House OKs gambling measure

If Senate approves, constitutional amendment will appear on ballot

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Defying predictions that it would bog down in factional bickering, the Idaho House of Representatives Monday approved a constitutional amendment to ban casino gaming.

The 70-11 vote — well over the two-thirds majority required — came on the first day of a special session of the state Legislature. It appeared likely that the session, the first since 1983, would end Tuesday.

Both proponents and opponents of the anti-casino gambling measure said Monday that at least 28 senators, the two-thirds necessary to approve constitutional amendments, would vote for the measure.

If the Senate passes the measure, it will appear on the November ballot.

The extraordinary session was called to try to keep casino gambling out of Idaho. Three of the state's Indian tribes, exercising their rights under the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act, have begun negotiating compacts to regulate gaming on their reservations.

There was also the possibility late Monday that Gov. Cecil Andrus, who called lawmakers back into session to deal with the gambling issue, would amend his call so that the Legislature could also take up an emergency drought-related bill.

Andrus orders $6.4 million in cutbacks to balance budget

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus on Monday ordered a $6.4 million budget reduction to cover expenses from the just-closed budget year that could not be paid until next year because of a revenue miscalculation.

The 1.5 percent holdback completely exempts state aid to public schools and junior colleges and limits the decrease for colleges, vocational education and the prison system to 1 percent.

The Legislature and the court system were also asked to voluntarily cut spending modestly for the budget year that began July 1.

"The budget is balanced, and we can do it without any serious adverse effect on state government," Andrus said.

Substantially lower-than-expected income tax receipts for the 1991 tax year left the state $13 million short of the last budget year.

U.S. ponders military action

Despite Iraq's agreement, Bush, advisers take nothing for granted

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is continuing to weigh strong military action against Iraq despite an agreement Sunday that ended the latest confrontation over weapons inspectors, officials said Monday.

The U.S. military moved to put more ships and troops within striking distance of Iraq by dispatching another aircraft carrier battle group, equipped with Tomahawk cruise missiles and about 85 warplanes, to the eastern Mediterranean and a Patriot air defense missile battery and 120 artillery to Kuwait.

A senior administration official acknowledged that despite President Bush's assertion that Saddam Hussein had "caved in," and "cratered," the result could not be seen as a victory for the United States and its coalition partners.

"I don't think anyone won; nobody lost. It just fizzled. It simply went away," this official said.

The issue the United States still must confront, the official said, is, "Has it come to a time when we have to put him seriously back in his box?" This question was expected to be raised Monday night when Bush met with his top national security advisers, including Secretary of State James A. Baker III, who was traveling as the most recent crisis built. Baker was expected to be able to give the group a firsthand account of the views of top Arab leaders.

The latest showdown with Iraq increases the burden on the United States and its allies to show that they are serious about enforcing U.N.

resolutions. While yielding to the threat of new bomb and missile attacks to allow U.N. weapons inspectors into the agricultural ministry, Iraq showed they inspectors could be subject to negotiation and extracted a compromise that could undermine the inspections process.

The head of the U.N. weapons-inspection commission, Rolf Ekeus, agreed that the team that actually went inside the ministry would not include citizens of countries that fought in the Persian Gulf war.

Iraq trumpeted the deal as a victory for its "sovereignty," and critics saw it as strikingly similar to a July 19 Iraqi proposal, rejected by the United Nations, calling for "neutral" inspectors.

The three-week standoff — and in particular the harassment that forced last week's withdrawal of the inspectors — gave Iraq time to destroy or move hidden documents and equipment, such as refrigerators containing biological-warfare Please see IRAQ/A2

Motorists corner drunk driver for police

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Motorists who watched a drunk driver leave one accident and feared he may cause another helped police corner him on Twin Falls' north end Monday evening.

William Schaff, 38, of Jerome was booked into the Twin Falls County jail Monday night, charged with driving under the influence and leaving the scene of an accident.

The first group of people spotted a pickup truck weaving on Interstate 84 east of Jerome and began following, Twin Falls police officer Dan Lewin said.

By the time the truck left the freeway and made it across the Perrine Bridge, eight people in several different cars and one on a motorcycle were following, Lewin said.

The driver rear-ended a vehicle at the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road shortly before 5:30 p.m. and headed west on Pole Line with the motorists still giving chase, the officer said. Nobody was injured in that accident, he said.

Two miles west of Washington Street North, the drivers cornered the pickup in a driveway. In the meantime, a construction worker had radioed his own dispatcher who called police.

When the pickup finally stopped, L. Jack Booth of Jerome jumped out of his car and tried to pull the keys from the ignition of the pickup, Lewin said.

Booth later told officers he had to do something, because he was afraid the driver of the pickup would kill someone, the officer said.

But the pickup driver shifted into reverse, scraping a car and forcing Booth to let go. Booth, who had been on his way to dinner with out-of-town visitors, was treated for injuries to his hand.

The pickup truck headed east on Pole Line before officers finally stopped him at the intersection with Washington Street North, Lewin said.

At the jail, a device that measures the level of alcohol in the blood showed Schaff's level to be .21 percent — more than twice the legal driving limit, Lewin said.

Andrews advocates take case to international level

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Advocates for death row inmate William Andrews announced plans Monday to make his case an international cause, while more than 40 ministers asked the governor to stay Andrews' Thursday execution.

Amnesty International planned to petition the United Nations on behalf of Andrews, while his lawyers prepared a petition for the Interamerican Commission claiming his execution will constitute a violation of human rights. In the meantime, ministers throughout the state presented a letter to Gov. Norm Bangerter and the Utah Board of Pardons urging them to "demonstrate moral courage and exercise mercy."

Andrews

Andrews, 37, faces execution by injection

An accomplice, Pierre Dale Selby, who admitted the shootings, was executed in 1987. "Governor Bangerter, if you will listen, you will hear something or my voice — at Utah State Prison for his role in the 1974 torture-slayings of three people during a robbery at the Ogden Hi-Fi Shop. Five people were forced to drink a caustic drain cleaner, then were bound, gagged and shot. A woman was raped and a man had a ball-point pen kicked into his ear. Two people survived.

"I am completely, Pierre Dale Selby, who admitted the shootings, was executed in 1987. "Governor Bangerter, if you will listen, you will hear something or my voice — inside you or beyond us all — telling you to stay the killing of William Andrews until the Board of Pardons does the right thing," the letter said.

The board last week unanimously declined to grant Andrews' request for a second clemency hearing. In 1989, the board voted 2-1 in favor of his execution.

"It is exactly at times like these that a person's moral mettle is tested," the letter said. "True Christians do not apply the teachings of Christ only when it is easy, convenient or politically popular."

Weather summary

The National Weather Service in Boise says upper air soundings over the region indicate a very warm and dry air mass over Idaho. Strong high pressure is expected to keep this air mass over the state with a hot afternoon and a mild night statewide.

A weak disturbance approaching from the gulf of Alaska also will drop into southeast Idaho, possibly pulling enough moisture northward from Nevada to produce a few thunderstorms over the southern mountain and southeast. The approaching disturbance will bring degrees of cooling to the state Wednesday.

Morning lows over the state ranged from the 40s at most mountains to the 60s at some lower elevations. The coolest overnight minimum was 35 at Stanley and the warmest was 65 at Boise.

Temperatures over Idaho were warming rapidly, ranging from the 70s in the mountains to the upper 80s across the lower elevations of the south. Skies over the state at late morning were generally clear and winds were variable under 10 mph.

Hot and dry weather is expected to continue over Idaho through the end of the week.

The reported highest temperature in Idaho Monday was 103 at Hagerman. Stanley reported the lowest temperature at 35 degrees.

Rainstorms pelt nation from Texas to Ohio Valley

The Associated Press

Wet, stormy weather extended from Texas to the central East Coast and over the Southeast on Monday, with heavy rain causing flooding in the Ohio Valley and central Appalachia.

A cold front curved from Texas to the mid-Atlantic coast. Showers and thunderstorms developed in the warm, humid air ahead of the front during the afternoon and were scattered from the upper coast of Texas across the central Gulf Coast to northern Florida and across the Ohio Valley to the mid-Atlantic states. Severe thunderstorms were possible from Alabama to North Carolina and southern Virginia, the National Weather Service said.

Up to 5 inches of rain in 12 hours sent streams over their banks Monday across central West Virginia, forcing evacuations in Randolph, Lewis and Upshur counties, authorities said.

Some of the worst flooding appeared to be along Filer Creek at Beverly, south of Elkins in Randolph County, where residents of a trailer park were trapped by rising water, officials said.

"A lot of people have lost everything — trailers and everything," said Elkins Fire Department Capt. Ray Corcoran, whose department sent a boat to Beverly to help with the evacuation.

Twenty-one people were forced to leave their homes and two mobile homes were damaged in Lewis County, mainly in the Walkerville area, said Phil Harpold, coordinator of the West Virginia emergency operations center in Charleston.

Heavy rainfall totals for the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT included 1.99 inches at Louisville, Ky.; 1.27 inches at Lexington, Ky.; 1.23 inches at Elkins, W.Va.; and 1.11 inches at Fort Knox, Ky., the weather service said.

Colombia ministry fires top officials for allowing escape

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

BOGOTA, Colombia — The Defense Ministry Monday ordered the retirement of three top military officers responsible for guarding the high-security prison from which cocaine kingpin Pablo Escobar made his dramatic escape last week.

According to a detailed chronology released Monday by the government of President Cesar Gaviria, Gen. Gustavo Pardo Ariza, head of the Fourth Brigade based in Medellin, delayed carrying out orders to occupy the Envigado Prison for some 15 hours.

The mission was finally accomplished at 7:30 Wednesday morning when the military high command bypassed the general, ordering into action a major in charge of special anti-terrorist troops.

But by that time, according to the government report, Escobar and nine of his men had probably been free for more than five hours.

The government estimates that the traffickers fled between 1 and 2 a.m., taking advantage of a brief power blackout.

"By God, I have never seen such a sloppy, inefficient, stupid way of carrying out an operation," said a high government official closely involved in the decision to take over the jail. "I have never felt so indignat."

Forced into retirement along with Pardo, were two other high-level officers: Lt. Col. Hernando Navas, system, and Lt. Col. Manuel Jose Espitia Sotelo, commander of the military police battalion guarding the prison the night of the escape.

The ousters bring to four the number of top military officers ousted out of the armed forces because of Escobar's flight from a prison supposedly under military control.

Last week the acting commander of the Colombian air force, Gen. Hernando Monsalve, resigned from active duty, angered by criticism that he delayed for hours securing the planes needed to fly special troops from Bogota to Medellin to deal with the prison mutiny.

It now appears that the negligence — or worse — by top officials allowed Escobar's men to bribe the regular troops assigned to patrol the prison perimeter.

A separate military report published in the local press over the weekend implicated a sergeant and nine soldiers under Espitia Sotelo's command in the drug lord's flight.

A group of Escobar's men disguised as prison guards approached the soldiers around midnight offering them a meal of meat, rice, sausage and potato salad. They also promised them a generous reward if they allowed the supposed guards to sneak out of the prison.

The report from the Fourth Brigade says that Escobar himself probably escaped dressed as a woman in a sweatshirt, jeans and wig.

The 18-page chronology released by the president's office details orders sent from his security council to the prison from 10 a.m. on July 21 through completion of the prison takeover at 8 a.m. the next day.

The drama began the morning of the 21st when the attorney general informed the president that Escobar was ordering "kidnappings, assassinations and massacres" from the jail, confirming stories that had begun appearing in local newspapers two weeks earlier.

The attorney general also told the security council that a vehicle with a secret compartment was being used by Escobar to bring people into the prison.

Government sources say many of those kidnapped by the drug lord's henchmen were thus smuggled into the jail to answer to Escobar for disobeying his orders.

At 12:30 that day, the acting commander of the armed forces, Gen. Manuel Murillo, warned Pardo that Escobar might be planning to escape and ordered him to reinforce prison security by sending the Fourth Brigade to the area.

Idaho Falls, said it would allow water districts and canal companies to exchange water among themselves without going through regular notice and hearing procedures.

If enacted, the bill would expire at the end of the current growing season.

The Monday evening vote came after the House rejected two attempts, mostly by lawmakers from northern Idaho, to allow the Indians to have some kind of gambling other than bingo on their lands.

The amendment that eventually passed was proposed by Attorney General Larry Echohawk. The ban characterized it as a clarification of existing state policy.

If approved by a majority of voters in the November general election, the only kinds of gambling allowed in Idaho would be the state lottery, pari-mutuel betting and charitable raffles and bingo games.

Casino games, including but not limited to blackjack, craps, roulette, poker, baccarat, keno and slot machines.

Opponents, however, castigated the amendment as an attempt to change the rules in the middle of the game and one that would not succeed in court.

"I think it's presumptuous of us to foist our opinions on a sovereign nation," said Rep. Janet Jenkins, D-Coeur d'Alene, whose alternative amendment failed on a 62-17 vote.

But Rep. Mark Stubbs, R-Twin Falls, said the Legislature had nothing to lose by submitting the amendment to voters.

"They've said they're going to take us to court no matter what we do," Stubbs said, adding that amending the constitution would be a waste of the state's money by making its policy on gambling clear.

Echohawk, who addressed both chambers earlier in the day, admitted that even with the amendment, the tribes could still win in court the right to operate casino games.

Ray Givens, the attorney for the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, told lawmakers that even if the amendment passes, the legal definition of "lottery" could still be interpreted to permit the tribes to run casino games.

"They can make that argument," Echohawk said. "They may win. I don't think they will, but I can't give you a guarantee."

