Parading a message

Giving a new twist to the phrase 'tree hugger,' Twin Falls High School student Chris Fay squeezes a costumed Wendy DuBois before the start of the school's homecoming parade Friday afternoon. They were part of the T.R.E.E. (Teens Restoring the Earth's Environment) entry which carried the message 'You can't see the forest if there are no trees.'

Hawaii vacation plans vanish on Iniki's wind

By Suzanne Huxhold
Times-News correspondent

SEATTLE — Mary Van Bronkhorst is no stranger to high winds and cantankerous weather.

After all, she's lived in Twin Falls for the last two years.

But when Hurricane Iniki roared through her Hawaiian vacation last month, it was like nothing she'd ever seen before.

"After the storm started building, we went out to the porch and watched for awhile," Van Bronkhorst recalled. "The cloud patterns were amazing. In one part of the sky, the clouds would be moving in one direction, and in another part they'd be moving in the opposite direction.

"They cut the power at 1:07 (p.m.). The wind was just screaming over the house; and when they talked about gusts of 140-mile-an-hour winds, they don't tell you those gusts last for a really long time. We could hear the sound of the trees cracking outside. I wish I'd had a video camera; it was really awesome."

Van Bronkhorst had arrived in Kauai only a week earlier, with the intention of spending a few peaceful days with friends at their new home in the Waialua Homestead, about 10 miles outside of the main island city of Lihue. Instead, she found herself in the eye of one of the most devastating hurricanes to hit the Hawaiian islands in this century.

Van Bronkhorst said she was awakened at about 4:30 on Friday morning by a severe thunder and lightning storm, the precursor to Iniki.

By 5 a.m., the civil defense sirens were screaming across the island, and Van Bronkhorst and her friends were scrambling to the local store to lay in a supply of fresh water and canned food. Six hours later, just before the hurricane came ashore, the little group had packed everything in the house into plastic bags, nailed sheets of plywood to the windows and fashioned a safe haven for the elderly woman in the house, the mother of the host, from mattresses and the dining room table. Then, they waited.

Perot inching nearer re-entry

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot moved closer Friday to re-entering the presidential race, with one associate saying some form of renewed independent candidacy by the Texas billionaire "may be inevitable."

But there were strong hints from those close to Perot that he was considering only a limited effort, mainly television ads and talk-show appearances. His name already is on presidential ballots in all 50 states.

President Bush and Bill Clinton reacted to the prospect of a revived Perot challenge with studied nonchalance.

"I don't have any idea what impact it will have except I'm just going to keep working," said Clinton, who leads Bush in national polls.

Bush, in an interview with a Chicago radio station, called fresh reports of a Perot candidacy "interesting," adding that "in some places people think it would help us."

Analysts generally said that Perot's re-entry could hurt Bush's chances in Texas and Florida, which together have 57 of the 270 electoral votes needed for victory. At the same time, a Perot candidacy might hurt against Clinton in California — the electoral prize, with 54 votes — and some battleground Midwestern states.

As strategists tried to decipher the impact of a renewed Perot candidacy, the co-chairman of a bipartisan panel on debates raised the possibility of Perot's participation in a faceoff as early as next weekend.

"If Bill Clinton agrees and Ross Perot agrees and Bush doesn't, it will be just Clinton and Perot that I see in San Diego," said Frank Fahrnkopf, former Republican Party chief.

That's the next date and site that the 10-member Commission on Presidential Debates has selected for a presidential debate. So far, Clinton has signed off on the proposal but Bush has not.

It seemed unlikely, however, that Clinton would agree to a two-way clash with Perot.

Perot, who dropped out of the race on July 16 but earlier this week said his withdrawal was a mistake, invited representatives of both the Bush and Clinton campaigns to meet with him and his volunteers Monday in Dallas.

Both campaigns were sending high-level officials to the session and, coincidentally, Bush himself was scheduled to campaign in Dallas on Monday.

Representing Bush will be his campaign chairman, Robert Teeter; national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. Representing Clinton campaign chairman Mickey Kantor, retired Joint

Gem August revenues erase legislative deficit

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho personal income and sales tax revenues continued to surge in August, pushing cumulative receipts $7.5 million ahead of expectations and erasing, for now, the deficit lawmakers left in their 1993 state budget.

