Judge orders trial for 3 in trucker's beating

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge Tuesday ordered three men to stand trial on attempted murder charges in the beating of truck driver Jerome Denny at the start of the city's riots. Earlier Tuesday, a prosecutor argued that the beating was malicious attempted murder, but a defense lawyer insisted it was the result of a "tumultuous and confused" situation at a riot flash point.

Abortion rights win ABA vote

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The policy-making body of the American Bar Association, the nation's largest lawyers' group, voted Tuesday to endorse abortion rights, repealing a 2-year-old policy of neutrality on the issue.

The resolution opposes state and federal laws that would restrict abortion. The policy change allows the ABA to take part in court cases and testify or legislation, including a pending congressional bill that would write into law the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling on abortion rights.

The Bush administration opposed the change. Attorney General William P. Barr, in a letter last week said that by endorsing a woman's right to an abortion the ABA would "endanger the perception that it is an impartial and objective professional organization."

An uncommon-tator for GOP convention

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The boy who was told by Vice President Dan Quayle to spell a spud "potatoes" will be providing political commentary during the Republican National Convention for a New York radio station.

Don Imus, WFAN-AM's morning host, will call 12-year-old William Figueroa at his Trenton home each day of the convention, which starts Monday in Houston.

Imus has promised Figueroa $50 a day for watching the convention every night and giving an opinion of the proceedings, the youngster said. Figueroa gained national attention in June during Quayle's visit to Trenton's Munoz-Rivera Elementary School. Figueroa correctly spelled "potato" during a spelling bee, but the vice president, reading from an incorrect flashcard, coached the youngster to add another letter.

Yukon-to-Yucatan trade pact wrapped up at last

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the United States, Canada and Mexico have completed a proposed agreement to create the world's largest trading bloc.

negotiators had completed their work and resolved all remaining differences. Congress is expected not to consider ratification of the treaty until next year at the earliest.

The White House scheduled a Rose Garden ceremony for early Wednesday for President Bush to announce the three-way free-trade agreement.

The United States entered into a free-trade agreement with Canada three years ago. The new agreement caps more than 14 months of negotiations.

Differences over tariffs and automobiles had been the final barriers to an accord that would create the world's largest trading bloc — a tariff-free zone stretching from the Yukon to the Yucatan.

Some House members said Johnston's proposal made too many environmental shortcuts.

Perot also said that during a 1987 trip he took to Vietnam the Vietnamese seemed to agree that they still held POWs although they didn't say so directly.

Bush denies affair, refuses 2nd question

President Bush listens as Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin speaks at a news conference Tuesday.

Bush backs guarantees of bank loans to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nearly a year's delay and an Israeli policy shift on settlements, President Bush announced an election-year decision Tuesday to guarantee $10 billion in bank loans to help Israel absorb tens of thousands of refugees from the Soviet Union and Ethiopia.

With Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin at his side in Kennebunkport, Maine, the president spoke warmly of Israel as "a democracy surrounded by countries that aren't," and promised to maintain the Jewish state's military edge over the Arabs.

"They have been loyal and staunch friends," Bush said. "No body knows where the next crisis could come and you rely on friends in a crisis."

Rabin, elected in June to succeed the more hawkish Yitzhak Shamir, almost immediately called a halt to new Jewish settlements on the West Bank and in Gaza.

But the ex-general is also committed to building a stronger Jewish presence in Jerusalem and maintaining "security" settlements on the Golan Heights and in the Jordan Valley.

The Israeli leader thanked Bush for the guarantees and said "your readiness to extend them following our discussions means a lot to me and to Israel."

Congress must first approve the guarantees, and early indications were positive.

"My guess is he's going to get a pretty strong feeling of endorsement" from lawmakers, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said of Bush.

Bush gave Rabin red-carpet treatment. He was flown to the president's summer home Monday from New York on a U.S. Air Force jet with Secretary of State James A. Baker III aboard.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush on Tuesday called a published report that he and a female aide spent a romantic night together in a Swiss cottage in 1984 "a lie."

He later refused to answer a broader question on whether he'd ever had an affair.

Bush found himself confronted with questions about his personal life twice during the day.

"I'm outraged," the president said when asked about a New York Post report on the alleged Swiss episode during a news conference at his oceanside home in Kennebunkport, Maine.

A Bush campaign official later accused Democrat Bill Clinton's campaign of planting the story. A Clinton aide denied it.

Later, in an NBC interview in the Oval Office, Bush was asked directly by correspondent Stone Phillips: "Have you ever had an affair?"

"I'm not going to take any sleazy questions," Bush said in an interview taped for the show "Dateline NBC."

"You're perpetuating the sleaze by even asking the question, to say nothing of asking it in the Oval Office. And I don't think you ought to do that and I'm not going to answer the question."

The questions were prompted by an account in the book "The Power House" by Susan B. Trento that alleges a liaison between Bush and longtime aide Jennifer Fitzgerald, now a State Department official. The account was prominently featured in the New York Post.

Bush campaign spokeswoman Torie Clarke said, "It came from the Clinton campaign. The New York Post has succumbed to what has been an all-out effort to get someone to print this trash. For several weeks they have been faxing portions of that piece of trash back to news organizations all over the country."

George Stephanopoulos, communications director for the Clinton campaign, disputed Clarke's statement as "simply not true."

Bush was asked about the alleged Swiss episode during a news conference in Maine with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Rumors involving Bush and Fitzgerald surfaced during the 1988 presidential campaign. They were denied at the time by Bush's eldest son, George W. Bush. The president's comments on Tuesday were the first time he has addressed the matter directly.

His comments were in response to a question from Cable News Network reporter Mary Tillotson, who asked about the Post report and noted that Bush has "said that family values, character are likely to be important in the presidential campaign."

Bush shot back: "I'm not going to take any sleazy questions like that from CNN."

"I don't like it and I'm not going to respond other than to say it's a lie," he added.

Barbara Bush, who stood by grim-faced as her husband answered the question, later told a reporter: "Fortunately, I did not see the New York Post story."

The tabloid featured a front-page headline: "THE BUSH AFFAIR" bracketed by pictures of the president and Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald, who is now State Department deputy chief of protocol, was an aide to Bush while he was vice president and in a number of earlier posts. She was reported by her office to be out of the country on official business.

The allegation about Bush is contained in a footnote to Chapter 14 of "The Power House," a book about lobbying in Washington. The footnote alludes to an interview of former disarmament negotiator Louis Fields conducted in 1986 by Trento's husband, Joseph, a former investigative reporter for CNN.

Fields was quoted as saying that, while he was ambassador to disarmament talks, he arranged for Bush and Fitzgerald to use a guest house.

Clinton attacks Bush health care plan

MIAMI — Bill Clinton counterattacked in the health care debate Tuesday, charging that any tax benefits to consumers from President Bush's proposal would be eaten up immediately by runaway medical costs.

The Democratic presidential nominee, campaigning before Southern state legislators, called Bush's plan a more of the same offering that would not get at what he said was the root of the health care crisis — out-of-control administrative costs.

Clinton was responding to Republican charges that his own plan — which would force employers to provide coverage or pay into a government pool to insure Americans who are not covered — would lead to a huge tax hike and create a bureaucratic nightmare.

Gore backs limited intervention

BOSTON, Mass. — Democrat Al Gore said Tuesday that Americans must not "close our hearts" to the victims of strife in what was Yugoslavia and that intervention there would not involve this country in another Vietnam.

But Gore said the United States should not intervene alone or use ground forces in the breakoff republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina, which has been torn by conflict between Serbs, Croats and Muslims.

The Democratic vice presidential nominee was asked if American intervention in Bosnia could be another potential Vietnam, and he said: "No, it is not."

Fluoridation may boost hip fractures

CHICAGO — Drinking fluoridated water may increase the risk of hip fractures in people aged 65 and older, researchers say.

Previous studies found conflicting evidence about fluoride's possible effects on bone, and the researchers acknowledged that more investigations were needed.

A study published in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association examined the use and non-use of fluoride in the water supply of three Utah communities.

One of them, Brigham City, has added fluoride to its water supply since 1966 at a rate of one part per million, the level recommended by most major health organizations. The others, Logan and Cedar City, do not fluoridate their water and had naturally occurring fluoride levels under 0.3 part per million.

Women living in Brigham City were 1.3 times more likely to suffer hip fractures than those living in the other two communities, Brigham City men were 1.4 times more likely to suffer hip fractures, the researchers reported.

Martin concedes: I haven't helped

WASHINGTON Labor Secretary Lynn Martin conceded Tuesday that little has changed since she vowed one year ago to help women and minorities land America's top corporate jobs.

"We continue to find a general absence of minorities and women at the highest levels in the corporate workforce, in the developmental programs and in the credential-building assignments," she told a news conference to release "Impulses of Progress: A Status Report on the Glass Ceiling" Martin said the Labor Department study also uncovered evidence of more subtle discrimination in the workplace.

Lawmakers seek to fend off smoke

WASHINGTON Two Democratic lawmakers took their anti-tobacco crusade to a new arena Tuesday with a bill to protect small children from secondhand smoke.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., teamed up successfully in 1989 to ban smoking on domestic flights. Now they want federally funded programs that serve children under 5 to establish non-smoking policies.

Lautenberg and Durbin's legislation would ban smoking in areas of facilities where children are served by federal programs. Other areas of such buildings not normally serving children, but where smoking is allowed, could not share ventilation systems with the children's sections.

Temblors don't pose major threat

WASHINGTON While severe earthquakes pose regional threats, they are unlikely to cause a national financial catastrophe, a House subcommittee was told Tuesday.

Some local insurance companies would probably fail and economic losses would be serious but financial markets could rebound, the study by the Federal Emergency Management Agency concluded.

A tremor equivalent to the 1906 San Francisco quake would result in losses totaling $10 billion, according to insurance estimates quoted in the study. Most of this would be covered by insurance, the report said.

Married astronauts focus on space

SPACE CENTER, Houston Two astronauts who will become the first married couple in space said Tuesday they will leave their personal lives behind when they head into orbit next month.