Andrus

that size, Andrus cut state spending by nearly $1.5 million during the spring and tapped the special budget reserve for another $5.4 million. The net $6.4 million in bills were just not paid until after the new budget was opened this month. The new spending cut will cover those liabilities.

The revenue miscalculation also forced the administration to reduce its tax receipt estimate for the current budget year by $6 million, but Andrus said that new figure of just over $1 billion will cover the reduced budget authorizations.

weakening state economy, the new revenue forecast reflects an expectation of even stronger growth than administration analysts displayed last winter. The new forecast projects growth of nearly 5.9 percent compared to 5.2 percent six months ago.

Opponents of the governor's financial manipulation did not address the growing state cash shortage in the federally subsidized Medicaid program. The latest estimates show the state will be about $13 million short of the money needed to meet demand for the indigent medical care. The federal government matches that with nearly $40 million.

Policymakers and legislators have been looking for a long-term solution to the Medicaid problem but have yet to come up with anything given a reasonable chance of success. Without the additional state cash, benefit levels under the program will have to be reduced to bring it back into balance. But that move would undermine the campaign to expand rather than limit health care coverage to the 160,000 Idahoans — mostly children — who currently have none.

Inspectors will now look for electrical wiring and other evidence showing that equipment had been moved, a Western diplomat said Monday.

The strong likelihood that most evidence had disappeared from the ministry weakened the argument for the United States to reject the final deal and perhaps use military force to get a better one, the senior U.S. official said.

At the end, the official said, the crisis became solely one of principle: the right of U.N. inspectors to go where they pleased. The factual basis of the dispute — what they were searching for — had become moot.

But despite Hussein's successful stalling tactics, there remain serious factual grounds for military action if the United States chooses it, this official argued: "There are still concrete objects that we can confront if we choose."

Future inspections may provide further grounds. Diplomats say that the special commission will continue to pursue intelligence reports that are hiding evidence of weapons of mass destruction programs.

The commission wants to reassess its right to send in teams that include Americans, British and French, the key members of the anti-Iraq coalition, a Western diplomat said. In addition, top Bush administration officials, including Bush, have committed themselves rhetorically to a program of continued pressure on Iraq to ensure that it begins to comply with a whole range of U.N. resolutions it is flouting.

Among the most serious violations are Iraq's oppression of Shiites, under attack by Iraqi planes in the southern marshes, and Kurds in the north, suffering for months from an Iraq-imposed embargo.

This commitment will deepen later this week when Baker meets with leaders of a coalition of Iraqi opposition groups, including Kurds and Shiites.

The USS John F. Kennedy cut short a five-day port call to the Virgin Islands for deployment to the Mediterranean even though the USS Saratoga has not completed a six-month tour of duty there, said a senior military official.

The Saratoga was dispatched last week to the Adriatic Sea for possible missions related to the crisis in the former Yugoslavian republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The Kennedy, which has about 85 aircraft on board, and its escorts will head to the eastern Mediterranean to give the Bush administration added "capability" if the decision is made to attack Iraq, he said.

The official cautioned that Bush has not settled on any particular attack plan should he decide to use military force.

NASA plays 'what if' game on mission

Orlando Sentinel

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — What if? What if? What if? For space-shuttle flight engineers, Atlantis' flight to drag a small satellite at the end of a 12-mile string has created scores of "what if" scenarios never before considered. What if the copper and Kevlar cord breaks? What if the half-ton metal ball at the end starts swinging back and forth? What if it starts heading for Atlantis' wings or crew cabin as it's hauled back into the cargo bay? "This is clearly the most unique mission we've ever flown aboard the space shuttle," lead flight director Chuck Space said. Because satellites in higher orbits take longer to move around the Earth than those in lower orbits, the tethered satellite should drag slightly behind the shuttle after it is released upward. That dragging force should be enough to keep tension on the line but won't prevent it from moving around side to side — a motion called "libration" — or bouncing up and down — a movement called "plumb bob." Flight controllers' main concern is having the satellite moving around at the end of its rope as it is reeled in, letting it hit Atlantis' wings or tail — parts of the shuttle that are critical during re-entry and landing. Shaw and astronaut Jeff Hoffman said any movements the satellite develops would almost certainly be extremely slow — slow enough for Atlantis' commander Loren Shriver to maneuver the shuttle to cancel out the satellite's unwanted motion. Nonetheless, engineers built cable cutters into the machinery that holds and winches in the 12-mile tether, so the cord can be cut in an emergency — if, for example, the satellite begins swinging more than 60 degrees from its overhead position.

Inspector hopes Iraq sincere on arms

THE UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The chief U.N. weapons inspector said Monday that Iraq has promised to refrain from further interference with efforts to catalog and destroy Baghdad's weapons of mass destruction.

Ekeus

"But my experience is such that I can't take that for granted," said Rolf Ekeus, the point man in negotiations that ended the standoff over inspection of Iraq's Agriculture Ministry.

Backed by U.S. threats to use force, Ekeus on Sunday got Iraq to allow the search on the condition it is carried out by officials from nations that did not send combat forces in the Persian Gulf War.

Ekeus heads the U.N. special commission charged with eliminating Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, under the U.N. resolution that ended the war last year. Ekeus is scheduled to fly to Iraq on Tuesday.

"We've assurances from the Iraqi side that this is the end of confrontation," he said after arriving in Bahrain.

In Washington, a senior Pentagon official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the United States, unmoved by Iraqi promises, was sending Patriot missiles to Kuwait and a third aircraft carrier to the Persian Gulf region.

U.N. weapons experts suspect the Agriculture Ministry contained documents on Iraq's missile, chemical, biological and nuclear programs. But after inspectors were barred for three weeks, Ekeus said he doubted much information remains in the building.

"Iraq through its action has given itself great possibilities to clean out the building," he said. He added that the team would be able to tell if anything had been removed, but he did not elaborate.

To obtain Iraqi compliance, the U.N. agreed to change the composition of the inspection team to predominantly European.

Ekeus, who was not going into the Agriculture Building, was going to Baghdad with six U.N. inspectors: two Germans, a Swiss, a Finn, a Swede and a Russian. Two American experts and a Russian will remain outside the building to analyze predominantly European.

The original team included seven Americans, two Frenchmen and a Briton as well as Russians. The Iraqis portrayed them as spies and CIA agents.

Iraqi Prime Minister Mohammed Hamza al-Zabaidi described the agreement reached in New York as "a splendid victory" for Iraq, the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

Ekeus on Sunday denied that he bowed to pressure from Iraq and let Baghdad dictate the make-up of the team. He also said the threat of force "put an element of reality" into negotiations with Iraq.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein made no comment Monday on the dispute.

On Sunday, just before the agreement was announced, he had warned that the "mother of all battles" he promised during the Gulf crisis was not yet over.

While Baghdad's announced compliance appeared to lessen the chances of renewed military confrontation, President Bush noted that Saddam's violation of other Gulf War cease-fire terms "continues in other important areas."

"The real test of his behavior will be in future U.N. inspections," he said Sunday. "Behavior along the lines we've just witnessed will not be tolerated."

He said Iraqi compliance has "got to be done in timely fashion."

L.A. rebuilds sans liquor stores

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A movement opposing rebuilding the liquor stores damaged or destroyed by rioting in South Central Los Angeles has grown far beyond its proponents' original hopes.

When a coalition began a petition drive to "Rebuild South Central Without Liquor Stores," they hoped for 1,000 signatures by Aug. 1. By Sunday, five weeks after they started, they had 25,700 names.

"We need to figure out how to rebuild this city with quality and turf tragedy into opportunity," said Karen Bass, the coalition director.

"The overabundance of liquor stores compromises the quality of life in the community and we hope this demonstrates an overwhelming public concern about the issue," she said.

Liquor store owners, many Korean-American, said the coalition was trying to deny them the right to earn a living.

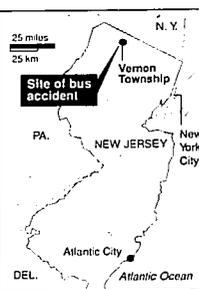

State licensing officials said liquor stores have a legal right to rebuild.

At least 52 deaths and more than $800 million in damage were caused by the rioting from April 29 to May 1. The violence, ignited by the acquittals of white policemen in the beating of a black man, forced officials to impose a nighttime curfew and call in the National Guard and Army to occupy the city.

New Jersey accident kills 6, injures 47

VERNON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A bus taking youngsters to an amusement park crashed and burned after losing its brakes on a steep road where it didn't belong, police said. Six people were killed and 47 injured, authorities said.

The bus hit two cars, rolled four times, and caught fire Sunday as the driver tried to stop it with the gearshift and clutch, police and witnesses said.

It was the second major accident in less than two weeks on the stretch of road.

A passenger, Dennis Robles, 31, said: "The driver was working the shift, trying to stop with the shift and clutch... I could smell the clutch or the brakes burning."

Some passengers said smoke was coming from air conditioning AP vents before the

Two children and four adults, all bus passengers, were killed, Police Chief Ken Johnson said.

The driver, Robert Campbell, 60, was one of eight people in critical condition today. Thirty-nine people suffered less serious injuries. Campbell's wife, Allie Mae, was one of those killed.

"We hit a car, and the bus started rolling," said 11-year-old Melissa Luciano. "People flew out of the windows. Then we hit the other car, and there was a fire. People's clothes and hair were burning. My sister was burned all over."

A neighborhood group from Brooklyn had chartered the bus for an outing to Action Park, an amusement park in this town about 40 miles from New York City.

The bus crashed on a two-lane road that has a 15 percent downgrade and a 4-ton weight limit. The bus weighed 22 tons, the police chief said. Passenger Edgar Estrella, 20, said the bus driver missed a turn onto the road and made a U-turn before starting downhill.

"I told my girlfriend, 'If we keep taking curves like this, we're going to turn over,'" Estrella said.

Johnson said officials hadn't decided whether to charge the driver or the bus company, Golden Sons of Brooklyn. "He couldn't say how fast the bus was traveling or what the posted speed limit is."

A man who answered the phone today at Golden Sons said no one there was willing to discuss the accident.

The driver of the first car was hospitalized in fair condition. Two people from the second car were released after treatment.

The section of road where the accident occurred has been the focus of safety concerns for more than a decade.

Sage prep for District with sweep in Utah

OGDEN, Utah — The Mini-Cassia Sage warmed up for this week's District Class AA American Legion Tournament by sweeping a road doubleheader from Ogden on Sunday.

Troy Meredith and Lupe Curiel combined on a five-hit shutout as the Sage blasted past to a 17-0 triumph in five innings of the opener. Mini-Cassia was gathering its gear for the trip home when Ogden rallied to force overtime in the nightcap.

Rodney Fairchild, who threw the seventh and eighth inning for the Sage, got the victory as Ogden walked the bases full in overtime. Dago Maldonado and Robby Veneman came up with RBI singles and Brandon Wilcox followed with a triple.

Mini-Cassia, now 8-15, meets Idaho Falls in the district event at 4 p.m. Thursday at Frontier Field in Twin Falls.

Anti-trust expert cites specific damages during NFL trial

MINNEAPOLIS — Green Bay Packer quarterback Don Majkowski lost more than $1.3 million in income during 1990-91 because of the NFL's restrictive free agency system, an anti-trust expert testified Monday.

Michael Glassman, a Washington-based economist testifying for the plaintiffs in their lawsuit against the NFL, said the eight players lost between $3.94 million and $4.037 million in salary during the last two seasons because there was no free market. Majkowski lost the most.

Friesz ends holdout, inks with Chargers for $1.55 million

SAN DIEGO — San Diego Chargers quarterback John Friesz said he "bent quite a bit" in signing a two-year contract Monday reportedly worth $1.55 million.

The deal reportedly will pay Friesz $700,000 in base salary this season and $850,000 in 1993, with incentives that could push his second-year pay to more than $1 million.

"It's a very team-oriented concept in the second year, which sits very well with me," said the third-year pro from Idaho, who is 4-13 as a starter dating back to the final game of 1990.

Friesz didn't sign until the afternoon practice was almost over, meaning his missed 11 days of workouts. "I think the Chargers are being very fair," Friesz said. "Now it's my turn to go out and solidify what they did do and prove them correct."

BARCELONA, Spain — It's in the spinning, twisting, elegant dives of a 13-year-old Chinese girl and the flailing speed of a 14-year-old Japanese swimmer.

It's in the resolute strength of an American who retired, then came back to collect a gold when everyone thought he was too old.

It's in a Unified Team that knows it will be splitting up soon, and stands wistfully before a flag that is not its own.

It's in an Olympic Village encounter between former track teammates for Yugoslavia —

Mirsada Buric, who braved sniper fire to train in the besieged Bosnian capital of Sarajevo, and Susana Citre, a Serbian whose government is held responsible for the siege.

"She was very glad to see me," Buric said. "But I had to tell her that her country is the aggressor against mine. It's killing our people."

The new age of the Olympics is taking shape in every event at these Summer Games, revealing the future in the diverse nationalities of champions, the widening age span among them, and the headlong surge toward professionalism.

In sports as in politics, nations are coming together even as they are splitting apart. And nowhere is it clearer than in this seaside city of so many mingled cultures that is host now to 171 countries.

As Day 4 began today, China and the United States led the medals list with 10 apiece, followed by the Unified Team's seven, and five each for Germany and France.

China surely won't stay in that lofty position, but its performance so far is a sign of its progress since its re-entry in the Summer Games in 1984 after an absence of four decades. Four years ago in Seoul, China was 11th in golds with five, and had 28 overall.

