NATO delays Bosnia deployment

The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Spain, France and Turkey offered Friday to send troops or officers to Bosnia under the new U.N. resolution authorizing military force to ensure the delivery of food and medicine to besieged Bosnians.

And in what it called a "precaution," the U.S. Navy ordered the aircraft carrier Saratoga and its 80 warplanes to move into the Adriatic closer to Bosnia, Defense Department sources said. That would place the Saratoga and its accompanying ship, the cruiser USS Biddle, in position to support U.N. humanitarian shipments to Bosnia.

But the United States and its NATO allies turned down, at least for now, a plan that would involve 100,000 soldiers in opening a relief corridor in Bosnia. They ordered military aides to draft options involving fewer troops.

"We have not yet decided on any action," NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner said after a three-hour emergency meeting of ambassadors of the 16 nations. "We are studying a range of options, options which involve different numbers."

Before the session, France's foreign minister said in Paris his country was ready to send 1,100 troops immediately as part of a coordinated effort by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Western European Union.

The U.N. Security Council on Thursday authorized military force to ensure relief shipments reach Bosnia.

Spain's foreign minister, Javier Solana, said Spain had agreed to send 20 officers to help with the humanitarian effort in Bosnia.

Turkey, also a NATO member, reiterated its offer of a mechanized battalion. The Muslims who make up 44 percent of Bosnia's population are the descendants of Slavs who converted to Islam under the Turks' Ottoman Empire.

Meanwhile, the U.N. Human Rights Commission decided at an emergency meeting in Geneva on Friday to send a Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the former Polish premier, to Bosnia and other parts of the former Yugoslavia to investigate reported atrocities.

Yugoslav leaders ended another round of European Community-sponsored peace talks, but with no progress. The Bosnian leader, Alija Izetbegovic, refused to speak with Serb leaders until, he said, they stop attacking Bosnian cities.

"It would be wrong to say anything novel emerged," EC mediator Lord Carrington said after the talks in Brussels.

Foreign ministers of the 51-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, meeting in Prague, Czechoslovakia, sent a letter offering their support to any U.N.-backed military action to protect aid shipments in Bosnia.

In other developments Friday: A report Friday said Bulgarians are violating the U.N. embargo on Serbia. The Bulgarian Telegraph Agency said more than 3,000 drivers each day pass into Serbia to sell gasoline from their tanks — they make about $34 per trip, it said.

Nikola Koljetic, a top aide to Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, blamed President Bush for the U.N. resolution authorizing military force. "The resolution is the result of pre-election games by Mr. Bush. Those games could trigger an all-out war in Bosnia or even wider," Koljetic said.

The office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees reported some Muslims were released from detention camps in Bosnia.

The British government's chief medical officer, who returned from a tour of Bosnia for the World Health Organization, said the harsh Balkan winter could claim thousands of lives.

In Brussels, sources said ambassadors of the 16 NATO nations were given a report drawn up by military staff that proposed a "heavy operation" to create a land corridor to get aid from the Adriatic Coast to Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital.

NEMETIN, Croatia — Serbia and Croatia on Friday exchanged hundreds of prisoners captured during the war between the two former Yugoslav republics.

The exchange of about 1,100 POWs — about 400 Serbs and the rest Croats — was arranged by Milan Panic, premier of Serb-led Yugoslavia, and the acting Croatian premier, Franjo Grugovic.

The swap took place in scorching heat in Nemetin, near Osijek in northeastern Croatia, on territory under the control of the U.N. Peacekeeping force.

Vets will look into gulf-related illnesses

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Veterans Affairs Department is launching a program to look for unusual patterns of illness among people who served in the Persian Gulf War.

The move follows widespread reports of mysterious ailments plaguing returning service members.

Soldiers coming home from the Middle East have been complaining of such maladies as fatigue, depression, hair loss, aching joints, rashes, parasitic infections and sore and bleeding gums.

"We're starting to see more and more anecdotal reports," of Gulf-related illnesses, VA spokesman Terry Jamison said Friday.

Marine Capt. Dave Fournier, for example, has been hospitalized at Camp Lejeune, N.C., with pneumonia and heart problems. He's going bald rapidly, has night sweats and is constantly fatigued. All of this began since the 41-year-old Fournier returned 16 months ago from the Persian Gulf War.

Doctors "I identify the cause of the mysterious and lingering ailments, but Fournier and other veterans blame fumes from the Kuwaiti oil well fires set by Iraq."

When Indiana reservists complained of such symptoms, an Army study of 79 war veterans resulted in a military finding that they may have been caused by stress.

But doctors recently found high levels of hydrocarbons in the blood of a Navy veteran in Texas. And at Fort Bragg, N.C., a private group called the Military Family Support Network says 100 soldiers on whom it has background have suffered an unusually high number of illnesses, birth defects and miscarriages.

Veterans Secretary Edward J. Derwinski said, "We are telling our people that (the veterans) could have problems that could be caused by smoke, contaminated food or drink; burning oil wells; all sorts of environmental conditions that the troops ran into."

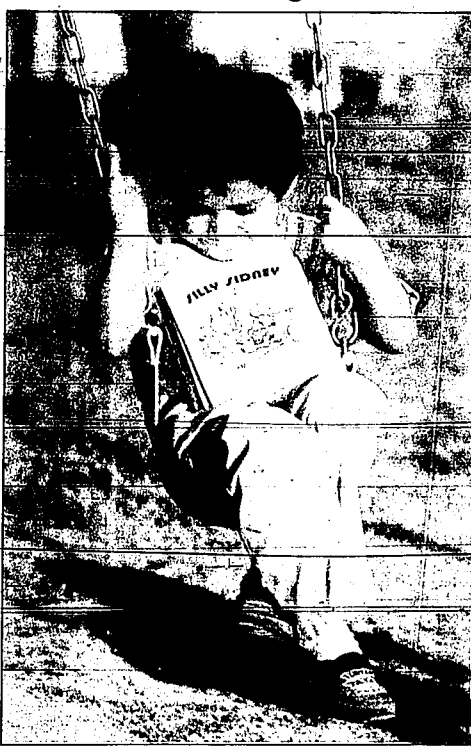

Derwinski urged Gulf War veterans to register with the VA so they can be screened "even if they at this point don't have any special problems."

Local medical center officials will be trained to look for any unusual patterns of disease in these veterans and three special referral centers will be set up to offer treatment, Derwinski said.

The effort is being launched to avoid a repeat of the Agent-Orange debacle, according to Derwinski.

Ex-Jerome undersheriff files claim against county

By H.R. Weikel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Jerome County's former undersheriff has filed a claim demanding $1 million from county commissioners and Sheriff Larry Gold.

Mito Alonzo and his attorney Keith Roark filed the tort claim, stating Alonzo was wrongfully discharged from his job as undersheriff with the Jerome County Sheriff's Department.

The claim alleges that "invasion of privacy, defamation, negligence and intentional infliction of emotional distress and wrongful discharge" occurred during Alonzo's employment from February to July 1 of this year.

The reference to "wrongful discharge" contradicts Alonzo's public statement when he left the department in June. At the time, Alonzo said he had resigned to take care of his family. Gold said Friday he had never seen a resignation letter from Alonzo. But he would not confirm whether Alonzo had quit or was fired.

"I have never seen his resignation," Gold said. "Obviously, it exists, but I have not seen it."

Alonzo declined to discuss the claim. A tort claim is the first step toward suing a government agency in Idaho. If the county doesn't resolve the tort claim within 90 days, Alonzo can sue.

The county received a similar tort claim — also for $1 million — from former jailer David Hood Thursday.

"When you look at one of Keith Roark's (attorney for both Hood and Alonzo) tort claims he just changes the name, same dates, same words, just changes the names," Gold said.

Neither Roark nor the county commissioners could be reached for comment.

Broken yolks leave Yoke's scrambling

The Associated Press

WESTMOND — Idaho's hot weather was enough to make a stinky, gooey mess after a delivery truck overturned Thursday near Lake Pend Oreille, spilling 60,000 eggs on the highway.

Truck driver Ronald G. Smith, 35, of Airway Heights, Wash., was uninjured in the two-vehicle mishap on U.S. 95. A van driven by Paul VanVolkinburg of Sagle was also involved. He was also uninjured.

Most of the eggs slid into a gully next to the highway but some were splattered along the roadway. A county worker hosed off the highway.

The mess created by the eggs mixed with 90-degree heat soon raised a stink. The mountain of egg was at least 15 feet tall in places.

"This is really gross," Bryan Hatcher said as he stood in egg up to his ankles. Bryan and his dad used a front-end loader to deposit the runny mess into the back of a dump truck.

They lined the truck's bed with plastic and made a mad dash to the Colburn landfill.

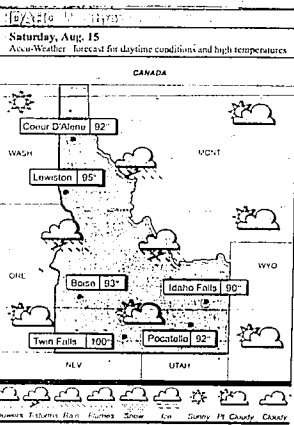

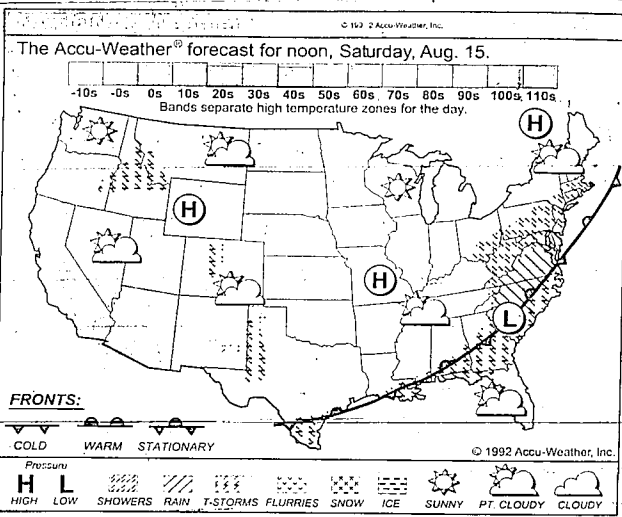

Left empty-handed was the Sandpoint store that was, expecting an egg delivery Thursday afternoon. The store? Yoke's Pae 'n Save.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says a very warm air mass will give most of Idaho warm temperatures with a slightly cooler weekend.

Some moisture also is working its way northward, bringing isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms mainly over and near the mountains of southern and central Idaho.

At 105 degrees, Mountain Home was the warmest station in Idaho. The two coolest stations were Sandpoint and Bear Lake with readings of 89 degrees. Most of Idaho cooled into the 50s and 60s at night. However, a few of the warmer valleys of southwestern Idaho cooled into the low 70s.

Warmer air still was approaching Idaho from the west. This was noted by temperature readings in the 105- to 110-degree range across parts of eastern Oregon.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 107 degrees at Hagerman and Higgins. Stanley reported the coldest at 39 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 113 degrees at Bullhead City, Ariz. The lowest was 33 degrees at Ironwood and Marquette, Mich.

Illness

Veterans complained for years of medical problems they believed stemmed from exposure to the herbicide widely used in Vietnam, but disability payments for those suffering nerve disease weren't approved until last year. The government still denies any connection between Agent Orange and ting cancer.

This time, Jimenson said, "We are trying to get ahead in the science. We are trying to get the system set up before problems come in."

Derwinski said the VA has compiled a list of veterans treated recently by the VA facilities, and was advising its hospitals on Friday of the names of those who served in the area. This will allow physicians to check those cases, for any evidence of unusual patterns, Jimenson said.

190; chenopods, nettles

The agency is offering a medical exam to any Gulf War veteran who wants to become part of its registry and is suspending complex rules for receiving treatment, Derwinski said.

"The issue of finding a causative agent, whether smoke inhalation or a strange infectious agent, is not as important as finding a treatment," said Jimenson.

The Department of Veterans Affairs looks after people after they leave the military, while active-duty service members are cared for at Defense Department facilities. Many of those who have sought VA assistance are reservists and members of the National Guard, Jimenson noted.

Derwinski said the Defense Dept. is being asked to forward medical records promptly when Gulf War veterans leave the service.

About 100,000 reservists and National Guard members served in the Gulf conflict and the VA has seen or treated about 17,000 since then, Derwinski estimated.

One Gulf War veteran with multiple symptoms has been sent to Walter Reed Medical Center for treatment and others have reported cases of fatigue, headaches and nausea, but no clear patterns have emerged yet, Jimenson said.

47 years after surrender, scars of WWII still unhealed in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Exactly 47 years after his former broadcast the Japanese surrender that ended World War II, Emperor Akihito will lead the nation in a moment of silence Saturday to honor Japan's war dead.

But instead of healing wartime scars, the passage of time has raised new demands for apologies from Japan — provoking a conservative backlash among some Japanese who want to put the painful memories of Japan's defeat to rest.

Almost a half-century after the war, the country is still divided over how to remember the war and estranged from its neighbors by wartime wrongs yet to be resolved.

"The Japanese can't leave the war behind. That's what happens when you do something wrong," said Masatake Takahashi, an expert on international relations whose father died fighting in the war when he was 2 years old.

