

Weaver surrenders, ends siege

Fugitive leaves cabin with family, Gritz; flown to Boise

The Associated Press

NAPLES — Fugitive Randy Weaver surrendered Monday.

That ended an 11-day standoff at his mountaintop cabin that began with the violent deaths of his wife and son and a U.S. marshal.

Weaver came out of the cabin with his three surviving children, escorted by James "Bo" Gritz, a retired Army Special Forces lieutenant colonel and Populist Party candidate for president. Gritz had served as a liaison between Weaver and authorities since Friday.

"The situation is over because all of the family are out safe," Gritz told reporters and Weaver supporters gathered at a barricade set up by authorities about 3 miles from the cabin.

Asked what made Weaver decide to surrender, Gritz said, "I believe it was the answer to prayer." Gritz extended his arm in a Nazi salute as he approached Weaver's supporters. He said Weaver asked him to make the gesture.

Weaver, 44, was put aboard a military helicopter and taken to Sandpoint, then flown on a U.S. Marshals Service jet to Boise.

A medical checkup at St. Luke's Hospital showed a gunshot wound in Weaver's arm is virtually healed, said Mike Johnson, U.S. marshal for Idaho.

A motorcycle then took Weaver to the Ada County Jail. He is to be arraigned today before a federal magistrate in Boise.

Weaver's three daughters were placed in the care of relatives.

At a news conference, FBI spokesman Gen. Glenn and Idaho state attorney spokesman G. Wayne "Duke" Smith refused to discuss details of the shootouts and the three deaths.

Glenn said authorities made no deals with Weaver to get him to surrender, but added, "We made a very concerted effort to convince him that we would provide for his security."

"I think it's an ending that all of us hoped would come," Glenn said, "and I'm happy to say that all the people who were in the residence are in good physical condition."

Glenn said Gritz played a "tremendous role" in bringing the standoff to an end.

"We early on discussed the fact that there are no winners in a situation with all this sadness," Glenn said. "And our mission from the beginning was to minimize any further harm to the people who were located in that house."

According to Gritz, Weaver said Monday morning that he was planning to stay in the cabin until Sept. 9, Gritz said the date had some sort of religious significance to Weaver, a devotee of the Christian Identity Movement that combines Old Testament, right-wing and white-supremacist beliefs.

Weaver changed his mind, Gritz said, after receiving a letter from Christian Identity skinheads who had come to Naples from Vegas several days before Gritz said the gist of their message was: "The battle is in the courts. Not up here on the mountain."

Gritz said Weaver's 16-year-old son was with him when he surrendered.

'Sara was just scared to death that the government would not keep its part of the bargain ... in the end we were able to show her ... these guys meant what they said.'

Marines erect tents to shelter Andrew's victims

The Associated Press

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — Hundreds of Marines built the first tent cities for hurricane victims Monday, a full week after Andrew left thousands homeless, and the first two ships of a Navy convoy arrived with heavy-duty relief equipment.

But while thousands of south Floridians remained without adequate food or shelter, state and federal officials' bickered over who was in charge of relief from the costliest natural disaster in U.S. history.

And throughout southern Dade County, people waited in line for food stamps, for mail, for Red Cross vouchers, and for checks from insurance companies and the Federal Emergency Management Agency. FEMA had distributed 80 checks totaling $16,000 by midday, said spokesman Edward Lucius.

Thousands fumed in traffic jams as Miami-area businesses reopened, some for the first time since the hurricane struck.

"There's no way you can do it all at once," Gov. Lawton Chiles said while touring the tent city on a baseball field in Miami-Homestead, 30 miles southwest of Miami.

The governor raised the estimate of hurricane-wrecked homes to 85,000. Estimates of the number of homeless people have ranged from 180,000 to 250,000. Chiles warned that if the federal government didn't pay 100 percent of reconstruction costs, "the state of Florida will be totally busted." Preliminary damage estimates have soared at $15 billion.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush was "quite sympathetic" to Chiles' plea, but that no final decision had been made.

President Bush said in Washington that he would visit Florida and Louisiana again Tuesday to check relief efforts. He visited both states early last week.

Inspection team reaches Baghdad

Knight-Ridder News Service

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Continuing to squeeze Iraq, a team of United Nations inspectors flew to Baghdad on Monday across the U.S.-declared air interdiction zone in search of President Saddam Hussein's nuclear secrets.

Inspection team leader Maurizio Zifferero said his 15-member scientific team was on a "routine" visit, primarily concerned with understanding Iraq's uranium enrichment process.

Iraq claims that it has revealed all of its hidden arsenals — chemical, ballistic as well as nuclear — in the United Nations' 43 previous inspection tours, 13 of which were carried out by Zifferero's team.

"But, Zifferero said, "some surprise might be possible" as the team continues to examine and dismantle Iraq's nuclear program.

"One cannot be absolutely sure that everything has been revealed," he said. Zifferero, an Italian expert with the International Atomic Energy Agency, said his team would begin field work Monday after briefing Iraqi officials on the nature of the data and site visits they were seeking.

He would not give details or directly answer a reporter's question on whether the team would try to enter a government ministry. Baghdad has previously announced that the U.N. teams are forbidden to inspect ministries.

In July, Baghdad banned a missile-hunting team from entering the agriculture ministry for 17 days, and Washington threatened renewed military strikes. After a compromise, worked out by the U.N., inspectors were finally allowed in the building — and they found nothing.

This time, however, the United States has the firepower to back up any of its threats. U.S., French and British warplanes are patrolling the skies of southern Iraq.

Radioactive waste goes south; more may be destined for Idaho

By N.S. Nolkmevud Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A trainload of radioactive waste that left a federal Department of Energy facility in New York last week was not headed for Idaho.

It went to South Carolina instead, Kerry Cooke, executive director of the Snake River Alliance, said Monday.

But another shipment is still destined for Idaho, she said.

"A national network of activist groups is keeping tabs on Energy Department and Navy spent reactor fuel shipments. The Military Production Network, of which the alliance is member, reported last week that a shipment of spent Navy fuel was heading for Idaho.

But in letter to Cooke Monday, Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus said the shipment that left the Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory in New York last Thursday was not destined for Idaho.

"Those materials have already been shipped to Savannah River," Andrus wrote, "I have been advised further that there will be no shipments from the Knolls facility to Idaho in the near future."

But the South Carolina shipment wasn't the same load that was destined for Idaho, Cooke said.

"The spent fuel is still sitting there aimed our way," she said.

The shipping labels on the waste container bound for Savannah River identified the contents as "propulsion plant equipment" — not spent reactor fuel, she said.

The spent fuel still is loaded into a cask at Knolls, awaiting shipment.

The Department did not respond Monday to written questions about the shipment or other shipments that may be bound for Idaho.

Cooke said her group, a statewide activist environmental peace group, is upset that the department "won't tell the public what's going on." The lack of public statement by the Energy Department or the Naval Reactors Please see WASTE/A2

Clear Springs oyster business shucks off

By Craig Lincoln Times-News writer

BUHL — Clear Springs Foods Inc. is out of the oyster business.

The Buhl-based trout company, the largest in the United States, recently rid itself of Coast Oyster Co. of South Bend, Wash. Clear Springs bought Coast Oyster February 1991, just in time for a "substantial downturn in business beginning in the spring of 1991," Clear Springs President Larry Cope said.

The national recession brought on the troubled times in the oyster business, Cope said. So Clear Springs solved its oyster problems by transferring all of Coast Oyster's assets to a newly formed company.

"The directors of Coast believed it was important to the many dedicated employees of Coast that the business be allowed, if possible, to continue operating under new ownership," Cope said.

But one of the first decisions by the new company was to file for liquidation in bankruptcy court.

When it purchased Coast Oyster, Clear Springs hoped to broaden its impact on the seafood market by using its familiar trout-rearing techniques on oysters. The company was the largest producers of oysters in the world, which it grew on 21,000 acres of tidal lands in Washington and northern California.

Although Clear Springs absorbed a one-time loss from the sale, Cope said Clear Springs "remains in a strong financial position" and its trout business continues to be profitable.

Tuesday's state elections in Dade County, push back the Miami Dolphins' home opener and delay opening Dade schools, which had been originally set for Monday. U.S. District Court in Miami announced Tuesday it will begin its new criminal trials for two weeks because of problems recruiting jury members during the cleanup.

There was confusion about who was in charge of the enormous relief effort. An Army spokesman, Lt. Col. Bill Reynolds, said the U.S. Transportation Secretary Andrew Card was in charge.

But Chile's chief of staff, Tom Hernan, insisted the state and federal agencies were leading their own programs. "There is no single boss of all bosses," he told reporters.

Many people in the relief pipeline have complained of a lack of coordination.

"I'm shuffled here, there and there," said Mike Phipps, 49, who pedaled a bicycle to West Homestead Elementary School to collect Red Cross supplies for food and clothing. "I go to the Army and ask for a tent, they say go to City Hall. I go to City Hall, they said see the Army."

Marine Sgt. Jose Velasquez uses water from a jug to cool off while helping with hurricane relief tasks in Homestead, Fla.

The confusion has led to donated food spoiling and clothing being dumped in the trash after sitting in mud puddles. Health officials are worried about rat attacks and sanitary conditions. The stench of garbage could be smelled by people flying in a helicopter more than 300 feet over one area.

Somali troops urged unified radio frequencies for all relief agencies and a high-profile disaster czar, such as retired Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

Card said at a news conference Monday that the relief operation could only work with complete state and federal coordination, and he conceded there has been "a significant amount of red tape."

The first tent city was erected on Homestead's Harris Field by 450 Marines who had worked all night. Marines "coo" for tent each of the 108 tents.

Marines also set up a similar camp on parkland in adjacent Florida City. And an Army unit began building a 40-tent camp in Homestead. None of the three camps will have electricity, showers or kitchen facilities until at least Tuesday, but the military said it would not turn away anyone seeking shelter.

Residents of these neighborhoods have been reluctant to leave the ruins of their homes because they fear looting.

"Nerves are getting on edge. There are too many people in that house. There is no electricity, hardly any water," said Merida Saucedo, who was with her husband, their five children, her sister and her two children and her mother.

The Navy's USS Sierra, a destroyer tender from Charleston, S.C., arrived Monday with 15 tons of tools and a crew of 1,000, followed by the USS Opportune, a salvage ship from Little Creek, Va. Five ships were expected by Tuesday.

The Defense Department said that by the end of the day, south Florida would have 11,510 federal troops, 4,600 portable toilets, 15,000 radios, 34 portable food kitchens, 638,600 ready-to-eat meals, 240,000 cans of insecticide and enough tents to hold 23,570 people.

daughter Sara had been concerned about her father's safety.

"Sara was just scared to death that the government would not keep its part of the bargain. And she just wept and wept, but in the end we were able to show her that these guys ... meant what they said," Griz said.

"I fully believe that they're going to abide by all their agreements," he said. He did not elaborate except to say Weaver had been assured he could leave the cabin safely and that his daughters could stay with friends.

Griz said he walked out of the cabin with Weaver, who was carrying his infant daughter, 10-month-old Elishaba. A Griz associate walked alongside Sara and Rachel, 10.

More than 100 federal, state and local law enforcement officers and National Guardsmen had surrounded the cabin since the siege began with a shootout Aug. 21. Weaver's son, Samuel, 14, and Deputy U.S.

Marshal William Degan were killed in that exchange.

Weaver's wife, Vicki, 43, was shot to death a day later.

Weaver has been heartbroken from the beginning. He would almost wail without tears about his son and about his bride.

Griz said after Weaver's surrender Monday, Weaver also was wounded slightly Aug. 22 when authorities converged on the cabin.

Kevin Harris, 24, a family friend seriously wounded in that shootout surrendered to authorities Sunday. He was in serious condition Monday at Sacred Heart Medical Center in Spokane, Wash.

Harris made a first appearance before U.S. Magistrate Cynthia Imbrogno in the hospital emergency room Sunday. Harris' attorney, Bob Henderson of Spokane, said Monday he was uncertain when his client might be healthy enough to be arraigned.

Harris is accused of one count of first-degree murder in the Aug. 21 death of Deputy U.S. Marshal

William Degan and one count of assault on a federal officer, said William Hyslop, U.S. attorney for Eastern Washington.

Weaver is charged with assault on a federal officer stemming from the initial shootout.

He and his family had been held up on Ruby Ridge since February 1991, when he failed to appear in court on a federal weapons charge. He is accused of selling sawed-off shotguns to an undercover agent.

Authorities traced the family to their Selkirk mountain cabin and conducted periodic surveillance, saying they hesitated to risk confrontation due to the children.

On Aug. 21, six deputy marshals - including Degan - ran into Weaver, his son and Harris during a Teton National Forest patrol near the cabin, about 10 miles south of Bonners Ferry, 40 miles south of the U.S.-Canadian border and 110 miles northeast of Spokane.

The shooting - and the siege - began.

Office has only added to the uncertainty, she said.

But the group has stirred the Navy and the Energy Department.

T.M. Bradley, operations manager for the government's Naval Reactors Office in Idaho Falls, will meet with Andrus this week.

A facility at INEL in the past recovered valuable uranium from the spent fuel. The process produces large amounts of hazardous, radioactive acids. Some of the liquid has been turned into a granular solid.

The process is "recycling," however, increases the volume of waste. With global weapons reductions, the department no longer needs the uranium, and future disposal space is likely to be costly. So the department has halted reprocessing of spent naval fuel.

But the department still ships the spent fuel to INEL for storage.

Andrus has asked the Bush administration to tell him its future plans for spent Navy fuel. In mid-August he said would allow Navy fuel into the state for storage only if there was a national security justification. But large quantities of the radioactive material would be another story altogether, he said.

The department has not denied the alliance's claim that spent fuel shipments from the Navy to INEL will increase five-fold.

The increase merely is part of the "natural ebb and flow" of spent fuel with shipments from the Navy to INEL, an INEL official said.

Since October 1988 Andrus has waged a campaign against storage in Idaho of radioactive waste generated elsewhere.

In conjunction with that campaign, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan has denied Public Service Co. of Colorado further participation in the state's attempt to block the government from accepting any more spent fuel from the utility's decommissioned Fort St. Vrain reactor near Denver.