Two golden oldies, Matt Biondi and Janet Evans, make their entrance at the pool today, while 16-year-old gymnast Kim Zmeskal tries to recover the form that made her world champion.

Pablo Morales showed in the 100-meter butterfly Monday that he could still win at 27, a year older than Biondi, even after a 3½-year layoff. Nicole Haislett, 19, a year younger than Evans, proved that the women's events are not all going to kids like Japan's Kyoko Iwasaki, winner of the 200-meter breaststroke, or Fu Mingxia, winner of 10-meter platform diving.

The changes in the Olympics were evident in a relatively small but fiery Japanese volleyball team that refused to be intimidated by the two-time champion U.S. squad.

The Americans have something to prove today — to themselves and the rest of the world — when they take the court against

Braves-Pirates series portends October result

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — It was a regular-season weekend series that had playoff overtones in drama and fan frenzy. It also may have been a preview of a 1992 playoff rematch in the National League.

Three sellout crowds of tomahawk-chopping Atlanta fans watched the two divisional leaders, the Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates, fight through three one-run decisions.

Tom Glavine became baseball's first 15-game winner in a 4-3 Atlanta victory Friday night, and Otis Nixon robbed Andy Van Slyke of a ninth-inning two-run homer Saturday night to preserve a 1-0 victory for the Braves.

The Pirates finally got to last year's playoff hero, Steve Avery, for three runs in the seventh inning Sunday. Pittsburgh blew a 4-1 lead when Lonnie Smith hit a three-run pinch-hit homer in the eighth, but the Pirates ended Atlanta's franchise record-tying 13-game winning streak in the ninth on Orlando Merced's two-out RBI single. "We did OK," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "We're 3-3 here this year. That's a great team over there. We could have folded. We didn't. We're a championship-type club, too."

The two teams meet one more time in the regular season, a four-game series in Pittsburgh beginning Aug. 14. They split the first two games played in Pittsburgh.

Atlanta won last year's championship series, which went the seven-game limit, by capturing the final two games in Pittsburgh.

The Braves came out of the weekend series with a one-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West and the Pirates were two in front of Montreal in the East.

Women's Open champ sheds tears of joy

The Associated Press

OAKMONT, Pa. — Just as she did two years ago, Patty Sheehan broke into tears at the completion of the U.S. Women's Open.

"Two years ago, they were tears of sadness," the emotionally drained Sheehan sobbed. "Today they are tears of joy."

Sheehan, who blew a nine-shot lead over the last two rounds of the 1990 Open, showed aside that haunting memory with a scrambling playoff victory over her closest friend, Juli Inkster, on Oakmont's treacherous greens Monday.

"A day hasn't gone by that I haven't thought about that," Sheehan said of her collapse.

"Now, I can put it out of my mind and think of this. I can think of winning the Open, and I can rejoice."

She won it by a two-stroke margin, 72-74. But it really wasn't that close.

Chiefs' All-Pro safety says it's time to leave

The Associated Press

Deron Cherry, who showed up at the Kansas City Chiefs training camp 11 seasons ago as a free agent punter, said good-bye on Monday as a six-time All-Pro free safety and one of the best defensive backs of his time.

Flanked by family and friends, Cherry wiped away tears as he announced his retirement during an emotional news conference. He said a severe knee injury that required surgery two years ago and the fear of a possible debilitating injury helped him decide it was time to move on.

"It came down to one decision: My health," he said. "There weren't too many people aware of it ... but I had a bulging disc in my neck last year. I guarantee you, 85 percent of the time, I had numbness in my arm and stingers down my neck."

Cherry, who'll turn 33 in September, is one of the most popular players in Chiefs history. Active in civic and charitable causes, he has started business enterprises in the community, including an Anheuser-Busch beer distributorship.

One of 26 players in NFL history with 50 or more interceptions, Cherry's emotions almost got the best of him when he tried to express his appreciation to Chiefs fans for their years of loyalty. "They were always there for me and supported me and stayed with me. It's hard to say goodbye to something that's been a part of your life for

Brewers extend hot streak at Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jaime Navarro extended his streak of hitless innings to 10 and finished with a three-hitter Monday night as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 4-0.

The win was the Brewers' fourth straight and ninth in 11 games. Navarro (11-6) broke into his third straight dominant performance and got his first shutout of the fifth, retiring the 12 batters before Paul Sorrento singled leading off the fifth. Sorrento was thrown out trying to stretch it to a double.

Navarro walked none and struck out five.

In his previous game, Navarro pitched a two-hitter, giving up a pair of third-inning singles, and he lost a no-hitter in the eighth inning of the game before that. He has yielded six hits and two earned runs in his last three starts, covering 26 innings.

Charles Nagy (11-6) allowed four runs and 12 hits in 6 2-3 innings, losing for only the second time in 11 starts at home.

The Brewers scored twice in the third on Kevin Seitzer's RBI infield single and a squeeze bunt by Paul Molitor. Seitzer doubled and scored on John Jaha's single in the fifth, and Robin Yount hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Major leagues

Red Sox 7, Rangers 5

HOSTON — Tom Brunansky hit a first-inning grand slam and Herm Winningham added a two-run homer off Kevin Tanaka to lead the Minnesota Twins' winning pitcher, and the Boston Red Sox held on to beat the Texas Rangers 7-5 Monday night.

Frank Viola (9-6) survived a shaky second inning, when the Rangers rallied for three unearned runs, including Brian Downing's two-run double. Brown (14-7), the winning pitcher in the All-Star game, has lost five straight starts since the break.

Athletics 9, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Bob Welch pitched no-hit ball for 2-3 innings as the Oakland Athletics beat the Minnesota Twins 9-1 Monday night and closed within two games of the AL West leaders.

Terry Steinbach hit a three-run homer off John Smiley (10-5) in the first inning and added two doubles and another RBI. Randy Ready added his first career grand slam in the ninth off Bob Kipper, his third home run this season.

Kevin Padgett pitched his no-hit bid with an RBI single and a sacrifice fly to Walt Weiss. Gene Larkin followed with a ground single off the glove of second baseman Mike Bordick, scoring Kent Hisek, who had walked.

Welch (8-5) allowed just the two hits in seven-plus innings, walked five and struck out two. Dennis Eckersley pitched the eighth and Jim Conry finished as Oakland won its fourth straight. The A's moved 17 games over .500 for the first time this season.

Phillies 5, Mets 0

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Curt Schilling pitched his second straight shutout as the Philadelphia Phillies sent the Mets to their third consecutive blanking, beating New York 5-0 Monday night.

Schilling (9-6) stretched his scoreless streak to 24 innings and the Mets' streak to 29, 10 short of the club record. He pitched a six-hitter, struck out five and walked none in his fourth shutout this season.

It was the 14th time New York has been shut out, matching the Mets most since 1980, when they also were blanked 14 times. And it marked the first time they've been shut out in three straight games since June 1975.

Cubs 3, Pirates 2

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa celebrated his return from the disabled list by homering on Doug Drabek's first pitch, hitting a two-run homer in the eighth inning on Kal Daniels' sacrifice fly.

Greg Maddux (13-8) outduelled Drabek (8-8) as the Cubs pulled within 5 1/2 games of Pittsburgh in the NL East. The Pirates have lost six of eight.

Maddux won for the eighth time in 10 starts, giving up six hits in eight innings. Jeff Robinson finished for his first save.

Astros 5, Braves 1

ATLANTA — Eric Anthony hit a grand slam in the 11th inning as Houston won in the opener of its 26-game road trip.

Anthony homered twice Sunday in the Astros' final home game until Aug. 25. Houston is on a 28-day trip, the longest in team history, so the Astrodome can hold the Republican convention.

Anthony converted his first career grand slam and 12th homer of the season off Alejandro Pena (5-1). Doug Jones (8-7) pitched three scoreless innings and Xavier Hernandez got three outs for his fifth save.

Expos 6, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Darren Reed hit a three-run homer as Delino DeShazo homered and tripled as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-1 Monday night and closed within one game of NL East leader Cincinnati.

Montreal has not been on a near first place after the All-Star break since Aug. 7, 1989.

The Expos were about a game back on that date, but finished 12 games behind Chicago.

Ken Hill (12-4), traded by St. Louis last November for Andres Galarraga, won his 11th career decision and set a career high for victories.

TWIN FALLS — Scott Keller became the benefactor of some good luck Saturday night in taking the checkered flag for the sixth time this season in the Star Stock division of the Magic Valley Speedway.

"It was quite a race," said Keller after the race.

Darin Fairbanks made it seven trips to the winner's circle in the Pro Stock division and Gary Madson picked up the win in the IMCA Modified division in the other two divisions of racing.

Keller, who started on the outside of row four, ran into trouble early on.

On the second lap Keller made contact with Bruce Quail's rear end. The contact created a hole in his oil cooler spilling oil all the way around the track and forcing him into the pits.

Keller's luck came in the fact that it took a clean up evening considerable time to clear the oil allowing Keller to take a clean start. The car and truck back on the track before the green flag was dropped.

"We lost the oil cooler and I thought I was done," said Keller. "We decided to bypass it and it worked."

When the race resumed Keller and Quale, the points leader, quickly worked their way to the front.

On lap 12, both ended up being sent to the rear after Keller made contact with Randy Kerr and then Quale got involved after the initial contact.

By the 15th lap, the duo had worked their way into fifth and sixth. Keller improved his position on each of the next two laps.

Keller moved into second on lap 22 while Quale advanced to fourth.

Two laps from the finish, Keller was able to pull his car away with Gary Madson going into turn one and then went by coming out of turn two.

Keller's performance brought more than just the checkered flag. The win and his points from the heat races put him in front of Quale in the season points stand at 27-21.

Fairbanks started near the rear of the pack of 10 cars, the year's biggest turnout, and wasted no time in getting his car through the pack.

By the 14th lap, Fairbanks had worked his way into third behind Butch Veenstra and Norm Hake.

Veenstra, who was appearing for only the second time this season, had already picked up wins in the trophy dash and the heat race.

When the race resumed Keller pushed his car by Veenstra on the outside of turn two. "You have got to have it set up for the second groove," said Fairbanks. "My dad set the car up where it can run in the high groove."

After taking over the lead, Fairbanks pulled away from the field over the final 17 laps, stretching the lead by as much as 10 car lengths. Veenstra held on to second, capping an outstanding evening for him.

In the points race, Fairbanks opened a huge lead over Eddy McKean. McKean suffered mechanical difficulties and finished last, entering the evening Fairbanks held a three point lead. When it ended the lead had bulged to 22, 372-350.

Yellow caution flags marred the final appearance of the IMCA Modifieds. Three yellow flags on lap 11 alone, contributed to delays which resulted in an after midnight finish.

For most of the race it was a four car affair. Travis Metz and Tracy Norman fought it out for first and second with Gary Madson and Tracy Dastrup fighting for third and fourth for most of the race.

Metz lost the lead and his chance for a win on lap 11, when he spun off the track. Norman took over the lead with Madson, Dastrup and Dusty Dastrup following.

Lap 17 found Rick Ellison working his way into fourth. Ellison made the move from the rear after being involved in a yellow flag on lap four.

On the 25th of 30 laps, Madson moved in front of Norman with Ellison in third. Despite another yellow flag on lap 28, the three finished in that order.

Keller, who started on the outside of row four, ran into trouble early on.

On the second lap Keller made contact with Bruce Quail's rear end. The contact created a hole in his oil cooler spilling oil all the way around the track and forcing him into the pits.

Keller's luck came in the fact that it took a clean up evening considerable time to clear the oil allowing Keller to take a clean start. The car and truck back on the track before the green flag was dropped.

"We lost the oil cooler and I thought I was done," said Keller. "We decided to bypass it and it worked."

When the race resumed Keller and Quale, the points leader, quickly worked their way to the front.

On lap 12, both ended up being sent to the rear after Keller made contact with Randy Kerr and then Quale got involved after the initial contact.

By the 15th lap, the duo had worked their way into fifth and sixth. Keller improved his position on each of the next two laps.

Keller moved into second on lap 22 while Quale advanced to fourth.

Two laps from the finish, Keller was able to pull his car away with Gary Madson going into turn one and then went by coming out of turn two.

Keller's performance brought more than just the checkered flag. The win and his points from the heat races put him in front of Quale in the season points stand at 27-21.

Fairbanks started near the rear of the pack of 10 cars, the year's biggest turnout, and wasted no time in getting his car through the pack.

By the 14th lap, Fairbanks had worked his way into third behind Butch Veenstra and Norm Hake.

Veenstra, who was appearing for only the second time this season, had already picked up wins in the trophy dash and the heat race.

When the race resumed Keller pushed his car by Veenstra on the outside of turn two. "You have got to have it set up for the second groove," said Fairbanks. "My dad set the car up where it can run in the high groove."

After taking over the lead, Fairbanks pulled away from the field over the final 17 laps, stretching the lead by as much as 10 car lengths. Veenstra held on to second, capping an outstanding evening for him.

In the points race, Fairbanks opened a huge lead over Eddy McKean. McKean suffered mechanical difficulties and finished last, entering the evening Fairbanks held a three point lead. When it ended the lead had bulged to 22, 372-350.

Yellow caution flags marred the final appearance of the IMCA Modifieds. Three yellow flags on lap 11 alone, contributed to delays which resulted in an after midnight finish.

For most of the race it was a four car affair. Travis Metz and Tracy Norman fought it out for first and second with Gary Madson and Tracy Dastrup fighting for third and fourth for most of the race.

