beat on both the girls' and guys' sides Valliuve and Snake River could provide a strong challenge.

The Tigers have seen Valliuve twice this season and know what to expect. According to Tigers' girls' coach Skip Andrews Snake River and American Falls are the big question marks.

"Valliuve has really pressed on the girls side," he said.

"Snake River has a couple of distance runners and some good sprinters but they may lack depth. We haven't seen American Falls so we don't know what to expect."

The boys meet should belong to the Tigers. Jerome has shown superior depth and quality so far this spring. Last week in Caldwell the Tigers came away with the team title.

Celtics down Pistons, tie Knicks for lead

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Boston tied the New York Knicks for first place in the Atlantic Division with a 92-89 win over the Detroit Pistons on Wednesday night as Boston Parish scored 22 points.

The Knicks and the Celtics, who have won seven in a row, are each 50-31 with one game remaining in the regular season.

Either New York or Boston, the latter 4-0 against Detroit this season, will have the homecourt advantage against the Pistons in the first round of the playoffs.

The win gave the Celtics their third consecutive 50-win season and 27th in franchise history. They will get the second "seeding" position in the Eastern Conference with a victory over Miami on Sunday or a loss by the Knicks at Milwaukee on Saturday night.

Bird and Dee Brown both missed the game with the Pistons. Bird has a sore back and Brown the leg. Despite the absence of Bird for seven games, the Celtics have won 14 of their last 15 games. The Pistons, who never led in the game, three times got the deficit down to one point, the last time when two free throws by Joe Dumars made it 90-89 with 18 seconds remaining.

Trail Blazers 100, Mavericks 94
DALLAS (AP) — Buck Williams led his team in scoring for the first time all season with 20 points, helping Portland beat Dallas.

The Trail Blazers took control with a 9-0 run that included two baskets from reserve Ernie Williams for a 91-83 lead in the fourth quarter. Williams' hook shot with 4:34 left capped the spur.

Rolando Blackman scored 18 points and Mike Luzzo 17 for the Blazers and they have been the top seed in the Western Conference playoffs, won for the ninth time in his last 13 starts.

Nuggets 110, Lakers 107
DENVER (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers missed a clutch shot to let the lead in the eighth quarter slip to the Western Conference, where Denver snapped a club record 11-game losing streak.

A victory by the Lakers (41-38), who started the night a half-game behind eighth-place Houston would have put them ahead of the Rockets (42-38), who had a 1 1/2 game lead in the West. The Nuggets had three games left to make up the deficit.

For an error, left batsman and a single pushed one run across. Ruben Vela tripled home two more in the fifth, Vela, who went 2-for-4 in the game, scored on another single.

Sophomore Mike Ramsey got the win, holding the Tigers to six hits.

Tarkanian

Tarkanian said, "I know these players, and I like these players."

Contract terms were not disclosed, but it's believed Tarkanian signed a three-year deal. He declined to discuss specific changes, other than to stress the Spurs would be a running team.

Forward Terry Cummings said that suits this team well. "For us, it's a genuine who's gotten along well with his players. I think he's had enough players to do the pros that I think he's probably going to make the adjustment fairly easily."

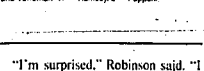

Spurs forward Sidney Green, who played under Tarkanian at UNLV, said his former and new coach is a good match for San Antonio.

"I'm happy for Terry," Green said. "He's a legend who deserves everything he's getting and he's going to have a big impact on the NBA."

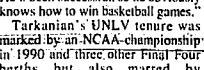

All-Star center David Robinson, on the injured list after surgery to repair a torn thumb ligament, said he heard the news from a reporter while taping a public service message.

Blackfoot bowler: Beware in Buhl

Scott Turvey of Blackfoot had better watch his step the next time he's in Buhl.

For it doesn't take a rocket scientist to see that the local police may have it in for him. After all, snatching victory away from the chief of police has to be frowned upon.

It would seem that Ron Romero — who, when he isn't bowling, heads up the Buhl Police Department — did everything right last Sunday in the NABT Tournament at Sunset Bowl. Entering the tourney with a 172 average, he began the qualifying round with a 215, and his 803 won him the second seed in the stepladder final.