Officials declined to say Friday whether Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa would join Cabinet members in visiting Yasukuni Shrine, where many war dead, including 14 convicted war criminals, are enshrined.

Each year, several Cabinet ministers make a pilgrimage to the shrine, although Miyazawa's predecessor, Toshiki Kaifu, pointedly did not. A visit in 1985 by Yasuhiro Nakasone, the only postwar prime minister to officially visit Yasukuni, touched off protests from China, South Korea and other Asian nations that suffered from Japanese aggression during the war.

An Osaka High Court's recent ruling that Nakasone's visit may have violated the constitutional separation of religion and state has only contributed to the controversy.

Sensitivities over Japan's wartime past have resurged in recent months as the government reversed earlier denials that it was involved in recruiting Asian women to serve as prostitutes for Japanese soldiers during the war.

Historians estimate 70,000 to 200,000 women were forced to perform sexual favors for the Imperial Army, and hundreds of women in China, South Korea, North Korea and Indonesia have recently come forward to testify about abuses in wartime brothels.

Although it admits the colonial government procured Asian women as prostitutes, the government says it found no proof the women were forced into sex with soldiers. Japan has so far refused the women's demands for compensation.

Controversy has also arisen over a decision that Emperor Akihito will accept an invitation from Beijing to visit China this fall.

Right-wing lawmakers in Miyazawa's Liberal Democratic Party have argued that the Chinese will expect Akihito to formally apologize for Japan's wartime conduct during a visit.

The rightists believe Akihito should not apologize to a former World War II foe for Japan's military expansion. Akihito's father, the late Emperor Hirohito, never made a strong apology.

But the frustration is not confined to Japan's ultra-conservatives. Many mainstream Japanese resent what they consider to be endless demands for apologies.

"There is a sense of tiredness. There seems to be no end to the bad feelings toward the Japanese," said Haru-Ebinuma, director-of-the-Japan Institute of International Affairs, a research center affiliated with the Foreign Ministry.

"There is a wider recognition among Japanese that Japan has got to come to terms with the past, not necessarily that Japan has got to keep apologizing," he said.

POW — Watergate case judge dies at 88 went through the crowd with photos of missing fighters, asking the freed POWs if they had seen them.

The Serb-Croat war, which started after Croatia declared independence on June 25, 1991, has claimed at least 10,000 lives.

It subsided after 14,000 U.N. troops were deployed in Croatia's war zones at the beginning of 1992.

Most of the fighting is now in Bosnia-Herzegovina, which voted for independence in February.

The prisoner exchange was delayed for about five hours because the Croatian list did not include five Yugoslav air force pilots caught by the Serbs.

The pilots were eventually added to the list. One of them later said he was tortured in a Croat prison.

"If they would arrest me again, I would commit suicide," said Goran Pantic, a fighter pilot who spent 112 days in captivity.

He said he was beaten with wooden bars while in the Lora prison in Split, on the Croatian Adriatic coast.

Pantic's story was confirmed by Nikola Pejic, who said he was held with Pantic in the same cell.

"It is amazing how Goran survived such beatings. Others would have died," Pejic said.

"The exchange was almost called off, after Croatian troops attacked a village near Vukovar in the U.N.-protected area in eastern Croatia on Thursday, killing four people and capturing at least a dozen.

U.N. officials in the region said the unprovoked attack could jeopardize a plan to disarm Serb and Croat militias in the region so that refugees could return to their homes.

WASHINGTON (AP) — John J. Sirica, the federal judge whose dogged pursuit of the truth in the Watergate scandal unraveled Richard Nixon's presidency, died Friday. He was 88.

Sirica died at 4:30 p.m. Friday at Georgetown University Medical Center of cardiac arrest, said a hospital spokeswoman Sandra Hudson. She did not have further details of the judge's illness or how long he was in the hospital.

Sirica faced down Nixon in a historic struggle between a determined court and a resisting executive compelling the president to yield the secret White House tape recordings that ultimately led to his downfall.

The judge said later that "if he (Nixon) had been convicted in my court, I would have sent him to jail."

The quiet, self-effacing Sirica launched the whole spectrum of Watergate in his five-year association with the case: the break-in and cover-up trials; the indictments, guilty pleas and jailing of men who were among the most powerful in the nation; and the epic tapes which included trying to learn how 188 minutes of crucial conversation was erased.

Although Sirica had been in robust health, looking much younger than he was, the strain took its toll. On Feb. 5, 1976, while speaking to a law school alumni group, Sirica collapsed in the middle of a sentence with a heart attack that would have been fatal if a trained federal marshal had not given immediate emergency aid.

When he recovered, Sirica went back on the bench with a full case load, finally going into semi-retirement as a senior judge on Oct. 31, 1977 when he had been on the bench 20 years.

President Carter wrote Sirica that he had become "a lasting symbol of unflinching devotion to duty."

All the major figures in the history of Watergate ended into Sirica's U.S. District Court except for the biggest one of all — the president. Yet, though Richard Nixon resigned his office because of the revelations brought into the open by the judge's decisions, Sirica felt justice was ill-served.

"He should have stood trial," Sirica wrote in his memoirs. "No matter how great his personal loss, Nixon did manage to keep himself above the law. He was forced to give up his office, but he was not treated the same way as the other defendants."

At the time of the Watergate burglary on June 17, 1972, Sirica was chief of the 15-judge federal court for the District of Columbia, an honor that accrues automatically to the judge under age 70 who has the longest tenure.

Judge rules Hinckley liable for compensatory damages

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., the man who tried to assassinate President Reagan in 1981, is liable for damages to three men wounded in the shooting, a federal judge ruled Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge John Garrett Penn said the fact that Hinckley was found innocent by reason of insanity in Reagan's shooting does not absolve him of liability for damages to former presidential press secretary James Brady and two security men, Thomas K. Delahanty and Timothy J. McCarthy.

"The question of the defendant's sanity, at the time of the shooting, remains a genuine issue of fact to be tried," Penn ruled.

Hinckley, who has been confined at St. Elizabeth's mental hospital here since the March 30, 1981 assassination attempt, asked the court to dismiss suits by the three men because he was found insane.

But Penn said the government had the burden of proving beyond a doubt that Hinckley was sane in the criminal case. In a civil trial, Hinckley "bears the burden of proving that he was insane," the judge said.

In any case, he said, even "an insane person is liable for compensatory damages...."

Penn said the amount and whether Hinckley also should pay punitive damages would have to be determined at a trial. If Hinckley was found in the civil case to have been insane at the time of the shooting, he could not be held liable for punitive damages.

"Regardless of whether the jury finds the defendant sane or insane, he will be liable for compensatory damages," the judge said. "As the compensatory damages, then, the only issue left for trial is the amount that plaintiffs may be awarded."

Brady, Delahanty and McCarthy brought suit against Hinckley in 1982, seeking both compensatory and punitive damages. They contend Hinckley knew what he was doing when he fired the shots at Reagan that hit them.

McCarthy, a Secret Service agent assigned to protect the president, was shot in the chest, Delahanty, a District of Columbia policeman, was shot in the neck and Brady, the worst hurt, was shot in the head and left permanently impaired. Reagan also was wounded in the assassination attempt outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

A trial on the lawsuits had been scheduled for September but has been continued. Attorneys for Hinckley and those for Brady, Delahanty and McCarthy had held off talks on a possible settlement while waiting for Penn to rule on Hinckley's motion to dismiss the suits.

Brady's attorney, Frederic W. Schwartz Jr., said Penn's ruling was not unexpected but added, "We're certainly happy to have it."

Divers discover uncharted rock near QE2 grounding site

BOSTON (AP) — Divers found an uncharted rock near where the Queen Elizabeth 2 hit bottom that was scraped clean of vegetation and marked with red paint like that on the luxury liner's hull, officials said Friday.

Damage to the 937-foot cruise ship was much worse than expected, Cunard Lines officials said after dry dock inspections forced the company to cancel all trips through late September. They had hoped to resume next week.

The ship suffered a series of gashes, cracks and dents extending along 400 feet of the hull, said Leon Katcharian, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which has been surveying the accident area off the southern coast of Massachusetts, has found "a number of uncharted rocks out there," said Lt. Cmdr. John Wilder.

One rock, 3 1/2 feet deep, attracted the most attention.

"Vegetation is not on the rock the way it is on surrounding rocks, and it has this substance that appears to be red paint," Wilder said.

The QE2's hull, which is painted red, goes 32 feet below the water line.

"We hope to get an analysis this weekend to get a (paint) match," Wilder said by telephone from NOAA headquarters in Rockville, Md.

No one was injured when the luxury liner ran aground last Friday night after leaving Martha's Vineyard for New York City. All 1,815 passengers were evacuated.

In Boston, the local pilot helping guide the liner at the time told investigators he was not worried when the captain overruled him and altered their course slightly. Charts showed sufficient water depth.

John Hadley, a Newport, R.I.-based pilot with almost 20 years experience, also said it was possible for the hull to slip below 32 feet because of certain ocean effects.

The QE2 was using British admiralty charts. But Andrew Willis, spokesman for the British Ministry of Defense, said these charts, using information from NOAA, which last surveyed the site of the accident in 1939.

Wilder said the uncharted rocks were between the 1939 markings, which are spaced far apart.

In testimony this morning at a Coast Guard hearing, Hadley described how the ship's course was Queen Elizabeth 2 pilot John Hadley replays the course he charted prior to the grounding of the luxury liner last week.

changed prior to the accident. Hadley directed the ship to travel farther north than the original plotting, but Capt. Robin A. Woodall ordered the QE2 back to its original course because he was worried about some shoals.

Hadley said he supported the captain's decision.

"If it made them more comfortable, that was fine by me," he said.

Hadley's testimony was continuing at late morning. He did not immediately testify as to why he preferred a different route, but Paul Ehsensen, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator at the hearing, said Hadley had told him he liked the other route because he had customarily used it in the past.

Also Friday, another NTSB investigator, Leon Katcharian, who examined the QE2 in dry dock Thursday, said the ship had suffered a scratch about 400 feet long, and two small cracks about 6 inches long, but no long gashes as initially reported.

But Eleanor Leslie, Cunard spokeswoman, said early this afternoon that in addition to the damage on the lower skin of the vessel, there is interior damage to the keel. She declined to give details, but said that the vessel ship would be ready for another voyage would be Sept. 29.

Earlier this week, Cunard officials had said they hoped to have the liner back in service next Tuesday.

The Coast Guard hearing began Thursday with testimony by Woodall, who said ocean charts showed plenty of clearance for the luxury liner when it ran aground.

"Grounding was the last thing that crossed my mind because I knew there was sufficient water in that area for the ship," said Woodall.

Civil trial enough for Powell

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge said Friday he would dismiss the unresolved state charge against a policeman accused of using excessive force in the videotaped beating of Rodney King.

Deputy District Attorney Terry White said he would seek dismissal of the assault charge against Officer Laurence Powell as soon as a federal jury is seated to try the new civil rights case against him and three fellow officers.

"The fair and equitable administration of justice would not require three trials of this matter," said Superior Court Judge Stanley Weisberg, who presided over the first King trial this spring.

Weisberg had said earlier he felt a retrial of Powell on the state charge was necessary "in the interest of justice."

"Should Mr. Powell's (federal) trial proceed to verdict, that would constitute the retrial this court anticipated," Weisberg said. "It really does not matter whether that retrial occurs in state or federal court."

But he left the case on the state calendar for a status conference Dec. 4 to ensure against any potential problem that might end the federal civil rights prosecution before it reached trial.

The 29-year-old Powell was the only one of the four white officers not completely involved in the March 3, 1991, beating of King, who is black.

A jury in Simi Valley, a predominantly white community northwest of Los Angeles, deadlocked on a single count against him. The acquittal on April 29 touched off three days of rioting in Los Angeles in which 53 people were killed.

The federal indictment charges Powell, Officers Theodore Briseno and Timothy Wind and Sgt. Stacey Koon with violating King's civil rights in beating, capturing on videotape and broadcasting worldwide.

Three of the officers remain suspended from the Los Angeles Police Department. Wind, a rookie, was fired; he's appealing that decision.

Although double jeopardy posed no problem in filing the federal case, White said, the state's double jeopardy rules would bar another state trial on the same facts after a federal trial is held.

"I don't think justice was done in the first trial," White said. "I think justice will be served by a second trial in federal court."

He added that even if Powell were acquitted in the federal trial, state law would prevent local authorities from pursuing a third trial because of double jeopardy.

"Once the federal jury is selected and testimony begins, then our case will be dismissed," White said.

Powell's attorney, Michael Stone, said he has withdrawn his state appeal seeking change of venue for the second Powell trial. But he said the same issue may be raised in federal court.

Blind baboon undergoes rare cataract surgery

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — A blind baboon dropped off at an animal clinic wearing a diaper and carrying a suitcase full of expensive clothes, underwent cataract surgery this week.

Babette can now see well enough to distinguish plums from bananas.

Only about 130 veterinarians in the world specialize in ophthalmology, and one of them, Margi Gilmour at Coral Springs Animal Hospital, agreed to do the surgery for free on the hamadryas baboon.

"I was nervous," said Gilmour, who had never worked on a primate. "You never know what's going to come up."

