Noriega draws 40-year pen term

The Associated Press

MIAMI — Manuel Noriega was sentenced Friday to 40 years in prison by a federal judge who insisted that politics played no part in the ousted Panamanian leader's drug and racketeering conviction.
Noriega, who surrendered to U.S. troops in the 1989 invasion of Panama, had faced a maximum 120-year sentence.
Before he was sentenced, the former general, wearing his full-dress military uniform for the first time since his capture, read a statement to the court for nearly three hours. He maintained his innocence and said the United States persecuted him politically.

"I accuse George Herbert Walker Bush of using his power and authority to influence and subvert the criminal justice system of the United States to condemn me," Noriega told U.S. District Judge William Hoelveler. Noriega spoke in Spanish and paused periodically so interpreters could translate to English.
Hoelveler replied that Noriega failed to understand U.S. criminal justice.
"The health of the system is that it is not subject to politics," the judge said. "Politics were not and should not be part of this case."

Hoelveler ordered Noriega, 58, to continue being held at Metropolitan Correctional Center south of Miami until the judge decides on his attorneys' argument that he shouldn't be sent to a regular federal prison because he is a prisoner of war.
A jury convicted Noriega in April of eight of 10 drug and racketeering counts charging that he turned Panama into a drug way station, money-laundering center and haven for Colombia's Medellin cartel.

At 92, Hagerman's Faussett is America's cowboy emeritus

By Terrell Williams

HAGERMAN — At 92, Tom Faussett has been named the nation's oldest working cowboy. Faussett, who has busted broncs on the ranges of Nevada and Idaho since 1910, was so honored at the "Old Hand" contest last week in Haines, Ore. His old friend Dick Cook of Hagerman nominated him, and Faussett beat out a dozen other cowhands from throughout the country for the honor on the basis of his age and lifelong occupation.

"Tom's just the oldest cowboy I know," Cook said. "He doesn't hear very well, but he's still fairly active at 92. He was a well-respected hand in Nevada and Idaho, and he was a good roper."

Faussett doesn't travel like a colt anymore, but he still has a regular routine.

Appeals court upholds ban on waste for WIPP

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court on Friday upheld an order permanently barring the government from shipping nuclear waste to an underground storage facility near Carlsbad, N.M.

A unanimous panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled that the Interior Department had overstepped its authority by making public land available for the site.

The court upheld a permanent injunction against the plan issued last Jan. 31 by U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn. The plan was opposed by the state of New Mexico, joined by Texas and several environmental groups.

The case was heard by Circuit Judges Abner J. Mikva, Ruth B. Ginsburg and Karen LeCraft Henderson.

Dan Reicher, senior attorney for the Natural Resources Defense Council, a party to the case, said, "The important victory is that we've prevented the Energy Department from making an end-run around Congress. Congress now will choose under what conditions the waste site opens, and it's quite clear Congress is more willing than the Energy Department to impose string environmental controls on the use of the facility."

Energy Department spokesman Joseph Karpinski said that the department was disappointed with the ruling but that it "underscores the need for prompt completion of pending congressional action" on the facility.

Penn had ruled that Congress has not authorized the storage of radioactive waste at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

The Energy Department had planned to ship as many as 8,500 drums of plutonium-contaminated waste from Idaho to the plant 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad. The test program was intended to help officials decide whether to use underground salt beds as a permanent disposal site for radioactive waste.

The Energy Department took over the site Oct. 3 from the Interior Department after negotiations in Congress on a land transfer plan broke down.

Interest in the issue developed through much of the West because the first shipment would come from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls, traveling through Utah and Colorado en route.

OSHA fines firm $4,700 over death

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration has agreed to a $4,700 fine against a Minnesota company for the death of a construction worker in February at a construction site near Munnich.

OSHA at first sought $13,500 against M.A. Mortenson Co. for the death of Eugene A. Berry of Eden, Berry, 52, died Feb. 15 when the boom of a crane fell and struck an electrical line, causing electricity to jump from the line and strike him.

Mortenson official Greg Bistram declined comment on the settlement.

Berry's death was one of two at the construction site for a hydroelectric project below Milner Dam. Mike Torrans, 29, of Oakdale, Calif., died Jan. 9 when the earth-moving machine he was operating plunged into frigid waters of the Snake River and pinned him against ice. OSHA is seeking a $3,750 fine against Ames Construction Co. of Burnsville, Minn., a subcontractor at the site, for that incident. Ames, which employed Torrans, is contesting the fine.

Ames Construction Safety and Health Director Roger McBride declined comment on specifics in the case. The company is preparing for a hearing with OSHA to "discuss the citation," McBride said.

"We feel we had a safe job site," McBride said. "We feel the citation was unwarranted. The purpose of the hearing is to discuss the citation, and our intent is to have it dismissed."

"It's quite a tragedy," McBride said. "It's a dangerous industry. We do everything we can."

Mortenson is the general contractor at the site, where Idaho Power Co. is building a 770,000-kilowatt power plant. It's part of a cooperative

Helsinki, Sarajevo — A5

HELSINKI, Finland — The United States and its Western allies agreed Friday to move warships and helicopters into the Adriatic Sea to increase pressure on Serbia. It is the first Western military action to cope with Europe's worst crisis since the end of the Cold War.

The decision to begin "naval surveillance" along the coastline of what was once Yugoslavia resulted from an Italian proposal adopted by the Western European Union, the security arm of the European Community.

The United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization quickly joined the decision, and U.S. officials said that U.S. Navy ships were already on their way into the Adriatic.

European and U.S. officials acknowledged that the naval operation was only a limited, initial step. The multinational fleet will be authorized only to monitor ships carrying cargo to Serbia and its ally Montenegro to see whether they are carrying weapons or fuel in violation of U.N. sanctions — not to stop or search them.

But the step has a wider significance because it could lead to more "intrusive" measures later and because it marked the first time that the allies — led by Italy and other European countries, not the United States — have intervened, even if haltingly, in the continent's brush-fire ethnic conflicts.

The naval operation, which drew promises of participation from the United States, Britain, France, Germany and Italy was aimed at increasing the effectiveness of U.N. sanctions that prohibit shipment of most goods except food and medicine to Serbia and Montenegro; the two remaining members of the Yugoslav federation.

Weather summary

Warmer temperatures and variable cloudiness developed over the Magic Valley on Friday. Winds remained light and there was no rainfall in the area. Similar conditions prevailed throughout the state, although some portions of Idaho had more cloudiness. Little change appears in prospect for the weekend although clouds may increase along with the chance of showers. The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 93 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley reported the coldest at 33 degrees. Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 115 degrees at Bullhead City, Ariz. The lowest was 33 degrees at Jackson, Wyo.

Thunderstorms widespread as Southeast steams

The Associated Press
Thunderstorms were scattered across the nation Friday, and heat and humidity blanketed the Southeast. At midday, showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the central Rockies, the Plains, the middle Mississippi Valley, the Ohio Valley and into Michigan, the National Weather Service said. Half an inch in diameter hail fell near Akron, Ohio, and wind gusted to 64 mph during a thunderstorm at Pittsburgh, the weather service said. Early in the day, hail as big as tennis balls accumulated up to 3 inches deep in parts of southwestern Indiana, smashing car windshields, battering crops and killing small pigs and chickens, authorities reported. Heavy rain also was scattered over parts of Missouri. During the night, parts of Kansas City got more than 3.5 inches of rain and a tornado touched down on the city's north side without causing any damage.

Forecasts

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Mostly cloudy today and tonight. A slight chance of showers or thundershowers. Westerly winds 10 to 20 mph. Highs in the upper 70s to lower 80s. Lows in the upper 40s to lower 50s. Sunday partly cloudy. A slight chance of showers or thundershowers. Highs in the upper 70s to lower 80s.
Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley: Mostly cloudy today and Sunday with a chance of showers or thundershowers. Highs in the lower to mid-70s. Lows tonight in the upper 30s to mid-40s.
Extended forecast: Southern Idaho - Partly cloudy Monday and Tuesday with a slight chance of valley showers increasing to a chance in the mountains. Mostly sunny Wednesday. Highs in the mid 70s to mid 80s. Lows in the mid 40s to mid 50s.
Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah - Variable clouds with scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers today and Sunday. South winds 10-20 mph otherwise gusty near thundershowers. Cooler Sunday. Highs today in the upper 80s to near 90 and Sunday in the mid-80s. Lows 60-65.
Elko County - widely scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers. Highs mid-80s to low 90s. Lows from the mid-40s to around 60. Partly cloudy with a chance of thundershowers Sunday. Highs from the 80s to low 90s.

Showers and thundershowers also were scattered over southern Arizona and the northern Pacific Coast. Heaviest rainfall reports during the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT were all half an inch or less. A heat advisory was in effect through Saturday over parts of Georgia, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama and West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle. The weather service said heat indexes — a measure of discomfort that combines temperature and humidity — would reach 105 to 115 over parts of those states. Cape Hatteras, N.C., warmed to a record high Friday of 96, and Daytona Beach, Fla., hit a record 96. At the other extreme, Casper, Wyo., cooled to a record-typing low of 41. Friday's low for the Lower 48 states was 35 at Truckee, Calif. Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EST ranged from 52 at Houghton, Mich., to 102 at Needles, Calif.

Democrats pour in for convention

NEW YORK (AP)— From the arrival of thousands of balloons at Madison Square Garden to the drumbeat call for change from Bill Clinton and Al Gore, Democrats advanced their bid to hold next week's national convention. The GOP dispatched two governors to the Democrats' convention city to freshen their attacks on Gore as a Southern-speaking liberal. Clinton countered quickly. "That's the only word they know... I don't think that they'll be able to make that old dog hunt." Clinton said he and Gore, a two-term Tennessee senator, would be hunting instead for the support of voters who want change — a word the two men used more than 20 times in their first joint news conference.

"I believe the American people really want a change, and they're looking around to see how we can get it together as a country," said Gore.

In the convention city, the transformation of a basketball and hockey arena into a political hall was striking. Texas Gov. Ann Richards checked out the custom-built podium where she will reign for four days as chairwoman.

Rows of purple chairs were lined up on the Garden floor for the delegates who will nominate Clinton and ratify his platform, with standards in place for each state. Balloons by the thousands were hoisted to the ceiling, to be released on cue when the Arkansas governor is nominated on Wednesday night and again on Thursday, when he and Gore speak.

New York was behaving like New York. Stringfellow, a topless bar, proudly announced it had hired 30 additional dancers for the convention period that begins on Monday.

In all, nearly 5,000 delegates and 15,000 reporters were expected in town. Clinton was arriving Saturday. Gore follows on Sunday.

The polls pointed to a volatile three-way race among Clinton, Bush and independent Ross Perot, with the three men with one another less than four months from Election Day.

Twenty-four hours after he selected Gore, Clinton's choice was the subject of continued debate among politicians and pundits.

Clinton said he chose Gore — a young Southern moderate, a man much like himself — not out of any political calculations but because Gore would be able to take over as president.

Hard rock strains help drive bats batty

LAYTON, Utah (AP) — Crank up the music! That's what Robert and Susan Isbell are doing since discovering more than 100 bats in the attic and wall space of their 12-year-old home. Robert Isbell said Friday he had driven out about half the bats by playing rock music in the attic and blasting the creatures with hard-rock music. He plans to make it "so miserable" for the bats that they have "no other choice" but to leave. Once they do, he will foam in the wall space. De Anne Hess, director of Davis County animal control and the Isbells' neighbor, said the bats are commonly known as fruit bats or little brown bats. Hess, the Isbells and others began Thursday trying to capture the bats one by one by forcing them out through cracks into assorted jars and later releasing them. Hess said none of the captured bats has tested positive for rabies, and those still in the home are being kept normally. "We do bats all the time — this is just the first time we have done this many," she said. Hess said she has no idea what drew the bats to this particular home, and neither do the owners. "It's just bizarre. It's not an old house. I'm not a dirty housekeeper," said Susan Isbell. Hess said she suspects it will be several days before they can scare away or capture the remaining bats, which are being released unharmed.

bad," Fausett said this week, while frying up a pantful of bacon. Through a picture window of his front room, he kept a blue eye on his two horses grazing in a sloped green pasture overlooking Hagerman Valley.

On his worn belt buckle, a cowboy rode a bucking bronco. In a typical day, the white, wire-haired cowpoke irrigates his 22 acres, rides his tractor to the end of his driveway, reads horse magazines and cowboy poetry, goes to a livestock auction or drives 55 miles to Fairfield to check on his small herd of cattle.

But riding horses for pleasure is one thing he has never done and never will.

"I ride horses to work, to break 'em or to work cows," he stated. "People would say, 'Let's take a horseback ride,' but I never did. Whenever I saddled up a horse, I had something to do."

Cook said Fausett helped brand this spring and, until recently, used his hunting dog as a pointer.

Born in Tuscadero, Nev., in 1900, Fausett was breaking horses by the age of 10 and became a professional cowboy at age 14 at the Dash-S ranch near Three Creek.

In 1925, he was hired by Utah Construction, a large cattle outfit located southeast of Wells, Nev. For 14 years, he broke horses from the range, rounded up cattle, doctored the animals, cut ice from creeks, drove hay wagons to feed and eventually took over as foreman.

In the evenings around the bunkhouse, he taught himself how to braid and knot rawhide by taking other old rawhide reins apart. For years, Fausett cut, dried and twisted rawhide strings together, becoming an expert and making an impressive number of long lariats, braided reins and lany headstalls.

Fausett said Utah Construction had about 42,000 cattle, and he recalled the scene when 1,200 bulls were driven to the ranch from different directions and put together in a huge pen before being turned out with the cows for breeding.

"Talk about a bullfight, they had it there," he said. "You couldn't see nothing for the dust and dirt flying in the air."

Fausett later had his own 500-acre spread near Jarbridge, Nev., where he raised cattle and had up to 50 horses at a time to train and sell. He and his wife, Chloe, raised three daughters.

In 1955, they moved to Hagerman and, starting with 150 acres, raised livestock at the place Fausett still calls home.

After a heart attack in 1970, he sold much of his land. His wife died in 1984 and, two years ago, he was seriously injured when a horse threw him.

"I had roped a calf by the leg and the roped stacked and my horse stepped over it," Fausett recalled. "I dallied and started to drag the calf to the (branding) fire and that horse bucked me off."

"I had six ribs broke and a lung punctured and I was knocked out," he said. "That kind of made me a little mad."

Since that wreck, Fausett walks carefully. "I'll keep over pretty easy," he said. He uses a gentle horse when there is work to be done.

"I don't know how many horses I've had," he said, "but I could count you the good horses I've owned."

Out on the range, he explained, if a riding or harness horse was needed, a wild horse was roped, saddled or hitched and used.

"I never had nothing but work broncs," he said. When asked how he has remained so active for so long, Fausett thought awhile and just shrugged. "I guess I just lived the right kind of life," he said. "I've rode a good many miles in a day, I'll tell you. I'd hate to do it again."

Clinton: Gore beats Quayle hands down

Bill Clinton, Sen. Al Gore appear at Friday press conference.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Bill Clinton on Friday pointedly held out his vice presidential choice of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore as a telling contrast with President Bush's pick of Dan Quayle.

"This is my first decision," Clinton said at a joint news conference with Gore. "That was George Bush's first decision. I think if we're evaluated on them, I should be elected president."

The Arkansas governor said Gore, a 16-year veteran of Congress, would be his point man for moving proposals on jobs, health care and education through Congress in the first 100 days of a Clinton White House.

"In short, I don't want Al Gore to be the kind of vice president that sits in the United States Senate waiting to vote to break a tie," Clinton said. "I want him to break the logjam in Washington, to give us a government that works for all the people again."

Gore pledged to take on the assignment with "great relish and enthusiasm." He asked voters skeptical of their promise of change to remember that every Communist government in Eastern Europe had fallen in 100 days.

"Now it's our turn here in the United States of America," Gore said as the two fished questions in front of a newly minted red-white-and-blue "Clinton-Gore" banner.

The two Democrats took a morning jog Friday and stopped at a McDonald's for coffee before meeting with reporters at a hotel. They dropped out before Gore headed home to Carthage, Tenn.

The few Democratic ticket planned a rally Saturday in Gore's hometown, then the two were set to travel to Nashville for an appearance at an NAACP convention.

Clinton was moving on the Democratic National Convention in New York on Saturday evening. Gore was scheduled to meet him there Sunday on the eve of the four-day convention, where they will officially claim the presidential and vice presidential nominations.

At the news conference, Clinton acknowledged that his selection of Gore, a fellow baby boomer and Southerner, defied traditional logic.

"I tried to take the political calculations out of this process and ask who would be the best president," Clinton said.

Gore grew up in Washington and spent 16 years in Congress, but Clinton said he thought it unfair to link Gore with Washington's gridlock, especially since Republicans have ruled for the last 12 years.

"There are people in our party who have contributed to the paralysis there," Clinton said. "I don't think you can put that at Al Gore's feet."

He said the Quayle-led Republican argument that Bush was the candidate best suited to protect American family values was "patently absurd."

Clinton, a five-term governor, said the ticket's youth — he is 45 and his running mate 44 — masked the lengthy experience both he and Gore have in government.

"He has an awful lot of experience and a genuine record of achievement that is nationally and internationally recognized," Clinton said. He also laughed off a question about the immediate Republican effort to paint Gore as a liberal.

"That's the same dog they trot out in every election and I don't think it will hurt this time," Clinton said.

Gore chimed in that some critics were calling him too liberal and others too conservative. "I guess we're doing something right."

Clinton said his selection of a white moderate did not mean he was taking the Democratic Party's traditional minority constituencies for granted. "We're going after everybody's vote," he said.

Hollywood likes Gore choice despite Tipper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood activists have mainly forgiven Tipper Gore for her drive to put warning labels on albums deemed violent or obscene and they welcome the choice of husband Al as Bill Clinton's running mate.

"A terrific candidate," Michael Medavoy, chairman of TriStar Pictures, said after Clinton picked the Tennessee senator for the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket Thursday.

"With his environmental record and his knowledge of foreign relations, I think he's a really good balance for Bill Clinton," said Medavoy, a Clinton supporter.

While that reflected a widely held view among Hollywood Democrats, a dissenting opinion came from Luther Campbell, former leader of the raunchy rap group 2 Live Crew. He said he remains upset over Mrs. Gore's crusade.

"Look at the choices we have to choose from — Perot wants to put a fence around the inner city and give us a curfew," Campbell said. "Clinton has picked a man and his wife that are against black people and black music."

"So all I can suggest is that we all vote for Bush," he said. "Four more years of the same bull is better than the other choices."

His remark about Perot evidently referred to the independent presidential contender's call for tougher measures to combat drug pushers.

All the same, most entertainment industry figures savvily inquired with Mrs. Gore because of her campaign for warning labels is now ancient history.

And they not only admire Gore's Senate record but see him as a formidable opponent for Vice President Dan Quayle, considered an archenemy by many because he has made Hollywood bashing a Republican campaign theme.

"I think he's a lot more attractive than Dan Quayle is," said Danny Goldberg, senior vice president of Atlantic Records and chair of the ACLU of Southern California. He called Quayle "the nightmare for all of us."

Goldberg said he wasn't concerned about Mrs. Gore's role in the national spotlight. She made enemies in the recording industry in the mid-1980s after calling for warning labels.

Perot: Restore U.S. dominance in autos

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Ross Perot, whose bitter battle to restructure General Motors has become a $700 million legend, courted voters in the heart of auto country Friday with a pledge to make America "the car capital of the world again."