Enter the villain. Sporting a somewhat meager 132 average, Mr. Turvey managed a 189 in the final. Coming through in the clutch, Ron countered with a solid 202 performance.

But when handicap totals were tallied, Turvey prevailed, 239 to 233. Ron took home $53 for his efforts, while Turvey won the $90 first-place purse... That's... a difference of 37 bucks. Hmm. Isn't that about the amount of a minor moving violation these days? Drive carefully, Mr. Turvey.

Also coming home from the NABT with young stars' prize money in their purses were Carole Bergvinn of Hailey and Twin's Paulette Mechem who teamed up to take the $50 doubles event. Ron Salsar headed up the lanes at Sunset Bowl last Sunday night during the Commercial League with 269 series. Ron had twin 266s and a 236 game.

In the Division 2/Magic Valley Division of the Women's State Tournament, no news is good news. And there's little to report this week other than local women hold down every top spot in the division, except team competition. For Julie Blick, it's seven down and two to go, as she's only two weekends away from leading start to finish in both single categories with scores of 608 and 723. And Karma VanBuren still holds on to the three leads she took over two weeks ago. Now, if only a couple local categories could capture the clean sweep for the Magic Valley in Division 1 scratch singles level.

A couple of Gooding gals have taken over the second and third positions in Division 1 handicap all-events: Kathy Lehr is second with a 1976 total, followed by Linda Norris at 1961. Even though she rolled a nifty 634, Cathy McGowan was unable to unseat Boise's Mary Harvey, as the Division 1 scratch singles leader. Cathy also hit a 634 during the doubles event, but she and partner Shelly Leazer failed to place in the top three. The Vault from Gooding still leads the team handicap.

In Division 3, no one was able to wrestle away first place from Twin's Barbara Darnall and Rhonda Madrigal in scratch doubles. Barb and Rhonda are also third in handicap doubles. Over in the Mipi-Cassia area, the news is not so good as the Magic Valley has yet to make its presence felt in the 45th annual Men's State Tournament. A couple leads did change hands, however. Boise's Mike Taylor had held first in the scratch all-events for three weeks, but lost to Craig Goodwin of Idaho Falls last weekend; 2040 to 2030. Also from Idaho Falls, Bowlero Lanes upstaged previous leader Boise's Q's Trophy. Cabin in team scratch competition.

Upcoming events: Those wishing to enter Bowldrome's Super Sweeper V on April 24 should hustle in their entries. The quad is filling up fast. Over at Magic, summer leagues are beginning.

Odds and ends: The Gutter Gussie Club has claimed yet another member.

Gail Wilhelm gained entry into the club with the unenvying name by rolling a 595 series... Pat Leahlin was $114 in Magic's Saturday Monte Carlo night... The score to beat in the Bowldrome's ongoing High Rollers Scratch Tourney is 1304 by Gary Keith of Arco... Nichole Clark won a WIBC Award with a 221, 103 pins over average... Dianne Moncur had her first 200 game with an even 200 score... The Peepees have finished their season... with a party of beer and comedies, no less. Lucy Miller was the girls' bowler of the year; Jonas Brady, the boys'. Last week's Star of the Lanes was Teresa Culver with a 216.

The Bowldrome's Friday Night Senior's League has also wrapped up their season. League champs were Us' em, comprised of Linda and Sparky (dog) call me Delmar Tucker, Roger Boyd and Betsy Menard.

The men's average leaders by age groups are as follows: Hug Farmer with a 173 led the 70 and over; at 178, Vern Smith won the 65-69 category; Sparky Tucker with a 178 average led the 60 to 64-year olds.

For the women, there was no 70-plus leader for if there was, I was unable to get a man to admit to it, but Delva Honderghj was the class of the 65-69 group with a 151; Virginia Mulkey's 149 average was the 60-64 leader, and Thelma (can she really be trusted to reveal her true age?) Tucker was the 55-59 winner with a 157 average.

