Initials for the initiative

Twin Falls resident Vaughn Pond signs a petition on Friday at the Twin Falls County Courthouse to put the 1 Percent Initiative on the November ballot.

Drive to limit Gem property taxes carries down to wire

The Associated Press
BOISE — Idaho's property tax limit proponents wrap up the 15-month initiative phase of their campaign on Monday, confident they have rekindled the taxpayer revolt of the late 1970s.
But as the Idaho Property Owners Association prepares for its final day of signature gathering, there were signs it will be cutting it extremely close, if it cuts it all, when it submits those petitions to the secretary of state's office on Tuesday.
"I'm on Maoles withdrawal, now," said President Ron Rankin, architect of the 1 Percent Initiative that has state and local elected officials squirming over the fallout should voters embrace it.

But even if his optimism proves out, Rankin and his cadre of tax opponents face a difficult time selling the tax break to an electorate that has changed dramatically since it approved its first assault on the property tax in 1978.
Just six years later, voters turned their back on an initiative to exempt food from the sales tax.
Initiative critics contend capping property taxes at 1 percent of actual market value will siphon more than $113 million from the treasuries of school districts and other local governments, triggering drastic service cuts or increases in other taxes. Rankin calls the claim "a baldfaced lie" that ignores the impact of growth.
But for most of the winter and spring, what his opponents call the hard, cold facts and Rankin labels scare tactics seemed to stall the petition drive well shy of the 32,061 registered-voter signatures needed to put the proposition on the November ballot.

Still several thousand signatures short just two weeks ago, Rankin mobilized his troops outside the assessors' offices in the state's largest counties — including Twin Falls — to cajole property owners to sign as they went in to make their midyear tax payments.
"We'll probably be a thousand or so over," Rankin said a few days ago. He claimed the last-ditch tactic was producing about 500 signatures a day with a large majority of them valid.

Truth in Taxation may prevail if effort fails

By Drew DeSilver Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Should the 1 Percent Initiative fail to win a spot on the November ballot, attention will shift to working out the bugs in the new Truth in Taxation law.
That was the consensus of tax policy experts and observers interviewed Friday by The Times-News.
The Truth in Taxation law, which went into effect Jan. 1, requires taxing districts to advertise and hold public hearings before raising their property-tax levy rates or increasing their property-tax revenues by more than 5 percent.
The intent of Truth in Taxation is to educate taxpayers and make taxing districts more accountable to them. But some relatively minor changes need to be made so the law will work as intended, said Randy Nelson, president of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho.

"Those could include simplifying the required advertisements, giving districts the chance to explain why they need more money or a higher levy, and allowing very small districts to notify taxpayers by mail instead of taking out a newspaper ad, Nelson said.
If the 1 Percent is not on the fall ballot, policymakers will have more time to figure out how to fine-tune Truth in Taxation, said Mike Ferguson, chief economist in Gov. Cecil Andrus'

Economic Analysis Bureau.
"Given a general public that's not as deeply steeped in the details of property taxation as legislators and local government officials, I think there may be better ways to present the information," Ferguson said.
Retiring state Rep. Don Loveland, Boise, said the Legislature may look at ways to move some services, such as the trial courts and public school operations, off property tax and onto the overall state budget.
That was one of the suggestions 1 Percent backers made when asked how local governments could afford their proposed tax cut. Although the 1 Percent

Justices approve disposal deadline

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court Friday upheld key portions of a federal law requiring states to find a disposal dump for low-level nuclear wastes by Jan. 1.
In the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Act of 1985, Congress gave the states seven years either to find a regional dump for such wastes or build one of their own.
Before that, only three states in the nation — Nevada, Washington and South Carolina — had dumps for such wastes, and all three were threatening to refuse further out-of-state shipments.
In a compromise engineered by the

Permit fee ruling — A3

National Governors Association, the states without-dump sites agreed to a January 1, 1993, deadline for finding or building their own waste dumps.
After that time, states with dump sites are authorized to refuse to accept radioactive waste shipments from outside their boundaries.
By a 9-0 vote Friday, the Supreme Court upheld the 1993 deadline and the authorized state roadblocks to incoming waste shipments.
The law is constitutional because Congress gave the states a choice, said Justice Sandra Day O'Connor for the court.
"States may either regulate the disposal of radioactive waste ... by attaining local or regional self-sufficiency, or their residents who produce radioactive waste will be subject to federal regulation authorizing states (which have their own dumps) to deny access to their disposal sites."
However, the court on a 6-3 vote struck down a separate portion of the law. Congress mandated that after 1996, states that do not find a disposal site would be given legal responsibility for all the wastes produced in the state.
"In this provision, Congress has crossed the line," O'Connor said, "by infringing upon the core of state sovereignty reserved by the Tenth Amendment."
"This amendment, a favorite of states' rights advocates including O'Connor and Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, says that the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution ... are reserved to the States."
The ruling in the case of (New York vs. U.S., 91-543), removed a club that hung over state officials. But as a practical matter, the portions of the law that were upheld are more significant because of the pending deadline and the likelihood that those states that do accept waste would begin to refuse shipments, legal and environmental experts said Friday.
The ruling could mean that if no disposal facility is built in the region, California's 2,254 producers of radioactive waste, including hospitals, biotech centers and nuclear power plants, could find themselves with nowhere to dispose of their waste after Jan. 1.

Grade-school dropout graduates from college at 16 as class leader

The Associated Press
CATONSVILLE, Md. — Alkes Price skipped first grade, dropped out of third and never finished high school. Another troubled teen?
Hardly.
The 16-year-old graduated last week from the University of Chicago and has a summer job with the Defense Department.
"I haven't really done that much yet," he humbly insisted. "A lot of people graduate from a good school."
Like his older brother Morgan, who got his degree at 15.
Some people trace the boys' brilliance to the genes of their parents, an archeologist and a physicist. But Alkes said he recalls simply being a curious toddler.
"Before I was in school I was already learning how to read and do simple arithmetic," he said. "I can remember taking my mother what came after 1,000, what came after 1 million. ... My mind was always working. I wasn't vegetating too much."
Their mother, Theodora Price of Bollingbrook, Ill., said much of the highest possible score in a conversation with Alkes when he was 2 convinced her he was precocious.

"We went to the Greek Orthodox Church and he listened carefully to the priest. When we got home, he asked me, 'Who are the grandfathers of Christ?' I had a fit," Mrs. Price said.
Over a typical teen-age meal of fast-food hamburger, soda and chicken nuggets, he explained his unusual rise through the academic ranks. Alkes — an ancient Greek word for "strong" — said he is barred from talking about his government job although it "pays pretty well."
He grew up in Naperville, a Chicago suburb, and instead of enrolling in first grade he went straight to second. Like the other kids, he advanced to third grade but was frustrated by classes often led by a substitute teacher.
"I wasn't learning much so I stopped going to public school," Alkes said. He and his brother then entered a private school.
When that year ended he made plans to return to a regular classroom — eighth grade at 8 years old. In the ninth grade at Naperville Central High School, he took the Scholastic Aptitude Test, compiling an 800 in English was 580.) Soon he was taking math courses at the University of Chicago.

Panel finds no sign of American POW

The Associated Press
PECHORA, Russia — Russian and American investigators who visited a Stalin-era labor camp in northern Russia said Friday they found no signs that American prisoners of war were being held there.
Big William Davine of the U.S. Embassy in Moscow said at a news conference that "work will continue, and our report will be made public only after everything has been analyzed."
Investigators did find documents showing that ethnic Germans had been held at Camp No. 5, a ramshackle complex in a clearing of pine and birch trees.
The nine-man delegation of investigators, part of a Russian-American commission on POWs and MIAs, traveled to Pechora on Thursday following President Boris Yeltsin's disclosure that American POWs imprisoned in the Soviet Union might still be held.
The delegation said it was investigating reports that an American pilot, going by the name David Marken, was being held at Camp No. 5.
The Moscow representative of the Ark Project, a private American group searching for POWs, said the man being sought may have been a 1st Lt. Robert Marken, taken prisoner by North Korea during the Korean War.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service reported moist and unstable conditions over much of southern and central Idaho again on Friday.

The air mass over the southern two-thirds of the state is virtually the same as that which moved into Idaho from the south on Thursday.

Light winds around upper level low pressure centered near Reno, Nev., were not likely to move the moist, unstable air from its present position. Consequently, another round of thundershowers developed, with some producing brief heavy rains. Winds were expected to gust to 50 mph. The weather service also warned of dangerous cloud-to-ground lightning.

Precipitation Friday was mostly confined to the central mountains and south. The greatest amounts occurred over the southwest but lighter showers came from other places, including .06 inch at Challis and .01 at Fairfield. Swan Falls on the Snake River reported 1.90 inch Thursday afternoon and evening.

Spring changes to summer at 8:14 p.m. today, when the sun reaches its farthest north point.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 93 degrees at Lewiston. Dixie reported the coldest at 37 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 108 degrees at Lake Havasu City, Ariz., Borrego Springs, Calif., and Presidio, Texas. The lowest was 29 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

More thundershowers erupted Friday from the Plains to the East Coast, with damaging wind and hail in Kansas.

At midday, showers and thundershowers extended from the central Plains across western Oklahoma and western Missouri, and along the Louisiana coast.

Large hail, as big as softballs in places, smashed windows and damaged trees and vehicles when a severe thunderstorm passed through Wichita, Kan.

At least six tornadoes were reported but most of the damage in Wichita was believed caused by hail. One intersection was closed because of hail accumulating on the road.

Wind kicked up by thundershowers gusted to 60 mph at Derby, Kan., and to 80 mph at Hutchinson, Kan. Locally heavy rain flooded low-lying roads in Harvey County, which lies north of Wichita in south-central Kansas, the weather service said.

Showers and thundershowers also extended across the upper Mississippi Valley, and from the upper Ohio Valley and lower Great Lakes into the Atlantic Coast states and the northern Appalachians.

Heavy rain fell during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT included 1.32 inches at McConnell Air Force Base at Wichita, and 1.06 at Willow Grove, Pa.

Friday's low for the Lower 48 states was 29 at Truckee, Calif.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 41 at Duluth, Minn., to 102 at Tucson, Ariz.

Science panel rips WIPP site tests

States News Service

WASHINGTON — A $479 million government plan to conduct underground tests of nuclear waste at a southeastern New Mexico repository has "no discernible scientific basis," an expert panel said.

Carved into salt deposits 2,150 feet below the southeastern New Mexico desert, the $1 billion Waste Isolation Pilot Plant is designed to hold transuranic waste from nuclear weapons factories in 10 states. The transuranic waste consists of rubber gloves, lab coats, plastic bags, and tools contaminated with plutonium.

An expert panel of the National Academy of Sciences said late this week it supports underground tests of nuclear waste at WIPP — but not the Department of Energy's five-year plan for experiments.

The DOE owns WIPP and since 1990 has worked on its version of a plan for a series of experiments with steel bins of radioactive wastes at the underground repository.

The proposed tests were hoped to prove that steel bins of radioactive waste at WIPP won't leak into southeastern New Mexico water supplies for 10,000 years, even if humans tamper with the repository.

Drive

Going into the drive's final days, however, officials in Ada County, the state's most populous and a key to past initiative successes, reported fewer than 6,600 validated signatures. That was barely 20 percent of the required total from a county that has provided twice that number in past campaigns that fell short of the signature goal.

And even if less urban counties come through for Rankin, the current level of support for a severe property tax limit is dramatically lower than 14 years ago. The 1978 1 Percent Initiative attracted over 60,000 valid signatures in a matter of months — nearly 17,000 from Ada County. It was 1991's legislative repeal of the final remnant from 1978's revolt that ignited the new campaign.

Rankin acknowledges the current signature drive is far cry from its predecessor. But he blames that, not under the time constraints they faced 14 years ago.

Nevertheless, the signature gatherers' race to the wire, coupled with the broad-based opposition, leaves Rankin and his forces with a formidable task in the fall should they win ballot status.

While Rankin is telling homeowners to back the cap if you don't want to be forced out of your home by high property taxes, residential property owners across the state are already benefiting from a huge property tax break. The homeowner's exemption enacted in 1983 is saving them over $40 million a year in taxes by exempting half the value of homes up to $50,000.

The elderly poor — one of the initiative's favorite targets — will see their state-financed circuit-breaker property tax relief doubled to $800 a year by next year.

National comparisons show Idaho property taxes ranking in the bottom third among all the states and falling. Only Nevada has a lower property tax burden in the region.

And the latest statistics from the Idaho Tax Commission underscore the contention of initiative critics that business — not homeowners — would be the real beneficiary.

Those 1991 figures show that while residential property makes up over half of Idaho's assessed value, the cap would reduce total residential property tax collections by just $100 million — from $240 million to $140 million.

By contrast, commercial property, which accounts for just a fourth of statewide assessed value and a third of all property tax receipts, would see its tax bill slashed by almost half — from $166 million to $89 million. Timber, mining and agriculture would see more modest reductions.

Still, Idaho's major business organizations have mobilized against the initiative. They cite the severe impact it could have on providing services to maintain the state's economic growth and worry they would bear the brunt of any shift in taxes.

Rankin discounts the suggestion that the state's political, civic and financial structures oppose him, although he concedes he is outmanned.

"We know there's going to be a lot of money against us and not a lot of money with us," Rankin said.

"And because of the heat of the opposition through the media, a lot of people are reluctant to be out in front on it."

Without being specific, he claims a plan to counter the opposition and capitalize on what he sees as deep-seated objections to what his critics even call the most despised tax in the state.

And Rankin predicts small businesses will be the ones suffering the most from the secrecy of the voting booth between themselves and their organized groups.

"When all the blue-chippers are against it, they feel like they don't want to rock the boat," he said. "But when you get behind that curtain, the situation is different."

Truth

itself is a flawed mechanism, Loveland said, the idea has merit.

"Houses and farmland don't send people to jail," he said. "People send people to jail."

A committee established by Chief Justice Robert Bakes is studying the possibility of a mostly state-funded trial court system, but changing the current reliance on property taxes is five or 10 years down the road, said Dan Chadwick, executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties.

If the state wants to ease the burden on property taxes, it could raise extra revenue by repealing some of the dozens of sales-tax and property-tax exemptions and reconsidering the state's investment tax credit.

Last session the Legislature passed a bill requiring counties to inventory tax-exempt property, a possible first step toward limiting the exemptions.

Further down the road, the state may look at replacing its sales tax with a broader, service-based tax. Most services now are exempt from the sales tax.

Rep. Wally Wright, D-Bayview, proposed a service tax last session. Even though Wright's bill went nowhere, Loveland said he wouldn't rule out the idea entirely.

"I was there in 1965 when we passed the original sales tax act," he said. "It worked fine, but now we're in 1992. A changing society may require new ways of financing government."