"In Michigan, I don't have to tell you what the economic status of this country is. You know we've got work to do, right?" the undeclared presidential candidate told an estimated 2,500 listeners at a rally here.

"Can anybody here go home tonight and sleep peacefully until we are the car capital of the world again?" Perot asked. "Actually, it's hard to believe we're not, right? By God, we were, weren't we? And we can be again."

A handful of autoworkers from GM's Willow Run plant, scheduled to be shut down next summer as part of the automaker's massive restructuring, joined the rally on the state Capitol steps.

Spurred by Perot's criticism of free trade talks with Mexico and his efforts to shake up GM, half of Willow Run's 1,900 active employees have signed petitions to put him on the Michigan ballot as an independent candidate, a volunteer said.

Perot sold his data processing company to GM, then took a seat on the automaker's board and finally was bought out for $700 million because of his constant criticism.

"Our country right now, in plain Michigan talk, is where General Motors was in the mid-1980s," Perot said.

Vote will test assisted suicide

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California voters will decide this fall whether to allow physician-assisted suicide of the terminally ill.

Proposition 161 would allow mentally competent adults to request a doctor's assistance to kill themselves during the final stages of a terminal disease.

Organizers launched their campaign in support of the measure on Thursday — two days after it received its official ballot designation from the state — at news conferences in San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

"Every human being should have the right to control their own destiny, to avoid pain and suffering, and to die with dignity," said Robert Risley, a Los Angeles lawyer.

Perot

He recalled Willow Run's role as a bomber plant in World War II.

"How you'd like to try to fight World War III without any manufacturing capabilities? ... If you don't have anything, you can't convert it folks."

But Perot offered no specifics on how to revitalize the auto industry, saying simply that Americans had to "out think, out create and out work everybody else in the world."

Perot's volunteers gathered 300,000 signatures — even though only 25,000 were needed — and carried petitions up four flights of stairs to the secretary of state's office.

Perot pointed to his standing in the polls. An NBC-Wall Street Journal poll released Wednesday show a statistical tie with Perot at 33 percent, President Bush at 31 percent and Democrat Bill Clinton at 28 percent.

And according to a poll released Friday the three candidates are in a virtual dead heat in Illinois. Clinton had 30 percent, Perot 29 percent and Bush 28 percent in the telephone poll of 823 registered voters, conducted July 1 through July 5 by Political/Media Research Inc. of Washington, D.C., for the Copley News Service. The margin of error is 3.5 percentage points.

Report shows microscopic inflation, economic growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prices paid by wholesalers rose modestly in June as widespread declines nearly offset a run-up in oil costs, the government said Friday in a report illustrating weak economic demand.

The 0.2 percent gain in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index was half the 0.4 percent rise in May. For the first half of the year, the index increased at an annual rate of only 2 percent.

"The good news is you need a microscope to see inflation but the bad news is you need a microscope to see economic growth," said Ron Schreibman, vice president of the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, whose members pay the prices measured by the index.

In June, energy prices were up 2.3 percent, the biggest advance since October 1990, when Iraq's invasion of Kuwait was sending oil prices soaring.

But food prices rose just 0.2 percent. And excluding the volatile food and energy components, the index edged down 0.1 percent, the first decline in five years.

Economists said the mild inflation—outside the energy sector—is both a symptom of the extraordinarily slow recovery from the 1990-91 recession and an important condition for better economic growth later on.

"Low inflation... is about the only good news coming out of the weak economic environment," said Mark Zandi of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

"It lays the foundation for stronger growth going forward," he said. "It's good for the profitability of most businesses. Producer prices reflect the costs that most businesses have to pay. If they're not increasing, that goes right to the bottom line."

The lack of inflation pressure has allowed the Federal Reserve to cut interest rates, in an attempt to stimulate business and consumer borrowing, with little fear of rekindling inflation.

Friday's price report, according to analysts, offers no reason why the central bank cannot cut rates again. If the economy weakens further, the Fed's most recent cut came last week when it reduced its discount rate, the interest charged on its loans to banks, to a 29-year low of 3 percent.

This week, in response, mortgage rates fell to new lows. According to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.13 percent this week, the lowest since July 1973. One-year, adjustable-rate loans averaged 5.56, the lowest since the corporation began tracking ARMs in 1984.

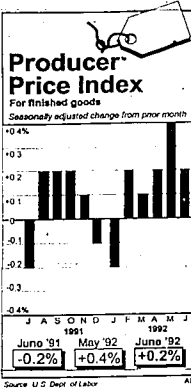

Gasoline costs rose 7.4 percent last month following a 2 percent gain in May. Fuel oil prices jumped 9 percent after a 5.7 percent rise. Natural gas was up 1.6 percent but residential electricity fell 0.8 percent.

Fresh fruit prices fell 10 percent in June and vegetable prices tumbled 13.7 percent. Beef and pork were down 2.2 percent and pork 4.2 percent. There also were drops in the cost of eggs, rice, turkeys and candy.

However, prices jumped 13.5 percent for fish and also were up for pasta, chickens, cooking oils, soft drinks and dairy products.

Tobacco prices, which had risen 7.3 percent in May, fell back 3.3 percent in June. Auto prices dropped 0.8 percent last month following a 0.5 percent decline the month before.

Home electronic equipment fell 0.5 percent. Women's clothing was down 0.4 percent.

Knight-Ridder News Service

SUN VALLEY — Sen. Bob Kerrey greeted the news Thursday that Bill Clinton had bypassed him as a running mate with "far more relief than disappointment."

Kerrey, D-Nebr., learned of Clinton's choice of Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., at 6 a.m. MDT from CNN. Two hours later he received official notification from Clinton, who apologized that the decision had been leaked, Kerrey said.

Clinton didn't make the final decision "until midnight last night, and it was difficult," Kerrey said Clinton told him.

Kerrey and Clinton had a mid-night interview earlier this week in Little Rock, Ark., about the nomination. Clinton's short list for the position reportedly included Gore, Kerrey, Harris Wofford, D-Pa., and Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind.

Kerrey flew Wednesday to Idaho for a retreat for corporate leaders at this luxury ski resort built by the Union Pacific in the 1930s in an effort by Averell Harriman to compete with resorts in the Alps.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale reinforced Kerrey's feeling of relief when the two chatted Thursday in the lobby of the Sun Valley lodge. Both are here attending a retreat for business, finance and political leaders.

"This is a big weight off your shoulders," Mondale told Kerrey. "You don't know you just escaped a bullet."

Kerrey had spent an hour Wednesday night talking to Mondale, vice president under Jimmy Carter and the 1984 Democratic presidential nominee.

Kerrey said he told Clinton Tuesday night that "if he thought I would help him and the country, I would do it."

He said Clinton asked for a recommendation for the slate if Kerrey weren't selected, Kerrey said. "I told him, 'For the election, Al Gore. To govern, Jay Rockefeller...'"

Sen. Jay Rockefeller, D-Va., was said to be on Clinton's secondary list.

A Clinton-Gore ticket offers a variety of strengths, Kerrey said. "Bill Clinton has thought considerably about the deterioration of the status of the middle class. It was the core of his message that carried him to the nomination," Kerrey said.

"Al Gore has emphasized the deteriorating status of the world environment," Kerrey said. "Those are the dominating issues in our country and the world."

The question of an all-Southern ticket "is not a big issue," Kerrey said.

Another participant in the retreat, Omaha billionaire Warren Buffett, disagreed.

"I don't think it's the slickest choice," Buffett told Kerrey when they crossed paths Thursday.

Kerrey said a number of his Nebraska supporters, including his brother, Bill, and sister, Jesse Rasmussen, opposed him joining Clinton on the ticket. However, Kerrey pursued the idea once he learned he was on Clinton's short list.

"I did make the case for myself. But I did not feel a life-or-death need to do it."

"Kerrey thought he was under serious consideration because Clinton outlined their combined strengths at an earlier meeting. Some of those strengths were the same ones Gore brings to the ticket, including a generational appeal to younger voters."

Clinton told Kerrey that his backgrounds as governors, making policy decisions on a variety of issues, was a plus.

"Our pasts and backgrounds are very similar, not counting that I went to war for four years and he didn't," Kerrey said. "If I had been born in 1947 or '48, I might not have gone, either."

Kerrey is 48, three years older than Clinton. Kerrey faced the draft in 1966 and enlisted in the Navy. Clinton didn't face the draft until 1969. By then, opposition to the Vietnam War had grown stronger.

The last two weeks were very disruptive, Kerrey said, because his efforts and those of his staff were shifted almost totally from his Senate duties toward meeting Clinton campaign requests for information.

"It was very distracting and time-consuming," said Kerrey, who has just recently refocused on his Senate duties after ending his own bid for the Democratic presidential campaign March 4.

Returning to a full-time national campaign could have hurt him with Nebraskans, Kerrey said.

"It would have been more than just missing votes," he said. "Now my time and energy is back on the Senate."

Paul Johnson, Kerrey's chief of staff, said he didn't think Kerrey's consideration by Clinton would either help or hurt him.

"People don't remember or care much one way or the other that you are one of the top four," Johnson said.

Johnson said he and other staff members were wrapped up in the vice presidential speculation.

"There is a sense of relief now," Johnson said. "There would have been pros and cons of his being on the ticket."

Bob Kerrey could have added "a lot of pizzazz" to the ticket. He would have been very good at pointing out the deficiencies of George Bush and Ross Perot.

Briefly

Court rejects Hazelwood conviction

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The Alaska Court of Appeals on Friday threw out a misdemeanor conviction against the captain of the tanker Exxon Valdez, the source of the nation's worst oil spill, saying the state used tainted evidence.

Joseph Hazelwood was skipper of the 987-foot tanker but not on the bridge when it rammed Bligh Reef in Prince William Sound early on the morning of March 24, 1989. The wreck tipped the ship's hull Slope crude oil into the water.

The spill — the nation's worst — wreaked devastation on birds, fish and other wildlife and the thick oil coated hundreds of miles of rocky shoreline.

Airline found guilty of misconduct

NEW YORK — Jurors decided Friday that Pan Am was guilty of willful misconduct in allowing a bomb to be smuggled aboard the jumbo jet that exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing 270 people.

The lawsuit by a group of the victims' survivors sought $300 million or more. The damages, which would be paid by Pan Am's insurers, will be awarded later.

Under international treaties, liability damages are limited to $75,000 for each victim, unless willful negligence is proved.

The verdict came on the third day of deliberations after an 11-week trial in U.S. District Court. It brought a burst of smiles, tears and hugs from the dozens of victims' relatives present.

Report: Postmaster inflated numbers

WASHINGTON — Former House Postmaster Robert Rota inflated mail-handling statistics by 100 million pieces a year to justify more political patronage workers for the loosely-run House postal system, according to sources familiar with a draft investigative report.

The report, delayed by partisan squabbling over its contents, also will place before the House ethics committee and the Justice Department the names of 13 House members who were identified during the probe, said the sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Democrats and Republicans involved in the probe agree that the institution's internal, independently-run mail system was rife with mismanagement and abuse of political patronage, said the officials.

Keating jury awards damages

TUCSON — A federal jury awarded at least $2.1 billion in damages Friday against Charles Keating Jr. and three co-defendants for swindling thousands of elderly and other savings and loan investors.

Jurors deliberated for eight days, capping a civil fraud trial in which more than 20,000 class-action plaintiffs claimed losses of $288.7 million and sued for $1.2 billion under federal and Arizona racketeering statutes.

They determined Saudi European Investment Corp., Conley Wolfswinkel and Continental Southern Inc. had conspired with Keating and officers in American Continental Corp. and its Lincoln Savings subsidiary to mislead regulators and keep his savings and loan afloat by continued sales of junk bonds.

Casino riverboat leaves Iowa

FORT MADISON — Iowa was down to three floating casinos Friday after the Emerald Lady left the state's waters to join its sister ship on route to a new home and hopes of profit in Biloxi, Miss.

Hours after the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis cleared the way, the casino boat sailed out of the state Thursday night.

Another casino boat, the The Diamond Lady, which had been based in Bettendorf, left Iowa on Wednesday. It had been the first riverboat to begin operating in Iowa waters on April 1, 1991, when limited-stakes gaming became legal in the state.

Group: Abortion pills should be legal

NEW YORK — Abortion-rights advocates told a federal judge Friday that French-made abortion pills seized by federal agents should be returned to the pregnant woman who brought them into the United States.

The federal Food and Drug Administration has not approved the RU486 pills, which are widely available in some European countries.

Leona Benteen was stopped by Customs officers after she arrived on a flight from London on July 1 carrying a dozen RU486 pills, enough to terminate her pregnancy, now in its sixth week.

Organizers of Ms. Benteen's trip, Abortion Rights Mobilization, had alerted authorities to initiate a challenge of FDA policy.

U.S. District Judge Charles P. Sifton said he would rule Tuesday.

Needle plans draw criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Giving drug addicts clean needles does little to stem the spread of AIDS and helps perpetuate the drug problem, says the head of the government's anti-drug programs.

"Our gains against drug use have been hard-won, and this is no time to jeopardize them by insinuating needle exchange programs," said Bob Martinez, head of the Office of Drug Control Policy.

Advocates of needle exchange disputed Martinez' findings, saying the programs save the government millions of dollars a day in the cost of caring for people who otherwise might have been infected by the AIDS virus. The virus often is spread among drug users sharing needles.

Baker calls on Yugoslavia to withdraw Serbian militia

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — The Bush administration, meeting for the first time with Yugoslavia's new leader, demanded it "withdraw, disband and disarm" Serbian militia from Bosnia.

The United States joined European naval operations off the Yugoslav coast, but President Bush said he was still reluctant to commit ground troops.

Nine Western European nations decided to send five or six ships to help enforce U.N. sanctions against Yugoslavia, and U.S. officials indicated an American ship would join a parallel NATO force under allied command.

In a 45-minute meeting with Milan Panic, the designated premier of Yugoslavia, Secretary of State James Baker said the administration wanted to be sure the Yugoslav leadership did not "misunderstand the American position."

"I told Mr. Panic quite bluntly that we do not question in any way his motives or aims ... but that the world would now demand deeds from Yugoslavia, not just words," Baker said.

Milan Panic, designated premier of Yugoslavia, says, "Be patient." Panic later said he told Baker he would try to stop the bloodshed but could make no guarantees. "I'm no magician. Be patient with me."

from the disintegrated state of Yugoslavia. The international community is flying emergency food and medical supplies to the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo, which is under a "siege that is causing widespread hunger and hardship."

Closing out his last overseas trip before the November election, Bush flew home to his seaside vacation home at Kennebunkport, Maine, and planned to drop out of sight for most of the next week.

U.S. officials have put out a medley of signals on the Bosnian crisis, warning the Serbs that all necessary steps will be taken to get relief to Sarajevo while stating that no American ground troops would be committed.

In Washington, a senior military officer speaking on condition he not be identified said an American frigate, the USS Jack Williams, would participate in NATO operations in the Adriatic Sea.

The officer said the NATO force of some seven ships would monitor movements off the Yugoslav coast but was not authorized to board ships to search for cargo violating U.N. sanctions. Two U.S. ships that moved into the Adriatic on Thursday — the USS Iwo Jima and the USS Biddle — will have no direct role in the NATO operation, the officer said.

Before he left, Bush said he was "reluctant to get bogged down" in any military intervention to end the fighting in Yugoslavia. For the time being, he said, the United Nations should take the lead in getting humanitarian relief to Bosnia.

"I think we're embarked collectively on a proper path for now," Bush said in an interview with PBS' "MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour." He cited "a reluctance on the part of people to go storming into a situation that is very complicated."

Bush said U.S. warships that are part of two U.S. Mediterranean task forces enter the Adriatic from time to time. But, he told reporters at the Conference of Security and Cooperation in Europe: "There is no charge and no decision have been made about further deployment of naval forces."

Even as Bush played down any unilateral role for U.S. naval forces, his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, stressed that the United States would take part in multilateral operations. "Of course," he said of U.S. involvement, "we're part of NATO."

Serb irregulars launch attacks in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Serb irregulars launched two infantry raids Friday and battled for control of a hill overlooking the city's heart. Some Bosnian government troops said they couldn't hold out much longer.

Intense fighting raged even as U.N. peacekeepers were negotiating to guarantee safe passage for relief supplies from Sarajevo airport into the besieged Bosnian capital.

Canadian Lt. Col. Michel Jones said he expected an agreement to allow U.N. vehicles and convoys carrying aid and wounded people to pass unhindered from the airport into the city, where 400,000 people have been trapped for three months.

Even as the United States and its European allies agreed in Helsinki, Finland, to tighten sanctions against Serbia, which is blamed for much of the fighting, a U.N. agency said it had new reports of "ethnic cleansing" of Croats and Slavic Muslims from captured regions in Bosnia.

About 3,000 people, mainly Muslim women and children from eastern Bosnia, have fled during the last 10 days in what appear to be organized expulsions, said Judith Kumlin, Belgrade representative for Sadako Ogata, the U.N. high commissioner for refugees.

Bosnia government leaders say U.S. and European leaders are not doing enough to stop the Serbs. The decision reached at a conference in Helsinki on Friday fell far short of the military intervention sought by Bosnia.

"The Serbs are making fools of the Americans," said Sijerka Kljucic, a member of the Bosnian presidency. "If America is not going to react, then there will be no independent Bosnia-Herzegovina." Muslim-led forces loyal to the Bosnia government are outgunned by the Yugoslav army-backed Serb forces, which have seized more than half of Bosnia's territory and ring Sarajevo with artillery.

A Croat soldier helps defend a refugee corridor out of Sarajevo.

For the past two nights, Sarajevo defenders the hill said they feared the Serbs were close to breaking through. One defender, Nazif Satrovic, described "crumbling morale" in his unit, and others said ammunition was running low.

Bosnian officials say more than 7,500 people have died since Bosnia's ethnic Croats and Muslims declared independence on Feb. 29. Ms. Ogata, who ended a tour of the former Yugoslav republics Friday, said there were 1.7 million refugees in states of the former Yugoslavia and another 500,000 in other European countries.

Ethnic Serbs, backed by the Serbed federal army, oppose secession and want to carve out territory in Bosnia that would remain linked to Serbia and Montenegro, the remaining republics in the new Yugoslavia.

Milan Panic, the Belgrade-born American businessman who is premier-designate of the new Yugoslavia, made an impassioned plea for peace in comments to reporters during the Helsinki summit of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

He pledged to "try very hard and to try in a determined American way" to bring peace to the Balkan federation. He warned Serbia's hardline president, Slobodan Milosevic: "God help him if he gets in my way."

It wasn't clear that Panic held the power to outmaneuver Milosevic, a Communist whom many in the West blame for the fighting.

Both Serb fighters and Bosnian defenders appear to be violating a U.N.-brokered agreement that opened the Sarajevo airport to relief flights on June 29.

U.N. inspectors hold vigil as Iraq refuses to comply

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq staged more demonstrations Friday against U.N. weapons inspectors hoping to search a government building in Baghdad for documents on long-range missiles, but the inspectors stayed put.

In the sixth day of the standoff, a spokesman for the team said that if Iraq does not allow the inspectors to do their work by Monday, the U.N. Security Council may start exploring other options for solving the problem.

Iraq's refusal to grant entry to the building violates a U.N. cease-fire resolution that ordered Iraq to give free access to the inspectors. Under the terms of the Gulf War cease-fire, Baghdad must eliminate all its weapons of mass destruction.

The 16-member team of U.N. inspectors, who want to search for documents on procurement of long-range missiles, have maintained a vigil in their cars outside the Agriculture Ministry since they were forbidden entry Sunday.