Ryan gave the Energy Department until Sept. 25 to respond to the state's petition for an immediate court order that a full-scale environmental impact study be conducted before any more Fort St. Vrain waste is moved to the INEL.

But the Energy Department doesn't need the utility's help against the state, Ryan said.

"The United States is perfectly capable of representing itself and protecting its interests in this matter," he said.

Industry efforts to curb youth smoking fail, researcher claims

NEW YORK (AP) — Two tobacco industry campaigns to discourage cigarette sales to children are ineffective and one actually encourages youngsters to smoke, a researcher said Monday.

The tobacco industry devised the campaigns to try to head off tougher police enforcement of laws banning cigarette sales to children, which does curb teen smoking, said Dr. Joseph R. DiFranza, a chief author of two new studies on the subject.

In one study, DiFranza reported that a Tobacco Institute campaign aimed at retail stores and called "It's the Law" did almost nothing to discourage stores from selling cigarettes to children.

Senators seek Nixon version of MIA effort

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Nixon is preparing an answer this week to a Senate request for his sworn testimony about American servicemen missing in Indochina, a published report said Monday.

The Daily News quoted Stan Mortenson, a Washington lawyer, as saying the former president would respond to the request by the Senate Select Committee on POW/MIA Affairs for a deposition under oath.

Mortenson would not say what the answer would be or whether Nixon might attempt to skirt the question by citing executive privilege, the newspaper reported.

In Washington, committee spokeswoman Deborah DeYoung said she could not confirm or deny that Nixon had been asked to give a statement. Mortenson was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

The News, in a Washington-dated story, said aides at Nixon's New Jersey estate had confirmed the request was received.

The Senate panel, headed by Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., is investigating the possibility that as many as 133 Americans may have remained alive and in custody in Indochina after the U.S. role there officially ended in 1973.

Nixon's statement would be of particular interest to the committee in view of comments he made at that time.

In a second study, DiFranza concluded that an industry campaign portraying smoking as an adult activity actually encourages children to smoke by making smoking appear to be a desirable "forbidden fruit."

The studies are the latest in a series by DiFranza on the promotion of cigarettes to children. He is a member of the Department of Family and Community Medicine at the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester.

"The director of the federal government's Office on Smoking and Health said DiFranza's studies were solid and "hit at the heart" of the industry's youth campaign.

"The tobacco industry has a vendetta against him because of the power of what he's publishing," said the director, Michael Eriksen. Earlier this year, DiFranza was forced by a judge to turn over notes and correspondence from a study to the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

The "It's the Law" campaign involves the distribution of literature and signs observing that sales of tobacco to children are illegal, DiFranza said.

He found that 86 percent of stores participating in the program sold cigarettes illegally to children, compared with 88 percent of the non-participating stores.

"My feeling is they created the 'It's the Law' campaign to have something to take to local officials and say 'you'd better regulate sales to minors because we're doing it ourselves,'" DiFranza said.

The study appears in the September issue of the American Journal of Public Health, to be published Tuesday.

The Tobacco Institute said DiFranza has distorted the industry's intent because he's set on putting the tobacco industry out of business.

"We're out there with free program materials, working with organizations," said spokeswoman Brennan Dawson. "We are trying to make a difference."

Another Tobacco Institute program called "Tobacco: Helping Youth Say No" is "clearly designed to encourage tobacco use," DiFranza said in another report that appeared last month in The Journal of Family Practice.

He said the tobacco program is similar to other drug-abuse prevention programs that inadvertently increased drug abuse, according to the latest research data.

"The program's central theme is decision making," DiFranza said. "Children are encouraged to make a mature decision about smoking."

"Scientific studies of this approach have shown that children exposed to this format are more likely to smoke, to use alcohol and to use drugs than children who do not receive any education at all."

Dawson called the assertion "absolutely ludicrous."

"To suggest that talking to children actually makes them do it is counter to the research that's been published," she said.

Eriksen countered that "the tobacco industry's claims are all unpublished. They haven't published any literature in the scientific press to refute his (DiFranza's) work, and that's the normal method."

DiFranza said studies now show that tough police enforcement of laws banning cigarette sales to children can, in contrast to the industry programs, have a dramatic effect on children's smoking.

A trial of a strong enforcement program in Woodridge, Ill., produced a sharp drop in sales to minors and a 50 percent drop in the teen-age smoking rate, researchers reported in December.

Quayle launches new fight with Hollywood

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle picked a fresh fight with Hollywood on Monday, accusing the parcel pants in TV's Emmy awards presentation of lying about his views toward single mothers.

They said I attacked single mothers. That is a lie. Quayle told a small crowd that welcomed him to Alabama at the start of a three-day campaign swing. They said that I believe single mothers and their children were not families. That is a lie.

Quayle was a frequent target of jokes during Sunday's nationally televised Emmy awards, as Hollywood returned fire for his criticism of TV character Murphy Brown, who is said to have a child out of wedlock.

Quayle's remark was directed at the show's creator, Diane English, who addressed herself to single parents during the Emmy's program and said, "Don't let anyone tell you you're not a family."

Quayle's remark came as he began a campaign trip to small cities in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Missouri and Oklahoma. President Bush won all five states in 1988, all but Missouri, Florida, and Quayle's goal is to carry small-town conservative voters.

Missouri is a tossup this year, with Democratic Bill Clinton now favored. In addition, several of the Southern states, foundations of the Republican electoral base throughout the 1980s, are viewed a competitive because of the sour economy and the Democrats' all-Southern ticket.

Alabama will all be there, the South will be there and America will be there," Quayle told an airport crowd that consisted mainly of elementary school children well below voting age. "Because of your work, because of your dedication and because of your enthusiasm, we will win the election."

In criticizing "Murphy Brown," Quayle said the show and its lead character, played by actress

Candice Bergen, were glorifying single parenthood in a way that discredited traditional family values. He has said repeatedly he was not criticizing single parents.

Ms. Bergen thanked Quayle, who she accepted her Emmy, and the vice president had his response when he landed in Huntsville. "Now Murphy Brown, listen closely because I'm only going to say it once: You owe me big time."

Then, after responding to the criticism he received during the program — Quayle said: "Hollywood doesn't like our values. Hollywood doesn't like our beliefs."

Quayle attended a fund-raiser in Alabama before speaking to employees at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center and then heading on to Mississippi and Georgia.

At the Huntsville airport, he repeated his assertion that electing Clinton would mean higher taxes. "Clinton thinks you create jobs by raising taxes," Quayle said. "You and I know you create jobs by cutting taxes, not raising taxes."

Bush administration suggests space initiative

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle announced a Bush administration review of space programs to the post-Cold War era Monday, and suggested space exploration would get high priority in a second Bush-Quayle term.

President Bush and I are committed to building our country's space program, the world's security interest, it is our future," Quayle told an international forum on space.

He said he was directing his Space Policy Advisory Board to review space policy in the context of the end of the Cold War.

The board is part of the National Space Council, an advisory group that is chaired by Quayle and whose advice Bush has often acted on. "We will redefine the relationship between industry and government," Quayle said. "The time has come for all of us to move beyond the operating principles dictated by the Cold War."

He said the recommendations would be presented in mid-December.

As an example of new post-Cold War space programs, Quayle cited the need for cheaper launch costs, a new space-based communications system that would be reliable and responsive in military and civilian needs," Quayle told the World Space Congress. "Cutting launch costs makes space enterprise available to more users... and new jobs as a result."

Quayle also talked about closer coordination in the future between the United States, Russia and other nations on civilian use of space.

The vice president said the advisory panel's purpose will be to "review our current space policies and to consider changes that make sense for a peaceful, though competitive future."

Turning to U.S. space exploration goals, Quayle received warm applause when he told his audience: "We want to go back to the moon, this time to stay. We want to begin the human exploration of Mars. We want to send more robotic probes to other planets... and bring back samples."

Insurance, savings, aid should help Florida

MIAMI (AP) — The economic losses caused by Hurricane Andrew are staggering, but billions of dollars from insurance, government aid and stashed savings are expected to spur the region's recovery.

It follows the usual hurricane pattern, things will be pretty much in turmoil for a week or so like it is, then when the insurance money comes in, construction will pick up fairly rapidly," said state economist George Foster.

Dade County officials estimate damage at $15 billion to $20 billion. The biggest single loss was the demolition of Homestead Air Force Base, which was worth about $400 million a year to the economy.

Most of Florida's $150 million plant nursery sector was blown away, as was most of Dade County's $20 million lime crop. The headquarters of Burger King Corp. and American Bankers Insurance Group were heavily damaged.

There will be some people who simply pull up stakes," said Ed Montanaro, the state Legislature's chief economist. "The job of jobholders is simply too large or too demanding."

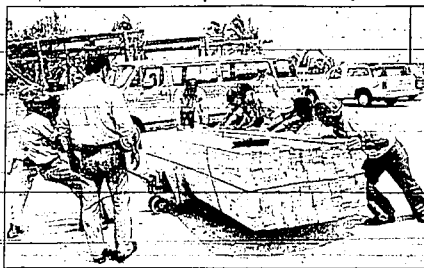

After a week without business, rush-hour traffic jams returned Monday. And a construction boom already has begun in an economically lagging city where unemployment had been approaching 10 percent.

"The recession is over," said West Palm Beach contractor David Graves, who was repairing a roof Sunday in suburban Kendall.

An analyst of hurricane strikes in South Carolina in 1989 showed insurance payments made up for nearly half the $6 billion loss.

Aid from public agencies, primarily for cleanup, police and repairs to public buildings and utilities, totaled $700 million, or about 12 percent of the loss.

Economists estimate construction will be up for at least one month. But the state also is projecting

Navy personnel unload lumber Monday at the Port of Miami; 140,000 fresh unemployment claims because of the hurricane. Southwestern "Miami," the devastated area of Homestead, an agriculture center for about 17,000 migrant farm workers, who were planting fall vegetables when Andrew hit. That crop, nursery plants, limes, "agucados" and mangoes were the biggest losers. In Louisiana, the sugar cane crop, which was ready for harvest, was almost totally destroyed. Gov. Edwin Edwards said damage to his state's farming industry would total up to $200 million.

The storm also damaged oil and gas production platforms in the Gulf of Mexico.

Preconception malpractice suit receives OK

BOSTON (AP) — A woman whose children suffered a blood disease because she didn't get proper medical treatment before they were conceived can pursue a malpractice lawsuit against three doctors, a judge ruled.

Such "preconception" claims are unusual but may become more common as researchers do a better job of spotting risks for birth defects, legal experts said.

"As medicine is more and more able to prevent birth defects prior to conception, and it becomes more accepted to do specific things prior to conception, physicians will be held responsible for the quality of their counseling," said George Annas, a professor of health law at Boston University Medical School.

Jeanine Ullian and her husband, Allan, of Cape Cod are suing three doctors and the private practice where they worked, Falmouth Ob-Gyn Associates Inc., on behalf of Evan, 6, and Danielle, 2.

Dagwood prepares to leave job, take position working for wife

NEW YORK (AP) — A year after Blondie Bunshead rocked comic strip pages by announcing she was getting a job, her chow-hound husband, Dagwood, is bagging his desk job (of nearly 60 years) to work for her, entering business.

Eat your heart out, Dithers! Dagwood, Blondie and their faithful readers will get to digest the idea slowly. It began to unfold this week in the nationally syndicated strip.

On Monday, J.C. Dithers, as always, was chewing Dagwood out. But this time, Dagwood got steamed and told his boss to stop bugging him. Dithers threatened to replace him with a computer.

"Well, see Dagwood increasingly embattled at work. Through the course of the week, he's so troubled he can't sleep," said Amanda Hass, a spokeswoman for King Features Syndicate, which distributes the strip. In a week or two, Blondie will conclude that she needs to hire a jack-of-all-trades for her business — someone "who really knows food."

Hass wouldn't reveal more, saying she didn't want to "spoil the fun" for readers of the strip, which appears in 2,000 newspapers in 54 countries and 35 languages.

"We'll see Dagwood experience — besides his love of food. He's made deliveries for Blondie on weekends."

Dagwood will soon switch bosses from J.C. Dithers, left, to Blondie.

And one Sunday, six guests saw one of his famous "Dagwood" sandwiches, piled high with anything and everything, and signed up as Blondie's customers.

Still, it may not be a career move made in heaven. "I don't know if he should be trusted around all that food," Hass fretted, raising questions about whether the new arrangement will succeed.

Blondie, whose maiden name is Blossie, had a career as a radio comic career solo in 1930. Dagwood became one of her suitors, and they were married in 1933 to create the husband-and-wife theme.

Dagwood — like his wife a preserved "thirtysomething" — has worked for Dithers as an office manager since then. He's been fired and grudgingly rehired hundreds of times.

Though Dagwood often pestered Dithers for more money, he had only one pay raise on the strip's 50th anniversary. "Nobody knows what he does for a living, let alone what he makes," Hass said.

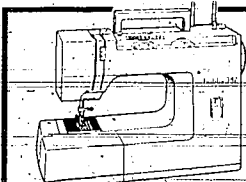

Last Labor Day, Blondie, a lifelong housewife, made headlines by announcing she was getting a job. While Dagwood checked out her new found independence, Blondie secured a loan and opened the catering business with her best friend, Tootsie.

Blondie may consider the new story-line sweet justice. Dagwood's family — his dad was a railroad tycoon — disinherited him when he married her because they thought she was a gold-digger.

Court orders Red Cross to release donor data

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court ruled Monday that a woman whose young son died of AIDS after receiving a suspect blood transfusion is entitled to certain information about a donor, but not his name.

County, S.C., had sought the donor's identity or the chance to question him through a court-appointed official to determine if the Red Cross was negligent in screening his blood. Watson gave birth to premature twins on Feb. 10, 1985. One, twins Trevor, received a number of blood transfusions through April 1985.

Guadalcanal troops pushed their limits

Knight-Ridder News Service

Henderson Field on Guadalcanal had the radio code name "Cactus." The image of a sparse, hostile environment conjured up by that name was certainly fitting. Guadalcanal was a jungle rather than a desert, but if anything the tropical heat was more oppressive because of the high humidity. Mosquitoes were everywhere. Malaria was rampant.