For Mark Lee and Jan Davis, it will be strictly business aboard the shuttle Endeavour.

"We're members of a team up there to do our job, and we're going to do that job. Nothing will interfere with that," Lee said at the traditional preflight news conference at Johnson Space Center.

Endeavour is due to blast off in mid-September on a SpaceLab research mission, a joint venture between NASA and Japan's space agency.

Survey: Secondhand smoke nabs 3 in 10

CHICAGO Three of 10 nonsmokers who work indoors in California said they breathe other people's tobacco smoke, a survey found.

And since California has more ordinances restricting workplace smoking than other states, nonsmokers' exposure in the rest of the country is likely to be even greater, said John P. Pierce, head of cancer prevention and control at the Cancer Center of the University of California, San Diego.

Senate approves family leave bill

WASHINGTON (AP) The Senate approved a bill Tuesday requiring unpaid leave for many workers in family emergencies, setting the stage for a campaign-season veto battle and a challenge to President Bush's claim to be the defender of family values.

The House is expected to follow the Senate and send the bill to Bush after Labor Day.

The bill would require big employers to provide workers with up to 12 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave per year for the birth or adoption of a child, or in the case of serious illness of the employee or a close family member.

Employees with 50 or fewer employees would be exempted.

The Senate acted without a recorded vote. It adopted a conference report resolving differences between versions of the bill passed last year by the House and Senate.

The bill is similar to one Bush vetoed in 1990, a veto the House sustained.

The bill would require...

Supporters of the bill had delayed final action this year until the presidential campaign season to increase pressure on Bush, who has clung to "family values" as a campaign theme, not to veto the bill.

If Bush follows through with a second veto, Democrats hope they will have a popular campaign issue to use against him.

Democrat Bill Clinton supports the bill.

Among the bill's other provisions, it would...

• Restrict employee eligibility to those who have worked at least 1,250 hours, or 25 hours per week, through the previous year.

• Permit employers to exempt key employees... the highest-paid 10 percent of their work force.

• Require an employee to provide 30 days' notice for foreseeable leaves.

Serbs try to improve image as vote nears

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Seeking to head off international military intervention in Bosnia, Serb fighters on Tuesday promised to allow mothers and children to leave Sarajevo and a self-proclaimed Serb parliament pledged cooperation with the United Nations. But promises continued to build in advance of the U.N. Security Council's vote, expected today, on a measure that would authorize use of force to safeguard humanitarian aid to war-battered Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The United Nations said Tuesday that Serb forces were carrying out one of the war's biggest "ethnic cleansings," driving some 28,000 Muslims from their homes in north-west Bosnia.

Also, reports of horrific conditions in Serbian detention camps in Bosnia have caused widespread outrage in the world community.

In Sarajevo, the besieged Bosnian capital, new fighting left 18 people dead and 172 wounded, the Bosnian government said Tuesday.

An international tensions rose over the war in what was Yugoslavia. NATO officials speaking on condition of anonymity, said the alliance would hold a special meeting Friday to consider contingency plans for possible use of force in connection with aid deliveries.

The agreement to allow women and children under 18 out of Sarajevo was signed by a Serbian officer and a representative of the Children's Embassy, a private aid organization. The charity said the first bus convoy would leave Wednesday.

However, previous convoys organized by the group have run into trouble. A week ago, two of 50 children being evacuated by the group were shot and killed, and nine other children were removed from a bus by Serb forces.

In the Bosnian war, vehicles clearly marked as belonging to human rights and international agencies have often come under fire.

The pledge to cooperate with the Security Council came from the self-styled parliament of the republic. Serbs have proclaimed in Bosnia.

The document approved in the western Bosnian town of Banja Luka, and for the U.N. resolution on what steps were needed to avoid military intervention and the bloodshed that would accompany it.

The statement promised that Serbs will have a limited role in Bosnia, will not impede humanitarian convoys and will open detention camps for inspection. It denounces previous Serb statements that they support an immediate end to fighting and a consensus solution.

Calls for a military intervention also came from the government of Yugoslavia, now made up only of Serbia and Montenegro, which said in a statement that "there are no reasons whatsoever" for outside powers to step in.

Serbs and Croats in Bosnia have been accused by the West of financing the violence in Bosnia. Serbia is already under U.N. sanctions to punish for its role.

The United States, France, Britain and Belgium agreed Monday on the text of the Security Council resolution on more force to safeguard aid and negotiations continued Tuesday.

The measure does not specify what countries might provide the force to safeguard aid deliveries, but it says that nations suggested have such a task must be accomplished without risking open conflict with Serbia.

Bosnia's president on Tuesday estimated it would take 10,000 troops to police borders that would be used to move aid into Bosnia-Herzegovina. Some Western military experts have put the number at about 100,000.

The threat of force alone could drive away combatants from Bosnia, and to Bosnia, in Geneva, U.S. and British officials said. High Commissioner for Refugees, said over and over again that U.N. convoys were suddenly becoming easier.

Trading suspended in wake of stock riots

BEIJING (AP) — Thousands of people lined up for a chance to buy coveted stocks in the southern boom town of Shenzhen on Tuesday, a day after frustrated would-be investors rioted and burned vehicles.

The city government suspended afternoon trading on the Shenzhen stock exchange because brokerage were so busy selling application forms to buy shares.

Hundreds of riot police stood by as thousands of people waited outside more than 300 offices issuing the applications. Only minor scuffles broke out.

On Monday rioting began when stock offices ran out of the forms, and some frustrated investors claimed that corrupt officials were hoarding them.

Police used truncheons, tear gas, rubber bullets and water cannon to break up demonstrations. At least 10 people, some of them policemen, were injured, several police vehicles were burned and three people were arrested, according to Hong Kong news reports.

The government-run Beijing Evening News confirmed Tuesday that vehicles were burned and overturned, but said there were no deaths or serious injuries. Shenzhen television also showed scenes of cars with smashed windows and a hole in a window of the McDonald's restaurant.

Historian says cannibalism part of WWII

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — For six months, historian Toshiyuki Tanaka dug through Australian archives to tell his country that some Japanese soldiers were cannibals during the last desperate days of World War II.

Allied forces have known this for years. But Tanaka's account, published in the Tokyo media Tuesday, represents the first Japanese investigation into the atrocities and the most extensive study of the subject to date.

Tanaka, an associate professor of political science at the University of Melbourne, said he uncovered more than 100 cases of Japanese Imperial Army soldiers eating the flesh of Australian troops, Asian laborers and indigenous people in Papua New Guinea.

"These documents clearly show that this cannibalism was done by a whole group of Japanese soldiers, and in some cases they were not even starving," Tanaka said Tuesday.

Some of their supply lines cut off, were genuinely hungry. But in other cases, officers ordered troops to eat human flesh to give them a "feeling of victory," Tanaka said.

Even after his country's defeat, the 43-year-old Tanaka wants to educate young Japanese "who are not told anything" about the war at a time when their leaders are considering erasing sections of its postwar constitution that prohibits sending troops overseas.

Wiesel may investigate Serbian prison camps

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Nobel laureate Elie Wiesel said Tuesday he would consider a Yugoslav offer to investigate Serbian-run prison camps, but demanded complete freedom for his team.

Yugoslavia's president, Dobrica Cosic, asked the United Nations to send a commission of prominent figures led by Wiesel to investigate the camps. Muslim and Croats claim Serb guards have tortured and killed prisoners, but Cosic denied abuses have occurred and called the reports a pretext for military intervention.

"What is happening there now is blasphemy, unforgivable," Wiesel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview in New York.

"If asked to go and if I feel I can contribute, at least to save one Juman life, I would go anywhere," said Wiesel, a Holocaust survivor and author. "We have to be able to bear witness to what is happening in the camps."

The U.N. Security Council is expected to vote Thursday to authorize the use of military force to protect deliveries of humanitarian assistance within Bosnia-Herzegovina, where Serbian nationalists have seized territory and driven non-Serbs from their homes.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE FOR TWIN FALLS COUNTY

The College of Southern Idaho Junior College taxing district has proposed to increase its annual budget by an amount of ad valorem tax revenues that exceeds one hundred and five percent (105%) of the ad valorem tax revenues certified for its annual budget during the previous year by four and two-tenths percent (4.2%) or its ad valorem tax rate by four and one-tenths percent (4.1%) which will increase its property tax revenue by nine and two-tenths percent (9.2%). The following schedule is an estimate of what this change may mean to a taxpayer:

	Last Year's Taxable Value	This Year's Estimated Taxable Value	Last Year's Actual Taxes	This Year's Estimated Taxes
For a typical home of $50,000 taxable value last year	$50,000	$54,500	$ 83.40	$ 94.61
For a typical farm of $100,000 taxable value last year	$100,000	$100,000	$166.80	$173.60
For a typical business of $200,000 taxable value last year	$200,000	$200,000	$333.60	$347.20

All citizens are invited to attend a public hearing on the increased budget request or increased tax increase. The public hearing will be held at the College of Southern Idaho, 315 Falls Avenue, Twin Falls, Idaho in the boardroom of the Taylor Administration Building at 5:30 P.M. on Monday, August 17, 1992.

CAUTION TO TAXPAYER: The amounts shown in this schedule do NOT reflect tax charges that are made because of voter approved bond levies, override levies, supplemental levies, or levies applicable to newly annexed property or levies applicable to newly created taxing districts.

Sunday liquor sales issue returns for another round

Some things in this life can be counted on to come back, time after time. Daffodils. The Capistrano swallows. Carl Lewis.

And Twin Falls County bar owners who want to sell drinks on Sunday.

The bar owners have persuaded the Twin Falls County commissioners once again to put Sunday liquor-by-the-drink on the November ballot. It'll be the third such vote and, if we guess right, the third defeat for the bar owners.

Anyone can see why bar owners want this thing back on the ballot. But why, oh why, do the commissioners?

In 1986, the year state lawmakers gave counties jurisdiction over Sunday liquor sales, Twin Falls voters firmly rejected the idea in an advisory referendum. They did the same thing in 1988.