Babette was illegally owned for three years by a man who put her in a high chair and dressed her in human clothing. He eventually decided he couldn't handle her and, six months ago, dropped her off at the Pembroke Park Animal Clinic.

A veterinarian there, Dr. Terri Parrott, began the difficult search for a veterinarian to remove the cataracts, which are blockages over the lenses of the eyes.

Since Sunday's operation, Babette has been doing nicely and is back to her favorite activities, including eating McDonald's kid meals and playing with a toy Barbie, Gilmour said.

In the meantime, Parrott is trying to find her a good home.

Babette, a baboon once completely blind from cataracts, hugs the vet who performed the delicate surgery, Margi Gilmour.

"The worst thing that could happen is that, it wouldn't work and she'd have to be euthanized," Parrott said.

"To me, it would be like killing a kid. That's how close I am to her."

Medi-Cal cutoff may spur budget settlement

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Pete Wilson on Friday called on California's Legislature to pass his new budget before a court-ordered halt of state health payments forces nursing homes to close and doctors to turn away patients.

The major change in Wilson's newest plan, offered on the 45th day of the budget crisis, is a proposed cut of about $1.4 billion for education.

The new number roughly splits the difference between the $2.3 billion cut Wilson initially backed and the $850 million education cut supported by the Democratic majority in the Assembly and Senate.

"It also would cut 10 to county and local governments by more than $1 billion and reduce health and welfare programs by about $2 billion."

"My gut tells me the Legislature wants a budget almost as much as the people do," said Wilson spokesman Dan Schmar. "This is a legitimate attempt to give them an opportunity to bring this whole ugly scenario to a close."

But even before it was offered, the education amount was criticized by Assembly Speaker Willie Brown and Bill Honig, the state's superintendent of public instruction. Honig called the plan "dead before arrival."

Wilson's plan and a budget proposal offered last week by state Sen. Frank Hill, a Whittier Republican, will come up for votes Monday in the Assembly.

Hill's plan, which includes the $850 million education cut, failed by three votes in the Senate and eight in the Assembly on Sunday.

Wilson and lawmakers are under renewed pressure to end the stalemate because the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Thursday ordered the state to stop making Medi-Cal payments until a budget is approved.

California has issued more than $2.6 billion in IOUs, including $1.16 billion to Medi-Cal providers, since the fiscal year started July 1. The Republican governor and Democratic-controlled Legislature have been unable to agree on how to erase an $11 billion deficit in the $56 billion budget.

Wilson said the Medi-Cal cutoff, which will affect payments due Thursday, increases the pressure on the two sides to compromise.

CDC won't test blood for AIDS-like illness

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials on Friday rejected an appeal by some AIDS experts to screen blood donors for a baffling AIDS-like illness that has afflicted people who do not have the HIV virus.

"We must remember the lessons of AIDS," said Dr. Donald Armstrong of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, who in 1983 issued the first call to screen the nation's blood supply for HIV. Hospitals and blood banks began routinely testing blood for AIDS two years later.

"The most important thing is the safety of our blood supply," he said. "I don't want to be behind once again."

However, officials from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control said researchers lack evidence that the illness is spread through blood as AIDS is.

"We don't know enough to make a recommendation on blood safety," said Dr. Harold Jaffe, acting director of the CDC's AIDS division.

Although some experts seconded Armstrong's recommendation, others supported the CDC.

Pentagon probes biological experiment reports

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — The Pentagon is investigating claims that biological experiments were conducted on U.S. prisoners during the Korean War, a newspaper reported Friday.

A Pentagon consultant contends Soviet officers used biological weapons on the prisoners—before killing them and destroying their bodies in a North Korean crematorium. The Morning News Tribune of Tacoma said in a copyrighted story.

Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. Kerry Gershaneck confirmed Thursday that the government is "looking into" allegations that medical experiments were conducted at a facility in North Korea.

Gershaneck declined to confirm the details of the claims by consultant Joseph Douglass Jr., the newspaper said.

Ho Jong, second-ranking ambassador at the North Korean mission to the United Nations, angrily denied the claims, calling them "absolutely groundless rumors," the News Tribune said.

Rep. John Miller, a member of the joint U.S.-Russian POW/MIA Commission, said he would press the Russian government for information about the North Korean hospital in a commission visit to Moscow later this month.

Ship close to Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking a "prudent precaution," the Navy has ordered the aircraft carrier Saratoga and its 80 warplanes to move into the Adriatic Sea closer to Bosnia, Defense Department sources said Friday.

The move would place the Saratoga and its accompanying ship, the cruiser USS Biddle, in position to support U.N. humanitarian shipments into the former-Yugoslav province, torn by civil war.

GOP Democratic party platforms differ widely

HOUSTON (AP) — A major political rift between the Democratic and Republican parties, but by no means the only one, is the two documents that are set apart on a raft of similar and divergent issues.

The Democratic platform, the centerpiece of the party's strategy, is a 12-page document that is being drafted in the Arkansas state capitol building. It is a carefully constructed document that frames called for political race for GOP candidates, including President Bush. The platform's authors are evident in their support for public-school choice plans while the GOP says parents should be able to choose any public, private or parochial school for their child and get federal tuition help.

Foreign policy presents a major difference that doesn't fit the usual pattern.

To try to protect the president, GOP platform writers rejected changes that would have repudiated his policy of giving China preferential trade status. But it was clear after emotional debate that many agreed with the Democratic platform assertion that such status should be conditioned on restoration of human rights.

Here is a look at some key platform stands:

ABORTION
 Democrats: "Democrats stand behind the right of every woman to choose, consistent with Roe vs. Wade, regardless of ability to pay, and support a national law to protect that right."
 Republicans: "We believe the unborn child has a fundamental right to life which cannot be infringed. We therefore reaffirm our support for a human life amendment to the Constitution. Also oppose using public revenues for abortion and support appointment of judges who respect the sanctity of innocent human life."

CHINA
 Democrats: Would condition "favorable trade terms for China on respect for human rights in China and Tibet, greater market access for U.S. goods, and responsible conduct on weapons proliferation."
 Republicans: "Our policy toward China is based on support for democratic reform. We need to maintain the relationship with China so that we can effectively encourage such reform."
TAXES
 Democrats: "We will relieve the tax burden on middle-class Americans by forcing the rich to pay their fair share. We will provide long-overdue tax relief to families with children."
 Republicans: "We will oppose any attempt to increase taxes. We want to expand the Young Child Tax Credit to $500 per child and make it available to all families with children under the age of ten."

CIVIL RIGHTS
 Democrats: Says they'll lead the fight against "discrimination or deprivation of rights on the basis of race, gender, language, national origin, religion, age, disability, sexual orientation or other characteristics irrelevant to ability."
 Republicans: Support "vigorous enforcement of statutes to prevent illegal discrimination on account of sex, race, creed, or national origin. ... We reject efforts to replace equal rights with quotas or other preferential treatment."
ENVIRONMENT
 Democrats: "We will oppose Republican efforts to gut the Clean Air Act in the guise of competitiveness. ... We will actively support energy efficiency, recycling, and pollution prevention strategies."
 Republicans: "Environmental progress must continue in tandem with economic growth. Crippling an industry is no solution at all. Bankrupt facilities only worsen environmental situations."

DEFICIT REDUCTION
 Democrats: Would "eliminate non-productive programs; achieve defense savings; reform entitlement programs to control soaring health care costs; cut federal administrative costs; ... and make the rich pay their fair share in taxes."
 Republicans: "The only solution is for the voters to end divided government and elect a self-controlled Congress that would enact the Balanced Budget Amendment and a line item veto, and consider cutting tax entitlements—other than Social Security."

Broccoli Party puts Barbara Bush on ticket

HOUSTON (AP) — A most unlikely Bush-Clinton presidential ticket was unveiled Friday by a most improbable political party.

The National Broccoli Party ticket is headed by Barbara Bush, Bill Clinton is her running mate.

Warren Bruce, the party chairman, said he hoped the ticket would draw attention to the need for Americans to eat more fruit and vegetables. That, of course, includes broccoli, for which President Bush has a well-documented distaste.

"We've been trying to get people to eat broccoli for three years now and no success," said Bruce, who once routinely works as special projects chairman for the Houston Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. "We've sent broccoli to the White House. We've sent recipes to the White House. We've sent special dishes to the White House. No success."

Despite his distaste for the vegetable, the Broccoli Party wants Bush as its secretary of state. It also is proposing Ross Perot as CIA director, Jesse Jackson as poet laureate and Will Chamberlain as secretary of nutrition.

Bush gives acceptance speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush gave his acceptance speech Wednesday night, the first since the Republican National Convention next week, while he is in the White House. The speech was broadcast on ABC and CBS.

Bush was the first president to give an acceptance speech from the White House since Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952.

Michelle Obama, speechwriter for the president, said she worked on a draft of the speech for 10 days. The speech was written by Michael O'Connell, a speechwriter for the White House. The speech was broadcast on ABC and CBS.

Clinton, Gore will stay active during convention

HOUSTON (AP) — Bill Clinton and Al Gore will stay active during the Republican National Convention in Houston, Texas, next week.

Clinton and Gore will be seen at the convention, but they will not be on the ballot. Clinton is the Democratic vice-presidential pick, and Gore is the Democratic pick for vice president.

7 arrested during abortion protest

HOUSTON (AP) — Police moved seven anti-abortion demonstrators from the front of a women's clinic Friday as they made the first arrests in a week of protests leading up to the Republican National Convention.

Operation Rescue protesters, said they had temporarily halted activity at the A to Z Clinic while abortion rights advocates said it had remained open.

About 50 anti-abortion protesters arrived at the clinic south of downtown Houston and seven at in front of the door.

Guns do all the talking as anarchy reigns in starving Somalia

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — Three trucks loaded with 49 tons of donated food were ready to roll out of Mogadishu's port, but gunmen blocked the way.

The starving people of Somalia's capital would have to wait another day.

It seems only firearms can guarantee a steady food supply in Mogadishu, where rival gangs with machine guns milled about just outside the port gate, sizing up the convoy like lions on the prowl. It was the second day they had blocked its movement.

This is anarchy. This is Somalia. The impoverished nation that forms Africa's eastern horn is an ongoing riot of self-inflicted misery, descending into ever greater chaos by the day.

With 1.5 million people facing starvation and no functioning government, Somalia cannot save itself. And help from abroad is painfully slow in arriving.

"This is the worst place in the world right now," said Omur Abdulle, an accountant before Somalia imploded with the overthrow of dictator Mohammed Siad Barre in January 1991.

"People are starving in the desert and they are fighting in the city. No one cares about us because we are a poor country," said Abdulle, now a worker with the International Red Cross.

Somalia's crisis is a mix of Beirut's factional anarchy and Ethiopia's devastating famine, horrors that engulfed those areas in the 1980s.

Chaos reigns in the capital, where the crackle of gunfire night and day has become background music. There is no police force or army. The jails have been emptied. The telephone system has been destroyed. Electricity is available only to a lucky few with generators.

Many upper and middle-class Somalis have fled the country and their white-washed walls, replaced by surging numbers of desperate poor who have moved to the city and erected crude shelters in every available space.

The streets are controlled largely by warring clansmen and bandits, many of them teenagers shouldering automatic rifles and joy-riding in vehicles mounted with machine guns.

"Give a 12-year-old a gun and all other forms of authority cease," said Jim Newton of World Vision, the U.S.-based charity that was trying to move the food out of the port.

Armed students strike Seoul riot police

SEOUL, South Korea — Hundreds of students wielding clubs and fire-bombs clashed with riot police in the Korean capital Friday during outlawed anti-government rallies that drew more than 20,000 protesters.

In a separate protest Friday, Korean victims of Japanese military brutality during World War II and their families scuffled with riot police during a protest outside the Japanese Embassy. The 150 protesters were demanding compensation from Japan for Koreans forced to serve as prostitutes, laborers and soldiers during the war.

Students defied the government to hold the week-long rallies demanding the release of political prisoners, unification of the divided peninsula and repeal of a national security law prohibiting contact with North Korea.

The government banned the gatherings, which end Monday, claiming they support the Communist North.

Faulty flaps may have caused crash

KATMANDU, Nepal — Investigators said Friday that the pilot of a Thai Airways jetliner struggled with faulty wing flaps before the plane crashed in the Himalayas, killing all 113 people on board, including 11 Americans.

It was not clear from the initial report whether pilot error or a mechanical fault was to blame for the July 31 disaster on the flight from Bangkok.

The brief report made no mention of the monsoon rains lashing the airport, which reduced visibility and hid the mountains that surround the fertile Katmandu Valley.

It also made no attempt to explain why the Airbus A310-300 overshot the airport, even though the problem with the flaps apparently had been corrected, and left other mysteries unanswered.

Loyalists release Georgian official

TBILISI, Georgia — Captors loyal to Georgia's ousted president released the republic's interior minister on Friday, but kept other officials hostage in a separatist region.

At least 10 people were killed by Georgian troops dispatched to the region, Abkhazia, to keep the captives from being moved, officials said. The new violence was the most serious political crisis to face former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze since he became leader of his native Georgia in March.