The Andrus administration's latest financial update, released Friday, showed the two major revenue-producing taxes fueled a nearly 9 percent jump over collections a year earlier.

The potential surplus at the end of August was more than double the $3.5 million in unanticipated cash in the treasury at the end of July.

And the dramatic expansion in both the sales and personal income taxes was marked against Gov. Cecil Andrus' revenue estimate, which was already nearly $9 million higher than legislative leaders anticipated when they drafted their state spending blueprint for the year that began July 1. "We're looking okay," Andrus Budget Director Chuck Moss told the Governmental Affairs Committee of the Boise Area Chamber of Commerce. "But two months do not a universe make."

Andrus had earlier ordered state agencies to reduce spending in the present budget year by $6.4 million to cover bills the state delayed paying this spring so the 1992 budget would not close out in the red. That deficit resulted from the administration's overestimation of income tax receipts last spring.

Key legislative budget writers unnecessarily urged the governor this summer to increase that cutback, to ensure the state remained in the black.

Comments irk prosecutor

The Associated Press

BOISE — Federal prosecutors want the judge in the first-degree murder case of Randy Weaver and Kevin Harris to discipline defense attorneys for making out-of-court statements.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Howen on Thursday filed a motion with U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan objecting to the conduct of defense attorneys Gerry Spence, Jackson, Wyo., and Chuck Peterson, Boise. It accused them of violating a rule of criminal procedure barring attorneys from making out-of-court statements during a case.

Spence could not be reached for comment Friday afternoon.

Peterson said he planned to file a written reply, as required by the rule.

"It's more posturing by the government to put Randy Weaver in a light most unfavorable to him," he said.

They're representing Weaver, 44, on a grand jury indictment that he took part in the slaying of Deputy U.S. Marshal William Deagan, Quincy, Mass., Aug. 21, along with Harris, 24.

Harris is charged with first-degree murder and Weaver with aiding and abetting first-degree murder. The charge carries a possible death penalty for both men. They also are charged with assaulting a federal officer.

Florida judge grants boy 'divorce' from parents

The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — In a precedent-setting case, a Florida judge on Friday granted a 12-year-old boy's wish to "divorce" the biological parents he said mistreated and abandoned him.

Circuit Judge Thomas S. Kirk told Gregory Kingsley that he could be adopted by his foster parents.

"Gregory, you're the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russ at this moment," he said as the courtroom broke into applause.

Kirk said the boy's biological mother had "lied consistently" during the legal battle initiated by Gregory to sever his family relationship.

"I believe by clear and convincing evidence, almost beyond a reasonable doubt, in this case, that this child has been abandoned .. and neglected by Rachel Kingsley (his mother) and it is certainly in his best interests that her parental rights be terminated immediately."

Gregory took the witness stand Friday in his fight to "divorce" his parents and nervously recalled bouncing from his mother's home to foster homes until he finally "thought she forgot about me."

As his mother wept in the courtroom, Gregory recounted a joyless childhood full of uncertainty and abandonment. He said his mother was often out late drinking and kept marijuana in the house "in a brown box on a table in the living room."

Asked why he wanted to live permanently with his foster family, Gregory said: "I'm doing it for me, so I can be happy."

The brown-haired, pale boy gave one-word answers to many questions but also gave some insight to why

Hurricane demolishes personal income in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hurricane Andrew hurt Americans' total personal income in August, wiping out what would have been a healthy increase, the government said Friday.

Two other reports on the month — one showing a small but unexpected decline in factory orders for durable goods and the other a drop in existing home sales — added to the economic gloom and President Bush's political troubles.

Personal income plunged 0.5 percent to a seasonally adjusted rate of $5.03 billion, the worst drop in 19 months, the Commerce Department said. If not for the storm, income would have increased 0.7 percent, the best in six months.

Some economists were cheered by the income report, but others said the economic disruption caused by the hurricane should not be ignored. All agreed the 0.1 percent decline in durable goods, coming on top of a 2.7 percent drop in July, was a bad sign for employment prospects at factories.