Four years ago we took no strong position on the liquor-by-the-drink proposal. We said, "As selling liquor on Sundays will have no practical meaning (other than a minor inconvenience to some), when viewed philosophically we lean towards free choice."

Since then, however, voters have made their desires clear for a second time. For whatever reasons—moral principles, public safety or religion—they don't want a Sunday cocktail hour.

They shouldn't have to go on voting the idea down, time after time, simply because county commissioners don't know how to say "no" to this special-interest group. Even voters who didn't oppose Sunday liquor sales in 1986 or 1988 are probably tired of being asked.

The commissioners, in our view, should have let citizens voice their opinions before agreeing to put the proposal on the ballot. Why didn't they solicit public comment—perhaps through a public hearing or an informal poll?

If they had, public opinion might have persuaded them another referendum was pointless.

But maybe it's not too late. So far the commissioners have only agreed informally to put the issue to a popular vote. They've taken no formal action.

That means citizens still have an opportunity to influence the process. If enough voters call to speak their minds, the commissioners might be dissuaded from putting this twice-rejected idea on the ballot a third time.

Political labels vary with the beholder

Like beauty, ideology is in the eye of the beholder, which explains why Republicans can call Bill Clinton and Al Gore "extreme liberals" while liberal Democrats complain that their party has become too conservative.

Who's right? Neither. Or both, depending on definitions.

One reason for the confusion is that there are at least two kinds of liberals. And conservatives Jack Kemp and Dan Quayle are conservative Republicans with very different views of society and government's role therein. But for clarity's sake, let's stick to the liberals for now, and try to explain who is what, and where the 1992 ticket fits in.

Not that long ago, from the time of Franklin Roosevelt to the time of John Kennedy, liberals were the ones who wanted to use government power and money for the benefit of everyone, but in the first instance for the benefit of those who were not rich. Liberals were on the side of the workers, especially industrial workers, and their unions. A liberal was for Social Security, low interest rates and high wages.

By this definition, Clinton and Gore are liberals. They don't say much about unions, perhaps because so few voters belong to them anymore, but Clinton does regularly speak of a "high-skill, high-wage" economy.

George Bush doesn't talk that way. He's not for a high-wage economy. He was an employer, as were his forebears, as are his supporters. It would be unfair to say he's for a low-wage economy. Let's say he's for a moderate-wage economy.

mind divided the citizenry into separate categories, each with its own presumed entitlements.

By this definition, Clinton and Gore are not liberals. It's no accident that Clinton's economic plan does not target specific groups. It is not aimed at racial minorities, city dwellers, an age group or a gender. Its target is everyone.

Nor is it an accident that Clinton went out of his way to pick a fight with Jackson over the words used by a pop singer at a Jackson event, and then refused to deal with him during the Democratic convention. This was, among other things, Clinton's way of saying that he wasn't in the thrall of the various liberal pressure groups.

OK, there is a bit of oversimplification in this description, which is unfair to liberals. Whoever doubts that obscenity to specific constituencies is as old as the Republic need only look at agricultural price supports.

Whoever doubts that conservatives can be just as craven toward their constituencies need only consider the Bush administration's policies on gun control and fetal tissue research.

Unfair though it may be, it is Democrats and liberals who have been plagued by the reputation of being unwilling to confront some of their own pressure groups. Some liberals gripe about the unfairness. They lose. Clinton, Gore and their allies, both, because they genuinely differ with some of the liberal interest groups and because they do not want to lose, do not hesitate to confront them, for some of whom their Democratic colleagues call them traitors.

Like beauty, treason is in the eye of the beholder.

Along this divide, the candidates of 1992 are unambiguously opposed. Bush on the conservative side and Clinton on the liberal.

Clinton's detailed economic plan reads like an updated version of the New Deal. His Public Works Administration is a $50-billion-a-year investment in roads, rails, communications and anti-pollution facilities. His GI Bill is a trust fund to lend money for college or vocational training. His Civilian Conservation Corps (and Peace Corps) is the option of repaying that loan by performing national service as a cop, teacher or counselor for a couple of years.

So Clinton is a liberal—except that sometime around 1970 the definition of liberalism changed. Its focus became less economic and more cultural as upper-middle-income professionals took over from industrial workers. Though they were richer, they cared deeply about the poor, perhaps more deeply than they cared about the not-so-poor.

What was important to the new liberals was not Social Security and high wages as much as the tolerance, even the approval, of the offbeat, the unconventional and what Jesse Jackson called "the damned, the disinherited, the disrespected, the despised."

It would be unfair to suggest that these liberals approved of every subculture except for the one in which men and women marry each other, stay that way, raise children, buy a home and go to church on Sunday. But it did sometimes seem that way as the liberal more investment, hence more jobs. The other argues that prosperity comes from higher wages which inspire more consumption, hence higher profits and more jobs.

Get away from liberal pap

I'm a conservative, and I find that The Times-News says is true, then so are a majority of the people in the Magic Valley.

Although I've known my bent for quite a long while, it's only been since I started listening to Rush Limbaugh, talk show host daily on KART Radio (1400 AM), in March that I began to see that I can be quite proud of the fact that I am. I've been thrilled to have many of my views stated clearly by someone else for the first time. I don't agree with everything he says, but what he says is so much different a viewpoint (not to the core) than what the media as a whole gives us, and The Times-News in particular.

his friend of 20 years was playing in the championship game. His friend is the coach of Northwest Ada's team (the one that complained earlier in the day). There really shouldn't be favoritism in a tournament.

Next year, East Boise will probably bypass the Twin Falls tournament and go to Burley and Rupert where they know how to run a tournament. Maybe Twin Falls should take lessons from Burley.

The East Boise Pirates beat Northwest Ada for the championship after playing four games consecutively without time to finish their lunches or eat in between games. Hats off to the Pirates!

J.D. Williams knows water

The latest political blunder by Dirk Kempthorne, concerning the 1989 Nevada Wilderness Protection Act, highlights what is indeed a fundamental issue in Idaho: water. Water is the life blood of our state's economy, and with certain shouting down left and right in this drought season, the issue becomes even more paramount. We can't afford to send someone to Congress this November who isn't totally prepared to answer Idaho's increasingly complex need for water and water protection for its farmers.

Fortunately for us, one of the most competent water rights experts in the state is running for Congress. His name is J.D. Williams, and he has been in the forefront in the ongoing water rights battles for more than eight years now. J.D. has a reputation for being a fair, even-handed and effective water rights administrator.

In response to Dwight Shaw: In 1978, I questioned a doctor about his casual attire and he replied that people, especially children, are scared enough of doctors, so he felt that dressing down helped his patients relax. I agree. He's a terrific doctor. He talks to me and my children as if we're intelligent human beings. We're not terrified of talking about our symptoms and, therefore, he has a better perspective on how to care for us. Hurray! for doctors who care more for their patients' comfort and well being than the clothes they wear!

Be aware of EPA policies

The time is now to acknowledge the fact that since the mid-1980s, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has been promulgating regulations that address the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

These regulations apply to all individuals and governmental entities equally, whether the federal courts case, "Blue Legs vs. United States" 1987-89, established.

The "final rule" on Municipal Solid Waste Landfills was published in the federal register on Oct. 9, 1991, 40 CFR Parts 257 and 258.

We the public have until Oct. 9, 1993, to comply. The public needs to become aware and participate, as this is a critical environment issue, a problem that we need to address now and not pass on to future generations.

The second tournament was held in Twin Falls. What a joke. Two teams from East Boise and one from Northwest Ada attended the tournament. During the second day of play, the brackets had been set and posted. The teams were in their dugouts, the coin toss had been done and the teams were mentally ready to play the opposing team. Then the change. The coach from Northwest Ada didn't want to play the East Boise Pirates (a team that had only allowed one run up to this point in the tournament). The coordinators changed the brackets and had the East Boise Pirates playing the East Boise Orioles. The Pirates defeated the Orioles 14 to 7.

Later in the day, the families of both the East Boise teams were cheering the Pirates on to a victory in the championship game against the Northwest Ada team. One of the coordinators of the tournament made the comment that it was such a coincidence that

Accident sends steer to slaughterhouse early

JEROME — An accident north of Jerome sent a couple of steers to the slaughterhouse a little sooner than expected Tuesday afternoon.

Merl Larsen, 37, of Jerome ran into the back of a cattle truck driven by Ed Walters, also of Jerome, 2 1/2 miles north of town at about 1 p.m., Idaho State Police Dispatcher Gloria Hackworth said.

Larsen's pickup and the cattle truck both overturned, Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold said. Larsen's 4-year-old son, Iral, had to be extracted from the pickup, but received only minor injuries and was treated at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, Gold said.

Two of the dozen cattle on board the truck were not so lucky. One was trapped beneath the trailer near the exhaust and was killed by the fumes; another received a broken leg and will be slaughtered, Gold said.

Larsen told police he had been driving for 18-20 hours and had taken some medication that made him drowsy. He apparently was nodding off when he looked up and saw the rear of the truck only a few feet in front of him, Gold said.

The accident investigation is continuing, Hackworth said.

Here's your chance to speak up about Twin Falls services

TWIN FALLS — The city has sent out 3,000 questionnaires for people to rate services and give their opinions about growth, traffic, housing, bicycle paths, composting, recycling and many other issues.

Answers to the questionnaires will help form a new city comprehensive plan. Planners would like to have the forms returned by Wednesday, Aug. 19.

The questionnaires were mailed to city residents chosen randomly from the city water meter list. The survey went to 2,500 residents and 500 businesses and agencies, said Nancy Taylor of J-U-B Engineers. The city hired J-U-B to help redo the comprehensive plan.

Anyone who did not receive a questionnaire can pick one up at City Hall, or contact Nancy Taylor at 733-2414.

Hansen-Scoresby trial postponed, moved to Boise

POCATELLO — The trial of former Idaho congressman George Hansen and ex-aid John Scoresby on federal bank fraud charges has been postponed and moved to Boise at the defendants' request.