'Calypso' country cashes in on King

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — A tiny Caribbean country known for calypso is making a small fortune off the King of Rock 'n' Roll, issuing new Elvis Presley stamps to celebrate the 15th anniversary of his death.

Thousands of Americans have spent $12 — including postage and handling — for the set from St. Vincent and the Grenadines, which beat the U.S. Postal Service's commemorative Elvis stamp, due out in January.

Thursday the distribution company had sold 8,000 of the 20,000 sets since their printing — the company's quickest-ever specialty stamp sale.

3,000 Sudanese boys remain missing

NAIROBI, Kenya — Up to 3,000 Sudanese boys who were being moved to a refugee camp after years of wandering in search of safety from war and famine cannot be accounted for, U.N. officials said Friday.

One U.N. official said the boys may have been lured back to their homeland by the rebel Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army, which has been waging a nine-year civil war in southern Sudan.

Fires force evacuation of 178 boat passengers

SAVONA, Italy (AP) — All 178 passengers, most of them American, were evacuated safely from a Norwegian luxury liner off the Italian Riviera on Friday after fire broke out.

Italian Navy Capt. Antonio Frisone, who coordinated rescue operations from this Ligurian port, reported that none of the passengers was injured. But one woman said she broke her heel as she jumped into a lifeboat.

Elizabeth Romeo, of Naples, Fla., said in a telephone interview from a Genoa hotel that she was put in a knee-high cast after breaking her heel.

"We heard a noise and then the captain over the loudspeaker saying 'Don't panic. They say don't panic but you panic,' Romeo said. She broke her heel jumping into the lifeboat "that was definitely too far down," she said.

"It was 5:30 a.m., and we heard the alarm from the captain," said

David Novakoski, 48, from Tampa, Fla. "They woke us up out of a sound sleep and told us to proceed to our muster station. I grabbed my bathing suit and a shirt" and hurried to the lifeboats, he said.

Norwegian Capt. Erik Andersen and 148 crewmen remained aboard the Seabourn Spirit to put out the fire, which broke out in the auxiliary engine room. The cause of the fire was not immediately known.

Port authorities and the shipping line said there were 162 Americans, eight Mexican, two Australian, two British, two Canadian and two Colombian passengers.

"The fire was extinguished by prompt action of the ship's crew, and the ship itself was in no danger," said a Seabourn statement from London. "There was no damage to the guest suites or public spaces," it said.

Frisone said they could not immediately determine the damage caused by the fire.

American Elizabeth Romeo is taken ashore on a stretcher from the Italian rescue ship Daphne Genoa Friday. Romeo was one of 178 forced to evacuate the Norwegian luxury liner Seabourn Spirit after fire broke out in the auxiliary engine room.

Authorities arrest refugees after U.S. repatriation

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Police detained more than 150 boat people on Friday only minutes after a U.S. Coast Guard cutter sent them back to their homeland.

A U.S. official accompanied the refugees to police headquarters to ensure due process.

Police said the refugees were detained for questioning in the possible hijacking of the 40-foot vessel in which the 158 refugees made their escape. Maj. Jacques Denis said all but those who organized the trip would be freed.

The Haitians were the first sent back this month under President Bush's directive ordering the repatriation of Haitians without a hearing to see if they faced political persecution or retaliation upon their return.

The police action was the biggest against boat people since the exodus of Haitians began following the army's overthrow of elected President Jean-Bertrand Aristide in September. Police had stopped smaller groups of Haitians from leaving and last month announced the arrests of 12 trip organizers.

told The Associated Press.

The roundup took place minutes after the U.S. cutter Confidence dropped off the Haitians at a Port-au-Prince dock. The refugees, many of them appearing hungry and ill, had just collected Red Cross food and cards and $7.50 for bus fare home when police forced them aboard buses and took them to police headquarters.

Four of the 158 refugees escaped the roundup. Jonel Charles, administrator for the Haitian Red Cross,

Catholic fireworks festival injures 140

ELCHE, Spain (AP) — About 140 people were injured by fireworks Friday during a Roman Catholic festival dedicated to the Virgin Mary, local police said.

Nine of the injured were in serious condition, and two underwent amputations, said a police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He did not know whether the amputees lost fingers or hands.

The injuries took place in the early morning as this town began its observance of the Roman Catholic festival of the Assumption, which falls on Saturday.

U.N team heads back to Baghdad

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — United Nations weapons inspectors returned to Baghdad Friday after three days of inspections outside the Iraqi capital, U.N. officials said.

The officers, reached in Baghdad by satellite telephone, would only confirm the team had returned to its hotel. Group leader Nikita Smidovich, the first Russian to lead a U.N. weapons squad into Iraq, has not disclosed the sites he chose to search for traces of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction.

Smidovich conducted two days of fieldwork in or around Baghdad before settling off on the three-day trip Tuesday.

The 22-member multinational team has been in Iraq for a week and appears to have avoided confrontation with Saddam Hussein's government.

The team plans to leave Iraq Monday, according to the Bahrain-based regional office of the overseeing U.N. Special Commission.

As the team was assembling in Bahrain, Iraq had announced it would not be allowed to enter ministry headquarters, despite deputy premier Tariq Aziz's earlier pledge to cooperate more fully with the commission. A confrontation between U.N. inspectors and Iraq flared in July over access to the Agriculture Ministry.

Officials at the U.N. commission's headquarters in New York have said they were not officially told of the fresh Iraq notice.

Smidovich has said he would hunt for remains of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs, particularly long-range Scud missiles.

The commission estimates scores of those missiles remain unaccounted for.

It was the late A. J. Cronin who said, "Worry never robs tomorrow of its sorrow, but only saps today of its strength."

It's said, "Still waters run deep." But that's not necessarily true. Not if it's running downhill. As in a river. The deeper the flow, the less it's slowed by bed and bank, and the stronger the pull of gravity. So say the experts.

Statistics indicate clergymen live longer than lawyers and lawyers live longer than doctors. But not much longer.

Q. What popularized that drink known as the dry martini?
 A. Prohibition. The gin was so bad that tender tastes had to touch it up with vermouth to get it past their tongues.

Official: INEE must change direction

IDAHO FALLS — The 23,000 signatures collected recently in support of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory were great, but they won't help Idaho Falls' compete in the post-Cold War era, a top Energy Department official says.

Leo Duffy, assistant secretary for environmental restoration and waste management, told the Greater Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce on Friday that cities like Idaho Falls, which depend on defense spending, must focus on new technologies that create jobs in the private sector.

"We've got to compete. We've got to get off the public dole," Duffy said. "Everybody on the public dole loses their competitive nature."

Dam may have another weak spot

LEWISTON — Aging Mann Lake Dam, which provides irrigation water and fire protection for the Lewiston Orchards area, may have another hole in it.

Mann Lake, just southeast of Lewiston city limits, is the final link in the chain of lakes that brings irrigation water to Lewiston Orchards.

Investigations ordered by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, which is responsible for the dam's safety, will begin next week to determine whether silt is flowing from the dam.

The presence of silt in water seepage may indicate the existence of another large cavity or break.

Boise assaults inspire regular walks

BOISE — Driven by a fear for their safety, some Boise women have come up with a regular walk down the Greenbelt, with strength in numbers in mind.

"I used to walk alone every evening," said Barbara Nelson, 63. "I quit the evening walks."

Thursday's inaugural trek attracted only seven participants, but organizer Jane Buser is hopeful word will spread.

"We started talking about the rapes. We didn't like not feeling safe," she said.

One of the women in the Boise group remembered regular evening walks for the women in her hometown of Bellingham, Wash. If it could happen there, they reasoned, why not Boise, too.

Plans for Coeur d'Alene rink progress

COEUR D'ALENE — A special committee is charging ahead with plans to build a refrigerated public ice rink in Coeur d'Alene after Mayor Ray Stone assured them $1 million in private funding is available.

"You will have major contributors, I mean major. I mean $1 million," Stone said Thursday. "They have indicated they will be willing to contribute heavily if we do our part."

Man faces charges over lottery fraud

BOISE — A Nampa man has been charged with felony counts of burglary and tampering with an Idaho Lottery ticket after allegedly trying to cash in on someone else's winning $50 scratch ticket.

Stanley Jensen, 41, was being held Friday in the Canyon County Jail in lieu of $7,000 bond.

Jensen was arrested Wednesday night. He was accused of breaking into a convenience store in Nampa and taking a winning $50 Idaho Lottery scratch-game ticket from the business office.

Police said the ticket had already been cashed in by the clerk who bought it, so the Idaho Lottery computer noticed when Jensen allegedly tried to claim the prize for himself after apparently erasing the clerk's name and substituting his own.

State seeks comment on base plan

BOISE — The state Department of Health and Welfare wants public comment on a Mountain Home Air Force Base proposal to close its Explosive Ordnance Disposal Furnace Unit.

The furnace was used until 1990 to destroy outdated small arms munitions. Once the hazardous waste facility is closed, the Air Force plans to ship waste munitions to Utah for disposal.

Health and Welfare's Division of Environmental Quality will accept public comment on the plan through Sept. 4.

Democrat says Kempthorne ads backfired

The Associated Press

The chief of the Idaho Democratic Party has some advice for the Republican who wants to be the state's next U.S. senator.

Boise Mayor Dick Kempthorne should pull the series of ads attacking Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings for his vote on a Nevada water bill because he's hurting him with southern Idaho voters, state Democratic Chairman Mike Wetherell says.

"Mayor Kempthorne has hurt himself in some areas," Wetherell said Friday. "Particularly in the Magic Valley, there is a big flap over water and he's getting caught in an inconsistency with his own finance chairman."

Kempthorne's ads claim Stallings' vote on the Nevada bill hurt Idaho control over state water. It was brought up in Stallings' 1990 congressional campaign by Republican Sean McDevitt with little impact. Stallings has scoffed at the allegations, noting that the Nevada legislation was approved by former GOP senator Jim McClure — who is chairman of the Kempthorne campaign.

Wetherell said nearly every newspaper in southern Idaho that has addressed the issue has written editorials sharply criticizing the Kempthorne ads.

"That has hurt him, no doubt about it," Wetherell said. "Whether he's able to turn that around in what I think will be the key section of the state in that race remains to be seen."

Wetherell and state GOP Chairman Phil Batt were interviewed Friday for the weekend "Viewpoint" program to be telecast in Boise on Sunday.

Batt, a Wilder farmer, said he sees no problems with the ads.

"As a farmer who has just lost his water out of the irrigation canal ... I can't see where a strong concern about water rights is going to hurt anybody," he said.

Batt said he didn't know all the technical details of the Nevada bill, but it apparently allowed the federal government to preempt some water rights in Nevada.

"What Dick is saying is that we don't want to have anything like that apply to Idaho and I fully agree," Batt said.

Recent polls have shown a big decline in the popularity of President George Bush in Idaho, a state where he got 62 percent of vote four years ago. Batt predicted that Bush would regain strength by the time the election comes around.

Wetherell said he hopes Vice President Dan Quayle comes to Idaho to campaign.

"We hope the vice president comes to Idaho. We hope to give him some word about potatoes. I hope he campaigns all over the state. I hope a lot of people get to see him and think about him becoming president," Wetherell said.

Batt said he didn't know whether the president or vice president would campaign in Idaho, but said he felt Idaho Republicans will be helped if they did.

Elsewhere in Idaho politics, the Republican congressional candidate in the 1st District, Rachel Gilbert of Boise, chided the Democratic incumbent, Rep. Larry LaRocco, for refusing to debate her more often.

She posed with a greyhound at a Boise news conference, saying she was putting hounds on the trail of LaRocco, who she called "little lost Larry."

"Little lost Larry is hiding out from the people of Idaho, refusing to debate and hoping he can keep his record hidden 'til after election day," she said.

Gilbert acknowledged it was a media event. "I'm reduced to this silliness to get my message out" because the news media is ignoring her, she said.

The Bill Clinton-Albert Gore campaign has sent a full-time director to Boise for the duration of the race.

"Given the combination of conditions, we think we have a chance," Jon Foster said Thursday. "They would not have sent me up from Little Rock had they not thought that was a possibility."

"With the strong ticket we have in Idaho and the kind of voter turnout we're going to be pushing, it would be extremely unlikely that George Bush will lose in Idaho," cautioned Jeff Malmen, executive director of the Idaho Republican Party.

Foster said he sees some clouds in the president's armor, including Bush's declining popularity in the polls, a stronger Democratic candidate than Michael Dukakis in 1988, and his belief a majority of Ross Perot supporters will back Clinton.

Foster, a former Washington, D.C., attorney, spent the last six months in Little Rock working for the national Clinton campaign.

"We've always had to run away from the top of the ticket," state Sen. Karl Brooks, D-Boise, said of recent presidential races. "We've always tended to write Idaho off in presidential terms."

Neighbors protest smell from Idaho Falls feedlot

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A group of neighbors contends the smell from the Keith Skaar Feedlot north of Idaho Falls has reduced their property values and denied them the full use of their homes.

About 15 members of the Group Against Skaar Pollution, or GASP, picketed Thursday in front of the Bonneville County Courthouse.

"We leave home as much as we can to get away from the stink. The kids won't even come and see us anymore," said Bart Grover, 65, who was carrying a sign that said: "We'd like to smell the flowers, but we can't."