Rain turned the field into a quagmire. There was only 1,000 feet of steel Marston mat on the 3,000 feet of dirt airstrip. The burning sun, however, would dry the field quickly, so quickly it was said that dust could blow in your face while you were still up to your knees in mud.

The island was under siege. Supplies were scarce, and it was unknown when (or if) the next shipment would arrive. The food brought in by the Marines consisted of canned hash, Spam, sausage and dehydrated potatoes. This was supplemented by captured Japanese rice and the occasional stray cow that would wander onto the field. Three meals a day was a luxury.

The pilots and ground crews, like the riflemen, had only the clothes they were wearing when they arrived. They slept in tents in the coconut grove behind the field. There were not enough cots, so most slept on captured Japanese straw mats — and often woke up half buried in mud. At night warships of the "Tokyo Express" would shell the Marines after unloading Japanese troops and supplies. For engine fuel, "Emily" flying boats would drop would drop flares and small bombs as much to disturb sleep as to damage.

To the south, the Marine perimeter was only a half-mile from the airfield. The pilots were on the front line on the ground as well as in the air. "Cactus" was the reason Guadalcanal was a battlefield. It was the object of every attack from land, sea or air.

On Sept. 3, Brig. Gen. Roy Geiger, and a few aides flew into "Cactus" to take command of air operations. The 57-year-old Geiger was a hardbiten product of the Marine tradition, as well as one of the Corps' pioneer flyers. He had been a lawyer in 1907 when the spirit of adventure led him to enlist. He had flown bombing missions against German submarine bases in the First World War. He was determined that "Cactus" would go on the offensive. But in early September, Geiger had few planes to command. Heavy Marine fighter squadrons VMF-223 and VMF-224 and dive-bomber squadrons VMSB-231 and VMSB-232 had been sent to Henderson. There was also a collection of Navy fighters and dive-bombers sent from the carrier Enterprise, after it had been forced to withdraw because of damage. The Army had sent its 67th Fighter Squadron.

These units were now down to one-fourth their original strength. By the middle of the month, the 67th would be down to only two planes.

The constant strain of flying combat every day, sometimes two or even three missions, with short rations and little sleep was pushing pilots to the limits of their endurance. Accident rates went up as fatigue set in. It seemed inevitable that disease, exhaustion and enemy fire would get them at last.

Yet they continued to go up, to push themselves beyond the limits. They did it because they had to. And their efforts would save the island.

Collegian nearly upsets Courier; remaining top seeds advance

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Two aces beat the wild card as top pro Jim Courier barely edged top collegian Alex O'Brien at the U.S. Open on Monday night in a four-set showdown.

For most of the 3-hour, 18-minute match, there was little difference between them except Courier's cap. The same age, the same size and similar in style, Courier came from the school of hard grandstrokes, and O'Brien ranked. Courier said. "He's a better player than that."

Courier recalled playing O'Brien often in juniors as young teens. "We'd play on the baseline, run each other ragged," Courier said. That's about the way they played Monday, except that O'Brien showed a clever and adroit use of touch volleys that Courier has never mastered.

"I wasn't thrilled at the prospect of drawing Courier in the first round," O'Brien said. "Then again it is a great opportunity. It's a great match to play because I have nothing to lose."

Courier barely avoided becoming only the third top-seeded man to lose at the Open since 1980, beating O'Brien 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 7-6 (7-5) on the strength of a few harder shots and a pair of providential aces in the tiebreak.

The first ace, which drew a look of disbelief from O'Brien, gave Courier quadruple match point. O'Brien fought off three of them, but Courier closed it out with his 10th ace of the match.

O'Brien, ranked No. 185, came in as a wild card after winning the NCAA championship. He and Courier, a finalist here last year and a double Grand Slam winner this year, share the same coach and manager. "I had no idea what he's

No grunts from Seles in 1st round

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Shhh. Quiet, please.

A little discretion, this is the U.S. Open. Defending champion and No. 1 seed Monica Seles went through her first match at the final Grand Slam tournament of the year Monday as silently as a church mouse. No grunts. No complaints. Just a coolly efficient 63-minute 7-6, 6-7, 6-0 win over Andrea Keller.

Ironically, whatever noise there was came from the other side of the net. And the loudest thing on the court was Keller's all-out tennis outing.

Seles kept quiet. Her grunting because an issue at Wimbledon when Martina Navratilova and Nathalie Tauziat both complained about it. The fact that Monica lost that tournament and two more since is purely coincidental, according to Seles. "At Wimbledon, I was a little surprised Martina said words about my grunting," Seles said. "Over there, maybe I thought Monica Seles signs autographs after her win Monday.

In fact, Seles said, the other players tease her about it. "There are a few lower-ranked players that do it and when I practiced with a few players, they have been grunting."

The noise pollution issue became a cause celebre at the staid and proper All-England Club, so much so that Seles now laughs about it. "I mean when they bring a grunometer to court, you've got to laugh. You can't make it seriously."

"I don't think about it. It's been part of me always, since I was 12. I never did it on purpose. It became a bigger issue when I became the No. 1 player."

Seles said she has watched tapes of her play and in practice, she never grunts. In matches, however, she was loud enough to send both Tauziat and Navratilova to the chair umpires because of the issue.

She suggested that the Wimbledon complaints might have had a hidden purpose. "It is the biggest tournament. Everybody is going to try anything to distract you."

Rangers, A's swap sluggers

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Oakland Athletics in a shocking move Monday night traded slugger Jose Canseco to the Texas Rangers for outfielder Ruben Sierra, pitcher Bobby Witt, reliever Jeff Russell and cash.

Canseco, a two-time AL home run champion, was hitting .26 this season with 72 homers and 72 RBIs.

Canseco, 28, played right field in the top of the first inning against the Baltimore Orioles and was headed for the on-deck circle in the bottom of the inning when he was called back by manager Tony La Russa and was told of the trade.

"I was kind of close to the on-deck circle and (bench coach) Tommy Reynolds called me over," Sierra Canseco said. "I thought he was going to tell me to stay back on the pitch and then he told me Tony wanted to see me. When he told me I was traded I was thinking this isn't April Fool's Day. Tony hugged me in the runway."

Canseco then cleaned out his locker at the Oakland Coliseum and sat in the locker room for several minutes in stunned disbelief.

Canseco attended a news conference in the basement of the Coliseum still dressed in his Oakland uniform.

"From your view it makes a lot of sense from a business-point-of-view," Canseco said. "Maybe it's an indication it's time to move on."

Vincent puts realignment on reserve

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Commissioner Fay Vincent has effectively abandoned his attempt for National League realignment next season, and the league is leaning toward a balanced schedule because of expansion.

Deputy commissioner Stephen Greenberg said Monday that the commissioner's office had rejected NL president Bill White's permission to issue a 1993 draft schedule without the realignment Vincent ordered on July 6. The Chicago Cubs one of the four teams affected; obtained a preliminary injunction in federal court blocking realignment, and Vincent's appeal is not scheduled to be heard until Sept. 30.

The Major League Baseball Players Association, which already had pushed back the schedule deadline a month to Aug. 1, refused to grant a second extension.

"We understand that the union is pushing for a schedule and that they have a contractual right to a schedule," Greenberg said. "What we have done is take the commissioner's office out of it. We have notified Bill White that under the current status quo the Cubs and the Cardinals are in the East and that if he issues a schedule with the Cubs and Cardinals in the East we understand that"

Major leagues prepare to tell September stories

The Associated Press

After a season of turmoil in the commissioner's office and staggering attendance, baseball is finally ready for some pennant races.

September — when college and pro football starts, the U.S. Open is played across the street from Shea Stadium and when baseball players and fans start peering a little more at the scoreboard.

The Pittsburgh Pirates and Atlanta Braves may be feuding for a rematch in the National League playoffs. The once mighty Oakland A's, meanwhile, seem to have things almost wrapped up in the AL West.

The best news looks like it will come in the AL East where Toronto, Baltimore and Milwaukee are fighting for the lead. The Blue Jays still have pitching problems despite the addition of David Cone, who has a weary right arm.

Going down the stretch, Toronto may have trouble matching the Orioles' rotation of Mike Mussina, Ben McDonald, Rick Sutcliffe (4-0 in August) and Arthur Rhodes. Toronto needs a healthy Juan Gonzalez and rotation after Chris Bosio, Bill Wegman and Jamie Navarro. At least one September highlight for Milwaukee will be Robin Yount's countdown to 3,000 career hits.

The Blue Jays visit Baltimore Sept. 22-24.

Despite an injury-plagued starting rotation, it's unlikely the veteran Athletics will blow their big lead in the AL West. Dennis Eckersley could be headed for AL MVP honors and the Cy Young Award.

The defending World Series champion Twins went into a hitting and pitching slump the last two months and show no signs of coming out of it. They have three games left with the A's, Sept. 14-16.

"We need to be within three or four games by the time we go to Oakland," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "It doesn't look good right now but you can pick up three or four games in a week if things break right."

In the NL East, Pirates manager Jim Leyland has done a marvelous job juggling his pitchers and almost always inserting the right sub at just the right time. Until Zane Smith is healthy, Leyland should be able to hold off the Expos with a rotation of Doug

Winfield powers Jays over White Sox

TORONTO (AP) — Dave Winfield hit a three-run homer, giving him a third-straight RBI in a month, and Todd Stottlemyer threw a five-hitter as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Chicago White Sox 9-2 Monday night.

Winfield, who's driven in 87 runs this season, got his 25th homer as part of a four-run fourth-inning outburst. George Bell's mark of 31 RBIs, set in May 1987.

Stottlemyer (9-9), who pitched a one-hit shutout against Chicago in his last start, gave up two runs, had six strikeouts and a walk for his fifth complete game of the season.

DETROIT (AP) — Gene Larkin's two-run double in the 10th inning lifted Minnesota to a 5-3 victory over Detroit.

After consecutive singles by Greg Gagne and Chuck Knoblauch, Detroit reliever Mike Timmerman (4) appeared to have struck out Larkin. But Mickey Tetlowen could not handle the foul tip, giving Larkin another chance. He lined the next pitch just inside the rightfield line, moving in the go-ahead runs.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Larry Walker drove in five runs with a two-run homer, a two-run single and a double to lead Montreal past slumping Cincinnati.

It was the fifth straight loss for Cincinnati, dropping the Red's game behind Atlanta in the NL West following the Braves' win in the first game of a doubleheader at New York. The win pulled Montreal within three games of the Pittsburgh in the NL East.

The five-RBI night was a career high for Walker. He drove in four on May 10, 1991, at San Diego.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bob Tewksbury pitched a seven-hitter and Andres Galarraga hit a home run as St. Louis beat San Diego.

Tewksbury (14-5) lowered his major league-leading earned run average to 2.92. He struck four and walked three.

Galarraga hit 16 homers in 201 innings, but has not walked a batter in 17 of his 27 starts. In three games against the Padres, he has struck out 21 batters and walked three with just two earned runs allowed.

Braves 8, Mets 6

NEW YORK (AP) — Oles Nixson hit a home run, and Steve Oskan pitched the 14th inning and the Atlanta Braves stopped the New York Mets.

Nixson hit a two-run homer, his 18th, in a five-run third inning.

The White Sox scored in the fourth on Robin Ventura's sacrifice fly and Dan Pasqua's RBI single.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Texas finished up the worst August in team history by trading for Oakland slugger Jose Canseco, sending outfielder Robin Sierra, starter Bobby Witt, closer Jeff Russell and cash to the Athletics on Monday night.

The shocking move came during Kansas City's 5-2 victory, the Rangers' 18th loss in August and just one away from a franchise all-time club record of 19 set in May 1990.

U.S. Amateur champ takes title in stride

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Justin Leonard sounded as though he was just in from a casual round of golf instead of one that allowed him to follow in the footsteps of Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Bobby Jones as U.S. Amateur champion.

"It was a lot of fun. It didn't seem like a lot of work," Leonard said Monday after grabbing control early in an 8 and 7 victory over Thomas Scherrer at Murrifield Village Golf Club.

The margin was the largest in an Amateur final since 1983.

"Today I felt like I had a lot of control, but I was nervous," Leonard said. "I could pretty much place the ball where I wanted to. I can really only think of a couple of shots that I missed."

Leonard hit 25 of 29 greens and chipped in on half of the greens he missed.

The victory meant Leonard will be paired with another Texas golf legend, U.S. Open champion Tom Kite, at next year's U.S. Open at Baltusor. Kite was on hand for part of the final stretch of the 16th Sunday at the World Series of Golf.

"I don't know him very well, but I've got a feeling we're going to get to know each other a little better," Leonard said laughing.

Leonard was 5-up through the first 18 holes of the 36-hole final. He never trailed after winning the second hole.

Justin Leonard of Dallas celebrates his U.S. Amateur Championship win Monday.

Scherrer, a former University of North Carolina golfer, won three holes, while Leonard won 11.

Leonard, 20, was 5-under par for the day. 11 shots better than Scherrer. "I ran into a great player, but I had less trouble," Leonard said. "I'm glad I won this week whether it turns out to be a career or not."

with Monica Seles and Steffi Graf taking off in a hurry. Jimmy Connors drew more attention practicing on an outdoor court, the crowd packed 10,000 deep, and he stayed around almost as long as they did.

The 21,000 fans during the afternoon got more ambience than tennis, more kiosks than courts, and they searched everywhere in vain to match the excitement of last year's opening day. No one could ever find Court 3, once a pleasant view from the stadium, now a faded court.

"And thanks to a new format that spreads out the first round over three days, the program lacked a marquee match.

Seles was on and off in 45 minutes, and beat a 6-1, 6-0 winner over Andrei Kellner, who opened eyes only with his blond net dress. Graf one-upped Seles, saying goodbye in 42 minutes, 6-0, 6-2 over Halle Griep.

Fading NFL stars lose their luster

The Associated Press

The careers of Otis Anderson and some other NFL fixtures may have ended on gaudy day Monday. More likely, many were just interrupted for a day or two. Joe Montana, on the other hand, appears headed against his will to injured reserve, the victim of the sore right elbow that has plagued him for over a year.