The trial scheduled to start Monday was tentatively postponed until Aug. 24. Hansen, a former seven-term Republican congressman, and Scoresby, a former regional GOP chairman and Hansen's congressional aide, were indicted in March on 49 counts of defrauding Idaho banks by kiting millions of dollars in checks between Jan. 1, 1990, and Jan. 15, 1991.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge will preside at the trial, but is hearing a drug case involving Pocatello brothers. A court clerk said a 10 trial date depends on completion of the Pocatello case.

Hansen is accused of soliciting "loans" from various individuals and having them deposited into a checking account at the Bank of Commerce in Idaho Falls under the name of "George Hansen" and Associated, or Ideal Consultants. Investors were promised rates of interest between 5 percent and 10 percent per month.

Revised budget bears bad news for Jerome taxpayers

JEROME — It'll be either good news or bad news as the Jerome County commissioners tackle revising a budget they had given to county departments Monday.

Idaho law authorizes the county to levy the county assessor's reappraisal budget separately from the other budget items. The county budget had been cut to stay within the levy limit.

By taking the reappraisal out of the other budget items, more can be distributed to other departments, according to Cheryl Watts, county clerk.

"It's good news for the county departments, but bad news for the taxpayer," Watts said.

The reappraisal budget recently proposed by the commissioners totaled $123,917 out of the $1,960,092 total county expense budget.

Based on state law, the reappraisal expenses can be treated like a dedicated fund, Watts said.

Conservative high court? Think again, professor tells state AGs

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The U.S. Supreme Court is a lot less conservative than the news media would have us believe, a prominent law professor told a gathering of attorneys general from several western states Tuesday.

"Anyone who thinks ... the Supreme Court has packed its bags and is no longer going to protect individual rights — I think they're wrong," said Jesse Choper of the University of California at Berkeley.

During its most recent term, the country's highest court chose the liberal position twice as often as the conservative position in cases where there was a clear distinction to be made, Choper said.

There were 27 such cases, with 18 being decided along lines commonly favored by those in the liberal camp, he said. Among those decisions:

- A Rhode Island decision allowing invocations and benedictions by clergy at public school graduation ceremonies was ruled as a violation of the Constitution's freedom-of-religion-protection.

- The court upheld a woman's right to an abortion, although with some restrictions, in a Pennsylvania case.

- New York's so-called "Son of Sam" law holding proceeds from books written by imprisoned convicts in escrow for five years to benefit the crime victims was struck down as a violation of free speech.

- In a Nevada case, the Supreme Court ruled the state could not force a criminal defendant to take psychiatric drugs during his trial.

- The court overturned three death sentences on procedural grounds.

- A man was cleared of purchasing child pornography after the Supreme Court ruled the government's elaborate two-year scheme to get him to buy the material constituted entrapment.

The court did have its conservative moments, when liberal Justices Harry Blackmun and John Paul Stevens found themselves alone or joined by one other justice, Choper said.

Among the most significant of those rulings came from New York, but it did not get as much play as the abortion and school prayer rulings, he said.

In New York vs. the United States, the high court ruled a federal law requiring states to find ways to deal with radioactive waste was unconstitutional.

Overturning an act of Congress isn't something the Supreme Court does every day, Choper said.

In a California case, the court ruled the state can place the burden of proof on a criminal defendant to prove whether he or she is competent to stand trial.

6 girls face charges of vandalism

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Jerome police have arrested six girls, aged 5 through 11, and charged them with vandalizing Central Elementary School on Sunday.

The children apparently entered the school through an unlocked door, Chief of Police George Silver said. They went through classrooms and offices, taking calculators, stop watches, teddy bears, flower vases, stamps, wall maps, cassette tapes and about $160 in cash, according to police records.

They were discovered by Fred Jackson, a teacher.

The girls were charged with burglary and unlawful entry and released to their parents. The police department has filed a request for complaint and petition.

TWIN FALLS — The School Board Tuesday night named a new principal for O'Leary Junior High School and endorsed a sex education curriculum that emphasizes abstinence but discusses all forms of contraception.

The board hired former-Magic Valley Alternative High School principal Wiley Dobbs as O'Leary's new principal, replacing Bruce Slama, who announced his resignation a week ago.

Because Slama's decision came so close to the beginning of the school year, the district had not quitly-Superintendent Terrell Donich said. Slama said he resigned to take a higher-paying principal position on the Washington coast.

All of the people outside the district who had applied for the same position last year had already committed themselves to other positions for the coming school year and could not be considered, Donich said.

The district named Joyce Houston, last year's O'Leary vice principal, as the Alternative High School principal, and Judy Watson, last year's vice principal of Lincoln Elementary School and Perrine Elementary School, as the O'Leary vice principal. Donich said Dobbs selected Watson, who is the wife of district spokesman Larry Watson, as his vice principal.

"We feel very confident in them," Donich said.

Board members also adopted a sex education curriculum philosophy statement as recommended by a community committee organized last year.

The trustees also authorized district officials to create a human sexuality curriculum program based on a series of curriculum programs called, "Family Life and Sexual Health."

Although Family Life states that abstinence is the best choice, it also discusses all forms of contraceptives.

Jerome School District's happy dilemma: How to spend $210,000

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — With almost a quarter of a million extra dollars to spend, the Jerome School Board will take some time to decide how to do it.

Board members and teachers agreed at the Jerome School Board meeting Monday night that their first choice for using the Jerome School District's $210,000 windfall is to benefit students.

The board did vote to spend $26 per student for supplies, which will eat up about $75,000 of the unanticipated funds, and a bonus or pay raise for teachers was high on the list of recommended ways to spend the balance.

"I struggle a little bit that the money is ongoing," board member Robert Bingham said.

The money, none of which was budgeted, came from several sources.

- About $50,000 was saved because a resource teacher wasn't hired until mid-year and other programs didn't spend as much as budgeted.

- Some $44,000 came from taxes; collections were up about $16,000 and occupancy taxes on improvements increased about $28,000.

- About $16,000 came from interest income.

- Budget adjustments and refunds went up about $10,000.

- An increase of about $320 per classroom unit for 130 units brought in about $42,000.

- About $35,000 was received for one more classroom unit not anticipated and about $25,000 was received from state funds for the special education program.

Terry Gibbons, president of the Jerome Education Association suggested that negotiations be re-opened to decide on the pay raise.

"Negotiations have gone so smooth for the last three years

Debate rages over mining royalties

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Tackling a royalty onto hard-rock mineral extraction could undermine Western states' economies, according to some opponents of changing the country's basic mining law.

But the picture is not quite that bleak, an advocate of reforming the country's 1872 mining law told the Western Association of Attorneys General Tuesday.

Adding royalties to minerals extracted from public lands would only change the point at which particular deposit becomes worth mining, said Phil Hoeker, president of the Mineral Policy Center of Washington, D.C.

"Let's not just scrap the whole thing. Let's see what's wrong and fix that," Robert Loneragan told the attorneys general at a meeting at the Sun Valley Inn. Loneragan is a vice president and attorney with Kennecott Corp. of Utah.

President Ulysses Grant, who signed the law that forms the basis of hard-rock mining, once pointed out that the California Gold Rush took place on public land without any legal sanction, Hoeker said.

The 1872 law gave a legal foundation for prospectors to explore and develop minerals on public lands. And it gave them some security against claim-jumpers.

"Anyone who can show he can make a profit has

People want to be part of INEL solutions

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Most people agree there are problems with radioactive waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

And people at a Tuesday meeting sponsored by the Snake River Alliance said they would like to feel they are part of the decisions on what to do about it.

"I think we need to clean up our mess before we create more," Duane Reynolds of Twin Falls said.

The meeting was meant to be a critique of the federal Energy Department's cleanup process at INEL. It was a chance for people to discuss how the process and its problems and to suggest solutions, said Blain Holman of the alliance, a statewide environmental peace group.

Linda Baird, INEL's Twin Falls representative, said it is good that people are working on constructive suggestions to improve public involvement and not just complaining.

Controversy is good, that's how you develop checks and balances, she said.

Several people complained about the confusing array of public meetings on various cleanup projects and plans.

"I'm sick of meetings," said Carolyn Honda of Burley.

But she keeps coming back.

The department has spent more on public relations than on actual cleanup, she said. And Idaho has been

Despite hangups, address signs will soon sprout throughout rural Cassia

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Cassia County commissioners continue to work on their plan to mark every rural residence with an address sign, even though they ran into a few obstacles at their Monday meeting.

It plans to go as expected, houses should have signs on them sometime in September. The signs are expected to make it easier for emergency vehicles and motorists to locate addresses in the county.

Commissioners found that materials for the signs, donated by telephone and power companies, would come unassembled, contrary to their expectations.

No the county will need to provide the posts on which the approximately 4,000 signs are to be placed.

"I thought they were going to supply everything," said Commissioner Norm Dayley.

He and Commissioner Weldon Beck were angry that officials from Power Engineering of Boise, which is designing the system, seemed to deliver something different than what they had told the county.

After a call from Cassia County Attorney Stephen Bywater, however, the engineering company agreed to place the signs.

Signs will be placed directly on the houses. If the sign are still visible from the road. If the sign would be obstructed, a post, with sign attached, officials said.

"That ecosystem has seen it before. It's tough and it will come back," said Ben Simione, branch chief for Beck, wildlife and watershed for the Humboldt National Forest. "Are is a natural part of that ecosystem."

will be placed near the entrance of the house.

"That's a lot of signs," said Beck.

Commissioners will do further study to determine what kind of posts they need to buy, whether they be wooden or metal. Commissioners awarded a $2,000 project to the Hurst family for assembling the signs.

The new grid system will begin at the intersection of Overland Avenue and 16th Street in Burley, County Administrator Tim Hurst said, and the system will continue on "throughout the county boundaries in all direction," he added.

Telephone companies and power companies have requested that the work be done, he said.

Range will survive scorching, experts say

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — Last week's fires that scorched more than 60,000 acres in Elko County cost hundreds of deer their winter habitat, but were not major ecological disasters in the historic scheme of things, wildlife officials said.

"That ecosystem has seen it before. It's tough and it will come back," said Ben Simione, branch chief for Beck, wildlife and watershed for the Humboldt National Forest. "Are is a natural part of that ecosystem."