Neighbors of the Keith Skaar Feedlot, many of whom have lived in the area for decades, said they were trying to send the message that county government should be doing more to protect their rights and health.

Bonneville County recently granted 1/3 of the feedlot's neighbors a 10-percent property tax cut on their homes to reflect lost value.

GASP members contend Skaar's operation has expanded greatly since the late 1980s, and now sends a putrid odor and dust cloud over properties and into their homes, often making living there all but unbearable.

Meg Galster said that with thousands of head of cattle, the feedlot has grown beyond an agricultural operation and is now an industrial operation — a meat factory.

Does the INEE did the kind of pollution that he does... it should be shut-down tomorrow," Galster said.

The group has filed suit against Skaar in 7th District Court to force him to do something about the dust and smell. A trial is scheduled to begin Oct. 5, and Skaar's attorney asked 7th District Judge Ted Wood on Thursday to impose a gag order silencing GASP members until the trial.

Henry's Fork management plan, basin bill still confuse some IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo's call for passage of a modified Henry's Fork management plan has left the issue as confused as when the Idaho Legislature failed to resolve it last spring.

Crapo, an Idaho Falls lawyer and the Republican candidate for Idaho's 2nd Congressional District, said Wednesday that a "strong consensus" for a river basin management plan next year is possible. But for a consensus to be reached, he said, the plan must be altered to meet irrigators' concerns over future dams and storage and to preserve

Idaho water rights. The Henry's Fork Basin Management Plan, however, is already on the books. While lawmakers fought over the Henry's Fork Protection Act, the basin plan was adopted earlier this year as part of a state water plan submitted to the Legislature by the state Water Resource Board. When the House failed to act on the water plan, it was automatically adopted under state law. The basin plan is different from the Henry's Fork Protection Act, which was narrowly defeated in the House and would have protected 146 miles of the Henry's Fork and its tributaries from hydroelectric development. Crapo was not alone in confusing the two measures. Opponents of the bill referred to the basin plan while drumming up votes to kill it in the House. Jan Brown, executive director of the Henry's Fork Foundation, an environmental group that led the unsuccessful effort to pass the protection bill, said she was confused by the misinformation in April and with the continued confusion left unresolved by Crapo's latest statements. "He said defects in a bill caused the failure of the basin plan," Brown said. "He's got it backwards, defects in a plan caused the failure of the bill." "He confuses the plan with the bill," she said. Keith Higginson, Idaho Department of Water Resources director, said the state Water Resource Board will return to the Legislature with a modified protection bill. And even though the basin plan has been adopted, Higginson said the board is preparing to make changes that address some of the issues raised by Crapo. On most, such as ensuring that the Teton Dam can be studied and removing references to conversion of consumptive water rights such as irrigation to in-stream flows, Crapo is right, he said. But one issue raised by Crapo — off-stream water storage — appears to be a sticking point between environmentalists and irrigators. Robert Lee, Rexburg, an independent candidate for the Idaho House, said one of the problems with the Henry's Fork Basin Plan is that it contradicts other sections of the water plan calling for studies of off-stream storage near the Teton and Fall rivers.

Alliance set to track lab waste train

BOISE (AP) — The Snake River Alliance will keep tabs on a rail shipment of nuclear waste from a New York laboratory to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, members say.

Environmental groups across the country will help track the shipment of spent naval fuel from the Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory site at West Milton, N.Y., sometime this summer, said Beatrice Brailsford of the alliance in Pocatello.

Shipment of spent nuclear fuel from U.S. Navy reactors is usually done in secret, Brailsford said. The alliance plans to spotlight this shipment to dispel the notion some people have nuclear waste is no longer being shipped into Idaho.

"Dragging waste from one end of the country to the other is not a good policy," Brailsford said. The group also called for the formation of a site advisory board to increase public input in the cleanup of the INEL.

It could help provide the public with answers about the federal installation, improve accountability of the government agencies operating there and involve citizens in the decision-making process, members said.

Blair Holman of the alliance said an amendment to the federal Defense Authorization Act now before Congress would set up similar advisory boards at reactors like INEL but that their role would be limited to review and advice.

The group favors a board with more authority to get involved. "We don't want the Department of Energy choosing the members," he said.

Eastern Idaho crashes kill 3

The Associated Press

Three persons have been killed in eastern Idaho traffic accidents, two in a head-on collision near the Idaho-Montana border.

Officers said Norton Platt and Carol Brunt, both 56 and residents of West Yellowstone, Mont., were killed at 9:30 p.m. Thursday in a head-on collision on U.S. Highway 20 six miles north of Macks Inn.

A vehicle driven by Platt collided with a southbound car operated by Patrick McCabe, 26, Concord, Calif.

Platt's passengers, Laurie Caloruso, 12, and Katie Bodel, 11, were taken to Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center in Idaho Falls. Caloruso was in very critical condition Friday and Bodel was in critical condition. McCabe was listed in serious but stable condition.

One car rolled over 10 miles south of Idaho Falls on Interstate 15 resulting in the death of Arthur Burton, 25, Blackfoot. Officers said the southbound pickup driven by Paula Bernier went off the road into the median at 10:30 p.m. and overturned when she veered back onto the freeway.

Burton, who was riding in the back of the truck, was thrown out when it overturned. Bernier and another passenger were hospitalized in Idaho Falls and a third passenger was held overnight and released Friday morning.

ACLU wants ban on school prayers

REXBURG (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union wants the Madison School Board to ban prayers at Madison High School's graduation ceremonies.

That provision is included in a proposed consent decree prepared by the ACLU and forwarded to district officials. It's intended to settle a two-year-old lawsuit over school prayer, and the ACLU says if the district doesn't accept, it will press ahead with the lawsuit in federal court.

The agreement is expected to be discussed at the next school board meeting on Thursday.

The ACLU filed a 1990 lawsuit on behalf of two Madison County families.

Jerome pair arrested after drug investigation

JEROME - Authorities completed a two-month investigation with the arrest of a Jerome couple Friday afternoon.

Diane Espinoza and George Carl both face three charges of delivering marijuana and one count of possession of marijuana with intent to deliver. All felonies, Jerome police officer Jim Baker said.

The Jerome Police Department and the Magic Valley Drug Task Force used undercover agents to buy drugs at the Carl residence, 508 East 18th St. in Jerome, before serving a search warrant Friday, Baker said.

The city's drug dog, Sonny, helped officers locate marijuana and drug paraphernalia in the house, he said.

Espinoza, who also uses the last name Carl, was taken to the Twin Falls County jail, and George Carl remained in the Jerome County jail Friday evening, Baker said. Bond will be set at a hearing Saturday.

Boater spots sunken car near Shoshone Falls docks

TWIN FALLS - A boater called the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department at about 7:15 p.m. Friday and reported seeing a car in about 15 feet of water some 40 feet from the boat docks at Shoshone Falls.

The car appears to have been in the water for several days and may have been stolen. Divers at first reported finding no body inside the car, but then said they weren't sure, Deputy J.P. O'Donnell said.

Evel Knievel wants to erect museum in Twin Falls

TWIN FALLS - Former motorcycle daredevil Evel Knievel was in Twin Falls Friday testing the waters for building a museum to contain his memorabilia.

Knievel, who failed in his attempt to jump the Snake River Canyon in 1974, told local officials he has offers from the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas and another spot in Orlando, Fla., but would like to put the museum in Twin Falls, said J. Kent Hill, executive vice-president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Knievel's son, Robbie, is embroiled in a controversy over a proposed jump on the 20th anniversary of his father's attempt.

The museum idea should get more public support than Robbie Knievel's controversial jump proposal, Hill said.

Just said Evel Knievel plans to call the chamber in about three weeks to discuss the idea further.

Sun Valley rates 4th in North America ski resorts

SUN VALLEY - Idaho's best-known tourist attraction continues to receive national attention as one of the country's top ski resorts.

Snow Country magazine recently named Sun Valley as the fourth-best resort in North America.

The magazine asked readers to evaluate any resort they skied in the past two years in several categories, including snow conditions, lack of crowds, customer service, lodging and night life.

Sun Valley rated behind Aspen, Colo., Deer Valley, Utah, and Beaver Creek, Colo. It was the only Idaho ski area in the top 10. In the individual categories, Sun Valley ranked among the top five in dining and alternative activities.

Hansen boy dies in gas-sniffing incident

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

JEROME - A 14-year-old Hansen boy died early Friday morning in a possible gasoline-sniffing incident, the Jerome Police Department reported.

Kevin Eugene Wheeler died at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome at 1:23 a.m.

Jerome police were called to 1015 North Fir St., where it was reported that three boys had been sniffing gasoline, according to Police Capt. J.S. Gardner.

Authorities believe the boy fell to the ground and hit his head, Gardner said in a written statement.

Jerome County Coroner Gerald Ostler said an autopsy was performed Friday to determine whether the boy died from the gas fumes or from hitting his head on the ground.

Ostler said he did not have those results late Friday afternoon.

"I think people need to realize just how dangerous this is," said Jennifer Wheeler of Hansen, the boy's stepmother.

Sniffing the fumes of gasoline, rubber cement and cleaning solvents is a common but dangerous way to get "high" especially for youngsters unable to buy liquor. The fumes can cause a fatal inflammation of the lungs.

Kevin was visiting his mother in Jerome and had gone to a friend's home nearby when the incident occurred, Wheeler said.

"Kevin was a really good kid," she said. "He would do things that you asked with a smile on his face."

He would have been a freshman at Hansen High School this fall. Kevin is the son of Dana in Wheeler of Hansen and Rhonda Wheeler of Jerome.

After he fell, someone called the 911 telephone number, and an emergency crew took Kevin to the hospital.

A 16-year-old Declo boy died in a similar incident in April after snuffing cleaning fluid sprayed into a plastic bag.

State Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo, introduced a bill in the last session of the Idaho Legislature to prohibit the use of inhalants by minors for the purpose of intoxication. The bill passed the state Senate but failed in the House of Representatives.

Shoshone sets its radar gun sights on speedy trains

By Pat Voloshin
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE - The trains may be going faster these days through Shoshone, but maybe not for much longer.

City officials have dug in their heels and have refused to raise the speed limit in town to appease the Union Pacific Railroad.

In July, railroad officials said they would no longer cruise through town at the legal speed limit of 35 mph, but would rev up their engines to 60 mph.

Railroad representatives complained the city's lower speed limit was costing the company too much money.

But Shoshone officials agreed at a recent meeting not to raise the speed limit on the advice of city attorney Lavon Loynd.

Loynd said that Shoshone's speed limit ordinance is legal and valid and advised the police department to issue citations for speeding violations.

Loynd urged officers to clock the trains with a radar gun and make sure the citations be sent to railroad officials.

After the Union Pacific announcement last month, some residents and city officials expressed concern about dangers in town with the new, higher speed limit.

The tracks must be crossed twice a day by school buses and by children walking in order to get to classrooms.

According to Transportation Department engineer George Oberle an average of 4,700 cars per day pass through Shoshone and cross the tracks.

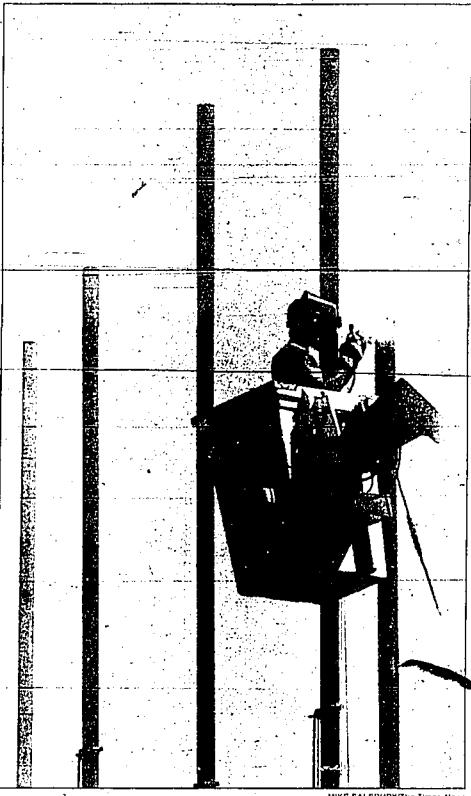

Loynd also told officials that other city's have been successful in fighting rises in railroad speeds.

The city of Soda Springs fought the increased speeds and an overpass was installed across the railroad tracks.

In another matter, the owner of Shoshone's Sawtooth Foodtown, Bob Thueson, approached the city regarding water and sewer permits. Thueson plans to

Opening night nears for new Wood River theater

By Barbara Neiwert
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM - Another two months and Wood River Valley residents will be able to reap the benefits of the first performing arts theater in the area - the nexStage Theatre.

The old Sun Valley Motors buildings on Main Street and First Street in the heart of downtown are undergoing a transformation to create a top quality 300-seat performing arts theater complete with state-of-the-art technical support systems and removable staging.

"Personally, having performed here as many years as I have, I'm just fit to be tied," said Claudia McCain, part-time actress and co-ordinator for the area's Arts Alliance.

