For a few days in August All's fair in Gooding

By Suzanne Huxhold Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Behind the trailer that sells giant Elephant Ears and the FFA booth where everyone gathers for a cheeseburger before the rodeo; across from the Ferris wheel and the "Cator ride and the loop-de-loop that makes everyone woozy; and a little to the left of where the local equipment salesmen are hawking green choppers and calf chutes, stands a solid-looking but draftily white barn, pungent with the scent of cattle and resonant with the laughter of young children.

This is the livestock barn, where the heart of the Gooding County Fair beats to the tune of the steer judges' quirt and the sound of polished hooves, and where families like the Germans of Gooding wait to see whether six weeks of work will pay off in blue ribbons.

Jeff Walchly, right, watches some roping action in the Gooding County rodeo arena with his cattle dog, Tina. Walchly, an Idaho Falls steer wrestler, had some time to kill before performing in the Friday night rodeo.

They run errands for us," Danielle said with a laugh. "Yes, we're back down to being go-fers," Beverly said, while Kirk nodded his head in amused agreement. But when they're not busy bringing corn dogs and lemonade to the girls; they

TWIN FALLS — The Singing Bridge likely will close in late October or early November as work starts to replace the 72-year-old structure over Rock Creek Canyon.

"We plan for a year's construction, but it could be less depending on the contractor's schedule," Thomas said. He estimated a cost of $2 million to $2.5 million to replace the bridge.

They're off, running on election dash

By Tom Raum The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Once again, it's horse race. A week of Republican bashing has whittled Democrat Bill Clinton's once-formidable lead — in one poll to a statistical dead heat — and both parties have now focused their attack and their message.

President Bush's prime-time apology to the nation for his flip-flop on taxes, and his plan for an across-the-board tax cut in a second Bush term has ended the summer months of drift. It also gave Bush the chance to seize the initiative.

Analysis

It was a grudging gesture of respect from the not-so-loyal opposition that Bush, at least for the moment, had stolen back the spotlight.

The impression Bush strategists have sought to convey is that the president is the true agent of change and that Clinton is sick and unreliable.

Marshal slain in N. Idaho

The Associated Press

NAPLES — A U.S. deputy marshal was shot to death Friday as he and five others kept watch on a federal fugitive's mountaintop cabin, authorities said.

Six deputy marshals came under fire as they watched the fortress-like North Idaho home where authorities say Randy Weaver, 44, has lived in self-imposed exile since February 1991 when he failed to appear for trial on a federal weapons charge.

The dead man was identified as William F. Degan, 42, of Quincy, Mass., based in the marshals' Boston office, said Henry Hudson, director of the U.S. Marshals Service.

Federal agents said in March that Weaver had ties to the white supremacist organization Aryan Nations.

The other deputies were not hurt but were trapped on Ruby Ridge, 40 miles south of the Canadian border, the Marshals Service said.

Federal, state and local law enforcement officials were en route to rescue them, the agency said.

Naples is about 70 miles north of Coeur D'Alene.

Marshals Service spokesman Stephen Boyle said the deputies were only there to try to determine how many people might be inside the cabin and how difficult it might be for authorities to move closer.

It wasn't known if Weaver's wife or any of his four children were in the cabin, Boyle said from Washington, D.C.

Authorities have been watching the cabin on and off for the last year, Boyle said. The group that Degan was a part of had arrived at the cabin either Thursday or Friday, he said.

About 30 people living near Ruby Ridge were evacuated, Boundary County sheriff's deputy Lonnie Uskerson said.

Weaver was indicted in Boise in December 1990 on federal firearms charges for allegedly selling sawed-off shotguns to an undercover agent.

He was arrested by Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents, but authorities said he returned to his mountaintop cabin the following month after a federal magistrate released him on his own recognizance.

Federal agents knew Weaver was in the cabin but believed he and his family were heavily armed and did not want to provoke a confrontation by trying to arrest him.

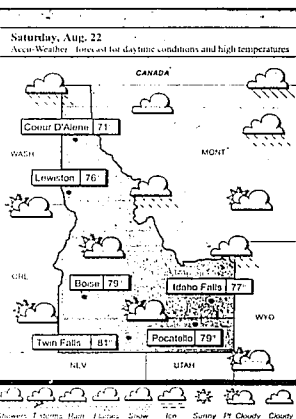

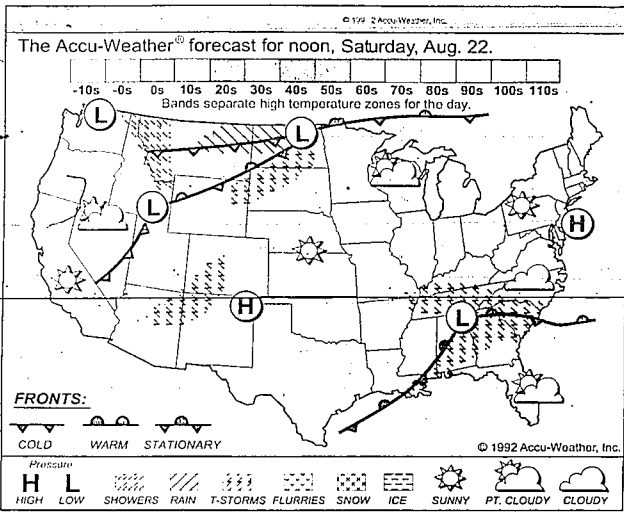

Weaver has said his exile would only end with the deaths of himself and his family or an admission by authorities that he was set up on the weapons charge.

"All they have against us is government-paid informants who can get on the stand and say anything they want," he said in an interview in May with the North Idaho News Network.

Northern Plains, Southeast bear brunt of storms

The Associated Press

Rain and storms were scattered across the Southeast and from the northern Rockies to the Great Lakes on Friday.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms, some associated with a stationary front curving through the Southeast, were scattered across the Gulf Coast states and Tennessee Valley to the southern Atlantic Coast.

Heavier rainfall totals for the six hours up to 8 a.m. EDT included 1.79 inches at Mary Esther, Fla., and 1.19 at Valparaiso, Fla., the National Weather Service said.

During the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT, heavier rainfall included 2.67 inches at Birmingham, Ala., and .86 inch at Valparaiso, Fla.

Thunderstorms in northeastern Florida produced strong wind which downed trees in parts of Jackson County, the weather service said.

Showers and thunderstorms developing along a stationary front in the north-central part of the nation were scattered from the northern Rockies through northeastern Colorado across the northern Plains to northwestern Wisconsin.

Strong afternoon thunderstorms in eastern South Dakota produced hail as big as golf balls at Woonsocket. During the six hours up to 2 p.m. EDT, Bowdle got 1.65 inches of rain, the weather service said.

Afternoon temperatures were only in the 60s from Montana across North Dakota and northern South Dakota to northern and central Minnesota and northwestern Wisconsin.

Allen worried about Farrow turning his children against him

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mia Farrow has kept Woody Allen from their children for weeks and he is afraid she has turned them against him, a spokesman for the actor-director said Friday.

"But he has continued to pay child support, as he feels any father should," said spokeswoman Leslee Dart.

Allen's younger sister, Letty Aronson, said one of her brother's two adopted children, 14-year-old Moses, refuses to speak to him.

Miss Farrow's alleged refusal to let Allen see the children follows news he is dating one of her adopted daughters, that he called her an unfit mother and sued for custody of his three children, and that he was accused of sexually molesting his adopted daughter, 7-year-old Dylan, an accusation he has denied.

The family has been raising cattle for six generations, starting with Kirk's family in Nampa in the last century. It isn't hard to see where Samantha, Danelle and Kindra, a blue-ribbon winner in her home state, come by their love of cattle, and their thirst for show-ring victory.

"Grandpa showed cattle when he was young," Kindra said, "and he taught his kids. Our older cousins all showed cattle, and as we grew up we just got into it."

The girls agreed that although wind-torn ribbons was a family tradition, it was the fun of the fair that keeps them coming back.

"The best part is when you get to miss school," Danelle said, a grin breaking over her face. "And it's great when you win prize money."

There were no prizes for Kindra's money, though. "Grandma quickly intercepted, "they'd have quit long ago."

Kindra said the long, hot, arduous days in the livestock barn daunt the trio not at all, and they spend their free time walking through the fair exhibits, reading, chatting with friends in their club — the Bliss Brush and Curry Club — and eating junk food.

"That's the funnest part," said Danelle.

So as Samantha sits, a bit forlorn but determined to be part of the family fun despite her hip-to-the-cause, Bob brushes her through the blower and fluffs the hair on one of Sam's heifers, and Danelle moves through the crush of the 1,000-pound animals as if they were no bigger or more imposing than a hunch of rabbits.

And despite the heat, the noise and the pressure of a family legacy, everyone is having the time of their lives.

"This is a good group of people to be around," Bob said. "Everyone is family oriented, not just us. That's why everyone is here."

had backed him into a corner and made him renge on his no-new-taxes. "Congress ate my homework."

Republicans have maintained a constant ridicule of Clinton for his lack of military and foreign-policy experience. Democrats have retaliated with ridicule of the Bush record and made fun of Vice President Dan Quayle.

Both parties have been guilty of exaggeration in laying out the basic tenets of their respective campaigns.

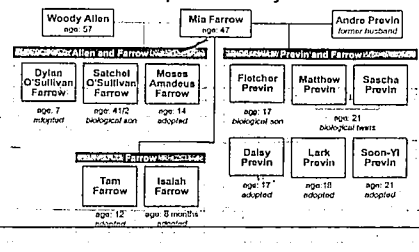

And now it's up to the voters to sort things out over the next two-and-a-half months.

"You've got two different theatrical plays from the two different conventions," said James David Barber, a Duke University political scientist. "One suggests that there's very heavy trouble around the world and in the United States and the other sees wonderful stuff around the world and here."

"What Bush did was what other incumbents have done in the past running for office — if there's anything good, claiming credit for that, especially overseas. And, if there's anything bad, neglecting it."

The harsh tone of Bush's convention speech — no more kinder and gentler, he — and the steady stream of attacks on Clinton investigation, but refused to elaborate.