Duane Erickson, a supervising habitat biologist with the wildlife department, said 90 percent of the deep winter range in the Bruneau Damaged was burned.

Wary Cassia pays landfill share

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Cassia County commissioners are wondering how stable the Southern Idaho Solid Waste District is, but they're still prepared to pay $111,600 to get the regional landfill project started.

"With the understanding that if the district falls apart, there will be a refund," Commissioner Weldon Beck said Monday.

The refusal of Twin Falls County commissioners last month to approve a regional landfill site at Hansen Butte in Twin Falls County has cast doubt of the county's willingness to participate in the district.

The search is on for another site in the six participating counties, but Twin Falls County officials and others are already considering going it alone and building their own landfill.

At Monday's meeting, the Cassia commissioners first appeared to hedge on paying the county's share of the interim financing for the regional solid waste district.

But Beck and Commissioner Norman Dayley decided to allow Commissioner John Adams, who wasn't present for the meeting but has been following the landfill situation closely, to decide if and when to pay Cassia County's share.

Solid waste district director Terry Schultz has been instructed by the six participating counties to develop two plans: one involving Twin Falls County and the other leaving it out, Cassia County administrator Tim Hurst said.

Hurst said by paying the claim, the county will be showing support of the regional landfill concept.

Officials are proposing a plan that may establish two landfills, one in either Cassia or Minidoka county, and the other in Jerome, Lincoln or Gooding counties.

The two-landfill plan was part of the initial plan by the solid waste district.

"With one landfill, 'You have to truck it (garbage) a long way," said Hurst in a later interview.

Because of the closing date for landfills the federal government has set for next year, counties are scrambling for a way to meet their solid waste needs.

NOTICE OF TAX INCREASE FOR JEROME COUNTY

The College of Southern Idaho Junior College taxing district has proposed to increase its annual budget by an amount of ad valorem tax revenues that exceeds one hundred and five percent (105%) of the ad valorem tax revenues certified for its annual budget during the previous year by six and zero/tenths percent (6.0%) or its ad valorem tax rate by four and one/tenths percent (4.1%) which will increase its property tax revenue by eleven and zero/tenths percent (11.0%). The following schedule is an estimate of what this change may mean to a taxpayer:

	Last Year's Taxable Value	This Year's Estimated Taxable Value	Last Year's Actual Taxes	This Year's Estimated Taxes
For a typical home of $50,000 taxable value last year	$50,000	$54,300	$ 83.40	$ 94.26
For a typical farm of $100,000 taxable value last year	$100,000	$104,000	$166.80	$180.54
For a typical business of $200,000 taxable value last year	$200,000	$200,000	$333.60	$347.20

All citizens are invited to attend a public hearing on the increased budget request or increased tax increase. The public hearing will be held at the College of Southern Idaho, 315 Falls Avenue, Twin Falls, Idaho in the boardroom of the Taylor Administration Building at 5:30 P.M. on Monday, August 17, 1992.

Quench your thirst without pop

It's been so hot both in the kitchen and out that there is not an appreciable difference.

That old political saying about if you can't take the heat then stay out of the kitchen might be fine for politicians but cooks gotta hang in there. The only thing that keeps us going is cool water and a few tasty thirst-busters.

Try something new to combat the effects of the drought and fires; when it's just plain hot and dry and everybody is cranky and thirsty.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Besides all the stuff in cans and bottles, it's really easy to make our own thirst-busters.

People need much more water when it's this hot. Plain water is great but sometimes we want ours with a kick of flavor.

We need a couple of sun-tea jars, one for the purists who wouldn't even think of adding a hint of anything besides plain tea in their iced tea and one for my experiments for that elusive combination to make a good thing better.

And what a choice the commercial tea-makers have given us these days. I love to walk the beverage aisles of a supermarket and just look at these lovely boxes with the tempting combinations, especially the herbal or non-caffeine ones.

We keep a large basket filled with the tea bags so guests can have a full selection, summer for winter.

If you have not made sun-tea, it's really easy and you don't need to buy special equipment. However those jars with handles and spigots make it easier. If I'm experimenting, I will just use a quart jar with a lid or fashion a top by putting plastic wrap over the opening and tighten it with a rubber band.

My ratio is three bags per quart of water. Fill the jar with cold tap water, add the tea bags, put on the lid and set it in direct sunlight. It doesn't take too long on these hot days. You can make it much stronger by adding tea bags or using larger tea bags.

For good flavor, I would go for stronger. You can always dilute it with water or club soda and you will be serving it over ice cubes.

After it's brewed, throw away the tea bags and place the jar in the refrigerator. It's better to make two batches than to have one that gets that awful "old" taste that can come on in just a day or so.

To serve, pour over ice in a glass and garnish with a slice of lemon or sprig of fresh mint.

Remember, the glass is important for giving an overall icy feeling. Put the glasses in the freezer so they are frosty (good for beer mugs too). Large wine glasses make drinks especially festive.

"Spritzers" are made by adding club soda or carbonated sparkling mineral water to cold drinks. This is really nice with some of the fruit-flavored teas available now.

A "spritzer" used to be just adding club soda to white wine with a lemon twist, but now the non-alcoholic, thirst quenching drinks are made using the same principle.

Here's a really refreshing one.

LIME-GRAPe SPRITZER
This makes about 8 cups, so if you're using especially tall or large glasses, double everything.

8 lime slices (try to make them 1/2-inch thick and poke with a fork to let juice run)

5 1/2 cups chilled club soda
2 1/2 cups chilled unsweetened grape juice

Place a slice of lime in each glass and add some ice cubes.
Combine, club soda and grape juice and pour one cup in each glass. Easy and cool. Note: Grape juice is one thing that does stain so don't give it to little girls in pretty white frocks!

You get the general idea for a spritzer. You can't make them ahead, they lose the fizz too fast so have everything ready for last minute combination. Try apple juice and lemon fizz or just let your imagination and supplies on hand inspire you.

If you're making watermelon balls, you know how much of the pulp goes to waste. Just remove the seeds from the Sautéed Potatoes Provencal, Nicoise Salad and Potato Pancakes are just a few of the dishes that can be prepared with leftover potatoes.

Repeat performances

BAKED POTATOES

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Pierce eight medium size (about 6 oz. each) potatoes in several places with tines of a fork to allow steam to escape. Place potatoes on oven rack or cookie sheet; bake about 45 minutes until potatoes can be easily pierced with a fork. Cool, cover and refrigerate leftover potatoes up to 3 days.

Makes 8 servings.
Nutritional information per serving: 165 calories; 3 g protein; 0.2 g fat; 38 g carbohydrate; 2.7 g fiber; 0 mg cholesterol; 12 mg sodium.

CHICKEN-POTATO SAUTE

2/3 cup prepared, reduced-calorie Italian salad dressing
1 pound-boned and skinned chicken breast halves, cut into 1/2-inch strips
2 cups broccoli florets, cut into slices 1/3 inch thick
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1/2 cup water
4 medium leftover baked potatoes, cut into 1/2-inch cubes

1 cup cherry tomatoes, halved
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons minced parsley (optional)
Heat 2 tablespoons of the dressing in a 12-inch nonstick skillet over high heat. Add chicken. Cook and toss until opaque throughout; remove chicken and set aside. Add 1 more tablespoon of the dressing, the broccoli and mushrooms. Toss over high heat about 2 minutes until mushrooms are lightly browned.

Add water; cover immediately and cook 3 minutes.

Spuds can be used more than once

How can you maximize time in the kitchen? Plan on repeat performances. Cook a double batch of potatoes for dinner tonight; transform the leftovers into a main dish or side dish tomorrow — in 30 minutes or less.

Start with basic baked, boiled or mashed potatoes. Leftover potatoes will keep up to three days if stored or covered, in the refrigerator. Try one of the potato dishes below. Each contains no more than 30 percent calories from fat.

Here are some helpful tips for preparing potatoes:

- Use a nonstick skillet to maintain the low-fat attributes of potatoes.
- Don't peel the potatoes — you save time and gain extra fiber.
- Use leftover mashed potatoes to thicken soup. The potatoes add creamy texture and only a trace of fat.

Add chicken, potatoes, tomatoes, the remaining dressing and the mustard. Toss until heated through, about 3 minutes. Sprinkle each serving with parsley.

Makes four servings.
Nutritional information per serving: 339 calories; 32

g protein; 2 g fat; 48 g carbohydrate; 5.0 g fiber; 66mg cholesterol; 609 mg sodium.

SAUTEED POTATOES PROVENCAL

2 tablespoons olive oil
4 medium leftover baked potatoes, cut into 1-inch cubes
1 cup zucchini slices and/or red bell pepper squares
4 green onions, sliced
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup chopped parsley
Grated zest of 1 lemon
Salt and pepper, to taste

Heat oil in 12-inch nonstick skillet over medium-high heat; add potatoes. Cook, turning potatoes until brown and crisp, about 5 minutes. Add zucchini, bell pepper, onions and garlic; cook, stirring, 3 minutes. Stir in parsley and zest; season with salt and pepper.

Makes 4 servings.
Nutritional information per serving: 236 calories; 4 g protein; 7 g fat; 41 g carbohydrate; 3.4 g fiber; 0 mg cholesterol; 54 mg sodium.

BOILED POTATOES

In heavy saucepan with tight-fitting lid, cook 8 whole medium size (about 6 oz. each) potatoes in about 2 inches of boiling salted water until fork-tender, about 30 minutes. (If lid does not tightly fit, water may boil away. Check occasionally and add more water if necessary.) Cool, cover and refrigerate leftover

When traveling, use extra degree of caution with food

By Sharon Crowder
Newport News Daily Press

"Foodborne illness is no fun. Whether you're camping or just traveling by car from one place to another, it's important to keep your food safe.

In the summertime, an extra degree of caution is in order. The Centers for Disease Control recently published statistics that show sharp jumps in foodborne illness over the summer months. It's not surprising. Not, of course, until it happens to you.