Baghdad has called the attempt to search the ministry a provocation. Iraq's U.N. envoy, Samir al-Naimi, said Friday the ministry is a symbol of national sovereignty and therefore off limits.

Waite meets author of inspirational card

BEDFORD, England (AP) — Former Beirut hostage Terry Waite on Friday met the woman whose prayer card inspired him during nearly five years of captivity in Lebanon. Joy Brodier, a 38-year-old former teacher, had mailed Waite the postcard showing John Bunyan, the 17th century author of "Pilgrim's Progress" who spent more than 12 years in prison for his beliefs.

Ms. Brodier was amazed to hear Waite mention the card after he was released in November.

U.S., allies prepare to monitor trade

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States and its West European allies readied naval forces Friday to be deployed in the Adriatic Sea to monitor compliance with U.N. sanctions against Yugoslavia.

Officials said the NATO alliance had assembled a force of eight ships in Lisbon, Portugal. Also, the Western European Union, the new military arm of the European Community, said it would send five to six ships into the Adriatic Sea but gave no details. The nine WEU members all belong to NATO.

The ships are to monitor, but not board, ships off the Yugoslav coast to check compliance with trade sanctions against Belgrade, imposed in May to halt the civil war in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

"NATO has committed itself to providing the ships, although we have no clear mission at this point," said an official at NATO's military headquarters in Casteau, Belgium.

In London, Paul Beaver, publisher of Jane's Defense Weekly magazine, said the NATO force could be in the Adriatic as early as Sunday morning.

The eight-ship NATO force is known as Stanavformed, short for Standing Naval Force Mediterranean. It usually is comprised of frigates and destroyers.

Nations contributing to the force, which was deployed during last year's Gulf War, are Germany, Greece, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, Turkey, Britain and the United States.

In Washington, a senior military officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said an American frigate, the USS Jack Williams, would participate.

Created in 1969, Stanavformed is primarily a deterrent force that shows allied solidarity in times of crisis.

Until this year, it assembled only for annual exercises and in times of crisis. But since April 30, the fleet has been a permanent force.

Sergei Shakhrai, a member of Russian President Boris Yeltsin's legal team, and Russian State Secretary Gennady Burbulis, listen Friday during Russia's Constitutional Court hearing on the legality of Yeltsin's decrees which ban the Communist Party.

Russian court might challenge Yeltsin ban

MOSCOW (AP) — Two days after the Soviet Communist Party supporters gave up its monopoly on power in 1990, it secretly created elite KGB teams to fight its domestic enemies, according to court testimony Friday.

The disclosure came during the fourth day of a politically charged trial in Russia's Constitutional Court, which is considering a challenge to President Boris Yeltsin's ban on the former ruling party.

Yeltsin banned the party and nationalized its property after last August's failed coup by hard-liners in the party, KGB and military.

The Constitutional Court is considering a lawsuit by communists who contend that Yeltsin's decrees exceeded his constitutional authority.

The court has combined the main case with a countersuit filed by anti-communist legislators who want the party to be declared unconstitutional.

The trial, which began Tuesday, is expected to continue for at least 10 more days, Russian newspapers have covered it intensively, but it is not being shown live on television.

Each day of the trial has brought disclosures of documents on the party's crimes, including repression of dissidents, assassinations and support of terrorism. Most of the acts have long been known or suspected, but details and proof have been lacking.

The panel of 13 judges asked lawyers to focus their arguments on whether the Communist Party had changed into a law-abiding, "parliamentary-type" party after March 14, 1990, when the constitution was amended to allow a multiparty system.

Andrei Makarov, a lawyer representing anti-communist legislators, argued that the party did not really loosen its grip on power. As evidence, he read a secret March 16, 1990, decision of the party's Politburo — then headed by former Soviet president and party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev — creating five regional KGB "Alpha" groups.

The document, one of thousands of newly declassified papers from the party's super-secret "Special File," said the men assigned to the elite units had to be communists loyal to the socialist motherland.

The "Alpha" groups each contained 45 men and were trained to fight terrorists and undertake covert missions. They were later accused of participating in the bloody crackdown on the Baltic republics in early 1991.

They were ordered to storm the Russian White House during last August's coup, but they refused.

Makarov argued that the "Alpha" groups were part of a long tradition of secret squads established by the party to carry out so-called "special tasks," including assassinations.

He read excerpts from documents showing that former U.S. President Nikita Khrushchev ordered the "secret police's" infamous "Bureau-No. 2" to murder the head of the Ukrainian Catholic Church and other political opponents in the 1950s.

Although Yeltsin has said the trial may "heal" the fate of Russia, the interest appears to be light, perhaps because the communist faithful is small.

In addition, many Russians are tired of politics after the turbulence of the past year. Their attention is focused on pocketbook issues, and the crimes of the Communist Party seemed to be sensational news after the revelations of Gorbachev's "glasnost," or openness, in the late 1980s.

Algerian leaders face test of wills

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Banned, jailed and intimidated, Algeria's Muslim fundamentalists are decimated but not dead and could rise from the underground for a new test of wills with military-backed authorities.

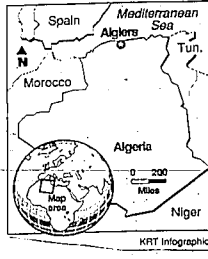

The moment of truth could begin Sunday when the top two leaders of the Islamic Salvation Front go before a military court on death penalty charges of armed rebellion against the state.

The decision to maintain the trial date, despite the assassination two weeks earlier of Algerian leader Mohamed Boudiaf, suggested authorities were prepared to meet the test.

A tough verdict signaling an unyielding stance by the nation's military-backed rulers would irrevocably pit them against the movement and their legions of followers still nurturing hope of a comeback.

Fundamentalists are "street people, workers and above all, youth," said French historian Benjamin Stora, author of numerous books on Algeria. "You can't just reduce them to the party apparatus. It is this mass that wasn't dissolved by decree."

It is this mass that has risen up three times since 1988, its violent protests pushed through the radical transformation of this North African nation from one-party rule to pluralism, then to a year-long state of emergency.

KRT Infographics

In its first official statement since the June 29 slaying of Boudiaf, the Salvation Front affirmed that it is "still present in the political equation," a claim few doubt.

"We fear that repression may be working in favor of the influence of the Salvation Front," said Hocine Ait Ahmed, who heads a leading opposition party, the Front for Socialist Forces.

The movement is "now moving toward being a real party where in the past it was a rebellion," Ait Ahmed said. He said Saharan detention camps, where up to 7,000 sympathizers were sent, serve as indoctrination centers, schooling sympathizers in the ideology of the Salvation Front, which wants to install an Islamic state.

The ruling High State Committee, put in power by the army in January to thwart a Salvation Front victory in parliamentary elections, smashed the fundamentalists' organizational structure.

First it canceled the elections, then declared a state of emergency, jailing leaders, detaining thousands of sympathizers and taking control of mosques.

In March, authorities banned the party. But the movement's will appears intact. It continues to publish statements despite the risks and breed hope among large sectors of the population.

"The threat is still there, stronger than ever," said Hadj-Ali Smail, a noted activist intellectual teaching at the University of Algiers.

"If there is no modern democratic project to force a rupture with the system, theoretic ideas nourish themselves. They don't need a guide," Smail said.

Accusations carried daily in the press that Boudiaf was killed by a "mafia" that was acting to protect its privileges and corrupt sources of money also nourish the fundamentalist movement, Stora said in a telephone interview in Paris.

Fundamentalists seek a pure Islamic nation, ridding Algeria of its rampant corruption was one of its goals and constituted a rallying point with the Algerian masses.

In the streets of Algiers, hope is a constant theme among the few fundamentalists willing to talk, always without attribution.

The Salvation Front "has not been crushed," said one supporter from the ancient Casbah, a stronghold of the movement, in a typical remark. "It is the voice of the people who guide it. And this voice belongs to God."

Abassi Madani and Ali Hliladj, president and vice president of the Salvation Front, are among seven fundamentalist leaders on trial, arrested in June 1991 for spearheading strikes and deadly street protests.

A 24-year-old guard at a primary school who voted for a moderate Islamic party, Hamas, in the parliamentary elections described what's happening as "living with a political cancer."

Clemency for the defendants could signal willingness by the ruling hierarchy to take a safer bet with the fundamentalists, Stora said. If a hard line is maintained, the situation "could take any form, including clashes. It's unpredictable," he said.

The cycle of violence by Islamic extremists that has killed up to 100 security forces the past six months is seen as a portent of things to come.

Defendants claim they confessed under torture

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Defendants in a mass trial of 279 Muslim fundamentalists said Friday they were tortured into confessing to plotting to assassinate the president and overthrow the government.

"All the confessions were extorted through violence and blackmail," said Tedi Ghali, a defendant who said he was tortured in the holding cells of the Interior Ministry.

The defendants, who include soldiers, police officers and customs agents, are accused of belonging to the illegal fundamentalist group Ennahdha, or Renaissance. Authorities accuse it of forming a military wing, the Commandos of Sacrifice, to kill President Zine el-Abidine Ben Ali and establish a Muslim fundamentalist state. The trial, the largest of its kind in recent years in North Africa, is being followed closely by Tunisia's neighbors, which fear the rise of Muslim fundamentalism.

A trial of the top leaders of Algeria's Islamic Salvation Front resumes Sunday after a brief opening session last month.

The Tunisian trial is being conducted in two courts, with the defendants divided into groups of 171 and 108. Fifty-five of the defendants are being tried in absentia.

Judge Habib Youssef, a civilian, adjourned the trial of the 108 suspects until July 27 following a request from defense lawyers, many of whom are representing defendants in both courts.

Rachid Ghannouchi, the president of Ennahdha, who fled Tunisia and lives in exile, said in an interview Friday with Radio France International that the trial was a "settling of political scores by non-political means."

U.S. witnesses set to testify in alleged Mafia-boss case

ROME (AP) — Four men accused of being Italian Mafia bosses are headed to the United States to hear testimony from two Italians safeguarded under the U.S. witness protection program, a judicial source said Friday. Italian judges and attorneys also will attend the hearing Thursday in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., according to the source, who declined comment on anonymity.

It is not unusual for Italian judges and prosecutors to take testimony from witnesses in the United States, but a new legal code that went into force in Italy last year now allows defendants to attend such sessions too.

The hearing is part of a trial that began in March in Palermo, Sicily. Fourteen men were charged with international drug trafficking and criminal association after a freighter carrying 600 kilograms of Colombian cocaine was intercepted off Sicily in 1988. The judicial source said at least four defendants have asked to attend the U.S. hearing: cousins Vincenzo and Raffaele Galatolo, Stefano Fontana and Antonio Madonna.

In Washington, the court will take testimony from Joe Cuffaro and Francesco Martino Mannoia, as well as FBI agents. Mannoia, in particular, has been described as a key "repentant" Mafioso who has told authorities about the structure of the Sicilian underworld.

Colombian drug dealers still jailed

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — President Cesar Gaviria declared a state of emergency Friday to keep 17 alleged members of the violent Medellin drug cartel in jail.

Gaviria said he wants to protect citizens from "the most dangerous criminals in the country," who are believed responsible for a wave of terror that claimed hundreds of lives.

But the president acknowledged the cartel could fight back with more killings now that he is preventing bail for the men accused of running Colombia's lucrative cocaine business.

The reputed drug dealers, including alleged cartel chief Pablo Escobar, are seeking to be freed under a law that took effect on July 1 and requires that suspects be released on bail after 180 days if they have not been charged.

Gaviria declared a state of emergency that will prevent bail, at least until a five-member constitutional court decides whether a state of emergency really exists. The decision is expected by Wednesday. Although Gaviria did not specifically identify the Medellin cartel members, there was no doubt that the order was aimed at the cartel.

"This is my duty as chief of state, and supporting me in this are Colombia's 30 million people who look with horror" at the prospect of freedom for the cartel leaders, Gaviria said in a nationally broadcast address.

Boat trip through culvert kills 1

FERNAN — A rowboat joyride through a culvert ended in tragedy when one man drowned after the 10-foot craft capsized inside the tunnel.

"They were trying to have a good time, but they got into trouble," said Rick Davison of Coeur d'Alene, who was fishing off the public dock at the west end of Fernan Lakes.

The victim was identified on Friday as Wade Ray Hanning, 35, of Coeur d'Alene.

Daniel Delaney, 33, Coeur d'Alene, was rescued by Kootenai County sheriff's deputies moments after the boat capsized. He was found clinging to bolts inside the culvert.

State employee files suit over firing

LEWISTON — An Idaho Transportation Department employee has filed suit against his supervisors and Director Kermit Kiebert, alleging his civil rights were violated when he was wrongfully fired in 1990.

Robert Anderson of Lewiston filed the complaint in 2nd District Court on June 5, almost seven months after the Idaho Personnel Commission ordered him reinstated with back pay.

Besides Kiebert, defendants in Anderson's lawsuit include Transportation Department District II Director James Clayton of Lewiston and two of Anderson's immediate supervisors at the agency's Powell facility.

The case was transferred to U.S. District Court in Boise on June 24 after the defendants argued that the federal court should consider the civil rights issue.

FBI seizes gambling equipment, cash

COEUR D'ALENE — The FBI says it seized more than a half million dollars worth of illegal electronic gambling machines, slot machines and cash in last year's raid in northern Idaho's Silver Valley.

The U.S. Department of Justice wants the assets forfeited, according to a statement filed with U.S. District Court.

The FBI raided more than 64 bars and fraternal organizations in Shoshone and Kootenai counties on June 23, 1991, seizing what they said were illegal gambling devices or cash from 50 of them.

The raid also revealed a two-year federal investigation in the Silver Valley that resulted in charges against Shoshone County Sheriff Frank Cnkovich. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in March for racketeering, gambling and obstruction of law enforcement.

Endangered Idaho plant makes gains

COTTONWOOD — Idaho's only plant on the endangered species list is making a comeback, and the federal government is considering a reduction in the level of protection for MacFarlane's four o'clock.

A proposal to revise the wildflower's listing from endangered to threatened is under review by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The future for MacFarlane's four o'clock is becoming bright," Bureau of Land Management botanist Roger Rosenrieter said, "and I think the recovery effort will work for other species."

Named for the Salmon River boatman who discovered it and the time of day it blooms, the flower was found in only one location of western Idaho when it was declared endangered in 1979. In the past nine years, however, the BLM's preservation efforts have led to discovery of the plant in a dozen places in western Idaho and eastern Oregon.

Officers seek massage parlor worker

COEUR D'ALENE — A warrant has been issued for the arrest of a Stateline massage parlor employee, and summonses to appear in court have been issued for seven others allegedly involved in prostitution.

Seven of the eight were arrested June 26 during a raid on three Stateline massage parlors and the homes of their owners. The seven were interviewed by police and were released on bond the next day.

The raid by more than 50 law officers capped a 14-month investigation into allegations of prostitution at the businesses.

First District Magistrate Eugene Marano issued the arrest warrant Thursday for Kathleen M. Wagenman, 31, of Spokane, Wash. Wagenman, an employee of Andrea's Health Spa, was not arrested the night of the raid, but a subsequent investigation implicated her in the alleged crimes, authorities said.

Arraignment near for prison guard

OROFINO — Arraignment is scheduled next Thursday in 2nd District Court for Steven D. Daniel, a former Orofino state prison guard charged with felony counts of rape and having oral sex with a female inmate.

Magistrate Patrick Costello bound Daniel over for trial on the oral sex count Wednesday, but delayed a decision until Thursday on the rape charge after a two-day preliminary hearing. He declined comment on the ruling.

Daniel remains free on bond pending arraignment before 2nd District Judge Linda Trout.

Daniel was fired from his prison job in the spring of 1991 when allegations surfaced that he was having sex with female inmates.

Students' behavior angers residents

POCATELLO — Residents near Pocatello's two high schools are up in arms with the city and the school district over the student invasion of their neighborhoods and the vandalism and other activity it's brought.

"We have a right to peace and quiet in front of our homes and to protect our families from those little hoodlums," said Bob Butters, who lives near Highland High School. "The school has to keep the students in the parking lot and off our streets."

The unrest, aggravated by similar concerns from homeowners near Idaho State University, has the city council moving toward enacting a residential-only parking ordinance for all three areas by summer's end.

County, university dispute property tax

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho and Latah County are butting heads over $15,000 in property taxes the county says the property-tax-exempt school should pay on a Moscow hotel it recently bought.

"This is a significant amount," County Commissioner Dana Maglufson said.

On May 8, the university took ownership of Value Inn by Cavanaugh's, planning to turn it into housing and a meeting area. The previous owners had paid nearly $8,600 in property taxes through that date, and the title company for the sale noted that the remaining $15,000 property tax liability would stay with the motel.

But the university argued before the County Commission, acting as the Board of Equalization, that its tax-exempt status precluded any assessment of tax liability for the motel property.

"It's pretty clear we are a tax-exempt entity," university real estate officer Grant Moran said. "The amount of the taxes shouldn't be responsibly applied."

County Assessor Steven Fiscus, however, maintained that under state law property is assessed as of Jan. 1 each year and the taxes based on that assessment remain a lien against the property until satisfied. In fact, Fiscus said, there is another legal provision that continues exempt status for the entire year of property that moves to taxable status sometime after Jan. 1.

And County Treasurer Nona Rae Robinson said the Whitening School District and the federal Small Business Administration both paid off the balance of the property taxes on private property they purchased in recent years.

Jerry Wallace, the school's financial vice president, pointed out that the university already pays the city of Moscow $400,000 a year to provide police, fire and sewer services to the campus while it finances its own street maintenance and electric and water systems.

So Wallace argued, "we are not relying on the tax base for those type of services."

Allegations could harm Williams' chances in race

BOISE (AP) — Veteran political observers believe Democratic state Auditor J.D. Williams could suffer politically from charges that staff used the office to promote his bid for Idaho's 2nd District congressional seat.

But while the allegations have been questioned and the issue has been a common one in past Idaho campaigns, there seems to be general agreement that Williams and his campaign aides handled the incident poorly.

"I think he's got a lot of damage control right now," a former Republican county official said.

And a one-time state senator speculated that the flap gives a boost to the Republican nominee — state Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls — at a time when voters have become increasingly sensitive to ethical issues.

"I think it's got to hurt" Williams, he said. "That race is very, very close, and that could be the swing factor."

In a series of reports during the past week, KIVI-TV in Nampa raised charges that members of Williams' staff worked on the congressional campaign on state time and that Williams paid a consultant who later became his campaign manager for a report that required little work.

Williams' initial response, before leaving on a campaign trip to Washington, D.C., late Tuesday, was to deny any ethical violations or abuse of his office. Deputy Attorney General Frank Walker said nobody has asked for an investigation.

"I'm the state auditor. I would not let it happen," he said then.

But late Friday, in an interview from Washington, Williams said he has begun reviewing the office telephone records to determine exactly what did occur. That review will be completed in the next few days, he said, and he will immediately meet with his staff.

"If there have been abuses, it will be stopped," Williams said. "I've made my policy very clear. If it hasn't been followed, I'm going to take steps to make sure that it is."

He continued to maintain that campaign manager Randy Furniss did not shortchange the state as suggested in the television reports, and Furniss said his responsibilities under the $5,000 contract were far more extensive than reported to date.

Illegal dumping creates headache for authorities

MACKAY (AP) — John King lives about a mile from the Antelope Flat Sinkhole, south of Mackay. For as long as he can remember, the area has been used as an illegal dump.

Every few years the sinkhole collapses, making room for more garbage, and King wants the mess covered up or removed.