Nelson said a tax on services may be coming, but not soon. In fact, he said, major changes in Idaho's tax system of the 1-1 Percent's potential magnitude are unlikely in the near future.

"You have to realize that the Legislature made a pretty big jump when it went from the 5 percent cap to Truth in Taxation," he said, referring to a former law that limited annual increases in taxing districts' budgets to 5 percent.

"I think they need to let it work for a few years."

Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger arrives at U.S. District Court Friday for his arraignment in the Iran-Contra affair. He was indicted by a federal grand jury.

Weinberger pleads innocent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger pleaded innocent Friday to charges he lied to Congress and prosecutors about the Iran-Contra affair.

He was ordered by a federal judge to stand trial the day before Election Day on five counts of perjury, making false statements and obstruction of Congress.

Weinberger, who served as defense secretary under President Reagan, requested a quick trial.

"This is a tremendous cloud over him. He is a public figure. His livelihood depends on his maintaining his reputation," defense lawyer Robert S. Bennett said. Weinberger now is publisher of Forbes Magazine.

U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan set a tentative trial date of Nov. 2, the day before Election Day. Hogan added that the trial date was "optimistic, but we will attempt to keep it."

Weinberger, 74, who was released on his personal recognizance, declined to talk to reporters as he left the U.S. Courthouse.

The indictment this week raised the possibility that pre-trial maneuvering could produce political embarrassment for President Bush, who as vice president attended some of the meetings at issue in the case against the former defense secretary.

The indictment raises again the question of what Bush knew about the Iran-Contra affair and arms sales to Iran.

Bush has steadfastly maintained that he had only limited advance knowledge of the Iran

Rappers: Inner-city politicians?

The Associated Press

If Sister Souljah, Ice-T and other rappers are the new politicians of young black America, prepare to have your ears sing.

"I'm 'bout to dust some cops off ... Die, pig, die," Ice-T sings in his song, "Cop Killer."

"Who's that behind the trigger? Who do you figure? A (expletive) nice nigger. Ready to buck and rip (expletive) up. I've had enough. I just don't give a (expletive)," raps Tupac Shakur of Digital Underground.

"George Bush is a terrorist. ... White teachers will never teach black kids how to survive in America, because black kids gotta compete against white kids, and white people want their own kids to win," Sister Souljah raps.

Largely because of the shocking images of Los Angeles riots in the wake of the Rodney King verdict, America is listening more closely to the angry music produced by inner-city youth.

3rd music chain joins boycott

DALLAS (AP) — A third national record store chain has joined the boycott of rapper Ice-T's "Cop Killer" song, whose chorus includes the words "die, pigs, die."

Ice-T called his critics "ignorant pigs" and said the lyrics were a comment on police brutality.

Dallas-based Sound Warehouse decided to stop selling the album "Body Count" at its 145 stores in 14 states, marketing director Annie Bendall said today.

"We felt it was inappropriate. We just didn't feel it has a place in our store. End of conversation," she said.

Trans World Music Corp., which operates 600 stores in the East, announced Thursday it had stopped selling "Body Count." Atlanta-based Super Club Music Inc. said Wednesday it was pulling the album from 300 stores in 19 states.

Law enforcement groups in New York and Texas have urged police officers nationwide to boycott People magazine, the new "Batman Returns" movie and other products from Time Warner Inc., which put out the album.

On Wednesday, the New York State Sheriff's Association demanded that Time Warner subsidiary Sire Records recall copies of the album.

son. Many frustrated black youths have forsaken the peaceful themes of Martin Luther King for more militant messengers like Louis Farrakhan, said Na'im Akbar, a clinical psychologist at Florida State University.

Rappers have become their leaders.

"They can go in and pack the halls and decide what message they want to give the youths that night, that is political," said Poussaint. "A lot of rap music encourages the expression of anger, but it doesn't say much about how you should channel it."

Experts suggest "Cop Killer" is more catharsis than instruction.

"At no point do I go out and say, 'Let's do it.' I'm singing in the first person as a character who is fed up with police brutality," Ice-T said. "I ain't never killed no cop. I felt like it a lot of times. But I never did it."

Rappers also caution against generalizing about their music. For every "Cop Killer," there are songs that advocate peaceful methods of working within the system to change it.

Souljah talks on her album about a "war" against society and says the time for scared, lip-trembling, word-changing, self-defending, compromising, knee-shaking black people is over.

The rapper, whose real name is Lisa Williamson, is also known in the New York City area as a motivational speaker who preaches anti-drug and anti-violence messages at community centers.

Rappers have become the leaders for a disaffected young generation of youths who believe the system has failed them.

Many people find those voices disturbing.

Democratic presidential contender Bill Clinton criticized Souljah for being "filled with hatred" after reading an interview in which she was quoted as saying: "If black people kill black people every day, why not have a week and kill white people."

Police groups this week called for a boycott of Time Warner Inc. products to protest the release of "Cop Killer." Three national record chains this week pulled the album from shelves.

But the theme of "Cop Killer" isn't particularly new. Rappers N.W.A. incensed authorities two years ago with their "F--- The Police."

"What N.W.A. was saying was basically everything that happened in the Rodney King trial," said Marcus Logan, a 22-year-old producer of rap music from New York City's Brooklyn. "The words are being listened to a lot more closely now."

Like those messages or not, experts suggest Americans should at least listen. Bitterness over treatment by police officers and hopelessness about the future spills out in the music, along with a plea for self-sufficiency some see as separatist.

"I think the angry message is very popular because it touches, though that the kids feel angry," said Alvin Poussaint, a Harvard University professor who studies black youth.

A study released last month by MEE Productions, a black-owned market research firm, found that the hip-hop generation — blacks in their teens — tune out mainstream public service messages even by people like Jesse Jackson and Magic Johnson.

Officers are normally open to the public. Powell faces re-rial on the single charge of assault under color of authority.

Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg's ruling came after a private meeting with prosecutors, a city attorney and Powell's attorney, during which the parties agreed to close the hearings whenever Powell's statements are introduced. The statements, given under threat of firing, contain Powell's first account of what happened when the black motorist was stopped for speeding and beaten.

The beating, videotaped by a bystander and broadcast on national television, led to an investigation of the LAPD that ended in charges being filed against four white officers.

N.J. couple faces kidnap charges

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A former Exxon security guard and his wife were arrested Friday and charged with kidnaping the president of the oil company's international division, who was still missing.

The executive, Sidney J. Reso, disappeared April 29, when his empty car was found idling at the end of his driveway in suburban Morris Township, an hour after he left for work.

Arthur and Irene Jacqueline Seale were arrested early Friday in Hackettstown in northwestern New Jersey by FBI agents, officials said.

The Seales had refused to speak with investigators, officials said.

The Seales, both 45, were charged with kidnaping and extortion. They made an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Donald Hancke, who ordered them held without bail until a hearing Monday.

In the courtroom, Seale gave his wife a brief smile before the magistrate entered. She mouthed "I love you" to her husband.

When Hancke asked if they understood their rights, Seale gave brief affirmative answers in a firm voice, while Mrs. Seale's voice quavered and her eyes teared.

The missing executive's wife, Patricia, received messages from a group claiming to be kidnaped Reso and calling itself the "Rainbow Warriors."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Officer Laurence Powell's first account to his superiors of the videotaped beating of Rodney King won't be made public, a judge ruled Friday.

The statements will be part of Police Department hearings to consider firing three other officers acquitted of charges in the March 3, 1991, beating. Hearings before the police board of ments are introduced. The statements, given under threat of firing, contain Powell's first account of what happened when the black motorist was stopped for speeding and beaten.

Tornadoes hammer Midwest, Plains, cause extensive damage

The Associated Press

A new storm system moved across the Plains on Friday, spawning off tornadoes and large hail in Kansas, and a canal supplying much of Indianapolis' water collapsed as a result of the week's rampage of thunderstorms.

Indiana state government workers were sent home because of the water problem.

Across the Midwest, crews worked to clean up after the bursts of thunderstorms and tornadoes. Federal Emergency Management Agency teams set up a field office in tornado-battered southwestern Minnesota.

Thunderstorms also affected Friday across parts of Oklahoma and Missouri, the upper Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and the East Coast, the National Weather Service said.

Large hail, as big as softball in places, smashed windows and damaged trees and vehicles as a severe thunderstorm passed through Wichita, Kan., around noon Friday.

At least six tornadoes were reported by police and the weather service.

But most of the damage in Wichita was believed caused by hail. One-in-six destruction was closed because of hail accumulation.

Any wheat not harvested in the south-central part of the state was expected to have been seriously damaged.

Power lines were knocked down in Reno County and cars were overturned. A tractor-trailer overturned and blocked U.S. 50 near Hutchinson.

Power was out in northeastern Hutchinson and some trees were blown down.

No injuries were reported.

An Indianapolis, a 100-foot-long section of the bank of a canal carrying 70 percent of the city's water collapsed, and officials asked residents of most of the city to use water only in emergencies.

Strong thunderstorms earlier this week had uprooted several large trees rooted in the earthen banks of the canal, allowing erosion, said Joseph R. Broyles, president of Indianapolis Water Co.

"We really do have a serious problem developing," Broyles said. "For the city as a whole, we've got supply (of water) but it is threatened and reduced."

"We basically have to cut the demand in half."

"The canal is almost dry right now and will be possibly for several days," said Broyles.

The six-mile canal on the north side of the city carries water diverted from the White River to a pumping station. That station now is pumping water only from auxiliary wells, said Broyles.

Some water also was being diverted from other pumping stations.

The affected area, which includes all of downtown Indianapolis, has 150,000 water subscribers and probably four times as many residents, company officials said.

State government offices were ordered closed just after noon because of decreasing water pressure, said John Kish, commissioner of the state Department of Administration.

On Thursday, wind tore the roof off a high school gymnasium in Cashon, Okla. Part of the roof at a supermarket in Lexington, Ky., collapsed and 5 inches of water collected in the store.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 160 tornadoes were reported from the Plains into the Ohio Valley, the most in a three-day period since 1984, the weather service said.

Six people were killed in weather-related accidents Wednesday when thunderstorms raked Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio, and a seventh was killed Thursday in Ohio.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service reported moist and unstable conditions over much of southern and central Idaho again on Friday.

The air mass over the southern two-thirds of the state is virtually the same as that which moved into Idaho from the south on Thursday.

Light winds around upper-level low pressure centered near Reno, Nev., were not likely to move the moist, unstable air from its present position. Consequently, another round of thundershowers developed, with some producing brief heavy rains. Winds were expected to gusts to 50 mph. The weather service also warned of dangerous cloud-to-ground lightning.

Precipitation Friday was mostly confined to the central mountains and south. The greatest amounts occurred over the southwest but lighter reports came from other places, including .06 inch at Challis and .07 at Fairfield. Swan Falls on the Snake River reported 1.90 inch Thursday afternoon and evening.

Spring changes to summer at 8:14 p.m. today, when the sun reaches its farthest north point.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 93 degrees at Lewiston. Dixie reported the coldest at 37 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 108 degrees at Lake Havasu City, Ariz., Borrego Springs, Calif., and Presidio, Texas. The lowest was 29 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

Thunderstorms pummel Kansas, rumble eastward

The Associated Press

More thunderstorms erupted Friday, from the Plains to the East Coast, with damaging wind and hail in Kansas.

At midday, showers and thundershowers extended from the central Plains across western Oklahoma and western Missouri, and along the Louisiana coast.

Large hail, as big as softballs in places, smashed windows and damaged trees and vehicles when a severe thunderstorm passed through Wichita, Kan.

At least six tornadoes were reported but most of the damage in Wichita was believed caused by hail. One intersection was closed because of hail accumulation.

Wind kicked up by thunderstorms gusted to 60 mph at Derby, Kan., and to 80 mph at Hutchinson, Kan. Locally heavy rain flooded low-lying roads in Harvey County, which lies north of Wichita in south-central Kansas, the weather service said.

Showers and thundershowers also extended across the upper Mississippi Valley, and from the upper Ohio Valley and lower Great Lakes into the Atlantic Coast states and the northern Appalachians.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT included a 32 inches at McConnell Air Force Base at Wichita and 1.05 at Willow Grove, Pa.

Friday's low for the Lower 48 states was 29 at Truckee, Calif.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 41 at Duluth, Minn., to 102 at Tucson, Ariz.

Science panel rips WIPP site tests

States News Service

WASHINGTON — A $479 million government plan to conduct underground tests of nuclear waste at a southeastern New Mexico repository has "no discernible scientific basis," an expert panel said.

The DOE owns WIPP and since 1990 has worked on its version of a plan for a series of experiments with steel bins of radioactive wastes at the underground repository.

The proposed tests were hoped to prove that steel bins of radioactive waste at WIPP won't leak into southeastern New Mexico water supplies for 10,000 years, even if humans tamper with the repository.

The Department of Energy's five-year plan for the repository is being reviewed by a panel of scientists from the National Academy of Sciences said late this week it supports underground tests of nuclear waste at WIPP — but not the DOE's plan.

The DOE's plan is to conduct a series of experiments with steel bins of radioactive wastes at the underground repository.

The proposed tests were hoped to prove that steel bins of radioactive waste at WIPP won't leak into southeastern New Mexico water supplies for 10,000 years, even if humans tamper with the repository.

Drive

Going into the drive's final days, however, officials in Ada County, the state's most populous and a key to past initiative successes, reported fewer than 6,600 validated signatures. That was barely 20 percent of the required total from a county that has provided twice that number in past campaigns that fell short of the signature goal.

And even if less urban counties come through for Rankin, the current level of support for a severe property tax limit is dramatically lower than 14 years ago. The 1978 1 Percent Initiative attracted over 60,000 valid signatures in a matter of months — nearly 17,000 from Ada County.

It was 1991's legislative repeal of the final remnant from 1978's revolt that ignited the new campaign.

Rankin acknowledges the current signature drive is far cry from its predecessor. But he blames that on the fact the tax-limiters were not under the time constraints they faced 14 years ago.

Nevertheless, the signature gatherers face the wire, coupled with the broad-based opposition.

Rankin and his forces with a formidable task in the fall should they win ballot status.

While Rankin is telling homeowners to back the cap if "you don't want to be forced out of your home by high property taxes," residential property owners across the state are already benefiting from

Rankin

The elderly poor — one of the initiative's favorite targets — will see their state-financed circuit-breaker property tax relief doubled to $800 a year by next year.

National comparisons show Idaho property taxes ranking in the bottom third among all the states and falling. Only Nevada has a lower property tax burden in the region.

And the latest statistics from the Idaho Tax Commission underscore the contention of initiative critics that business — not homeowners — would be the real beneficiary.

Those 1991 figures show that while residential property makes up over half of Idaho's assessed value, the cap would reduce total residential property tax collections by just $100 million — from $240 million to $140 million.