Susan Conley, home economist and manager of the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) meat and poultry hotline, says the two biggest mistakes in food handling in hot weather are allowing perishable foods to stay out of the refrigerator too long and undercooking meat, poultry and fish on the grill.

This time of year, the hotline is busy answering food safety questions, mostly about picnicking, Conley says.

To help with all your food handling and storage questions for summer vacation outings, here are some tips from "Food News for Consumers," a magazine published by the USDA. Heed the following advice and you won't find yourself hugging the toilet when you ought to be out having fun.

ON THE ROAD

Picnicking is a popular American pastime, whether it be a short respite at a rest stop on the way to a vacation destination or a leisurely dinner at an outdoor concert. No matter where you're headed:

Plan ahead. A well-stocked cooler is a must. Have plenty of ice or frozen gel packs on hand before you start packing. A cooler, like a refrigerator, should keep the temperature inside at 40 degrees or below. Some foods, such as peanut butter, jelly, dried fruits, nuts and concentrated juice boxes, don't require refrigeration. Perishable foods, including meats, poultry, eggs and summer salads, should be kept cool throughout the trip.

Pack safely. Conley says the safest way to transport perishables is to pack them directly from the refrigerator to the cooler. This applies even to foods you plan

Let Laats entertain you

Cook prepares early, then enjoys time with guests

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — For Edie Laats, entertaining is a labor of love.

"I enjoy it," she says. "I enjoy people. I'm kind of outgoing, and I like to be with people and talk to them and serve refreshments to them, whatever the occasion is."

She says she especially loves to have people over for luncheons. And she prepares as much as possible the day before, in order to be able to spend more time visiting.

"My motto is that when I entertain I do spend the least amount of time in the kitchen," she says. "My dishes are all what you can fix ahead of time."

She sets the table in the morning and generally uses fresh flowers in her centerpiece. She says she also loves candles and uses them to decorate her table.

When her guests arrive she serves sparkling wine or champagne with two or three strawberries in each glass. She says if one prefers, a non-alcoholic sparkling beverage or fruit juice may be substituted.

While her guests sip their champagne and socialize, the main course is cooking in the oven. The baking time is only about 25 minutes for...

CREPES ALMONDINE

Serves 4
3 eggs, beaten
2/3 cup flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk

The filling:
1/2 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
3 tablespoons flour
About 1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1/2 cups half and half of milk
1 cup (or 4 ounces) of shredded Swiss cheese

2 cups chopped cooked chicken breast
1 cup finely chopped celery
1/2 cup blanched slivered almonds, toasted

2 tablespoons chopped pimento (optional)

2 tablespoons green onion slices
2 Combine eggs, flour, salt and milk. Beat until smooth. Let stand for 30 minutes.

For each crepe pour 1/4 cup batter into hot, lightly greased skillet. Cook on one side, and then turn over and cook other side. Each side should take no more than 60 seconds to cook.

To make the chicken mixture:
Combine mayonnaise or salad dressing, flour and seasoning. Gradually add milk or half and half and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened about 5 minutes or less. Remove from heat. Add cheese. Stir until melted. Stir in 1/2 cup almonds and remaining ingredients.

Fill each crepe with about 1/4 cup of chicken mixture. Roll up. Place crepes in 11-by-7-inch margarine greased baking

Discovering past opens doors to the future

DEAR ABBY: My sisters and I have just closed our late father's estate, and I hope this message will get through to others who will eventually face the same challenge.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

We will talk about knowing as much as possible about our father's life — but do we really know who is in the photo albums or where that old antique copper bedwarmer came from?

We thought we had asked all the right questions and had even written pages of historical interest to the family. What we discovered in the final cleaning of the cupboards were jewels we had no idea existed. By "jewels" I mean items like the lovely wooden ukulele, circa 1917 — who bought it? Who played it? What fun picturing that scenario?

Abby, won't you encourage anyone with living parents to poke into the cupboards and closets and pull something out each time they visit? Tell the parents what you "ran across" and build a wonderful conversation, urging them to talk about the items and what sentimental value they have.

It's never too early to begin doing any of these suggested things and adapt them to your own particular situation. Even if you have a parent who is living in a home — wouldn't that make for a more inspired visit and provide something com-crete to talk about? Just think what memorable thoughts might be left with your parent after your visit is ended.

Something we are doing for our own children is using self-sticking labels on the back of all our framed photos, identifying the people, the places and the year each was taken.

Here's to even more creative ideas for committing with those you love!

KARIN CONLY, CARLSBAD, CALIF.
DEAR KARIN: I'm all for improved communication between the generations. But no one should make a game of going through another's belongings unless he first has permission to do so. Every family relationship is different, and some parents might resent the intrusion into their privacy.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice for first cousins to consult with a genetic counselor before marriage was wise, and very important even for second cousins.

My aunt was born with impaired hearing. She married her second cousin, and their child has no hearing at all! We know so much more about genetics today, Abby, please encourage your readers to get genetic counseling before they marry and have children. Much heartache can be avoided.

AWARE IN NEW JERSEY
DEAR ABBY: Thanks, J needed that. I have been inundated with letters from readers who married their first cousins and "missed" their children are super-bright, accomplished over-achievers. And it is possible.

Everyone has desirable and undesirable recessive genes. If the desirable genes from both parties are compounded, the offspring are, indeed, fortunate. But if there are dominant inherited diseases present in the family, it's wise to seek the counseling of a genetic expert, because the consequences can be dire.

Birding: It's more than the thrill of the hunt

Ah, the joys of being a birder.

Watching great blue herons perched in their rookery in a eucalyptus grove. Glimpsing a flash of red as a cardinal flits through the pines.

Birding can be solitary or sociable. It can happen at a backyard feeder or on a hike with like-minded enthusiasts who thrill to the flutter of wings or the brisading on the night air.

And these enthusiasts really love their stuff, as I learned on my first Audubon expedition, a journey to a bird sanctuary in Florida.

On that barrier island of swamps and palmetto-covered dunes, it was easy to imagine primordial times: a paradise of lush gardens and lagoons with peregrine falcons, and bald eagles swooping overhead.

Our car caravan drove single file beside ditches of brackish water. Alligators sunned on mangrove islands. We were warned of snakes.

Excitement ran high. When we stopped at a salt marsh, the veteran birders leaped out and soon had guidebooks at the ready, binoculars raised, telescopes in place. A ranger pointed to a white bird on the opposite shore. An avid birder identified the blob. "A wood stork."

I wrote in my notebook: "One down, 279 to go." Some 280 species had been recorded in that territory, several of them endangered. We would not see the dusky seaside sparrow, already extinct.

Our guide located geese sprinkled like black pepper on a pond. Someone called out "wild geese," someone else, "pied-billed grebes."

It became a game. My notebook filled fast. A Louisiana heron, a glossy ibis, an Anhinga, a laughing gull, I smiled at the black-necked stilts, aptly named for their black necks and disproportionately stilt-like legs. We would drive, stop, tumble out of our cars like circus clowns who emerge by the dozen from a miniature car. We'd call out names, record them, move on.

After four hours, however, we wearied. And Mr. Avid Birder expressed disappointment that for all our riches, we had not found one bird that was rare. As if to confirm his view, a flock of ordinary wood ducks swam past.

But wait. The ranger spotted one duck spinning around like a top. Mr. Avid Birder looked through his scope and thumped through his guide book. "It's a phalarope," Mr. Avid Birder announced. And more, "A Wilson's phalarope — rare to this area."

Well, what excitement. What joy. We drove back to the ranger station like a victorious crowd after a local football game. And all because of one little bird.

NICOISE SALAD

4 medium leftover boiled potatoes, sliced 1/2 inch thick 2 cans (6 1/2 ounces each) tuna packed in water, thoroughly drained 1/2 cup prepared reduced-calorie vinaigrette 1/2 cup butter lettuce leaves 8 ounces (half a 16-ounce package) frozen whole green beans, thawed and drained 3/4 cup cherry tomatoes, halved 1 small red onion, sliced 1/3 cup pitted ripe olives 2 teaspoons bright, lightly-tossed potatoes and tuna with 2 tablespoons vinaigrette each; set aside. Line platter with lettuce. Arrange potatoes, tuna and remaining ingredients on lettuce. Drizzle with remaining vinaigrette. Makes 4 servings.

Profile

Continued from C1 dish. Cover with foil. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes. Top with remaining sauce and almonds. Continue baking uncovered 5 more minutes. Place two crepes on each plate. Garnish with fresh parsley, cherry tomatoes and marinated mushroom caps. The crepes and filling may be made the day before, and combined and baked before serving. "It's very pleasant tasting," she says. "It is a very nice luncheon dish." Along with the crepes almondine, Laats serves a spring and summer mixed fruit salad, combining all the fruits she can gather - honeydew melons, strawberries, grapes, peaches, etc. For this she makes a small amount of light dressing.

HONEY ORANGE DRESSING Serves 4 1/2 cup orange juice 1 tablespoon honey 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice Put mixed fruit on large lettuce leaf. Pour dressing over it. For dessert she might serve...

CREAM PUFFS Serves 4 Preheat oven to 450 degrees. In a 2-quart saucepan, boil: 1/2 cup water 1/2 stick butter or margarine 1/4 pinch of salt When this comes to a full rolling boil and bubbles, remove from heat and immediately pour in: 1/2 cup flour Turn off burner and mix flour in thoroughly, until it forms a ball. Put pan back on and turn to low heat. Let dough sizzle, pressing it down to bottom of pan, stirring constantly, watching it, until thoroughly heated through - about 60 seconds. Remove from stove and add:

2 eggs, one at a time, stirring completely after each egg is added. Laats says this is the secret to success with this; that each egg must be completely stirred in. Then using two tablespoons, form about 6 balls. Place them on an ungreased cookie sheet 3 inches apart. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes. Do not open oven door at all during baking. Bake 20 minutes more at 350 degrees. When done they should not be sizzling anymore, should be puffed large, light brown and look dry.