Because it's highly visible and easy to get to, Antelope Flat has become a symbol of solid waste problems facing state and county governments all over eastern Idaho.

The Bureau of Land Management intends to clean the site, which is posted as an illegal dump and a hazardous area, but the state Division of Environmental Quality has to decide how.

No one knows how deep the sinkhole is or what is in it. The cleanup project could cost $30,000, said BLM spokeswoman Ann Van Buren, but the money probably won't be available until next year.

But illegal dumping is related to other problems. King and other Antelope Valley residents have a trash removal service and must haul garbage to landfills in either Arco or Mackay, a drive of 30 to 35 miles. Like other residents in remote areas with no garbage pickup service, many Antelope Valley families have traditionally used illegal dump sites, but the practice is falling out of favor, King says.

"It's just like people throwing their trash out on the highway," he said.

King says there is no way to enforce the law on illegal dumping, and the BLM knows this firsthand. The BLM has identified 107 illegal dumps on its land in eastern Idaho, with an estimated three to five times that number statewide, said Karl Gebhardt, the state hazardous waste coordinator.

Illegal dumping is further complicated by the fact many counties are being forced to close landfills.

"With the new regulations it will hurt, let alone operate on a county budget," said Custer County Assessor Bob Savage.

Townshend performs in newest stage adaptation of 'Tommy'

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Pete Townshend, former guitarist for The Who, has adapted the British rock band's 1969 album "Tommy" for the stage.

"I am keen for people who have never seen the work live to do so," said Townshend, 47. "I want them to appreciate that 'Tommy' is a real drama.

It is popular because it is full of recognizable relationships and struggles, not because it was an early rock opera or part of Woodstock or a sick joke about child abuse."

"The rock opera features Tommy, the 'deaf, dumb and blind kid' of the song 'Pinball Wizard' who becomes a messiah of sorts. It has been adapted to film and stage before, but the La Jolla Playhouse version that opened Thursday is its first stage version involving Townshend.

"Humor comes out of pain," said the star of such films as "Blazing Saddles" and "Spaceballs."

"I've gotten much more philosophical as I've gotten older."

He said he attended the Duke Diet and Fitness Center in North Carolina.

"It was wonderful," he said. "We got a lot of support. Talking to drug addicts is like talking to compulsive eaters. To diet, you have to change your whole lifestyle."

The comedian is starring in the Long Beach Civic Light Opera's "Little Shop of Horrors," which opens Saturday.

Michener pledges more money to his museum

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Author James A. Michener has pledged another $500,000 to the art museum that bears his name.

The James A. Michener Art Museum in suburban Doylestown is seeking the work of 26 artists, primarily landscape painters from earlier in the century. Among Michener's favorites are Daniel Garber, Edward Redfield and M. Elizabeth Price.

"This museum should have been started about 30 years ago," Michener, 85, said Thursday evening from his home in Brunswick, Md.

"We're going to try to lure gifts out of the attic."

The museum opened in 1988 on the site of the old Bucks County Prison and is embraced by its 40-foot stone walls. Construction has just begun on a $1.65 million expansion to double the existing 6,000 square feet of exhibition gallery space.

Michener, Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Centennial," "Chesapeake" and "Hawaii," had already pledged $1 million to help the museum expand its collection.

Lloyd's of London sues band over concert riot

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP)—Lloyd's of London has filed a lawsuit against the band Guns N' Roses, over a concert that ended in a riot in suburban St. Louis last July.

Guns N' Roses canceled concerts scheduled for Chicago suburbs and Kansas City, Kan., citing damage to equipment in the July 2, 1991-1992 performances at the concert in the Riverport Amphitheater, in Maryland Heights.

Rose and the band tried to collect on a policy insuring against canceled performances, but Lloyd's of London argued that the band could have performed. It also contended in the lawsuit filed July 1 in St. Louis County Circuit Court that Rose and other band members "incited the crowd to riot against authorities and security and, in the midst of the performance, left the stage after urging the crowd to destroy the stage and equipment."

Attorney Peter Hoffman, who filed the lawsuit, declined to reveal the amount of the Guns N' Roses' insurance claim.

Rose, facing misdemeanor charges from the riot, has until July 17 to turn himself into county prosecutors.

About 40 concert-goers and 25 police officers were injured after Rose leaped from the stage to take a camera from a fan.

SONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Dom DeLuise doesn't hate fat jokes:

Theory sheds light on possible escape of Princess Anastasia

NEW YORK (AP)—For more than 70 years, Russian monarchists have fantasized that Princess Anastasia survived the Bolshevik assassination of Czar Nicholas II and his family and escaped to the West.

Now Edward Radzinsky's obsession with the last days of the deposed czar has uncovered a new twist—a theory that an interview with Crown Prince Alexei lived through the hail of bullets on July 17, 1918, and ended his days in a Soviet asylum after World War II.

"I have strong evidence that two of the Romanovs survived the execution," Radzinsky said in an interview while in New York to discuss his new book, "The Last Tsar," released this month by Doubleday.

Radzinsky, a playwright and historian in Moscow who has spent 25 years researching the matter, bases his conclusions on two areas of evidence.

One is a series of reports by the killers—discovered in the newly opened archives of the Soviet Union—hinting that Alexei may not have died. The other is research into the background of a Soviet psychiatric patient who bears startling similarities ties to Alexei.

Except for royalist romantics who cling to their belief in the survival of Anastasia, the czar's youngest daughter, most people believe the 300-year Romanov dynasty ended when Lenin's henchmen herded Nicholas and his family into a basement room and gunned them down.

Nicholas fell immediately, followed by his wife, Alexandra Feodorovna, his doctor and three servants, according to the reports.

Alexei fell wounded, but the princesses—Anastasia, Olga, Tatiana and Marie—ran about the room screaming as the killers fired volley after volley.

"The bullets from the revolvers bounced off for some reason and ricocheted, jumping around the room like hail," the leader of the assassins, Yakov Yurovsky, wrote.

Even Alexei, a sickly hemophiliac, would not die, though wounded, Yurovsky recalled "the strange vitality of the heir."

The killers bayoneted the girls, but were thwarted by their bullet-proof, diamond-lined corsets: "The bayonet was like a dagger, but it was dull and would not penetrate. ... Later they got (one) with their rifle butts," another assassin, Alexei Kanabov, wrote.

The Bolsheviks stripped the bodies and found 18 pounds of diamonds sewn into the clothing of the children.

Radzinsky believes Alexei and Anastasia may have been saved by their million-dollar garments.

Another assassin, Andrei Strekotin, said that after the shooting the bodies were brought out to a truck. The daughters turned out to be alive, he said.

"We couldn't shoot anymore—with the open doors, the shots could have been heard in the streets," he said.

Some of the Red Guards taking the bodies away for burial, knowing the approaching White Russians would kill them for their role in the affair, may have found Alexei and Anastasia still alive and slipped them off the truckload of bodies,

'The bullets from the revolvers bounced off for some reason and ricocheted, jumping around the room like hail.'

—Assassination leader Yakov Yurovsky

hoping to barter them for their own lives, Radzinsky believes.

Radzinsky noted that in 1979, when scientists found the grave of the 11 people were shot that night, "only nine skeletons were found—two of the bodies were missing."

The legend that Anastasia escaped was born in Berlin in 1920, when a depressed young woman tried to commit suicide by jumping into a canal.

When she recovered from amnesia, she called herself Anastasia and continued to do so. She lost a leg attempt to claim the daughter's name as her own before dying.

Radzinsky believes he may have discovered the fate of the 11th person—Alexei.

His research led him to testimony from a psychiatrist and 1949 hospital records concerning a dignified patient who insisted he was the son of Nicholas II.

ly afterward, asserting to the end that he was the Crown Prince Alexei.

More light may be shed on these mysteries later this month.

American forensic experts plan to examine the remains found where the assassins said they dumped the bodies of the Romanovs.

Hunter plays role of rah-rah mom

HOUSTON (AP)—Actress Holly Hunter will star in an HBO movie as a woman accused of trying to hire a hit man to secure her daughter's spot on a cheerleading squad.

Hunter will play the role of Wanda Holloway, who was convicted last year of trying to arrange the murder of the mother of her daughter's rival for a spot on the cheerleading squad at a school in the Houston suburb of Channelview.

A prosecution witness said Mrs. Holloway hoped the slaying would make the rival cheerleader so distraught the girl would withdraw from the squad and provide an opening for her own daughter.

The conviction was thrown out because a juror was ruled ineligible. No date has been set for a new trial.

"Everything that we have in our script is true," Jim Manos, the producer of the movie, told the Houston Chronicle.

Steve Dantantville, Hunter's agent, did not return a telephone call Friday.

Hunter was nominated for an Oscar for her 1987 performance in "Broadcast News."

Wallace miners organize to redirect efforts

WALLACE (AP) — Some in the mining industry say there's probably more money to be made from cleaning up old mines in the United States than opening new ones.

A new Wallace company, organized by former hardrock miners, is in a position to benefit from the demand for mine reclamation. "In the 1980s, you'll see a major transferring of assets in this business," said Dennis Sheppard, chairman and chief executive officer at Reclamation Management Corp. "The mines made quite a bit of money in years past. Now they're being required to clean themselves up."

For Sheppard and other officers at Reclamation Management, the business of mine cleanup is a 180-degree career turn. Some toiled underground at mines in the Silver Valley. Others worked in laboratories studying mineral samples for silver, lead and zinc products.

Now they clean mine sites by demolishing plants, salvaging equipment, replacing contaminated soil, treating polluted water. They replant landscapes spoiled by mines.

Considering his background, Sheppard says he feels like a scavenger, making a living picking over the remains of defunct mines. "But then, there are a lot of environmental companies that have made millions over the years and done nothing but study problems. We're actually solving them."

Reclamation Management is the successor to C and S Equipment Inc., founded by Sheppard and a partner in 1986. The name change occurred in May when the company took over Rockford Minerals Ltd., Toronto, a small mining concern. The stock began trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

The company's current mining clients include Coeur d'Alene Mines Corp., Echo Bay Mines Ltd., Newmont Gold Co., Hecla Mining Co. and ASARCO Inc.

Tough government regulations strangling mine development will keep demolition and salvage companies in business for years, said Rusty Price, mining analyst with Nelson Securities Inc., Spokane.

Cleanup dispute thwarts drive for Lenore center

LENORE (AP) — A lingering dispute over cleanup of a year-old diesel fuel spill is thwarting efforts by a citizens group to take over the old Lenore Store and turn it into a community center.

"People are getting real frustrated with it," said Larry Clark, president of the nonprofit corporation backing the Lenore Community Activities Center.

Clark said the citizen's group is ready to deal with store owner

Kenneth Summers, but it does not want to take any action until state environmental regulators give the site a clean bill of health. And exactly what it will take to get that is still a bone of contention between the Division of Environmental Quality and Goodman Oil Co.

Since the 5,300-gallon spill last year, both sides have made concessions in negotiating a cleanup plan. But they hit another roadblock this spring.

Read our lips: No new taxes

CARSON CITY (AP) — A citizens' group headed by a legislator is circulating questionnaires to all 1992 legislative candidates asking for their stand on tax issues and also asking them to sign "no new tax" pledges.

Bruce Bogaert of Sparks-based "Speak Out Taxpayers!" says his group is giving the candidates a choice to sign the pledge and then will let voters in their districts know that they have committed to oppose any new and increased taxes.

"The tax-and-spend mentality of the Legislature and governor have jeopardized the financial stability of our state," Bogaert added in a statement. "We need to cut taxes and encourage business and individuals to spend their own money to stimulate the economy."

The pledge is part of a national effort organized by "Americans for Tax Reform." Bogaert said he hopes to have responses in hand by Aug. 1.

The questionnaires ask the candidates how they would vote on measures that would require a public vote before new taxes could be imposed, or would require a two-thirds vote rather than the simple majority of the Legislature on tax plans.

The candidates also are being asked whether they support repeal of the business tax passed by the 1991 Legislature, and whether they would vote to eliminate "triggers" and other forms of state "trigger" pay hikes based on projected revenues.

Bogaert also circulated a copy of his group's "report card" on Gov. Bob Miller and incumbent legislators based on their tax-related actions during the 1991 session.

Miller got an "F." Bogaert said the governor promoted and signed several "tax-and-spend" bills including the business levy, state worker pay hikes and higher gasoline tax and license fees.

Kansas court nixes gambling arrangement

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas Supreme Court Friday upheld Attorney General Bob Stephan's contention that the Legislature must approve Indian gambling compacts signed by Gov. Joan Finney.

The decision apparently puts the future of casino gambling on hold in Kansas.

In a unanimous opinion, the court invalidated a compact signed by Mrs. Finney with the Kickapoo Nation in January and reworked in February.

The decision came in a lawsuit brought by the attorney general challenging the validity of the compact, which would have allowed the tribe to operate a casino south of Hiawatha in northeast Kansas.

The court said Mrs. Finney has authority to negotiate compacts authorizing casino gambling on Indian reservations in Kansas, but she alone cannot make them binding.

Only the Legislature has the power to legally bind state government, the court said, and it has not delegated that authority to the governor.

Oklahoma governor inks gaming pact

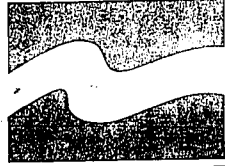

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Gov. David Walters signed a historic gaming compact with the Citizen Band Pottawatomie Friday, and said it was one more step toward better relations between the state and Indian tribes.

The compact — if it clears all hurdles — would allow the tribe to offer video lotteries on tribal land near Shawnee.

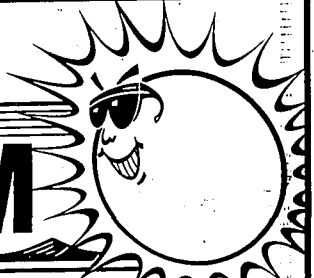

Walters said the compact will help "end the decades-old contamination" between the state and its tribes.

In a question-and-answer session after he signed the compact, Walters said he thinks the proliferation of Indian gaming puts more pressure on movements to legalize gambling in Oklahoma.

Senior Tour's youngest player breezes to 3-stroke lead

The Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Dave Stockton, the youngest player among his fellow seniors, shot a 5-under-par 66 Friday for a record 36-hole and a 3-stroke lead at the U.S. Senior Open.

Stockton, a senior rookie at 50 after 27 years on the PGA Tour, had no problem with the fast greens of the 6,700-yard Saucon Valley Country Club course. He rolled in five birdie putts in a bogey-free round that gave him a two-day total of 9-under-par 133. "It was like a walk in the park," Stockton said.

He added that on the advice of his psychologist, "my goal this week is not to win the U.S. Open but to control my emotions and be a happy camper. I'm a happy camper."

The previous 36-hole Open record was 135 by Lee Trevino in 1990, at Ridgwood (N.J.) Country Club.

Gibby Gilbert, winner of the last two regular Senior Tour events, is second at 6-under 136 after shooting a second-round 4-under 67 with a four-birdie, no-bogey card.

Stockton said he wasn't uncomfortable with the lead.

"I don't usually back up," he said. "I don't look for the others to back up. I suspect we'll continue to make birdies. I like the lead, but it doesn't matter until Sunday. I think a whole lot more people are uncomfortable at I got to 9-under."

He added, "I played like someone who knew what they were doing."

Another stroke back at 137 came South African Simon Hobday, Jim Colbert and Al Geiberger. Hobday shot 3-under 68, and Colbert and Geiberger 5-under 66.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, with a second-round 68, joined Jack Kiefer and Charles Coody at 138, five strokes off the Indians pace own tourney

The Times-News

BUHL — Gracious host the Buhl Indians are not. The Indians used the homefield advantage on Friday to gain the finals of its own Invitational Tournament today.

Buhl Invitational

The Indians were perfect on the day, going 2-0, and enter today's play as the top-seeded team thanks in part to a 14-11 come-from-behind win over the Treasure Valley Stars.

The Indians end the round-robin play with a 4-0 record and will wait until 1:30 p.m. to play. The No. 2 seed, Powell, Wyo., 3-1, will face No. 5, Grand Junction, Colo., in the opening game of the day at 9 a.m. No. 3 seed Treasure Valley, 2-2, will then take on the fourth seed Pocatello, 1-3, at 11:15 a.m.

Buhl will face the lowest seeded winner of the morning game at 1:30. The championship game is scheduled to follow at 3:45 p.m.

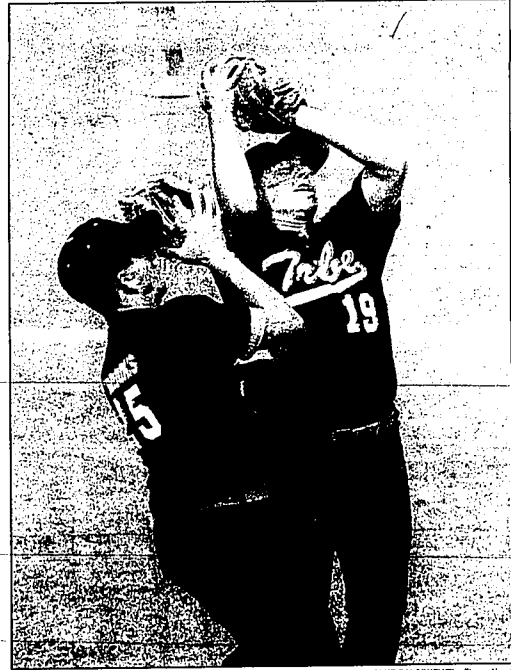

The Tribe earned its No. 1 position by taking their two games Friday, 11-7 over previously unbeaten Powell and the 14-11 win over Treasure Valley.

Treasure Valley picked up one win on the day, downing Grand Junction 11-2. Powell went 1-1 for the day defeating Pocatello 17-5 before falling to Buhl. Pocatello also picked up a victory by keeping Grand Junction winless 9-5.

Buhl 14, Treasure Valley 11

Mike Mandelkow's two-run homer in the bottom of the sixth inning proved the deciding factor in a closely played game to lead the Indians to a 14-11 win over Treasure Valley.

The Indians had fallen behind 11-10 in the top half of the sixth and looked out of it. The Stars had collected two out before pitcher Jason Higley gave up a baschit to Robert Towry; Mandelkow then followed with a shot to straightaway center to put the Indians back on top 12-11.

"That was a clutch home run by Mike," said Indians Coach Dave Slotten. "We had a lapse but were able to come back when we needed it. You have to give them credit (Treasure Valley) they play baseball the way it is meant to be played."

After taking a 9-5 lead after two innings the Indians appeared in control of the game.

TWIN FALLS — For the fourth time this season, Eddy McKean crossed the finish line in the lead position last Saturday night.

The win, at the Magic Valley Speedway, moves McKean to within two points of Darin Fairbanks, who was second in last week's race, in the points standings for the track championship. Wiley Godby finished third. Fairbanks sits in first with 312 points to McKean's 310.

In NASCAR's Pacific Coast Region, Fairbanks is 16th with 2,026 points, one up on McKean who is 17th with 2,025 points.

Steve Hendren of Santa Cruz, Calif. is the current region points leader. He has collected 17 wins in 25 starts this season.

Last Saturday's action not only saw the points race tighten up in the Pro Stock division, but for the at least the fourth time this season, fans saw the No. 50 car of Norm Hatke involved in a mixup. Hatke and Lynn Baird collided coming out of turn four causing damage to both cars. For Baird, it marks the second week in a row he has been involved in a major wreck.

In the Pony Stock division, the only other local division to race last week, Mike Eveleveth picked up his first win of the season. Jon Colson was second, with brother Jim finishing third. This weekend all three divisions of racing will be in action for the NASCAR Licenced Souvenir Night.