By contrast, commercial property, which accounts for just a fourth of statewide assessed value and a third of all property tax receipts, would see its tax bill slashed by almost half — from $166 million to $89 million. Timber, mining and agriculture would see major reductions.

Still, Idaho's most business organizations have mobilized against the initiative. They cite the severe impact it could have on providing services to maintain the state's economic growth and worry they would bear the brunt of any shift in taxes.

Rankin discounts the suggestion that the state's political, civic and financial structures oppose him, although he concedes he is outnumbered.

"We know there's going to be a lot of money against us and not a lot of money with us," Rankin said. "And because of the heat of the opposition through the media, a lot of people are reluctant to be out in front on it."

Without being specific, he claims a plan to counter the opposition and appeal on what he sees as deep-seated objections to what his critics call the most despised tax in the state.

And Rankin predicts small businessmen will be his allies once they put the secrecy of the voting booth between themselves and their organized groups.

"When all the blue chippers are against it, they feel like they don't want to rock the boat," he said. "But when you get behind that curtain, the situation is different."

Truth

itself is a flawed mechanism.

Loveland said, the idea has merit.

"Houses and farmland don't send people to jail," he said. "People send people to jail."

A committee established by Chief Justice Robert Bates is studying the possibility of a mostly state-funded trial court system, but changing the current reliance on property taxes is five or 10 years down the road, said Dan Chadwick, executive director of the Idaho Association of Counties.

If the state wants to ease the burden on property taxes, it could raise extra revenue by repealing some of the dozens of sales-tax and property-tax exemptions and reconsidering the state's investment tax credit.

Last session the Legislature passed a bill requiring counties to inventory tax-exempt property, a possible first step toward limiting the exemptions.

Farther down the road, the state may look at replacing its sales tax with a broader, service-based tax. Most services now are exempt from the sales tax.

Rep. Wally Wright, D-Bayview, proposed a service tax last session. Even though Wright's bill went nowhere, Loveland said he wouldn't rule out the idea entirely.

"I was there in 1965 when we passed the original sales tax act," he said. "It worked fine, but now we're in 1992. A changing society may require new ways of financing government."

Nelson said a tax on services may be coming, but not soon. In fact, he said, major changes in Idaho's tax system of the 1 Percent's potential magnitude are unlikely in the near future.

You have to realize that the Legislature made a pretty big jump when it went from the 5 percent cap to Truth in Taxation," he said, referring to a former law that limited annual increases in taxing districts' budgets to 5 percent.

"I think they need to let it work for a few years."

Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger arrives at U.S. District Court Friday for his arraignment in the Iran-Contra affair. He was indicted by a federal grand jury.

Weinberger pleads innocent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger pleaded innocent Friday to charges he lied to Congress and prosecutors about the Iran-Contra affair.

He was ordered by a federal judge to stand trial the day before Election Day on five counts of perjury, making false statements and obstruction of Congress.

Weinberger, who served as defense secretary under President Reagan, requested a quick trial.

"This is a tremendous cloud over him. He is a public figure. His livelihood depends on his maintaining his reputation," defense lawyer Robert S. Bennett said. Weinberger now is publisher of Forbes Magazine.

U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan set a tentative trial date of Nov. 2, the day before Election Day. Hogan added that the trial date was "optimistic, but we will attempt to keep it."

initiative and that he did not know the arms sales were intended to be a swap for U.S. hostages.

Special congressional committees that investigated the Iran-Contra affair reported in 1987 that Bush attended the meetings, which took place with top Reagan administration officials in 1986. The congressional report said Bush also attended an initial Aug. 1985 meeting where the arms sale proposal was broached.

The indictment handed up Tuesday by a federal grand jury said Bush attended a Jan. 7, 1986, meeting of President Reagan and other members of his inner circle: Weinberger, who was defense secretary; Attorney General Edwin Meese; Secretary of State George Shultz; and CIA Director William Casey.

"At the meeting, the president favored the plan to sell missiles to Iran, through Israel," in exchange for the release of American hostages," said the indictment.

Prosecutors said the indictment was based on extensive notes Weinberger kept in 1985 and 1986.

Bush also was among those attending a White House meeting Nov. 10, 1986, after initial news reports of the Iran arms sales, the indictment said.

At that meeting, national security adviser John Poindexter discussed the Iran initiative, the indictment said. But he omitted mention of the November 1985 shipment of Hawk missiles to Iran and did not acknowledge any U.S. role in 1985 shipments, it said.

Weinberger, 74, who was released on his personal recognizance, declined to talk to reporters as he left the U.S. Court house.

The indictment this week raised the possibility that pre-trial maneuvering could produce political embarrassment for President Bush, who as vice president attended some of the meetings at issue in the case against the former defense secretary.

The indictment raises again the question of what Bush knew about the Iran-Contra affair and arms sales to Iran.

Rappers: Inner-city politicians?

The Associated Press

If Sister Souljah, Ice-T and other rappers are the new politicians of young black America, prepare to have your ears singed.

"I'm 'bout to dust some cops off ... Die, pig, die," Ice-T sings in his song "Cop Killer."

"Who's that behind the trigger? Who do you figure? A (expletive) nice nigger. Ready to buck and rip (expletive) up. I've had enough. I just don't give a (expletive)," raps Tupac Shakur of Digital Underground.

"George Bush is a terrorist. ... White teachers will never teach black kids how to survive in America, because black kids gotta compete against white kids, and white people want their own kids to win," Sister Souljah raps.

Largely because of the shocking images of Los Angeles riots in the wake of the Rodney King verdict, America is listening more closely to the angry music produced by inner-city youths.

Rappers have become the leaders for a disaffected young generation of youths who believe the system has failed them.

Many people find those voices disturbing.

Democratic presidential contender Bill Clinton criticized Souljah for being "filled with hatred" after reading an interview in which she was quoted as saying, "If black people kill black people every day, why not have a week and kill white people."

3rd music chain joins boycott

DALLAS (AP) — A third national record store chain has joined the boycott of rapper Ice-T's "Cop Killer" song, whose chorus includes the words "die, pigs, die."

Ice-T called his critics "ignorant pigs" and said the lyrics were a comment on police brutality.

Dallas-based Sound Warehouse decided to stop selling the album "Body Count" at its 145 stores in 14 states, marketing director Annie Benda said today.

"We felt it was inappropriate. We just didn't feel it has a place in our store. End of conversation," she said.

Trans World Music Corp., which operates 600 stores in the East, announced Thursday it had stopped selling "Body Count." Atlanta-based Super Club Music Inc. said Wednesday it was pulling the album from 300 stores in 19 states.

Law enforcement groups in New York and Texas have urged police officers nationwide to boycott People magazine, the new "Batman Returns" movie and other products from Time Warner Inc., which put out the album.

On Wednesday, the New York State Sheriff's Association demanded that Time Warner subsidiary Sir Records recall copies of the album.

Police groups this week called for a boycott of Time Warner Inc. products to protest the release of "Cop Killer." Three national record chains this week pulled the album from shelves.

But the theme of "Cop Killer" isn't particularly new. Rappers N.W.A., incensed authorities two years ago with their "F--- The Police."

"What N.W.A. was saying was basically everything that happened in the Rodney King trial," said Marcus Logan, a 22-year-old producer of rap music from New York City's Brooklyn. "The words are being listened to a lot more closely now."

Like those messages or not, ex-ponents suggest Americans should at least listen. Bitterness over treatment by police officers and hopelessness about the future spills out in the music, along with a plea for self-sufficiency some see as separatist.

"I think the angry message is very popular because it touches thoughts that the kids feel anyway," said Alvin Poussaint, a Harvard University professor who studies black youth.

A study released last month by MEE Productions, a black-owned market research firm, found that the hip-hop generation — blacks in their teens — tune out mainstream public service messages even by people like Jesse Jackson and Magic Johnson.

Souljah talks on her album about a "war" against society and says "the time for scared, lip-trembling, word-changing, self-denying, compromising, knee-shaking black people is over."

The rapper, whose real name is Lisa Williams, is also known in the New York City area as a motivational speaker who preaches anti-drug and anti-violence messages at community centers.

Rappers also caution against generalizing about their music. For every "Cop Killer," there are songs that advocate peaceful methods of working within the system to change it.

"They can go in and pack the halls and decide what message they want to give the youths that night that is political," said Poussaint. "A lot of rap music encourages the expression of anger, but it doesn't say much about how you should channel it."

Experts suggest "Cop Killer" is more catharsis than instruction.

"At no point do I go out and say, 'Let's do it.' I'm singing in the first person as a character who is fed up with police brutality," Ice-T said. "I ain't never killed no cop. I felt like it a lot of times. But I never did it."

N.J. couple faces kidnap charges

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A former Exxon security guard and his wife were arrested Friday and charged with kidnaping the president of the oil company's international division, who was still missing.

The executive, Sidney J. Reso, disappeared April 29, when his empty car was found idling at the end of his driveway in suburban Morris Township, an hour after he left for work.

Arthur and Irene Jacqueline Seale were arrested early Friday in Hackettstown in northwestern New Jersey by FBI agents, officials said.

The Seales had refused to speak with investigators, officials said.

The Seales, both 45, were charged with kidnaping and extortion. They made an initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Donald Haneke, who ordered them held without bail until a hearing Monday.

In the courtroom, Seale gave his wife a brief smile before the magistrate entered. She mouthed "I love you" to her husband.

When Haneke asked if they understood their rights, Seale gave brief affirmative answers in a firm voice, while Mrs. Seale's voice quavered and her eyes teared.

The missing executive's wife, Patricia, received messages from a group claiming to have kidnaped Reso and calling itself the "Rainbow Warriors."

Officer's statements to LAPD to be kept private

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Officer Laurence Powell's first account to his superiors of the videotaped beating of Rodney King won't be made public, a judge ruled Friday.

The statements will be part of Police Department hearings to consider firing three other officers acquitted of charges in the March 3, 1991, beating. Hearings before the police board of Officers are normally open to the public. Powell faces rental on the single charge of assault under color of authority.

Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg's ruling came after a private meeting with prosecutors, a city attorney and Powell's attorney, during which the parties agreed to close the hearings whenever Powell's statements are introduced. The statements, given under threat of firing, contain Powell's first account of what happened when the black motorist was stopped for speeding and beaten.

The beating, videotaped by a bystander and broadcast on national television, led to an investigation of the LAPD that ended in charges being filed against four white officers.

Army reaffirms personnel policy

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon's policy of banning homosexuals is proper and changing it would unfairly infringe on the privacy of men and women who have volunteered for military service, the Army's chief of staff argued on Friday.

"My belief is, our policies are sound, and I see no reason to change those policies," said Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan. "I just see no reason to do it."

The Pentagon contends that homosexuality is incompatible with military service and the maintenance of "good order, morale and discipline."

Investigators: Alcohol a factor in-melee

BOSTON — Too much alcohol and a youthful crowd helped cause the rampage that erupted when police canceled a free open-air concert, investigators said Friday.

Sixteen people were injured and 18 people were arrested during Thursday night's melee through downtown Boston, police said.

Most of the crowd of 18,000 at the City Hall Plaza concert featuring rap music were teen-agers and many appeared intoxicated, said Police Superintendent William Bratton, second in command to Police Commissioner Francis M. Roache.

The free-for-all left 16 people injured, the worst was a teen-ager who was stabbed. He was listed as stable.

Guardian Angels' leader attacked

NEW YORK — Curtis Sliwa, the Guardian Angels founder who has said he has made enemies after "13 years of busting lots of guys," was ambushed in a cab Friday by a gunman, according to authorities.

Sliwa was shot in the leg and body, but survived after diving out a window of the cab and summoning help, authorities said. After a five-hour operation, Dr. Leon Pachter said he expected Sliwa to make a full recovery.

Sliwa's wife, Lisa, and Mayor David Dinkins, who visited Bellevue Hospital shortly after Sliwa arrived, said the Guardian Angels' leader had been "set up." Dinkins pledged to do all he could to find the attacker.

Officials still working on AIDS list

ATLANTA — Federal health authorities said today they won't meet a July 1 deadline to issue a new definition for AIDS that would add thousands of patients to the growing AIDS list.

The Centers for Disease Control needs more time to consider public comment on the definition and has postponed its decision indefinitely, said spokesmen Kay Golan.

"We're still taking into account input from various groups and organizations and individuals who wanted certain things included in the definition," she said.

The CDC in November proposed an expanded definition of AIDS that would include 160,000 people infected with the AIDS virus but not yet seriously ill.

The nation's AIDS count now stands at 218,301, with 141,223 deaths.

Texas may put woman to death soon

MOUNTVARIABLE, Texas — Texas, where executions have become routine, may soon put a woman to death for the first time since the Civil War.

Pickax murderer Karla Faye Tucker is scheduled to die by injection before dawn June 30. Unless the execution is blocked on appeal, she would be the second woman executed since capital punishment resumed in the United States in 1977.

Whether Ms. Tucker, 32, of Houston, becomes the first woman executed in Texas since Chippita Rodriguez was hanged in 1863 for the murder of a horse trader depends on her lawyers' efforts.

FBI arrests escapee for airplane theft

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — A man suspected of stealing two airplanes since he escaped from prison was arrested Friday, the FBI said.

Charles Lloyd Patterson Sr. was arrested Friday morning at a motel in Odessa, Texas, FBI agent Ron Wolfe said in Little Rock. Wolfe said Patterson was to appear before a federal magistrate in Midland, Texas.

Patterson, 47, had been a fugitive since April 9, when he allegedly stole a plane he chartered during a five-day furlough from an Arkansas prison. He was serving a 40-year sentence for solicitation to commit murder, theft and other offenses.

After the escape, Gov. Bill Clinton, the presumed Democratic presidential nominee, halted all meritorious furloughs in Arkansas.

Russia, U.S. reach embassy agreement

WASHINGTON — Only Americans will be engaged in constructing a new U.S. Embassy building in Moscow under an agreement reached with Russia at the summit, the State Department said Friday.

The new chancery is to be erected near the bug-riddled U.S. Embassy that has never been used by American diplomats because their conversations were likely to be overheard.

As part of the agreement, the United States will abandon its $30 million claim for the costs of constructing the embassy. Richard Boucher, a department spokesman, said.

The listening devices were implanted by workers hired by the Soviet government.

Senate extends benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate shrugged off threats of a veto by President Bush and voted Friday to again extend benefits for the long-term unemployed, a program that will otherwise expire in two weeks.

"We do have a serious problem on our hands with the expiration of these benefits, with thousands and thousands losing their unemployment benefits," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas and the sponsor of the Democratic measure. "Time is very much of the essence."