Dart said she believes Miss Farrow sent Moses to speak to the news media. "I don't believe for a moment these are Moses' ideas or words," she said.

Daisy Previn, 17, said she, too, believed Allen had molested her younger sister. "I believe he's sick and could do something like that," she said.

But talk show host Dick Cavett, a long-time friend of Allen's, said "not for one millisecond" does he believe the sex abuse allegations.

"If Woody Allen's a child molester, I will publicly kiss Pat Buchanan," he said. "Things like this don't suddenly crop in middle-aged men."

Cavett said he had a long conversation with Allen several days ago. "He sounds remarkably OK," considering the events of recent days, Cavett said.

Allen, meanwhile, stayed in his apartment on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue with Miss Previn Friday while news people camped outside.

Miss Previn is the adopted daughter of Miss Farrow and her ex-husband, conductor Andre Previn. A Korean orphan, she has no birth certificate, and her age has been variously reported as somewhere between 19 and 21.

A spokesman for Miss Farrow, Gary Springer, said the actress was also unavailable for comment.

Miss Previn is expected to return to Rider College next week in Lawrence, N.J., for her final week of summer classes, said Kathleen Douglass, resident director of Lincoln Hall dormitory, where she has lived in a suite with five other students attending summer session.

and his wife Hillary from speaker after speaker points to a down and dirty campaign ahead.

"There will be a lot of fireworks in this campaign," Bush's outgoing chief of staff Samuel Skinner said on Friday.

He expressed satisfaction that Republicans had upped the decibel level and raised the ante.

"Everything's gone well. Everybody needed this shot in the arm," he said.

Skinner is becoming general chairman of the Republican National Committee in a changing-of-the-guard that brings James A. Baker III to the White House on Monday.

Republicans cheered Baker's long-awaited arrival, suggesting that the well-respected secretary of state and long-time master political operative could bring order to a campaign that was widely viewed in disarray.

As most strategists had predicted, GOP convention week took its toll on Clinton's lead.

A CBS News-New York Times poll conducted Thursday night and released Friday found Clinton and Gore ahead of Bush and Quayle 48 percent to 46 percent. The telephone survey carried a margin of error of plus or minus four percentage points. That was close enough to be considered a statistical dead heat.

The state tried to find a buyer for the old steel bridge but had no luck, so the lead paint from the beams will be removed and the steel will be recycled, he said.

Clinton 'wishy-washy,' declares President Bush

The Associated Press

President Bush, hurrying to the South to shore up his political base, derided Democrat Bill Clinton on Friday as a "wishy-washy" leader who was reluctant to support the Persian Gulf War.

Clinton charged that Bush's new pledge of tax cuts next year was as hollow as his broken no-new-tax promise.

One day after the close of the Republican National Convention, the candidates traded heated blows in a 74-day countdown to Election Day.

"Don't bet against us in November. Bush is taking thousands of cheering people in Gulfport, Miss., where gambling was recently legalized. "We are going to win this election."

Bush, with momentum from the convention, had narrowed Clinton's lead to around 12 points in three new public opinion polls.

Clinton, meanwhile, campaigned in Detroit before a weekend bus trip through Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York. "George Bush is a lot more interested in beating me than helping you," the Democratic nominee said.

Taking aim at Bush's call for across-the-board tax cuts next year, matched by equal cuts in federal spending, Clinton called them "A fool's gold of an across-the-board tax cut ... These promises, too, are false and they, too, will betray us," Clinton said in a speech to the Detroit Economic Club.

Bush, accompanied by Vice President Dan Quayle on a sweltering outdoor rally in Gulfport, did not even mention his tax-cut proposal. Instead, he criticized Clinton's economic renewal program, calling it "Elvis Economics," that would send Americans to the "Heartbreak Hotel."

Though silent on his tax proposals, Bush mentioned, in two sentences, his plan that would allow taxpayers to check off a box on tax returns to mandate reductions in the national debt. The reductions would have to be matched by spending cuts.

Four months ago, however, the Bush administration opposed such a proposal, arguing that allowing taxpayers to decide how their taxes would be spent would result in "several competing governments ... trying to serve separate constituencies."

Terrill Hyde, tax legislative counsel for the Treasury Department, told a congressional committee in

Candidates' economic plans

The Associated Press

SPENDING

Here is a comparison of the economic proposals President Bush offered Thursday and similar points from Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton's plan:

TAXES

Bush proposed cutting taxes across the board, but provided little detail. He said he would seek to slash the capital gains tax paid on property sales — a longtime Bush chestnut — and to increase the personal exemption for income taxes.

Clinton has proposed $150 billion worth of tax increases over four years, largely for the rich and foreign corporations. He would grant tax breaks to the middle-class averaging $300 a year for families. He also would increase the earned income tax credit for the working poor, and provide an investment tax credit for new plants and equipment.

The White House said Bush would slow the growth of spending on expensive but popular benefit programs, such programs as Medicare and Medicaid. Bush wants Congress to grant him the power to veto specific line items in the budget, a proposal law makers have consistently resisted as a diminution of legislative power.

Clinton has proposed almost no cuts in benefit programs. To boost the economy, he wants the government to spend an extra $20 billion for road-building, education, job training and other programs.

DEFICIT REDUCTION

Bush would let taxpayers assign part of their taxes to reducing the deficit, which would simultaneously reduce federal spending.

Clinton aims at halving the $73 billion federal shortfall by 1996, relying heavily on economic growth and defense cuts.

May that "no taxpayer ... should have a direct say over the way the government spends their tax dollars, and I oppose that," he said.

Asked by reporters for details of his across-the-board tax cut, which he described in only a few sentences Thursday night, Bush said, "It's a very simple plan — what you do is tax people less and the government spends less."

Gulport's community relies heavily on defense spending, and Bush lashed out at Clinton on the Gulf War. "Two days after Congress voted to follow my lead (for a military show-down) my opponent said this ... 'I guess I would have voted with the majority if it was a close vote but I agree with the arguments of the minority.'"

"What kind of message would that send to a man like Saddam Hussein. You talk about wishy-washy indecision that is offered by both my opponent and the gridlock Congress. They are one and the same," Bush said.

Clinton, kicking off another bus trip, answered four days of GOP claims that their party stands for family values while the Democrats are morally adrift.

The test of family values is not whether Al Gore and I love our wives and children more than George Bush and Dan Quayle do," said Clinton, "but whether we get up every day worrying about your children and their future."

In Toledo, Ohio, Gore questioned Bush's credibility in promising a tax cut when the president broke his 1988 pledge of "no new taxes." "Who does he think we are?" Gore asked. "Does he think we'll believe anything? I waited on him to promise to make all streets run down hill."

Promising to follow the tradition of Harry Truman, Bush said he would campaign against individual congressmen who have stood in the way of his proposals.

He said he would go to specific congressional districts and tell voters "you have the worst congressman that you know. You think he's a nice guy but he's terrible because here's what he's doing on the crime bill, on energy, on education or health reform."

Aid to Iraqi children

U.S. threatens China with tariffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration announced Friday a list of $3.9 billion in Chinese imports that may be subject to "prohibitive tariffs" if the Beijing government doesn't remove what the United States calls trade barriers.

"No one wants a trade war," said Deputy U.S. Trade Representative Michael J. Moskowitz. But he added, the administration "is prepared to move forward" if agreement is not reached by Oct. 10.

Moskowitz described the import list as "the largest of its kind ever published" by the government. He told a news briefing that tariffs could be imposed "equalling 100 percent of the value of the imported goods. Tariffs now average 4 percent to 5 percent."

The list includes agricultural and industrial products such as footwear, silk apparel, leather goods, minerals, industrial hardware and electronics goods.

China, a major supplier of U.S. footwear, exported $19 billion in goods to the United States last year, which resulted in a $12.7 billion trade surplus. For the first six months of 1992, the surplus totaled $7.2 billion.

"If China is to continue to enjoy full access to U.S. markets, then it must play by the rules of the international community and allow access to its markets," Trade Representative Carla Hills said in a statement from Houston, where she had attended the Republican National Convention.

"To do less will not only jeopardize its access to our market, it will fall far short of what GATT will demand of China as a ticket for membership," she said.

Hurricane possible

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Andrew could build into the first hurricane of the Atlantic season by Saturday afternoon but it posed no immediate danger on its path far east of the Bahamas, forecasters said.

"There's no problem through the weekend as far as U.S. interests are concerned," said forecaster Alan Mayfield at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables. "We're going to get through the weekend here with no problem."

Top winds were steady Friday morning at 60 mph.

Deficit eliminates recent surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal deficit totaled $44.6 billion in July, wiping out an unusual surplus a month earlier, the Treasury reported Friday.

The gap was 9.2 percent larger than the $40.8 billion in red ink in July 1991 and contrasted with a $3.8 billion surplus in June. The black ink in June had been attributed to quarterly tax payments.

The July deficit boosted the imbalance so far in the fiscal year that will end Sept. 30 to $272.3 billion, compared to $218.3 billion at the end of the first 10 months of fiscal 1991.

Last month, the Bush administration forecast a deficit of $333.5 billion for this fiscal year. It said it had lowered its January forecast of $399.7 billion and Congress failed to act on additional money for the savings and loan bailout.

Still, the deficit would set a record if the forecast were realized. The previous high was $269.5 billion in fiscal 1991.

Revenues so far this year totaled $894.6 billion, up 3 percent from the $865.5 billion raised in the first 10 months of 1991. But spending jumped 7.3 percent to $1.17 trillion. The deficit is the difference between income and spending.

For the month, revenues totaled $79.1 billion, down from $120.9 billion in June. Revenues totaled $78.6 billion in July 1991.

Spending in July reached $123.7 billion, up from $117.1 billion a month earlier. Outlays in July 1991 totaled $119.4 billion.

Military spending taxes last month contributed $35.1 billion to government revenues, down from $38.4 billion during the same month of 1991. Corporate taxes totaled $2.7 billion, up from $1.8 billion in July 1991.

The Resolution Trust Corp., the agency charged with the S&L bailout, helped curb the red ink in July. It had net income of $486 million last month and $2.9 billion so far this year from selling the assets of failed thrifts.