The NIBC Coca-Cola Regional Tournament was held senior this month at Sunset Bowl in Buhl. Special restrictions do not allow for a listing of scores, places and other highlights, but here is a list of all 33 teens and pre-teens who qualified for the State Tourney in Ontario, Ore., on May 2 and 3:

Kris Davis, Brant-Bingham, Brandon Schmidt, Kessie Earl, Tara Winkle, Stephanie Studor, Troy Holland, Josh Robinson, Sonny Thurnburov, Jake Fessenden, Theresa Moser, Tabatha Earl, Lindsay Hudson, Kaylene Maughnam, Kristina Povalawski, Beth Hillard, Chelsey Winkle, J.C. Koyde, Todd Fiscus, Johnnie Winters, Matt Wageman, Dany Higley, Nathan Holland, Daron Blick, Sarah Hansen, Glenda Gould, Shandi Griffin, Cory Moore, Chad Holland, Shon-Baywater, Tiffany Smith and Tammy Carter.

Best wishes to avid bowler, Loren Bennis, who suffered a heart attack two weeks ago.

Loren underwent extensive coronary bypass surgery last week. And, as of this writing, is reported to be in serious but stable condition in a Boise hospital.

Powerful Palmer works on defense

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Steve Buechele? Yeah, what about him?

Texas Rangers fans were delighted for seven seasons by slick-fielding third baseman's soft hands, sweet scoops and smooth throws.

But now they're forgetting all about him, just as Buechele had predicted when he was traded to the Pittsburgh Pirates last season for two pitching prospects.

"The way Dean Palmer hits, believe me, they're going to forget about me real quick," Buechele said again this spring.

Palmer can't field or throw like Buechele, but then again, Buechele can't hit like Palmer.

Palmer hit homers in each of the Rangers' first three games, one short of the record set by Willie Mays, who hit home runs in the first four games of 1971.

Palmer also had six of the Rangers' major league-leading 41 home runs this spring.

"I had a good spring and it's obviously carried into the season," Palmer said. "I'm having a good time."

His defense has been a surprise. He dives to his left for line drives and that has manager Bobby Valentine heralding Palmer's arrival as an all-around player.

After a great start at Class AAA Oklahoma City last season, in which he had 22 homers in the first 60 games, Palmer was promoted. But with Buechele at third base, Palmer was forced to play shortstop for the first time in his career, and it took away from his concentration and affected his offense. He hit just .187.

But after Buechele was traded on Aug. 30, Palmer returned to third base and hit seven homers in the first two weeks. His 15 home runs were second among AL rookies and gave him .37 for the year.

"I'm happy to be back at third," the 23-year-old Palmer said.

Texas Rangers third baseman Dean Palmer throws to first during Tuesday night's game against the California Angels.

"I wasn't comfortable in the outfield." With a lineup that includes Ruben Sierra and Juan Gonzalez, Palmer's 437-foot blast against California on Sept. 19 was the Rangers' longest last season. He's already outdone himself this year, tagging one 439 feet to dead center against Seattle last week.

'I'm a different person now. I'm more relaxed and I'm playing my game. I'm going out there and trying to have fun and I think it shows.'

— Dean Palmer

"I think that's another big difference: I am getting more selective," Palmer said. "I'm being aggressive when the ball is in the strike zone, and when it's not I'm trying to lay off it. I'm not chasing it like last year, trying to make it good to hit."

"I got that same feeling," he said. "I'm really not up there cranking the ball or anything. I'm really just trying to drive the ball up the middle and let your own pitch drive into good counts where I'm ahead. And I'm able to cut it loose a little more and not get behind the counts where I'm a little less aggressive."

Palmer said not having to adjust to a new position has allowed him to spend more of his concentration on hitting. The results are more counts in his favor and more pitches in his power zone.

"I think that's another big difference: I am getting more selective," Palmer said. "I'm being aggressive when the ball is in the strike zone, and when it's not I'm trying to lay off it. I'm not chasing it like last year, trying to make it good to hit."

He was last year at Oklahoma City.

"I got that same feeling," he said. "I'm really not up there cranking the ball or anything. I'm really just trying to drive the ball up the middle and let your own pitch drive into good counts where I'm ahead. # Masters also-ran looks ahead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Looking for a favorite for the Heritage Classic?

How about Raymond Floyd, who is coming off a second-place finish in the Masters?

The 49-year-old Floyd approves. "I would say that I have to be certainly considered one of the favorites. I'm playing well. I hope it doesn't change. It might. But it didn't today. I played beautifully."