Anderson, MVP of the Super Bowl two years ago and the eighth leading rusher in NFL history, was cut by the New York Giants as NFL teams reached — or got close to — the 47-player regular-season limit.

San Francisco coach George Seifert, meanwhile, said he planned to place Montana on injured reserve to rehabilitate the elbow which caused him to undergo surgery and miss all of last season.

Steve Bano, one of Montana's backups, said he would like to go on the practice squad. He would then be available to return to the team. Bano also said Montana was upset because he felt he would be ready to play in less than the month he must stay on the list. "I think we all know Joe well, and I think we know how much he loves to play," Seifert said. "I would like to think that the interstudies that we're doing what we think is in his best interest and, obviously, the football team's, too."

For many of those released, including the 48-year-old Anderson, the cuts are no more than a nuisance that allows them to play players on injured reserve after the end of the week.

They may be brought back after clearing waivers later this week after the IR list is established. Or they may have been told "stick around in shape and you'll be back later," as has happened to many in the past.

It also works the other way. Players, particularly rookies, who seem to have "made" their teams on Monday, may be cut Tuesday to make way for players picked up off waivers. Moreover, any player signed in the last two weeks, like tight end Jay Novacek of the Dallas Cowboys, has a two-week exemption, meaning more players may be cut later this week to make room for them.

"Where else can you go if you're cut? It's never easy, but you just have to live with it," said 30-year-old fullback, Bill Jordan, cut Monday by New Orleans. It was the second time for Jordan, who was released in 1989 and 1991.

Seattle's tight end, Mike Phipps, who was released last week, said he would like to be pulled right into the last minute even to get the released players that had been cut. "In fact, so un-final were the cutouts on the 'final' cut-out day that San Francisco let itself without a punter by releasing Joe Drotos and several other players with just three weeks' reserves."

But San Francisco has six candidates for IR, headed by Montana, and its waived players could be cut by mid-week.

Felix Anderson, whom coach Ray Ruzicki said he would "hug" later this week, "many of those being over 30 — all things being equal, teams almost always opt for younger and youth."

Among the older players cut were Miami's Ken Forth and wide receiver Stanley Johnson of Denver, running back Morgan Hector and defensive tackle Bill Pickel of the New York Jets, utility man Larry Spolansky of San Francisco, running back Albert Bentley of Indianapolis, Seattle safety Nesby Glasnow, and running back Dana Nelson of Minnesota.

The Los Angeles Rams released running back Marcus Dupree, who led the team in rushing during preseason and appeared in his best shape since he began his comeback in 1990 from a knee injury in 1985.

Both starting wide safeties in last year's Super Bowl were cut. Washington released 28-year-old Alvin Walton, its starter for the past three years and leading tackler for four of those, and Buffalo cut Dwight Drane, who replaced the injured Leonard Smith. Smith has since retired.

San Francisco cut half last year's starting secondary — Todd Bowles and Darryl Pollard, Pittsburgh cut offensive lineman Tom Ricketts, its No. 1 pick in 1989, and coach Bill Cowher said he was considering cutting linebacker Huey Richardson, the No. 1 choice in 1991.

Vince Evans, the 37-year-old third-string quarterback of the Los Angeles Raiders, was released, then told he would be brought back to the waiver list next year before that.

Other quarterbacks may be back without them. "I would be shocked, but I know things will work out," said 33-year-old Jeff Kemp, who lost out to David Archer for Philadelphia's third-string quarterback spot. "I've played for and helped four teams, and I ended last season winning games. So when the need comes, I'm sure someone is going to call."

Kemp was joined in the pool of unemployed veteran quarterbacks by Mike Tomczak, released by Green Bay, Anthony Dilweg (Reading, Pa.), Wilhelm (Cincinnati), Troy Taylor (Jets), Rick Stray (Pittsburgh), and Jeff Carlson (Chicago). Tomczak's release opened a spot for Ty Detmer.

No surprises at amateur tourney

Randy Williams Bowling

"Surely I am not the only one who has noticed what I will, for lack of a better term, call 'The Bowline' law of bowling. Simply put, the law states that whenever a national Amateur Bowlers Inc. tournament is locally held, a 'Bowline' either Carol or David of Halley will take top honors. The 'Bowline' law is one of those rules of nature which is as predictable as a 27-year-old's preference for a over-steamed carrots. The 'Bowline' law is certainly the order of the day during the NABF night games this month at the Bowline in the Twin Falls. In the tournament's qualifying round, David and partner Ken Courtney (Jim) had ahead of the other men's group of Delna and Coby Magee, 15-16-14-78. In the head-to-head final, Magee and Courtney had first into the hole, 21-14-14-78. Courtney and Ken, 21-14-14-78, and teammate Bruce Wampler, took third.

Those wishing to test the "Bowline" law at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 12 when the Bowline hosts its next NABF Non-members are welcome.

"Strategic planning is an annual commitment for the Bowline, and the bowline would be a new, exciting, fun to play and beginning to take the first few tentative steps of the new season in the Bowline, Mike and Jerome bowling alley are now back to full time operations, with many leagues starting in soon.

Those who frequent Magic Bowl will take note that they now have a new manager, Jerry Miller, whose knowledge of the sport is beyond question, took over the reigns of control this summer. Kay's lunch counter is now open with several new items on the menu. But one thing at Magic will never change. Kay's

Michigan-born, French-Canadian Magic's Pee Wee and Senior Leagues will begin right after the Twin Falls Community Fair. Odds and Ends: The Bowling Government, comprised of Fred, Fred and Carol, On and Crystal Turner, captured first in the Bowline's Hall and Hall League. George Ward had a 242; Eddie Chapman, a 633; junior Brian Devine had a 209 and 527; fellow junior Cory Moore, a 208 and 225. A Marge McWhorter scored a 172, a 170, and a 1459.

Bowling pop quiz: Which Magic Valley bowler recently won $48,000 on a progressive slot machine in Jackpot? Discretion does not allow for the public disclosure of her name, but those with inquiring minds who want to know can poke their noses "into" the Twin Falls Women's Bowling Association for further details.

This will be the last of the monthly bowling columns during the summer. Look for weekly columns appearing sometime around mid-September.

Castledale Wolves

Wolves Coach Bill Garrison has his chances for another playoff appearance. After finishing in a three way tie at the top of the Magic Valley Conference and earning an A-1 playoff berth, Castledale looks to remain atop this season.

The 42 points per game average for the 1991 Wolves, was helped by Mike Wiggins, the leading rusher for Castledale.

Although Wiggins is gone, quarterback Steve Vulgurne is back, along with leading receiver Willie Barnes. Senior Sam Lowder, another one of Vulgurne's favorite targets is also back. All three will also start in the defensive backfield.

Up front, offensively and defensively, seniors Alan Morrison, Brian Pryor, Casey Knudsen, and Junior Chenda are the Wolves' main reasons to smile.

The only job to fill is the one created by the absence of Vapornis at running back. Garrison is looking for Lew Tardoff, a 10-5 sophomore, to fill the shoes of Vapornis.

Filer Wildcats

The Filer Wildcats, hoping to improve on a 2-6 record, have some good news this year. It's the return of four players in key positions that should make Filer a better club this year.

Quarterback Mitch Brooks and wide receiver Roger Satterfield will key the offense. Up front, it's tackle Jim Kimball and guard Janie Brackett to protect the Wildcats passing game. All four will also play defense.

Jeremy Runtfelt and Robyn Swainston look to be one of the keys on offense with a little experience in the ball.

You can also look for Ryan Mai, Tim Triplett, Levi Cress and Mike McCabe to add some size and power up front for Filer. The only problem for Filer is depth, where many of the players will have to play both ways and injuries could be a key factor in the Wildcats season.

Christian Academy Trojans

The Academy will again play a JV schedule, where it racked up an 11-1 mark in 1991.

The Trojans return setters Kelli Linn (5-5 junior) and Barb Stukenholtz (5-4 junior) along with hitters, Jessica Patton and Kristine Fortner (5-6 sophomore) and Gracia Holtz (5-11 junior).

Lisa Bleck, a 5-8 junior hitter, and Mandy Makings, a 5-2 junior setter, will be counted on to contribute.

"Basically, we have the same team we had in year 7," said Trojans Coach Brent Walker. "We had several changes, but could have gone either way last year, so we'll have to improve to have a good record again this year."

Twin Falls Bruins

A pair of seniors represent all the varsity experience for the Bruins to start the season.

Middle hitter Jenni Gould (12-7) and 5-8 outside hitter Sara Robertson, started last year for Twin Falls and are the only players back from the 1991 squad.

Coach Jerry Stubbs hopes good quickness in his hitters will help the Bruins to stay in their usual solid defense.

Junior's Rachael Lyman (5-8) and Ali McFarlane (5-7) should help at outside hitting spots as should 5-10 sophomore Emily Naughton at the middle.

The Bruins' top setter is sophomore, Tami Finner, who should be a good asset.

Minico Spartans

Coach Guy Stubbs hopes to make a big jump in A-1 volleyball this year with four starters returning from last year's campaign.

Fred, a 5-10 sophomore, is the Spartans' outside hitter. Chris Van and Tony Ben and 5-11 middle hitter, Tim, will provide the returning experience for the Spartans.

Minico has a strong defense in a good ability to work together to reach that goal. Stubbs said, "We have the ability to finish in the top five on defense this year," Stubbs said.

Stubbs sighted concerns about consistency and a need to take charge on the floor, but expects both problems to dissipate as the team meshes together.

The Spartans will receive help from senior outside hitter Cam Anderson joining hitters April Shaw and Sabrina Noble as well as Cindy Christensen at middle blocker.

Declu Hornets

The Hornets will try to face down some tough competition this year with help from four returning starters.

Coach Lynn Payne thinks her returning players will be the team's biggest asset, but is concerned with the overall youth of the team.

Two seniors, 5-10 hitter Jennifer Bell and 5-7 setter Mimmy Osterhout lead the starters.

Junior's Kaye Chastain, a 5-8 hitter and 5-6 defensive specialist, Mindy Mendenhall also return to their starting positions.

Payne will also look for help from sophomores Becky Brinson, Molly Jorgensen and Janie Malloy.

NFL discounts Plan B free agency contention

MINNEAPOLIS — An NFL economic accord Monday that the eight players who filed an antitrust suit against the league weren't damaged by the Plan B free agency system and that their damage claim, filed in Washington, D.C., based on the deal, is not the owners, said the NFL players' attorney, Michael Glesman, was Monday.

"I don't think Mr. Glesman's damage suit is a viable claim for antitrust," Owen told the eight-player group.

The deal resumed shortly after David Boner attended to another case. Attorneys for the players said the economic plan is a "free agency" which means the deal may go to the players' suit as next week. The players' submitted a 10-1 free agency plan to the NFL last week.

without giving his present team first chance at signing him or forcing his new club to compensate his present club if he goes elsewhere.

The unprotected players become Plan B free agents for two months, between Feb. 1 and April 1, after which their playing rights revert back to their original team.

The plaintiffs argue that Plan B unfairly blocked them from negotiating with other teams. No protected players have changed teams under Plan B.

Using Glesman's estimates, the eight players would have received an average salary $500,000 higher than their 1990 contracts in an open market.

Owen said Glesman's accounting methods were inappropriate because he assumed every protected player was injured by Plan B. Some players received big raises under Plan B, while others got no raise at all, Owen said.

To succeed in Congress, Crapo must sharpen hiring

Who you elect a member of Congress, it's not just the candidate you're sending to Washington.

You're also choosing a whole cadre of aides, assistants, spear-carriers and factotums who will, for better or worse, make many of the day-to-day decisions for the elected official.

Dan McConaughy, who resigned Monday as press secretary to the Republican congressional candidate Mike Crapo, was not of the caliber we expect of a congressional press secretary.

McConaughy is a former Twin Falls state trooper best known for his vocal opposition in the spring of 1987 to building a new Twin Falls County jail. He quit as Crapo's press aide Monday.

Published reports said he made nearly $1,300 in telephone calls to a cruise ship in Panama last March, either from state phones or on a state credit card, and that he has not paid a $735 bill for a car allegedly rented for state business.

His speedy departure was a prudent move by Crapo.

Like some people who eventually end up on the public payroll, McConaughy worked on the fringes of the media before he found a job with government and eventually became an aide to the Idaho Senate's Republican caucus.

It is often the case that led to a job in the campaign. Such campaign jobs often lead to key staff positions if the candidate wins.

The trouble with that system is that it puts people without any particular training into complex jobs and little oversight in performing it.

Elected officials are busy people who depend heavily on the reliability, integrity and initiative of the people who work for them. When staff work suffers, so does government.

If they're smart, elected officials choose their key staff people carefully, because they know a good staff can make or break a public official.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, for example, might not be as effective as he is without a Marc Johnson, his capable chief of staff, or Chuck Moss, his in-house budget manager. Former Sen. Jim McClure was well-served by a couple of pros in Fred Neunenschwander, his long-time administrative assistant, and H.D. Palmer, his press secretary.

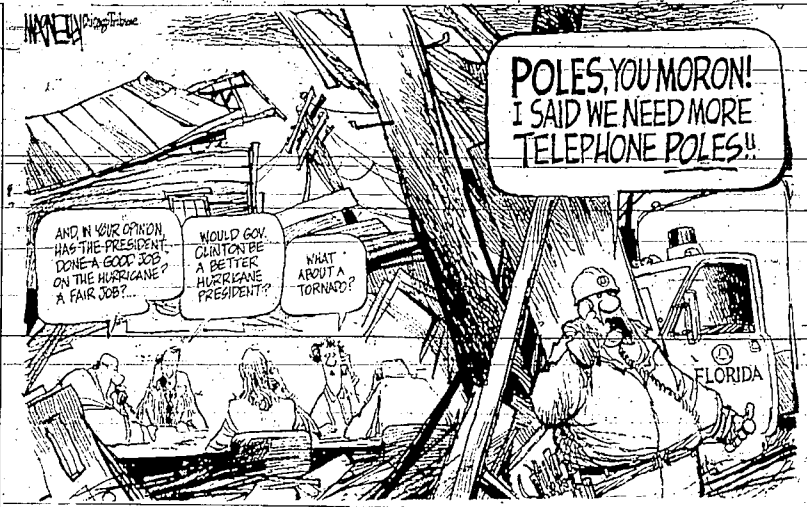

And the list of Frank Church staff alumni ranges from U.S. Rep. Larry LaRocco to Boise City Councilman Mike Wellmer to Jerry Brady, the publisher of the Idaho Falls Post-Register.