The RTC had spent $32.6 billion more than it received at this time in 1991.

Once again, the biggest spending categories were the military, Social Security and other programs of the Department of Health and Human Services and interest on the national debt.

Military spending totaled $29.2 billion in July and $241.2 billion so far this year.

No verdict reached

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal jury deliberated for seven hours Friday without reaching a verdict in the criminal trial of Clair George, the former CIA spy chief charged with covering up the Iran-Contra affair.

Assistant Attorney General Paul Maggino recommended the sentence-in-exchange for Randall's testimony to convict Patrick Smart, 25, who is serving life without parole for arranging her husband's murder on May 1, 1990.

The former high school media coordinator was convicted last year of goading William Flynn, her lover, into killing her husband at the couple's townhouse in Derry.

Teen-ager receives 28 to life in Smart murder trial

EXETER, N.H. (AP) — A teenager depicted as a cold-blooded killer during the trial of a high school instructor who orchestrated her husband's slaying, wept at his sentencing Friday as he apologized to the victim's parents.

"I know you'll never forgive me. I can say I'm sorry 'til the end of the world, but I am truly sorry for what happened," Patrick Randall, 18, said as he faced Bill and Judy Smart, parents of Gregory Smart.

He was sentenced in Rockingham County Superior Court to 28 years to life on a charge of being an accomplice to second-degree murder in Smart's slaying. Under New Hampshire law, he must serve at least the minimum sentence of 28 years, but he was given credit for 802 days served in jail.

Unfounded molestation charges often used in custody battles

The Associated Press

Wood; Allen, mired in a public hell over anything encountered by his angst-ridden novice characters, was correct when he said allegations of sex abuse are being made more often in custody battles.

But child psychologists, experts, without putting public innocence in the Allen Mia Farrow mold, say the number of false allegations is also increasing as a scheme to win custody.

The charge is known as "the ultimate weapon."

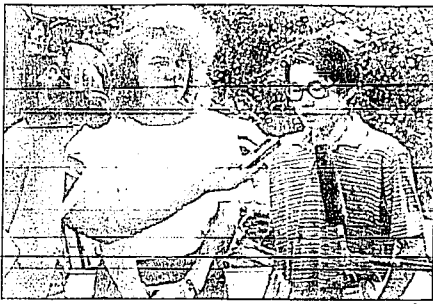

"The frequency of allegations is going up, frankly, because it works. It's almost a pretty well proven innocent," said Dr. Ralph Underwager of the Institute for Psychological Therapies in Northfield, Minn.

"A charge of sex abuse is the most powerful thing you can do in a custody fight to destroy the person you're most angry at," he said. "It's been called the nuclear bomb of custody fights."

Dr. Richard Gardner, professor of child psychiatry at Columbia University, said charges of sex abuse cannot be ignored because the crime is so horrible. But the number of false allegations has grown in the last 10 years, he said.

"It's been the point of hysteria. It's a very convenient way for a person to destroy the other," said Gardner, author of a book titled "Sex Abuse Hysteria." Salem Witch Dr. L. Revonator.

According to estimates, the charge is raised in 5 percent of child custody cases. A 1988 study by the Association of Family and Conciliation Courts said the charges are probably false one-third of the time. A number of custody fights are settled before they reach a judge, and others are dropped before they are litigated.

Moses Provin speaks briefly to the press Thursday.

"Clearly, in an adversarial situation of a custody dispute, raising a sex abuse allegation can be a tool or strategy," said Judith Weiner, a divorce mediator in White Plains, N.Y.

In 1990, in a report to the American Psychological Association, Underwager said 75 percent of the accusers making charges of sex abuse in child custody cases have severe personality disorders.

"An angry partner can completely ruin someone's life," he said. "The system is so biased in favor of the accuser, the accused should simply take a bus to prison, walk to the gate and turn himself in."

"Woody Allen is going to be destroyed. No matter what he does, he's never going to recover. In effect, he's done."

The abuse allegation came in a sensational, week-long exchange of vicious charges and counter charges.

It began when Allen, unable to reach agreement with his five-year-old son, filed for custody of a biological son and two adopted children he shared with Miss Farrow.

Since then, the 56-year-old comic confessed he is involved in a love affair with his ex-lover's daughter, Soon-Yi Farrow Previn, a Korean orphan who is believed to be 21.

Mia Farrow, formerly married to Andre Previn and Frank Sinatra, split with Allen when she found nude pictures of Miss Previn in Allen's apartment Jan. 13, Miss Farrow's mother, Maureen O'Sullivan, called Allen "evil."

Then, Miss Farrow accused Allen of molesting her 7-year-old adopted daughter, Dylan, and said she had a videotape of the child describing what happened. Connecticut authorities said they are investigating child abuse allegations. Two of Farrow's other 11 children say they believe Dylan.

Allen called the charges "totally false and outrageous," saying Miss Farrow manufactured them as a way to get him to pay a $7 million settlement. Miss Farrow's lawyers denied shaking down Allen.

In a rare public statement, Allen said injecting charges of child abuse "is a currently popular though heinous card" in custody battles.

Allen's lawyer said the actor-director passed a lie detector test.

Still, the charge is more devastating than anything in make-believe. "He's lumpy Dumpty now," said Dr. Melvin Guyer, professor of psychiatry at the University of Michigan and a practicing lawyer.

"He's been pushed off the wall. You can't put Mr. Allen back together again. He'll never be able to persuade everyone he didn't do it."

"We call it the ultimate weapon in child custody cases because it makes the custody issue almost moot," he said. "It's like the Salem witch trials, when the accused had to prove they weren't witches."

Guyer also said red flags should be raised about the timing of an allegation, whether it comes at the start or in the middle of a custody fight.

In an article this summer in Family Law Quarterly, a publication of the American Bar Association, Guyer said he had seen hundreds of cases with "dreary regularity" when children become pawns in an adult war.

"It's not about custody," he said. "It's about the rage between former lovers. That's what drives these cases."

In another celebrated case, Dr. Eric Foretich of Falls Church, Va., has been unable to see his daughter, Hilary, since 1984 after her mother, Dr. Elizabeth Morgan, charged him with molesting the child.

The charges, raised in a bitter custody fight, were never proven in court and denied by Foretich, who said he took and passed a lie detector test.

Morgan spent 25 months in jail on civil contempt charges rather than reveal the whereabouts of her daughter, and she is now living with her in New Zealand.

Earthquake strikes coast of South Carolina

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A moderate earthquake rattled the South Carolina coast Friday and was felt more than 100 miles away in Georgia.

There were no immediate reports of injuries or damage.

The earthquake measured 4.1 on the Richter scale and was centered about 20 miles north-northwest of Charleston, said the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo. It struck at 12:32 p.m.

It felt like somebody was trying to pull the trailer off the lot," said Bob Gibbons, chief of South Carolina's state police. "The house and the ground shook and there was a loud boom," said Gary Richardson, in nearby Ladson.

The loud noise sometimes accompanies earthquakes that are not too deep in the ground, said Bob Gibbons, earthquake specialist with South Carolina Emergency Preparedness.

The quake, felt as far away as Augusta, Ga., some 140 miles away, was near the epicenter of the great 1886 Charleston earthquake.

Sodium in soup to be reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Campbell Soup Co. has promised to state the sodium content of its soups, as well as the recommended maximum daily intake of sodium, in most advertisements that mention heart disease, the Federal Trade Commission announced Friday.

The FTC accused Campbell in 1989 of largely hiding the low-fat, low-cholesterol content of most of its soups to a reduced risk of some types of heart disease. The ad failed to mention that the soups were high in sodium, the FTC said.

That's the final consent order, any future Campbell's ads about soups containing more than 500 milligrams of sodium must state the soups' sodium content and the sodium guideline if they mention heart disease, the FTC said.

Campbell cannot imply that there is a connection between soup and reduced risk of heart disease unless it has supporting scientific or medical evidence, the FTC said.

Judge reconsiders his decision on worker's compensation records

BOISE (AP) — Fourth District Judge George Carey is reconsidering his initial decision that Idaho worker's compensation records are private documents and not available to two companies hoping to market them for profit.

Carey took the issue under review for a second time on Friday after 30 minutes of additional arguments from attorneys representing worker's compensation claimants hoping to keep the information confidential and the companies that workers say want the records only so employers can "blacklist" them.

Avert Inc. of Fort Collins, Colo., and DAC Services of Tulsa, Okla., have asked for personal information, including the types of injuries and the compensation and benefits paid, to all claimants under Idaho's Worker's Compensation program from mid-1985 through last June.

The companies intend to sell the information to businesses investigating the employment history of job applicants.

But John Greenfield, who represents a group of claimants, contends the records are confidential under the state's open meetings law, the new federal Americans with Disabilities Act and the state human rights law.

Brad Miller, representing Avert and DAC, contended the information the companies want is not covered by those laws because it does not include specifically closed medical files or because neither company is an employer precluded from seeking the information under anti-discrimination laws.

"We're not asking for what kind of treatment has been provided," Miller told Carey. "All we're seeking is basic information that can generally be gleaned from the notice of injury and claim for benefits."

But Greenfield said the request included specific information on the injuries themselves "and if that's not medical, I don't know what it is."

As far as Avert and DAC not being employers specifically covered by laws prohibiting questions of job applicants about past work injuries, Greenfield said, "They serve employers. They get this information and sell it to employers. What the employers do with it, the discriminate."

In 1991, Carey blocked release of the records, rejecting the companies' claims that they were public documents concerning the operations of the worker's compensation program and access to them was a justified business necessity.

But this spring, in agreeing to reconsider the ruling, Carey said he believed his original order incorrectly held that the requested records did not relate to the conduct and administration of the public business.

At the same time, however, Carey said the information could be confidential under exceptions to the open meetings law or the federal act prohibiting discrimination against the disabled.

There was no indication when he would rule again.

Madison schools fight prayer suit

REXBURG — Madison School officials will continue to fight a 2-year-old lawsuit filed against them over prayer in schools.

The School Board also will develop a formal policy concerning graduations, said Scott Maroz, who represents the district.