Metz lost the lead and his chance for a win on lap 11, when he spun off the track. Norman took over the lead with Madson, Dastrup and Dusty Dastrup following.

Lap 17 found Rick Ellison working his way into fourth. Ellison made the move from the rear after being involved in a yellow flag on lap four.

On the 25th of 30 laps, Madson moved in front of Norman with Ellison in third. Despite another yellow flag on lap 28, the three finished in that order.

Tigers shortstop takes blazing bat on road

The Associated Press

DETROIT — Don't tell Travis Fryman there's no place like home. He'll just break into a chorus of "On the Road Again."

For reasons that leave him baffled, Fryman always has hit better on the road than in the ballpark he calls home. It's happening again this season.

"If you check through the minor leagues, I've always hit better on the road, always," said Fryman, who at 23 already is considered the Tigers' best all-around player. "I don't have any idea why."

Detrol opens a four-game series with the Chicago White Sox at 5 p.m. Tuesday with a two-night doubleheader at home.

In games at Tiger Stadium this season, the All-Star shortstop is hitting .240 (46-for-192). On the road, Fryman is hitting .324 (69-for-213). "People always say how hard it is to hit on the road, but on road trips I get excited," Fryman said. "By the end of the year, the difference won't be as great. But, I'll guarantee you, I'll have a higher average on the road."

Tiger Stadium and .267 on the road.

Tony Phillips, who also is a serious student of hitting, feels players sometimes find it easier to hit on the road because there are fewer distractions. "At home, you've got the wife and kids, and all the things that go with being surrounded by family. On the road, you're in a hotel room, four walls. So it's easier to just concentrate on baseball."

When he was coming through the Tigers' farm system, Fryman wasn't considered much of a hitter, home or away. He hit .234 in each of his first two seasons of pro baseball. "Travis is a real concentrate on baseball," said Joe McDonald, the Tigers' vice president for player procurement and development.

Morales adds 100-meter butterfly to U.S. totals

The Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Pablo Morales reached and reached and finally got there.

He never gave up, not through two Olympic years marred by disappointment, not when he left swimming for law school, not even when his mother died of cancer a month after he began his comeback.

On Monday, a mere stretch of a fingertip remained between him and the wall and heartwarming fulfillment. With one last opponent inches behind, Morales reached one last time.

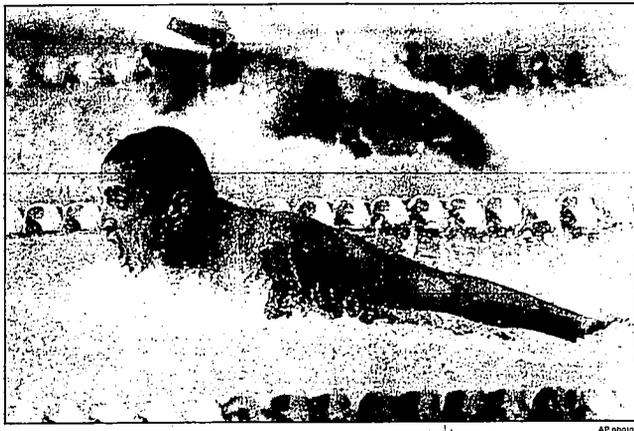

Finally, the 27-year-old man with the soft voice, hard work habits and universal admiration was there. As Morales stood there, on the gold-medal platform after winning the 100-meter butterfly Monday, U.S. men's coach Eddie Reese cried and his teammates yelled, "Way to go Pablo!"

Morales, clutching a victory bouquet to his chest, thought of Blanca Morales, who died last September. "I wish my mom was there to experience that and I know she was there in spirit," he said.

On the stand, he remembered an Olympic documentary they had watched together when he was little.

"I remember each segment focusing on an athlete would conclude with the awards ceremony," he said, pausing and nodding as he savored the thought, "I certainly remember that and thought that this is my time at last."

His time was the best — a 53.32 second swim that pipped Rafal Szukala of Poland by just three-hundredths of a second. Anthony Nesty, the 1988 Olympic champion from Suriname, was third in 53.41.

Pablo Morales of Santa Clara, Calif., swims in his 100-meter butterfly gold medal performance Monday in Barcelona. Poland's Rafal Szukala, behind, took the silver.

"I'd like to tell you a bunch of things that are bad about him but there's nothing," Reese said. "He's the ideal swimmer."

In 1984, Morales won silver medals in the 100 butterfly and 200 individual medley and was fourth in the 200 butterfly. His only gold came as part of the 400 medley relay team.

In 1986, he set the world record in the 100 butterfly that still stands, 52.84.

In 1988, he was favored in three events at the Olympic trials but failed to qualify in any.

Then, the Stanford graduate from Santa Clara, Calif., entered Cornell Law School. Three-and-a-half years later, he had to try again and took time off from his studies. "The reason I came back is for the Olympic experience, and it was just something which I admire a great deal," Morales said, "an arena where the best in the world come together, each with a dream of winning a gold medal."

He worked hard and with a playing again until X-rays are taken. "We'll see how it feels tomorrow."

An MRI on Johnson's knee was negative and the injury was diagnosed as a strained muscle. The team said he is listed as day-to-day.

Stockton said he is extremely doubtful of returning from a cracked home in his right leg in time for Wednesday night's game against Germany. "I'm shooting for Friday" against Brazil, he said.

Scottie Pippen filled in admirably Monday, scoring all his 13 points and getting six with nine assists in the first half. He also had five of 32 U.S. steals and blanketed Croat superstar Toni Kukoc, helping hold him to four points.

Michael Jordan scored 21 points and had eight steals and Charles Barkley hit with a technical foul for cursing the crowd, added 20.

But the Americans, who routed Angola by 68 points in their Olympic debut, at least had to work a little.

Croatia, a 93-76 winner over Brazil in its basketball debut as an independent state Sunday night, has two NBA players of its own, two others drafted by NBA teams, six members of the Yugoslavian team that won the 1988 Olympic silver had contemplated not winning a gold medal and was prepared to deal with it.

He didn't have to. Neitler did American Nicole Haftlett, who finished fourth in the 100 freestyle Sunday and came back Monday to win the only women's gold medal in four events so far when she took the 200 freestyle in 1:57.90. Two Germans, Franziska Van Almsick and Kerstin Kielgass, were second and third.

But American Anita Nall, the 16-year-old world record holder in the 200 freestyle, only finished third in that event behind 14-year-old Kyoko Iwatsuki of Japan and China's Lin Li.

The U.S. men gained silver and bronze in their other two events.

The Americans failed to win the 100 freestyle relay, for the first time since 1956, excluding the 1980 boycott year, and finished third. The United Team set a world record of 7:12.51 set by the Americans at the 1988 Olympics. Sweden was second in the 400 individual medley behind defending champion Tamás Danyi of Hungary, who won in an Olympic record 4:14.23 and ahead of Luca Sacchi of Italy.

Lewis may miss U.S. relay team

The Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Count on Carl Lewis running on the U.S. Olympic 400-meter relay team, relay captain Dennis Mitchell says. Don't be so certain, coach Mel Rosen advises.

The unpredictable and long-running saga of relay confusion added another chapter Monday when Mitchell and Rosen made contradictory comments during a news conference. Don't be so certain, coach Mel Rosen advised.

"He's doing everything in his power to get Carl on."

Rosen insisted the makeup of the relay team had not been decided, and would not be until Aug. 3, two days before the first-round heats. He said the plan is to run the first four finishers in the 100 meters at last month's Olympic trials in the relay through all three rounds including the semifinals and final, if they are healthy and continue to show fitness.

That would mean Mitchell, Mark Witherspoon, Leroy Burrell and Mike Marsh.

Lewis finished sixth in the 100, then fourth in the 200 at the trials. His placing in the 100 qualified him as a relay alternate. But frustrated and upset at those showings, he originally said he would cede his relay spot to seventh-place finisher James Trapp. Three days later, he changed his mind and signed up for the relay, saying he was volunteering his services if needed.

Olympics

Maybe someday the rest of the world will catch up. For the moment, the pros have the advantage in every sport, and they're happy to be at the Olympics even if it rewards them with medals instead of money. They all know that underestimates surely will follow that there's something else that intrigues them about the Games.

"You wake up in the morning and look out your window and you see all the best athletes in the world going for a jog," said Jim Courier, the top-ranked player who begins play today. "Very interesting to experience something like that, and I certainly wouldn't want to miss it."

Tennis players have a reputation as being spoiled and mercenary, but Courier and his six U.S. teammates made their Olympic zeal sound real.

"If the richest person in the world had athletic ability, you could ask them if they'd like to compete in the Olympics, and they'd say yes," doubles entrant Gigi Fernandez said.

"It's a huge honor."

Charles Barkley argues with the referee after he was given a technical foul for cursing at someone in the crowd.

Off-court reversal hands Japan volleyball win over U.S.

The Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Because rules are rules, victory became defeat for the U.S. Olympic volleyball team Monday.

The International Volleyball Federation, meeting in a cool hotel conference room, took away the inspired comeback achieved the day before in a steamy arena.

The reversal meant that instead of surviving a five-set match against Japan, the two-time Olympic champion Americans lost in four sets, 0-15, 15-11, 15-10, 15-13.

They were victims of the untamed temper of one of their players and the misguided leniency of a referee. "I feel like someone has come into my home, stolen my property and violated me," U.S. captain Scott Fortune of Laguna Beach, Calif., said. "To battle for three hours and come out victorious, only to see the people off the court decide the outcome on the court is discouraging.

At issue was whether American firebrand Bob Samuelson of Playa del Rey, Calif., should have been ejected from the game at match point for Japan in the fourth set after getting a second yellow card for yelling at officials. The rules clearly call for a red card to be issued at that point and the awarding of a technical point to Japan.

Leading 2-1 in games and 14-13 on its serve when the Samuelson incident occurred, Japan would have won the match if the rules had been applied, but referee Ramis Samedov of Azerbaijan didn't want to end it that way and allowed play to continue.

Japan lodged a protest after the game and, in an unprecedented move, the FIVB ruled after a 5½-hour meeting that Japan was right, the referee wrong, and unanimously awarded Japan the fourth set.

While unique in volleyball, there have been other disputed endings in Olympic history. The U.S. basketball team was beaten by the Soviet Union in the 1972 Munich Olympics when officials added three seconds to the clock, and Carl Lewis was awarded the 100-meter gold medal when Ben Johnson tested positive for drugs at the 1988 Games in Seoul.

Ruben Acosta, the Mexican president of the FIVB, said the rules were broken "clearly and indisputably. It is our duty to observe the rules. It is our intention to have the games decided on the court and to give referees authorities, but we have to respect the rules."

"This is a very disappointing situation, but I am prepared to come back versus Canada on Tuesday and play as hard as I have ever played," Samuelson said. "I did not realize that they assessed me a second yellow card, but it is something that I will have to deal with. There is something that we can do about the decision except play hard the remainder of the Olympics."

Samuelson, who admits that he gets carried away by his emotions during games, only came into the match to replace Bryan Iyie of Manhattan Beach, Calif., who went out with a knee injury and who was doubtful for Canada.

The ruling doesn't end the Americans' hopes of becoming the first team to win three volleyball gold medals in a row, but it makes it harder.

FBI artists produce quality sketches with new computer

CHICAGO (AP) — It might not turn Sgt. Joe Friday into Michaelangelo, but a new computer system is enhancing the artistic skills of law enforcement agents who use rough composite sketches of wanted criminals hang on Post Office walls.

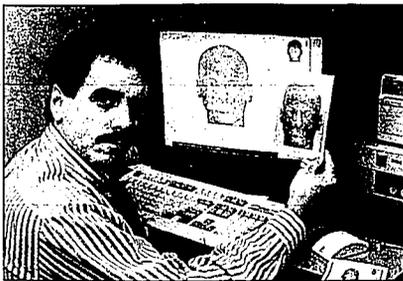

"It really is going to revolutionize the way composites are done," said Myke Taister, a sketch artist at FBI headquarters in Washington.

"It gives us a leverage we've never had," said Special Agent John Larsen of the FBI's Chicago office, where the new system was launched. "We're in the 21st century with it."

Until now, the bureau's 25 sketch artists used pencil and paper to turn a witness's description into an image of a crime suspect.

"Witnesses selected from more than 1,000 facial characteristics pictured in the FBI's Facial Identification catalog, and the artist then went to work to create a hand-drawn composite combining all those features."

But now, with the new FaceKit system, the catalogued facial features are stored in a computer and agents punch in code numbers keyed to each feature.

Instead of waiting for an artist to combine the different features into a face, the computer takes just a few minutes to generate a facial image that can be printed out on paper and transmitted around the country. "We can have a full composite, from the start of the interview to polishing up, in as fast as 20 minutes," Larsen said.

That's about twice as fast as it might take to create a hand-drawn composite.

And the system allows agents like Larsen, who lacks an art background, to create composites.

Homes sales drop in June, but July figures should show reverse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of previously owned homes fell in June for the third straight month, a real estate trade group reported Monday, but analysts said the market had revived in July as mortgage rates declined.

"Ever since the Federal Reserve brought down rates on July 2, there's been a lot of activity in the housing market," said David Lereah, an economist with the Mortgage Bankers Association.

Sales fell in June in both the West and Midwest and were unchanged in the South, according to the National Association of Realtors. The Northeast posted the only increase.

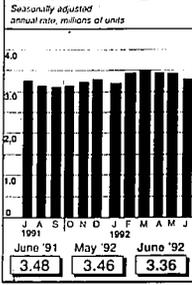

Nationally, sales dropped 2.9 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.36 million, the Realtors said. The decline followed decreases of 0.9 percent in May and 0.6 percent in April.