During the pro-am on Wednesday, Floyd certainly looked ready, shooting a 4-under-par 67 on the Harbour-Town Golf Links.

He missed a 3-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole and then left a 15-foot birdie putt on No. 17 short by 2 1/2 feet.

He blamed the late-round lapse on the pro-am format, which has the golfers out for some five hours — a good hour longer than it normally takes the pros to traverse the 6,912-yard course.

Right toward the end I think I went to sleep," Floyd said. Floyd was in much the same shape after the final round of the Masters on Sunday. So he took a break, not touching his clubs until Wednesday morning.

"I wasn't just totally exhausted," he said. "After a major, it's hard to do anything. I think you do emotionally get so high that everything is anticlimactic. To go play a practice round was just the farthest thing in my mind."

"But taking off is what I needed," Floyd, whose best effort in the Heritage is a fourth-place tie in 1977, has finished in the top three in three of his last four tournaments, including a victory last month in the Don Ryder Open.

Trevino eyes final push before slowdown

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino wants one more time, one more run at dominating the Senior PGA Tour.

And then that's it for me. Trevino said before the start of Thursday's first-round of the PGA Seniors Championship. "I told you before. This year is it. After this, I'm cutting back, cutting back to maybe 20 tournaments a year."

"When I do that, after this year, I'm not looking at leading money-winner, at the big game. No sir. I told you it was three years and out for me."

But before he moves toward semi-retirement on his island home off the coast of Florida, Trevino wants one more big year among the over-50 set.

"I want to win the money title again. I want to have another year like '90," Trevino said, referring to his banner season in which he won seven times and led all of golf with more than $1.1 million, becoming the first senior to surpass the total of the regular tour leading money-winner.

And, the 52-year-old Trevino said, he's primed and ready to make a bid at a repeat performance.

"I had an off year last year. I thought I was going to have a good year, but I tried to do too much and I got tired and didn't practice as much as I should. I'm over that now, and I'm back to playing good again—I'm hitting the ball extremely well. I've played good all year."

"Most of that is because I've been beating balls, working on it like I should. I've been working mostly on my short game, putting, chipping, bunker play. And that part of my game is real good right now. I have a lot of confidence in my short game."

Tyson heads to stable prison cell

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Tyson on Wednesday was assigned to serve his rape sentence at the Indiana Youth Center, where he can earn a high school diploma for $12.5 a day of work detail. The high-medium security prison, just west of Indianapolis in Plainfield, also offers the former heavyweight champion a chance for rehabilitation: "If he wants it, it will be there. If he's not interested — if he doesn't think he needs help when it won't happen," said Vaughn Overstreet, a retired Department of Correction official.

Tyson walked through a tunnel Wednesday morning to his new cell from the adjacent Reception Diagnostic Center where he has been held since receiving a six-year sentence March 26.

Tyson was convicted Feb. 10 of raping Desiree Washington, a contestant last summer in the Miss Black America beauty pageant when she met Tyson. Kevin Moore, a correction department spokesman, said Tyson, who dropped out of school and never earned a diploma, would have access to the youth center's programs that offer high school courses and vocational training.

Yamaguchi sees no ill sentiment; ad industry disagrees

NEW YORK (AP) — If Kristi Yamaguchi's commercial value has suffered from anti-Japanese sentiment in the United States, she says she hasn't felt it. "I certainly don't think it should affect me," she said Wednesday. "I'm a fourth-generation American. I went to the Olympics for America, and I came back with a gold medal for America."

Yamaguchi, 21, the Olympic and world figure skating champion, hasn't signed a new commercial deal since winning the gold medal at Albertville in February, leading to speculation that she has been caught in a U.S.-Japan economic cross-fire.

"Right now there is a negative connected with anything Japanese," David Burns, who heads a Chicago service matching athletes and advertisers, said last month. "It's wrong, wrong, but that is the way it is."

The magazine "Business Week" said in its March 9 issue that some companies just aren't interested in Yamaguchi, perhaps because she is too ethnic. Nutsweet, which used Olympic champion Dorothy Hanill as a spokeswoman for five years, — hired Yamaguchi for a skating tour in 1990 but is not interested in her as a spokeswoman now, Business Week said.