The American Civil Liberties Union sued the district on behalf of two REXBURG families who claimed their civil rights were violated because of prayer at school activities. The families asked not be named because they feared reprisals from the mostly Mormon community, court records state.

Idaho Falls youth faces murder trial

IDAHO FALLS — An Idaho Falls youth charged with murder in a shootout that killed 15-year-old Jessica Flitton will go to trial, Magistrate Keith Walker has ruled.

"This is a sad commentary on the effects on young people of alcohol and running around all night," Walker said Friday.

Jason Sorenson will enter pleas to charges of second-degree murder and aggravated battery before Judge Ted Wood on Sept. 1.

He is accused of firing a .22-caliber bullet that struck Flitton in the heart as she sat in a Chevrolet Camaro.

Manuel Hernandez, 19, and Ascension Labra, 17, also will plead at the time Sorenson does. Hernandez is charged with aggravated assault and misdemeanor battery and Labra with aggravated assault.

New U of I dean is Idaho native

MOSCOW — The University of Idaho has hired an Idaho native as the dean of the College of Art and Architecture.

Paul G. Windley, associate dean for academic affairs at the College of Architecture and Design at Kansas State University, has been appointed. His hiring will be considered next month by the state Board of Education.

Windley's annual salary would be $80,000, $24,500 more than the last permanent dean, Paul Blanton, who resigned in 1989.

"I am very impressed with Dr. Windley's experience at a major land-grant university," said U of I Provost Thomas Bell. "He is committed to excellence in teaching, understands and has experience developing funding opportunities and helping faculty set research agendas."

Idaho Falls Council OKs hydro plan

IDAHO FALLS — Despite an emotional plea to abandon plans for a hydroelectric project on the Snake River near Shelley, the Idaho Falls City Council unanimously approved a new budget that includes $250,000 for the project.

Shawna Wardell, president of the Save Our Snake group, tearfully pleaded with the council Thursday not to destroy one of the last free-flowing stretches of river for a 10.3-megawatt power plant.

Merger not popular with faculty

LEWISTON (AP) — The president of the Idaho Board of Education thinks a study should be done on merging administrative functions at Lewis-Clark State College and the University of Idaho just 35 miles away.

Lewis-Clark faculty members don't think much of the idea.

M. Karl Shurdiff, Boise lawyer, suggested studying consolidating financial, personnel, purchasing and other administrative functions at the schools. He insisted he wants the college's mission to stay the same.

"He doesn't understand you can't have a university with graduate research programs running a four-year college without research programs," said Gerald Baker, biology professor. "The interests conflict. Obviously, the stepchild would get neglected."

Mary Anne Dolen, LCSC nursing division chairwoman, said consolidation has been tried before and didn't work.

"There were calls from almost the time the Lewiston school opened (in 1893) for merger," said Keith Petersen, author of a new book about LCSC.

After being closed from 1951 until 1955, Lewis-Clark Normal School reopened as a two-year branch of the UI because Lewiston-area lawmakers believed their colleagues would support the Lewiston college that way, he said.

This "uneasy alliance" ended in 1963 because neither institution had its heart in the merger, Petersen said.

Gerry Ramey, president of LCSC's American Association of University Professors chapter, said he doesn't want anyone to lessen the four-year college's status.

California firefighters watch the Fountain Fire burn toward them early Friday morning.

California blaze jumps in size; crews control fire farther south

ROUND MOUNTAIN, Calif. (AP) — A fire mushroomed to 12,000 acres Friday after devastating a small town, just as fire crews got the upper hand on a treacherous blaze 250 miles away that had raged out of control for six days.

The fire season was in full throttle, taxing firefighting resources to the limit. The two fires over rugged terrain in Northern California have driven some 16,000 people from their homes and caused millions of dollars in damage.

Firefighters also were at work in parts of Oregon and Utah.

Several smaller fires burned unchecked elsewhere in Northern California.

Almost 1,000 firefighters battled Shasta County's 12,000-acre Fountain fire, which sped northeastward after sweeping through Round Mountain, a town of 810 residents,

Up to 60 structures in the town were destroyed by the flames.

"It looked like a combination of a jet engine and a hurricane," said Walt Caldwell, who saw the fire explode in dimension Thursday night.

On Friday, the fire was headed toward a lightly populated area of Shasta National Forest, although the small town of Montgomery Creek was ordered evacuated when the wind shifted in its direction.

Between 1,000 and 2,000 people fled Thursday from Round Mountain and scattered homes in the area, located in rugged country some 30 miles northeast of Redding, said Al Owen of the California Department of Forestry.

Everything in Round Mountain was black except for a few patches of green.

Nancy Willard, standing at a roadblock a few miles from the devastated town, said her "home" was gone. All that remained was the chimney, an outbuilding, a dog house and her 2-year-old cat, Thing II, who sported charred whiskers and several patches of singed grey fur. A second cat was missing.

Willard and her husband, Rick, said they had chosen their home for its natural beauty and would rebuild.

Dealing with the aftermath of the blaze "gives you a chance to find out what you're made of," she said.

At least one team fighting that blaze had come from the Old Gulch fire in Calaveras County, about 250 miles to the south, where firefighters had taken control of a six-day-old fire in the historic Gold Rush area, said forestry department volunteer Kathy Russell.

About 3,650 firefighters were still assigned to that fire, down from a peak of 4,000 the day before, Russell said.

Charge against woman is 1st of kind in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — In what lawyers say is a first for Idaho, a Boise woman has been charged with rape and failure to report child abuse.

Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Jean Fisher said a grand jury indicted Korene Lee Wolfe, 38, even though she didn't take part in the act. The indictment alleged Wolfe aided the rape by failing to report it to police.

Her husband, Howard Wolfe, was charged in May with two counts of lewd conduct with a minor, one count of infamous crime against nature and one count of rape.

Prosecutors said the alleged abuse started in 1987.

Korene Wolfe is charged with rape because Idaho law makes no distinction between aiding and committing. Fisher and another prosecutor said the rape charge against Korene Wolfe is unusual.

"It is a creative charge. We felt we needed to do it because the crime was so blatant," said Fisher, who spent three months doing legal research on the case.

"If they've got their legal research done, I would hope they're on solid ground," said LaMont Anderson, a prosecutor with the state attorney general's office.

Pocatello Council approves buildings

POCATELLO (AP) — The City Council has voted to move ahead with plans for a new library and combination city hall-police station.

The city must still negotiate a possible lease extension for the current city hall with West One Bank, and Mayor Peter Armstrong said the council's action on Thursday simply puts "everything into motion, including nailing down costs and when construction could get under way."

The project calls for a $2.1 million, 32,000-square-foot library and a $3.1 million city hall-police complex a block from the current municipal building.

It will be financed through court-issued certificates of participation and private fund-raising.

China, S. Korea to establish relations

SEOUL, South Korea - South Korea and China will establish relations next week, sources said Friday, a move that likely will also move the South and its rival, Communist North Korea, closer together.

China for decades has been a staunch ally of the North, while the United States has been the South's leading backer.

A formal announcement of South Korea's and China's intentions was expected to be made simultaneously in Beijing and Seoul at 10 a.m. Saturday (10 p.m. EDT Friday), the sources told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Beijing would not comment. It was not immediately clear whether Beijing-Seoul ties would sever Seoul's ties with Taiwan. South Korea is the only Asian nation that recognizes Taiwan, but China has never established ties with a nation that has kept relations with Taipei.

Yeltsin says not to fear another coup

MOSCOW - President Boris N. Yeltsin, speaking on the first anniversary of the failed Communist coup, told his compatriots Friday they face a hard winter but should not fear another attempt to topple the government.

"There will not be a putsch-2," he told a nationally televised news conference.

Opponents of reform, he said, do not have broad support among the people, who "want to revitalize Russia. They do not want to be downtrodden and humiliated, as they have been for decades."

The harvest this year is better than last, easing the pain of reform, Yeltsin said, and privatizing many factories and businesses will prove that progress has been made.

Mortar shells kill at least 6 in Sarajevo

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina - Three mortar shells slammed into Sarajevo's main boulevard Friday, killing at least six people trying to find bread and water after some of the heaviest shelling in weeks.

In the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade, Prime Minister Milan Panic renewed his efforts to get United Nations sanctions lifted, promising to cooperate with the world body. The sanctions were imposed nearly three months ago to punish Serbia for its role in fomenting violence in Bosnia.

Meanwhile, Britain's Foreign Office said Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic will attend next week's peace conference in London. Milosevic is a hard-liner accused of backing ethnic Serb rebels in Bosnia who want to remain linked to Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Pro-government forces seize hilltop

KABUL, Afghanistan - Pro-government security forces claimed Friday they had captured the high ground from dissident rebels who have terrorized the city nearly two weeks.

Military officers backing the 3-month-old Islamic government said they had seized control of a strategic hilltop a few miles south of Kabul from the Hezb-e-Islami faction of renegade rebel chief Gulbuddin Hekmatyar.

But that didn't stop the deadly rockets. One missile crashed into the downtown Kabul Hotel, killing at least one person and engulfing the building in flames.

The hill has changed hands at least twice this week, and there was no way to independently confirm the officers' claim.

3 drown in river during baptism

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - A pastor and two members of his congregation drowned when they were washed away by a river during a baptism, police said.

The bodies of the three were found by police divers Thursday afternoon, a few hours after the accident in the Vaal River between Vanderbijlpark and Sasolburg, south of Johannesburg.

Chinese police detain prisoner's wife

BEIJING - Police detained the wife of a prominent political prisoner after she threatened to stage a demonstration, a Chinese source said Friday.

Hou Xiaotian, whose husband, Wang Juntao, is serving a 13-year term for his role in the 1989 democracy movement, had not been seen since going into a meeting Thursday with government officials.

U.S. begins airlift to starving Somalis

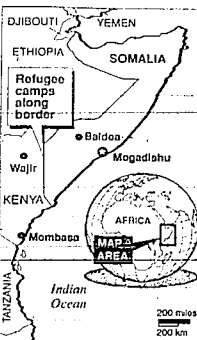

MOMBASA, Kenya (AP) - The United States began airlifting food to the starving Horn of Africa on Friday after Kenya lifted a brief ban on use of its airspace by American military planes.