Andrew has made a bad situation a bit worse, said economist John M. Albertine, a Washington-based consultant. "The economy's in the soup, and the letters in the alphabet soup spell recession."

Democrats seized on the latest round of reports to remind voters, less than six weeks before Election Day, that average economic growth during President Bush's term is the slowest since the Depression. "Like the Hoover administration, the Bush administration has misled the American people by claiming that the economy is doing fine. At first, the president claimed that the downturn would be short and shallow, but data now show that this recession has been long and painful," said Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee. "The Commerce Department said August's overall income decline was more than twice as large as the decline in personal income. The decline in existing home sales was the largest in 19 months, the Commerce Department said. 'Magic' Johnson resigns his AIDS post

LOS ANGELES — Basketball star Earvin "Magic" Johnson resigned Friday from the National Commission on AIDS, saying he was fed up with a lack of support from the Bush administration. "I cannot in good conscience continue to serve on a commission whose important work is so utterly ignored by your administration," Johnson wrote in a letter faxed to the White House. Johnson threatened in July to resign because of what he said was insufficient funding for the panel.

Hurricane task force to enlist more stars

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — An "entertainment task force" including Gloria Estefan and Hulk Hogan was formed Friday to enlist even more celebrities for the Hurricane Andrew recovery. The effort already is attracting more than $1 million from a star-laden concert Saturday. Gov. Lawton Chiles said the entertainers can "maintain the nation's awareness in the months ahead. We're going to have to have a long-term, nationwide effort." Musician Stephen Stills, a longtime political activist and part of the task force, said celebrities can get people's attention — and spur their donations — long after public interest has waned.

Congress approves super collider money

WASHINGTON — Backers of the super collider are breathing easier now that the controversial atom smasher has successfully completed its topsy-turvy ride through Congress for the year. But they realize that, although this year's battle was won, the war is not over. "I don't think there's any doubt about the fact there will be another battle next year," Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said Friday. Congressional action on the $8.25 billion collider was sealed for the year when the Senate voted late Thursday night to approve a $22 billion energy and water development appropriations package that includes the atom smasher money. The action, which mirrors what the House did a week ago, sends the appropriations package to President Bush's desk.

House gives NASA space station funds

WASHINGTON — The House voted Friday to spend $2.1 billion next year for work on NASA's prized space station Freedom as opponents ended their efforts to scuttle the planned orbiting laboratory. Outgunned by supporters of a project that NASA says has contractors in 37 states and provides 75,000 jobs, opponents didn't even put up a fight as the House approved a bill bearing nearly all the space station funds were included in a compromise $86.9 billion measure financing housing, veterans, space and environmental programs for fiscal 1993, which begins Thursday. The overall bill was adopted by a 286-97 margin without a separate vote on the station vote. Senate approval would send the measure to Bush for his expected signature.

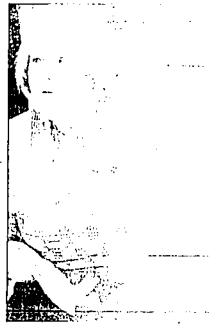

Aide says Bush knew arms deals details

WASHINGTON — President Bush "knew from day one" details of the arms-for-hostages deals with Iran and was so eager to get involved that he asked, "What can I do to help?" a former National Security Council aide said Friday. The assertions by Middle East expert Howard Teicher heated up the Iran-Contra issue on the campaign trail, where Bush, campaigning in Illinois, insisted, "I have leveled with the American people." Teicher — who is writing a book on the Middle East, due to come out in April — said he briefed Bush on the Iran operation three times in the spring and summer of 1986 and also had several "hallway conversations" with the then-vice president on the subject. Bush "understood what this was all about — providing arms so Iran would use its influence to win release of the hostages," said Teicher.

Other Jeanne Dixon

SEATTLE (AP) — Jeanne Dixon (perhaps you've heard of her) easily won the Democratic nomination for Washington secretary of state. And among political insiders, it's as if the planets had switched places. "A trophy for voters," huffed Jeff Smith, executive director of the state Democratic Party. "Zanyness," declared David J. Olson, University of Washington political scientist.