Yamaguchi has endorsement contracts with Kellogg's, Ray Ban and Evian, all of which were signed before she became Olympic champion.

Her agent, Kevin Albrecht, said he postponed considering endorsement opportunities until after the world championships last month in Oakland, Calif., because there simply wasn't time before that.

"We haven't made any announcements," Yamaguchi said, "but we probably will within the next couple of weeks."

Albrecht, of the International Management Group, said several of the endorsements will be "rather substantial" and confirmed they were nearing completion.

He would not name the companies involved, but said some deals would involve high-profile television work.

At the same time, he called the Business Week article "very irresponsible," but added: "In an ironic way, it turned into a positive because we had a lot of companies and advertising agencies call and say how interested in knowing more about her."

"She's very much in demand, and I think that in the U.S. market right now, she's the No. 1 female athlete property. I think she's going to be in a league with the top female tennis players throughout the rest of her career."

Yamaguchi is from the San Francisco area but has been living and training in Edmonton, Alberta, where she was oblivious to the Japan bashing going on in the United States.

"I was really surprised to hear about it," she said. "I've been living in Canada, so I didn't even know about it."

Yamaguchi currently is on an International Figure Skating Union tour. At the same time, she made a stop Wednesday in New York to speak to some elementary school students at the Anglo American International School as part of the Evian Peak Performance Team's tour.

When these commitments are over, she said, she will figure out whether she wants to remain an amateur and skate in the next world championships in two years, or turn pro.

"I don't have too many definite plans right now. I need time to think about it," she said. "I need to think about some of my options and whether I can be mentally in top condition two years from now."

Favorable earnings reports help Dow reach another record

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market soared to another record close Wednesday, propelled by demand for cyclical issues and favorable corporate earnings reports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 47.63 points to 3,353.76, its second consecutive record close. The index added 36 points Tuesday to settle above the 3,300 level for the first time ever.

Advancing issues outnumbered by about 12 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 228.38 million shares as of 4 p.m., down slightly from 230.62 million in the previous session.

The market pushed into record territory at the opening bell, and never retreated. A surge of late buying in the final half hour of trading pushed the Dow to its highest of the day.

Some analysts attributed the size of Wednesday's jump to the upcoming expiration of stock-index futures and options. The expiration of these contracts is set for Thursday, a day earlier than normal because of the Easter holiday.

Traders were greeted again by a steady stream of favorable corporate earnings reports. Some of the greatest gains were posted by cyclical issues, which led the market despite a lack of news from many companies.

Among them, Goodyear jumped 4 to 75 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; International Paper added 3 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 76 $\frac{1}{2}$ ; Alcoa 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 47 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Chemical issues, also closely pegged to the business cycle, performed well. Dow Chemical was up 1 at 62 $\frac{1}{2}$ , and DuPont rose 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 49 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

Good news for cyclical translates to bad news for pharmaceuticals, which have led the market during the economy's weakest moments. Many drug stocks were under pressure despite gains in earnings.

Merk's 18 percent jump in profits was in line with expectations, but the drug giant's stock plunged 4 to 151 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Upjohn, which reported a 10 gain in net income for the first quarter, was off  $\frac{1}{2}$  at 364, and Eli Lilly lost 1 to 72 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

Biotech stocks were particularly hard hit. Centocor plunged 12 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 18 $\frac{1}{2}$  in over-the-counter trading, after it appeared the Food and Drug Administration will not approve its drug for treating septic shock any time soon.

Xoma, which has developed a similar drug, lost 4 to 14 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Other biotech issues also lost ground.

Favorable earnings reports boosted many Big Board issues. Among them, AT&T, whose net income jumped 17 percent, rose  $\frac{1}{2}$  at 42 $\frac{1}{2}$ . Coca Cola, which reported net income of 58 cents against 48 cents a year ago and which approved a 2-for-1 stock split, gained 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  to 83 $\frac{1}{2}$ .

There were some disappointments. Archer-Daniels-Midland, which topped the Big Board's active list, fell  $\frac{1}{2}$  to 24 $\frac{1}{2}$ . The food company reported lower earnings for its third fiscal quarter.