Both Crapo and his Democratic opponent, state Auditor J.D. Williams, have had some rocky times with their staffs so far in the campaign. Williams came under fire earlier this summer when it was disclosed that one of his aides, Jeff Friel, had made campaign telephone calls from the state auditor's office.

Friel eventually resigned because of the controversy, just as McConaughy has done.

If Crapo is elected, what he is able to accomplish as a congressman will depend heavily on whom he hires to help him.

We hope he chooses more wisely from now on.

The GOP's ugly twist on family values

If you're somewhat puzzled about the relevance of "family values" to the presidential race, foreign observers are completely stumped.

Alexander Shalnev, Washington-based correspondent for the Russian daily Izvestia, usually an astute commentator, has found it impossible to explain to Moscow readers what family values have to do with the election. In defense, he says the American press hasn't explained it well either.

Does it mean politics and economics are not important? Shalnev asked an interviewer from National Public Radio, or "Is there nothing else to think about?"

Well, Mr. Shalnev, here's one explanation. Ever since you and your compatriots ceased to be the conservatives' primary objects of fear and loathing, they've had to turn on other Americans.

Hard-working, law-abiding Americans who happen to be Democrats, working mothers, minorities, non-Christians, city dwellers, gays, intellectuals, art lovers are now the targets of Republican hostility.

President Bush isn't by nature a hate monger. So he invites men such as Pat Buchanan and Newt Gingrich to incite the crowd on his behalf. The morning after, he retires on Barbara to make nice with the public, and then denies responsibility for other men's speeches.

The president is a master at this business because words for him have no definite meaning. In the span of a week, he and his surrogates have transformed the invidious term "family values" into code for white, Christian, middle-brow, suburban intolerance.

This talent for taking a benign symbol and shipping it into something ugly helped win the 1988 election.

They attacked Michael Dukakis' patriotism because the Massachusetts governor refused to force teachers to recite the Pledge of Allegiance against their will.

Terry Tang

He bashed the Democrat for getting Big Brother out of the classroom and off the teachers' backs.

And it worked. This time, instead of the pledge and the flag, Bush is trying for bigger stakes. His campaign is trying to make motherhood a Republican plank.

This weekend, Bush even claimed a higher authority, criticizing the Democratic platform for having "left out three simple letters, G-O-D."

The recent assaults on Hillary Clinton's hairbands and her decision to attend a different church than her spouse come off as insane.

More scary is how good the Bush campaign is at twisting her words into something that sounds vaguely un-American. She's the first candidate's wife with a paper trail; the Bush camp has been busy digging up every legal article she has ever written.

The effort to make Hillary Clinton, the former chairman of the Children's Defense Fund, a nonpartisan agency that lobbies for better nutrition and schooling for poor children, ... out to be an anti-family radical shows how little truth matters.

Clinton has written that minims, faced with irreversible decisions such as childbearing or surgery for facial deformities, should have someone say in the decision.

The president translates this to mean she'd encourage kids to hire lawyers and lead their parents into court.

These fibs show Bush has no intention of engaging in serious discourse. He probably figures any promise made now — tax cuts, job training, education funding — can be broken later by redefining his terms.

Meanwhile, he is spinning around the country playing the messenger of doubts and resentment.

In his convention acceptance speech, Bush said, "I want to be fair and factual" in quoting a remark by Bill Clinton. But apart from that one instance, hyperbole, distortion, outright lies have become standard fare.

So Buchanan can hold his audience rapt with a fabricated story about armed federal troops facing down lovers at an L.A. nursing home.

Gingrich can denounce Democrats for "weird values" while insinuating the Woody Allen scandal is condoned by their platform.

Vice President Quayle can pluck a number 128 out of thin air and accuse Clinton of raising taxes that many times in Arkansas.

And the president can call for an across-the-board tax cut knowing full well the nation cannot afford a tax break in the face of the $400 billion deficit.

These tricks an experienced reporter like Shalnev understands completely. It's the family angle that perplexes him.

Shalnev noted on NPR that there were 20 Bush and Quayle children and grandchildren at the convention podium, compared with five kids for Clinton and Gore.

He asked, Does this mean Bush-Quayle is four times more pro-family than the Democratic ticket?

Mr. Shalnev, you catch on quick. Strange as it seems, this may be the first presidential race in which fecundity is made a measure of patriotism.

Reason to brag about Bush's domestic record

President Bush should run on his record. His domestic record.

It is a common, trendy political comment in the country and most of Bush's political advisers seem to believe that his only chance is to run away from that record. Yet Bush's handling of the economy will probably be remembered by history as one of the best by a president in this century.

The United States and the world are almost certainly headed for a great turn-of-the-century economic boom.

The three great engines of the boom will be the firm defeat of the Great Inflation of the 1970s, the relatively orderly collapse of communism and the expansion of free trade.

Most of the credit for all three goes to Bush.

Fried is criticized for doing little about the recession, but his policy has been just right. The current slump is worldwide, and the United States is doing better than most other trading partners.

Many of the causes, such as the vast investment in Eastern Europe, which is contributing to a worldwide rise in real interest rates, will be positive in the long run.

The last thing we need under these circumstances is a president who would panic and start pulling out all the stimulative stops to take a recovery before the election.

Bush has risked his re-election to do the right thing. The Green Inflation, brought on by the abandonment of the dollar-gold standard in the 1970s and only partly tamed by Ronald Reagan, has been fatally wounded by Bush and current Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan.

As a result, both short- and long-term nominal interest rates are at roughly 20-year lows or better, and the market seems to be anticipating the anticipated inflation premium for long-term rates.

Already, as Bear Stearns chief economist Lawrence Kudlow points out, low inflation and interest rates are providing a sizable "monetary tax cut," lowering the cost of doing business, hastening the shrinking debt, encouraging both consumer and capital purchases, and long-term investment.

The drop in mortgage interest rates alone has given homeowners a "tax cut" of nearly $30 billion a year. Much of the credit goes to Greenspan. But presidents can either protect the Fed or frustate it. Jimmy Carter's Greenspan and replaced him with pliable G. William Miller, who revived the economy up to double-digit inflation.

Bush, by contrast, reappointed Greenspan to another term even after the chairman, made it excruciatingly clear that he was not going to sacrifice the fight against inflation to Bush's re-election. Senior Fed officials say that Bush has been more supportive of their austere policy than any president in memory.

On trade, Bush has been brilliant and brave, resisting demagogues who would ignite a trade war to pick up a few votes; successfully using the Uruguay round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade negotiations to reduce world agricultural subsidies, opening markets for American goods; and convincing consumers billions of dollars in annual food costs; and bringing Mexico into the North American Free Trade Agreement, which, despite the dangerous nonsense spouted at the Democratic convention, will mean more high-paying industrial jobs for Americans.

Since Mexico joined GATT in 1986 and sharply reduced its trade barriers, U.S. exports to Mexico have doubled. U.S. factories in Mexico use American capital goods, American parts, American steel. For every dollar increase in Mexican GNP, 15 cents is spent on U.S. goods.

As for the collapse of communism, however chaotic the Eastern economies look now, the liberation of individual enterprise will inevitably create a human tidal wave of productivity, a dramatic increase in world GNP and a huge expansion in the markets for American goods.

Unfortunately, until Bush's fiery acceptance speech in Houston, the administration had not seriously tried to explain why the president deserves credit for the Evil Empire's orderly demise. Mesmerized by voter anger over the economy's current difficulties, the Bush people seem afraid to brag about their very real domestic achievements.

Richard Vigilante writes about politics for a number of national publications and is working on a book about the future of American labor. He wrote this article for the Los Angeles Times.

Pick landfill site and stick to it

It's time that the Twin Falls County commissioners quit surrendering to the petitions and protestors. I am speaking specifically about choosing a site for the county landfill, but other areas could be criticized.

If I were on the board, they appointed to pick a site for the landfill, I would, quoting the lyrics of an old western ballad, tell them to "take this job and shove it."

We have lived one mile from the present landfill for 23 years. We couldn't care less if they decided to shove the present location and continue on.

In fact, we hope they do. The ever-expanding runways at Joslin Field have almost cut us off from the outside world. We live in a spot that literally "you can't get there from here."

When we direct people to our premises, we say, "You know where the county dump is?" and everyone does.

Thanks for help with blown tire

Hats off to a great resident of Twin Falls! On July 19, I was driving my truck and camper to a family outing at Iron Creek in the Stanley Basin. It was about 14 miles out of Stanley towards Galena Summit when I had a blowout on the right rear tire of the truck.

Not being familiar with the area, I decided I needed to find a phone and see if I could get someone to come and fix it.

About that time, Ken Cazier stopped to see if he could be of help. Two jacks and one hour later, it was changed and I was on my way again.

It was a tough, miserable job and I am just so grateful for his willingness to help.

Thanks, Ken.

I hope if you ever need some help there is someone as nice as you to "fill the bill."

Daughters mourn, cope with deaths

NAPLES (AP) — Randy Weaver's two older daughters are mourning the violent deaths of their mother and brother, but otherwise were coping well with the siege of their isolated home, a family friend said Monday.

"It's becoming more and more difficult for me to even refer to them as girls," said neighbor Jackie Brown, allowed by authorities to enter the Weaver cabin Sunday with intermediary James "Bo" Griz, a Special Forces lieutenant colonel and Populist Party candidate for president. "They're very intelligent, articulate ... bright young ladies," Brown said of Sara, 16, and Rachel, 10. Weaver's youngest daughter, Elisabeth, is 10 months old.

"We're not dealing with children here," she said of the older girls, whose father is a devotee of the Transhumanist Movement, which combines Old Testament, right-wing and white-supremacist beliefs. "They're still strong in their beliefs and mourning for their brother and their mother."

Brown made her statements before Weaver surrendered Monday afternoon.

Vicki Weaver, 43, died Aug. 22, in a shootout with federal agents. Her body remained in the kitchen until it was removed Sunday by Griz and Brown.

Samuel Weaver, 14, was fatally shot Aug. 21 when he, his father and a family friend had an armed confrontation with six U.S. deputy marshals conducting a reconnaissance of the cabin. The boy's body was found by authorities in an outbuilding near the cabin Aug. 23. A deputy U.S. marshal also died in that shooting, which began the standoff that was in its 14th day Monday.

The family withdrew to their Ruby Ridge redoubt in February 1991 after Weaver failed to appear in court on a federal weapons charge.

Federal agents allowed Brown to take buckets of water and towels into the cabin Sunday after Vicki Weaver's body was removed, she said.

The bullet that killed Vicki Weaver was from "a very large caliber gun," Brown said. "It destroyed her beautiful face. It took away most of the side of her face. She fell to the floor in such a way that thank the Creator, the baby was not hurt."

Brown said she planned to watch out for the girls as the standoff winds down and then work with their slain mother's parents — Dave and Jeanne Jordan of Fort Dodge, Iowa — to arrange future care.

Vicki Weaver was shot as she stood behind a door to the cabin, the baby in her arms, Brown said, relating the shooting as it was described to her by Weaver.

Vicki had opened the door for her husband, Sara, and family friend Kevin Harris, Brown said. There is a window in the door, she said. "Vicki was standing behind the door with the door wide open, the baby in her left arm. She was not wearing a weapon. The only thing she was carrying was that child," Brown said. "They entered the house — Randy first, Sara in the middle and Kevin following. ... They wanted Sara in between to save her from any shots that were fired."

"Vicki was standing behind the door motioning for them to come in. The bullet entered the window pane and struck her, in the right side of the head," Brown said, gesturing toward her temple.

"I've seen the bullet hole through the window pane. It was a very accurate shot," she said. "In my opinion, there were others entering the door that would've been a much easier shot," Brown said.

New fire breaks out near Salmon River

The Associated Press

Land managers mobilized a new fire management team Monday after an attempt to set a backfire in an area on the Porcupine Fire Complex just north of central Idaho's famed Salmon River caused a new fire to the south.

Spokesman Dale Gaskill said the 500-acre Tomato Point Fire was ignited Sunday evening apparently by a malfunction on the helicopter, that was dropping the chemically treated flammable ping-pong balls fire bosses use to start backfires.

Of one hundred elite hotshot firefighters were quickly rushed to the steep, rugged terrain to begin initial attack and set up protective areas around both the Shepp Ranch resort and the historic Polly Bemis Ranch — both within a mile of the new blaze.

"We've had problems with weather, we had problems with wind," Gaskill said. "It's continued to grow and move, and that's the reason why the backburns were initiated to provide black-acres that area at the Shepp Ranch and up that drainage."

Fire bosses, however, did declare contained the other two fires in the Payette National Forest, and crews continued to be released from the massive Foothills Fire in southwestern Idaho.

Manpower that topped 3,000 last week was down to 2,200 Monday and continuing to decline as firefighters moved to within a few miles of closing the containment line around the fire's 12-mile perimeter. Containment is still set for next Sunday.

Guests at the Shepp Ranch were evacuated as a precaution. And another 10 20-man fire crews were called in to reinforce the attack.

It was a major setback in the drive by strategists to rein in a wildfire that has already

Sides give different versions of shootouts

NAPLES (AP) — Differing versions of who shot whom have emerged from the remote northern Idaho hilltop where fugitive Randy Weaver is holed up.

Information on what happened had come from sporadic press conferences by federal officers at the scene and from public affairs offices in Washington, D.C. All of that changed last week, when FBI's Green Beret Lt. Col. James "Bo" Griz surfaced as a go-between.

Griz started talking to Weaver on Friday using a bullhorn to shout through the wooden cabin walls. Weaver appeared anxious to get his version of events out to the world through Griz.

Federal authorities at the scene have released little information about the initial shootings Aug. 21 that preceded the standoff.