According to surveys by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.51 percent in June.

They had dropped to 8.08 percent by last Friday, the lowest since July 1973.

Weekly surveys by the Mortgage Bankers indicated mortgage applications to buy homes jumped 13 percent in the week ended July 17 and 14.4 percent a week earlier.

"We're hoping, and projecting at the same time, good housing activity over the next several months as long as rates stay low,"

Lereah said. Realtors economist John A. Tuccillo, who agreed the Fed action had spurred housing activity, said he expected mortgage rates to "keep sliding."

Lereah also said new home sales, which have fallen every month since February, should benefit from the lower rates. The government reports Thursday on new home sales in June and analysts expected a slight increase.

The Realtors said the median price of a previously owned home in June was $105,100, up 2.5 percent from May and 2.9 percent from June 1991 when it was $102,100. The median means that half of the homes cost more, and half less.

Sales fell 6.5 percent in the Midwest, to an $800,000 annual rate. The median price there was $82,300.

In the West, where the median price was $145,600, sales were down 6.4 percent, to a 730,000 rate.

Sales were unchanged at a 1.24 million rate in the South where the median price was $92,500.

The Northeast recorded the only gain in sales, up 1.9 percent to an annual rate of $40,000. The median price was $145,000.

Pittsburgh presses roll amid angry strikers

Pittsburgh police try to remove teamsters blocking the driveway at the Pittsburgh Press Co. early Monday.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and The Pittsburgh Press were published today for the first time since May, but striking drivers and their supporters blocked non-union replacements from making deliveries. The papers went to court in an attempt to curb the demonstration.

The Pittsburgh Press Co. filed papers this morning asking Allegheny County Common Pleas Court to limit the number of pickets outside the building. A hearing was set for this afternoon.

At midday, some 500 demonstrators remained on guard outside the headquarters of the two newspapers, some chanting "Scabs go home."

At one point in the all-night protest, officers attempted to lead a truck through a group sitting in the street with joined arms, but they turned back when demonstrators refused to move and hurled pieces of asphalt.

Shortly after dawn, officers in riot gear arrested at least 30 protesters who were obstructing a roadway, but other demonstrators continued blocking trucks.

"With this crowd, they won't be able to move any trucks," said striking driver Mike Samraney. "Everyone in this city is against them, parents, children and politicians."

Neither the morning Post-Gazette nor the afternoon Pittsburgh Press had published since drivers belonging to the Teamsters union went on strike May 17 over a company plan to streamline delivery and eliminate 450 of 605 jobs. The company has since modified its proposal, and seeks to cut 275 of 605 jobs.

Florida high court upholds newspaper tax

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Newspapers must continue to pay sales taxes as long as magazines are required to do so, the Florida Supreme Court ruled. The state court had previously ruled that the 6 percent sales tax had to apply equally to newspapers and magazines, but the justices took a second look after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1991 that some media could be exempted from such taxes.

In its July 23 ruling, the state court applied new legal principles but arrived at the same conclusion: If state law says magazines must pay, newspapers can't be exempt. The tax is worth $25 million annually.

"We're going to keep doing what we've been doing," said Jerry Moore, spokesman for the state Department of Revenue. "We've been requiring the newspapers to collect the tax and send it in."

Magazine Publishers of America Inc., the Hearst Corp. and Time Inc. were among the publishers that originally challenged the law, which forced them to pay sales taxes but exempted newspapers.

The state Supreme Court agreed in 1990 that the tax was unfair but decided the best way to deal with the problem was to simply remove the newspaper exemption, not strike down the entire tax.

The Miami Herald appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, which asked the state panel to reconsider in light of its support of an Arkansas law that taxed cable television but exempted newspapers and magazines.

Florida's Supreme Court, in a 4-2 opinion, found that the newspaper exemption was still unfair because it was based on the content of the publication, unlike the Arkansas statute, and therefore infringing on the First Amendment.

Justices Major B. Harding and Stephen Grimes dissented, saying the tax exemption really has nothing to do with the content of magazines or newspapers.

"The format and frequency of publication are the primary factors for determining whether a publication qualifies for the newspaper exemption," they wrote.

Robb campaign aide draws fine

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Sen. Charles S. Robb's former top aide was sentenced Monday to four months' probation and fined $500 for violating a federal campaign reporting law during Robb's 1988 Senate campaign.

The charge against David K. McCloud, Robb's chief of staff until last summer, stemmed from a yearlong federal grand jury investigation.

The investigation has resulted in guilty pleas by two other former Robb aides.

Time to resolve POW/MIA issue, begin looking to future

Two decades after pulling the last troops out of Southeast Asia, America still cannot pull free from the psychological tar baby of the Vietnam War.

This year one major party's presidential candidate must defend his record of avoiding military service during that war. The other found himself last week being heckled and accused of complicity in keeping secret the fate of American servicemen listed as missing in action.

President Bush, a former Navy flier once shot down in combat, was horrified and angry to be jeered at and doubted, and he said so. What he didn't say, however, was what needs to be said.

The existence of live MIAs in Southeast Asia is the stuff of legend and myth. Though widely believed, it is not grounded in evidence, and the nation's fascination with it is not healthy.

A poll last year revealed that 69 percent of Americans believe U.S. prisoners remain alive. This is not surprising, given the efforts of the government and the entertainment industry to create exactly that belief.

According to a December 1991 article in the Atlantic magazine, the MIA cause originally sprang from a Nixon administration campaign to build support for the war effort. Then, under the Reagan administration, a resolve to free imprisoned GIs became a key theme in rehabilitating the memory of an unpopular war, and in rebuilding the patriotism that had eroded in the 1960s and '70s.

That theme of national redemption resounded in films such as "Uncle Sam Was Here," "Missing in Action," and "Rambo: First Blood Part II" — movies that have shaped the nation's ideas about MIAs far more than reality has.

Propelled by these images, public belief in the MIAs has shoved aside contrary evidence, including an exhaustive 1976 congressional investigation that concluded no POWs remained alive.

As happens so often when heartfelt belief contradicts "official" history, faith in the MIA story has grown into belief in a conspiracy. Thus, ironically, a president whose political party profited from promoting the MIA cause is now suspected of hiding the truth from MIA family members.

Those family members are the real victims of the continuing uncertainty over the MIAs' fate. As much as a quarter-century after losing a husband or father, they cling to the possibility that he might still be alive, living a wretched life in a remote jungle prison camp.

This belief may be less painful to accept than the more plausible conclusion that, in any war, many deaths will never be accounted for. But it also stifles the natural healing process of grief — both for the families and for the nation.

America has suffered enough over Vietnam. If, by some chance, the government has some unknown evidence that MIAs are alive, it should make it public. Or, if the government can free families from the past by releasing whatever documents it still holds, it should do that too.

The nation owes at least that much to the families of servicemen. If, as seems likely, the MIA cause is a false hope, it is time for MIA families and the nation to look to the future.

The Quayle question still dogs Bush

Richard Morin

WASHINGTON — Lips are fluttering inside the Beltway that Vice President Dan Quayle may be dumped from the ticket by President Bush in the roiling wake of a strong Democratic convention that has sent Bill Clinton soaring in the polls.

America, too, is having second and third thoughts about the man who stands just a heartbeat away from the presidency, according to a new Washington Post-ABC News Poll.

After nearly a year of intense and marginally successful efforts by White House image doctors to reassert his standing with the public, Quayle's image again is taking a battering, with his widely satirized "potato" spelling gaffe getting laughs for many Democratic speakers at their recent convention.

And once again, Quayle's numbers are heading south. According to the Post-ABC News survey, 63 percent of those questioned said they have an unfavorable impression of Quayle, up from 54 percent in June.

That's the first time the vice president's unfavorable rating among voters has topped 60 percent.

In sharp counterpoint, 55 percent said they hold a favorable view of Clinton's running mate, Sen. Alben Gore Jr. of Tennessee, while just 12 percent said they have an unfavorable view of him. The remainder said they do not yet know enough about Gore to say.

A plurality of voters (46 percent) said Bush should keep Quayle, while the ticket 40 percent who said the vice president should remain.

Among Republicans, 58 percent said Bush should keep Quayle, while 32 percent said he should dump.

Another 60 percent — including a majority of Republicans, Democrats and independents polled — said they would approve if Bush decided to dump Quayle and tap someone else to run with him in the fall.

So far Bush has given no indication that he will drop Quayle and every indication that he will not. Last week Bush said Quayle's spot on the ticket is "certain."

Bush is big on loyalty. He expects to get it from others, and he gives it back full measure.

Plus, dropping Quayle may cause him even more political problems than keeping him — a tardy admission that he blew it four years ago in New Orleans.

How big a problem is Quayle? Martin Wattenberg, a political scientist at the University of California at Irvine, estimated that Quayle cost Bush two percentage points four years ago. Since Bush won with 54 percent of the vote, that finding is merely an interesting technical footnote to the 1988 campaign.

Wattenberg estimates that Quayle will do as much harm to Bush this campaign, too. Unfortunately for the Republicans, this year Bush appears to need every point he can muster to beat Clinton and Gore — meaning that the Quayle Factor could be politically fatal this year.

That's because rising unemployment and fears of a worsening economy have further eroded confidence among the voters, giving additional lift to the soaring popularity of Democrat Bill Clinton, the latest Post-ABC News Poll found.

Almost half of registered voters surveyed immediately after the Democratic National Convention said the economy is getting worse, a third said it is staying the same, and just 14 percent said it is getting better.

Just a month ago, not even four in 10 voters said the economy was worsening. New-found confidence in Clinton's ability to handle the economy and shake up the federal government, combined with a week of virtually nonstop good news, propelled the Arkansas governor to a 58 percent to 29 percent post-convention lead over President Bush.

Among those most likely to vote, Clinton led by a similarly large margin of 58 percent to 30 percent. Only a month ago, the Democratic challenger was running third behind Ross Perot and Bush.

A total of 714 registered voters were interviewed July 17-19.

The margin of sampling error for the overall results was plus or minus 4 percentage points.

Clinton has benefited from an unprecedented double-bump, with the Democrats' love-fest in New York and Perot's withdrawal sending the Arkansas governor soaring — at least temporarily — in the polls.

For now, the Post-ABC survey suggests, Clinton is winning the battle for Perot's supporters.

Six out of 10 voters who said they would support Perot if he were still in the race currently favor Clinton, with just one in five backing Bush.

But the former Perot voters remain only weakly committed to their choices. Only a third of all Perot voters who now support Clinton say they strongly back the Democratic nominee.

And even fewer — one out of four — Perot voters who now favor Bush are strongly behind their choice. And nearly three out of four — 73 percent — say they wish another candidate would enter the race, while 25 percent say they are satisfied.

Richard Morin directs public-opinion polling for the Washington Post.

National abortion debate simplifies moral decisions

A strange thing happened to Dan Quayle last week on his way to Kentucky.

Under the harsh glare of television lights, the vice president momentarily sounded pro-choice, saying he would counsel and support his daughter, now 13, in whatever decision she made if she ever faced an unwanted pregnancy.

"If the decision was abortion, you'd support her?" talk show host Larry King asked Quayle, who supports a constitutional amendment outlawing most abortions.

"I'd support my daughter. I would hope that she wouldn't make that decision," the vice president replied.

Reporters and abortion rights supporters had a field day with what sounded like a double standard. But Quayle's comments were less incriminating than honest; less scripted than straight from the heart — a father's heart.

He answered the question, not as the vice president, but as the father of a daughter, a daughter we can safely assume he dearly loves and deeply respects.

In that light, his comments are not so surprising. Instead, they keenly illustrate how complex the issue of abortion is when viewed on a personal level; how moral decisions are not as black and white in real life as the national debates about them are.

It is a great leap, indeed, between what sounds right for the nation and what is right for individuals and families facing difficult decisions.

I am thinking, now, of a woman named Marie, who called a few years ago from Huntington Beach, Calif.

A Catholic, Marie vehemently opposed abortion. Then her 16-year-old daughter became pregnant. Marie strongly pushed for her to have the baby and place it up for adoption, but the girl insisted she couldn't face the humiliation of a teen pregnancy.

Diana Griego Erwin

She pleaded with her mother to help her get an abortion.

"What can I do?" Marie asked me at the time. "Turn my back on her when she needs me most?"

Did she want her daughter to become pregnant? No. Did she want her daughter to have an abortion? No. Would the daughter have gone through with it alone? "I'm sure she would," Marie said.

She still opposes abortion. But backing her daughter was more important.

"When you think of it, supporting your child is the most important thing you can do," agreed Belinda Meyerson, 38, a Garden Grove, Calif., mother of three daughters.

She opposes abortion, but says if one of her daughters ever opted for one, she hopes it would be a legal one. "That sounds hypocritical, I'm sure," she said. "But it makes sense to me, the mother."

A retired Orange County sheriff's deputy who once opposed abortion rights sees both sides of the issue for other reasons. Back in the 1960s, he investigated illegal clinics throughout the county.

"You never did see such filth. Bare tables. Knives, I'm talking kitchen utensils. These guys weren't even doctors," he said.

Because of personal beliefs, I, too, am opposed to having an abortion. But am not willing to force my personal decision on every woman in America.

And although I hope my daughters never turn to abortion, the truth is, as Quayle obviously well knows, the final decision is theirs.

And theirs alone.

Diana Griego Erwin is an Orange County Register columnist.