Jeanne Dixon, the Democratic nominee for secretary of state in Washington, is seen here with her mother, Jeanne Dixon, and her father, John Dixon.

Jeanne Dixon, you see, is not the famous seer of the same name. This one lives with her white poodle, Frenchy, in a cramped apartment, where she has Pruskin glass, face clothes and boxes of plastic fruit. She also has unusual ideas about what a secretary of state should do. For starters, the state elections chief should abolish absentee voting because absentee ballots rarely could be traded on the black market and used for grafting.

Nevertheless, she said, that others have absentee balloting makes voting more convenient and means more people can vote.

Also, Dixon said, a good secretary of state should use the office to punish corporations, judges and tricky lawyers who can ordinary folk out of their property. "It happens all the time," says Dixon. "It has happened to me many times." Nevertheless, she said, that Secretary of State Ralph Munro and others argue that the office has no power to police the activities of corporations, judges or tricky lawyers.

Dixon, 60, of Vancouver, B.C., is in her belief that she has a gift for her insight and vision. "Let them think I'm crazy," she said, "because I'm not." She's so confident that she's a seer that she's been told she should be a fortune teller.

FAA regulates de-icing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government acted Friday to reduce the risk of winter aviation crashes by ordering the nation's airlines to get plans in place by Nov. 1 to remove ice and snow from aircraft wings. The new ice removal regulation was issued by the Federal Aviation Administration which must approve each airline's de-icing plan. The FAA told the airlines to: • Reprint training pilots and ground crews to detect and remove ice and snow which, even in small amounts, can cause an airplane's wings to lose their lift. • Use new limits on how long and under what conditions an airliner can be flown with ice on the wings.

The FAA said the time an airplane is on the ground after a de-icing operation is critical. "For example, if a de-icing operation can take 10 minutes, it can cost the airline $100,000 in lost revenue," the FAA said. "The FAA also said that airlines should have a de-icing plan in place by Nov. 1, and that the FAA will be monitoring the industry's progress in meeting the deadline."

Insiders off

It's time for Dixon's nomination. He said the media failed to expose Dixon's lack of experience, and that she drew little attention as voters focused on presidential and other primaries.

Dixon is divorced, and has one daughter. She has never held public office, and doesn't have a college degree.

Her work experience includes several electoral jobs, and she said she had her own real estate office for about 10 years.

But in 1977, Dixon said she was diagnosed with a chronic disease that prevents her from working. She said she lives on $340 a month in Social Security disability payments and $100 a month in food stamps.

The University of Washington's Olson said Dixon's nomination is "a major defeat" for the party because of weak political paths.

"Obviously, it was the name that carried that election," he said.

Dixon said she has a zany idea like the election of somebody because of the name Jeanne Dixon.

1st NASA spacecraft in 17 years heads to Mars

The world of Mars

Probes of Mars have not found the canals, ancient cities and inhabitants described in science fiction novels. Mars is an arid, cold and apparently uninhabited planet.

Mars highlights

- Atmosphere: Mars' air pressure is equal to Earth's at an altitude of 100,000 feet. The air is 95% carbon dioxide.
Water: Today there is no liquid water on Mars...
Volcanoes: The biggest is Olympus Mons, 88,000 feet above the mean surface level...
Canyons: Valles Marineris is a 2,800-mile-long canyon...
Channels: Valleys and channels on Mars show evidence of having been carved by running water.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A rocket blasted off Friday with NASA's first spacecraft in 17 years destined for Mars...

The Mars Observer's 450 million-mile odyssey began at 11:05 a.m. MDT when the Titan 3 rocket rose from its pad at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station and arced over the Atlantic Ocean.
Liftoff was delayed 38 minutes so work could be completed at the pad and the area evacuated...

What's the mission all about?

The Associated Press
Some facts about exploration of Mars and the Mars Observer mission:
Spacecraft that have reached Mars include the U.S. probes Mariners 4, 6, 7, and 9 between 1965 and 1971 and Vikings 1 and 2, which landed on the surface in 1976...

seven scientific instruments will provide clues as to whether life ever existed on Mars. It is the most sophisticated U.S. spacecraft ever sent to Mars; its cameras, for instance, are capable of focusing on boulders just a few yards across.
"The geological history of the planet, and in some sense its climatological history, is written on the surface and so when you make measurements from space you get a measure of how that history evolved," said Lennard Fisk, NASA's chief scientist.