But arrest warrants said Weaver,

44, son Samuel Weaver, 14, and family friend Kevin Harris, 24, were outside the cabin when a United States marshal came upon them.

Weaver and Harris began, with the aid of a dog, to pursue the deputy. United States marshals and opened gunfire on them.

The documents alleged Degan "did not identify himself as a United States marshal and Kevin Harris did immediately turn a rifle upon the said William F. Degan and did discharge a bullet," that struck the deputy in the chest, killing him.

Griz, however, said Weaver told him his son fired that bullet outside the cabin, which he killed Degan. But a letter allegedly written Wednesday by Weaver and Harris and circulated Sunday by their friends contends that Harris claimed credit for shooting Degan after Samuel was shot.

The letter's authenticity could not immediately be confirmed.

Marshals' sources initially reported that Deputy Marshal Arthur D. Roderick shot and killed one of the Weaver family dogs that was about to attack.

The affidavit in support of the warrant said a bullet coming from the direction of Weaver put a hole in the shirt worn by Roderick, but did not hit him. Weaver and Harris have both been charged with assault on a U.S. marshal for allegedly shooting at Roderick.

Weaver's version was that he fired a single blast from his pump shotgun into the air to let the others know where he was, then the gun jammed. Griz said Weaver told him he then fired three or four rounds into the air from a 9mm pistol he carried and yelled at the others to join him at a road leading to the cabin.

Authorities had initially said the bullets came from the cabin without warning.

They have not said how Samuel Weaver was involved in the exchange of gunfire that killed him, nor have they said who fired the fatal bullets.

Griz said Weaver told him that he, Harris and Sam Weaver started deputy U.S. marshals watching the cabin, and their Labrador retriever charged the agents. After one of the deputy marshals killed the dog, Sam yelled, "You shot my dog" and then shot Degan, Griz recounted.

He said Weaver told him that another deputy marshal shot Sam in the arm. The boy turned and fled, but was killed with another round to the back, he reported Weaver saying.

Griz said Saturday that Weaver and Harris feel that they are the victims of a criminal action and will not be able to get a fair trial.

Supremacists' wives recall earlier death

NAPLES (AP) — Among the people keeping vigil over the standoff with fugitive Randy Weaver were two women who lost their husbands in similar confrontations with federal authorities.

The husbands of Debbie Mathews and Jeanné Yarbrough were leaders of the violent white-supremacist sect known as The Order. The group assassinated a Denver radio talk-show host, staged armored car robberies and committed other crimes in the mid-1980s as part of a planned, Aryan revolution.

Robert Mathews died in a 1984 shootout with the FBI on Whiskey Island, Wash. Gary Yarbrough is serving at least 50 years in prison for crimes associated with The Order, an offshoot of the Aryan Nations, a white-supremacist church headquartered in nearby Hayden Lake.

"We're just here to support Randy Weaver," Mrs. Mathews said. "Plus to protest the government's tyranny." "This isn't the first time," Mrs. Yarbrough said of the siege. "Maybe, it's Randy's beliefs now, but who's it going to be next?"

The wives brought their children with them to the roadblock on the road to Weaver's mountaintop home. Mathews' 10-year-old son carried a sign reading "Baby Killer" as he paced back and forth in front of the armed authorities.

Clint Mathews was 2 years old when his father was killed. But he's been told what happened to his father and feels strongly that injustice was done, Mrs. Mathews said.

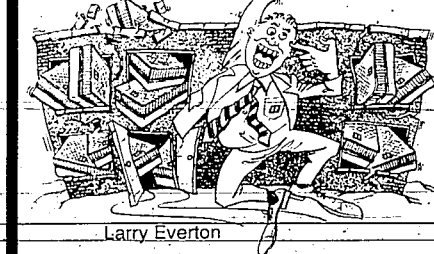

"If her husband were in Randy Weaver's position, Mrs. Mathews said, "He'd do just what Randy is doing."

After Mrs. Weaver's death was announced to the roadblock gathering Friday night, Mrs. Yarbrough and Mrs. Mathews were in tears.

"They killed my husband!" Mrs. Mathews cried.

Mrs. Mathews, 38, still lives in Meridian Falls, Wash., where her husband founded The Order in 1983. She teaches her son at home and has a small business that she declined to name. Mrs. Yarbrough, who still lives not far from Naples, also teaches her five children at home.

German riot leaders direct attacks by radio

BERLIN (AP) — Ringleaders of right-wing attacks on refugee shelters in eastern Germany broadcast commands to rioters via citizens band radios, a state official said Monday.

Brandenburg state Interior Minister Alwin Ziel also said the latest violence was not isolated but instead was part of an overall strategy.

Since the riots started Aug. 22 in Rostock, there has been speculation the rioters were well-planned to take advantage of tensions between town residents and refugees in overcrowded shelters.

After another weekend of violence, police were bracing for even more clashes with neo-Nazis and other right-wing extremists.

In Berlin, unidentified assailants detonated a bomb that badly damaged a monument to Jews deported to Nazi concentration camps. The city's Jewish community said the attack was connected to the latest wave of violence.

Since the riots began, there has been seemingly endless political squabbling over what the government can do to restore order.

The latest debate centers on a proposal to create a police rapid deployment unit that would be sent to trouble spots.

Supporters say the elite force would provide desperately needed help to local officials. But detractors say the idea is impractical, adding it would make more sense to provide better training and equipment to regular police officers.

In the southeastern city of Cottbus, rioters battled with police into early Monday morning, after they tried for the third successive night to attack a home for foreigners seeking political asylum.

In television interviews, Brandenburg's interior minister Ziel said the Cottbus riots and similar weekend attacks on a refugee home in the city of Eisenhuettenstadt were centrally directed. Both cities are in Brandenburg state.

Tajik officials held hostage

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of Tajikistan's opposition members surrounded the presidential palace Monday in Dushanbe, took senior government officials hostage and demanded the resignation of President Rakhmon Nabiyev, news reports said.

The opposition has criticized Nabiyev, a former Communist Party leader, for failing to stop a bloody tribal conflict that rages in two areas of the central Asian republic. They also accuse him of failing to move quickly enough on democratic reforms.

In a local television broadcast, the opposition had presented Nabiyev with an ultimatum demanding that he stop the tribal war and resolve the issue of refugees from the embattled areas or resign. The ultimatum expired Monday, the ITAR-Tass and Nega news agencies reported.

The agencies said that refugees from the regions of Khatlon and Kargan-Teke gathered around the presidential palace in the Tajik capital of Dushanbe today.

The protesters blocked the palace and the government parking lot and later were allowed by police to occupy the building.

Cemetery attack kills 1 at funeral

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — A grenade slammed into a funeral at a Sarajevo cemetery Monday, killing one person, while continued fighting in Gorazde kept U.N. officials from sending an aid convoy to the city.

In Belgrade, nationalist deputies in Serbia's federal parliament demanded a no-confidence vote against the government of Yugoslav Premier Milan Panic. In their strongest challenge to Panic yet, they accused him of overstepping his authority at last week's London peace conference.

And the U.N. Human Rights Commission's special envoy to former Yugoslavia submitted a damning report in Geneva that blamed Serb forces for the worst human rights violations in the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

The report, by former Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, urged creation of an international commission to investigate war crimes.

The attack at Sarajevo's Ibrahimegovic Cemetery was the second in a month on mourners burying their dead there. In early August, an elderly woman was seriously wounded while burying her baby granddaughter, killed when a children's convoy was fired on.

The grenade Monday morning hit during a soldier's funeral. One person was killed and three injured.

Overnight fighting continued on Sarajevo's outskirts.

A 24-hour period ending early Monday, 23 people were killed and 259 wounded around Bosnia, the Ministry of Health reported.

U.N. officials canceled a Monday convoy to Gorazde because of heavy fighting. They said they hoped to send it Wednesday.

It remained unclear exactly what was happening in Gorazde, the lone government holdout in eastern Bosnia.

Helicopters pick scores from rooftops

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Helicopters plucked survivors from their roofs and avalanches from the Mount Pinatubo volcano cut off some villages north of Manila.

At least nine people have been killed and nearly 10,000 have been evacuated to schools, churches and government refugee centers, officials said.

Police said 45 hungry and rain-soaked people were rescued, a dozen by helicopters and the rest by trucks and navy frogmen in rubber boats.

Vice Mayor Reynaldo Candelaria of Mababalait said 212 people remained stranded on a former camp site of a construction company, which has become a virtual island, in the nearby village of San Pedro.

In the village of Tabon, about 1,000 houses have been completely covered by avalanches of volcanic debris, Candelaria said.

Mababalait, about 50 miles north of Manila, was one of two dozen towns that remained under water after monsoon rains, the Office of Civil Defense reported.

Argentina pressing claim to Falklands

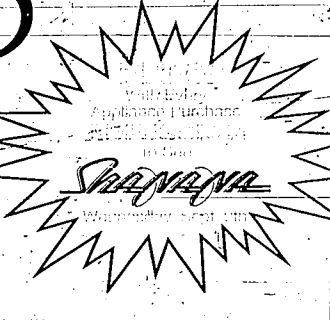

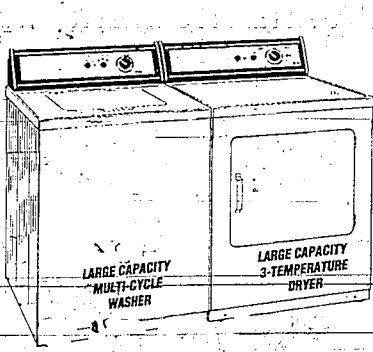

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The government will press its case for sovereignty over the Falkland Islands next week at the Interparliamentary Union meeting in Stockholm, Sen. Eduardo Menem said Monday.

The aim is to pressure Britain, which rules the remote South Atlantic territory over which the two nations went to war in 1982, to "sit at a table at which the issue of sovereignty is discussed," Menem said in an interview.

The Interparliamentary Union is a group of legislators from many nations. Their recommendations are non-binding. The six-day meeting in Sweden is set to begin Sept. 7.

Judge delays Hansen federal trial indefinitely

BOISE — The scheduled trial for former Idaho congressman George Hansen and an aide on federal fraud charges has been postponed indefinitely.

After a hearing Friday afternoon on defense motions to dismiss, U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge signed an order delaying a trial scheduled to open Monday and run 10 days. No new trial date was set but court officials said it probably wouldn't be held before November.

Lodge gave the government until Sept. 18 to file superseding charges against Hansen and John Sorensby, Idaho Falls. If new government charges are not filed by that date, Lodge said he will consider the defense's motions to dismiss.

A grand jury indictment unsealed in March contained 49 charges against Hansen and Sorensby, alleging they took part in a check-kiting scheme that ultimately involved more than $29 million in checks.

Air Force base explosives team detonates pipe bomb

FILER — An explosives team from Mountain Home Air Force Base was called in to detonate a pipe bomb found outside a rural Twin Falls County home Monday afternoon.

The Twin Falls County sheriff's department reported the device, which was filled with gunpowder, was found near a mailbox on 2700 East Road south of Berry's Market at about 1 p.m.

The Air Force bomb squad exploded the device and nobody was hurt, dispatcher J.P. O'Donnell said.

In each of the reports, someone had knocked off the driver's side mirror or smashed the front window of the car or both.

Car salvaged from Shoshone Falls stolen, police report

TWIN FALLS — After checking some old files, Twin Falls police have determined that a car found in the water near Shoshone Falls more than two weeks ago was stolen.

Twin Falls council clears $16.4 million budget

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls will spend $16,404,095 in the 1992-93 budget year.

The budget, approved by the City Council at a special meeting Monday night, increased 6.3 percent, or $958,000, from last year's total.

Mayor Howard Allen said in a growing city some budget increases can be expected. "As we grow, it's a logical thing (to need more money)... Our employees have been working awfully hard to keep things down," Allen said.

He and the City Council members will not get raises in the budget. The mayor and council took raises last year but didn't feel it was appropriate this year, Allen said.

This year's budget includes a $168,000 increase in property tax revenues, even though the city's share of the property tax levy decreased 4.3 percent. City valuations increased an average 8 percent the past year, said city finance director Gary Evans.

City residents will pay an estimated $5.3 million in property tax revenues toward the city budget this year, Evans said.

Water, sewer and sanitation fees all will rise in the budget. Water and sewer fees will increase because of the city's effort to comply with federal mandates on wastewater treatment and drinking water supplies.

About $670,000 of the budget increases will come in four items, Evans said. These include $182,000 for the Twin Falls Rural Fire Protection District, $250,000 for wastewater treatment; $138,000 to comply with the Americans With Disabilities Act and $100,000 for drinking water quality protection.

Without these items, the budget would increase less than 2 percent, Evans said.

City employees will receive a raise-and-benefits package of about $235,000. Evans said. But how that money gets split between salary raises and benefits remains to be seen.

City residents had a chance to comment on the spending plan at Monday's meeting, but the only one who did was Janette Lancaster.

Lancaster used a sign language interpreter to tell the council that she'd like to see money budgeted to provide a signet at every council meeting.

"The needs of the hearing impaired never change," she said.

City Councilwoman Pam Dawd said Lancaster's suggestion about the signet was a good one.

"This is a way of opening government up to them," Dawd said.

Hourglass runs dry on Knievel

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like sands through the hourglass, so are the days of August. A deadline for Robbie Knievel to meet with, or at least contact, the Twin Falls County Commission passed Monday without so much as a whisper from the motorcycle daredevil.

Whether that means Knievel can't jump the Snake River Canyon with the county's OK remains unanswered. Two commissioners said Monday, however, that while they hoped the ordeal is over, if Knievel approaches them any time soon they'd probably have to talk with him.

"I don't see any hope or promise of the jump," Commissioner Norma Blass said Monday.

She wasn't surprised that Knievel hadn't contacted the commission. "We've had no communication since he initially contacted us," Blass said. But the commission would be obliged to talk to Knievel if he turns up later saying he plans to jump, she said.

Commissioner Jim Fraley, who said from the start that he didn't like the idea, especially if Knievel wanted to jump from the same canyon-side spot northeast of Twin Falls his father blasted off from 29 years ago, wasn't sure if the issue was dead.