Lawmakers used a voice vote to approve the package, which would provide up to 33 extra weeks of coverage to Americans who have exhausted the standard 26 weeks of benefits. Because of the recession, 300,000 people use up that standard coverage each month without finding new jobs. The payments average $170 a week nationally, but vary by state.

Bush says the bill's benefits are too generous and objects to some of the permanent changes it would make in the unemployment system.

"The unemployment package... is just headed for another veto," warned Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Instead, the president endorsed a Republican alternative that would have limited extra coverage to a maximum of 20 weeks. It also included an assortment of tax breaks for businesses and individuals that sponsors said would spur the economy. The alternative was rejected on a voice vote.

The Senate will next have to craft a compromise package with the House, which approved a different plan June 9. It, too, drew a Bush veto threat.

Democratic leaders will have to decide whether to seek middle ground with the administration or challenge Bush to veto the measure in the middle of an election year.

Unemployment hit an eight-year peak of 7.5 percent last month, with 9.5 million Americans looking for jobs. The economy has been showing signs of reviving in recent weeks, but the recovery has been slow and Democrats believe the public blames Bush for the hard times.

Democrats used the issue against Bush last year, when the president killed two efforts to extend jobless benefits before striking a compromise with Congress. Like this year, Bush complained about those measures' costs.

Bentsen's bill would cost $5.4 billion over six years. It would provide 33 weeks of extra benefits in states with the worst unemployment problems, and 26 additional weeks elsewhere.

The extra coverage would expire no later than March 6. It would be phased out sooner, however, if the national unemployment rate fell below 7 percent for two consecutive months.

It also would permanently make it easier for people to qualify for extra benefits in the future. The administration has said it wants no permanent changes made until a commission studying the problem finishes its work next year.

Supreme Court limits authority to require parade, rally permits

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided Supreme Court Friday limited the power of local communities to require permits for parades and rallies.

The court, by a 5-4 vote, ruled that a permit law in Forsyth County, Ga., unlawfully hampers free-speech rights.

The court said the Forsyth County law, prompted by tense racial confrontations between civil rights marchers and counter-demonstrators, gives too much discretion to a county administrator to decide what a permit fee will cost.

It was not immediately clear how broad a practical impact the permit case will have in other communities. But permit fees—commonly—are charged for parades and rallies.

Writing for the court in the permit case, Justice Harry A. Blackmun said, "The Forsyth County ordinance contains more than the possibility of censorship through uncontrolled discretion. The ordinance often requires that the fee be based on the content of the speech."

The law gives the administrator the authority to set a permit fee based on the anticipated cost of police protection and administrative time.

"The fee assessed will depend on the administrator's measure of the amount of hostility likely to be created by the speech based on its content," Blackmun said. "Those wishing to express views unpopular with bottle-throwers, for example, may have to pay more for their permit."

Blackmun was joined by Justices John Paul Stevens, Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony M. Kennedy and David H. Souter. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas dissented. They said the court's majority should have limited its inquiry to whether fees of up to $1,000 for parade and rally fees are valid.

"The court's analysis... rests on the assumption that the county will (impose fees) based on opposition crowds," Rehnquist wrote for the four. "There is nothing in the record to support this assumption."

Blackmun wrote, "Speech cannot be financially burdened, any more than it can be punished or banned, simply because it might offend a hostile mob."

While paying for police protection is an important government responsibility, he said, "it does not justify a content-based permit fee."

The Forsyth County ordinance was enacted in response to a series of civil rights marches in 1987. After some 75 marchers were pelted with rocks and bottles, a second

March—a week later—was held by some 25,000 supporters. Officers from 10 law enforcement agencies provided protection.

The Nationalist Movement, a white supremacist group, challenged the ordinance after refusing to pay a $100 fee the county administrator charged for a demonstration the group wanted to stage in 1989.

Arguing the case before the justices last March, Nationalist Movement President Richard Barrett said the ordinance amounts to a "heckler's veto" of free speech. On Friday, the court agreed.

Catnappers prefer feline to costly items

NOKOMIS, Fla. (AP) — Thieves ignored a company's expensive equipment but stole an office cat named Bucky, along with his litter box, toys, snacks and food dish.

The cat was missing for two days before detectives tracked him down in a posh resort.

The catnappers also stole a delivery truck, soft drinks and some petty cash when Bucky, Admiral Air's 6-year-old office pet, disappeared Tuesday.

The truck and some of Bucky's toys were recovered early Thursday and some suspects were arrested. Later in the day, detectives called to tell where Bucky could be found, Admiral Air co-owner Dianna Crowe said today.

"How they found him I don't know, but he was in a posh home on Casey Key. He had the run of the place," she said. The thieves apparently had used the empty Gulf Coast resort home as a hideout, she said.

Poor design a threat at Soviet nuclear plants

Sixty-three nuclear power plants of Soviet construction pose a safety concern in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. In the former Soviet Union's 45 reactors, there were 270 shutdowns in 1991. A look at the types of reactors and where they are:

Irish OK aids European treaty

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — In what was hailed as a crucial step in the march to a "European union," Irish voters overwhelmingly approved a pact meant to create a common currency and coordinate policy on defense and foreign affairs, results showed Friday.

The so-called Maastricht treaty, named for the Dutch town in which it was negotiated, had been rejected on June 2 by Danish voters, and a defeat in Ireland would likely have been a death knell for the accord.

"Europe was at a crossroads," said Prime Minister Albert Reynolds. "If Ireland had voted no... it would have been the end of integration."

A final "official" count showed the treaty carrying with 69 percent of the votes. Some districts returned affirmative votes as high as 75 percent.

The treaty requires ratification by all 12 European Community countries this year. France's National Assembly on Friday followed the Senate in approving changes to bring the country's constitution in line with the treaty, laying the ground for a referendum, probably in September.

"We hope the Irish yes will be the first of a series of yeses to the Maastricht treaty and ... to the European union," said Jono de Deus Pinheiro, the foreign minister of Portugal, which holds the Community's rotating presidency.

In Ireland, the treaty referendum was dogged by the emotional issues of abortion and nationalism.

Some nationalists campaigned against the pact as sacrificing Ireland's independence and neutrality.

Violence pervades Japanese television

TOKYO (AP) — The samurai good guy is surrounded, and getting madder by the minute.

With a flash of cold, shiny steel his first victim drops lifeless to the dirt. Thirty seconds and 12 or 13 dead bad guys later, it's time for the commercials.

So ends "Tokugawa Villainy File," just part of a nightly prime-time parade of fist-happy detectives, demented murderers and quick-draw samurai warriors.

While many Americans blame TV violence as encouraging real-life aggression, at least one study suggests the nation with the most violent programming is Japan, a nation that remains relatively free of violent crime.

Take one recent Saturday night, for example.

"Rowdy Shogun" led off one network's prime-time fare, followed by "Switcharoo Murder at Shirakaba Lake." Another channel featured a largely uncut American film, "Friday the 13th Part VIII: Jason Takes Manhattan."

The combined death toll by 11 p.m.: nearly three dozen.

"What we are getting through television is a very perverted view of society," said Shunji Mikami, a professor of sociology at Tokyo's Toyo University.

Mikami last year completed a study of Japanese programming as part of an international project on TV violence led by University of Pennsylvania professor George Gerbner.

The study, which analyzed one week of prime-time dramas on Japan's five main networks, found that 97.1 percent contained violence, compared with 58 percent for the American sample.

Former Communist countries are source of smuggled uranium

LONDON (AP) — Smugglers have tried to sell uranium pellets in Vienna.

Did the pellets come from Kazakhstan, Romania or Czechoslovakia?

The experts disagree — but there is no question that nuclear material is leaking from the old Communist bloc.

The main culprit appears to be the civilian nuclear power sector, not the military.

Evgeny Mikerin, head of the Department of Science and Technology at the Russian Ministry of Atomic Energy, said security was tight at military facilities but more lax in the civilian sector.

Two smuggling cases uncovered by Austrian anti-terrorist police this month involved small quantities of uranium stolen from civilian plants. The Austrians believe it was to be sold to Arab customers.

The quantities seized were far too small to make a bomb. But authorities are concerned the smuggling could lead to larger quantities of weapons-grade material reaching the black market in future.

Paul Levenson, president of the Washington-based Nuclear Control Institute, said "there is far more bomb-grade material in the civil sector than there is in the weapons sector" — and it is increasingly being used as fuel, which makes it almost impossible to control.

The Russians say they are trying to improve security at civilian plants and are modernizing export controls.

Viktor Slipchenko of the Russian Foreign Ministry's Department of Non-Proliferation said this should prevent "major diversions" of nuclear material, but not small thefts.

Mikerin said the recently seized uranium came from Kazakhstan. But the International Atomic Energy Agency said the lightly enriched pellets were most likely from Romania or Czechoslovakia.

In the first raid, police swooped down on seven men in a Vienna parking lot and confiscated 261 pellets containing 4.4 percent-enriched uranium and 1.9 ounces of natural uranium.

In the second, police arrested three men and confiscated a suitcase containing 29.8 ounces of uranium dioxide pellets and 0.04 ounces of natural uranium pellets.

A spokeswoman for the Austrian Interior Ministry, Cornelia Zoppoth, said Friday the seven men arrested in the first raid — four Hungarians, two Czechs and one Austrian — and the three Czechs detained in the second were still being questioned.

Both the natural and, lightly-enriched uranium confiscated by police can be used in civilian nuclear power reactors.

But Mikerin told The Associated Press at a nuclear conference in London Thursday that the uranium pellets didn't come from a power plant. He said they possibly came from a plant where low-enriched nuclear fuel is manufactured for civilian reactors, but the investigation was still under way.

Was the uranium from Russia or Eastern Europe?

"This is from Kazakhstan," he said. "It is the place where these pellets are produced."

But a spokesman for the International Atomic Energy Agency, David Kyd, said that according to his information, Kazakhstan doesn't have any facilities to enrich uranium or manufacture uranium fuel, though it does have one nuclear power plant.

"The natural uranium pellets could have come from there, but not the enriched," he said.

Romania and Czechoslovakia have the right plants, Kyd said, and the enriched pellets were "most likely" from one of them. He said some uranium apparently had markings from the Skoda Works in Prague, but that might have been its destination, not its origin.

Yeltsin wins more help during visit to Canada

OTTAWA (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin, seeking to shore up Russia's collapsing economy, had some success in Canada on Friday, persuading Prime Minister Brian Mulroney to chip in more credits and technical assistance.

"We have chosen openness and cooperation with the world community," Yeltsin told a joint session of Parliament in the House of Commons after a 14-hour meeting with Mulroney.

"Russia has made her choice on behalf of freedom, and no force will be able to take it away from us," he said in an address frequently interrupted by applause.

When Yeltsin leaves for home today, he will take with him government approval for $170 million in insurance coverage to several Canadian companies planning to invest in Russia.

Repeating the message he delivered to Americans earlier in the week, Yeltsin urged Canadians not to miss out on the chance to invest. If Canadian businesses do not move now, by 1994 it will be too late, he said.

When Russia becomes a prosperous country, Yeltsin said, "we will not forget those who were first to take a risk, a justified risk."

Yeltsin and Mulroney signed a new trade agreement, to replace one negotiated in 1956, a treaty for political cooperation and a Canada-Russia-Arctic cooperation agreement.

In addition, two other agreements were signed. One was a joint declaration for cooperation in converting Russian defense industries to civilian production. The other was on agricultural relations.

At a news conference after the parliamentary speech, the two leaders said they were still negotiating an agreement for further Russian purchases of Canadian grain — up to 1 million tons this summer, Yeltsin said. Mulroney said he hoped the deal could be signed before Yeltsin's departure Saturday.

In an earlier visit in February, the Russians signed a five-year, 25-million-ton grain deal with the Canadian-Wheat Board said to be worth $3 billion to $5 billion.

"We are prepared to buy millions of tons of grain at world prices," Yeltsin said.

The meetings in Canada and the United States are part of the run-up to the summit in July in Munich, Germany of the seven leading western industrial democracies. After the summit, the presidents and prime ministers of the so-called G-7 countries will have talks with Yeltsin about further aid.

"The G-7 countries have pledged $24 billion in aid to the countries of the former Soviet Union. The American share is being debated in Congress."

The Canadian share, $2.4 billion, is mostly in grain-purchase credits.

Yeltsin said the Western countries had to convince the International Monetary Fund that "they can't approach Russia like any other country. Russia is unique."

He said Russia could not meet IMF demands to decontrol oil and gas prices this year because that would cause social unrest. And he urged Western nations to allow Russian to defer payment of the interest on its debt.

The Russian president's schedule also included a visit to a research laboratory, meetings with Canada's official opposition leaders and a dinner with Governor General Ray Hnatyshyn, Queen Elizabeth's representative in Canada.

Yeltsin was to spend Saturday, his final day in Canada, in Montreal.

Modern version of the Zero: Japan exhibits new airplane

NAGOYA, Japan (AP) — Japan on Friday unveiled a mockup of a plane that one general suggested would be able to dominate the skies like the famed Zero fighter of World War II.

Four years in planning, the FSX fighter jet has been billed as Japan's first attempt to build a state-of-the-art support fighter, and is considered a boost for its lagging aerospace industry.

"This will be the Zero fighter of the modern era," said Air Self Defense Forces Gen. Kiyoshi Matsumiya, referring to the prop plane that gained fame in Japan's early-Pacific-war victories over America.

The general's comparison of the FSX to the Zero fighter, intended to point up the jet's technical promise, appeared somewhat indiscreet. Japanese officials usually shy away from such references to the militarism that led to Japan's World War II defeat.

Under Japan's U.S.-imposed postwar constitution, the nation's military is limited to self-defense and is forbidden from using force to settle overseas disputes.

By coincidence, the presentation of the FSX came only days after Japan's Parliament approved the first overseas dispatch of troops since World War II, for U.N. peacekeeping.

The FSX, developed not far from where its main contractor, Mitsubishi, built the famed Zero, has inflamed the U.S.-Japan economic rivalry almost as much as its agile predecessor sharpened the military conflict a half-century ago.

The needle-nosed wooden mockup shown to the media Friday proved little different in conception and appearance from the plane the FSX is modeled on, the F-16 built by the U.S. co-developer of the project, St. Louis-based General Dynamics Corp.

Like some F-16s, it is also to be equipped with a U.S.-built General Electric engine. The main improvement is a lighter, stronger graphite wing. The jet is not scheduled to fly until 1995.

The FSX's dual American and Japanese identities reflect a long tug-of-war over the project that has made it a symbol of Japan's transformation from America's quiet Cold War ally to its leading economic competitor.

On one hand, the close resemblance of the mockup to the F-16 represents a kind of victory for the U.S. government. On the other, it could renew fears that America is handing away technology in aerospace, one of the few high-tech areas it still dominates.