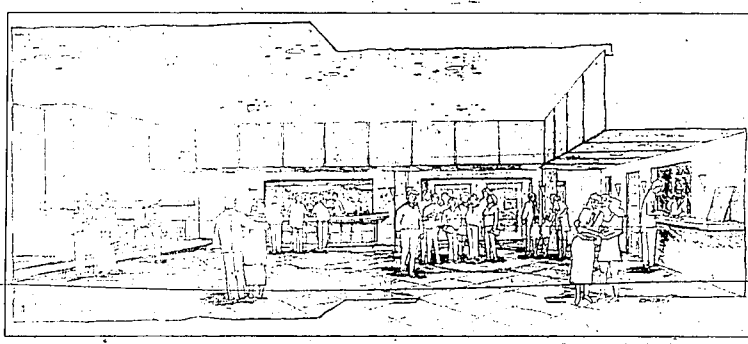

"We've not had a performing arts venue in this community, and we've had to make do," McCain explained, adding that winter seasons are especially difficult to stage any type of production due to lack of indoor performing space.

Expounding on the great degree of interest and excitement generated by the theater from throughout the community, McCain said the theater itself will provide a stunning setting for productions and offer actors union-approved dressing rooms and a lounge with video monitors of the stage performance, something seldom available at most regional theaters.

The nexStage Theatre evolved through the work of Andrew Hixon, a principal partner in this non-profit venture.

Negotiations for property started this past November, with construction beginning in June.

Designed by architect Dale Bates, the theater portion of the two-building

The nexStage Theatre will open its doors soon and provide a 300-seat performing arts theater to serve people wishing to hold everything from concerts to bar mitzvahs.

complex is expected to be complete by mid-October, and the service building directly behind will be remodeled when funds are available, Hixon said.

The showroom and service garage of Sun Valley Motors are being completely remodeled to provide a facility that can serve as performing arts theater as well as a meeting place for dances, seminars and large groups.

The theater will tout a flexible stage that can be removed to the storage area in the service building. Hydraulic lifts originally installed for the service garage can be used to dramatically raise a single actor or the entire stage set at one time.

In addition, the theater sports a custom-designed lighting and sound system controlled from an overhead state-of-the-art tech room.

The computerized mixing board with both digital and analog features can store settings for two shows with 200 light and sound cues.

Hixon said this would make the theater available for concerts of all kinds, tenor dances, multimedia presentations, conventions, seminars, bar mitzvahs, weddings, or parties accommodating up to 500 people.

"If everybody who can benefit from a space like this takes advantage of it, this thing will be successful," Hixon said.

Already Hixon said there are at least 10 groups that can utilize the facility. Among those are the Sun Valley Center, the Sun Valley Repertory Co., the Ballet Foundation and Laughing Stock Theatre.

"Sun Valley has the propensity to attract people who just want to be here but are very talented in many ways," Hixon said. "As a result, the nexStage Theatre will be an amazing place."

Visions of Hispanic night spot near Hansen dance in Alonzo's head

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Former Jerome County Undersheriff Mito Alonzo wants to build a classy night spot for the Magic Valley's growing Hispanic population.

"It's a long shot, but it's an idea I've had in my head for years," Alonzo said Friday. He envisions a reception hall and a restaurant on farmland south of the Hansen Bridge.

The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission will visit the site and make a recommendation about whether a special-use permit should be granted. That recommendation will be presented at a public hearing Sept. 10.

Even if the commission approves the project may not fly, Alonzo said. "We're at the very beginning stage," he said. "I just made the first move."

The planning and zoning commissioners will look at a 13-acre parcel in their evaluation, but Alonzo said he has begun by trying to buy five acres.

Finding enough money to buy the land and working with real estate agents is "a slow process," and Alonzo said he's not sure whether he can come up with the necessary funds.

"There's a lot of risk involved," he said.

But the project is needed, because the local Hispanic population really has no high-quality, night spots, Alonzo said.

He added that the reception hall could be used for dances, weddings and other celebrations.

If Alonzo's dream becomes reality, he may be among the musicians providing entertainment there.

Alonzo plays the guitar, accordion and bass guitar, and he sings for "Los Tremendos del Norte" - "The Tremendous Men of the North. The band travels all over the state and may perform in Twin Falls in the next month, he said.

Alonzo resigned from the Jerome County Sheriff's Office in June.

He had worked in law enforcement in Jerome County for 13 years and became undersheriff in 1989.

Missionary Forgiveness - a 2-way street - frees us from guilt feelings

Elder Raymond Robinson III, son of Rny and Teresa Robinson, formerly of Jerome, recently returned from serving a two-year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the Alaska Anchorage Mission. He will report on his mission at 11:30 a.m. Sunday at the Jerome Ward chapel.

825 E. Ave. B.

An open house honoring Robinson and Dan Wilcox, also recently returned from the mission, is set for 6 p.m. Sunday at a Wilcox residence, 434 S. 100 E., Jerome.

In the Lord's Prayer, Jesus prayed to God, "Forgive us our sins, as we forgive those that sin against us." Forgiveness is central to the gospel of Jesus Christ, it is central to our lives as Christians and it is crucial for our health, as we seek to follow Christ towards wholeness in life.

All at one time or another have been hurt by others or have said and done things that we have regretted. It is those things that can throw us off balance. We need that forgiveness of God to restore that balance to life.

Guilt and shame can destroy us and make us sick physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually and in our many relationships. When we stand under the forgiveness of God, we find the freedom from the guilt that seeks to destroy us. For some, the words of the scripture are confusing, because it seems to be saying that unless we forgive others, God will not forgive us. However, elsewhere in the Bible, forgiving of others enables us to accept the forgiveness which God alone supplies. God never withholds forgiveness. It is always given, but we may not be able to receive it unless we are forgiving of others.

God's forgiveness is like a waterfall that can refresh and restore us, but it does not do any good, unless we stand under that waterfall of God's gracious forgiveness. One way in which we stand under that forgiveness of God is to be forgiving of others.

Our forgiveness of others or lack thereof does not turn on or off God's forgiveness. God's forgiveness is like an ever-flowing stream. However, our lack of forgiveness of others can build such a dam of resentment and hatred that forgiveness can't get in.

It is a two-way street; once we open the door of forgiveness to others, God's forgiveness can get into our lives. May you open the door to that forgiveness today.

Archaeologists ponder findings

Bones in tomb might be those of high priest

The Associated Press

The bones of a first century man named Caiaphas have been discovered in an ancient burial cave in Jerusalem, and archaeological evidence indicates they may be the remains of the high priest who handed Jesus over to the Romans.

The age of the bones, the elaborateness of the ossuary in which they were found and the inscriptions with the name Caiaphas found on the side of the casket-like box point to the man described in the Gospels, although the Israeli archaeologists who found them say they cannot make a positive identification.

The finding reported in an upcoming issue of Biblical Archaeology Review is particularly striking since it represents the first archaeological evidence of the remains of any major figure in the New Testament, Ronny Reich of the Israeli Antiquities Authority said in an interview Thursday.

Reich said it's also one of only a few figures from the late Second Temple period. "Now, to that small list, we may add in all probability the high priest who presided at Jesus' trial," Reich wrote in the magazine's September-October issue.

Archaeologists happened upon the bones in November 1990 during the building of a water park in Peace Forest on the outskirts of Jerusalem.

The burial cave's roof had collapsed, and archaeologists discovered 12 ossuaries, or boxes usually made of limestone in which the bones of the dead were stored, said Zvi Greenhut, Jerusalem's city archaeologist.

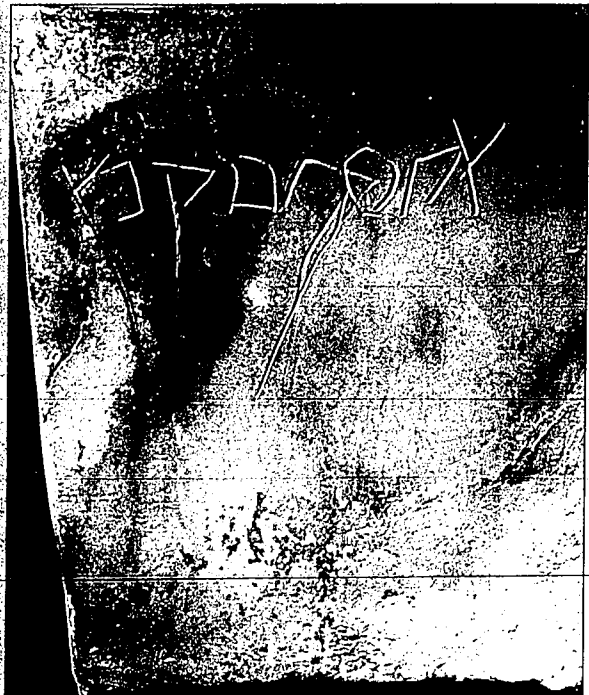

In the late Second Temple period (1st century B.C. to 1st century A.D.), bodies were often laid out in niche of burial caves. After the flesh had decomposed, the bones were collected in an ossuary, apparently reflecting a belief in resurrection, for which purpose the bones were stored, Greenhut wrote.

On the outside of a particularly ornate ossuary decorated in what Greenhut said was a rare intricate pattern of rosettes is the inscription "Joseph, son of Caiaphas" was in two places. Inside were a 60-year-old man's bones.

A person named Joseph, nicknamed Caiaphas, was the high priest in Jerusalem from the years 18 to 36 A.D. Reich said that the New Testament provides the name only in Greek form, but the first-century Jewish historian Flavius Josephus gives his full name as "Joseph who was called Caiaphas of the high priesthood."

Further evidence that indicates the ossuary belongs to the first century came with a bronze coin dated to the years 42 and 43 during the reign of Herod Agrippa I found in another ossuary.

So, are the bones of the 60-year-old man those of

The inscription on the side of a casket-like box discovered in 1990 reads 'Joseph, Son of Caiaphas.'

Caiaphas, the high priest who is said in the Gospel of Matthew to have found Jesus guilty of blasphemy before handing him over to the Roman governor Pilate for execution?

"I have no answer for this question," Greenhut said in a telephone interview from his home.

The inscriptions and the age and the elaborateness of the ossuary all point to the bones being those of Caiaphas, but the bones were not identified as those of Caiaphas the high priest and the relative simplicity of the burial cave also raises doubts, Greenhut said.

Reich said Thursday that he cannot say positively that it's Caiaphas, but it is the first time the name Caiaphas has been found on an inscription.

"This is a considerable step forward to one of the main figures of the Bible," he said.

Others are less cautious.

"How many Joseph sons of Caiaphas could there have been in that period... Again, in the context of a very elaborate ossuary," said Steven Feldman, associate editor of Biblical Archaeology Review.

Feldman said the find should be particularly exciting to some believing Christians because to them it may bolster the Bible's accuracy, but it's also exciting to archaeologists and Bible students for bringing alive an important piece of history.

Robertson, GOP: Voters must make distinction

Isn't it a surprise that the Republican National Convention has invited the Rev. Pat Robertson to speak during next week's confab?

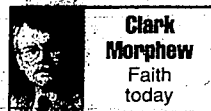

Of course, Robertson is a prominent member of the party and represents a part of the conservative Christians who have swarmed to Republicanism in the past dozen years.

He is also a former candidate for the presidency who ran a failed but vigorous campaign in 1988. Because of that exposure and his daily appearances on "The 700 Club" show, which is syndicated through his own Christian Broadcast Network, there is no doubt that Robertson is a high-profile, ultra-conservative Christian Republican.

My surprise at the invitation stems from Robertson's latest book, "The New World Order" (Word Publishing, $17.99), which attempts to prove that momentous events are signaling all of us into an evil one-world government.

Robertson's hypothesis is that a group of wealthy and powerful "Illuminati" are conspiring to establish a government that will enslave all but the most influential people.

These Illuminati, he says, are believers in New Age religions, Satanists, Masons, practitioners of the occult, secular humanists and people who want to destroy Christianity and take away our freedom.

Robertson contends that President Bush, especially when he talks about a new world order, could be a dupe of these people and their terrible plan.

Of course, behind all of the front groups is the sinister people he is the one force that Robertson fears most: Satan, the Prince of Darkness, he believes will stop at nothing to enslave the world.

It may well be that Jim M. Woodrow Wilson, Jim Carter and George Bush are... mouthing the phrases of a tightly knit cabal whose goal is nothing less than a new order for the human race under the domination of Lucifer and his followers, Robertson says in his book.

The institution to be controlled in this imagined new world order, he says, would be Christianity.

"It does not call for much imagination," Robertson says, "to see that there could be a formal recognition of the universal spirit, a theology that pays lip service to all religions but ends up as a New Age belief."

Then the world body would make Christianity "undesirable, then severely restricted, then unlawful," Robertson says. "With that kind of system in place, there would also have to be a law of world indoctrination and thought control."

But the Illuminati would not stop with religion, Robertson says. With the help of computers, the one-world government would be able to keep track of all the people on Earth. The computers would track a person's every move, even recording the purchases we make and the friends we visit. Then, the greatest fear of all:

"... The loss of U.S. sovereignty opens up the very real possibility," Robertson says, "that some day in the future - a demonized madman - like Hitler could seize control of a worldwide, homogenized government and then employ currently existing technology to turn the entire world into a glass prison."