"I've asked myself that question... If he (Knievel) came in a month from now, we'd have to talk with him," Fraley said.

Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said the commission's stand has not changed. Knievel needs to jump the canyon without a county permit, they'll seek an injunction to stop him.

"If we'd had any kind of communication, but he's ignored it all," Hempleman said. "What really ticks me off is that both father and son have been to town and didn't bother to talk to us."

Knievel raised a furor in late July when he stopped in Twin Falls and told Twin Falls' KMVT-TV that he planned to jump the canyon from private land. The county commissioners reacted by saying they would seek an injunction to stop Knievel's jump if he didn't get the needed permits.

After that, Knievel called The Times-News and said he wanted all the right permits to make the jump. He then reportedly invited the commissioners to meet him and his attorney, Fred Bezak, in Snake River or Chicago.

But the commissioners said that would not do. In a letter to Bezak, Deputy Twin Falls County Prosecutor E. Scott Paul said that Knievel must come to the commissioners.

"The commissioners can no longer justify the expenditure of our citizens' tax dollars for plane tickets, lodging, etc. on this matter. If Mr. Knievel wishes to meet with the commissioners any such meeting must occur in Twin Falls County before the end of this month," Paul wrote to Bezak on Aug. 12.

Knievel approached the county last year about jumping the canyon in September 1994, the 20th anniversary of his father Evel's famed attempt.

Before giving him the OK, the commissioners wanted Knievel to answer 64 questions about the jump. The questions dealt with financing, the promoter, security and other topics.

The commissioners sent Knievel the questions in late February and gave him until April 6 to answer them. By late July, when he contacted KMVT, Knievel had not answered the questions nor contacted the commissioners.

If he does make the jump, the commissioners say they will not allow Knievel to do it from the spot where his father landed.

That area, in the northeast outskirts of town, is much more developed with homes now than in 1974 and the commissioners say they want any launch to take place away from residential areas.

Knievel could not be reached for comment Monday.

New program seeks physicians-to-be from Cleveland medical school

By Kirk Mitchell
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A doctor-to-be who visited Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for two months will be an emissary for rural health care when she goes back to medical school in Cleveland.

Dotty Shaffer, a fourth-year medical student at Case Western Reserve University, said she learned that many of the perceptions about rural medicine are simply untrue.

And those perceptions are contributing to a shortage of doctors in small towns, she said.

Shaffer was the first of what may be many medical students and eventually physician residents who will come to the area from Case Western Reserve and experience rural medicine first hand. Dr. Paul Miles, a Twin Falls pediatrician, said.

Shaffer's visit came about as Case Western Reserve attempts to get more doctors to enter primary medical care fields, including internal medicine, pediatrics and family practice, because of a nationwide shortage of doctors in those areas, Miles said.

Case Western Reserve, a privately owned university with 3,100 students known for its prestigious professional schools, has already agreed to send medical students like Shaffer to Idaho for eight-week rotations during which students will be tutored in different primary care fields, Magic Valley.

Stabbing victims file suit against bar's bouncers

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Larry Goodine stabbed three people during a fight outside the Windbreak Bar in February, three bouncers stood by and watched, attorneys for the victims say.

Two of those victims have filed suit and the other plans to file suit later this month, claiming the bar continued to serve alcohol to Goodine and another man after they were intoxicated and that bar security guards did nothing to stop the fight.

"We think the Windbreak is liable to some extent for what happened," said Twin Falls attorney Tim Williams, who represents Steven Beutler of Boise. "The owners or their attorney could be reached for comment Monday. A lawyer for one of the men said attorney Mike Brady of Boise had responded with a general denial of all charges against the bar."

Beutler and two Minnesota men were stabbed in the bar's parking lot after Goodine and another man began fighting.

Goodine, 35, pleaded guilty last month to one count of aggravated battery in exchange for two other aggravated battery counts being dropped by prosecutors.

He was sentenced to five years in prison without parole.

In the suit, Williams said bouncers continued to serve Goodine and Dan Killinger even though the two men "were in an obviously intoxicated condition."

That violates the dram shop act, a law that forbids the sale of alcohol to anyone who is already drunk, Williams said.

Goodine and Killinger eventually got into a fight with two other men in the bar parking lot.

Those men, Joseph M. Berger, 26, and William Scholl, 23, were stabbed during the fight; Beutler was stabbed even though he was only a bystander, Williams said.

One of the investigating officers, Detective K.C. Dudley of the Twin Falls police department, said Monday that Beutler first told police that he tried to intervene in the fight. Beutler later changed his story and said he was merely walking toward the crowd that had gathered around the fight when he was stabbed, Dudley said.

In any event, the fight could have been stopped, Williams said, if the bouncers were starting on the bar's porch had stepped in, said Monte Carlson, Scholl's attorney.

"The Windbreak had a duty to monitor the parking lot," Carlson said.

Instead, the bouncers obeyed orders from the management and refused to leave the stairs leading into the bar, Williams said in the suit.

He said a bouncer at the bar has given a statement confirming that the bar's management told them not to leave the doorstep.

"The men, who were working on a construction project at the Miller-Dam, recovered from their injuries. All were hospitalized after the fight and Scholl suffered injuries to his liver and spleen. He and Berger have returned to their homes in Minnesota."

Stoker, who represents Berger, said the incident was just one in a long line of violent disturbances at the Kimberly Road bar.

"This was going to happen sooner or later," Stoker said. "It was just a matter of time."

Black, Robbins offer no firm answers to agents

By Craig Lincoln
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two legislative candidates gave insurance agents almost as much advice as answers Monday.

State Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls and Democratic challenger Gary Robbins told the Southern Idaho Life Underwriters Association that their industry has to be vigilant.

"Insurance reform has become the buzzword of the 1990s, and it will remain that way until something is done," Black said.

"We have to stop pointing fingers at each other for the high cost of health insurance," Black said. If the industry doesn't explain itself better, or ignores worries over health care, "you will see more and more people out in the marketplace feel that the industry is not meeting their needs."

And Robbins said that Idaho health care officials suffered a dramatic failure on the floor of the Idaho Senate last winter, is an example of the pressure the industry is facing.

"I don't think Idaho can cut it (IdahoHealth), Robbins said. "But that's an indication of what kind of pressure you're going to get."

Black opposed IdahoHealth.

Robbins, a former Republican state representative who turned Democrat and lost an expensive 1990 race against Sen. Russ Newcomb, is challenging Black for the District 23A seat in the Idaho House of Representatives. District 23 includes the eastern two-thirds of the city of Twin Falls and the eastern half of Twin Falls County, except Murtaugh.

Robbins also told the group that he won't fill out questionnaires that interest groups send to candidates. Grouping such questionnaires as a basis for support of endorsements.

"I think what you have to have is independence," Robbins said.

Neither candidate offered firm proposals to reduce health-care costs, an issue that is moving to the forefront of political debate.

"Frankly, I don't have one yet to propose," Black said. "I don't have one of the facts yet."

And Robbins predicted that the insurance industry may lose control over the issue because of worry over the nation's health-care system.

"It's broke, everybody is trying to fix it and nobody knows how to do it," he said. "I think the pressure is on and somebody we're going to have some kind of rational package."

Twin Falls man charged with grand theft auto after stealing car

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — An 18-year-old Twin Falls man has been charged with grand theft auto after admitting to authorities that he stole a stolen car.

Tommy H. Kinchelove was arrested Sunday morning after leading officers on a chase from Kimberly to Twin Falls.

He was first spotted driving a 1982 Camaro by a Kimberly Police officer, but sped off when the officer tried to stop him. A Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy then gave chase, and the Camaro sped into Twin Falls. On the way, the driver hit a telephone pole, causing $500 damage to the car, according to an officer's statement.

City police officer Dennis Pullin blocked the Camaro by hitting it with his patrol car, according to the statement by officer Michael Hoffman in Kimberly. The court file, Kinchelove later told officers that the keys were in the car's ignition when he found it on Fourth Avenue West in Twin Falls. The car had been stolen earlier from the Roy Raymond Ford parking lot on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Obituary

Rev. Thomas A. Heeran

TWIN FALLS — Rev. Thomas A. Heeran, 78, died Aug. 31, 1992, in Twin Falls, after a long illness. He had served in several Catholic parishes in southern Idaho, including those in Jerome, Buhl, Gooding, Hailay, American Falls, Pocatello and Mountain Home.

Born in Leitrim, Ireland, Dec. 12, 1915, he was the son of Thomas and Mary McGowan Heeran. After college in Ireland, he came to the United States to complete his studies in philosophy at Mt. Angel Seminary, near Portland, Ore., and in theology at St. Thomas Seminary in Kenmore, Wash. He was ordained by the late Bishop Edward J. Kelly, Boise, on June 3, 1943.

In addition to the parishes already mentioned, he served either as associate or pastor of churches and mission in Moscow, Cottonwood, Pocatello, Ferdinand and Orofino.

Two members of the Heeran-McGowan families served in Idaho. They are his uncle, the late Father Michael J. McGowan who died in August 1970, and Monsignor John J. Creagan, longtime pastor of St. Mary's Church in Boise. The latter died in May of 1974.

John McConigat, Jerome, who had been a close friend of Father Heeran since he was pastor of St. Charles, Hailay, in 1950-1954, and who was one of the first altar boys, says that he will remember his former pastor and friend as a "communicator" who easily made friends and as a man who was always the priest.

Bishop Nicolas E. Walsh, who met him in 1942, when he was still a deacon, wrote a tribute to him on the occasion of his 75th birthday. He stated, in part, "Father Heeran has earned the respect of all the bishops of Idaho during his time and of the clergy and religious of the Diocese of Boise. But the esteem in which he is held extends far beyond these admiring collaborators. Thousands of Idahoans, including people of all religious faiths, look upon him as an authentic, thoroughly good, and supportive friend. He was a priest who was happy and well adjusted, a man of God who seems to have never had a worry in the world. Even during his years of suffering and confinement, he continued to impress people with these characteristics. Bishop Walsh said this week.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Wednesday at St. Edward's Church by Father Dennis C. Fink, vicar general of the Diocese of Boise and representative of Bishop Ted D. Brown; by Bishop Sylvester W. Trcinan, Moscow; Bishop Walsh; Bishop Emeritus of Yakima and visiting priests. Assisting will be Deacon Volody LeClair, Bishop. Walsh will deliver the homily. Disagreements lurk in Burley firefighters contract

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — There's still "two or three points" holding up agreements on the Burley firefighters' contract, Mayor Frank Bauman says.

"I think both sides are in agreement with the large majority of the contract, but there are still a couple three points still hanging out there," Bauman said.

He said the two parties last met Aug. 20. Concerned about how much they say they had lost in the fire department operates, the city's full-time firefighters voted approximately a year and a half ago to join a union.

A contract has been in negotiations since that time.

Firefighters have accused the city of stalling. City officials say they have only been negotiating carefully.

Bauman said city officials recognize that the job of a firefighter is different from that of other employees, in that working hours are different. But Bauman said the city doesn't want to sign an agreement that would favor the firefighters over other city employees.

In working with the firefighters' negotiation team, Bauman said the firefighters seem willing to work with the city.

"I get the impression that it (legal action) isn't an alternative that both sides are plenty willing to sit down and try to work things out," he said.

Discussion of salaries hasn't been a key issue in the contract negotiations, Bauman said.

"From the outset of the history of local firefighters, there's been a key issue," he said.

Even though negotiations have been on and off for a year and a half, Bauman said he's still optimistic that the contract can be agreed upon.

Kyle Hansen, the firefighters' chief negotiator, declined to comment on the status of contract talks.

Electronics taken in trailer break-in

PAUL — Thieves broke into the trailer of a pair of farm workers sometime Friday and took $775 worth of electronic items.

Farm owner Tamara Kay Patterson, 700 West 270 North, reported the theft to the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department.

According to Patterson's report, the front door of a trailer near the farm near Hererra and Angel Hererra was kicked in and a television, stereo, a VCR and video game player, and several game cartridges were taken.

Sunday afternoon near Miner Dam when a woman working her field with a tractor said she saw two men put 50 three-quarter-inch siphon tubes into the back of their pickup.

Upon seeing the woman, the men dumped the tubes on the ground and fled, the woman told law officers.

The woman said the men, whom she guessed were either teens or in their early 20s, drove away in a new-model, extended Ford pickup with a brown stripe.

Jewelry taken from Paul residence

PAUL — A Paul man reported that $1,725 worth of jewelry had been stolen from his home sometime within the past month.

Bret R. Hawkes, 650 West 200 North, told the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department that two rings and three sets of earrings were taken by someone who apparently entered through a side window.

Woman allegedly threatened with gun

BURLEY — A 27-year-old Burley woman said she was threatened with a gun early Saturday morning when an acquaintance forcefully entered her apartment and later pointed a gun at her head, officials say.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, the woman, who lives at the Richland Townhouse Apartments, 727 W. 130th St., said the 21-year-old man kicked open the door to her apartment and began using abusive language. When she went to another apartment to call police, he put a shotgun up to her face, she said.

Law officers are seeking an arrest warrant to charge the man with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, a report says.

Burley girl's foot crushed by car

BURLEY — A Burley girl suffered several broken bones Sunday night when she jumped out of a moving vehicle and a car tire ran over her right foot, officials say.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, Angela Posaada, Golden Rail Trailer Court No. 7, jumped out of a vehicle before it was completely stopped at West Park.

Eizabeth Hernandez, 18, of Phoenix, was driving the vehicle and was cited for failure to purchase a driver's license, deputies said.

Chamber plans Rupert 'Potato Fest'

RUPERT — It features a potato trivia contest, a potato bar and a "potatolympics."

It can only be the "I Love Rupert Potato Fest," scheduled for Sept. 18 and 19.

Organizers say the event also will feature a community yard sale, a creative recipe contest and prizes.

The "I Love Rupert Potato Fest" is sponsored by the Organization of Rupert Businesses, the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension System and area businesses.

Search called off after no plane found

MINIDOKA — Searchers have called off their hunt for an airplane that a pilot flying over northern Minidoka County said he saw on the ground Sunday evening.

It. Randall White of the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department said the air and ground search was called off at 10:10 a.m. Monday after finding no sign of a downed aircraft.