Initially, in 1987, the Pentagon wanted Tokyo to buy Japan's next generation of fighters off the shelf from U.S. defense contractors. Japanese contractors had sought to build the jet entirely on their own. Mindful of America's role as its only ally and protector, Tokyo eventually agreed to compromise by co-developing the plane and licensing U.S. technology.

To Tokyo's ire, the Bush administration then did an about-face when fears arose in Congress and the Commerce Department that the project amounted to a technology giveaway.

City lives on daring bread run

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Pedal to the floor, Hadzo Kalabusic's rickety bread truck will go fast enough to avoid death in the regular hail of sniper bullets he faces on his daily morning drive to kitchen.

Now in its third month of siege, Sarajevo has little to eat other than bread. And that could run out soon.

For 20 days, Kalabusic, a chubby, mustachioed father of two, has hunched his white truck at dawn to Sarajevo's Klas bakery to load up with more than 1,000 loaves. He then races back to his suburb of Stup, near the front line in eastern Sarajevo.

"They shoot at me every day, but I'm getting used to it," said Kalabusic, pointing to a neat circle of four bullet holes in the side of the truck. "I put my foot down and just drive."

In Stup, about 600 hungry people await him in front of a department store now serving as the "people's kitchen," as he calls it.

"Sometimes there's no one there, because they also shoot at people waiting for bread," he said.

The bakery's daredevil drivers, who earn 5,000 dinars ($3.50 at unofficial exchange rates) a month, are the most exposed to danger, said bakery director Husein Ahmovic, "but all the workers here are heroes."

Four drivers have been wounded. One lost his legs when his truck was hit by anti-aircraft fire. Two workers were killed in shelling as they drove to work. Now, only 80 of the bakery's 500 workers turn up regularly.

The bakery has taken five direct hits. One shell punched through a wall, just missing a vital flour-sifting machine.

Sarajevo's daily bread production has dropped from over 160,000 loaves from two-state bakeries and 200 small private bakers to 65,000 loaves from Klas, now the only large bakery working.

The bakery needs more than 1,000 pounds of yeast daily, and when yeast ran out last weekend, only 17,000 "low-quality" loaves were made for two days.

New supplies were brought in, via a route Ahmovic would not disclose. "But now again, we're back to a minimum and I don't know how long we can keep baking."

That could mean starvation for over 200,000 people still in Sarajevo. According to priest Ivo Balukic, "People are surviving on bread and nothing else."

Outside the priest's home, which doubles as a charity office, a sign says: "Closed, no food."

"Still my bell rings every hour with people asking for food, but I have none to give," he said. "Some have told me they haven't eaten for three-or-four days."

While there have been no reports of death by starvation, food is getting scarcer by the day. In some areas, people have reportedly been eating grass.

Church plans to hold mass wedding
SEOUL, South Korea — The Unification Church Friday said it will stage the world's largest international mass wedding in August with the marriage of 20,000 couples from 81 nations.

The wedding will take place at Seoul's Olympic Stadium on Aug. 25 and coincide with a church-sponsored World Culture and Athletics Festival, church officials said.

The wedding budget is $37 million, according to the South Korean news agency Yonhap, which quoted unidentified sources.

Members of the Unification Church, founded by South Korea's Rev. Moon Sun-myung, are sometimes referred to as "Moonies." The church claims to have about 3 million members worldwide and has business interests in soft drinks, machinery, auto parts and publishing.

Thieves take car-carrying AIDS blood
MOSCOW — Thieves stole a car carrying samples of AIDS-infected blood and cholera bacteria, and a test tube containing the AIDS sample broke during the crime, a newspaper reported on Friday.

Komsomolskaya Pravda said the samples were intended for a medical clinic in Moscow. It gave no other details of the car theft.

AIDS, caused by the HIV virus, is most often transmitted through sexual contact or through contaminated blood.

The newspaper quoted doctors as saying the thieves would not know for up to two years whether they had contracted AIDS.

15-year-old goes to prison for murder
TIMARU, New Zealand — A 15-year-old youth was convicted Friday of murdering an 11-year-old boy and sentenced to life in prison.

Robin James Pitney, who was a ward of the country's social-welfare system, was found guilty by a High Court jury of robbing Lef Bannatyne and stabbing him to death on Nov. 15.

Justice James Holland sentenced Pitney to life in prison, but ordered that he undergo a psychiatric assessment. Holland did not rule on the minimum amount of time Pitney would have to spend in jail before being eligible for parole.

The judge said he found Pitney's lack of emotion and remorse during the week-long trial "quite disturbing."

The boy was tried as an adult because of the severity of the crime, court officials said.

Crash kills 20, injures 50 in India
NEW DELHI, India — A truck carrying laborers slammed into a tree in eastern India on Friday, killing at least 20 people and injuring 50, Press Trust of India reported.

The news agency said the workers were returning to their homes from Patna, the capital of Bihar state, a 200-mile journey. The region is 390 miles southeast of New Delhi.

GOP abortion debate heats up

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A committee at the Republican state convention on Friday agreed to edge away from the party's staunch anti-abortion platform stand of the past, but anti-abortion delegates promised a fight.

"I'm ashamed to be a Republican," an anti-abortion delegate said as she stomped out of the platform plank debate. The committee had earlier refused to retain the strong anti-abortion plank from 1990.

With that abortion stand a factor in Republican losses at the polls in 1990, party leaders urged delegates to let go of the hard stand on abortion this year.

"We will never reach a compromise," retiring House Speaker Tom Boyd of Genesee said.

The plank being recommended to the full convention acknowledges the disagreement among Republicans on abortion and calls for party members to "hold our views and debate them in a different forum."

Boyd

That was the approach urged earlier by state Chairman Phil Batt when he called for "less emphasis on the emotional issues that are unsolvable, such as abortion."

"We need to recognize that there are differences of opinion and leave it at that," Batt said.

Still, Rep. JoAnn Wood of Rigby and Sen. Allan Larsen of Blackfoot, both conservatives, told committee members to hold the anti-abortion ground.

"If we believe in protecting the unborn, we should say so, and I'm saying so," Wood declared.

But while Paul May of Minidoka County declared himself as anti-abortion as anyone, the father of 13 said Republicans "should recognize that this issue has divided us more than any other issue. It should be our position to get people elected to the Legislature."

State Rep. Pam Ahrens of Boise said abortion was the key issue in some GOP races in last month's primary election, and voters expressed their choices, generally siding with pro-choice candidates.

"Why in the world do we want to take the Republican Party down that road and risk not electing Republicans in November," she said. "There's no way we are going to agree, and there's no way you are going to change any person's mind."

Delegates supporting the stronger anti-abortion stand promised a battle when it goes before the full convention on Saturday.

Batt, former state senator, lieutenant-governor and 1982 nominee for governor, was elected to a second term as party chairman but said he will resign early next year to give a new state chairman the chance to direct the entire 1993-1994 election campaign.

John Sandy of Ketchum was elected vice chairman and Cindy Moyle of Burley and Blake-Hall were re-elected national committeewoman and committeeman.

Earlier, national and state party leaders played down the importance of independent Ross Perot in the presidential election but spent a lot of time attacking him.

"A vote for Ross Perot is a vote for Bill Clinton," said former state chairman Blake Hall of Idaho Falls, and that will come if the Texan's current popularity forces the presidential selection into the House of Representatives.

Michigan Congressman Guy Vander Jagt, chairman of the National Republican Campaign Committee, said the House Democratic Caucus rules will force all Democrats to vote for Clinton or risk the loss of all committee assignments.

He called Perot "that government-subsidized billionaire" and described Idaho's two Democratic congressmen, Richard Stallings and Larry LaRocco, as "two liberal misfits."

EchoHawk tells tribes to make connections

MOSCOW (AP) — Indian tribes should continue to make their way out of isolation and build bridges to state government and other communities, Idaho Attorney General Larry EchoHawk says.

EchoHawk

A Pawnee tribal member and first Indian elected state attorney general, EchoHawk on Thursday addressed a symposium on sovereignty organized by the Nez Perce and Coeur d'Alene tribes.

"Whatever we can do to break down fear, misunderstanding, mistrust and, yes, racism, we must do it," EchoHawk told the crowd at the University of Idaho.

Indian tribes, he said, have been used to dealing with the federal government, and not with states, something that may have led a U.S. Supreme Court judge to write in a decision that "people of the state where they are found are often their deadliest enemies."

In Idaho, tribes began to have more contact with the state government in the 1980s.

Restrictions alarm Indian fishermen

MOSCOW (AP) — Downriver Indian tribes are growing increasingly alarmed by the strictures of the Endangered Species Act, the Columbia River Inter-tribal Fish Commission's executive director told a Moscow gathering.

Ted Strong on Thursday criticized how the federal act is being used to protect Snake River salmon runs to the detriment of downstream tribal fishermen. He addressed a symposium on sovereignty and natural resources sponsored by Northwest Indian tribes at the University of Idaho.

The National Marine Fisheries Service, which recently listed the Snake's sockeye run as endangered and chinook runs as threatened, is making some threats of its own, he said.

Tribal fishermen want to fish from platforms along the lower Columbia River for sockeye.

Bingo-parlor work starts on reservation

WORLEY (AP) — The Coeur d'Alene Tribe is breaking ground on a $1.8 million bingo parlor on the reservation north of Worley.

"This is a long-awaited major enterprise," said tribal spokesman Bob Bostwick.

When it opens this fall, the parlor will feature bingo games with payoffs of up to $2 million. It will create up to 50 jobs and give visitors a taste of traditional tribal foods and culture. The groundbreaking took place Friday morning.

will build the 26,000-square-foot facility near the intersection of U.S. Highway 95 and state Highway 58.

The building will house a restaurant featuring traditional Indian cooking such as fry bread, and a cultural center. Bostwick said.

A number of games will be played at the parlor, including one called "Mega Bingo" with a payoff of up to $2 million. Besides construction, the new facility will open up about 50 jobs.

Residents doubt reservoir pledge

CASCADE — Local residents are questioning the Bureau of Reclamation's claimed commitment to maintaining a minimum 300,000-acre-foot pool in Cascade Reservoir over the summer.

But Bureau spokesman Jerrold Gregg maintains the information giving rise to the public concern fails to consider reduced irrigation commitments due to the fact that the reservoir did not fill this spring.

Still, members of the Citizens for Valley County want a detailed water quality-fish survival study of the reservoir conducted this summer and winter and rescheduling of the water release to help the salmon migration until this fall.

Spokesman Jim Keating contends that with the reservoir starting the season 125,000 acre-feet short of full, there is no way the bureau can release 72,000 acre-feet for salmon flush and over 312,000 acre-feet for irrigation and still keep the minimum pool at 300,000 acre-feet.

Unruly bus riders will be videotaped

SANDPOINT — The Bonner County School District will use its own version of "Candid Camera" next year to halt the antics of unruly bus riders, officials said.

Superintendent Gary Barton said the district decided this week to mount video cameras in some buses after drivers complained of students harassing each other. Parents claimed some bus drivers treated children unfairly.

Empty boxes will also be mounted in some buses in the 70-vehicle fleet, so other students or bus drivers will know when they are being monitored, transportation supervisor Don Heller said.

Boiseans need money for water hookup

BOISE — A solvent called "Perc" is putting Toni Farmer and a other Boise residents in a pinch as they try to find money to hook up to city water.

Several weeks ago she and two neighbors discovered their drinking water well was contaminated with tetrachloroethylene or Perc, a possible carcinogen.

Boise Water Corp. stepped in to provide an emergency source of clean water, but only until June 26. The residents have to come up with about $9,000 by that date to help pay for a permanent hookup.

"Nine thousand dollars might as well be $9 million," Farmer said. Farmer said she cannot raise the money and the government is unable to help. "I fall right through the cracks."

More than 200 private wells in Ada County are known to be contaminated with chemicals. And the number will likely increase.

Police Academy chief could return

BOISE — A former supervisor of the State Police Academy will know by July 7 whether he will be reinstated without opposition to the state force.

Thomas Thompson, a former ISP commander for support services, won the first and perhaps only round of an appeal to the Idaho State Personnel Commission of a sexual harassment charge.

"The department has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that its disciplinary dismissal of Thompson was for proper cause," a commission hearing officer ruled June 2.

The officer also called the department's action "arbitrary, capricious and a gross injustice to a career employee."

Thompson was fired April 30, 1991, when a subordinate of his was accused of sexual harassment by a former woman trooper.

Transients sought after stabbing death

POCATELLO — Authorities on Friday searched for three transients they believe were involved in the stabbing death of an ex-convict in southeastern Idaho.

Bannock County Sheriff Bill Lynn said Ray Kopsky, 50, was stabbed numerous times in the torso and neck and his neck was broken. His body was found Thursday near the railroad tracks south of Swan Lake.

Lynn said Kopsky was apparently killed by others as all of them rode a freight car through Idaho.

Police in Hermiston, Ore., said they discovered a blood-splattered boxcar Friday morning and obtained descriptions of several transients seen leaving it.

Kopsky was originally from New Jersey and was recently paroled from Folsom prison in California on murder and other charges, Lynn said. Kopsky was headed for Montana, where he was to serve out his parole, the sheriff said.

Health institute wants help from public

POCATELLO — The director of the state's Institute of Rural Health wants the public to help spread the word that Idaho is offering financial incentives to doctors and other medical professionals willing to work in rural communities.

Dr. Jeffrey Barilome says individuals with connections to Idaho through friends or family or those who once lived here may be some of the best candidates for the new Idaho Health Professional Loan Repayment Program.

"We want Idahoans to start thinking about people they know who might qualify and be interested in the loan repayment program," Barilome said. "Informal and individualized contacts are important."

"I think this is one of the major steps that the state has taken in a number of years with regard to rural health in alleviating the primary-care, rural health crisis," Barilome said.

Agreement on platform eludes Idaho Democrats

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho Democrats were unable to complete their 1992 platform Friday, despite 23 public hearings to develop a draft and almost 12 hours of debate on final language.

Delegates wandered out of a sometimes-confused session of almost three hours on the second day of the party's state convention in Lewiston, lured away by a picnic and candidate receptions.

But before losing a quorum, Kootenai County delegates won tentative approval of a change in the civil rights plank detailing the party's opposition to discrimination based on specific differences, including sexual orientation, rather than a general statement opposing discrimination on any basis.

Tentative changes to the civil rights plank and a number of others approved on the convention floor were to be considered Saturday by the party's Platform Committee before final delegate action.

The platform presented to the convention Friday included a stronger pro-choice plank than earlier drafts.

Some delegates still objected to including language declaring that Democrats "respect alternative views regarding reproductive rights," arguing that it undermined the party's commitment to choice.

But a move to eliminate it was narrowly defeated, in part by Kootenai County delegates' fearful return of the plank to committee might result in even weaker language.