Fairbanks will be looking to widen his lead in the Pro Stock division and pick up another win. In the Street Stock division, who took the last week off, Bruce Quale will look to pickup his first win of the season, while at the same time try to maintain his slight lead over Scott Keller in the points race. In the Pony Stock division the race is on to close the gap between Jim Colson and the rest of the field in the points standings. Gates open at 5:45 P.M., with racing getting underway at 7:45.

E. Idaho pair holds down 1st

IDAHO FALLS — After one day of the Idaho State Men's Amateur Golf Tournament the byword is putting.

The Idaho Falls Country Club's undulating greens were amazingly quick. A good portion of the field spent the day defensively, trying to two-put and there was very little aggressive one-put birdie seeking.

Couple that with an increasing late afternoon wind and par became a good score.

Only five people were able to better the 72 standard as Idaho Falls' Aaron Johnson and Blackfoot's Steve Hays shared the first round lead at a 2-under 70.

One stroke behind was Scott Masingill of Payette and Dave Moller, Pocatello, who had won none of these titles, and Joel Higham, Spokane, who was raised about three miles from here and, in fact, was an assistant pro here for a short time.

Johnson and Hays both said their lead was due to putting. "I started very well with birdies on one two and four and finished the front nine with a birdie three. Going into the backside, my putts were birdieing the par 5s and while not playing passively, not going for birdies over aggressively," Hays said. "If I had a 9-iron or wedge in my hand I went to the pin."

The speed of the greens, estimated at between 10 and 11 on the stimpeter, drew varying reactions.

"Remember, I hit three 15-footers, so I thought it was about right," Hays said with a smile. "But if my hits were all above the hole yes, I did hit some defensive downfield putts."

Five-time champion Masingill said he was pleased with what happened Friday although he had five putts slip out on him and could have blown things open.

"You can't win it the first day, but you can sure lose it," he said with a laugh. "I am not dissatisfied. Actually, I feel lucky because I learned a lot about the course today and didn't hurt myself a lot."

Masingill had it two under par going into the Canyon holes, 15 and 16, and their combination of increased wind and a fast hill by playing safe against Joe Malay took away a lot of his pace.

"My second shot on number 15 was the only bad shot I hit all day."

LeMond makes dramatic jump in Tour de France standings

The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — A well-rested Greg LeMond made a big move up in the standings during the sixth stage of the Tour de France on Friday, sending a message to the other contenders that he'll be there at the end again this year.

LeMond started the day in 14th place but joined Claudio Chiappucci of Italy and two others in a breakaway from the pack with 12 miles to go.

By the time it was over, LeMond had taken a large bite out of Frenchman Pascal Lino's overall lead, pulling himself into fifth place, 4:29 behind.

After a slow start helped along by the fatigue caused by a long trip from his home in Belgium to San Sebastian, Spain, LeMond finally seemed confident following Friday's 105-mile race from Roubaix, France.

"I am feeling better. I have had a couple days to recover in the pack," the three-time champion said. "We knew the route would be dangerous and you have to take your chances when they come. Now we will see what happens in the time trial."

LeMond was poised to make a move from the start. Early in the day, when Chiappucci took off on a mini-break just 14 miles in, LeMond went with him.

LeMond picked up bonus seconds in the sprint before they were caught by Thierry Marie of France, who went on alone until the pack caught him at 62 miles.

With 24 miles to go, rains came and Chiappucci, followed by LeMond, Frenchman Laurent Jalabert and Dane Brian Holm, broke away again, this time leaving the pack for good.

In the final stretch, near the famous Atomium of the Brussels World Fair, Jalabert went on to the victory.

"I didn't really think about victory in this Belgian stage," Jalabert said.

"But I welcome it anyway. I did my work with the others but when we were a minute and a half ahead, I started to rest to conserve myself for the sprint."

Chiappucci was second in the finish. Holm was third and LeMond fourth.

Lino's lead actually improved — from 1:54 over ROM teammate Richard Vireneux to 3:11 over Canada's Steve Bauer — when Vireneux dropped to fourth, 4:02 behind.

Chiappucci climbed into third place, 3:34 behind, world champion Gianni Bugno is seventh, 5:06 back, and defending champion Miguel Indurain held ninth, 5:33 off the pace.

U.S.'s Greg LeMond leads Italy's Claudio Chiappucci Friday in Belgium.

Ex-Yankee powers Mariners past old team

NEW YORK (AP) — Jay Bulner hit two home runs against his former team, leading Dave Fleming and the Seattle Mariners past the New York Yankees 5-2 Friday night.

Lance Parrish hit his first home run for the Mariners, who ended a five-game losing streak. Danys Bana, who began his career with Seattle, honored for the sixth time in eight games for the Yankees.

Fleming (11-3), leading major league rookies in victories, gave up five hits and left after a leadoff single in the ninth inning. Russ Swan got the last two outs for his fourth save. Scott Sanderson (8-6) gave up an RBI single to Edgar Martinez in the first inning and Bulner's solo home runs.

Twins 5, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Kevin Papan beat Baltimore Orioles for the second time in five days, allowing two runs in seven innings to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 5-2 victory Friday night.

Major leagues

Tapani (10-5) was on course for his fourth straight complete game, but was pulled after throwing 91 pitches in the 97-degree heat. He is 4-0 with a 0.79 ERA in his last four starts. Rick Aguilera finished for his 25th save.

Athletics 5, Blue Jays 1

TORONTO — Terry Steinbach, Scott Brosius and Randy Ready hit home runs and the Oakland Athletics stopped Toronto's eight-game winning streak. Toronto's winning streak was its longest of the season. Oakland ended its three-game losing streak.

Angels 6, Tigers 1

DETROIT — The California Angels stopped their 11-game losing streak, defeating Detroit and snapping the Tigers' five-game winning streak. The Angels' skid was the longest in the majors this season. Julio Valera (5-3) pitched six strong innings, allowing six hits and striking out eight.

Red Sox 6, White Sox 5

BOSTON — Newly acquired Billy Hatcher singled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning and the Boston Red Sox bounced back to beat Chicago.

Hatcher, obtained Thursday from Cincinnati in a trade for pitcher Tom Seaver, also began a five-run rally in the eighth with an RBI double. Rookie Bob Zupic's second grand slam of the season capped the burst and put Boston ahead 5-2.

Royals 3, Brewers 1

MILWAUKEE — Tom Gordon pitched four scoreless innings after starter Mark Gubicza left because of an injury and the Kansas City Royals beat Milwaukee.

Gubicza pitched only one inning before leaving because of stiffness in his right forearm. Gordon (2-3) allowed only two hits and Jeff Montgomery went the ninth for his 21st save in 23 chances. Ricky Bones (5-5) was the loser.

Rangers 6, Indians 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Juan

Gonzalez hit a three-run homer in the first inning and later had an RBI single as Texas topped Cleveland.

Brian Holman (1-0), recalled from Triple-A Oklahoma City for the start, won his first game in his fifth appearance for the Rangers this season. He gave up four runs in seven innings, and Jeff Russell pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 27 chances despite giving up Sandy Alomar Jr.'s RBI single.

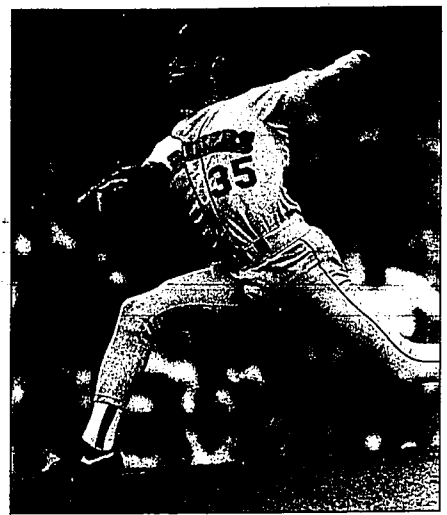

Braves 4, Cubs 0

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs do absolutely nothing against the Atlanta Braves.

John Smoltz pitched a four-hitter and singled in a run Friday, leading the Atlanta to a 4-0 victory over Chicago and its sixth shutout in 10 games against the Cubs this season.

Mets 7, Astros 6

HOUSTON — Edie Murray continued his mastery with the bases loaded with a three-run ninth-inning double, powering the New York Mets to a 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros on Friday night.

Seattle lefty Dave Fleming of Mahopac, N.Y., pitches against the Seattle Mariners in New York. Fleming had his own cheering section as he beat the Yankees 5-2.

Dodgers eye historic finish: The cellar

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "last-place Los Angeles Dodgers" just doesn't sound right. This proud franchise, usually one of baseball's best, has finished last only once — in 1905 when it played in Brooklyn.

But believe it — these are the last-place Dodgers alone in the cellar since June 16. After Friday night's games, they will have been alone in last or tied for fifth a total of 61 days this season. This was a team expected to contend for the National League West championship. It hasn't happened.

Through Thursday, the Dodgers were 38-47 and trailed the NL

West-leading Cincinnati Reds by two games. They were 14 games behind the fifth-place Houston.

The Dodgers are at the bottom despite a team ERA of 3.21 after Thursday, second-best in the NL.

They're at the bottom despite the presence of such big name players as Darryl Strawberry, Eric Davis, Brett Butler, Orel Hersher, Ron Candiotti and Ramon Martinez.

This is a team that had a 93-69 record last season. The Dodgers, last place.

What has transpired from day one, it's not that unbelievable," said Davis, acquired by the Dodgers from the Cincinnati Reds during the off-season. "You look at the injuries we've had and we look at the way we've played. And when you play the way we've played, this can happen."

Sure, the Dodgers have had numerous injuries. But other teams have had injury problems, too.

In Davis, Butler and Strawberry, the Dodgers thought they had one of baseball's finest outfields, both offensively and defensively. Both Davis and Strawberry have missed games significant time because of injuries. Through Thursday, the trio had started together only 23 times in 85 games.

Second baseman Juan Samuel also was sidelined for several weeks because of an injury, and now, he's hardly playing at all, relegated to the bench a year after being selected to the NL All-Star team.

Reliance on Jay Howell didn't pick until May 22, and hasn't been used in a save situation yet.

First baseman-outfielder Cal Daniels spent time on the disabled list, then was traded to the Chicago Cubs.

The offense has sputtered, the bullpen has been inconsistent, the defense has been horrible at times, committing a major-league leading 84 errors.

Rookie shucks off bogey to lead PGA tourney

VIENNA, Ohio (AP) — Denise Baldwin, a 30-year-old rookie, overcame a triple bogey on the first hole and a 4-under-par 68 Friday for a one-stroke lead in the weather-delayed PGA's Phar-Mor in Youngstown tournament.

Nancy Lopez, Meg Mallon, Brandie Burton and Amy Benz were one shot back at 3-under-par 69 after rounds over the 6,297-yard Squaw Creek Country Club course.

Ann Walsh was also 3 under but had completed only 13 holes when play was suspended for the day at 7:24 p.m. because of rain. About 50 of the 144 golfers were still on the course at the time.

Playing in her 14th PGA event, Baldwin bounced back from the disastrous first hole by sinking approach shots for eagles on the par-4 seventh and 10th holes. She used a wedge from 104 yards away on No. 7 and a 6-iron from 163 yards out on No. 10.

They were her sixth and seventh eagles of the year, but her first two on par-4 holes.

Rain interrupted her round for 90 minutes on the 11th hole, and she used the break wisely after shooting a 7 on the par-4 first hole.

"It was a good time for me to regroup and relax," she said. "After that start, it was just a test of patience. I tried to remind myself that there were still 17 holes left. That's probably the best I've ever done, to come back from that."

Baldwin, of St. Simons Island, Ga., needed seven tries before she finally qualified for the PGA tour last fall. Her best finish so far was a tie for 11th place in the Lady Keystone Open at Hershey, Pa., last month.

Her career PGA earnings: $19,419. "For about the last three years, I've thought about doing different things," she said. "Just nothing ever came along that I really wanted to do."

Hataalsky leads PGA event

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Morris Hataalsky is in position to set a PGA Tour standard for putting economy — and he couldn't care less.

Hataalsky increased his lead to three shots with a 5-under-par 66 in Friday's second round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

He was at 11-under-131 after a rocky day with temperate weather that moved round 100 degrees at Kingsmill Golf Club.

Hataalsky's 26 puts Friday were six more than he needed in his opening round. But his two-day total put him on track to challenge Kenny Knox's two-round record of 93 puts in a one tournament. "That has no significance at all. It really doesn't," Hataalsky said. "All I want to do is have a good tournament."

"It's a realistic goal for someone who missed the cut in 10 of his previous 15 events this season and is 203rd on the money list with winnings of less than $12,000.

"I'm really pleased overall," he said. "I don't think the way I'm doing so far is what I'm doing so well is the putting."

Peter Persons, Hataalsky's playing partner for the first two rounds and his closest pursuer, concurred.

Persons could do little more than shrug his head in amazement after Hataalsky's putting display Friday, which included two birdie puts on 30 feet and one from 40 feet.

"When he gets himself in position, man, he takes care of business," Persons said. "It's almost unbelievable the way he's putting."

Persons was one shot off the lead before bogeying his final two holes. He wound up with a 3-under 68 that featured seven birdies and four bogeys. "It's kind of disconcerting to make that many birdies and finish that way," Persons said.

Protesters take aim at Budd

LONDON (AP) — Anti-apartheid demonstrators attempted Friday to interfere with Zola Budd's first track appearance in Britain since she protested forced her to return to South Africa in 1987.

At least six people ran onto the track after "Pieterele led an international field into the final lap of a 2,000-meter race at the Crystal Palace. Security officials and police grabbed the six — three men and three women — before they could interfere with the race, and dragged them from the stadium.

Pieterele, formerly Zola Budd, became a British citizen in 1984 in order to compete at the Los Angeles Olympics. She was to have faced Mary Slaney of the United States on Friday, eight years after they collided during the 3,000-meter Olympic final. But Slaney withdrew Thursday with a virus.

Anti-apartheid protesters interrupted several track meets involving Budd in Britain during the mid-1980s, eventually causing her return to South Africa. Pieterele pulled up 250 meters from the finish Friday, as Britain's top 3,000-meter hope for the Barcelona Olympics, Yvonne McKelvey, won in 5 minutes, 43.49 seconds.

Michael Johnson, ranked No. 1 in the world each of the past two years in the 400, ran the 10th-fastest time ever, setting a British-all-comers' record of 43.99.

The arrangement ended weeks of uncertainty caused by United Nations sanctions against Yugoslavia, a former six-republic federation now consisting of only Serbia and Montenegro.

Yugoslavs may play Olympics

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav athletes will enter the Olympic Games as individuals and compete under the neutral Olympic flag and anthem.

The formula was accepted Friday by the Yugoslav Olympic Committee, the International Olympic Committee, Barcelona organizers and the Spanish government.

"This solution is the victory of the sports and the Olympic spirit over political violence," Aleksandar Bakocovic, president of the Yugoslav Olympic Committee, said.

IOC director-general Francois Carrard said Yugoslav Olympic officials met a Friday deadline for replying to the plan. "It's confirmed," Carrard said to IOC headquarters at Lausanne, Switzerland. "The Yugoslav athletes will participate at the Barcelona Games."

The arrangement ended weeks of uncertainty caused by United Nations sanctions against Yugoslavia, a former six-republic federation now consisting of only Serbia and Montenegro.

Buhl

In the fourth inning, Buhl started to unravel.

With two outs the Stars mounted a two-run rally that resulted in runs coming from a hit batsman and a single to center. The Stars added another run in the fifth to close the game to one at a half.

In the bottom half of the fifth, the Indians got one of the runs back on a round tripper by Mitch Brooks, his second of the day.

In the sixth the wheels fell off for the Indians. Tom Grim led off the inning with a hit to the right of first baseman Mark Iverson. Iverson had trouble handling the grounder but pitcher Steve Anderson picked up the ball. Iverson was covering first, only to have him drop the ball.

Grim advanced to second when Iverson's pick-off attempt went wide of first. A wild pitch moved Grim to third. Steve Anderson then drew a base on balls, he moved to second with a stolen base before Wiggins threw another wild pitch, scoring Grim and leaving Anderson to move to third. Mike Penz followed with a sacrifice grounder to first scoring Anderson making the score 10-10.

The Stars ran in the inning came after Ken Wilkey's wild pitch on an error. He advanced to third on another error and scored on yet another Wiggins wild pitch.

Buhl 11, Powell 7

A six run first inning proved to be too much for the Pioneers to overcome as the Indians collected their third tourney victory.

Buhl led off the game with five consecutive base hits to chase Pioneers starting pitcher Chad Ruzick after facing only five batters. Ruzick's replacement, Andy Metzler, faced slightly better allowing only three hits.

With a six run lead going into the bottom half of the first, the Indians Cliff back up gave three runs to tighten things back up.

Lowry opened the Buhl second with a dinger over the left field fence off Metzler. The Indians then added two more runs to extend their lead to 9-3 after an inning and a half.

The Pioneers didn't crumble, though. After a strikeout to start the inning, Powell ended the bases via a walk and two infield singles. Casey Covoun smashed Isom's first pitch deep over the left field fence and closed to 9-7.

Buhl added single runs in the third and fourth, the last a four bagger by Brooks, to collect the win.

Treasure Valley 11, Grand Junction 2

Treasure Valley turned a tight 4-2 game into a rout with a seven-run explosion in its half of the fourth inning.

Grand Junction pitcher Jim Serrano set the tone for the game in the first inning, walking three batters and hitting another to push across the first Treasure Valley run. It didn't get better for Grand Junction as four pitchers combined for 17 walks and five wild pitches.

The game began to unravel for Grand Junction with two out in the third inning when Serrano loaded the bases on three straight walks. Chuck Baumann hit a long fly ball that was dropped by the centerfielder allowing two runs to score. Brock Miera replaced Serrano and got out of the inning on a ground ball to third.

Three failed mistrial motions and piques of unflattering financial data, the owners say their position has not changed; they don't want to be in court.

Sides fail to reach pact in NFL suit

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Attorneys in the NFL antitrust trial have mixed feelings about coming to an out-of-court settlement during a two-week recess in the case.

After four weeks of arguments and testimony, one dismissed jury, three failed mistrial motions and piques of unflattering financial data, the owners say their position has not changed; they don't want to be in court.

'Given the history of this thing, I'm not optimistic. They (the owners) have never been people who settle. They have to be told to settle.'

The players have one witness left to call, an economist who's an expert in antitrust damages, before the owners get their chance.

The players' attorneys estimate the trial will last four more weeks after it resumes.

Depending on the length of jury deliberations, that would finish things up in late August, well into the NFL preseason.

Hopes for a quick-paced second half of the trial faded after the NFL produced its witness list, which includes 25 names.

Pocatello 9, Grand Junction 5

Pocatello bounced back in the second game of the day once it got out of a bad groove carried over from game one.

Pocatello took an early lead when Derek Anderson scored after the stole third and Grand Junction catcher Jeff Satterfield over threw the third baseman.

Grand Junction took the run right back after Pocatello sent lead off batter Brock Miera to third base with two errors on the same play. Miera scored on a wild pitch from by Jared Underwood that landed two feet in front of the plate. Grand Junction added another run on Jim Serrano's double.

The game tied 2-2 going into the third inning when Pocatello took the lead for good. Anderson reacted third on a single and an error by the right fielder. He scored on a perfectly executed suicide squeeze bunt by Luke Kockniuk who beat the throw to first.

Pocatello added two runs in the third with RBI singles by Jeremy Underwood and Matt Slayden, respectively.