The new American push comes as officials warned that half of the children in Somalia risk death from starvation because of drought and war in the eastern African nation. Thousands of people, mostly the very young and old, are said to be dying daily in what has been described as the world's worst humanitarian crisis.

The United Nations says another 1.5 million to 2 million Somalis will die unless food reaches them soon, a catastrophe of a scale not seen since the Ethiopian famine of the mid-1980s.

But the drought has not respected borders, and tens of thousands of Kenyans living in the country's arid northeast are also suffering and dying.

The first C-130 Hercules cargo plane, carrying 102 tons of split peas for both Kenyans and Somalis, lifted off from its temporary base at this Indian Ocean port city's international airport. It arrived later in the northeastern Kenyan town of Wajir, an administrative center for Kenya's border region.

darkness to get the C-130 loaded for its flight to Wajir. When it finally lifted off, American cargo handlers on the airstrip cheered.

"One down and 2,000 to go," said one servicemen.

Kenya had accused the United States of flying its cargo planes into Mombasa without its permission and late Thursday withdrew flight clearances for the American aircraft. It also claimed in a statement that the United States was conducting an "uncoordinated" operation and planned to use American troops to distribute the food, bypassing Kenyan and international aid agencies.

U.S. Embassy spokesman T.J. Dowling denied each accusation.

"We did have prior permission to land at Mombasa," he said Friday. "This is not an uncoordinated operation."

The government lifted the flight ban after U.S. Ambassador Smith Hempstone and Marine Brig. Gen. Frank Libutti, commander of the airlift, met with President Daniel arap Moi and his foreign minister Friday morning.

The foreign minister, Wilson Ndolo Ayah, told a news conference later that the ban had stemmed from a misunderstanding, not a disagreement.

"This was a complex effort organized on short notice, and some details were not adequately worked out in advance," he said.

Relations between Nairobi and Washington have been chilly since Hempstone's arrival three years ago with a mission to link U.S. aid to Kenya's policies on human rights, democracy and corruption.

Kenya's record is poor in each area, and the United States, as well as some other Western nations, has cut all but humanitarian aid. Kenya has accused Hempstone of racism and interference in its internal affairs.

At Wajir, the C-130 was unloaded at a military airstrip. The food was to be trucked to refugee camps on or near the Kenya-Somalia border and distributed to local residents.

Before the food arrived, another American C-130 flew into Wajir with 16 U.S. soldiers, an electrical generator, communications gear and other equipment. They set up a ground-to-air radio link to direct future flights.

Libutti, the Huntington, N.Y., native heading the airlift, said it eventually would involve about 750 American servicemen and women, including 70 Green Berets from Fort Campbell, Ky.

Delegate: Bush speech invigorates campaign

HOUSTON — President Bush's acceptance speech Thursday night re-established his status as a leader and will reburied his campaign's momentum, delegate Cindy Moyle of Burley said Friday.

"He was displaying his leadership ability, his insight into the future, and an understanding of the problems we face as small business people and ranchers," said Moyle, who co-chaired Idaho's delegation to the Republican National Convention.

After the convention ended, Moyle was sworn in as a Republican national committeewoman, a position to which she was elected at the state GOP convention in Idaho Falls.

Jerome church makes plans to serve meals to homeless

JEROME — A soup kitchen for the homeless and hungry is planned for the Jerome area.

The Christian Bible Church, at 126 West 1st St., hopes to start serving meals Oct. 1. Inspections and approvals from Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, the Jerome Planning and Zoning Commission, the Jerome Fire Department and Idaho Food Bank will be required before the kitchen can be opened, Sherry Cochran, coordinator, said.

Meals will be served Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 5 to 7 p.m. Barbara Coonce and Cochran will serve as cooks.

Donations of a storm door and linoleum have been received from Volco, Inc. Jerome Lumber gave a needed wash basin and Steve Amen of Jerome gave $35. Cochran said. Donations and labor are needed to bring the basement dining area up to code, she said.

"This isn't going to stop with meals. We're going to get a bigger building and have showers, washers, dryers and put clean clothes on these people. We'll develop a buddy system to help them get jobs. We may even be able to give them shelter," Cochran said.

Donations and volunteers are needed from all walks of life, she said. For further information, call 324-3973 or 324-7696.

New Jerome elementary receives official go-ahead

JEROME — Specifications for a new elementary school in Jerome have received final approval and a bid opening date set.

A meeting of school officials and architects from the Leatham & Krohn firm in Boise met Monday to review the final drawings of the 28-classroom school.

They set Sept. 1 at 11 a.m. for a preliminary conference with potential contractors and Sept. 10 to open bids. The bid opening date "should allow enough time to assure the school will be built in time for beginning of the 1993 school year," Superintendent Will Brown said.

The school will house about 600 students in grades one through five. Teachers' rooms, a computer room, media center, multi-purpose room, cafeteria, conference rooms and a special education room will be included in the building.

State agencies combine for fire information line

BOISE — The fire season is upon us and the state wants to help you drive through it.

Several agencies have put their heads together and are offering a toll-free number, 1-800-625-7820, that travelers can call for up-to-date information on travel conditions near wildfires. Information is updated daily and the number is available 24 hours a day.

Callers will receive information on road closures and places where major fires putting a damper on travel are located by pushing 3 on touch-tone phones to access "current travel conditions."

The number is part of a cooperative service offered by the Idaho Recreation and Tourism Initiative, a consortium of several U.S. and Idaho government agencies.

Landfill draws opposition from residents near Filer South Hills fire takes off

By Phil Sahn Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Nearby residents greeted county officials Friday morning with a petition against siting a landfill south of Filer.

The encounter was friendly, but the neighbors left no doubt about their feelings.

"I'd like some consideration for over the ridge," said Jack Wentling, pointing to an expanse of Bureau of Land Management acreage south of the site.

The area that a landfill-siting committee, Twin Falls city and county officials and a Bureau of Land Management representative looked at sits about four miles west of U.S. Highway 93 between 3400 and 3500 North.

The BLM owns the land, but Wentling, who farms 1/4 miles north of the site, and his neighbors, don't like the idea of a landfill near their homes. The county ran in to a similar sentiment recently when residents near Hansen Butte beat back the effort to place a regional landfill there.

Traffic and road wear are high among the concerns of the Filer-area residents.

'There's no point in trashing these people's lifestyles if, indeed, this is the site.'

— Resident, Jim Conder

The roads are narrow, not all paved and get lots of highway district and canal company traffic already, they said.

"You don't know what needs to be done with the roads," said Lyle Lierman, who farms north of the site.

"There's no point in trashing these people's lifestyles if, indeed, this is the site," said Jim Conder, who also lives near the site.

Conder just came back after being out of the county. "It's like walking into the middle of a bad movie," he said.

Residents suggested that if the county puts a landfill there, rather than funnel traffic down the narrow rural roads, a lane should be built from Highway 93 over to the site.

Solid Waste Director Darrell Heider told those gathered that the county would need at least 320 acres for a landfill. But Gerald Tews, a county planning and zoning commissioner and chairman of the siting committee, suggested that the county take two sections — 1,280 acres.

"I know it would be unpopular with people who run cattle out here," he said.

But Tews also suggested that if grazing suffered from a landfill being in the area, the ranchers could be compensated for the value of their permits. "To take away these people's livelihood is not the intent," he said.

Heider estimated that a landfill would be 1,000 feet long, 200 feet wide and 40 feet deep. Possible soil depth of the area might make it a good spot for a landfill, he said.

The county now sends 22 to 25 truckloads of trash to the landfill daily. The site south of Filer looks like a good possibility, Heider said.

"It's equal distance from all parts of the county. The slope lends itself to landfilling, especially the depth of the soil," he said.

In a meeting a couple of weeks ago, BLM officials from Burley said they would help the county look for BLM land.

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — An elusive blaze burst out of the sagebrush and grasslands in the Trapper Creek drainage southeast of here Friday, ballooning from 200 acres at mid-afternoon to 1,500 acres by nightfall.

Sixteen smokejumpers attacked the fire in the South Hills, followed by 200 other firefighters, three bulldozers and 15 fire engines, while fire retardant was dropped by air tankers.

A press time, the blaze was burning from west to east through sagebrush and isolated stands of lodgepole pine in an area 35 miles southeast of Twin Falls and 15 miles southwest of Oakley.

Although the fire was reported at 9:40 p.m. Thursday, crews searched for three hours and were unable to locate it until it finally broke out at noon Friday.

"The firefighters that are on the fire right now are doing some great work," said Kent McAtee, incident commander. "They have some good line built around the west and south side of the fire. I'm fairly optimistic that if we don't get adverse weather conditions we should be able to handle this fire without too much trouble."

The rapid growth of the blaze was due to tinder-dry conditions in the South Hills, according to Barbara Todd, public information officer for the Sawtooth National Forest.

The Forest Service is asking people to stay off the Oakley-Rogerson Road from Porcupine Springs to Oakley and the Trapper Creek Road from Goose Creek Reservoir up Trapper Creek, according to Ed Waldapfel, public information officer for the SNF.

The fire was one of a half-dozen lightning-caused blazes that burned on Friday in the wake of a line of thunderstorms that moved through southern Idaho Wednesday and Thursday.

Among the others:

- The Wells Fire, burning in sagebrush and patches of timber 12 miles north of Fairfield. Estimated at 500 acres, it was declared contained at 6 p.m. Friday and should be under control by 6 p.m. today.
- The Willow Fire, burning in timber

Forging consolidation

Dr. Bryan A. Stone's leadership was instrumental in consolidating Blaine County hospitals and earned him a national award.

Leader in medicine Sun Valley physician wins national award

By Barbara Neiwert Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — While helping unrelentingly to work out the kinks that threatened to bind consolidation of the Wood River Valley's two hospitals, a Sun Valley physician has now received national recognition for his leadership abilities.

Dr. Bryan A. Stone was selected from a field of nearly two dozen applicants nationwide to receive the 1992 Leadership Award for the National Association Medical Staff Services.

The prestigious award came out of the blue for the 60-year-old Stone, a family practice physician who routinely handles non-routine deliveries and surgeries.