"To tell you the truth we're surprised we got the wording we got," said Judy Whitley of Coeur d'Alene.

And with two of the party's top-of-the-ticket candidates solidly anti-abortion — Congressman Richard Stallings for the U.S. Senate and state Auditor J.D. Williams for Stallings' 2nd Congressional District seat — other delegates said eliminating respect for alternative views would alienate too many voters who support other Democratic positions.

Earlier, Stallings and Williams both said they were not troubled by the prospect of running on a pro-choice platform, despite their personal positions.

Teller to face charges

SPOKANE (AP) — A U.S. Bank teller has been charged with embezzlement, accused of helping her two brothers and a third man rob the branch where she worked.

Susan L. Taylor, 22, was charged Monday after an FBI investigation of the Feb. 9 robbery, Assistant U.S. Attorney Stephanie Johnson said Friday. The charge is embezzlement because Taylor worked for the bank, Johnson said.

Taylor had been employed by the bank four months when an unnamed man entered the branch and handed her a note demanding money, Johnson said.

Taylor gave the man $8,600 and did not immediately activate bank security cameras or silent alarms, Johnson said. The man fled.

FBI officials say the robber was Taylor's 17-year-old brother, who has been referred to state authorities for juvenile prosecution in the case.

Another brother, James Alan Taylor, 19, was charged June 15 with one count of bank larceny for allegedly helping to plan the robbery and writing the note.

A third man, Daniel George Watkins Jr., 21, surrendered Friday to authorities in Westfield, Mass., Johnson said. Johnson said she was not sure why Watkins surrendered, but believes he had heard a warrant had been issued for his arrest.

Watkins, who allegedly drove the getaway car, also was charged June 15 with bank larceny, she said.

LA police nab beating suspect

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police early Friday arrested a fifth man in connection with the attack on Reginald Denny, a truck driver who was pulled from his rig and beaten during the Los Angeles riots.

A task force of police and FBI agents arrested Shawn Davis, 26, at a house in the ravaged South-Central Los Angeles about 20 blocks from the intersection where Denny was critically injured, police said.

Davis was the one who hit the truck driver with a hammer, said police Lt. Bruce Hagerty. He said Davis would be booked "on a variety of charges."

FBI spokesman Robert L. Jones would confirm only that Davis had been arrested. "We are still trying to verify whether he is connected to the Denny beating," he said.

Three other men charged in Denny's beating have pleaded innocent. A fourth man pleaded innocent to picking his pocket after the attack.

The assault at the flashpoint of the riots was broadcast live by news helicopters hovering overhead. Denny, who is white, was attacked by black rioters while driving his gravel truck through the predominantly black and Hispanic South-Central section on April 29.

Idahoan faces pair of charges

SPOKANE (AP) — An Idaho man once acquitted of killing his mother was charged in the abduction and sexual assault of a Spokane woman.

Cory A. Bartel of Osburn faces a possible life sentence if convicted of federal charges of kidnapping and use of a firearm during a crime of violence, assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Crum said.

Bartel, 33, was charged Thursday in U.S. District Court with two federal counts after Spokane County dismissed a state kidnapping charge, which carries a lighter sentence, Assistant U.S. Attorney Earl Hicks said.

Authorities say Bartel stalked the 21-year-old woman in Bremerton, working as an exotic dancer at a nightclub on March 22. Bartel is accused of going to her residence, displaying a .357-caliber handgun, driving her to his home and sexually assaulting her.

The woman escaped and told authorities that Bartel had told her he murdered his mother in March 1990. Bartel was acquitted of killing his mother last October in Spokane County, Idaho.

Trespasser arrested while riding bike near ground zero

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Scientists conducted the third U.S. nuclear weapons test of the year beneath the Nevada desert Friday after a trespasser was arrested two miles from ground zero.

The protester, identified as Sean Stenshol, 25, was riding a bicycle on a remote highway when he was picked up by a test site security guard, according to Energy Department spokesman Jim Boyer.

"He was pedaling a bicycle down the highway when a security guard who was patrolling the area spotted him," Boyer said. "We don't know how he got to the area, and he wouldn't say what group he was with, or where he was from."

The incident comes a week after nine members of the Greenpeace organization hiked onto the 1,350-square-mile test site and made it to a tower where preparations are underway for a nuclear test scheduled for this fall. Six of the activists were arrested on trespass charges after unfurling a banner midway up the tower. The banner called for an end to nuclear testing.

The House of Representatives has passed a bill calling for the U.S. to halt nuclear testing as long as Russia continues its current moratorium. A similar bill in the Senate now has 51 co-sponsors.

The Bush administration has threatened to veto any nuclear test ban bill, and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Colin Powell said Thursday he would push for such a veto. Boyer said the bicyclist would not say how he got to the point where he was picked up. He carried no identification, Boyer said.

The test site is not fenced and is easily accessible. Anti-nuclear groups have infiltrated the site numerous times in the past several years, and delayed one test by reaching ground zero just before detonation.

Energy Department officials say sites of future tests are heavily guarded when a nuclear device is in place.

Boyer said the 9:45 a.m. PDT test was delayed by unfavorable weather conditions and technical problems. He declined to discuss the technical problems. Boyer said light winds were blowing toward Las Vegas at the time the test was scheduled.

Tests are not conducted if winds are blowing toward a populated area.

The test, code-named Victoria, was conducted at Yucca Flat, 75 miles northwest of Las Vegas. The nuclear device was buried in a shaft, 800 feet beneath the desert floor.

Victoria was the third nuclear weapons test conducted this year, compared to eight for all of 1991.

A total of 718 tests have been announced at the Nevada Test Site since testing began there in January of 1951.

Average price for gas increases by 4 cents

BOISE — Idaho's average price for a gallon of self-serve unleaded gasoline has gone up 4 cents in the past three weeks to $1.242, according to a statewide spot check of 100 stations by the Idaho AAA.

It was the highest average price found by the Idaho affiliate of the American Automobile Association since a week before Christmas 1990, when Idaho's pump prices were $1.37. Prices jumped as high as $1.44 per gallon in August 1990 after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, the Idaho AAA said.

The statewide average price dropped to $1 per gallon during the first week of February this year, then began rising quickly in April.

Idaho's average price this week was almost 6 cents higher than the national average of $1.176 per gallon, which also was up 5.5 cents since the Fuel Gauge Survey conducted nationwide the week before Memorial Day.

"Environmental laws that require gasolines with reduced vapor pressures for summer driving push up the cost to produce the product," Idaho AAA spokesman Dave Carlson said in a news release.

Valley Quick Response unit acquires 2nd ambulance

JEROME — The Valley Quick Response unit in the Eden and Hazelton area has obtained a second ambulance to expand its service to eastern Jerome County.

The VQR traded a used van for the ambulance, so there was no cost to the people, said VQR spokesman Henry Buschorn. Minidoka County made the ambulance available for the trade, he said. Equipment from the van will be installed in the new ambulance.

Twin Falls drivers fare well in survey of seat-belt use

TWIN FALLS — A survey of seat belt use in Idaho showed Twin Falls drivers buckle up more than most.

Close to 80 percent of the city's drivers latch their seat belts in a recent survey by the Transportation Department of 20 cities across the state.

Among motorists in Boise, 57 percent used their seatbelts, while the cities with the lowest rates were located in southeastern region, including the towns of Preston, Soda Springs and Blackfoot with seatbelt use at between 19 and 23 percent.

Hollister event will raise money for city lawn mower

HOLLISTER — A fund-raising event will be held today in Hollister to buy a lawnmower to mow City Park. The event will feature a bake and yard sale, along with other refreshments, such as hamburgers and hot dogs. It will be from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Cosentino Country Store. Members of the Salmon Trackers & H.C. Club will help serve food.

Swimmers should sign up for swim team by June 22

TWIN FALLS — Anyone who wants to join the Twin Falls Community Pool swim team should sign up by June 22. City Parks and Recreation Director Chad Browning urges those who are interested to sign up at the pool or call 734-2336.

Dust abatement program will affect roads in forest

TWIN FALLS — Sawtooth National Forest crews will be applying dust-abatement materials to portions of roads in the Ketchum and Fairfield Ranger Districts on Tuesday. The routes will not be closed, but visitors are asked to avoid the areas on Tuesday to allow the work to be finished. The areas include: a five and one-half mile stretch of Forest Road from Featherbill to Shake Creek in the Fairfield Ranger District and on a section of Warm Springs Road from Board Ranch to Frenchman's Bend in the Ketchum Ranger District.

Hansen residents appeal landfill decision

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — About 100 Hansen residents had registered appeals to Twin Falls County commissioners as of the close of the business day Friday over a decision by the county Planning and Zoning Commission to issue a conditional-use permit for a regional landfill on Hansen Butte.

"That means we'll just have a long meeting," Commission Chairman Marvin Hempleman said Friday, the deadline for filing appeals.

Hansen Mayor George Uric and City Attorney William R. Hollifield were among those who beat the deadline by filing their appeals Friday, Hempleman said.

The planning commission voted on June 11 to approve a conditional-use permit for a six-county regional landfill on Hansen Butte, located east of Hansen.

An appeal hearing will likely be called in about 1½ weeks, Hempleman said.

He said the commission does not have to advertise for the appeal hearing in the newspaper, but it must notify people who made the appeals about the meeting.

The meeting will likely take place in commission chambers, which has seating capacity for as many as 30 people at a time, Hempleman said. People can either wait their turns in the corridor or the commission may set up a schedule for people to come in at different times, he said.

He added that before the hearing site is selected, he must consult with other commissioners.

Hempleman, who has said he would like to excuse himself from voting on the appeal, said he could not recall when the county received more appeals.

"It means a lot of people on that side of the county are not happy with having a landfill 'out there,'" he said. "But they are not the majority."

Commissioners can either act on the appeals at the meeting or table their decision until later, Hempleman said. If they table their decision, the commissioners would likely rule within two weeks, he said.

If commissioners deny the appeal, it can be taken to District Court.

The Idaho Conservation League is also concerned about sediments being released into the Snake River from farm runoff, like that flowing from the Perrine Coulee.

Snake cleanup: League threatens suit against EPA

By N.S. Norkkedved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Environmentalists want to see some action on cleaning up the Snake River, and they're getting ready to take the federal government to court to get it.

The Idaho Conservation League this week filed a 60-day notice of intent to sue the federal Environmental Protection Agency over its failure to act on water-quality problems in the Middle Snake.

The ICL cited the agency's failure to act on the river's water-quality problems and to establish a "total maximum daily load" for nutrients discharged to the river, said Trish Klahr, the water-quality director for the Boise-based organization.

But the threatened suit may derail the state's effort to develop its own plan to deal with the problems, said Don Campbell, executive vice president of the Idaho Aquaculture Association.

The aquaculture industry and other industries that contribute pollutants to the river have been working on plans to limit nutrients — nitrogen and phosphorus — and sediments in their effluents.

The voluntary plan by the aquaculture industry would be a seven- to 10-year commitment to reduce pollutants in hatchery effluent, Klahr said. But that's too long, she said, and it's environmentally and politically unacceptable.

The state in September 1990 listed the Middle Snake as a "water-quality limited segment," meaning that portion of the river violated state water quality standards.

The state is required to notify the EPA, and the EPA has 30 days to approve or reject the status. If the state does not submit its own plan, the EPA then is required by the federal Clean Water Act to impose a nutrient management plan.

That plan is known as a "total maximum daily load," or the amount of nutrients the river can assimilate without violating water quality standards.

But the ICL says the EPA has not acted on the state's listing of the Middle Snake. And the state has not met its own October 1991 deadline for developing a nutrient management plan, Klahr said.

"The deadlines have come and gone," she said. The state is working on a nutrient management plan "as quickly as we can with the resources we have," said Tim Litke, regional director for the state Division of Environmental Quality in south-central Idaho.

Litke wants to see a plan that will improve water quality in the river.

"I think we're headed in the right direction," he said.

But the plans being developed by aquaculture and other

Burglary suspect leaves trail

BURLEY — Marcus Antonio Gonzalez apparently just couldn't resist as he walked past the display window of a downtown jewelry store early Friday morning, Cassia County sheriff's officers say.

They say the 25-year-old Burley man may have been intoxicated when he spied a bell and four nicely wrapped packages in the window, smashed his hand through the glass, grabbed the items and fled.

Gonzalez was charged with first-degree burglary, but not before receiving several stitches in his thumb, according to a sheriff's office report.

It was the trail of blood spewing from the glass cuts on Gonzalez hand that led police to his apartment two blocks away. The merchandise was recovered.

The bell was worth $4 and the four wrapped packages were empty.

Officers charge man in stabbing

The Times-News

HAILMEY — A 36-year-old man is being held in the Blaine County Jail on charges of aggravated assault after he allegedly stabbed his wife's a Forest Service campground in the Deer Creek area on Thursday.

Bradley-Jon-Banks, whose permanent address was unknown, was arrested late Thursday afternoon at the Wood River Medical Center in Sun Valley, where he took his wife after the stabbing, according to Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling.

Joann Banks, 44, remained under observation at the hospital as of Friday afternoon. She had been stabbed once in the chest and had several "defensive-type wounds" on her arms, Femling said.

According to Joann Banks' statement to police, the incident began with a verbal altercation. When Joann Banks walked away and got in her car, her husband entered on the opposite side and started hitting her in the face.

He then grabbed a fillet knife off the dashboard and stabbed her in the chest, Banks reported.

Femling said the couple had apparently been camping out in the Deer Creek area for a couple weeks, and Bradley Banks had been working in Blaine County. Arrangements on the felony charge was expected late Friday.

Ex-education chief Bennett will speak

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Former U.S. Education Secretary and drug czar William J. Bennett will speak at a Twin Falls audience in November.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and the College of Southern Idaho announced Friday that Bennett will speak at their annual Success Breakfast.

Bennett's promotional literature bills him as "controversial, flamboyant, tough, articulate." Bennett, 48, is a forceful proponent of a conservative political agenda. As secretary of education from 1985-88, he argued that education must return to the basics of teaching math, history, science and English, as well as teaching moral and political principles.

He argued that the U.S. educational system was failing, one of his many stands through the years that sparked controversy.

Bennett was education secretary under President Reagan. President Bush appointed him director of the Office of National Drug Policy in 1989.

In that post, he pushed a national drug agenda that focused on tougher law enforcement, greater accountability for users, treatment, education and prevention.

The Success Breakfast will be held at 7 a.m. Nov. 12. Bennett's speech will be from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. Chamber Executive Vice President J. Kent Just said that Bennett's speech cost $20,000. The cost is covered by tickets to the breakfast and his speech.

The tickets will cost $35 for chamber members and $45 for nonmembers. For more information, call the chamber at 733-3974.