Slayden picked up another two RBIs in the fifth inning with a single up the middle. Pocatello scored twice more, both on throwing Grand Junction throwing errors.

Grand Junction scored one in the fifth on an RBI single from Brock Miera. The game ended after five innings on the two-hour time limit allowed for each game.

Powell 17, Pocatello 5

The end game early for Pocatello when the game shifted for six runs in the first inning by Powell. Powell scored 17 runs in all on just six hits, but with a great deal of help from the Pocatello defense.

Pocatello fought back in the second inning with a two RBI single from Matt Swallow which scored Luke Kockniuk and Shane Wilkey.

The knock out punch came in the top of the third when Powell added 10 runs. Starting pitcher Jared Bowman walked the bases full with two out to set the stage for Powell pitcher Dave Gjobik. Gjobik narrowly missed a grand slam with a drive to center field that hit halfway up the fence for a three RBI double.

Powell added three more runs in the inning courtesy of passed balls that sent runners home from third base. Pocatello totaled nine wild pitches or passed balls for the game, six resulting in runs for Powell.

Pocatello came back with two in the fourth inning and Powell added one more in the fifth. Charles Crafts hit a solo home run for Pocatello in the bottom of the fifth to finish the scoring. The game was called after five innings due to the 10 run rule.

Recovering Angels face league's longest skid

DETROIT (AP) — The 1992 season keeps getting worse for the California Angels.

Six weeks ago, the Angels were involved in a bus crash that sidelined manager Buck Rodgers and shocked the players. Now, California is careening into the All-Star break with 11 consecutive losses — the worst skid in the major leagues this season. "I keep telling the guys that as bad as this is, it could get worse," interim manager John Wathan said. "This will end someday, but it hasn't ended yet."

After Thursday's 5-4 loss at Detroit, the Angels learned Rodgers will be out until mid-August. He had been expected back next week. "We're disappointed, but Buck has to do whatever he needs to get healthy," outfielder Chad Curtis said. "That's what is most important to all of us right now."

It didn't seem that the bus crash would put the current slide in perspective. But that's no solace to the players. "A losing streak is still a losing streak, and it still stinks," Curtis said. "It doesn't matter what has happened."

The main reason for the Angels' collapse has been a lack of offense. The Angels are last in the American League in batting average and runs scored. As a result, Jim Abbott is 4-11 despite a 2.97 ERA, eighth best in the American League. Mark Langston, the Angels' only All-Star, is 8-7. "I'm afraid our pitchers are starting to feel like they have to throw a shutout to get a win," third baseman Rene Gonzalez said. "I hope they don't feel that way, but I wouldn't blame them if they did."

Neither would Wathan. "We can't get three or four runs behind, because then we can't get back into the game," he said. "We aren't going to start hitting three-run homers all of a sudden."

As the streak gets longer, the Angels are trying to avoid pressing. Detroit first baseman Dave Bergman remembers when the Tigers did just that during 1989, when they sank to 59-103. "It's natural for the guys to start trying to do more than they can, but they can't do that," Bergman said.

pace. Gary Player finished with a 68 Friday and was in contention at 139.

Lee Trevino, playing with a pad protecting an injured left thumb, managed a 4-under 67 and was one of the lead at 140, seven strokes behind the leader. He really scrambled with eight birdies and four bogeys.

Also at 140 were Lloyd Moody, Richard Rhyan, and Larry Lawton.

The only others under par after two rounds were Jim Dent, Miller Barber and Harold Leming at 141.

It was an impressive display by Stockton, who ranks second only to Trevino in putting statistics among seniors. He used a 30-year old putter restricted from a storeroom for this tournament because he felt the ball came off the blade softer and insured a little more loft.

He overcame tough pin placements and spike pook-marks customarily found during a late afternoon round. He said of the placements, "they have to put them somewhere and I'll find them."

Stockton started the day deadlocked with Kiefer, the little-known club pro from Newton, N.J., each with 4-under 67s in Thursday's first round.

Stockton took the lead on the eighth hole with a 30-foot birdie putt to go 6-under and never was headed. Kiefer shot par 71 for a two-round total of 138, five back.

Masingill said. "The three-putt on the next hole was caused by the tee shot, simply not knowing what club to hit."

The colorful Malay, a former champion, lives and dies by his driver and today it was about a top up.

"I played better today than I have been. I would have taken the 73 before I teed off," he said.

He was one-under standing on No. 15 tee. "I had just made a good birdie and I wasn't trying to bite off a lot (of a right dogleg)."

The ball seemed destined for a perfect spot in front of the tee, but was never seen again. It's presumed lost in some fairway spruce trees.

"With these doglegs, sooner or later you have to get through these blue spruce," Malay said. "I have had my lumps, now let the other guys take theirs the next two days."

The Magic Valley representatives were paced by Burley's Terry Spackman who had an even par 72.

Senior state champion Glenn Blakeley simply rolled his eyes when asked about his 82 in the opening round. Newly-married Jason Meyerhoffer was no show.

U.S. team poised to dominate Summer Games

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — This time, there are no excuses, no blaming inexperience, lack of money, decrepit gyms, ruthlessly efficient communist sports factories.

This time, the oldest, richest, best-trained and deepest U.S. Olympic team in history is going to the Summer Games amid a shifting political landscape, with every expectation of regaining world dominance in sports.

This time the playing field is level, as U.S. Olympic Committee vice president George Steinbrener puts it, or tilted in America's favor, as other nations see it.

In short, Spain's fiesta is looking like America's picnic. And not just in basketball, where the zillionaire Dream Team is poised to bully the world and turn the second half of their games into garbage time. That prospect of overkill worries NBC, which could blow more than $300 million on the Games between its regular broadcasts, its pay-TV flagstar and lost revenues from promotional costs.

In track, swimming, volleyball, wrestling, you name it, the USOC pumped more than $300 million into spending on athletes and training facilities over the past four years to keep older champions competing and develop younger ones.

Corporations tossed in millions more to sweeten the deal for elite athletes, all in the name of fair play and good business.

Five hundred years after Spain's king and queen shipped off Christopher Columbus in search of Oriental spices and treasures, the "New World" he bumped into is coming back in quest of gold, silver and bronze. The United States could sail away with 120 medals — 26 more than four years ago in Seoul — with a little luck in yachting, rowing and other sports it was sinking money and effort into.

The Americans are planning, at the very least, their biggest medal haul since a table-topping 107 in Mexico City in 1968 — not counting the Soviet bloc-boycotted 1984 Los Angeles Games. With 783 medals up for grabs, they have a good chance of leaping past the still-potent, Russian-led Unified Team and a united Germany.

The Soviet Union and East Germany, before their economies, political systems and sports machines broke down, finished one-two in 1976, '80 and '88. But the upheaval of the past few years will be much more apparent than they were in the smaller Winter Games, which always favor the snow-bound, mountainous countries of Europe.

Familiar faces will be missing — Carl Lewis in the sprints, Butch Reynolds in the 400, Greg Foster and Edwin Moses in the hurdles, Greg Louganis in diving — but there is enough of a blend of older and younger athletes to make that more than make up for their absence.

Jackie Joyner-Kersey looks golden again in the heptathlon and long jump, as do Janet Evans and teens Anita Nall, Summer Sanders and Jenny Thompson in swimming.

Dave Johnson remains a favorite to win the decathlon gold and that glorious title, "World's Greatest Athlete," especially since he won't be challenged by Dan O'Brien.

The bizarre miscalculation by O'Brien while pole vaulting in the trials as he chased a world record cost him a spot in the Games and probably a medal for the U.S. team, not to mention $10 million or so in endorsements if he won.

This Olympics marks a watershed not only for the United States, but for the rest of the world.

For the first time in two decades, nobody's boycotting. Instead, a record 10,000 athletes, professionals and amateurs, from at least 172 countries, are gathering in this rapidly modernized metropolis, once a Roman outpost, nestled between the mountains and the Mediterranean Sea.

Cuba, suffering economically and absent from the Olympics since the 1980 Moscow Games, still has superb athletes in baseball, boxing and track, and is likely to challenge the giant Chinese team, with its young divers and gymnasts, for the fourth spot.

The next generation of American baseball stars will preview its talent against perhaps the last generation of Castro-controlled Cuban stars.

They met in a thriller at the Pan American Games in Havana a year ago, Cuba cking out a 3-2 victory over a less-powerful U.S. team than the one now, and the sequel could be just as dramatic.

South Africa's athletes, banned from the Games for 32 years by politics, also have returned — barely avoiding another politically charged move to keep them out.

The Unified Team, facing disunity as the separate republics prepare to go their own ways in four years, still boasts some of the planet's finest athletes.

None soars higher than pole-vaulter Sergei Bubka, favored to repeat as gold medalist.

Germany, the wall fallen between East and West, has a united team for the first time since 1964, and other nations will be proudly waving the flags of their new-found independence: Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Slovenia and Croatia.

Meanwhile, Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, which hosted the 1984 Winter Games, lies in ruin from civil war. For all the idealism of the Olympic Games, they cannot escape drugs, politics and the threat of terrorism.

First held in 776 B.C. to pay homage to Zeus and offer a break from the battlefield, the Games are as contemporary as the latest performance-enhancing steroids, civil wars and social unrest.

Those who cannot ignore the threat of ETA, the Basque separatists who have been waging a 23-year war of attrition with the Spanish government, ETA, closes to blow-up policemen or anybody with a Spanish uniform," says a U.S. security expert.

"There's always the danger of an innocent bystander getting hurt," his advice: Stay away from groups of policemen and soldiers.

Some 10,000 army troops have been assisting police prior to the Games, while 3,000 soldiers patrol the Pyrenees border with France and another 3,000 are deployed at airports, railway stations, power plants and other strategic sites.

Staunchly-proud Catalans, who demand autonomy for the Barcelona region, are more likely to resort to pranks than to terrorism, the security official says. "They might jump into a pool or foul up a race, but they're not seen as a major threat," he says.

Keep an eye out for muggers and pickpockets, though. Sleep late, dine late, and be prepared to spend plenty of pesetas. Cash and credit spoken here.

Time moves unevenly in Barcelona, fast and slow, like the passionate and melancholy rhythms of flamenco. It is a city of lazy, languid mornings, bustling, steamy afternoons, balmy, romantic nights, and never-ending parties all day long.

Antoni Gaudi's gaudy masterpiece, the multi-spired church of the Sagrada Familia, remains unfinished more than a century after it was begun. But hotels, arenas and thousands of businesses have sprung in a flourish of enterprise since the 1975 death of dictator Francisco Franco set off celebrations in a city that hated him.

Barcelona, ravaged through history by invasions, plague and civil war, endures and thrives with all its problems. So, too, will its Olympics.

Another top 800-meter runner, despite all the tests and warnings by the International Olympic Committee and legal tribulations of Butch Reynolds, who won his case in the U.S. courts, but lost on the track.

"There's a runner who I know is an American who won a gold medal at Seoul but didn't get caught like Canada's Ben Johnson, winner, then he judges in the 100.

"He was using it at Korea," Gray said of the American, whose name he refused to disclose. "I thought for sure he'd get busted. Other athletes also used drugs and didn't get caught. You can pretty much judge who's on steroids if you know the sport. You can judge by the consistency of the athlete."

NBC plans better coverage

NEW YORK (AP) — Same network, different look — NBC, whose coverage of the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul got poor reviews and disappointing ratings, is planning dramatic changes this time around in Barcelona.

Tap instead of live. Bob Costas instead of Bryant Gumbel. More sports, less news. Fewer features, more action. New music, new graphics, even a new camera.

Almost everything will be different except the NBC peacock.

"I admire a lot of the things we did in Seoul, but obviously we think there is room for improvement," says Dick Ebersol, NBC Sports president since 1989. "We're not changing just for the sake of change. We're changing because we want to present a better product."

The biggest change will be the taped telecasts. Because of the six-hour time difference between Barcelona and New York, virtually all of the 161 hours of coverage will be prerecorded. Four years ago, almost everything was live from Seoul.

The taped format worked well for CBS at the Winter Olympics in France, and NBC hopes to duplicate that success in Barcelona.

"When you're on tape, the emphasis is on the story instead of the results," Ebersol says. "A lot of people will already know the results when we go on the air. So we've got to capture their attention by tightly editing the action and turning it into a compelling story. To maintain suspense — or the illusion of suspense — NBC won't reveal the results of an event before it is telecast. "Absolutely not," Ebersol says. "Anybody who wants to find out the results before we go on the air can do it very easily. All they have to do is watch CNN or ESPN or call one of those sports-phone numbers."

While viewers won't get results right away, they won't have to wait long for action each night.

"Within 60 minutes after we go on the air, you'll be seeing Michael Jordan dunking or Carl Lewis jumping or some other athlete in action," Ebersol promises. "We're not going to waste a lot of time with canned stories and advance buildup. We'll give you the basic information you need and take you right to the arena."

NBC is going to use far fewer "up-close and personal" profiles in Barcelona than it did in Seoul, replacing them with stories on past Olympians and Olympic controversies. "We've got one on the U.S. basketball team that lost in Munich, one on Olga Korbut and another on Key Robinson, one of the U.S. sprinters who was disqualified for showing up late for the 100-meter race in 1972," Ebersol says. "We've also got a piece on swimmer Rick DeMont, who lost his gold medal because he took a banned medication for asthma."

NBC created controversy in Seoul with its aggressive coverage of stories like the mini-riot at the boxing venue, the Ben Johnson steroid scandal and the tensions between North and South Korea.

While the network remains committed to covering breaking news in Spain, Ebersol doesn't expect as many non-sports distractions this time.

"I think these Games will be a pure sports celebration," he says. "Nobody is boycotting, the South Africans are back for the first time since 1960 and Germany is one nation again. Hopefully, we can forge politics for a couple of weeks and just enjoy the sports."

One of the biggest stories will be basketball's Dream Team, the first group of NBA stars to represent the United States in the Olympics. Although the team, which includes Magic Johnson, Larry Bird and Michael Jordan, is expected to breeze to the gold medal, NBC expects the marquee names to draw a large TV audience.

TV watchers eye TripleCast with skepticism

NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman recently did one of his tongue-in-cheek Top 10 lists on sports that will be shown on NBC's "Olympics TripleCast."

Among the competitors: blindfolded fencing, endurance squatting, speed-walking with a bad rash and rhythmic blinking.

Letterman wasn't the first person to make fun of the pay-per-view production that will offer viewers round-the-clock coverage of everything from basketball and boxing to synchronized swimming and rhythmic gymnastics.

Envisioned as a bold advance in sports television, the TripleCast has become the butt of jokes and a potential financial disaster for NBC and Cablevision, its partner in the joint venture.

Sales are slow, customers are confused and industry analysts predict the project could lose up to $150 million.

Even Chuck Dolan, the chairman of Cablevision, admits: "We might lose our shirt."

With 161 hours of Olympic coverage available for free on NBC, it seems only the most fanatic fans are willing to fork over $125 for a 15-day package that will feature so many events it takes three channels to show them all. Some cable systems also are offering a one-day option for $29.95.

What you get for your money is complete, commercial-free coverage of every major event and many minor ones.

If, for instance, you absolutely must see every stroke in swimming, every punch in boxing or every pedal in cycling, the Red channel is for you. If you can't get to sleep without watching the latest 300-somersault in pike position or getting an update on the unreported errors in the Steffi Graf match, the White channel is your ticket. Basketball, volleyball, wrestling and water polo junkies will prefer the Blue channel. "For the first time in Olympic history, you'll be able to watch every event you're interested in," NBC Sports president Dick Ebersol says.

But is there enough interest to justify 12 hours of live programming and 12 hours of taped telecasts each day? Apparently not, if you base your judgment on the slim advance sales.

"We're getting the real heavy fan, but the number is barely worth counting," Seth Morrison, marketing director for San Francisco-based Viacom Cable, recently told The New York Times.

NBC won't comment on how many TripleCast customers have signed up, but the Wall Street Journal recently estimated the figure at 5,000.

4 adult sockeye salmon head for Redfish Lake

REDFISH LAKE — Four adult sockeye salmon now are on their way to their namesake lake in the Sawtooth Mountains.

One fish was spotted in June. Three more were seen this week passing the Lower Granite Dam. All four are believed headed for Redfish Lake.

And more apparently are on the way.

A total of 15 sockeye have been spotted in the lower Snake River. But they haven't yet passed the Lower Granite Dam. Only those that pass the dam are believed headed for Idaho.

The famous red fish was declared an endangered species in 1991. Any fish that do return to the Idaho lake will be captured in an effort to restore the run.

TWIN FALLS — Police here are looking for two people who have taken purses from women outside two Twin Falls stores recently.

"Someone had to have seen something," Twin Falls police Lt. Jim Kistler said, referring to the most recent attack on a 24-year-old woman outside the Smith's Food and Drug Center on Addison Avenue Tuesday afternoon.

A man and a woman, both in their early 20s and with long hair, asked the victim for a quarter, then grabbed her purse and ran away, Kistler said.

Two people with the same description hit a woman outside the Shopko Department Store several days earlier after asking for directions to Jerome. That woman also had her purse stolen.

Anyone with information regarding the thefts can call police at 736-2200.

Sawtooth National Forest updates maps of south side

TWIN FALLS — A new, updated map of the southern portion of the Sawtooth National Forest is now available.

The one-half-mile-to-the-inch map shows land ownership, roads and trails and recreation sites on both the Burley and Twin Falls Ranger Districts.

The maps are $2 each and are available at the Sawtooth National Forest offices in Burley, Twin Falls, Fairfield and Ketchum.

Fire district commissioners plan to hold meeting Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — Commissioners of the new fire district in unincorporated Twin Falls County will hold a quarterly meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m.

District Commissioner Diane Bolt said, the meeting will focus on the arrival of new fire trucks and a start-up date for the district.

The meeting takes place at Twin Falls Fire Department station No. 1 at 345 Second Avenue East. The meeting will be in the east classroom, Bolt said.

Department allocates more than $10 million for children

BOISE — The U.S. Department of Education has earmarked almost $10.3 million to aid Idaho's disabled children.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said in a news release that the money is in four grants, including three to the Idaho Department of Education's Division of Special Education. The fourth goes to Idaho State University.

The biggest single grant, for almost $8.9 million, will be used to help an estimated 21,661 disabled Idaho students. Another $850,000 will be used to identify and assist families with infants and toddlers with disabilities.

A third grant of $446,072 may be used to acquire equipment or supply educational supplements for about 1,100 disabled students.

The $96,758 Idaho State University grant will finance instruction for adults interested in helping with Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, or public school special education programs.

Hagerman water troubles continue

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — City officials are trying to stay afloat in a wave of water problems. Springs that supply Hagerman city water are dropping; water pressure is low; citizens no longer want to share single water lines, and the deadline to apply for 1993 grants for a new system is fast approaching.

To conserve water, residents were asked last month not to sprinkle their yards between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

"We're not getting 100 percent cooperation, but we're getting enough to get by," City Superintendent Richard Scruggs told the local council Thursday.

Contrary to local rumors, the city has not sold or traded away any spring water rights, Scruggs said. The water levels have just dropped.

Potter Springs has gone down by half since January, he said, and Big Springs has dropped about 14 inches.

Less watering during the day has helped, even though some people refuse to cooperate with the voluntary restriction, Scruggs said.

"People are more aware of the problem, and they're not wasting water so much," he said.

Scruggs said he has purchased about $8,000 worth of gravel and chip material to repave city streets.

Mayor Jim Martin said the streets will be patched for now until the city gets a new water system. Otherwise, he said, new streets would be torn up to install the system.

Hene Turner and Lysle Gilmore said they have houses that are sharing single water lines with other households. They asked the council to provide an individual line to each house.