Find abortion middle ground

I just listened to a debate on CNN between pro-life and pro-choice advocates, and I think there needs to be a third group call pro-common sense.

Pro-lifers say no abortions! Pro-choice, anything goes!

Why can't there be a common sense approach? Stop all abortions after the first trimester or let women take a pill like the one from Mexico, which you can only take up to nine or 10 weeks. Women could still have their rights and so can babies who are already developed.

I don't understand how all the doctors in the world can't decide when a child has developed in the womb. Ultrasounds should be a major priority before any abortion. Then have easy adoption clinics for the other women who found out too late and can't have their abortions, so all those families can have the baby they always dreamed of.

Get a grip, America.

"Stuart" thinks that all women are sneaks and liars. I have given him no reason to think that I am unfaithful or sneaking behind his back. He doesn't trust anyone until that trust is "earned." I can't feel comfortable until I have "earned" his trust.

Abby, I have been doing everything I can to show him that I can be trusted. I am always home when he calls; I'm always at work when he calls. When we are together, I feel I show him by my actions that he is the only one I'm dating or paying attention to. We see each other five days out of seven. When we are not together, we talk on the telephone. When would I even have time for someone else?

I'm in my 50s, affectionate and outgoing.

I'm slim, attractive and look terrific with my clothes on. There was no problem with my husband — we had a loving marriage, and he was thrilled just to have me alive and well.

Man upset about debt suspected in attack

TWIN FALLS — An ex-boyfriend upset about an old debt is the suspect in weekend attack in which a Twin Falls woman reported her jewelry was taken.

Teri Schulz, 24, told police the 25-year-old man with whom she lived for five months entered her apartment on Washington Street South Sunday morning and held a razor-knife to her throat.

The man threatened to return later and either collect $800 Schulz owes him or kill her or her son, according to a Twin Falls police department report.

He also threatened to cut her fingers off to get at the rings she was wearing, the report says. Schulz gave the man two rings, worth $275, and a $400 watch, she said.

Detective Dennis Chambers of the Twin Falls police department said no arrest was made Monday, but that another detective was interviewing people connected with the case.

The 25-year-old woman said a man grabbed her from behind as she walked from her car to her house on Forest Vale Circle. The man threatened to rape her, but the woman told police she hit him in the head with her purse, and he ran away.

According to a Twin Falls police department report, the woman was unable to get a clear description of the man, who was of medium height and wore dark clothing.

Bar honors Blaine County judge, Twin Falls attorney

BOISE — A Twin Falls attorney and a Blaine County judge have been honored by the Idaho State Bar for their contributions to the legal profession in Idaho.

Monte B. Carlson was one of seven Idaho lawyers to receive the state bar's first Professionalism Awards at the group's annual meeting last week.

"At a time when the public perception of lawyers is generally negative, it is the intention of the Idaho State Bar Board of Commissioners to emphasize behavior that serves to enhance instead of detract from the image of Idaho's lawyers," the bar said in a news release.

Fifth District Magistrate James J. May was one of six Idahoans presented with this year's Service Awards.

The awards are given to attorneys and non-attorneys to recognize their contributions to the bar and the state's legal profession.

Judge withholds judgment in Crowley case

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than five months after being arrested for holding a gun while several children covered on a sofa in her house, a 29-year-old Twin Falls woman hopes to put the incident and her alcohol problems behind her.

Kimberly K. Crowley was sentenced Monday to three years of supervised probation on a felony child endangerment count.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl said he believes Crowley is sincere in her desire to conquer the alcohol addiction that led to her February arrest. He agreed to withhold judgment in the case, meaning the incident could be cleared from Crowley's record if she successfully completes her probation.

If she does not, Meehl has the option of ordering a stiffer sentence.

Crowley was arrested by city police Feb. 8 who were called to her home in the 500 block of Highland Avenue.

Twin Falls police officer Chuck Dudley said he arrested Crowley after he heard her shouting and saw her pointing a handgun at four children inside the house. Dudley said Crowley's 10-year-old daughter told him outside the home and that Crowley had fired two rounds from the pistol.

None of the children was injured in the incident, and Crowley's attorney said she was not trying to threaten the children, but had been drinking and only accidentally fired the gun.

Some of the children involved were her own; others had been left in Crowley's care.

She originally was charged with four counts of aggravated battery and four counts of injury to children, but she later pleaded guilty to one child endangerment count and the remaining charges were dropped.

"I'm very sorry for what I've done," Crowley said, her voice cracking during a brief statement before Meehl handed down the sentence. "I'm sorry I let alcohol control my life. ... I wish I could turn back time, but I can't."

Museum building unsafe

Blaine County officials close structure to public

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The 105-year-old adobe building housing the Blaine County Museum on Hailey's Main Street is in danger of collapsing, forcing city officials to close it to the public late last week.

"We've declared it an unsafe structure," said Hailey City Administrator Dayle James, adding that the building is close to being condemned.

A wall on the north side of the building facing Galena Street has sagged dramatically in recent days and engineers who have studied the problem report that it is unsound.

A discussion on what to do about the building was scheduled before the Hailey City Council's meeting Monday night. Options include either razing the historic structure or seeking grants for the estimated $30,000 needed to reconstruct the damaged wall.

"We would like to see it restored," said Jack Davies, vice-chairman of the museum's board of directors. But no specific plans for such an effort have yet been made.

Built in 1887, the building served as an armory during the Spanish American War. It has also been a dance hall, an opera house, a liquor store, a public meeting hall and the site of Hailey's first movie house.

"In the last week or so one of our members noticed that the wall was slipping," Davies said.

At the request of the museum's board, Hailey civil engineer Warren Myers inspected the wall and "found it to be very dangerous," according to Davies.

Hailey's building inspector was summoned to the scene and ruled that the building should be closed and evacuated.

The museum's exhibits have since been moved to an addition on the back side of the building that was built in the 1960s, Davis said. The museum, which is usually open to the public from Monday through Labor Day weekend each year, is now closed indefinitely.

Davies blamed the 1983 earthquake that centered near Mackay and jolted Hailey for weakening the walls of the old building.

"It's what we think made it start to collapse," he said.

Davies also speculated that road construction in Hailey and the town's increasingly heavy traffic may have contributed to its demise.

Kempthorne might accept INEL weapons complex

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE — Republican U.S. Senate candidate Dirk Kempthorne said Monday he would not rule out relocating part or all of the nation's nuclear weapons production complex to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

To do so, the Boise mayor said, would be to turn his back on the INEL and its role in the national defense.

But Congressman Richard Stallings, Kempthorne's Democratic opponent in the November election, said locating any weapons production at INEL would keep the site dependent on defense projects when it should be shifting to civilian work.

The two contenders also took potshots at each other's records in office Monday, in the second of a statewide series of debates. The debate was held at the Boise headquarters of Micron Technology.

The next debate is scheduled for Twin Falls on Sunday, Aug. 9. The time and location have yet to be determined.

During a discussion of defense policy Monday, Stallings asked Kempthorne if he would support relocating Colorado's Rocky Flats facility, which makes triggers for nuclear weapons, to INEL, if he had included assurances that it would not endanger people or the environment.

"Not necessarily, but I wouldn't reject it out of hand either," Kempthorne replied.

Stallings responded by suggesting that polling people in eastern Idaho might "help you decide how you stand on this."

Stallings, a former history professor at Ricks College, then said that if Kempthorne were one of his students, he would tell him to study some more.

A visibly angered Kempthorne heatedly asked that Stallings not "condescend" to him during the debate, adding "You're no longer the professor."

Kempthorne repeated his support for high-tech weapons projects such as the

Gem ski resort owners back effort to simplify rent bills

States News Service and The Times-News

WASHINGTON — The end of the month is coming up, and rent is due. Imagine leasing an apartment from a landlord who charges different fees based on a variety of factors.

"So you got a $200 bonus from work, and a $75 birthday check from Aunt Agnes? Get ready for a rent hike."

No one in their right mind would agree to such an arrangement — except certain ski resort owners in states like Idaho, who say they have no choice.

"It's a very complex accounting exercise that you have to go through every year to figure out what you owe to the Forest Service," said Mike Shirley, general manager of Idaho's Bogus Basin resort.

"It's very hard for a small resort," said Woody Anderson, owner of Pomerelle Ski Resort in Cassia County. "We really have to go through an agonizing process of paperwork every year."

Fees vary between resorts and from year to year, depending in part on income from facilities such as restaurants and shops that are associated with the resort, even if the facility is on privately owned land.

Utah's Snowbird resort has even had to negotiate with the Forest Service over whether funds from pay phones and automatic bank machines located on private land should be included in the fee calculation, U.S. Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah, testified in a congressional hearing last week.

But it can get worse, according to Shirley.

"We thought we were doing a good job and everything was going along fine," said Shirley. Then the Forest Service brought up "the matter of

Worried water users take their case to Legislature

By N.S. Nocketved
Times-News writer

BOISE — On one of the hottest days of the sixth year of drought, southern Idaho water users took their plight to the capital Monday in hopes of catching the ear of the Legislature.

They picked what they thought would be a slack time during the special legislative session to tell lawmakers about the effects of increased groundwater pumping in the Snake River Plain Aquifer.

But only about 10 legislators showed up to hear some of the presentations of the "Southern Idaho Water Alliance," a newly formed coalition of water interests.

Many water users are concerned about the decline of spring flows and dropping aquifer levels since a dramatic increase in groundwater pumping that began in the 1950s.

Even while new wells are drilled and pumps turned on, some much older water rights farther down the plain are dwindling. And many more new wells waiting for permits.

Twin-Falls and North Side canal companies have rights that date back to 1900, but they are delivering only 60 to 70 percent of their historic levels.

Still, drought is not the sole cause of the problem, maintained Gary Sleite of Twin Falls, attorney for the canal companies. New groundwater developments have diminished water available to fill prior surface rights, he said.

In an effort to halt the decline, the Twin Falls and North Side companies have filed a suit in 5th District Court seeking an injunction against new ground and surface water developments in the eastern Idaho.

Idaho water law is based on the principle, that the first to develop water for a beneficial use has the preferred right to that water in times of shortage.

Businesses were established on that principle and the doctrine that senior water rights would be protected, said J.D. May, a Twin Falls attorney representing Rangen Inc. But junior water users are pumping water while waiting.

 sharply users' surface rights are drying up, he said.
 Charles Brockway, University of Idaho hydrologist, explained how changes in water use have changed the level in the aquifer.
 "Some years it gains water. Some years it loses water. The past few years it's been losing water," he said.
 Jerry Hughes, chief of water resources division of the Idaho District of the U.S. Geological Survey, said in 1980 discharges and withdrawals exceeded recharge by more than 400,000 acre-feet of water.

"It's certain there is a deficit," Hughes said. Exactly how much is hard to tell, he said.
 Early this century diversions at Milner Dam transferred the river to the aquifer, he said. The diversions—particularly on the north side of the river—resulted in the river level dropping and the aquifer level rising as irrigation water seeped into the groundwater. But then in about 1950, new groundwater permits increased sharply, Hughes pointed out. After that, the aquifer began to drop again.

 Slette says a state moratorium on water developments in June did not go far enough.
 The state should halt all new water development until more is known about how ground and surface water interact, and how groundwater affects surface flows, Slette said.
 The management of ground and surface water as a single source is the future of Idaho, he said.
 No one knew of an area in the West that had dealt successfully with conjunctive management of ground and surface water. Most places that had had to face that struggle have faced economic loss, said state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

 complementary passes the resort hands out to ski instructors and other employees. Bogus Basin never paid for those passes.
 Not only did the resort have to begin paying fees on the passes, it had to pay almost $10,000 in retroactive fees for the previous three years.
 It's enough to make a ski resort owner want to take up surfing. But help appears to be on the way from representatives on Capitol Hill.
 "They (the Forest Service) are complicating the fee structure to a degree where it is almost impossible for resorts to stay in business," charged U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, who is running for the Senate. Stallings has joined legislative efforts to drastically simplify the rental fee system for ski resort owners.
 Under a bill sponsored by Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., resort operators would pay a progressive fee based on revenue brackets, similar to the personal income tax. Smaller ski resorts would pay a lower percentage fee than resorts in the top bracket.
 The Forest Service isn't raising a fight over the legislation. "I think the Forest Service realized the mess they created," said Williams.

 The Forest Service's main concern is that the new system be revenue neutral, with the same amount of money paid to the government under the new system as would have been paid under the old method, according to Steve Deitemeyer, acting director of recreation for the Forest Service.
 "If the new system were put into effect right now, it would fall 'just short' of revenue neutrality, said Deitemeyer. He added the service would work with Congress to amend the bill in an effort to achieve revenue neutrality.
 "I think we're awful close" to an agreement, Deitemeyer said. Although he conceded "some resorts will be paying more and some will be paying less," under Williams' proposal, he said time saved in accounting would help offset some of the added costs.
 That's an important point to Anderson.
 "As long as it does not dramatically increase the fees, we're very much in favor of it," he said.
 Not everyone agrees, however. U.S. Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., spoke out against the legislation during a hearing last week.

 Synar noted that the ski permit fee for Colorado's Tony Vail resort would be reduced by 12.6 percent each year, while a much smaller ski resort, South Dakota's Terry Peak, would have its fee increased by 27.2 percent.
 But the legislation would not necessarily result in smaller resorts taking up the slack for bigger ones, according to bill supporters. Collins, whose resort is the largest in Montana, says he would pay roughly the same amount under both systems.
 Dennis Harmon, president of the Heavenly Valley Ski Resort, located on the California-Nevada border, said his resort as one of the largest 15 in the nation. Harmon estimates his fees would increase between $500 and $6,000 under the new system—but says the stability of the system and time saved would more than compensate for the increase.
 "The reason we feel strongly about it is not necessarily the amount we're paying. It's just the uncertainty about what's revenue," Shirley said.