Idaho insurance director supports state health plan

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sooner or later, Idaho will have to develop some kind of state health insurance plan. Insurance Director Harry Walrath said Thursday.

Grouping all Idahoans into a single risk pool, with the state either setting or regulating premiums, is the only way to spread the cost broadly enough to make basic insurance affordable for everyone, he said.

"Medical costs keep going up and up, and I don't know where the stop is to the darn thing," Walrath said during a visit to Twin Falls Thursday.

However, the insurance director, an appointee of Gov. Cecil Andrus, said such a plan is probably years away.

"I don't think you're going to see IdahoHealth again," he said, referring to the bill to establish a state-run health insurance plan that died in the state Senate last session on an unprecedented 42-0 vote last March.

Although the funding mechanism for IdahoHealth was flawed, Walrath said, the basic idea of combining all Idahoans into one insurance pool was sound.

"I think (state Sen.) Marti Calabretta (the sponsor of other would set up a state health plan) did a great job of bringing the issue to people's attention," he said. "After that bill came out, public awareness went up 400 percent."

"Spreading the risk among more than a million Idahoans probably would mean young, healthy people would pay more than they do now, he said. But the sick or elderly, who now must often pay high premiums to get any coverage at all, would pay less and would be guaranteed coverage.

In the meantime, Walrath said, enacting a small-group reform law would provide a partial solution to the state's health-insurance crisis, which affects an estimated 160,000 Idahoans.

Small-group reform would make it easier for small employers to buy group health insurance. Currently, many cannot obtain coverage because one or two employees are considered high-risk, even though the rest may be healthy.

There are two versions of small-group reform. One would assign small employers who are denied coverage to insurers at random. The other would set up a state "reinsurance" program to protect insurers who take high-risk small groups.

A small-group reform bill passed the state House of Representatives last session, but was held up in the Senate and never came to a vote.

"We tried to marry the two concepts together and it didn't work," Walrath said. However, he expects another version of small-group reform to come before the legislature next year.

Walrath said his department's main legislative priority next session will be to pass uniform laws on regulating insurance companies. A project of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, standardization of state insurance laws eventually will allow insurers to follow the same rules throughout the country.

That, Walrath said, will make it easier for regulators to keep an eye on companies' finances.

Priest leaves politics - to serve

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) - Harvey Fonseca says he became a county supervisor because he wanted to serve people. He gave up his post for the same reason. He's now a priest.

"I felt called to serve the people when I ran for supervisor," Fonseca said. "I felt I did a very good job when I was there, but it wasn't enough: I needed more, the spiritual side of things as well."

Fonseca, 41, gave up politics in 1986 after a single term and entered Mount Angel Seminary in St. Benedict, Ore.

"It was something that I always had in the back of my mind - all my life, it seems like," he said. "I just decided then was the time to do it."

Fonseca was ordained June 6 and celebrated his first Mass the next day at Sacred Heart Church in his hometown of Dos Palos, 150 miles southeast of San Francisco.

The doctor is in at Pebble Beach

The Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — The perfect 10. Gil Morgan had a shot Friday at the figure achieved by luminaries from Nadia Comaneci to Be Derek — but never by anyone in the U.S. Open golf championship.

He had a shot at it, didn't realize the significance of the occasion and missed his chance for a line in the record book.

Still, his comeback 69 in the second round gave the non-practicing optometrist from Edmond, Okla., a comfortable lead at the halfway point of the second of this year's Grand Slam tournaments.

Morgan, inevitably dubbed "Doc" by his fellow touring pros, said he did not know he had an opportunity to achieve one of golf's more obscure but meaningful records: No one, in all the 92 American national championships, has at any time been 10 under par.

Dr. Gil was 9 under when he stood over a 12-foot birdie putt on the 18th green at the Pebble Beach Golf Links.

"I wish I'd been aware of the 10-under thing," he said. "I would have tried harder." As it was, his putt wobbled weakly off line and Morgan settled for a par and a tie with six others who have, at one time or another, reached 9 under par in U.S. Open competition: Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus, Jeff Stuman, Mike Donald and the unrelated England's Nick Faldo drives from the scenic 9th tee overlooking Carmel Bay during second-round action Friday in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Calif. Faldo shot a 76 and is 11 strokes off the pace.

Simpsons, Scott and Tim. "It wasn't a very good putt," he conceded. "I didn't hit it hard enough."

It left Morgan at 135, five strokes ahead of Ray Floyd and Australian Wayne Grady, six in front of Gary Hallberg, England's Colin Montgomerie and Sweden's Anders Forsbrand.

With two rounds to go, the phlegmatic Morgan still has his chance to reach golf's version of the perfect 10.

And, at age 45, Morgan has a shot at an even more important, treasured record: the

Rodeo gets down to 'serious business'

A rough landing awaits Jerry Zollinger of Oakley as he is thrown from his horse during the bareback riding competition Friday night.

Fields narrow as riders set sights on finals, set for today

By Ron Gates Times-News writer

FILER — One could easily sense an increase in intensity during Friday's portion of the 1992 Idaho High School Rodeo Championships.

Scoring in the state event allows a competitor to bring in up to 10 points from his or her regular season-district totals. A go round victory is worth 10 more, to lead the average in an event produces another 15 points.

While there's enough still up for grabs to alter current standings considerably, those up on Friday faced the stark reality that only the top 10 in each event would ride the following day.

"Everybody gets a little more intense by tonight," agreed Carey's Mist McDowell, a strong candidate for state all-around honors. "It's a lot more relaxed the first three nights, but now it's down to serious business."

Friday's first six events winners were somewhat more evenly distributed between districts than on previous days.

District 2 had a go round leader in Mountain Home's Jake Ireland in bareback and District 3 watched Lewiston's Lori Fox take breakaway roping.

Arimo's Matt Bastian turned the trick for District 4 in steer wrestling just before Buhl's Brigitt Freeman won the goat tying go and Jerod Hitt, Declo, became Friday's second local total. A go round victory is worth 10 more, to lead the average in an event produces another 15 points.

Freeman recorded an 8.303, yet was not entirely pleased with her performance.

"It was all right, but it could have been better," she said. "I had to gather the legs twice to make the tie. It may have been quick enough to get me into the top 10 though."

Nathan Baldwin of Rexburg got a section championship for the new kids on the block, District 7, in calf roping.

Terreton's Shawn Burtenshaw, with 68 points in saddle bronc riding, was a double winner in Thursday's late going, but area athletes continued to sparkle.

A family tradition

All-around champ Sam Gorrell credits pack of relatives for rodeo success

By Ron Gates Times-News writer

FILER — Sam Gorrell is a young man of few words.

That's hardly unusual for a 16-year-old a couple months short of beginning his junior year in high school.

What does stand out is the talent he exhibited in romping to the all-around title in District 5 rodeo. "Yeah, I think it went pretty well all right," Gorrell said. "Having some success helps."

Gorrell, whose flashing smile belies a tenacious, competitive nature, totalled 418 points on his march to that honor. Reserve champion Billy Brunson of Wendell was a distant second with 300.

Only a cow-cutting tie with Brunson kept Gorrell, No. 1 in steer wrestling, from winning two district championships outright. Additional points came from seconds in bareback, saddle bronc and calf roping and a third-place tie in team roping.

If the latter isn't his best of his six events, watch out state all-around aspirants. Gorrell, who ropes from the header position, and heeler Ryon Lee of Gooding set a pace their first time out on Tuesday which stands with but one performance left.

All are feats Gorrell has accomplished without specialized schools and formal coaching. He just spent a lot of time with some very involved relatives.

Holyfield retains title with unanimous decision

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Evander Holyfield totaled an age-old boxing story on the face and body of Larry Holmes Friday night.

"In the desert heat, Holmes fell prey to Father Time and the superior conditioning and punching of the undisputed heavyweight champion, who scored a unanimous decision. The 42-year-old grandfather from Easton, Pa., said it was time to head for his boat.

after the loss, the first after six victories in his latest comeback. "He's a great fighter. He's a hell of a lot stronger than I thought."

Holyfield remained unbeaten by following his pre-fight strategy.

"I've got to go in there and fight a smart fight and not make any mistakes," the 29-year-old Holyfield said beforehand.

He did just that. Holyfield's speed was just too much for Holmes, whose legs looked leaden in the later stages of the fight, although he staged a small rally in the 11th.

"His biggest strength is he really wants to win so bad," Holyfield said of Holmes.

While the will to win was there, Holmes' legs and arms were not, and he used the ropes often.

The rapier left jab that made him the dominant heavyweight from 1978 to 1985 was just a shadow.

"I knew it wasn't going to be an easy fight," said Holyfield, now 28-0. "He proved he's a classy fighter and he has a tough defense."

shot. It's hard to knock out a defensive fighter."

Holyfield boxed Holmes, landing well to the body and often outjabbed. He also landed solidly with left hooks and combinations to the head.

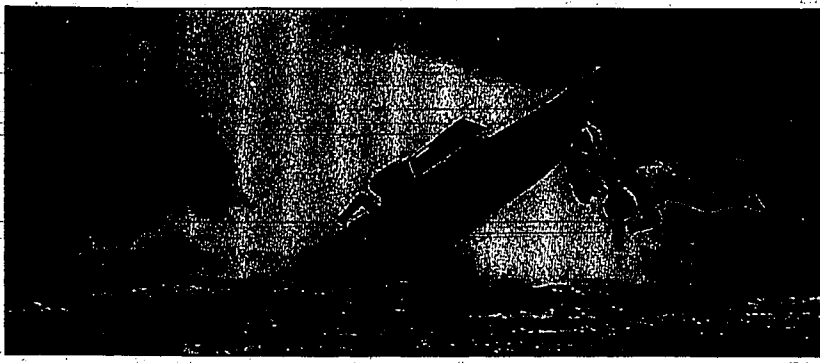

It showed in the scoring. Judge Glen Hamada favored Holyfield 117-111. Judge Carol Castellano and Chuck Giampa each favored the champion 116-112.

The AP scored it 118-110.

Out of control

Bonnie and Gordon Johnson fly from their boat during the morning run up the Snake River at the World Jet Bear Championships in Lewiston Friday. The couple, from Alberta, Canada, appeared to lose control of the boat going through a series of rapids. Bonnie was taken to the hospital in Lewiston for observation. Gordon was uninjured.

Seattle's Fleming notches 10th victory

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie Dave Fleming rebounded from his worst start of the season with his best pitching a four-hitter Friday night to become the AL's first 10-game winner as the Seattle Mariners beat the Minnesota Twins 1-0. Greg Briley gave the game with a home run, one of only four off Kevin Tapani (6-5) in 8 1/3 innings. That was enough for Fleming (10-2), who pitched the Mariners to their fifth straight victory. Fleming scattered four singles, struck out six and walked two. His nine-game winning streak was ended in his last start, a 14-4 loss to Milwaukee. Fleming, 22, won his 10th game faster than any pitcher in team history, doing it in the 66th game. Mark Langston won his 10th in 1987 in the 76th game.

American League

Gonzalez tied a team record with his 10th home run of the month and Rafael Palmeiro homered for the first time in more than a Texas as Texas beat Boston.

Gonzalez hit a solo home run in the eighth, his 17th of the season. He matched the club mark for homers in a month, set by Mike Hargrove in August 1977 and tied by Dave Hosteler in June 1982. Gonzalez had homered in 10 of the last 15 games, and 12 of his last 23 hits have been home runs.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Devereaux hit a grand slam and Cal Ripken and Randy Milligan added solo shots as the Baltimore Orioles outlasted New York.

Danny Tartabull hit a three-run homer for the Yankees, who have lost eight of 11. The Orioles outlast New York 13-11. With the score 6-6 in the fourth inning, New York reliever Shawn Hilliges (9-3) walked the bases loaded and then gave up a two-out, two-run single to David Segui.

Ripken's eighth homer made it 9-6 in the fifth, and after Don Mattingly said home a run off former Yankee Alan Mills (4-1) in the sixth, Milligan homered in the bottom of the inning. Gregg Olson got four outs for his 19th save in 20 opportunities.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Albert Belle hit three-run homer, highlighting a five-run third inning that led the Cleveland Indians past Milwaukee.

Belle's 16th home run hit the right-field pole. Paul Sorrento and Mark Whiten then hit consecutive doubles off Ricky Bones (3-3), and Whiten later scored on a grounder by Mark Lewis for a 5-0 lead.

Tigers 8, White Sox 3

CHICAGO (AP) — Rob Deer hit his second homer of the game, a three-run shot that capped a five-run third inning and led Detroit over Chicago.

With one out in the 13th, Mil Cyber beat out infield single and Tony Phillips bunted for a single off Wilton Alvarez (0-2). Dan Gladden and Travis Fryman each hit RBI singles against Don Pall before Deer hit his 21st home-inning left-field blast.

Royals 11, Blue Jays 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gregg Jefferies drove in five runs and the Toronto Blue Jays lost their defensive poise and their division lead, committing four errors as Kansas City romped 11-4.

The loss dropped the Blue Jays into a first-place tie in the AL East with Baltimore. Mark Gubicza (7-4) gave up two runs in eight innings for the victory while Todd Stottlemyre (5-6) took the loss.

Expos remain hot, cool down Bucs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ken Hill gave up one run in seven innings as the Montreal Expos beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 Friday night.

It's the first time this season the Pirates have lost consecutive games to a National League East team. The Expos have won four of their last five games.

Arquies Grissom started the game with a single off Doug Druhek (5-5) and stole second and third to raise his major league-leading total to 33. Grissom scored when Moises Alou singled to center.

John Vander Wal's double scored Alou. Druhek came into the game with a streak of 23 shutout innings against Montreal, including 17 this season. In eight innings, Druhek gave up five hits, walked none and struck out eight.

Cubs 5, Phillies 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rookie Derrick Mah hit two homers and drove in five runs and Danny Jackson pitched 6 1/3 strong innings for his third straight victory. Chicago has won seven of its last eight games.

Jason Jackson (3-7) gave up two runs and four hits before leaving in the seventh inning with one out and runners on first and third.

ATLANTA (AP) — Pinch-hitter Damon Berryhill's RBI single with one out in the 10th inning lifted Atlanta past Cincinnati, snapping the Reds' seven-game winning streak.

Pinch-hitter Deion Sanders started the winning rally by drawing a leadoff walk from reliever DWyan Henry (1-2). Sanders went to second on a sacrifice by Mike Lerner and moved to third on a wild pitch before scoring on Berryhill's hit, which deflected off right fielder Paul O'Neill's glove.

NEW YORK (AP) — Vince Coleman, who hit a game-yipping two-run homer in the fifth inning, singled home Dick Schofield in the bottom of the ninth.

Both the Cardinals and Mets have lost 15 of their last 21 games.