Councilman Mike Winther asked them to wait until the city puts in a new water system, at which time all lines will be replaced.

"I'm not pushing it," Gilmore said. "I just want you to be aware that I've got a problem over there."

"Everybody's got a water problem," Councilman Gary Grissom responded.

Martin tabled the issue, saying the city will do whatever is possible as money is available.

Grissom lamented that the $475 spent to have a mayor recall election this week could have paid for a few new water lines.

Martin said he plans to leave most all city work to the council members during the next two months and work exclusively on preparing a water grant application.

If the application is ready by the November deadline, Hagerman will have to wait another year to apply for federal funding, he said.

In other business:

Councilman Doug Wickham, who was appointed in April, turned in his resignation. Wickham said he has moved outside the city limits and so was obligated to resign, even though the move is only temporary.

Martin said he regrets losing Wickham. "When we get a young guy that's as active and interested as that, we hate to let him go," he said.

The mayor said he will talk with everyone who is interested in taking Wickham's place on the council and then will appoint a person, subject to council

Attorney challenges license law

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After complaining locally, contacting state officials and finally filing a lawsuit, attorney Joe Stanzak got his driver's license renewed without having to disclose his Social Security number.

But that doesn't mean you can, too.

Stanzak, who unsuccessfully ran for Twin Falls County prosecutor this year, challenged a new provision of state law that requires all applicants for driver's licenses to provide their Social Security numbers on their applications.

But the same new law bars Social Security numbers from being used on the licenses themselves after Jan. 1, 1993.

The Idaho Transportation Department says it needs to keep the numbers on file for bookkeeping persons and to cut down on license fraud.

But Stanzak said forcing him to reveal his Social Security number in order to get a driver's license was an invasion of his privacy, in light of the amount of computerized information about people that can be accessed using their Social Security numbers.

After he was turned down for a new license earlier this week, Stanzak complained to local and state officials but got nowhere. So he filed a civil complaint Wednesday in the Circuit Court, charging the transportation department and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office — a division of which administers the driver's license office — with violating his civil rights.

In his complaint, Stanzak cited that the 1992 Legislature passed two laws amending Idaho's statutes that deal with driver's license applications. One amendment required all license applicants to provide their Social Security numbers, he said, while the other required it only of applicants for commercial driver's licenses.

Stanzak argued that since he was applying for a regular license, he didn't have to provide his Social Security number.

The transportation department, however, said the amendments were clearly intended to require Social Security numbers from everyone, and refused to renew Stanzak's license without his number.

The attorney general's office supports that interpretation of the law, said Doug Kraemer, the transportation department's chief of motor vehicles.

On the same day Stanzak filed his suit, Judge Daniel C. Hurlbutt issued a temporary restraining order that effectively required the driver's license office to give Stanzak his license. Hurlbutt did not rule.

Border Patrol makes 60 arrests

The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BLACKFOOT — Sixty illegal aliens have been arrested in eastern and southern Idaho and ordered deported.

The aliens, who were transported to Denver on Friday, were caught in the U.S. Border Patrol's first sweep of the area in five years. Twenty-nine of the aliens were captured in eastern Idaho and held in the Bingham County Jail and the other 31 were taken into custody in southern Idaho.

Seventeen of the illegal aliens, all males, were housed in the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Facility from Wednesday until early Friday. Sgt. Lamar Hurd of the Cassia County Sheriff's Office said.

Two of the people caught in the Wednesday and Thursday night sweeps by a Border Patrol team were from El Salvador, and the rest were from Mexico.

The eastern Idaho detainees reportedly worked at local farms and potato processing plants in the Blackfoot, Idaho Falls and Rigby areas.

Discount grocery chain acquires land

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Waremart Foods has purchased land near the new Target Store in north Twin Falls, but hasn't decided what to do with it yet.

"We just felt that's where we want to be, and rather than have somebody else move there we bought it," Waremart President William Long said.

The Boise-based discount grocer just targeted a deal on eight acres south of Target, near the Pole Line Road-Blue Lakes Boulevard North intersection.

The company has 18 stores in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California. Its store in Twin Falls is located at 1708 Kimber Road.

But the lease at that space doesn't expire until 1995, Long said, and the company will have to find another tenant to take over the lease or decide if Twin Falls can support two stores.

"We're not really even certain when we're going to build," Long said. "We don't even know if we'll keep both stores open."

The new store will probably be larger than Waremart's 40,000-square-foot Kimberly Road store. Its stores range from 28,000 square feet to 80,000 square feet.

Long is president of a company that he led into an employee buyout in 1985, when the heirs of founder Ralph Ward put the grocery chain on the selling block.

Waremart is entirely employee owned. Non-union employees qualify to receive stock after six months of work, and receive stock based on their comparative earnings.

Since the 1985 employee buyout, Waremart's value has increased from a net worth of $13 million to about $45 million.

Former Jerome mayor balanced the budget with slot machines

By H.R. Weikel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — How do you pull a city out of debt and not raise taxes — or maybe even reduce them?

Well, as a city official you could institute gambling in town and allow your government to pocket half the profits.

That's exactly what former Jerome Mayor John W. Hosman did — and managed to not only oil city government with the new-found revenue, but also a few city streets.

Hosman, now 83 and still living in Jerome, was able to do it because being mayor 40 years ago was a whole different matter than today.

Back in 1947, the octogenarian pulled the city out of the red, paid for a few pet projects and left office with the coffers full.

During his six years in office, Hosman says he instituted some of the biggest improvements in town, including a new sewer system.

And, he adds, those were just a few of his goals. Hosman spent most of his life helping others and, in spite of failing health, is still doing so today.

When he took office in the mid-40s, Hosman says he found the city $60,000 in debt, and when he left, he passed on a surplus of $80,000. Hosman did it by asking local businessmen — the owners of restaurants, service stations, smoke shops and pool halls — to place slot machines in their establishments.

At the time, gambling was quasi-illegal — what Hosman calls a shady area in the law. But Hosman figured if Sun Valley could operate slots in town, Jerome could as well.

"Before putting the slots in, I called all the ministers together to see what they thought," Hosman said. "They told me they didn't think we should use that dirty money in Jerome."

"But I just told them, 'Well, we're putting it in a dirty place, and went ahead on the sewer project.'"

"We paid it off in my two terms as mayor. From then on we did things on a cash basis," Hosman recalled. "We reduced taxes during

By Bertilla L. Redfern
Times News correspondent

FILER — Between half and three-fourths of Filer secondary school students, their parents and community members think discipline and drug and alcohol abuse are serious problems in the Filer schools.

That's one of the results of a survey taken last December by a county commission by the Filer School District.

The survey, done by the National Study of School Evaluations, included teachers, parents, community members, Filer middle school students and high school seniors. Hollister reported sixth-graders and Filer High graduates.

Respondents filled out questionnaires containing between 38 and 67 questions, asking respondents to indicate degree of agreement or disagreement with a series of statements. A total of 444 responses were tabulated.

Among its highlights:

- Half the Filer seniors and graduates said cheating is a problem in the school system.
- Parents wanted more emphasis on academics and less on sports and other activities.
- Among teachers and staff wanted more emphasis on computer education and humanities courses, and some also wanted more physical education.
- Students wanted more activities.
- Fully 93 percent of teachers and staff felt that Filer teachers are competent, while only 79 percent of the community and 73 percent of parents shared the same view.

The survey cost the district about $700. An edited version can be obtained at the school district office, and a shorter summary is also available.

Overall the district had more positive input than negative, but Superintendent Jim Fisher said he wished it had all been favorable.

"We'll conduct another survey in a year or two, to see how we are doing," he said.

Fisher said the district has done a number of things already, as a result of the survey.

A newsletter is now being published six times during the school year to help keep the community better informed, he said. Discipline policies have been reworked, and personnel changes are also taking place.

"If we create something, whether it be parking or anything else, we better be in line to maintain it too," he said.

Blanchard noted that the county is developing a cooperative agreement with the Recreation District for maintenance of the Broadford Open Space.

"But unless it's written in, most of those things get overlooked," McDonald said.

County planner John Gaeddert's suggestion that the maintenance clause be included in another section of the subdivision ordinance concerning land dedications was accepted by the commission.

A separate amendment on maintenance, as well as definitions of passive parks, active parks and other recreational land uses will be introduced at a later date.

Blaine relaxes open-space rules

By Michael Hofberber
Times News correspondent

HAYLEY — Open space in Blaine County is being redefined to settle a debate over management of a five-acre parcel of riverfront property near Bellevue.

The Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission, meeting Thursday night, agreed to a new definition of "open space" in the county's subdivision ordinance. A similar change is proposed for the county zoning ordinance.

"When does open space become 'not open space'?" asked county planner Linda Haavik, posing the question that the commission tried to settle.

The existing open space definition, which prohibits fences, trails, roads, parking or any physical structures, has handicapped the county's attempts to manage five acres of land donated by developers of the Broadford Polo Club subdivision in 1985.

"There's a difference between open space and a park," county commissioner Tom Blanchard pointed out.

"We talked 'park' with the developers. But when the plat came out it said 'open space,' and so we're hung with our own definition."

The change in definition approved by the planning commission Thursday would allow fences, trails, parking and irrigation systems on public open space. A similar definition will apply to private open space as well.

"Fences are appropriate in open space," said commissioner John Gladies. "Otherwise you're creating open range."

Commissioner John McDonald argued for a clause requiring maintenance of any public open space.

"If we create something, whether it be parking or anything else, we better be in line to maintain it too," he said.

Judge refuses bail for Lafferty

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Self-proclaimed prophet Ronald Lafferty will stay in jail, Utah County Jail officials announced today, after a judge refused bail for his second trial for kidnapping.

A judge has refused bail to Lafferty, who was convicted along with his brother, Dan, in the deaths of their sister-in-law and her 15-month-old daughter.

The brothers claimed the killings were ordered by God. Brenda Wright Lafferty and Erica Lafferty died July 24, 1984 at their American Fork home. The baby's throat was cut in its crib. Brenda Lafferty, a former Idaho beauty queen from Kimberly, was beaten and stabbed to death.

Dan Lafferty was sentenced to life in prison after a jury deadlocked on the death penalty. Lafferty was tried separately after a jail suicide attempt that left him brain damaged. He was sentenced to death.

The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in March that Lafferty's original trial judge used the wrong legal standard to find him competent to stand trial. Under the proper standard, Lafferty's religious delusions could have been judged as indications of incompetence, the court said.

Michael Esplin, the attorney who represented Lafferty in his appeals, said earlier that justice was served by the appeals court.

"It was apparent to anyone who spent time with Ron that there were not both ours in the water," Esplin said shortly after the rulings. "His delusional system affected his very ability to understand the court proceedings."

During a bail hearing Friday, public defender John Musselman said Lafferty would prefer bail.

"But I doubt he could make bail because of his limited resources," he said.

Lafferty responded: "I have $50 out at the prison. Will that do?"

Judge Carlton Christensen appointed a public defender for Lafferty, but ordered Utah County Attorney Kay Bryson to contact Esplin about continuing with the case.

Lafferty told the judge he is concerned about being represented by a public defender.

"They're paid by the state. When it's the state versus me, why should I have the state's children protect me?" he said. "I want someone who's motivated by justice, not policy and procedure."

Christensen set a July 17 hearing to appoint an attorney. A trial date will be set later.

Gamble

Profits from the gambling devices paid for the city swimming pool, and went toward paving more than 110 blocks of streets and a playground in one of the parks.

Hosman received a monthly salary of $15.

"But they raised me to $25, because I never turned in a bill for my expenses," he said.

"I wanted happiness more than money," Hosman added with a smile.

At the time, Hosman was 36, one of the youngest mayors to run Jerome.

He credits some of his success to listening to other people in town — especially the older folks in what are known today as town meetings.

"I was just a kid," he said. "I learned a lot from those old people. We met in a councilman's house every month," he said. "They furnished coffee; we bought the drinks, and a people just came to talk. We didn't have the complaints they have now."

Hosman was not only well used to listening to others, but also helping them.

Before he took over as mayor, Hosman delivered gasoline and oil from his Comco gas station.

Soon Hosman started taking orders for groceries for some down-and-out families and delivering them, as well.

He took people to the doctors and hospital and carried messages to those without telephones.

"In that hard winter in 1947 and 1948, there were nights when I had to follow a snow plow to get through," he said.

Hosman went on to served on the hospital board and was instrumental in raising funds for a dialysis machine after his late wife, Irene, began to suffer from a fatal kidney disease.

And although Hosman is aging himself these days, he is still helping people.

He has become an expert candy maker, including in homemade white and Brazil nut fudge that he delivers to the residents of the Senior Citizen Center.

Today, Hosman says things would run another overall if people talked to each other more — and that's especially true in city government.

"I don't think (officials) listen to the people like we used to," Hosman said. "They seem to have their own program and forget about what the people are thinking."

Obituary

Hubert S. Coats
BOISE — Hubert S. Coats, well-known retired Idaho banker, died Thursday, July 9, 1992, at St. Luke's Medical Center after a long illness.

Hugh was born Feb. 27, 1926, in Julesburg, Colo. While still serving in the U.S. Navy during World War II, he married Edna Marie Hastings in Elko, Nev., July 13, 1946. Edna died in 1988. Hugh had two delightful grown sons, both of whom died tragically. Larry Dale died while serving in Vietnam and Matthew Daniel in a car accident. The Coats were blessed with three grandchildren and a daughter-in-law, Faith Childers of Caldwell. Hugh worked for First Security Bank for nearly 34 years.

He began his banking career as a bookkeeper and rose to be manager of banks in Twin Falls, Rupert, Coeur d'Alene and Pocatello with the title of vice president. He later held First Security and became regional vice president of Idaho Bank and Trust, moving to Boise, and was promoted to senior vice president and assistant to the president. Idaho Bank and Trust later became Key Bank of Idaho from which Hugh retired in 1988 due to ill health.

Hugh was very active in community activities in each of the cities in which he and Edna lived over the many years. In Boise, he was well known as the chairman of the board of the Idaho Housing Authority, making a number of trips to eastern cities in this capacity. Hugh raised thousands of dollars for a great number of charities including: Fundy, Sales and Marketing Executives and various chambers of commerce. As a staunch life-long Democrat, he was treasurer for Gov. John Evans and readily volunteered to assist other candidates. Everyone who had contact with Hubert found him a real friend. He was honored by the Idaho Statesman as its distinguished citizen.

Hugh is survived by his wife, Edna, Mr. and Mrs. brothers, Chet Coats and Richard Stockton, and a sister, Linda Stockton. He was preceded in death by his parents.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at Summers Funeral Home, Boise, Chapel. The Rev. Tom Tucker of the Cathedral of the Church will officiate. The family requests that memorials be made to the American Heart Association of Idaho.

Beverly and Ed Wickham presented plans for a 59-space recreational vehicle park at the north end of Hagerman.

The park will have its own water, but will be allowed to use the city sewer system. The RV park plan has received tentative approval of the Hagerman Planning and Zoning Commission, Martin said, adding, "It's a beautiful project."

He predicted that this area and several others will be annexed into the city when the city has an adequate water system. Meanwhile, a moratorium remains on hookups outside city limits.

Ed Wickham said construction will begin this fall after the waterlines have been harvested from that land.

The park will be attractively landscaped with trees and other plants, he said, and cabins for hunters eventually may be added.

Martin said the failed recall election shows that he and the council members must be doing something right.

"It showed that the people like the way we're going," he said, "and we're going to continue that way."

In response to charges during the recall that he could not get along with the council members and was taking away their power, Martin asked, "Do you feel that I'm being out of line in any way?"

Councilman Lyle Cornelison and Winter said Martin is doing fine.

Grisson, kidding Martin about forgetting the councilmen's names, said, "If you can get that straight I'm 100 percent behind you."

Don't miss the bus in your community

I recently read the following story and I want to share it with you.

A busy farmer and his wife lived many miles from town. In the middle of a hectic harvest season, the farmer's mother phoned and said she was coming for a visit and would arrive on the bus the following day.

The farmer's wife asked him to do some errands while he was in town. She gave him a list to be picked up. Late that evening, he returned home with all the groceries and supplies

Dale R. Metzger
Clergy's corner

she'd asked for. Puzzled, his wife asked, "But where's your mother? Did she miss the bus?"

"Good grief," he said. "She wasn't on the list and I forgot all about her."

We can easily become preoccupied with routines, responsibilities and stresses of our lives that we leave one of the most important items off our list - people. When that happens, we miss the bus.

Are we missing the bus in our local communities? I hope and pray not. The No. 1 one concern, no matter in which community we reside, should be people!

Jesus said the most important commandment is "Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength! The second is this: Love your neighbor as yourself. There is no commandment greater than these."

Care about one another so you don't miss the bus!

Dale R. Metzger is the pastor of Kimberly/Lansen/Murtaugh United Methodist Church.

This is the second week for The Times-News's redesigned religion pages.

In case you missed last week's announcement, here's a brief summary of the changes:

- Weekly columns by local religious leaders. (We welcome contributions.)
- Letters from readers on religious issues. (Please write!)
- Stories and news briefs about local, church-related topics. (Suggestions are welcome.)
- A column on local missionaries. (Again, we welcome contributions.)

- National religious news.
- Syndicated religion columnist Clark Morphey.

To make room for all this, we no longer will publish a weekly listing of church services. Though we realize some readers may miss this old standby, we hope the new format will give a broader, more interesting look at religious life and church events.

True martyrs have their lot cast upon them

A long time ago, I met a man I have never been able to forget, a preacher destined to become a martyr in his homeland of Ethiopia.

His name was Gudina Tumsa, who had been sent to the United States to study theology in preparation for the top leadership post in his church, the Ethiopian Evangelical Lutheran Church of Mekane Yesus.

Tumsa came to Minnesota to study at Luther Northwestern Seminary in St. Paul. I happened to be a student there, too, and the vice president of the student body. It was my duty to help raise money to pay living expenses for Tumsa and other foreign students.

Tumsa came to town with one black suit that amply covered his lanky frame. I think he wore the same suit every day during his three years in the United States. He lived in a seminary dormitory, slept on a narrow cot, took his meals in the dining hall and always presented a contented image, a demeanor of goodwill and wit.

In spite of his limited lifestyle, Tumsa persevered and learned both English and Greek (as used in the New Testament), completing the grueling three-year course and earning a master's degree in theology. After graduation, Gudina Tumsa returned to Ethiopia to become general secretary of Mekane Yesus, the top post in his denomination.

Clark Morphey

Less than a dozen years after his graduation, Tumsa came up against the terrible Marxist regime of Mengistu Haile Mariam, a brutal dictator who terrorized the entire nation but particularly churches.

In spite of the oppressive measures against religion, the government asked church leaders to publicly proclaim that the Marxist regime was not an enemy of Christianity and that churches were free to do their ministry without government interference.

Tumsa refused. In July 1979, Tumsa and his wife were abducted as they left an evening church service. His wife, Teschaye, spent 10 years in prison. Gudina Tumsa disappeared from the face of the Earth.

Tumsa's disappearance became a major cause for civil rights groups, such as Amnesty International. For 13 years, Tumsa's fate was not revealed, and the government insisted he was imprisoned but alive.

Then this April, his body was exhumed from a government compound in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and Tumsa was declared officially dead. Cause of death was listed as torture and strangulation.

Tumsa is the only true martyr I've known personally. He was not much different from other students who labored over theological studies during that time. He probably sat in his room in the seminary dormitory looking at pictures of his wife and children, and he may have wept from loneliness.