"I'm not surprised very often, but I was definitely surprised by this one," Stone said, who is hoping to return to an earlier calling of serving in Africa as a medical missionary.

Nominated by co-worker Brenda Shappee, medical staff services director for the Wood River Medical Center, the annual award recognizes individuals for a variety of factors, including leadership exhibited for the benefit of the hospital and medical staff.

Stone received the award for his role as chief of staff for Moritz Community Hospital.

Stone served for two years as chief of staff rather than the customary one-year stint in order to facilitate the process of consolidation.

In her letter of recommendation, Shappee said, "The strains of the situation required a statesman, and Dr. Stone rose to that situation with intelligence, diligence, foresight and consideration."

Stone was instrumental in undertaking a major amendment to the Medical Staff Bylaws during his tenure, and in doing so included the hospital's medical staff coordinator in all phases of the revision to ensure a smooth transition, Shappee said.

Stone's busy medical practice involves family medicine including surgery and obstetrics, requiring many middle-of-the-night deliveries. Even so, Shappee said as chief of staff, Stone saw to it that he attended every committee meeting regarding consolidation in order to be fully informed of the progress.

'I frankly did not anticipate it (consolidation) would happen in my lifetime.'

— Dr. Bryan A. Stone

in my lifetime." Stone acknowledged about the difficult challenge it had been to merge Moritz Community Hospital and Blaine County Medical Center.

After graduating from high school in Winnemucca, Nev., Stone attended the University of Idaho for one year and then transferred to the University of Southern California Medical School where he graduated in 1964. He then completed a one-year residency and then four years of surgical residency at Fresno General Hospital.

Stone came to Sun Valley in 1974 after serving for four years with the Methodist Mission Board of Global Ministries in Zimbabwe. He left the mission field, not by choice, but due to a civil war in Rhodesia that did not create a good climate for raising young children.

Signing on as a physician with the Ketchum Medical Clinic, Stone became the seventh doctor in the Wood River Valley.

The change over the past 18 years has been dramatic, Stone reflected, saying there are now 50 physicians on the staff of Wood River Medical Center with 35 of those on the active staff.

This past year, Stone has been attempting to return to the mission field.

He and his wife, Ann, are awaiting word whether or not they will be able to return to Africa to serve with the Methodist Ministries.

Word on Stone's Sun Valley retirement will be announced if the time comes, but until then he will continue along with his practice, he said.

Shappee perhaps summed up Stone best in her nominating letter, when she wrote of the well-liked physician, "kindness and strength are not mutually exclusive, but, in fact, are hallmarks of a great leader."

Consumer spending up in some areas

By Craig Lincoln Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Consumer spending in the 12 months ending June 1992 was a mixed bag through the Magic Valley, with reasonable increases in many counties but stagnation in others.

Twin Falls and Jerome counties reported the strongest increase in taxable sales, according to the Idaho Tax Commission's fiscal year report.

But the drought-plagued northern tier of Blaine, Camas and Lincoln counties fell on hard times. Blaine's taxable sales dropped 3.3 percent, Camas County's dropped 1.7 percent and Lincoln County's declined 5.6 percent.

Gooding County's sales also decreased, but the Mini-Cassia area held its own.

The Tax Commission releases data on total sales by county by businesses and taxable sales. Taxable sales generally are consumer purchases. The data also is an imperfect measure of what is going on in each county, because businesses that operate in two or more counties can choose to file one sales-tax report, instead of reporting a sale out of the county it occurs in.

Here are the reported taxable sales by businesses for the state's fiscal years ending June 1991 and June 1992, and the percentage increase:

- Blaine County: $190.2 million, $183.9 million, -3.2 percent.
- Camas County: $2.2 million, $2.2 million, -1.7 percent.
- Cassia County: $84.6 million, $86.1 million, 1.7 percent.
- Gooding County: $27.9 million, $27.2 million, -2.6 percent.
- Idaho County: $62.6 million, $72.1 million, 15.2 percent.
- Lincoln County: $8.7 million, $8.2 million, -5.6 percent.
- Mindoka County: $46.9 million, $48.9 million, 4.4 percent.
- Twin Falls County: $315.3 million, $377.5 million, 7.1 percent.
- Staterider: $7.5 million, $8.1 million, 8.1 percent.

The rite of installation will be conducted by Erhard Bauer of Portland, Ore., president of the Northwest District of the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod—The Rev. Lawrence Velder, pastor at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls, will preside at the ceremony.

Andresen comes to Eden from an internship in Young America, Minn., which he recently completed as partial requirement for transfer from the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod to the Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod. He previously served a congregation in Wisconsin for four years.

He is replacing Pastor Timothy Cartwright, who accepted a pastorate in Steamboat Springs, Colo., in May.

Andresen's wife, Karen, has a degree in nursing from the University of Wisconsin. The Andresens have four daughters, Kimberly, Kristen, Kara and Kathryn.

Graham's 'Eye of Storm' to be shown

"Eye of the Storm," a new release from World Wide Pictures, the motion picture ministry of the Billy Graham Evangelical Association, will be presented at two area churches this weekend.

The film will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Kimberly Christian Church, 307 Madison E., and also at 7 p.m. Sunday at the First Baptist Church on Highway 30 in Filer. Free-will offerings will be taken at the showings.

"Eye of the Storm" features Connie Sellecca ("Hotel" and "P.S. I Love You"), Jeff Conway ("Taxi" and "Grease") and Deborah Tucker ("Dallas" and "Happy Campers"). The film focuses on the lives of people involved in the Persian Gulf War.

Conway portrays award-winning TV journalist Tom Edwards, who covered the war, and Sellecca plays his producer, Patricia "Pat" Peterson.

The task of "keeping the ratings high" puts the two at odds, since Edwards feels the best "story" would trash the faith of returning servicemen and women. In the wake of his wife's death, Edwards immerses himself in his work, which leaves his daughter, portrayed by Tucker, hurt and alone.

According to World Wide Pictures, the film addresses vital issues relevant to today's society. It is a contemporary story of what faces simple parents and their children as careers are juggled with personal relationships.

Pentecostals plan back-to-school theme

TWIN FALLS Calvary Pentecostal Church, 450 Third Ave. W., has planned a special Back-to-School emphasis for the worship services Sunday.

The topic at the 10 a.m. service is "If I Were Young Again," a selection of advice from the older generation. The 6 p.m. service will be directed by Youth Pastor Jeff Johns with several of the youth having special responsibilities. T

The guest speakers and singers at the services will be Lennie and Roseanne Dragon of Boise.

According to Pastor Wayne Nigh, the services will highlight the importance of "hitting the books" with vigor and a thirst for knowledge as offered by the local schools and maintaining a healthy moral conduct during the year.

The public is invited to attend.

Speaker covers 'New Age Movement'

TWIN FALLS A seminar by James R. Spencer, "The New Age Movement: Same Song, New Verse," is set for 7:30 p.m. Sunday through Tuesday at the Christian Center of Magic Valley, 181 Morrison St.

Spencer is the author of "Beyond Mormonism: An Elder's Story." The seminar is sponsored by the Christian Center of Magic Valley, the Magic Valley Christian Fellowship, and the New Song Foursquare Church.

Spencer will also be the guest speaker at the regular worship service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Christian Center of Magic Valley.

Burley pastor makes 'Who's Who'

BURLEY The Rev. David A. Henry, pastor at the First Presbyterian Church in Burley, was recently named in "Who's Who in Religion, Fourth Edition."

Henry says he was included because of publications in national religious journals. Several articles in the past five years have focused on two areas of ministry — assisting churches in ministry and administration and religious themes in fiction and films.

Henry was also recently granted a doctorate of divinity degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, Calif.

His doctoral dissertation, which was 289 pages in length, was entitled "Finding Identity in an Alien Land: New Self-Identity for the Rural American Church in Decline."

He says he has developed a new approach to help rural churches in decline become healthy and vital. His hypothesis was tested at churches in Burley, Paul, American Falls and Aberdeen. He also holds a bachelor's degree in psychology from California State University and a master of divinity degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary.

Henry has served as pastor at the First Presbyterian Church in Burley since 1984. He is currently the moderator of the Kendall Presbytery, an association of Presbyterian churches in southeastern Idaho. He has also served the community through involvement with the Hurley Lions Club and the Mini-Cassia Ministerial Association. He and his wife, Donna, have three children.

ESU conference has international flavor

Follow God's plan, forget New World Order

"In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes." (Judges 21:25)

In this passage of scripture, the writer speaks of when Israel was drifting without chart or compass. The anchor that would have kept her vessel on course had been abandoned and she was tossed about by various winds of adversity.

She became her own worst enemy and became dependent upon the energies of the storm-tossed sea of life. Israel was perishing because of self-inflicted wounds. The things that came upon her were the result of her misconduct and her miseries were of her makings.

We need to raise the red flag as a warning to any nation that throws away her chart and compass. We need to sound the alarm to any people who replace God-given principles with the notions of individuals.

It seems to me that our great nation is floundering on the issues of family and moral right.

Weldon Shuman
Clergy's corner

When men begin to do that which is right in their own eyes, they blind themselves to the way in which things ought to be done. He has sent us a love letter that outlines his plan and purpose for the nations of the world. We don't need a "new world order."

God tells us the things that will bring blessing and the things that will produce cursing. He points us to the path that leads to harmony and order and he places danger signals at every pitfall along the journey. The individual who abandons God's word lives in turmoil and confusion.

I submit to you that the reason for the confusion in our world today can be attributed to our failure to honor God's plan and purpose. We are doing things the way we want to do them despite the warning signals of his word. We fail to see ourselves adrift on wild and turbulent waters. Instead, we see ourselves sailing along on a calm and peaceful sea.

What our need is today is two things: a chart and compass and an anchor. These are perilous times and we need to be fully awake and alert to face them. God has provided a chart and compass (the Bible) to keep us on course. He has given us an anchor (his son, Jesus Christ) that will keep us from drifting.

The Rev. Weldon Shuman is the pastor at the Kimberly Church of the Nazarene. The Times-News invites area clergy to submit columns of 400 words or less. Column topics can include a point of doctrine, religious perspective on current events or social commentary. Send columns to Darlene Hunter, Features editor, Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Father John A. Jamnicki greets parishioners following services last Saturday at O'Hare International Airport chapel in Chicago.