Robertson believes that hundreds of thousands of born-again Christians will be able to turn the tide against this one-world order. But he warns that forces are already at work on preliminary strategies that could eventually be in place and would then threaten the freedom of Christians.

I have not given you the many complicated details of Robertson's conspiracy theory. You will have to read the book for those startling revelations. Nor do I ridicule Robertson's thoughts.

Also, I do not doubt for a minute that Robertson actually believes that this grim scenario is about to overtake us. He has demonstrated in the past that his God ranges far and wide, changing the path of tornadoes, for instance, to protect faithful born-again Christians.

I'm simply wondering if this is what Republicans believe. If not, why is Robertson going to be standing at their podium next week?

Mother Teresa humbles gathering

NEW YORK (AP) — Under glittering chandeliers, an elite throng in sequined gowns and white dinner jackets filled the ballroom, the podium brimming with regally robed cardinals and archbishops.

Into that scene of imperial affluence at the Marriott Marquis Hotel on Times Square, a tiny, slightly stooped old woman from the hamlets of the wretched was led to the dais.

As if proclaiming the approach of a reigning monarch or president, the presiding officer boomed out, "Mother Teresa of Calcutta!"

The elegant crowd rose to its feet in a tale of sustained, admiring applause.

"It took three hours to pick, from his body all the worms," she related in mellow tones. She said the emaciated man innumered gratefuls that he had lived like "an animal" but now could die "like an angel."

Her appearance last week offered a striking contrast — the mighty and well-off of American Roman Catholicism in formal finery, seated at roses-bedecked tables, paying homage to this humble, aged folk among the rich.

'We must thank God for the beautiful way in which we sense God in the poorest of the poor.'

— Mother Teresa of Calcutta

worldwide order, the Missionaries of Charity, clad in blue-trimmed cotton saaris of India, declined to stay for the lavish dinner that evening.

As a result, the presiding supreme knight, Virgil C. Duchant, of New Haven, Conn., said the organization had agreed to give her order an amount matching the dinner cost — about $100,000.

That was in addition to the organization's presenting her with its $100,000 Gaudium et Spes (Joy and Hope) Award for serving Christ and humanity.

Several years ago, she had turned down the Knights when they offered annual, permanent support. She believes that work must always depend on God to provide for it.

"Give God permission," she put it. "It's an unusual rationale in this materialistic world. 'The saint of the gutters,' she's called.

Simple, selfless, soft spoken, she has lived, she nonetheless has some nagging doubts that she enabled her to endure nearly 45 years in 102 countries, including impoverished communities in the United States.

Her order now runs 468 homes for the poor, sick and dying. She started it in 1950 in the ghetto of Calcutta, India, her home base. She was awarded the Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion in 1972, the Nobel Prize in 1977.

The crucified Jesus, she maintains, is present and seen in the faces of the stricken and weak.

She noted that he said in Scripture that "whatever you do to the least of these," the hungry, homeless, imprisoned, sick, "you do it to me," and that people would be judged on that basis in the hereafter.

How "beautiful," she said, to be 32 hours every day with Jesus in the poorest of the poor — the unloved, unwanted, abandoned, forgotten, and despised. Whenever she came on her visits here, a cousin of her order's homes in slums of the South Bronx, to worship at St. Patrick's Cathedral and to other points — people trailed her, extolling her, reaching to touch her.

The incidents, as recounted by New York's Cardinal James O'Connor, resembled episodes in the New Testament when crowds flocked behind Jesus, feeling that just to touch his garment would strengthen them.

Mother Teresa herself has suffered severe illnesses, including heart attacks in 1982 and 1989. She was hospitalized briefly last February. In 1990, she resigned. The same year she died, but her successor promptly re-elected her superior general anyhow.

Street preachers say they won't tone it down

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Beaufort's merchants are demanding that shouting street preachers tone it down, but the preachers told a federal judge Wednesday that the volume of their sermons is part of the message.

"The Bible commands us to lift up our voice," said John Asquith, a street preacher from Gethsemane Anabaptist Church in Lexington who was arrested eight times for violating Beaufort's noise control law.

Many preachers have been arrested for shouting their hellfire-and-brimstone sermons on Beaufort's main street on Saturdays. Some have been jailed for refusing to pay fines.

The street preachers say the law against "loud and unseemly" speech, passed last fall after merchants in the tourist town complained that yelling preachers drove away business, is an unconstitutional restriction of speech and too vague.

Preachers from Gethsemane and Calvary Baptist Church in Beaufort asked U.S. District Judge Matthew Perry to block enforcement of the law until they complete their constitutional challenge in state court.

They were back in court Wednesday — with videotapes of their sermons and arrests — because a mediator was unable to get both sides to agree on a compromise.

'Our mission is to go to the streets... and preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ.'

— Blake Lindsey, associate pastor of Gethsemane Anabaptist Church in Lexington, S.C.

"Our mission is to go to the streets... and preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ," said Blake Lindsey, an associate pastor of Gethsemane who was arrested twice in May. "It's necessary to raise our voices when we're on the street so we can reach as many people as possible."

City attorney William Harvey defended the law and said "the merchants are entitled to a certain amount of privacy."

During cross-examination of the preachers, James W. Alford, a lawyer for some merchants, questioned why they often stood in front of Lipsitz Department Store.

"Was Lipsitz Department Store selected because he is of the Jewish faith?" Alford asked. The Gethsemane preachers said that was not a factor. They also said the locations were selected by Calvary Baptist Church preachers.

Pope emphasizes respect for life

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Calling on young adults to prepare for a life of service, Pope John Paul II urged young people Friday to build a society based on respect for life.

John Paul announced in April that Denver would be the site for next year's youth rally. He conducts the gatherings every two years.

"The World Youth Days ... provide an opportunity for many young people to make bold and enlightened choices which can help steer the future course of history under the powerful, but gentle, guidance of the Holy Spirit," John Paul said.

He timed his message to coincide with Sunday's observance of the Roman Catholic feast of the Assumption.

Drug suspension imperils female sprinter's career

BERLIN — A year after being crowned the world's fastest woman, Katrin Krabbe has been stopped by drugs. Krabbe, the glamorous German who streaked to two world sprint titles last summer, was suspended Friday for taking the banned substance Clenbuterol. The 100- and 200-meter world champion faces a four-year ban and acknowledged that a long suspension could end her running career. The D.V.Y. Germany's track federation, will meet Monday to discuss her punishment. D.V.Y. officials said Friday that Krabbe and former East German teammate Grit Breuer were immediately suspended after the "B" test of a urine sample showed evidence of the muscle-stimulating drug.

The two sprinters had failed an "A" test last month. On the basis of this scientific knowledge, the anti-doping commission is forced to immediately suspend both athletes, Ruediger Nickel, head of the D.V.Y.'s anti-doping commission, said. Krabbe and Breuer admitted Aug. 6 that they had taken Spiropent, a drug containing Clenbuterol, but said they did not know it was banned. Krabbe said she started taking the drug in mid-April. Clenbuterol is a licensed treatment for asthma in Germany, and also has been used to fatten cattle, sheep, pigs and poultry. It was placed on the banned list of substances by the International Olympic Committee this summer. Please see TRACK/B7

Sauers hangs on to lead; Faldo looms

ST. LOUIS — Gene Sauers has a two-shot lead and a game plan at the halfway point of the 74th PGA national championship. "I'm just trying to take it as another golf tournament, not a major," the laid-back, low-key Sauers said after a 2-under-par 69 put him through 36 holes at 130. There's just one problem with that plan, said Nick Faldo, he won't work. "I can't imagine it will be that easy," said Faldo, whose credentials insist he has much more experience in this sort of thing than all the other leading challengers combined. "It's not another golf course. It's not another golf course," Faldo said and shook his head. "It won't be as easy as that."

With two rounds to go in the last of the year's Big Four events, Faldo himself represents the principal reason that it won't be easy. The current British Open champion is tied for second at 135 with Jim Gallagher and Jeffy Kress Cochran. Gallagher closed up with a 5-under-par 66 on the long, tough Bellverie Country Club course, and Cochran had a boppy five 69. Faldo could manage only a 70, but it was he who commanded Sauers' attention. "He'll be a tougher guy to beat," Sauers said. "Just look at his record."

It's one of the most impressive in golf. Faldo, at 35 at the peak of his powers, is ranked No. 1 in the world. In less than six full seasons he has won three British Opens and two Masters and now is in position to become the first British-born player to win this title in 62 years. Or take it from a different angle: he has more victories in major tournaments (5) than Sauers, Gallagher and Cochran have in regular PGA Tour events combined (4). Although Sauers holds the lead, he said Faldo "definitely has an advantage." "Do I have an advantage? I hope so," Faldo said. "If you go on experience, I have a lot of experience playing in the majors. I know what it's like. I know what major-tournament pressure is like." Sauers just shrugged. "I'll just go out and play my own game, and what happens, happens," he said. Faldo isn't the only Englishman in the title

"The best I've played this year," said Richardson, who once paced nine times. But is he playing well enough to win?

"At the moment I'm playing very well," hedged the man whose only victories were in two minor European events last year. The runner-up at 140, 2-under par and four behind the leader, included Gil Morgan, Larry Nelson, Rocky Mediate and Nick Price. Price, twice a British Open runner-up, shot 70. Morgan had a 69. Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA title-holder, and Mediate shot 68s.

But while those players were working their way up the leader board, some of golf's more prominent names were working themselves out of the tournament. Among them were Jack Nicklaus (78 for 150), Curtis Strange (78-152) and Ian Woosnam of Wales (80-153). All missed the cut for the final two rounds. So did Arnold Palmer, 62. He struggled to a 73 for 162. Defending champion John Daly rallied for a 72 and matched the cutoff figure of 148.

U.S. Open champion Tomi Kite, whose snap hook-off the 10th tee was only inches over the heads of the gallery, flirted with the cut until he birdied two of the last four holes for another 73 and a 146 total.

Masters champ Fred Couples, playing in for the same threesome with Kite and Faldo; also had a 73 and was well back at par 142. Sauers, 29, in his ninth season on the pro tour, has won twice, the latest 1989 Hawaiian Open. His earnings have increased every year "and that's a good sign," he said.

And now, with the lead through two rounds in one of golf's Big Four events, he is faced with taking "the next step." "This is my next step. Jump that hurdle. A lot of good things can happen when you win a major," he said.

His start to the day's play, however, was far from what he had in mind. He three-putted for bogey on the third and bogeyed the fourth after chipping around in the deep rough. "Kind of shaky," he said. "I just kind of let it go. Tried to be patient. It worked." He got one shot back with a 10-foot birdie putt on the eighth, ran in a 35-foot putt on the 14th, hit a great 4-iron shot 222 yards to within three feet of the flag on the 16th and then two-putted for birdie-4 on the 17th. "I'll just try to put it all out of my mind and start over again on Saturday," he said.

All eyes on British Open champ as pressure of big tourney mounts

The Washington Post

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The profile of so many past PGA Championship winners has included the description "one-event wonder," and with one rather noteworthy exception, the top of the leaderboard after two rounds of play at Bellverie is filled with players seeking their first major championship. But Nick Faldo clearly has another idea. Bidding to win his second straight major title, and sixth in the last two years, the recent British Open champion wrenched a round of 1-under 70 out of this stately old course on another unseasonably cool day that reminded him of an English summer back home. "That left Faldo tied for second place, two strokes behind Georgia journeyman Gene Sauers, a first-round co-leader who recovered from two early bogeys and shot 69 for a total of 6-under-par 136. Sauers, who has two tour victories in nine years as a pro, insisted when he finished Friday: "I come in here trying to look at it like another golf tournament, not a major." Faldo put it at like a major on Sunday night.

Informed of those remarks, Faldo, trying to become the first European since Scotsman Tommy Armour in 1930 to win this event, had another idea. "I can't imagine it's that easy," he said. "Majors are not just another tournament, and this is not just another golf course. It won't be as easy as that. I've experienced what the pressure is like, and experience in the majors does mean you have a little advantage. Sauers has had relatively little experience in the cauldron of a major championship, and none as a leader after two rounds, a common bond with many of his nearest pursuers. Of the 13 players within six strokes of him, only Faldo at 138, Craig Stadler (139), Larry Nelson (140) and Fred Couples (142) have won major events. Said Couples: "I've watched (partner) Nick Faldo play very well now for two days. He's going to be very tough to beat."