The search was focused in the Bear Track Cive region near the city of Minidoka. Search crews looked as far west as Kamama in Lincoln County before calling their hunt, White said.

Searchers included sheriff's deputies, the Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue Squad and the Civil Air Patrol.

Pedestrian struck by motorcycle

BURLEY — A 21-year-old Utah man was injured Sunday afternoon when he was struck by a motorcycle near the corner of Normal Avenue and 19th Street, according to a report filed with the Cassia County Sheriff's Department.

Walter Thomas Roberts, 21, said he was driving his motorcycle northbound on Normal Ave. when Julian Delgado of Clearfield, Utah, ran toward the motorcycle and jumped in front of it.

Delgado was taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley, where he was listed in stable condition, a spokesman said. The accident report said there was a "very strong" odor of alcohol coming from Delgado.

Roberts, 2233 Almo Ave., Apartment 11, was cited for failure to purchase a driver's license, deputies say.

Mini-Cassia students comply with new immunization law

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

MALTA — Mini-Cassia students didn't have much trouble conforming to a new state law requiring all students to be immunized before enrolling in school.

"We didn't have any problem," said Pat Lundquist, principal of Rapt High School in Malta.

None of her 132 students were turned away when they enrolled, she said.

A new law passed by the Idaho Legislature calls for even high school students to be immunized.

To notify students of the law, Lundquist said the high school sent letters to students and parents last spring, and again during the summer. As a last warning, another reminder was sent about a week before registration.

Carol Davis, registrar of Minidoka County High School in Rupert, said students there also had little trouble conforming to the new law.

"There were a few immunized students who said they hadn't heard of the new law."

"We told them to go down to the courthouse (the location of the health department)," she said. "We have several students in the process of getting immunizations." She said students were overprepared since notified of the new law.

Mimco sent reminders to parents at the end of the last school year to notify them of the new law.

Crapo spokesman resigns amid questions

BOISE (AP) — The spokesman for Senate President Pat Tom Michael Crapo's Republican congressional campaign resigned on Monday amid questions about his use of state telephones and a rental car.

Doug McManis, who joined the Crapo campaign 12 days earlier, denied any wrongdoing in connection with either situation that occurred earlier this year while he was still communications director for state Senate Republicans.

But he said he was leaving the Crapo campaign to avoid any further negative publicity for the Senate GOP leader in his race against Democratic state Auditor J.D. Williams to succeed Democratic Congressman Richard Stallins.

"Senator Crapo has always been very fair with me, and it's not fair for Senator Crapo to be forced to deal with my personal issues in his campaign," McManis said.

Generous couple are stars in mom's eyes

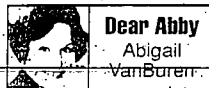

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for mentioning the fact that there are people who take advantage of baby sitters. Let me tell you about one.

When my daughter babysat while going to high school, the going rate was 30 cents an hour. Obviously, that was many years ago — at least 25. She had been recommended as a very responsible baby sitter to a young couple who were just getting started in the movies. When the couple returned, my daughter was asked, "How much did you owe you?"

She replied, "You were gone five hours, so that will be $2.50." "Oh, no," the man said, "that's not enough — we pay a dollar an hour in New York, and that is what we will pay you."

The couple were Tye Dolf and her former husband, George Stanford Brown. Hurrah for good people!

MIRIAM B. MASON,
WOODLAND HILLS, CALIF.
DEAR MIRIAM: A wonderful and uplifting story about good people.

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

—Tye Daily, as everyone knows, has had a very successful career on television in numerous leading roles, including the television series "Cagney and Lacey." She also starred in "Gypsy" on Broadway.

George Stanford Brown is best known as a successful and talented television film director, whose credits are too numerous to list because of space restrictions.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a man for about five years. He has a daughter, 22, and a son, 20. Both are in college. They come home on weekends to live with their father.

When they are home, it is not uncommon for his daughter to sleep in the same bed with him.

I think this is inappropriate, and I don't see how. You (meaning me) must have a problem.

Although they sleep in a king-sized bed, he sleeps in his jockey shorts. He says his daughter likes to fall asleep watching TV there, but Abby, that is not the only TV in the house. He also says that his daughter and son sleep in the same bed when they are at college. They have a two-bedroom apartment, but he says his son doesn't like sleeping in a twin bed, so he sleeps with his sister in a queen-size bed. Is this normal?

DISCONCERTED IN REDMOND, WASH.
DEAR DISCONCERTED: It is neither "normal," nor healthy for an adult woman to sleep with her father — or her brother.

You do not have a problem. They have.

DEAR ABBY: I enjoyed your definition of "middle-age" in the Ottawa Citizen. Someone else defined it as follows:

"Middle age is that time in life when your broad mind changes places with your narrow waist."

—R. STOKES WELLY,
OTTAWA, ONTARIO

DEAR ABBY: I am a grandmother who has been divorced, for a dozen years. I am sick and tired of the media's obsession with sex. I am tired and unattractive and look younger than my years.

I work for a large corporation, travel, belong to social groups and also do volunteer work.

I regret to inform the recent widow who asked how decent women meet men who still abide by the old-fashioned rules are no more popular.

I don't miss sex, but it would be nice to have somebody to dance with occasionally.

Book for disabled details park accessibility

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — If you have it, they will come.

On a sunny day, Michael Roth and Michael Tompaine in their national parks guide for people with disabilities.

Roth, who uses a wheelchair, and Tompaine, an avid hiker, went to 35 national parks and visited more than 100 camp sites to test accessibility.

"It's really about getting people out there and feeling free," said Roth, 39, who was diagnosed with severe multiple sclerosis about 10 years ago.

The couple's coast-to-coast travel showed some parks were naturally accessible. At others, Roth's officials said improvements were unnecessary because the disabled people do not use the park.

But Roth quotes from the recent baseball movie Field of Dreams: "You build it, they will come."

"We're not interested in paving the wilderness," said Tompaine, 40. "But in the cases where the terrain is not so rugged and ability, we'd like to see improvements made."

"Easy Access to National Parks: The Sierra Club Guide for People With Disabilities," (Sierra Club Books, $16) details 15 national parks the pair deemed "Great Parks." Access highlights and offer basic visitor information as provided for all 45 sites.

The authors said 57 percent of people in the United States cannot walk a simple forest trail because of age, a permanent disability or temporary injury.

Roth and Tompaine praised Yellowstone National Park for its wheelchair-accessible trails; Rocky Mountain National Park for its handicamp, a campground for the disabled and Redwood National Park in California for its trails marked in Braille.

Everglades National Park in Florida won kudos for its paved trails and canoe trips for the disabled, including people with wheelchairs. Mother Nature got part of the credit, because of the park's flat terrain.

But other national parks had little or no access for the handicapped, forcing visitors to revert to what the book calls windshield experiences — viewing a park from inside a car.

In 1990, Roth found herself visiting the south end of the Grand Canyon from the Hopi Point parking lot.

"It was pretty frustrating and surprising. I always wanted to see the Grand Canyon. And I did see it, but I didn't want to see it from a parking lot," Roth said.

'It was pretty frustrating and surprising. I always wanted to see the Grand Canyon. And I did see it, but I didn't want to see it from a parking lot.'

A ramp was added at Hopi Point a year later, but many other scenic points and toilet, shower and camping facilities at the canyon remain inaccessible, the book said.

Roth and Tompaine listed the Great Smoky Mountains as the worst national park for the disabled. Among problems cited in the book:

• "Chimney's Dinnin," a famous mountain view is a half-mile steep walk to an elevation of 6,643 feet. Though the road is paved, wheelchairs or people with other mobility problems may need assistance.

• Reading Fork Motor Nature Trail: Slopes to the turnouts on this self-guided car tour through the forest are steep and unsuitable for wheelchairs.

• Cades Cove: Many of the old homes belonging to former pioneers have steps to the entrances and are not equipped with ramps.

The authors say they want to inform the disabled and spur change, not scold the Park Service.

"It's not about people being disregarded or disrespectful," Roth said. "It's just time to start making changes."

They said their findings helped persuade the Park Service and the National Park Foundation, which provides money for the service, to begin a national campaign to improve its parks.

And now, Roth and Tompaine tour the country as part of Easy Access Parks Challenge, which is aimed at organizing local agencies to help fund improvements and is sponsored in part by the Park Service.

Six parks are slated to finish improvements by next year and nine have already upgraded facilities for people with limited mobility.

Among the parks completed: Alcatraz Island, where visitors face a 13-story climb to the main prison. About 50,000 of the 600,000 visitors annually cannot make it past the deck level.

Answers to your questions about Social Security

Q. Since I applied for Medicare at my local Social Security office, why can't I apply for the Qualified Medicare Beneficiary program there, too?

A. The Medicare program is run by the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), which has arranged with Social Security offices to provide information to the public and to take Medicare applications. But because the eligibility rules for the Qualified Medicare Beneficiary Program vary from one state to another, it is run by state public assistance agencies. So you should call or visit them to apply.

Q. When I applied for retirement benefits on my deceased husband's work record, I found out that his divorce from his first wife did not become final until several days after our marriage. In fact, his first wife is already receiving benefits on his record. Does this mean that I can't get widow's benefits?

A. Not necessarily. Under a recent change in the law, if you married in good faith and later found out that your marriage was invalid, you may qualify for benefits even if another spouse is receiving benefits on the worker's Social Security record. Check with your Social Security office.

Burn victims have chance to just be kids at summer camp

By Stanley Holmes
Chicago Tribune

Twelve-year-old Zack Krause was drawing on a piece of leather and enjoying summer camp so much.

Other children sat at a table behind him absorbed in various crafts. Below, dozens of other campers were swimming or paddling boats in Fish Lake.

Like summer campers everywhere, Zack enjoyed the swimming, boating, the nature hikes, the skits and songs and all of his new friends. He liked nearly everything at Camp Duncan.

But what he liked most was that everyone else like him. They were all burn victims.

"Everybody else is the same," he said. "You're not treated differently. There's a lot of people here that care about you."

The left half of Zack's face is severely scarred from burns. It happened when he and his friends had built a small fire in a can.

They blew the fire to clear some smoke and it went on my coat and then went on my face," he said. Nearly 80 children like Zack — all scarred by serious burns — were spending a week at MCA Camp Duncan in Ingleside in northern Lake County, Ill. The young burn survivors came from Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana to learn how to become children again, enjoying the things that children enjoy.

But they also were encouraged to talk about their burns, express their anger through writing, and drawing, and to treat their disfigurements as if they were nothing more than a mild blemish.

The children were brought to camp by the Illinois Fire Safety Alliance, a non-profit group composed of firefighters and medical personnel who donate their time once a year to offer the children a special haven far from the pain and ridicule they sometimes feel back home.

"Some of these kids are still struggling with their injuries," said Kathy Haage, one of the organizers of the camp. "They have such a rough time with people staring at them. But here at camp they don't have to worry about their burns. They can be who they are."

That's why Nicole Rini, 12, liked camping — she swims, she says, "burned when my hot tea overturned and spilled boiling water on her leg."

At Camp Duncan, "Everybody understands your feelings about your burns," she said. "Some of the kids would not feel comfortable at other camps."

Nicole said the camp has taught her much about herself and her injuries.

"I learned that even though you have a burn, you're not any different than anyone else and you don't have to feel ashamed," she said.

That's the kind of reaction the camp's organizers like to see. "There is a noticeable change in the kids when they come here," said Robin Mazzuca, a paramedic and volunteer counselor. "They blossom like flowers."

That happens because the camp is the best place that the children are accepted unconditionally, said Marie Premack, a clinical social worker for the Burn Center at the Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood, Ill.

It's a place where the children can compare their burns and share their horror stories with other children who understand, she said.

"I think they learn coping skills from one another and make friendships," Premack said. "They can challenge structures and there are no limits. They come away with a sense of empowerment."

And they remain well aware of what happened to them and of their scars, she said. Though still children, their traumatic experiences tend to bring an unusual maturity.

"They know they're different," she said. "They feel different."

Caper Brown, 12, of Mountmorris, was burned over 97 percent of his body in a gasoline tank explosion. He lost his arms and his legs and nearly died. He has hooks for hands and a wheelchair for legs.

"I am burned," he wrote in his diary each at camp. "And I feel as if the world is upside down."

Though the camp encourages these tough moments of reflection, its main purpose is to make sure the children have fun, said Haage.

YOU MAY BE HOLDING A PART OF THE 5 MILLION TONS OF U.S. NEWSPRINT THAT WAS RECYCLED LAST YEAR.

Thanks to public and private recycling systems, more than one third of the newsprint used in the U.S. last year was recycled - into cardboard boxes, egg cartons, insulation or newsprint again.

Recycled newspapers save resources, tax dollars and energy. America's newspapers support recycling.

And that's good news.

Read. Then recycle.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE - BOBBY WOLFF

To know, to get into the truth of anything, is ever a mystic-ace, of which the best logics can but babble on the surface.

Thomas Carlyle

"I had to risk the diamond-finesse," proclaimed South. "There was no other place to put my losing heart."

Study-the-play-to-see-if-you-can find another way that South could have made his slam.

South won his heart ace and cashed his two high trumps, leaving East's queen at large. Then he took the diamond finesse. East won, cashed his high trump, but exited with a heart. South was to discard his low heart on dummy's diamond ace, but it was still two down when South failed to pick up the club jack.

"It does no good to try to ruff diamonds," explained South. "East's king was too guarded." Do you buy this last statement?

While it's true that the diamond king will not drop, the plan of ruffing diamonds has another payoff. Let's assume South wins his heart ace, leads a diamond to dummy's ace and ruffs a diamond. Next, he cashes the ace and king of trumps and ruffs another diamond. When no king appears, he cashes his three top clubs and ruffs a club; East is forced to follow suit. Finally the heart king is cashed and dummy's last diamond is led. With 11 tricks already in, South must score his 12th regardless of where the diamond king lies, as long as East has the high trump.

Which line of play is better? Trying to drop the diamond king or executing a "coup en passant" may not be much better than the straight 50 percent finesse. However, think of how the eyebrows will be raised when the coup succeeds.