HOUSTON (AP) — Luis Gonzalez led off the bottom of the 12th inning with a home run to give the Houston Astros a 2-1 victory over slumping Los Angeles on Friday night, the Dodgers' eighth straight loss.

The loss left the Dodgers alone in last place in the NL West.

Holmes has a 54-4 record. Overal, Holmes is good fourth. Holmes had won four of his second, landing a couple of hard rights and a pretty combination of a right to the body and a right to the head. Then Holyfield took charge as Holmes' aging reflexes wouldn't allow him to match the champion punch for punch.

Near the end of the sixth round, Holyfield was cut over the right eye, apparently by Holmes' elbow.

During the rest period, cornerman Lou Duva complained to referee: "That's not what I told him! He's bother Holyfield the rest of the way."

Holyfield was the better fighter. His body punching was far superior and his jabs were better. Holmes tried to lure Holyfield into traps as he did in Ray-Mercer over 12 rounds last Feb. 7.

Giants eager for Swift return to lineup

SAN FRANCISCO—The San Francisco Giants hope unbeaten pitcher Bill Swift can help them overcome a June swoon when he returns to the mound Sunday. "I think this will be a big lift for the ball club," San Francisco manager Roger Craig said. "When he was here, we were playing well and in first place most of the time. When he went down, it seemed like we sort of lost something."

Like a lot of ground. Swift went 6-0 with three complete games, including two shutouts, before a right shoulder inflammation forced him onto the disabled list May 23. Since then, the Giants have gone 7-17. They dropped their sixth straight Thursday night, a fight-marred 9-4 loss to the San Diego Padres. "Just three weeks ago we were in first place. It's hard to believe it could happen this fast," reliever Rod Beck said.

The Giants were two games up on San Diego when Swift went down. Heading into Friday night's rematch with the Padres, the Giants trailed division-leading Cincinnati by 8½ games.

"It's something different every day," Beck said. "Lately we haven't been able to hold a lead, which reflects on our pitching. Other times, it's mistakes or mental errors. It's not one thing so it's kind of tough to put your finger on it."

The pitching, which started out strong like Swift, is the most obvious problem, though. Collectively, San Francisco starters are 3-12 with a 5.59 ERA during Swift's absence after going 1.7-9 with a 3.47 ERA before he was disabled.

"All the pitchers have been basically scuffling," Swift said. "The hitters have been coming through the last few games and scoring some runs but we can't seem to hold the lead. We just have to concentrate, a little more, and hopefully I can come back and pitch well and get things going again."

Swift's return should help stabilize a staff that has been reshuffled because of injuries or lack of production.

"We've been juggling pitchers back and forth between the pen and starting rotations," Beck said.

"When you have that kind of confusion, it's hard to get into a groove. People not really knowing how they're going to be used from week to week is kind of rough. But we're getting Swiftie back now and (injured pitcher Scott) Garrels after the All-Star break. That'll give us five solid starters and that will get us on a roll, I think."

Swift is aware his return has heightened expectations. After all, the Giants won all nine games that Swift started.

But first baseman Will Clark cautioned against expecting too much.

"It means a lot to us, first of all because we're getting a quality starter back," Clark said.

"But you know, Bill's not the reason we're in the position that we're in right now. I think a lot of people are putting way too much on his return. I mean, he's one guy. He can only win one game. What we need to do is play better as a team."

Swift said he was anxious to play again, although he will be held to a 50-70 pitch limit Sunday to gradually rebuild arm strength.

"The main thing was to get the shoulder soreness away," Swift said. "I don't think I've lost too much as far as my mechanics. I just think I need to take it easy this time and not put too much on it right off."

"I think I just did too much too fast," he converted reliever said. "But I'm not coming back too fast. I don't think."

Valvano's cancer saddens colleagues

The Associated Press

Dick Vitale had plans to do a talk show with Jim Valvano.

Then came the bad news: Valvano, the former North Carolina State coach turned television announcer, had cancer.

"I'm stunned, shocked," Vitale said Friday in a telephone interview from his home.

Michael Giannone, who works with Valvano's agent, Art Kaminsky, told The Charlotte Observer that the cancer was in Valvano's back. Neither he nor Valvano could be reached for comment Friday and there was no further word on the type or extent of the disease.

Word of Valvano's illness was released Thursday night on ESPN, the network that took advantage of his gift of gab and hired him as a college basketball analyst in 1989.

"We are saddened by this news," ESPN president Steve Bornstein said. "Jim is much more than an outstanding broadcaster for us. He is a good friend to many at ESPN and our thoughts and prayers are with him and his family."

Earlier in the day, Vitale had spoken with his broadcasting colleague for about 40 minutes. "He was in good spirits considering the circumstances,"

Jim Valvano ... in good spirits ...

Vitale said. "It was moments of tears, moments of laughter, moments of jubilation, just talking about so many things."

"Our prayers are with him like you can't believe. He's such a close buddy. People don't realize how close we've been."

The two became close when Valvano left his coaching job in 1990 following allegations of NCAA violations in the Wolfpack basketball program. The charges led to an NCAA investigation, which resulted in a one-year probation for N.C. State.

Ruling likely will keep runner out of Olympics

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Butch Reynolds was knocked out of the U.S. Olympic track and field trials on Friday by a federal appeals court, a lawyer for the 400-meter world record holder said there would be no further appeals of the suspension that will keep him out of the Olympics.

The International Amateur Athletics Federation suspended Reynolds 21 months ago, accusing him of using steroids. The suspension runs until three days after the end of the Olympics.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati said Friday he cannot run, and Miami Dane, one of Reynolds' lawyers, said he would not carry his fight to the U.S. Supreme Court, his only remaining recourse. Reynolds has maintained his innocence, and on Friday got a federal court to agree that he should be allowed to run in the trials.

But Judge Eugene F. Siler Jr. of the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati overruled that, saying Reynolds couldn't show that he would suffer irreparable harm by being excluded from the trials, because the IAAF had already said he would not be allowed to compete in the Olympics at Barcelona.

Letting Reynolds run could harm other athletes by eliminating them from the team, Siler ruled.

"Moreover, although the court does not condone the threat by the IAAF to disqualify anyone who might compete against (Reynolds) in preliminary competition, nevertheless, that is a possible adverse effect upon other competitors," Siler said.

Siler said the IAAF and the American Athletic Congress, America's governing body, are authorized to determine eligibility for track and field athletes. "The court should be very cautious in intervening in matters of this nature," he said.

Siler acknowledged that the dues-paying member of TAC and offered to step aside from ruling on the issue, even though he said he did not feel his affiliation would affect his decision.

Reynolds still will have a hearing on the merits of his suit against TAC and the IAAF, although it will come too late to permit him to compete in the trials.

Reynolds also has a $12.5 million damage suit pending against TAC and the IAAF. The 6th Circuit overruled U.S. District Judge Joseph Kinnerly of Columbus, Ohio, who earlier Friday had said there was clear and convincing proof that Reynolds was innocent and ordered that he be permitted to run.

Gordon, Glanville qualify for race

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Jeff Gordon shattered the track qualifying record Friday to win the pole for Saturday's $103,344 Carolina Pride NASCAR Busch Grand National Series race at Myrtle Beach Speedway.

The 20-year-old Pittsboro, Ind., driver, piloting the only Ford in the field, turned the .538-mile track at 98.595 mph.

It was the fastest of 29 cars that will start the 250-lap race and broke a record set in 1988 by Dale Earnhardt of 98.205.

Jerry Glanville, the Atlanta Falcons coach who made a switch to NASCAR racing, qualified 27th in the 29-car field.

Glanville made his series debut in the most recent race at Rougemont, N.C., two weeks ago.

CSI's Kestler holds at 4th in bareback

The Times-News

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Dennis Kestler, strength of a 75-point ride, stands fourth among bareback contestants at the College National Rodeo finals.

Roping his first calf in 7.7 seconds, Kestler stands 13 on two, more than enough place him in the top eight and well within reach of a second individual championship.

The freshman from Canada thus heads a pack of College of Southern Idaho men poised for a run at the school's first ever team title.

"Shane (West) and Bodie (Allred) didn't come out so good on their first bulls," said Coach Shawn Davis.

"But Bodie had a 69 on his first bareback ride and if both can ride their next two bulls we'll be right in the thick of it," Davis said.

CSI's other Canadian cowboy, Cam Cooper, missed out on his first mount and double-grabbed his second. But like Rocky Mountain Circuit bullriding champ West and Allred, stands in the final rounds in the key. "You can't tell until the second round," Davis said. "I've had teams with no points until the second go, then ended up second or third."

This year's final, according to three-time PRCA National Finals Rodeo champ Davis, may lack the strength required to keep CSI's last charge from reaching a successful conclusion — "the overall competition — it's the easiest I've ever seen," Davis said. "If we have a little luck we can win it."

Mets seek key to winning combination

NEW YORK (AP) — After their latest loss, it seemed all the New York Mets could do was talk about it.

Extra batting practice hasn't helped so far. Group sessions before the games to map out strategy haven't meant much, either.

The St. Louis Cardinals beat the Mets 8-3 Thursday night, sending New York to its 15th loss in 20 games. The loss left the Mets only two percentage points ahead of last-place Philadelphia in the NL East.

"You just throw your hands up and wait for our guys to get going," manager Jeff Torborg said. "They're the ones on the field, they're the ones who are trying. We have professional players here who have been through hard times before."

Following the loss to St. Louis, the Mets held a players only meeting for 26 minutes. They decided to leave the meeting sometime during the game.

"We have things to do, and we'll do it," Bobby Bonilla said. "Whenever players sit and talk, positive things come."

So far, there have been very few positives for the Mets this season. New general manager Al Harazin thought he had solved some of the Mets' problems by signing Bonilla, Eddie Murray and Willie Randolph. Harazin also made the biggest deal at the winter meetings, sending Kevin McKeon, Greg Jefferies and Keith Miller to Kansas City for Bret Saberhagen and Bill Buccha.

"On paper we liked the team we put together and still do," Harazin said. "This is the team we're going with. Things just haven't worked out so far."

For the first two months of the season the Mets were inconsistent — not losing or winning more than four straight games. In June, they have been consistently bad. New York has lost 10 of its last 13 home games.

On paper, Harazin has a pitching staff of Dwight Gooden, Saberhagen,

David Cone, Sid Fernandez and Anthony Young. "It looked like the best in baseball, certainly the most expensive."

But Gooden (4-6) is still showing signs of recovering from rotator cuff surgery and Saberhagen (3-2) hasn't pitched since mid-May because of a finger injury. Cone (6-4) and Fernandez (5-7) have been inconsistent and Young (2-5) hasn't won a game since April.

The middle infielder — Murray, Bonilla and Howard Johnson — have yet to get hot at the same time and the bottom of the order is dreadful. The Mets have been shut out nine times this year, equating last season's total. They're playing boring baseball and it's starting to show up in the stands. Attendance is down at Shea and most of Thursday's crowd gave up after seven innings.

"It just seems we haven't been able to get the big hits," said Torborg, who is still learning a new league and new players. "It's not so much where we

Analysts attribute small rally to traders seeking 'bargains'

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market recouped a little of its recent losses with an on-again, off-again rally Friday, riding out a "triple witching hour" in the process.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, down 130.01 points from June 8 through Thursday's close, rebounded 11.23 points to 3,285.35. The average finished the week with a net loss of 69.01 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by nearly 3 to 2 in the daily tally on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to an estimated 234.32 million shares as of 4 p.m. EDT, against 215.10 million in the previous session.

Other than that heavier-than-usual trading, the market showed no disruptive effects from a quarterly witching hour involving expiring stock-index futures and options.

Analysts said stocks benefited from buying by traders looking for "bargains" after a half.

They drew some encouragement from overnight gains in foreign markets, including

Japan, where indexes earlier this week hit their lowest levels since 1986.

In addition, brokers noted that the recent drop in the market came without any major apparent change in the outlook for a continued-moderate-recovery-in-economic activity. Among actively traded blue chips, Coca-Cola rose ¼ to 40½; Intel ¼ to 48½; Philip Morris ¼ to 72½; General Motors 1¼ to 43½, and American Telephone & Telegraph ¼ to 42½.

Elsewhere several individual stocks were held by earnings disappointments.

Qualex tumbled 5¼ to 22½. Late Thursday the company said it expects earnings for the fiscal quarter that ends July 31 to be off as much as 50 percent from the comparable period a year ago.

Huffy Corp. fell 3½ to 13½. The company estimated a drop of 25 percent to 30 percent in second-quarter profits; citing problems in its bicycle operations, and said it had decided to stop making its Cross Sport bicycle.

Lifetime Corp., meanwhile, lost 3¼ to 11½ after issuing a projection of sharply lower second-quarter operating earnings that it attributed to slowing growth in revenues and stepped-up pressure on profit margins.

Shares of Lifetime, which provides home health-care services, have lost more than two-thirds of their value from as high as 37½ earlier this year.

General Physics, which said its second-quarter profits would be a lot lower than previously expected, plunged 3¼ to 5½.

"Among other stocks in the spotlight, EQK Green Acres L.P. fell 2½ to 8. The shopping-mall operator cut its quarterly dividend Thursday from 34.5 cents per unit to 27.5 cents per unit.

Advanced Micro Devices was heavily traded, up ½ to 9½. The stock fell 5½ points Thursday after a jury ruled that AMD could pay a key item of Intel's microprocessor technology.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"It is a hard matter, my fellow citizens, to argue with the belly, since it has no ears."

-Cato the Elder-

"You went the wrong way in diamonds," said an unhappy North accusingly.

"I did not," replied South. "I finished in that direction in case West had Q-x-x. I could then have picked up the suit for an easy slam."

Both were completely off the mark. Declarer ruffed the heart lead in dummy and drew trumps. He then started diamonds by cashing his king and running the jack, losing to East's queen. East exited with a low club, but it didn't matter. Since South could not avoid the club loser, he took only 11 tricks. Should South have finessed diamonds the other way?

The correct answer is that he shouldn't have finessed in diamonds at all. Instead, after drawing trumps, he should have ruffed his last heart in dummy and taken a club finesse. This loses to West's king, and West must make a helpful lead. When East's club queen appears, South can discard a diamond on dummy's good club and win the game. The focal point in the play of the minors is to establish a priority for finessing. If South finesses in diamonds and loses, he must still lose a club and the slam as well. If he finesses in clubs twice and wins only once, there is an excellent chance to eliminate the need for the diamond finesse.

Bridge bidding chart with North, East, South, West hands and a table for 'BID WITH THE ACES'.

Vulnerable: North-South. Dealer: South. The bidding: South West North East. Pass 4 2 NT 4 2. Pass 4 2 NT 4 2. Pass 4 2 NT 4 2.

ANSWER: Two hearts. Shows a six-card suit and moderate values. It is non-forcing and non-invitational.