Then open oven door, turn off heat and leave the puffs, in oven for about 15 minutes longer. Laats says cream puffs are best made just a few hours before eating, but she prepares them the day before and covers them, unfiled, with a cloth. They should not be refrigerated before filling. For the filling, combine in a saucepan: 1 1/4 ounce package (French vanilla or vanilla) pudding mix 1/2 cups milk Bring to a full boil, stirring constantly with wire whisk. Cool in pan by placing it in ice water. To prevent skin formation, put waxed paper over top of pudding. Chill. About 1/2 hour before serving, fold into the puddings.

About 4 ounces or 1/2 box Cool Whip Cut a small circle out of each cream puff and fill. Put circle back on. Frost very lightly on top with any chocolate frosting. Laats says sometimes she fills the puffs with toffee ice cream and puts warm chocolate fudge sauce over them. Or she might fill them halfway with whipped cream, pour ready-made cherry-pie-filling over them, and then sprinkle them with powdered sugar. When serving fruit salad she would not fix them this way.

Laats, who was born in Budapest, Hungary, says in Europe cream puffs are topped with caramel. To do this, in a saucepan heat 1/2-cup sugar, stirring constantly, until sugar is completely melted and a light golden color. Then very carefully, so as not to burn your fingers, dip top of uncut cream puffs into caramelized sugar in pan. Put on waxed paper to cool. Then slice off top and fill.

Here is another dessert prepared as it is done in Hungary. DOBOS TORTE Generously grease and flour the backs of 2 large rimmed cookie sheets (not the air-bake kind). Separate: In a large mixer bowl, beat egg whites until they form peaks. Add: 8 large level tablespoons (the large silverware kind - not a measuring spoon) of sugar one at a time, beating constantly. At the end, beat some more, until it is very stiff. Turn speed down to folding. Add the 8 egg yolks which have been beaten slightly in a small bowl. Add: 8 heaping tablespoons flour (using same large spoon as above) Fold in gently.

Divide dough in two. Spread gently and evenly on surface of cookie sheet backs, making sure corners are well covered. It should be an even thickness, about 1/4 inch over all. Bake 20 minutes. Spread gently and evenly on surface of cookie sheet backs, making sure corners are well covered. It should be an even thickness, about 1/4 inch over all. Bake 20 minutes. Spread gently and evenly on surface of cookie sheet backs, making sure corners are well covered. It should be an even thickness, about 1/4 inch over all. Bake 20 minutes.

Daiquiris are really popular coolers in the summer. The following recipe can be made using almost any ripe fruit - peaches, nectarines, blueberries, raspberries and of course strawberries. STRAWBERRY DAQUIRI 2 cups fresh strawberries or 1 small box frozen 1 6-ounce can frozen limeade (6 ounces white rim (maybe less) 6 ounce can cubed or crushed ice Blend everything together. Serve in wine glasses or wide champagne glasses. There are a few ideas for coolers this summer. Just remember they are the basic, you can go for the "cold" from these. Enjoy!

only one sheet at a time in a 375-degree oven for 10-12 minutes. Remove first one and then bake the second the same way. As soon as removed from oven the cake should be cut from the pan, and not cooled first. Take your longest, flatter knife (a bread knife works well) and begin to cut from the corner - very close to the cookie sheet, and slide the whole cake in by placing it in ice water. Repeat for second layer. Cool completely - about 1/2 hour each sheet. Meanwhile, make filling/frosting: 2 pounds confectioners sugar 2 sticks real butter 2 teaspoons vanilla 1/2 cup milk or more - enough to make a nice textured frosting Add: 12 ounces semi-sweet chocolate chips that have been melted in microwave. Whip thoroughly in mixer until it is moderately firm, but easy to spread, frosting. Cut each sheet of cake into four sections. Put one layer on bread board and frost the top of it. Then continue to add layers and frost. Set last layer aside. Caramelize in a saucepan: 1 cup granulated sugar Cook; stirring, until golden brown. Pour over top layer which has been placed on waxed paper. With a spoon, working fast, even it out and cover the whole top. Then while still very hot dip a knife making indentations into hard butter and cut off the caramel flat has gone over the sides, to make it even. Then also while still very hot, working fast, make indentations to indicate where the slices will be on top of caramel every 8 inch or so - about 16 slices - each time sliding knife in hand butter. Then place this layer on top of cake. Frost sides with chocolate frosting. Laats says to simplify this the caramel may be omitted. "It is very good," she says. "Just everybody loves it. It is nice and tall and pretty."

Specialized craftsmen create specially suited home furnishings

By Barbara Mayer
The Associated Press

When the home furnishings item in your mind doesn't match anything you see in the stores, there's still a way to make your dream come true.

Have it made for you. A growing network of specialized craftsmen across the country has made commissioning a realistic option.

A stained glass window was the first item Tom Nikes commissioned for her New York apartment.

"The window looked out on an alley, and I wanted the light but I didn't want to see that ugly alley," she says. "The artist submitted some designs and gave us a price. We came to an agreement on price and six months later she installed it."

When Nikes and her husband later sold their apartment, that window was one of the big sales points with the people who bought the place.

The estate has since moved to a house in Maryland. When she had the house commissioned to have 10 home furnishings items, including armchairs, a dining table and side tables, a rug, and curtains. The prices they've paid range from a few hundred dollars to $9,000 for the armchairs. The latest work — a pair of French doors — has not been installed.

Besides getting exactly what you want, commissioning offers another bonus.

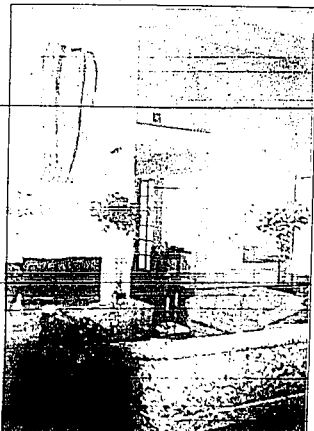

"People have very little say in the design of things that go into our environment, beyond choosing them," Sales says. "It is very exciting to be able to become a part of the creative process by commissioning pieces made specifically for you."

Admittedly, Sales is an particularly avocet collector. She is publishing, "The Guild," an annual source book that profiles craftsmen who work on commission.

But Sheila Cole was a novice when she commissioned her first piece of furniture about five years ago.

Cole, a decorator in Stamford, Conn., ordered a Japanese style bed and cabinets and a Shaker style chair bed and armchair to go with her room.

She commissioned the pieces because she was looking for "better workmanship and furniture made exactly for me." The craftsmen she chose were not well established, but Cole admitted their work

A paper sculpture by Martha Chatelain of San Diego, costing about $2,000, was commissioned for the fireplace niche of this modern living room.

"At the time, they were relatively unknown, and there was a cost advantage. Now their work is widely shown and their prices have gone way up," Cole says.

"It talks to the commissioning process?" "I haven't found any," Cole says.

"I don't get riled very easily, so I can withstand a certain amount of artistic temperament."

If your house is to be sold, think twice before totally remodeling

Q. We have an older, four-bedroom home in good repair and are thinking of selling it and buying something smaller. Because home buyers like modern kitchens, we've discussed remodeling ours before selling. The existing kitchen is basically in good condition and the remodeling would cost $10,000. What do you think? — W. Korb.

A. Kitchen remodeling is generally considered the most profitable improvement to make before selling.

Still, I think you are almost certain to lose some money if you spend $10,000 on the kitchen, then sell the house.

According to a consensus of several surveys on remodeling pay backs, a remodeled kitchen should repay about 85 percent of the investment if the house is sold within a year.

However, some experts I've interviewed say the pay-back figures in surveys of this type, which usually appear in magazines about remodeling and home improvement, are often unrealistically high. The real return might be much less, if any, these experts say.

Virtually all experts do agree on one thing: Tasteful improvements make a home easier to sell, even if there is not a direct financial return.

In general, it is best to keep piecemeal improvements to cosmetic matters. Clean the house thoroughly, including closets, attic, basement and garage.

If paint or wallpaper in some rooms is in poor condition, redecorate those rooms, but use neutral colors such as white or off-white.

You should also correct obvious problems such as worn-out carpeting and plumbing leaks.

Many modern buyers demand professional inspections before they make commitments to buy homes. All inspection might uncover such problems as a worn roof, a deteriorated heating system and similar major problems that might cause buyers to balk. Negotiating with a prospective buyer and reducing the home price to cover the repair is usually more practical than attempting to make the repairs before sale.

Do it yourself Gene Austin

Q. The wood cabinets over our stove have developed a coating of grease that I haven't been able to remove with household cleaners. Any suggestions? — B. Best.

A. Try wiping the wood with soft cloths moistened with mineral spirits (paint thinner). This is a flammable solvent, so be careful not to work around flames or sparks, and open all windows for good ventilation.

The solvent will probably dull the finish as well as remove old wax and grease, so follow up by polishing or waxing the wood.

Q. I have an old house with squeaky hardwood floors. If I renail some of the flooring, should I use special nails?

What else can I do to stop the squeaking? — V. Buono.

A. If you do any renailing, use flooring nails with ringed or screw-type shanks. These nails have a better grip than ordinary finishing nails.

Many floor squeaks are caused by wood rubbing against nails or other wood. This often happens in areas where there are slight gaps between the flooring and subflooring or supporting joists, which permits the flooring to move up and down. If possible, examine the supporting structure under squeaky areas and stop movement by shimming gaps or adding supports.

Use old rosin for squeaky floors, which sometimes quiets them temporarily, is to sprinkle talcum powder over noisy areas and sweep it into cracks between floor boards.

Fertilization will help lawn

Lawns reach a low point about the middle of August. Roots have been deteriorating under the heat and dry weather.

As night temperatures start to cool in late August, roots slowly begin to come back. The shortening daylight sends lawns into their fall growth pattern. They begin replacing lost roots and developing new crowns and rhizomes in preparation for winter.

The best time to fertilize is in late August and early September is the excellent time to fertilize process. Fertilizer replenishes the nutrients which have been used up and washed out of the soil by frequent irrigation.

The nutrient used in largest quantity by lawns is nitrogen. There are times when nitrogen alone may be adequate to fertilize the lawn. However, at this time of year, it is important for the lawn to also have phosphorus and potassium, which are important in the development of new roots and crowns.