Airport chapel accommodates all who enter

CHICAGO (AP) — The rack of pamphlets outside the chapel door caters to all comers — Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Muslims.

The worshippers are often on the fly.

The small, glass-walled chapel overlooks airline security gates and bustling corridors in Terminal 2 of O'Hare International, the world's busiest airport. It attracts hundreds of travelers as well as airport employees.

"People who are troubled, burdened, have some time — they are the ones who seek us out," said the Rev. John A. Jamnicki, the chaplain and the airport's only legal resident.

"An airport chapel has to be welcoming and accommodating to all people," said Jamnicki, a Roman Catholic priest. "I'd consider it immoral if it was exclusive to just one denomination."

The pamphlet rack welcomes a string of faults. A prayer rug graces one corner of the chapel and a wall-mounted compass makes it easier for Muslims to pray facing Mecca.

Christian services are offered several times a week. Islamic prayers on Fridays, along with travelers, the chapel has a regular congregation drawn from airport workers and residents of the surrounding suburbs.

"I marry. I baptize. I bury. I'm involved in every dimension of the lives of my people," Jamnicki said.

Bernie Wilson, a retired United Airlines employee, has been attending weekend Catholic services at the chapel for several years.

"Just like the environment," said Wilson, who travels from the nearby suburb of Mount Prospect. "The combination of working people and travelers is unique. They're traveling people and I'm traveling people."

Jamnicki came to O'Hare about 10 years ago after serving 10 years at St. Martin's Catholic Church on Chicago's South Side.

"When I was in the seminary, I never expected this," he said.

"But, like any new experience, I came out here open to it and I've developed a great interest in the world of aviation," said Jamnicki, who now is president of the International Association of Civil Aviation Chaplains.

Jamnicki maintains a post office box at the airport and is registered to vote there. He sometimes stays on a pullout couch in his office, though he maintains an apartment near O'Hare.

"The people call him for all kind of needs — night and day," said Earline Thompson, who worked as Jamnicki's secretary for more than 19 years before resigning recently for personal reasons.

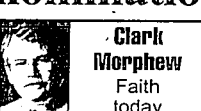

Oldline denominations make modest gains

Wouldn't you know it? Just when we're getting used to the eroding membership figures for mainline churches, these oldline denominations start to make some gains.

Modest gains, mind you. But after nearly three decades of declining membership, these denominations will take any increases they can get. Is it possible that the losses, which sounded like a death knell 10 years ago, are over and mainline Christianity is on the comeback trail?

For instance, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America showed a gain of 1,941 members in 1990 and another increase of 4,438 in 1991. That may seem insignificant, but it probably gives beleaguered church leaders a rush of joy.

Since 1968 the Lutheran Church has been in a membership decline. And

Clark Morphew
Faith today

when three major Lutheran denominations formed the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America in 1988, church observers predicted the merger would cause the erosion to continue.

They were right, but most of those experts said it would take a decade for the ELCA to recover from the merger. Now it appears, after just four years, that a recovery is already under way.

The Episcopal Church in the United States, according to the Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches, also got a boost this year with a gain of 12,637 members. Episcopalians have been in trouble since the late 1960s when internal turmoil and an aversion to evangelism split the denomination on a downhill slide.

Also, the United Methodists did not make a gain. But they did cut their losses considerably, showing a drop in membership in 1991 of only 1072 members a week. In recent years the weekly membership loss in United Methodism was closer to 1,500 people. You may wonder why these losses have been happening. Part of it is due to the shifting population, from small towns and rural areas to the urban and suburban communities.

If you have little or no exposure to Midwestern and Southern small-town and rural life, it may be hard to imagine how churches in these areas have been devastated by the farm crisis.

Many congregations have simply closed their doors and their churches now sit on the prairie as testimony not to faith but poverty.

Others struggle on, maintaining century-old buildings and sharing clergy with neighboring congregations. The saddest thing is that these congregations will never fully recover and their future will probably be stamped with weakness and death.

These mostly-small rural churches were once the strong core of the Lutheran Church, the United Methodists and Baptists. But now the strongest churches and the greatest potential for growth, are in the cities.

Therefore, it makes sense that the denominations that make the shift from rural to urban by planting new churches in fast growing communities

Community pays homage to evangelist

ADAMS, N.Y. (AP) — By any conventional standard, Charles Grandison Finney was a God-fearing man even before a turning point occurred in 1821. He attended church regularly. He studied the Bible. He was obsessed about questions of morality and spirituality.

In the bicentennial year of Finney's birth, scholars and theologians are remembering Finney's "conversion" in Adams, near Lake Ontario about 250 miles northwest of New York City.

Religious historian James E. Johnson said Finney's life and work are enjoying a "remarkable" revival. "Christians claim him as a leading inspiration. Feminists recognize his early championing of the right of women to receive higher educations and to become more equal members of the church."

"He dared to be different, he broke the mold," said Johnson, who recently retired after 30 years as a professor at Bethel College in St. Paul, Minn. "The guy is sort of kaleidoscopic. No matter what button you push on the computer, Finney had some influence."

Adams will stage events Sept. 11-13 to commemorate Finney's life and work, including a re-enactment of the 1830s-style revival meeting that made Finney world famous. Johnson will be among the scholars gathering for seminars that same week at Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio, where Finney served as president from 1851 to 1865 and a professor of theology from 1837 to 1875, when he died at age 83.

Finney's conversion, as he later described it, occurred in two steps. While praying in the Adams woods, a profound truth suddenly occurred to him: "I believed in a higher being had to be grasped with the heart, not the head."

That "faith was a voluntary trust instead of an intellectual state."

As Finney sat alone that night in the office in Adams where he was studying to become a lawyer, he had the sensation of meeting Jesus Christ face to face.

"I wept aloud like a child, and made such confessions as I could with my choked utterance," Finney said.

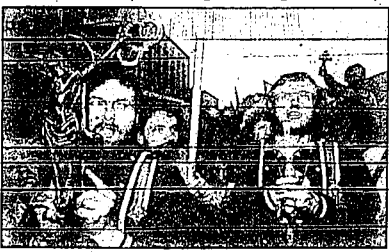

Charles Grandison Finney 'Conversion' remembered

But it wasn't enough. By his own estimation, he was "almost as ignorant of religion as a heathen." A sense of "awful, infinite" sin surrounded him. "I was very proud without knowing it," he wrote later. "I found that I was unwilling to have any one know that I was seeking the salvation of my soul."

With his spirit filled with anguish, and interpreting that torment as a battle between good and evil being waged in his own soul, Finney on Oct. 10, 1821, walked a half mile north of Adams to a grove of trees and started to pray.

When he emerged from those woods, a transformation had begun that would make Finney one of the most famous people of the 19th century. Even today, his influence can be seen in such evangelical figures as the Rev. Billy Graham.

Remembering coup

Russian Orthodox clergy members sing Thursday during a rally commemorating the anniversary of 1991's failed coup.

Trio joins St. Edwards

TWIN FALLS — Three people recently joined the staff at St. Edwards Catholic Church, 161 Sixth Ave. E. Father Robb Keller is the new pastor, Father Nonder Zuleta joins Keller as assistant pastor and Patricia McNamara is the new director of religious education.

Keller was born and raised in Idaho Falls and later graduated from Santa Clara University in California with a degree in history and a minor in theology. He worked in Portland, Ore., for a short time and then enlisted in the Peace Corps. In the Peace Corps, he was assigned to a village in Panama, as a community development volunteer for three years. After his Peace Corps assignment, Keller entered Mount Angel Seminary in Oregon and later transferred to St. Thomas Seminary in Denver. Following his ordination to the priesthood, he served at St. Anthony's in Pocatello for three years and St. Nicholas Parish in Rupert for five years. He plans to be at St. Edwards for at least six years.

Zuleta, a newly ordained Catholic priest, was born in Cartago, Columbia. Following high school, he entered the Seminary of Cali in Colombia and studied philosophy for three years and theology for three years. Zuleta worked at the St. Marcos Parish in Cali while at the seminary. He took a year of pastoral leave and taught at the parish school, during which time he decided his ministry was to be in another country. He then came to the United States and studied for three years at Mount Angel Seminary in Oregon, where he received a master of divinity degree. He plans to complete a master of arts degree this year. The two-year assignment at St. Edwards is Zuleta's first assistant pastor position.

McNamara was raised in San Jose, Calif., and attended San Jose State University. She comes from Merced, Calif., where she and her husband, Tom, raised their three children.

During her third year at the university, she studied the Catholic faith in weekly sessions with a Jesuit priest from Santa Clara University and became a convert in 1953. She attended a cursillo in central California in 1967 and later became a certified catechist (religious education teacher) in 1972. She also directed a junior high program for her parish in Merced, where she started an inservice education for teacher development program.

The McNamaras joined a Christian Initation for Adults team in 1978 and later served as directors of the team for nine years. They came to Twin Falls for Patricia to accept the director of religious education position in July. Tom assists Patricia part time at the church.

The McNamaras are both students at Regis University in Denver. Patricia is pursuing a master's degree in pastoral ministry and education and Tom is pursuing a master's degree in parish administration.

have a good shot at a future filled with vitality. That's the good news.

The troublesome news is contained in a new Gallup poll at shows — get this — that 70 percent of Americans believe churches and synagogues are not effective in helping people find meaning in life.

Gallup says religious bodies must respond to six spiritual needs of American people and, if they are unable, the membership gains made in the last two years may be lost.

- Those six are:
- The need to believe that life is meaningful and has a purpose.
- The need for a sense of community and deeper relationships.
- The need to be appreciated and respected.
- The need to be listened to and heard.
- The need to feel that one is growing in faith.
- The need for practical help in developing a mature faith.

Now it is clear that congregations can't beat around the bush or soft pedal the Christian or Jewish style of life. Preachers have to say it clearly and often. Also, congregations must be action-oriented rather than overloaded with meetings and planning sessions.

Further, congregations must move from clergy monologues to congregational dialogues, giving everyone a chance to be heard. And there must be many opportunities to develop significant friendships through support groups, Bible studies, reaching out to others and prayer sessions.