 But Stallings said Star Wars and the B-2 project should be reduced or eliminated to free up money for deficit reduction and domestic needs.
 The B-2, he said, was sold to Congress on the promise that it would fly farther than existing bombers, carry heavier payloads and be invisible to radar.
 "Those (promises) have been drastically scaled back, because the thing does not work," he said.

And, although Kempthorne said Star Wars technology could protect the United States from nations such as Iraq, Stallings pointed out that Iraq does not have the kind of missile that Star Wars is intended to protect against.
 In fact, he said, no nation does now that the Soviet Union has collapsed.
 After Kempthorne said Stealth technology has proved its worth in the Persian Gulf War, Stallings replied that the planes involved were fighters, not bombers like the B-2.
 "You understand, there are two planes there," he said. "One's a fighter, and one's a bomber."

 Her attorney, Golden Bennett, noted that the incident already has put Crowley and her family $9,500 in debt.
 But her arrest has had a silver lining by forcing Crowley to face her alcoholism and to seek treatment, he said.
 Since Crowley was arrested, she has been through a three-week inpatient program at the Walker Center and has attended 90 Alcoholics Anonymous meetings in 90 days, Bennett said.
 At a hearing in late February, Crowley vowed never to drink alcohol again, and she has made good on that promise, Bennett said.
 Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter agreed that Crowley's recovery is going well.
 Under terms of her probation, Crowley is forbidden to drink alcohol or to enter bars. She also is not allowed to have guns in her home.

RUPERT — It's unlikely the "crazy root" disease outbreak spreading through Minidoka and Cassia county sugar beets and Mini-Cassia counties eradicated indefinitely, the Minidoka County Extension agent said Monday.

But Ivan Hopkins told the Minidoka County commissioners that it's feasible to slow the spread of rhizomania if proper sanitation can be maintained until control measures are available.

Hopkins briefed the commissioners on the status of the viral disease that has so far infected 22 fields belonging to 16 growers near Rupert and Burley.

As of July 22, 10,521 acres in 250 sugar beet fields in Minidoka and Cassia counties had been sampled for the virus and 576 acres in 22 fields tested positive.

All the contaminated fields are within a 3½-mile radius, Hopkins said.

"I think all of us are a little surprised as to the number of infected fields," Commissioner Clarence Bellem said. State agriculture officials have said the outbreak should not be a threat to an industry that produced about $102.9 million in farm income in south-central Idaho in 1990, the last year for which statistics are available.

For the moment, samples are being taken only from fields showing foliage symptoms: general stunting chlorosis, wilting without foliage discoloration, erect growth of the leaves, raised veins on the underside of the leaves, elongated shape and abnormally large number of leaves or stunted growth.

Hopkins said the only chemical control of rhizomania is with 1,3-dichloropropene (Telone II), but is expensive and must be done entirely under a plastic covering.

Caution may help curb the spread of the virus and buy time to allow for development of resistant varieties and cultural practices that will control the disease, Hopkins said.

The virus is a parasite that rests on the spores of fungus present in the soil. It can be easily spread from field to field via soil clinging on boots, equipment or animals.

Heyburn man arrested for allegedly possessing cocaine

Mini-Cassia News Service

HEYBURN — A 65-year-old Heyburn man was arrested Saturday and charged with possession of cocaine with intent to deliver, following several months of undercover investigation by Heyburn police.

Blaine Mackley was released from the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center after posting $10,000 bond, according to Heyburn Police Chief Earl Andrew.

Andrew said that his department was assisted by officers from the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics, the Magic Valley Drug Task Force, the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department and Rupert police, including their drug-sniffing dog, Buddy.

The officers, armed with a search warrant, searched Mackley's mobile home Saturday and allegedly discovered 107 grams of cocaine and $7,100 cash.

Andrew said the cocaine had a street value of about $16,000.

Also seized was Mackley's 14-by-70-foot mobile home and his 1986 Volkswagen Jetta.

Don't blame Hispanics for high Cassia crime rate

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Cassia County commissioners want to put a stop to the impression that Hispanics are to blame for the county's high crime rate.

"In order to solve this problem we need to get influential people talking and start doing things and working together instead of fighting all the time," Commissioner John Adams said during Monday's regular commission meeting.

Prosecuting Attorney Stephen Bywater is working on a proposal to form a committee composed of both Hispanics and non-Hispanics to discuss what is at the root of the crime problem and what should be done about it.

The group will also work toward better community relations between whites and Hispanics, Adams said. "I don't have any magic solutions to the problem but we could get the opinions of different people and how we might deal with it," Bywater said.

The proposal comes at the wake of new statistics from the Idaho Department of Law Enforcement showing that Cassia County has the second-highest crime rate in the state when the crimes of murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny, motor vehicle theft and arson are totaled.

The Cassia County Sheriff's Department said the numbers are misleading because the county's "official" population of 20,000 can balloon during various times of the year.

Sheriff Billy Crystal told

Cassia County employee evaluations set to begin

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — A proposal to regularly evaluate Cassia County employees might be finally getting off the ground.

County Administrator Tim Hurst reported Monday at the Cassia County Commission meeting that during the past two years, there have been attempts to have department heads evaluate employees working under them.

Even though evaluation forms "were handed out, Hurst said he hasn't received any back."

Commissioner Norman Dayley said it was important to have the evaluations.

"We need to have justification for paying employees what we are paying them," he said.

If a county employee were to ever file a complaint against the county, it would be helpful for county officials to have such evaluations in the employee's personnel file.

"If you don't have documentation, you might be in trouble when there's a grievance," Dayley said.

Hurst said there have been cases where there has been trouble with a county employee and the department head has talked to him about it.

County Assessor Martell Holland said some employees "don't take suggestions on ways to improve very well."

"They kind of get down," he said.

Dayley suggested that department heads find ways to relate to employees better so they don't take offense when evaluations are made of them.

commissioners the idea of forming a committee was "excellent" and as an additional step suggested that a Hispanic be appointed to the Law Enforcement Advisory Committee, which was formed when the city of Burley and Cassia County consolidated law enforcement.

Besides county and city officials, the advisory committee is presently made up of two citizens, neither of whom is Hispanic, Crystal after the meeting.

The advisory committee discusses several different areas of law enforcement, from budgeting to crime statistics, he said.

Crystal said his department doesn't keep track of what percentages of crimes are committed by various races.

Adams said the problem of people blaming Hispanics for crime is serious.

"I'm hearing comments I don't like to hear," Adams said. "It looks like a growing, brewing problem," he added.

Bywater added that it was his view that when looking at crime, people should take race out of the discussion. "It's people (who commit crimes)," he said.

Adams said he was pleased with how many Hispanics participated in the Oakley Pioneer Day's celebration over the weekend, and said more whites should become involved in celebrations such as Cinco De Mayo.

Last week, Heyburn City Council established its Hispanic Involvement Committee, which will attempt to involve Hispanics in more of that city's activities.

Galena miners join jobless ranks

WALLACE (AP) — The Galena Mine shut down Sunday, probably ending a way of life for many of its 200 miners.

"I wish they should have waited a couple more years," said Hank Jefferson, a 25-year veteran who worked his last shift Friday. "I've got a kid about ready to graduate. He wants to go to college."

Few of the miners expect to find work again, and many are turning to industry fighting for survival against depressed silver prices.

In the last two years, about 1,000 northern Idaho miners have been thrown out of work, leaving cash-starved Shoshone County in a depression. Just two mines remain in operation, the Lucky Friday silver mine at Mullan and the Sunshine Mine near Kellogg.

Galena Mine, operated by ASARCO of New York but owned by Coeur d'Alene Mines Corp., president of Coeur d'Alene, was expected to be the last of the Silver Valley's mines to shut down, until an announcement two months ago. But silver prices — as of Friday under $4 per ounce — explain the shutdowns. That's about $2 per ounce less than mining companies need for a profit.

Kip Bircher, a 35-year-old Silver Valley native with a wife and three children, doesn't understand the complicated market transactions that have depressed silver prices for the past three years. He faces a pressing dilemma, where to get his next paycheck, is equally hard to answer.

"My 11-year-old (son) asks about it all the time. He says, 'Daddy, what are you going to do?' I don't know what to tell him."

Bircher said. "Heck, all I want to do is work 40 hours a week and make a decent living. I didn't think that was too much to ask."

Bill White said he prefers staying put to going back to school or starting another career. "I've lived here all my life. My house is paid for. And I'd like to stay."

Officials with Union Local 18 of the United Steelworkers of America said less than a dozen Galena miners have found jobs at underground mines in Arizona or South Dakota. Some got Friday, where a new silver discovery has fueled hope that the mine will stay open.

Rupert's Cameron named to health care committee

Mini-Cassia News Service

Cameron

RUPERT — State Sen. Dean L. Cameron has been appointed to fill the vacancy left by Sen. Russell Newcomb on the Legislature's task force on health care.

Newcomb, a Twin Falls surgeon, was defeated by state Sen. Laird Nohi, R-Kimberly, in the Republican primary election in May.

Cameron, a Rupert insurance agent and a Republican serving his first term in the Legislature, says he brings to the committee nine years of experience dealing in the insurance industry and in the employee benefits arena.

insurance rates, but as experience has shown, will actually increase them," Cameron said.

"One doesn't have to look very far to see that any time the government gets involved, it ends up costing us more money."

Cameron said the U.S. government's own inability to run Medicare efficiently is a good example.

"I'm afraid government involvement in the health care system will result with people being treated with all the compassion of the IRS, the efficiency of the Postal Service, while at the prices of the Pentagon. Much of our current rates that we pay today are due to government mandates," Cameron said.

Cameron worked closely with Newcomb on his proposal for health care reform as well as on small group reform, he said.

"Sen. Newcomb's was a good concept to start with. While it wasn't perfect, it provides some good innovative ideas and a good basis to begin working with for protecting health care reform."

Cameron said he does not support a national or state health care plan.

"Government involvement in health care will not lower health in-those 160,000 uninsured," Cameron said.

Cameron said he would be working hard on small group reform again next session, if re-elected, as well as several other proposals to not only make health care accessible, but also affordable.

Cameron, who was appointed a year ago to fill the unexpired term of Sen. Lynn Tomingna, will face Democrat newcomer Jason Stoddard of Rupert in the November general election.

Officials detonate unstable acid

OREM, Utah (AP) — Bomb experts and environmental officials on Monday safely detonated three cartons of an unstable, explosive acid found in the rubble of a fire at a chemical plant.

Detective Gerald Nielsen said about 70 to 100 pounds of pickeric acid was exploded in a three-foot-deep hole at the Utah County Land-fill west of Orem.

The blast doubled the size of the hole, but Nielsen said it was good, clean explosion with not many vapors.

The acid was removed earlier in the day from Parish Chemical Co. after a weekend fire at the plant caused the precautionary evacuation of more than 120 homes and businesses in this community of 65,000 located 40 miles south of Salt Lake City.

Each of the 15-kilogram containers had the potential of leveling a city block, Nielsen said. Only two of the cartons were full, and the third was close to empty.

A reconnaissance team was sent into the plant to remove any water-reactive chemicals so that a fire, which was smoldering in the roof, can be extinguished.

Nielsen said the team, which included an Environmental Protection Agency chemist, will make a final check for other hazardous chemicals before letting firefighters onto the site.

An explosives company hired by the EPA moved the pickeric acid in an armored bomb trailer. The acid is sensitive to pressure and both light and heat change.

Boxes containing the acid were found Sunday night during a cleanup at the plant where a fire raged for two days out of control until a rain-storm allowed firefighters to approach the building and pump retardant foam on the blaze through a collapsed roof.

"We backed right off. I don't want to be within a block if that's going to blow up," Nielsen said.

Trouble at the plant, which manufactures drugs, insecticides and herbicides, began Thursday with the spill of a toxic chemical that forced officials to evacuate residents.

They had barely returned to their homes Friday morning when the fire broke out. Plant officials said the spill and fire were unrelated. Firefighters have not determined the cause of the blaze.

Hotel begins random drug test of workers

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The Hotel San Remo has announced it will begin random drug testing of employees, using hair from the back of an employee's head in what is becoming a more popular method of drug testing.

The hair-testing method uses about 60 strands of hair from the back of the head. Drug deposits can be detected through a chemical process.

Many hotel-casinos use urinalysis for drug testing, but the costlier hair testing is becoming popular because hair permanently stores drug deposits.

Some 700 employees of the resort are scheduled to be tested at random over the next year.

The San Remo is believed to be the first to use the hair-testing method randomly for all existing employees.

The Desert Inn has been using the method to test job applicants.

Investigation into bus crash continues; stories abound

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Authorities have declined to comment on the results of a probe by federal and state investigators into last Tuesday's bus crash northwest of here that injured 40 people.

"We just don't have anything to announce at this point," Nevada Highway Patrol Trooper Garth Gardner said Monday.

was contaminated with a petroleum substance, Gardner said Monday.

Gardner said last week it appeared the rear brakes of the 1973-model bus failed, sending it careening off a highway, where it hit a mound of gravel, then flew 80 feet in the air before landing upside down.

Investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board and the U.S. Department of Transportation conducted a mechanical inspection of the bus Friday, according to Gardner.