Still, Sauers has every intention of trying to do it. Jim Gallagher Jr., one of two players who shot the day's low round of 66 and is tied in second place with Faldo and left-hander Russ Cochran. Steve Richardson, Faldo's countryman and a man many believe can't lose, is tied with Faldo. Faldo also launched himself into contention with the other 66, leaving him three behind at 139, tied with Stadler, the first-round co-leader who shot 72 Friday. Please see PGA/B7

Friesz backup leads Chargers past Patriots, 20-10

FOXBORO, Mass. — Bob Gagliano passed for 123 yards, including 83 yards on one scoring drive, and Marion Butts ran for 47 yards and a touchdown in the first half as the San Diego Chargers defeated the New England Patriots 20-10 in an exhibition game Friday night. Gagliano was 7 for 11, helping the Chargers (1-1) build a 17-3 halftime lead. He was starting in place of John Friesz, who was lost for the season after being injured last week against Phoenix. Scott Zolak, taking over for Hugh Millen in the second half, drove the Patriots 89 yards, including a 9-yard touchdown pass to Ben Coates, to bring New England (0-2) to back it 17-10 with 6:41 to play. Zolak, entering his second season, was 6 for 9 for 69 yards on the drive. He finished 11 of 17 for 85 yards with an interception. Pat O'Hara, San Diego's third-quarterback in the game, helped clinch the game with a 10-play, 70-yard drive, including a 32-yard

Cowboys, Oilers repeat matchup during full slate

The Associated Press
Having the Dallas Cowboys and Houston Oilers play twice in a season is usually great for football fans in Texas. Not this year. Not when it's two preseason games. The Cowboys and Oilers will meet for the second time in three weeks on Saturday night at Texas Stadium. Houston posted a 34-23 win over Dallas two weeks ago in the American Bowl in Tokyo. Normally, teams do not play twice in the preseason because they set their own schedules. The quirky this year developed when the league also picked Houston and Dallas to play in the American Bowl. Factory activity stagnates in July WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturing activity stagnated in July, the government said Friday, in a report whose only bright spot was a rebound in activity last month earlier to weather and a tail strike.

"The manufacturing sector, once the proud engine of growth in the American economy, is barely breathing," said John M. Abetting, head of a Washington economic forecasting firm. "The economy ... is coasting to a stop."

Economic forecaster Laurence H. Meyer of St. Louis concurred, saying recent gains in the manufacturing sector has run its course. "There's just not enough demand to justify an increase in production."

The Federal Reserve said industrial production had increased 0.4 percent in July. But it attributed the advance to a rebound in coal mining that was suspended during a brief rail strike and to increased utility output due to summer temperatures. "Manufacturing output ... was unchanged last month," the report said.

The Fed also said industrial output fell further in June than first thought. It revised the drop to 0.4 percent, rather than the 0.3 percent in its initial estimate.

In a second report Friday, the Commerce Department said businesses boosted their inventories by 0.6 percent in June, while improving their sales by 1.6 percent. But much of the sales activity was on the manufacturing and wholesale levels.

Retail sales actually fell 0.3 percent in June as overall economic activity weakened. That, St. Louis forecaster Meyer contended, led to an unanticipated and unwanted buildup of stockpiles that is unlikely to continue in the immediate future.

The Commerce report said inventories totaled a seasonally adjusted $833.4 billion, up from $828.0 billion in May and the highest level since they reached $838.5 billion in February 1991. Sales totaled $555.0 billion, up from $546.1 billion a month earlier and the largest increase since a 1.8 percent advance in April 1991.

Still, Kenneth Baker of Calders Economics in Newton, Mass., said he expects businesses "to sit back on their hands and wait" until they see evidence of an improving economy.

The Fed report said production at manufacturing plants making both durable and non-durable goods was unchanged in July after falling 0.2 percent in June.

"Much of this weakness is attributable to curtailed motor vehicle production, but output in some other major industries, such as autos, furniture, instruments and electrical machinery, also dropped back," it said.

"In addition, output of aerospace and surveillance transportation equipment, which has been weak for some time, fell further in June and July," it added.

The Fed said the only notable areas of strength in recent months have been paper, steel and chemicals.

Due in part to a 4.0 percent decline in production of automobiles and light trucks, output of usually expensive and long-lasting durable goods also was unchanged in July after dropping 0.6 percent a month earlier.

"Autos had been one of the few bright lights earlier this year," Baker said. "It now looks like the rebound has fizzled."

Textile and apparel output was down 1.8 percent and 2.3 percent, respectively.

That helped push production of non-durable goods down 0.1 percent, erasing half of June's 0.2 percent advance.

Nevada con man moves to jail from hospital

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Convicted penny stock swindler Meyer Blinder was back in jail Friday, a day after a custody hearing ended abruptly when he began complaining of chest pains and had to be taken by ambulance to a hospital.

Blinder was released from Valley Hospital Thursday night after being taken there for observation. He was returned to custody in the Clark County Detention Center after tests showed no stroke or heart attack, the U.S. Marshal's office said.

The 70-year-old Blinder was in a federal courtroom for a custody hearing when he began complaining of chest pains.

The courtroom was cleared, and paramedics were on the scene within minutes of Blinder's complaint.

The hearing was indefinitely continued, and the judge requested to be kept apprised of Blinder's condition.

Blinder was in court to ask U.S. District Judge Lloyd George to release him from custody until he is sentenced Sept. 25 for his conviction in a multimillion-dollar stock swindle. The hearing has not been reset.

He was ordered jailed June 10, the day of his conviction, after he threatened to kill the prosecutor.

Blinder's chest pains began after his wife and son made emotional pleas for his release.

"I apologize for saying it, Dad, but you look 80 years old today," said Maria Blinder said from the witness stand as he faced his father.

"Please don't let him die in jail," Lillian Blinder said emotionally to the judge.

Within moments Blinder clutched his chest with his left hand and began to complain of pain and shortness of breath.

It was Blinder's second such episode. Last year, he collapsed during a court appearance in his federal fraud securities case.

Blinder's defense attorney Stanley Marks said if freedom wasn't possible, the judge should consider transferring Blinder from the Las Vegas jail to a federal prison in Englewood, Colo.

Marks said the move would allow Blinder to be closer to his wife and family in Denver and would receive better medical care in Colorado.

"The stress of where he is now is life-threatening," he said. Las Vegas attorney William Smith, who also represents Blinder, said his client should be hospitalized, not jailed. "He's suffering from the accumulated stress and effect from the weeks in custody," Smith said.

Analysts expect no jolt from Federal Reserve

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. July industrial output gains were largely confined to the coal mines and electric utilities, showing the economy remains weak, but probably not weak enough to goad the Federal Reserve into an immediate easing, analysts said.

"Despite the economic 'doldrums' confirmed by July's 0.4 percent overall increase in output, the Fed will not ease now," said Stan Shiple, an economist with Shearson Lehman Hutton.

But "going out a bit, yes," the Fed probably will ease, he said.

Dana Sorrentino, an economist with Citicorp's North American Investment Bank, said the Fed would probably refrain at least until the August employment data is released in early September, and probably won't ease unless it is a particularly bad report.

"Our basic view is that the Fed will not ease," Sorrentino said.

While a recovery is under way, the decline in auto production and overall slowness in manufacturing is keeping it weak, economists said.

"Production at the manufacturing level was flat," said Arnold Shindler, vice president and economist for Bankers Trust. "It's in-line with very mediocre kinds of orders that manufacturers are receiving."

And, he said, "demand is growing very slowly. I don't see that 0.4 percent is a real sign of strength."

Although July production rebounded from June's 0.4 percent downturn, Shindler said the manufacturing component was "just plodding along, just like the rest of the economy." It's not disastrous and it's not a real sign of strength.

But despite the weakness, "I don't think the Fed needs to or would like to take any further action," Shindler said. "They probably view it as a split decision" between Fed members who want more and those who think enough has been done.

"I don't think there are many people on the Fed who think that they haven't gone far enough," he said.

While the Fed will review its targets when the August jobs report is released, "our early guess is that it will be good enough to keep the Fed on hold for the rest of the year," Sorrentino said.

If the Fed does decide it needs to ease, it would prefer to "easier rather than later" to prevent the action from coming too close to the election, which could give the impression it favors President Bush, Sorrentino said.

Paul Lally, an economist with R.H. Wightson and Associates, Inc., said the gains in output and capacity utilization for electric utilities may be the result of seasonal adjustment factors not reflecting changes in production quickly enough.

Because the rise was concentrated in mining and utilities, and key sectors such as autos, trucks and auto parts declined, the gain was "superficial" and overall production is weak, Lally said.

Nevertheless, Lally called the increase "good news in an environment that's starved for good news."

Shiple maintained the economy was "in the midst of a recovery" despite the relatively weak output report.

"We believe that we have the makings for a substantial cyclical rebound," he said, but "it's not here today."

The report might have been slightly above expectations, but "it does not reflect stronger economic activity in any fundamental sense," said Joan Schneider, of Continental Bank NA, Chicago.

Schneider said, "the door is open for further Fed easing, but I don't expect it immediately."

She said the Fed might be facing the prospect that further rate cuts would do little to help the economy. Schneider said the report was "probably neutral for the market and sober for the economy."

Panhandle mine blames losses partly on drop in price of gold

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Coeur d'Alene Mines Corp. blamed falling gold prices, reduced silver production and lower interest rates for significant second-quarter and first-half losses.

But the Coeur d'Alene-based mining company said it lost less money during the first six months of 1992 than during the same period last year, even though this year's second-quarter net loss was bigger than in 1991.

The company this week reported a net loss of $906,000 for January through June 1992, or 6 cents per share, on total revenues of more than $28.75 million.

Last year's first-half net loss was almost $3.4 million, or 22 cents per share, on revenues of $33.3 million.

Coeur d'Alene's second-quarter 1992 net loss was $1.4 million, or 9 cents per share, on revenue of $14.6 million. The company had a net loss of $1.14 million, or 7 cents per share, on revenues of $16.2 million during the corresponding period last year.

It reported producing 29,012 ounces of gold and more than 3.45 million ounces of silver during the first six months of this year. Last year's first-half production was 27,612 ounces of gold and more than 3.6 million ounces of silver.

Economy's key: Jobless figures

NEW YORK (AP) — Some small but positive changes in the economy over the past few weeks suggest that a new and pricier picture might be developing.

John Cuniff Business analyst

These improvements don't change anyone's mind; they don't represent any sharp recovery and they don't suddenly lift the shroud draped over the outlook of economists or consumers.

But such things — low interest rates, for example, or shrinking jobless claims, a rise in manufacturers' hopes or repeated indications that inflation remains in check — add up and could become elements in a brighter future.

The change is gradual, almost imperceptible. No one would say you have become cloudy skies that you may even have stopped looking up. Then, one day, you become aware of shadows. Surprise: The sun is out again.

Such a change then builds momentum.

Economists raise their forecasts. Business assumes more risks. Consumers venture into the marketplace. Retailers feel safe in building inventories. Manufacturers strive to meet the demand.

Conceivably, but with a big "if," this could be the scenario over the next year or so. The "if" involves the job market. Without more jobs and job security, economists say, consumer markets aren't likely to strengthen.

Jobs are the biggest of the missing elements. Corporate employers continue on a slim-down diet, and they seek to grow healthier by shedding those in their way.

In the short-run, the diet has been successful.

The strength of corporate profits has surprised many Wall Street analysts, rising about 20 percent to 25 percent in the second quarter over the comparable quarter a year earlier.

Sales, however, have grown at a much slower pace — just 5 percent for the 30 large companies that make up the Dow Jones industrial average. That's what the diet has done for them: Greater output with fewer workers.

Obviously, such a diet reaches a point of diminishing returns. Perfectly automated consumer-product companies would be very efficient. But, since they would have few employees earning incomes, they would also have few customers.

If they are to have the money with which to buy goods, consumers must have jobs or other ways of participating in the benefits of production.

It is for this reason that economists warn that it will be harder in the future to achieve big gains in corporate earnings through dining. There is only so much to be gained by shrinking; eventually, the body must be rebuilt.

Profit gains now may require companies to build rather than shrink their operations. Sales must grow again, and to do so will mean more workers.

The employment statistics therefore may now be the clearest indicator of whether the economic picture will brighten or, instead, grow darker once again. Off all the missing elements, jobs may now be the most important.

Stock funds swoon but don't jump ship

Investors may have been spooked by last year's 20 percent decline. The average equity fund was up last year by more than 30 percent. But investors shouldn't count on those steady returns every year.

Historically, stock mutual funds have returned between 9 and 12 percent a year on average. But in the past five years, the average equity fund has returned only about 8 percent annually, says Lipper.

What should investors do? What they shouldn't do is chase last year's winners. Many investors are tempted to invest in health and biotech, small company growth firms and science and technology were among the leading investments in 1991. This year all these sectors are among the laggards.

Investment analysts recommend investing for the long term, despite years where those investments seem to be doing poorly.

They also recommend spreading investments around to include bonds, some CDs and keeping a portion of your money in stocks or stock mutual funds.

Sowberly says stock with growth companies for the long term investor will be satisfied with 10-12 percent average annual returns.

We may not see that this year, but America expects a slowly improving economy to continue its crawl out of recession through 1992.

Northwest real estate boom brings lenders along with it

SPOKANE (AP) — The booming real-estate market in Spokane and nearby northern Idaho is attracting not just buyers, but the companies that lend them money for mortgages.

Countrywide Funding Corp., of the nation's largest mortgage lender, opened a retail office in Spokane two weeks ago. A wholesale office opened last spring.

Imperial Mortgage Northwest, another multimillion-dollar residential mortgage lender based in Southern California, started business locally last week.

The value of those loan originated and financings soared in 1991 by more than 85 percent to $638 million.

Imperial brokers loans, taking them from banks and selling them to investors in the secondary market.

Potential investors are likewise flocking to Spokane, says John Erickson, chief executive officer of California Loans, Erickson said, but they brighten when the mix includes some made out of Portland, Ore., Bellevue or Spokane.

Erickson said Spokane declines and bankruptcies are increasing and the business estimate is increasing property values are