Iron will also promote dark green leaf color. Sulfur also helps to reduce temperature is hot or the soil is very dry.

If you have some broad leaf weeds in your lawn, you may want to consider applying a herbicide which contains weed killer. Weed killers are effective this time of year because weeds are also preparing for winter by sending food reserves to the root system.

Weed killer is quickly translocated to the roots where it is effective in killing the entire plant. When combination weed and feed products are used, no water is applied for 24 hours.

The weed killer must remain on the leaf so it can be absorbed by the plant. Since the lawn cannot be watered immediately, it is more important to apply combination weed and feed products when the temperature will be below 80 for several hours.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Rick's College. His column appears every Wednesday in The Times.

Equipment checkout for Bruins Thursday

TWIN FALLS — Prospective football players for Twin Falls High School will check out equipment Thursday.

Varsity players pick up their gear 9-11 a.m. Thursday at the high school. Sophomores check out equipment 1-3 p.m.

All players must have a current physical on file with the athletic director's office.

The first practice will be Monday at 8 a.m.

Cowboys fall at tourney, will play alumni tonight

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Cowboys-American Legion baseball team will play a group of alumni at Frontier Field at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to raise money for the team and as a prelude to the regional tournament.

The Cowboys finished their appearance at the state tournament with a pair of losses Saturday.

Twin Falls had its Friday game with Lewis and Clark suspended because of rain. Picking up the game in the bottom of the third inning on Saturday, Lewis and Clark expanded a 2-1 lead into a 6-4 win. Jeff Slimp had three of Twin Falls' six hits. T.J. Newton pitched three and two-thirds innings of strong relief for the Cowboys.

After about a 20-minute break, the Cowboys faced Idaho Falls and fell 7-6.

The regional tournament, which Twin Falls qualifies for as the host team, kicks off with a banquet Tuesday, Aug. 18. The Cowboys play their opening game at 8 p.m. on the 19th against the Alaska champion.

Meeting set for Shoshone football players, parents

SHOSHONE — A meeting for all Shoshone High School football players and their parents will be held in the high school gym at 7 p.m. Thursday.

For more information, call the high school at 886-2381.

Old pros could be tough to beat for title

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — If there is a trend on the pro golf tour this year, it may be the revival of the old guys.

"I don't think it's something you should be shocked about. It's no real surprise. I think you're going to see more of it," U.S. Open champion Tom Kite said Tuesday after a practice round for the 74th PGA national championship, which begins Thursday on long, tough Bellerive.

And it would be no great surprise, Kite said, if another member of the over-40 set would win the last of golf's Big Four events of the year.

Five of them have won this year, and all are capable of repeating.

Kite, 42, is the leader of that pack. The game's career money leader, coming off the worst season of his career, won in Atlanta in May and followed with a breakthrough victory in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach in June, the first major-tournament title of his career and the one he needed to confirm his stature in the game.

But he was not alone. Lanny Wadkins, 42, won the Hartford Open. Bruce Lietzke, 41, lost a playoff at Dallas, then won the next week in the Colonial at Fort Worth, and Ben Crenshaw, 40, won the Western Open.

And Ray Floyd, 49, won at Doral, chased Fred Couples to the Masters title and lost a playoff at Dallas.

Pro boxers say they're exploited

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fighters often are exploited by managers and promoters, three professional boxers charged Tuesday at the outset of hearings described by a senator as "a requiem for a heavyweight sport."

One by one, Dave Tiberi, Bobby Czyz and James Pritchard described their sport as more big business than boxing — and one that manipulates the men who do the fighting.

"It wasn't long before I realized the total control that managers, promoters, matchmakers and others in position of power in the fight game exercised over boxers," Tiberi said.

James Toney's heavily disputed split-decision victory over Tiberi in a Feb. 8 fight spurred the inquiry — the first such public inquiry since the Kefauver hearings into allegations of corruption in the 1960s.

Sen. William Roth, R-DeL., was so incensed by Tiberi's loss in the Atlantic City, N.J. fight that he introduced legislation aimed at bringing a measure of federal regulation to the sport.

At the outset of Tuesday's hearing, Roth said a preliminary investigation of boxing by the Republican staff of the Senate committee had "found numerous irregularities" in the Toney-Tiberi fight.

"But perhaps even more disturbing than the shoddy treatment accorded Dave Tiberi," Roth said, "were the staff report's preliminary findings regarding the general state of corruption in boxing."

Jury hears Noll on football

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Atlanta, the site of the 1996 Summer Olympics, ranked 24th among the 25 largest U.S. cities in numbers of people watching the Barcelona Games, on television, according to figures released Tuesday by Nielsen Media Research.

Atlanta averaged a 13.6 prime-time rating on WFLA, 22 percent below the national rating of 17.5 on NBC. The top rating was in Portland, Ore., at 22.5. Chicago got a 21.6, while Los Angeles was at 21.0 and New York at 18.5.

Chicago Cubs' Ryne Sandberg is out at second base as Wilfredo Cordero of the Montreal Expos bobbles the throw to first during the first inning at Wrigley Field Tuesday. For more baseball results, please see Page D2.

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Former Pittsburgh Steelers coach Chuck Noll gave a U.S. District courtroom a lesson in football Tuesday, diagramming plays and analyzing game films of his old team.

Noll, who retired in 1991, is the first person with head coaching experience to take the witness stand in the seven-week-old antitrust trial involving the NFL and eight players. The league used Noll to explain to the eight-woman jury — only two of whom professed any interest in sports — how complicated football can be on the professional level.

Although he explained terms like "huddle" and described what a tight end is, Noll slipped into the coaching jargon he used during 23 years in charge of the Steelers and nearly 40 years in pro football. "We've always viewed my role as helping the players be the best they can be," Noll said.

Court was recessed for over 30 minutes so shades could be drawn, lights covered and a video system installed. Noll then explained various football matters.

Coach: New CSI team excites me

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "As a coach you look for ways to excite yourself and new areas to work toward. I'm excited about this team."

And that quote from College of Southern Idaho Coach Fred Trenkle certainly hurled the quiet as Region 13 (formerly 18) competitor for the 1992-93 season.

"Height and depth certainly prevail on this year's team. We don't have a bad player. We have good size, good experience and a great returning nucleus from last year," Trenkle said.

"It is a two-dimension team," he continued. "We can be the biggest team we've had since I've been here or perhaps as quick a team as we've had."

And with that, the Eagles also have an excellent schedule that will bring Utah Valley in here to swap off against Mesa, Ariz., at Hagerstown, Md. in the K and T Steel Classic. Snow is coming here for another swap in the Eagle Classic.

"Because the Utah people seem to think we will be hosting regionals, they are happy to get up here for an extra game or two in preparation," Trenkle said.

CSI also will participate in the Ricks season opening tournament, meeting Nebraska Western, coached by previous Eagle mentor Dave Campbell.

"And we're at North Idaho and Ricks right outta the shoot," said Trenkle of his December conference openers. "If we could sweep that, I think we'd really send a message to the rest of the league."

The certainty is that CSI appears to have no physical limitations.

Trenkle has come up with Aaron Bell, Regina, Can., "who I personally measured here during his visit and he's 7-1 1/4 wearing shoes. I know CSI has had three others they've listed at 7-0 but I'll guarantee you this guy is a legit seven-footer."

And he'll probably play at 265 pounds. "He's with the Canadian national junior team in Vancouver right now," Trenkle said. "He is an extremely good shooter — snaring up or shooting the fade. He sets a very big pick and runs well for someone

Concerns about Japanese economy falls stock prices

The Associated Press
New York
 Tuesday following a round of computer-driven selling set off by concerns about Japan's economy and a variety of technical factors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which gained 5.40 points in the previous session, closed down 6.48 points at 1,331.10.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 6 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board was moderate, with 173.81 million shares changing hands as of 4 p.m., up from 142.43 million in the previous session.

Stock traders faced a second day in which the market lacked a clear direction and nothing seemed to jolt stock pickers out of their summer doldrums.

Stock analysts shrugged off a new Labor Department report that said U.S. labor costs posted their smallest gain in 17 years during the first half of 1982.

Reports of Federal Reserve intervention to support the dollar overseas failed to excite stock traders.

Against this backdrop, computerized selling drove the Dow down by about 20 points within an hour of the opening bell.

In overnight trading in Tokyo, the 225-issue Nikkei Stock Average fell 243.78 points, or 1.62 percent, to close at 14,822.56—the first time in six years the index closed below 15,000.

U.S. Surgical, which fell 6 1/2 at 73 1/2, led the list of most actively traded stocks on NYSE.

A large Wall Street firm cut its rating of the popular medical technology company, Gap Inc. fell 3 1/2 at 32 1/2 in heavy trading. After the closing bell, another investment banking firm downgraded the clothing chain's prospects.

Several fashionable stocks, such as Hewlett Packard and Storage Technology, have also faced heavy selling in recent days after disappointing earnings outlooks.

Days said traders are selling these stocks, which had run sharply in price recently, at the first sign of trouble.

Commonwealth Edison fell 1 1/2 at 24 1/2 in active trading after Illinois utility regulators recommended a $395.7 million annual rate cut.

McDonald Douglas gained 3 1/2 at 40 1/2, a day after announcing a corporate restructuring that would spin off or sell its helicopter unit and close an Ohio plant.

Analysts believe the cost-cutting measures will improve earnings.

Retail companies were mixed despite release of stronger second quarter earnings from industry leaders.

Winn-Dixie, which reported second-quarter earnings came in at 37 cents a share compared to 30 cents during the same period in 1981.

J.C. Penney, down 2 1/2 at 70 1/2, reported second quarter earnings of 61 cents a share compared to 19 cents during the year earlier period.

Among widely held issues, American Telephone and Telegraph was up 1/2 at 42 1/2; Dow Chemical, up 1/2 at 57 1/2; and International Business Machines, down 1/2 at 88.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.25 at 230.61 and the American Stock Exchange's market value index dropped 0.33 at 388.08.