The results of that investigation will be reviewed to determine if charges should be filed against the company, Western Coach Service Inc., or the driver, A.J. Bass Jr.

A patrol investigation indicated four of six air brakes were out of adjustment and the brake system

Meanwhile, Clark County officials say they dropped a contract with the bus company July 7 after a series of mechanical problems, including one incident in which apparent brake failure sent a bus careening off the road.

"That one was the one that prompted us to say we would not put children on these buses anymore," said Earl Hawkes, Clark County general services director.

"It's awesome," said Hawkes. "It's sickening, that's what it is."

Southern Utah peak finally nets name

ST. GEORGE (AP) — Two sites in Washington and Juab counties have been given official Utah place names — Tabeau Peak and Badeau Ridge.

The names were approved by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names after being recommended by the Utah Committee for Geographic Names.

Washington County's Tabeau Peak, 4,462 feet high and located in the Beaver Dam mountains, is four miles southwest of Bulldog Pass. The feature is named for Jean Baptiste Tabeau, a member of the 1843-44 expedition led by John Charles Fremont headed east from California.

Tabeau was killed by Indians as the party camped along the Virgin River near present Littlefield, Ariz.

Fremont biographer Ferol Egan says Tabeau and others were guarding the livestock that had been put to pasture. He followed a lame mule that left the herd and became an easy target for angry Plutes living along the Muddy River.

Badeau Ridge, in Juab County, is 4 miles long and runs south to Yuba Dam 9 miles northeast of Scipio. The ridge is named for Francois Badeau, a voyager also with the 1843-44 Fremont expedition.

Records indicate that Badeau is buried in the base of the feature. Badeau's death is recounted by another Fremont biographer, Cardinal Goodwin, who said the expedition came to the Sevier River at its most northern point and crossed without loss.

Burley woman released after 1-car accident

BURLEY — A Burley woman was treated and released Saturday at Cassia Memorial Hospital following a one-car accident on 16th Street, police reports say.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, Katherine Bryan, 71, was westbound on Idaho Highway 81 near the Burley Municipal Golf Course at 3 p.m. when she turned west on 16th Street. Her car struck a concrete block, totalling her four-door car.

Bryan was cited for inattentive driving.

Idaho campgrounds shelter homeless

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Recreational campers in northern Idaho complain that campgrounds often are filled by people who use them for temporary housing during the summer, reports say.

Idaho Fish and Game Department officials recently evicted people from seven camps at Hayden Lake after complaints from recreational campers, Paul Hanna said.

"This is how we find out about people who have been there too long," Hanna said. "We get complaints from neighbors, frequent fishermen. A lot of those spots are popular fishing spots."

Some of those evicted from state parks have set up camps in nearby national forests.

Clinton seeks inner-city vote, bashes 'broken-record' GOP

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bill Clinton appealed to a National Urban League audience Monday to help him fight "broken record" Republican "charges that the Democratic ticket is too liberal and wants only to raise taxes and federal spending."

He said the Bush-Quayle team is using such charges as a smokescreen to avoid blame for not dealing with housing, jobs and other national problems.

Clinton's remarks were enthusiastically received by his predominantly black Urban League audience, as might have been expected from the liberal group.

But he said he would not change his message as he courted more conservative "pro-change" voters who may have once supported Ross Perot or the Republican Party.

"I just don't know what to make of it," Clinton said of Fitzwater's remark. "Maybe they're on the defensive."

Clinton traveled to Cupertino, Calif., where he discussed economics, jobs and the federal budget deficit with high-technology computer workers.

On another subject, the Clinton camp brushed off a Bush administration attack on his foreign policy judgment.

Pam Plotkin, right, a Republican, tells presidential candidate Bill Clinton Monday in Coronado, Calif., he has her vote.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Clinton was backing a "reckless approach" in suggesting bombing strikes in the former Yugoslavia if attacks against the relief effort continue.

"I just don't know what to make of it," Clinton said of Fitzwater's remark. "Maybe they're on the defensive."

Vice presidential nominee Al Gore took it one step further. "What do you expect Marlin Fitzwater to say? Bush and (Dan Quayle have nothing to offer except more of the same. They're in extreme political panic and so they're reaching for anything they can."

At the Urban League, Clinton said Bush's people, "in their eagerness to prove they did nothing wrong," will try to make this fall's White House run about "liberal vs. conservative, left vs. right."

"That's the load of bull we've been paralyzed with for too long," Clinton said.

NNC names banker as new president

NAMPA (AP) — The chairman of the Northwest Nazarene College Board of Regents, West One Bank Vice President Leon Doane, has been elected president of the school, although he says he hasn't decided whether he'll accept.

Doane, 57, was the unanimous choice Friday afternoon in a vote to succeed Gordon Wetmore. Wetmore has headed the private, four-year liberal arts college since 1984. He leaves at the end of this week to become president of the Nazarene Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Mo.

Doane was selected from a pool of four finalists. Board

Vice-Chairman Ron Kratzer would not identify the others, but said all were from out of state. There were 37 applications.

Doane said Saturday he hasn't decided whether he would leave his banking job to become NNC president. "It came as such a surprise. I'm still a little numb," Doane said. "It's something I'll have to calculate. I personally don't know of too many bankers who have made a transition to college president."

Kratzer cited Doane's background in finance and excellent leadership during 10 years on the NNC board as reasons for his selection.

Why our $59 eyeglasses are worth more than theirs

Lately there's been a lot of hoopla from our higher-priced competitors about their new low prices.

The new "low prices" take up a huge portion of the ads. Yet, if you get to the stores, how many frames do you think you'll find at that price? Would you be disappointed if there were only 12 or 13?

Unfortunately, it makes it even harder for you to believe that our low prices are really on the level. Few companies operate with the cost-cutting efficiency required to succeed at prices this low.

Our $59 price is complete—including frames and single vision plastic lenses. Additional pairs, same prescription and visit, are just $39. Most bifocals just $20 more. So two pairs cost just $98. And no extra charge for oversize or almost all high power lenses.

You don't wear the price tag
 Still, the biggest difference between us and them is our selection. Our $59 and $39 prices include a choice from over 400 fashionable frames—the vast majority of frames in our store.

From the fashionably conservative to the cutting edge of today's styles, these include designs from St. Moritz, Converse, REAM, Zimco, Renaissance, Enrico Biaggi & more. For $20 to $90 more, we carry specialty designers like Liz Claiborne, Anne Klein, Ray Ban, Logo of Paris, Cheryl Tiegs & others.

Doctor's Comment

Dr. A. E. Samuels, Ophthalmologist, Kuba & Emporium, 301 and Portland, ID

"Working with the Portland Trailblazers, I learned how important correct eyewear is in sports."

"If you wear contact lenses, you should be fitted for a larger lens size for sports. This will decrease the chance of losing one during physical activity."

"Or if you play a sport in which a ball can hit your eyes, you should wear protective sports goggles, whether your vision needs correction or not."

Is national park in Idaho's future?

BOISE (AP) — Idahoans' attitudes toward having a national park in the state may be changing, experts say. Residents historically have said declined when Idaho sites have been suggested for park status. Fears of huge crowds and restriction of the land for grazing and hunting have always beat back such efforts.

But people moving into Idaho may be making the state more receptive to having a park, said Jon Jarvis, a National Park Service superintendent at Craters of the Moon National Monument. Part of that also is due to the fact that tourism and recreation have become an important segment of Idaho's economy, he said.

Four potential park sites were identified in June by a University of Idaho research group: Ullells Canyon, Craters of the Moon, the Sawtooth Mountains and canyon lands in the Owyhee desert. Only Hells Canyon and Craters are considered politically viable for now, said John Freemuth, a political science professor and national parks expert at Boise State University.

Freemuth and Jarvis said all four sites listed by the UofI report have the potential to become parks.

But only Hells Canyon and Craters of the Moon have the broad-based support needed to get Congress to consider such action, Freemuth said. Hells Canyon is the nation's deepest canyon, and Craters features unique lava formations.

U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings has pushed legislation to turn Craters of the Moon into a park. He backed off this year because of opposition in the House. But he plans to pursue the matter next year if elected to the Senate.

Castro visits father's Spanish birthplace

SANTIAGO DE COMPOSTELA, Spain (AP) — Cuban leader Fidel Castro arrived in northwest Galicia Monday for a first visit to his father's birthplace. ... Angel Castro y Argiz left his native village of Lencara for Cuba at the turn of the century as a telegraph operator in the Spanish colonial army. ... He returned to Galicia after Cuba won independence in 1898, then emigrated to the Caribbean country, where he became a horse trader and owned a sugar cane farm. ... His son is due to tour Lencara Tuesday. ... The 65-year-old Cuban leader arrived in Santiago on Monday morning from Seville, where he toured his country's pavilion at Expo '92. ... According to Spanish news reports, in Seville on Sunday, Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez urged Castro to hold democratic elections in Cuba within a year. ... But at the exposition, Castro claimed Cuba offered "more democracy than in any other country on the planet. ... Anti- and pro-Castro groups have demonstrated wherever the Cuban leader has appeared in Spain. ... The Cuban leader came to Spain last Thursday to attend the two-day Ibero-American summit.

Yugoslavia: A place for journalistic death

The Washington Post ... WARSAW, Poland — For the second year running, the battlefields of the former Yugoslav republics are the most perilous places in the world to practice the craft of journalism. ... Twenty-two journalists were killed covering the fratricidal warfare there in the last seven months of last year, mostly in Croatia. That was more than have been killed in an equal period in any other war in recent history, according to the human-rights monitoring group Helsinki Watch and the International Federation of Journalists. By comparison, 39 journalists were killed during the eight-year-long war in El Salvador. ... At least six more have died so far this year in Bosnia-Herzegovina, where the fighting has become more vicious with sniper bullets and mortar shells. ... In the latest serious injury to a foreign journalist, Margaret Moth, a camera operator with Cable News Network, was shot through the jaw by a sniper Thursday as she was riding to Sarajevo's airport in a van clearly marked "TV." ... Combatants there often fire at reporters and photographers, according to the International Federation of Journalists. Reporters who have covered war zones in both Bosnia and Croatia say they have been targeted most often by Serb militiamen displeased with critical press coverage of Serb aggression in both republics. ... In Bosnia in the past four months, armed Serbs have snatched journalists, cameras, cars and wallets. They routinely strip them of bullet-proof vests, flood and short-wave radios. ... The mountains that ring Sarajevo, Bosnia's besieged capital, allow Serb snipers and artillerymen an easy vantage at virtually anyone who roams the streets. ... Slobodan Latic, a reporter with the Associated Press, felt a warm metallic object dribble down the back of his shirt in June as he was driving in Sarajevo along "sniper alley," a stretch of highway between the city center and the headquarters of the U.N. peace mission. ... Latic was driving at high speed, and that apparently helped him survive. The bullet that tickled Latic's neck had ricocheted off the road, punched through the trunk of his car, shattered the back window, and smacked into a steel beam before dropping harmlessly down his collar. ... A number of other journalists also have been fortunate. A Danish reporter's wristwatch was hit by a sniper bullet that came through the roof of his car; the reporter escaped with only a bruised wrist. In the parking lot of the Sarajevo Holiday Inn, a cameraman with the British-based television network ITN was hit in the chest by a bullet while filming the arrival of a Canadian contingent of U.N. troops. The bullet was stopped by his flak jacket. ... Not everyone is so lucky. ... Jana Schneider, an American freelance photographer on contract to the German newsweekly Stern, and Ivo Standerker, a Slovenian newspaper reporter, were among the first to sneak into the Sarajevo suburb of Dobrinja, a battle zone surrounded by Serb forces. As they were crossing a grassy field in mid-June, mortar shells began exploding around them. Schneider said she was hit first, in the legs. She recalls screaming to Standerker to run, but before he could make about her wounds, he was hit. He died that day. ... Schneider, who told her story before being evacuated in a U.N. helicopter, was taken to a Serb field hospital. "The doctors were competent," Schneider said, but she found them oddly cavalier about her wounds. ... "While they were sticking their fingers in the wounds in my thighs, they laughed and said, 'This is Serbian sex,'" she said. ... As in all war zones, it is the photographers, rather than the reporters, who take the greatest risks and have the highest casualty rate. Morten Hval, 28, a Norwegian photographer on assignment for AP, also sneaked into Dobrinja. He went in under cover of night on June 23 and tried to get out the next afternoon by hitching a ride in an ambulance serving Slavic Muslim-led Bosnian government forces. ... The driver was hit in the thigh. A severely wounded man on a stretcher hit his several times. A medic attending him also was wounded in three places.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"It is certain because it is impossible," — Tertullian.

"Another way to the game was to take the diamond finesse," said North.

"It would have been silly to do that," replied South. "My line is a certainty whether or not I win four diamond tricks."

East took dummy's spade queen and returned the jack to dummy's ace. Two top diamonds were cashed, and when no jack appeared, dummy's club ace was cashed. (There was no need for an immediate commitment in diamonds — South needed either two club tricks or three, regardless of what happened in diamonds.)

When West followed with the club jack, dummy's club nine was led and East took the king (West discarded a low heart). South heaved a sigh of relief when East cashed the spade 10 and shifted to hearts. West held the spade 10, it would have meant an early defeat.

South took his heart ace, led a diamond to dummy's queen and smiled when the jack didn't drop. No matter, he felt sure he was going to make the game when East uncomfortably discarded a heart. And he was right. He led a heart to his king and exited with a third heart to East's jack. East was forced to lead away from the 10-7 of clubs, giving South his eighth and ninth winners.

Sometimes there is no reason to risk a finesse.