There is hope for mainline religion in the United States, but it won't be sustained without a zealous effort on the part of both clergy and laity. So, find yourself a happy place to belong, look to the future and pray for the world. There's still some life in those old churches.

Rupert officials still seek flag football help

RUPERT — Coaches and players are still needed for the Parks and Recreation Department's upcoming flag football season and youth volleyball seasons. The football league is open to children in grades 3-7 and games will be played at the Big Valley play fields on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Player registration will continue through Sept. 4. Cost is $10 for city residents and $15 for non-residents. Signups should be made at the city's public works office on F Street. Two volleyball leagues will be formed: one for children in grades 5 and 6 and another for seventh-, eighth- and ninth-graders. All games will be played Monday and Tuesday evenings at the Civic Gym. Volleyball registration will be accepted through Sept. 4 at the public works office on F Street. Fees are $10 for Rupert residents and $15 for non-residents.

Back bumps Bird out of own charity golf tournament

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. — The same aching back that forced Larry Bird to retire from professional basketball kept the former Indiana State star from taking part in the ninth annual Larry Bird Golf Classic on Friday. The event, however, was a success with a full field competing at the Country Club of Terre Haute to raise money for the Terre Haute Boys Club. Although he didn't play, Bird spent time at the course and visited with participants.

Berlin meet fails to provide Christie-Lewis matchup

BERLIN — Linford Christie and Carl Lewis stayed away from each other at the IStAF track and field meet Friday, and while Christie posted an impressive win in the 100 meters, Lewis finished only third in the 200. Christie, the Olympic champion from Britain, won the 100 in 9.99 seconds, beating American Leroy Burrell, second in 10.04, and Canada's Bruny Surin, third in 10.15. Christie has been avoiding Lewis since the Barcelona Olympics, and Lewis said before the meet that he wanted to run against the Olympic champion. Lewis was entered in the 200, though, and ran that race instead.

Lewiston overtakes Billings in 9th

Sox win - B7

TWIN FALLS — Baseball is full of clichés, gems such as, “You got to throw strikes,” “It ain’t over till it’s over,” and “win ugly.” Friday afternoon all of them applied when the Lewiston Twins defeated the Billings Royals 10-6 in a loser-out game in the Pacific Northwest Region American Legion tournament. The game featured a total of 20 walks, four errors, and six wild pitches/passed balls. It also saw the Twins come back from a three-run deficit in the top of the ninth to take the win and advance to the next round of the tourney. “You’ve got to stay with it,” said Twins Coach Dwight Church. “We got a couple of breaks and took advantage of them.” Entering the final inning, the Twins took advantage of three walks, two wild pitches, an error, and a home run. Eric Frensdorff led off the inning by driving a Jeff Sorenson pitch over the fence in left to pull the Twins to within two runs at 6-4. Sorenson then walked Jerrod Martin before being pulled for Roger Bodine. Bodine then proceeded to walk Kevin Clouser and gave up a hard hit to Josh Martin to load the bases with no outs. A walk to Brandon Bentz pushed one run across and the Twins trailed by only one. Andy Zimmerman followed with a grounder to third which was misplayed allowing a run to score and keep the bases loaded. Jon Munkert, who had come in in relief for Clay Storey in the eighth, singled to left scoring Martin with the go ahead run. “Sorenson did a good job but after the homer and walk we brought in Bodine. Ray brothers heft hot bats for champion Mustangs

By Ron Gates

TWIN FALLS — Call it sibling rivalry. Brothers Kevin and Brandon Ray, starting outfielders for Medford, Oregon's, state American Legion baseball champion Mustangs, each packed hefty batting averages into the 1992 Region 2 national qualifying tournament. “It seems like when one has a bad day the other one picks up the slack,” said Medford Coach Sandee Kensingner. “You’ll practically never see both of them having an off day.” As might be expected, 18-year-old Kevin — not quite two years younger — entered with a slight (.364-.361) edge. Brandon, at 5-foot-7, 140 pounds an inch shorter and 10 pounds lighter than his big brother, reversed the hitting statistics in a 10-8 win over Lewiston in Wednesday's opening round. While Kevin struggled to get four fly balls and a grounder that resulted in the final out as Medford batted around in a three-run sixth inning Brandon was having a field day. Brandon likewise hit into a force play, missing an opportunity with Mustang runners filling the bases in the first, but atoned for that lone failure with a bases-clearing double when a fly opportunity arose two innings later. In the fifth his single scored Brian Manthe and he ran his RBI total to five with another

Major leagues - B7

LOS ANGELES — Dodgers general manager Fred Clute was talking with reporters near the New York Mets' dugout, making sure he didn't complain too loudly about the miserable season his team was experiencing. “I wouldn't stand here in front of Jeff Torborg and cry that we've had an unusual share of injuries,” Clute said. “We've had injuries that have come into great focus with Darryl Strawberry and Eric Davis, but I never even cried injury.” What he and Mets GM Al Hertzitz should be crying is “refund.” The Mets and Dodgers, expected to challenge for first place in their respective divisions, have collapsed under the weight of the two heaviest payrolls in baseball. Mets players are pulling in a cool $44.5 million, while the Dodgers are taking home an equally chilly $43.5 million. But, as George Steinbrenner and Gene Autry will tell you, that doesn't automatically guarantee a pennant. “This has been very embarrassing for all of us,” Torborg said. “We're disappointed that we're not doing what we thought we were going to do when we started the season. It's not a real good feeling.” Injuries and down years by some key personnel have been the focal point of both teams.

Davis and Strawberry have started only 28 games together, forcing manager Tom Lasorda into a revolving-door system of part-time outfielders. Torborg already has penciled in 101 different lineups through the Mets' first 17 games. “I thought with the kind of talent we had put together that we were going to win,” Torborg said with six weeks left in his first season as Mets manager. “I knew we had weaknesses, just like any other ballclub, but I didn't think it would be the offensive weakness we have shown.” The Mets' 233 team batting average is the worst in the major leagues; the lineup has been severely affected by assorted injuries to outfielder and leadoff man

Vince Coleman, shortstop Kevin Elster, third baseman Dave Magadan, second baseman Willie Randolph and Howard Johnson — whose transition to the outfield this year has been anything but smooth. Then there is the tendinitis in Bret Saberhagen's right index finger, a nagging ailment that has limited the two-time American League Cy Young winner to 11 starts. “I think they've gone through a lot worse, as far as the injury bug getting them,” said Dodger first baseman Eric Karros, one of four players on either team to have played at least 107 games this season.

TWIN FALLS — Three days into the Region 7 American Legion baseball national-qualifying playoffs, half of an eight-team field, which opened play on Wednesday, remains — Medford's Mustangs, and their three previous victims. Medford, the tourney's lone unbeaten team, grabbed the inside track Friday evening by slowing host Twin Falls, Cinderella bid 14-8.

Now, two wins away from the 1992 title and attending berth in the national event, the Mustangs resume their quest today right where it began. Lewiston, which holds the Gem State title and a 10-8 loser at Mustang hands on Wednesday, provides the opposition at 8:30 p.m.

The Twins of Lewiston (44-17) earned their way back through the elimination bracket by slowing Cupertino, Calif., on Thursday and coming back to sideline Billings, Mont., 10-6 with seven runs in their final at bat Friday.

California's hopes of retaining the Region 7 title, won by Union City in 1991, ended with the Cubs' 6-4 loss.

The host Cowboys currently 21-25, try to regroup against the 42-8 Skagit Sox of Mount Vernon, Wash. at 5 p.m. The Sox sent Sheridan, Wyo., packing on a 6-0 shutout in Friday's early game.

A nine-run Medford explosion in the second inning, during which the Mustangs sent 13 batters to the plate, was the difference. Without that, it might well have been a different story.

“They're a real solid team, but I don't think they're unbeatable,” said Twin Falls Coach Logan Easley. “We wound up with eight runs and, other than in the second, they scored five. I believe we would have won that game.”

Medford, set down in order in their first turn, reached Cowboy starter Rob Welch for five hits an inning later. Three walks and an error did as much or more damage.

“We knew coming in that Rob had to throw strikes,” Easley added. “They really didn't hit him that hard, but Medford has decent or better speed on the basepaths. The walks hurt us badly.”

Jason Stranberg's two-bagger scored Joseph Queen and Gerald Moore to get the Oregonians into a tie at 2 and before the dust cleared seven different players — two of those twice — had scored.

A pair of early runs raised hopes that the Cowboys would continue their post-season roll.

Andy Pierce, who struck out nine and walked two after replacing Welch two outs into Medford's big inning, hit a one out single and scored ahead of Paul Rasmussen, who walked, on Anthony Domino's double.

Rasmussen, who garnered hits in two of three appearances and scored four times, and Jim Horner 3-for-4 including a two doubles, scored in the Cowboy third and Rasmussen, aboard on a single an inning later, inched Twin Falls within 9-5 on a Mustang misce.

Three runs in the ninth on hits by Rasmussen, Horner, Domino and T.J. Newton accounted for the final score.

Interventions don't stop dollar drop

NEW YORK — The Federal Reserve and the European central banks intervened five times Friday to support the weak U.S. dollar but failed to stem its slide against the German mark.

"The failure was humiliating, a sign of the impotence of the central banks," said economist Ward McArthur of Stone & McArthur Research Associates.

"The market was reacting to the surface, not to what the dollar is a succession of new postwar lows against the Deutschmark, which continues to be supported by high short-term interest rates, he said.

The dollar fell far below its historic high of 1.4340 marks, set in Feb. 1971, sliding to 1.4260 in late trading.

Dollar bears said that after Friday's drop they doubted the central banks would be able to stem the dollar's freefall, which cost the central banks at least $500 million Friday.

The dollar's plunge continued to heighten U.S. bond and stock prices, as some analysts said it also gave a political boost to President

Thanks to public and private recycling systems, more than one third of the newsprint used in the U.S. last year was recycled - into cardboard boxes, egg cartons, insulation or newsprint again.
Recycled newspapers save resources, tax dollars and energy. America's newspapers support recycling.
And that's good news.