At the same time, one can imagine that he probably had some apprehension about returning to his homeland, knowing that he and the people of his church would face government oppression and a continuous famine. As general secretary, Tumsa probably figured he would fall on his sword the moment he re-entered the African continent.

I wonder if people have an inner sense that they will someday be martyred for a great cause. Martin Luther King Jr. expected his life to end at the hands of others. I wonder if Gudina Tumsa harbored the same fears for his life as he worked to relieve suffering in Ethiopia.

In my mind, one thing seems certain: True martyrs do not choose their lot. It falls upon them in the same way that great suffering crushes entire nations. Martyrdom is something to be endured, bravely, if possible, and always with dignity.

Here in North America, we have few modern martyrs, men and women who are willing to walk to their deaths for a compelling cause. But all over the world, in Asia, Eastern Europe, Africa, Central America and South America, literally thousands of men and women are dying at the hands of other human beings for faith, freedom and justice.

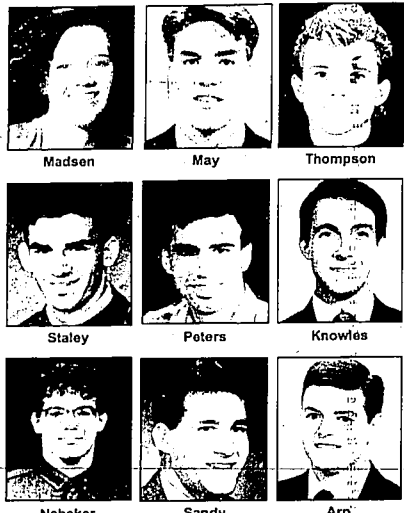

Most of them are sustained by one thing, an intense faith that compels them to work for a better, more just world. Religion does not make martyrs, it props them up for the long haul into suffering and death.

Oppression makes martyrs. Tyrants drive men and women to martyrdom. Religion is the balm that comforts them and the force that drives them forward into eternity.

So, I bid a final farewell to an old friend. Rest peacefully, Gudina, my brother. I'm glad you are safe in the hands of God.

Clark Morphey is an ordained clergyman and a writer for the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press.

Bishops differ on women's rights Letter

The Associated Press

Terrance Swooney was expelled from the Jesuit priesthood for printing controversial information concerning the admission of women to priesthood.

A question mark hangs over the long struggle of Roman Catholic bishops to formulate their views on the rights of women. Will the result ever be acceptable? It seems caught in an odd dilemma.

As some bishops note, if they simply give in and concede nothing, they'd appear to be shirking their duty to teach.

But even if they wanted to allow equal ecclesiastical status to women, Vatican policy wouldn't permit that — or what surveys indicate most Catholics favor, women's admission to the priesthood.

"In many ways we're in a no-win situation," said Bishop Michael D. Pfeiffer of San Antonio, Texas. He said bishops confront an issue "about which we cannot speak and are not ready to speak."

Bishop Pierre DuMaine of San Jose, Calif., in the bishops' first open debate on the long-considered subject at their recent meeting at the University of Notre Dame, put it this way:

"We've gone about as far as we can go."

However, a growing number of bishops would like to go further, as indicated in the new book, "A Church Divided," by Terrance Swooney, a former Jesuit priest expelled for refusing Vatican orders to suppress his dissent.

He says confidential surveys of U.S. bishops found those favoring ordaining women to the diaconate rose from 28 percent in 1985 to 40 percent in 1990, and rose from 8 percent to 14 percent for admitting them as priests.

Also, he says, the findings show bishops favoring optional celibacy for priests — allowing marriage for those who choose it — rose in that period from 24 percent to 32 percent.

Swooney of Los Angeles said in a telephone interview that "more and more bishops want change and more and more Catholics."

Among U.S. Catholics generally, the latest Gallup Poll finds 67 percent favor ordination of women and 73 percent support optional celibacy for priests.

For the bishops, still striving after to produce an equitable document effort is like trying to "balance a paradox," said Enrique San Pedro of Brownsville, Tex.

In affirming full equality of women, he said that principle cannot be affirmed "in regard to the priesthood."

Church lends to comfort

We moved to the Magic Valley in 1979 and settled in Filer. One of the many positive aspects of life here that I noticed right away was that almost everyone attended a church.

Linda Wright invited Bill and me to visit the Baptist Church in Filer, and we became members. Since moving to Twin Falls, we have visited other churches and have become acquainted with many extremely delightful and well-respected people in our community.

Personally, I feel privileged that we live in an area folks are going to church and trying to live a life in keeping with a religious plan. Our population is steadily growing and, hopefully, each one of us can invite a new family friend to share the joy of our community fellowship and worship services.

Children ages 3 through sixth grade are invited to participate in classes and activities to learn about Jesus. For more information, call Stephanie Sievers at 423-5229 or the church office at 423-5139.

Evangelicals plan program July 20-24

JEROME - The Magic Valley Evangelical Free Church, 901 E. Ave. H, has scheduled vacation Bible school for 2 to 4:30 p.m. July 20-24.

This year's theme is "Jesus is our King." Children ages 4 to 12 are invited to "saddle their finest steed and make haste to the Royal Registrar's Residence to record their names in the King's Royal Register." Participants can experience what it might be like to eat in a king's banquet hall, peek into the king's treasury or meet with the king, all of which provide an opportunity to know more about Jesus, the "King of kings," according to Cate Strunk. Included in the activities will be the chance to meet Sir Arkie Teck, the chief builder; Bonnie Appatet, the head chef; and Lady Bea Praying, keeper of the throne room, as well as castle crafts, treats, royal games and stories that were told by Jesus.

Church news

Calvary Riders meet at 9 a.m. today

TWIN FALLS - The monthly meeting of the Calvary Riders of the Magic Valley is set for 9 a.m. today at the Hawaiian Gardens Restaurant. Interested persons are invited to come for breakfast, fellowship and a ride afterward. For more information, call 324-4685 or 825-5608. Calvary Riders of the Magic Valley is a chapter of the Christian Motorcyclists Association.

Calvary Assembly plans special services

BUIH - Calvary Assembly of God Church, located at the corner of Truck Lane and Poplar Street, has planned special services for this week.

The Rev. and Mrs. F.R. McAdams will be the guest speakers at services set for 10:50 a.m. Sunday and 7 p.m. daily Sunday through Wednesday. Pastor Clifford Silvers invites those "who long for good old-fashioned preaching and singing" to attend the services.

The McAdams have pastored churches in Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, New Mexico and West Virginia and have served as evangelists for more than 30 years. For more information, call Silvers at 543-6179.

Amazing Grace team returns from Mexico

TWIN FALLS - The mission team from Amazing Grace Fellowship recently returned from an 11-day trip to Mexico.

Pastor Lynn Schaal and Youth Pastor Mark Boer took several members of the Forerunners Youth Group to Saltillo, Mexico, to participate in a mission ministry program. The trip included drama teams, ministry to children, ministry in mountain villages, working in the missionary compound and preaching.

Some of the team members will share their experiences during worship at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. Services are held at the YFCA, 1751 Elizabeth Blvd.

Chosen People present Thursday program

BLISS - The Chosen People Ministry will present "Messiah in the Passover" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Bliss Community Church. The community is invited to attend this sermon demonstration, which is intended to show how Christ fulfilled the typology inherent in the ancient feast, said Pastor Paul Wager.

A traditional Passover seder table is set, complete with all the articles of the Passover. The speaker will explain the different items of the Passover feast and give special emphasis to how they relate to the New Testament.

The unleavened bread, Passover wine and the entire program of Passover are instructive in understanding the "Last Supper" and the redemptive significance of the crucifixion. The program will serve to give the Christian community insight into Jewish traditions so that Jewish roots of Christianity can be better understood. It will also help the Jewish and Christian communities understand their common heritage. For more information, call Wager, 352-4302.

Judge dismisses abuse charges against teacher

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Charges have been dropped against a 42-year-old teacher charged with sexually abusing five students. Fifth District Magistrate Bob Workman ruled Thursday there was no evidence presented during Brent F. Pierce's preliminary hearing to show that Pierce touched the five fourth-grade girls to gratify his sexual desires. During the hearing held Tuesday and Wednesday, the students said Pierce touched them in various places, including reaching around them and putting his hand down the side of their pants, touching them in the buttock area, or putting his arm around them. Pierce's attorney, Robert Nielson of Rupert, pointed out inconsistencies in some of the girls' testimonies and questioned why they waited so long before they told anyone about the alleged incidents.

Even though some of the girls said they were touched inappropriately before Christmas, they didn't report it to principal Goldie McClure until May 12.

Nielson charged during the hearing that at least some of the girls might be saying the things against Pierce in order to become more popular.

The girls also didn't know if anyone had seen the touching, even though some said they were touched while standing in the front of the class, according to testimony.

"None of the described touching was inappropriate within the (Idaho Code)," wrote Workman in his opinion.

"The young ladies described normal interactions between an elementary school teacher and his students, including hugs which were used by the defendant in his attempt to congratulate students for their academic performance in class," said another portion of Workman's statement.

Pierce wasn't available for comment at press time, but Nielson said he wasn't surprised at the decision.

"It was an appropriate decision," he said. "Mr. Pierce did not commit any violation of the law."

Nielson said he was concerned about the stigma that was attached to people accused of such crimes. "Instead of being presumed innocent until proven guilty as the laws provide, someone gets charged with an offense like this and everyone presumes they are guilty," he said. "It can be devastating to your professional life, family life and your reputation in the community."

Minidoka County prosecuting attorney Charlie Creason Jr., who brought the charges against Pierce, said he couldn't second-guess Workman's decision, but he was disappointed by it.

Because he is soon leaving his job to become general manager of Project Mutual Telephone Co. in Rupert, Creason said he would leave it up to the prosecutor who succeeds him whether other charges would be brought against Pierce.

Another Mini-Cassia area teacher,

Ralph Wadsworth, who taught at Mountain View Elementary in Burley, was charged in 1990 with battery in connection with allegedly inappropriately touching six girls. He fled the state, never answering the charges.

Because the charge of battery is a misdemeanor, Wadsworth could not be extradited back to Idaho.

The father of one of the fourth-grade students who testified at the preliminary hearing said he was glad Pierce would not be going to prison, but said the teacher should find another profession. "I haven't seen anything grave enough to warrant him going to jail," he said.

He commented that he doesn't think Pierce touched his daughter inappropriately, but isn't sure about the incidents involving the other girls.

The fate of Pierce isn't definite. Assistant Superintendent Bert Nixon of the Minidoka County School District said nothing has been decided about future employment for Pierce if he chooses to remain in the district.

Nixon said the Professional Standards Commission of the state Department of Education will also likely look at the charges against Pierce. Officials from the department could not be reached at press time Friday.

Burley firemen still lack contract

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — It's been a frustrating two years since Burley's full-time firefighters joined a union. And, they are still without a contract. The firefighters said they wish Burley City Council would act more quickly.

Council members say they are being cautious, not wanting to approve a contract which would impact other city employees.

Monday, the council voted on a contract, but firefighters say they don't plan on accepting the proposal.

"It's kind of been a learning experience," said Mayor Frank Bauman. "Sometimes they've felt that we haven't responded to their wishes rapidly, and sometimes we have felt we had other obligations that have forced us in a very deliberate mode."

In April 1990, six of the eight firefighters voted to join a union. Professional Firemen Local 1000. The move hasn't affected the firefighters and city much, except for the hours of negotiations which have been spent by firemen and city officials alike.

Without a contract, the firefighters are operating under the same policies as they were before joining the union.

Their status is about the same as most other city employees, but they have been given some considerations regarding working hours and retirement benefits.

The two sides aren't very close to a mutual agreement on a contract. Last winter, it appeared a contract would be accepted by both sides, with only some standard operating procedures needing to be revised. The procedures were never approved.

Firefighter and negotiator Kyle Hansen said the city then offered a contract which had substantial changes in it.

"There were parts that we hadn't even seen before," he said. Other portions of the contract were deleted.

The contract offered last week wasn't close to what firefighters desire, said Hansen. Firefighters complied with advice from their Boise attorney, Alan Herzfeld, not to attend the council meeting.

Bauman stressed there are complexities in the contract, adding he thinks city residents support how the council is handling the matter. He said the contract presented to the firemen was thought out carefully in order to comply with the city's personnel manual.

The council is not in favor of giving a contract to the firefighters that grants them special privileges, he said. Bauman added there are 74 full-time employees of the city, while only six firemen belong to the union.

"We don't want them (the firefighters) dictating the personnel manual for every person in the city," said Bauman. He said councilmen would prefer to work with the firemen without getting a union involved.

One of the major items of disagreement is that firefighters feel they should have more of a say in their job and their equipment and be able to address grievances, said Hansen.

He said firemen are the ones putting their lives at risk battling fires, "so we should at least be able to review policies."

The squabble isn't over money, said Hansen. "We're not asking for a raise," he added.

A strike isn't being considered by the firefighters, said Hansen. He added, though, if much more time were to elapse it would not be ruled out.

Chase ends in fatal crash

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — A stolen sports car with a police helicopter and squad cars in pursuit ran a red light and smashed into another auto Friday, killing three people and severely injuring two others.

The driver of the sports car, one of the survivors, was to be booked for investigation of murder, said Los Angeles police spokesman Bill Frio.

The pursuit occurred nearly six weeks after a Border Patrol chase of a stolen vehicle ended in a crash that killed six people in Temecula, provoking a public outcry over whether the agents had been too aggressive.

Police said they had followed procedures designed to protect the public during the pursuit Friday.

It started in downtown Los Angeles, where traffic officers became suspicious of a Datsun 280Z with a rear window knocked out and discovered its license plate was registered to another vehicle. Los Angeles police Lt. Charles F. Kunz said.

It ended seven minutes later and 10 miles away in Glendale. The Datsun reached speeds of up to 90 mph on a freeway, then pulled onto a street, speeding through several red lights before smashing into a Toyota Camry at an intersection, said traffic Sgt. Richard Rinker.

The 280Z, stolen in San Diego, careened into a wall and was crushed, killing a passenger. Two women in the Camry were killed and a third was in critical condition.

The Datsun's driver, Messes Vargas of Glendale, 21, was in serious condition at a Pasadena hospital.

RUPERT - Health inspectors who pored over Myrtle Kelly's property Friday morning will report their findings to the city of Rupert sometime next week.

At the city's request, officials from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare and the University of Idaho Co-op Extension Service spent the morning gathering soil samples and other information.

"They will analyze their findings and submit reports to city officials by Tuesday or Wednesday," they said.

City officials will use the reports to determine if Kelly is in violation of local zoning laws pertaining to the possession of animals and fowl, according to the city's attorney, Rick Bollar.

The city recently filed a nuisance lawsuit against Kelly after neighbors complained of the smell and noise generated by the 40 or so animals sheltered on her property at Fifth and C streets.

Kelly's attorney, James Annest of Burley, filed a countersuit against the city, claiming his client's civil rights are being violated.

The 70-year-old woman resides alone in an unpainted wood-frame house built 52 years ago by her father. The structure is covered by sheets of plastic and numerous metal newspaper printing plates.

Most of the animals she cares for at her property are kept in pens and cages on her tree-filled lot, although Kelly harbors inside her house two monkeys, a parrot and some guinea pigs.

Outside, there are dogs, cats, a badger, pigeons (dozens of which root on the home's roof), chickens, ducks - and a lot of flies.

Neighbors and city officials alike are concerned about the animals' fecal matter. It not only attracts flies but its odor sometimes permeates the neighborhood.

But Annest said Kelly has lived at the location since before it was annexed by Rupert, and she should be allowed to continue caring for the menagerie, as she has for so many years.

"She was here first," Annest said. "Under my view of the zoning ordinance, she has a right to maintain the facility she's got, just as she did before all these wonderful people (her neighbors) moved here."

He added that "those complaining people come here knowing the condition" of Kelly's property.

Bollar disagrees and explained the necessity of the inspection. "We'd like to be able to clean up the property, short of litigation," he said. "But we need to get a feel for the nature and extent of the animal excrement that is here, the depth of the problem. The city needs to prove a case of public nuisance."

As cluttered as her yard appears now, volunteers have chipped in to tidy it up considerably in recent weeks.

"She's made remarkable, remarkable progress getting it cleaned up and looking better," Annest said. "People have really helped."

Sympathizers have also donated food and money to Kelly to help her care for the animals, many of which were dropped off anonymously at her home. She spends $300 a month on food for the creatures, which is supplemented by donations.

Kelly, who has worked 28 years for the Simplot Co., is on sick leave from her job after developing arthritis and a severe allergy to chlorine.

Like her health problems, her travels with the city and some of her neighbors appears to be far from resolved.

"I hope they'll decide to leave me alone," she said.

Fuel spills on interstate when truck valve breaks

BURLEY - One hundred sixty gallons of diesel fuel were spilled near milepost 208 Thursday when a valve broke on a truck, police reports say.

According to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department, a valve between two diesel tanks on an England fuel truck broke, spilling the fuel onto the eastbound lane at about 8 p.m.

Department of Transportation officials were called to the scene and used sand to clean up the spill, deputies reported.

Motorcross racing set at Minidoka Fairgrounds

RUPERT - Fans of motorcross racing will be able to see plenty of action next weekend at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds.

Gates will open at 8 a.m. and practice will begin one hour later. Racing will start at 10:30 a.m. Tickets will be $5 for adults and $2 for children age 6 to 12. Children under 6 will be admitted free.

Cassia County agenda includes landfill, budget

BURLEY - The Cassia County Commission will examine its 1992-93 budget Monday and go over financial matters dealing with the joint landfill planned for a site near Hansen in Twin Falls County.

According to commission Secretary Emily Egbert, commissioners also will discuss matters concerning the cost of the county's two ongoing murder trials, a comprehensive new county zoning ordinance, and animal control.

The commission meeting begins at 9 a.m. in the county courthouse in Burley.

Company to lay off up to 5,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) - McDonnell Douglas Corp. said Friday it will lay off another 4,000 to 5,000 employees by the end of the year.

It was the latest in a series of job eliminations by the St. Louis-based parent of Douglas Aircraft, the No. 3 commercial airplane builder.

Most of the layoffs will be of aircraft factory workers in Long Beach, where Douglas Aircraft is based.

Douglas, which employed 53,000 workers in mid-1990, has about 36,000 now. It will have fewer than 30,000 when it completes announced job eliminations. Last month, Douglas announced it was phasing out a factory in Torrance by sometime in 1993, doing away with 2,000 jobs.

Word of the latest layoffs came in a letter to workers from Douglas President Bob Hood.

Commission will consider landfill

RUPERT - Items on the agenda for Monday's meeting of the Minidoka County Commission include reports on the status of a landfill closure plan submitted to the Division of Environmental Quality by the county.

The commission is waiting for the DEQ's approval of the plan.

Meanwhile, efforts are underway towards closing the Minidoka County landfill before the October 1993 deadline.

Commissioners will meet at 9 a.m. in the courthouse.

Road problems and improvements needed in the county will be discussed and taken to the next Mini-Cassia Development Committee meeting.

Also, convening as the Board of Equalization, commissioners will give their final decisions on five assessments.

County Assessor Max Vaughn recommended that three property assessments be lowered after a reappraisal done by his office found minor adjustments were necessary.

In other business:

• Bill McClung, the county's planning and zoning director, will report on the progress of revamping and updating Rupert's comprehensive plan from which zoning laws are made.

• Sheriff Ray Jarvis will check on the progress of getting the new 911 Emergency Enhancement System on November's ballot. He introduced the idea at last month's meeting.

• Budget requests from the department heads have been turned in and will be reviewed in the next few weeks.