Sending humans to far-off planet would be expensive

'I don't think there is justification for manned missions except human curiosity, drive and looking toward the future.'

— Arden Albee, chief scientist for NASA's unmanned Mars Observer mission

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Sending humans to Mars will cost hundreds of billions of dollars.
So why do it when so many people are homeless and starving on Earth?
"I don't think we can stand to have it sitting out there without dinking with it. That's what humans are like," said Arden Albee, Jet Propulsion Laboratory's chief scientist for NASA's unmanned Mars Observer mission.

the human spirit, and encourage political unity to help solve problems and prevent war on Earth.
It is precisely because it is in contrast to the inevitable poverty war and difficulty of ordinary life that leading societies do such adventuresome and historic endeavors, said Caltech professor Bruce Murray, former director of Jet Propulsion Laboratory.
In 1989, on the 20th anniversary of the first moon landing by Apollo astronauts, President Bush set a national goal of establishing a manned base on the moon and sending astronauts to Mars, probably within a few decades...

French, Mars Observer's chief scientist at NASA headquarters in Washington. Spread over 20 or 25 years, that's a small fraction of the federal budget, he added.
"It's really seed money for the future health and growth of the economy," French said. "We're not spending this money on Mars. We're spending it on Earth. It goes into things like jobs, new technology development..."

evidence showing that Mars once harbored life before the planet turned cold and dry, "it would tell us that we're not alone," Huntress said.
"It would say the origin of life is a common occurrence in the galaxy and the probability of there being other civilizations is high."
Americans and Russians should travel to Mars together because "it will help consolidate a cooperative international system that will be better able to deal with all of Earth's problems," said analyst John Pike of the Federation of American Scientists in Washington.
"It would give the Russian aerospace complex something to do besides sell weapons to Third World countries and enable us to maintain our defense industrial base without doing the same thing," he added.
Pike said sending humans to Mars also "fulfills some of the aspirations that have been fundamental to civilization: expanding the human horizon and expanding human capabilities and potential."

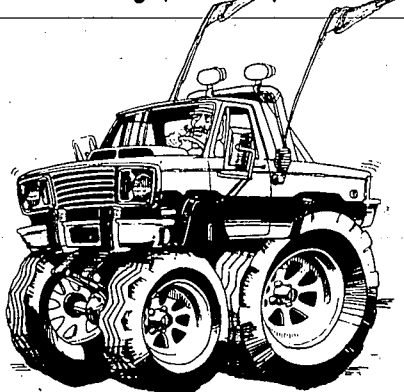

Leaving the driving to a robot can be risky, technicians admit

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Computerized vehicles are great, just so long as you remember to set the steering mechanism.
The folks at the National Institute of Standards and Technology were demonstrating a fully computerized Humvee on Friday, having installed four TV cameras, a computerized tracking system and a fully automated steering mechanism inside the all-terrain vehicle...

preparing a feature on a slow news day.
But all such life-and-death concerns were for naught.
"Better to have the steering," the engineer said. He did, and moments later, the Humvee was again gliding smoothly down the road, its television cameras feeding pictures of the double-yellow dividing line and other reference points to a computer guiding the vehicle's course.
"Whatever we're doing is literally converting swords into plowshares," said Richard Bishop, research director for the Federal Highway Administration's advanced vehicle research group. "This is technology transfer in the best sense."
To those who scoff at the idea of a computerized vehicle, project engineer Karl Murphy makes a point:
"Most people, when you ask them, 'Do you want a computerized car,' they say, 'No, I don't trust it. Then you ask, 'What about anti-lock brakes?' They say, 'Sure — it's safer.' But that's a computer too."
And that's the thought behind the project, which is mixing the army's technology, and the FHA's vision for error-proof driving in the 21st Century. The research work is being done, with contributions from both, by the Commerce Department's National Institute of Standards and Technology.

The vehicle Murphy was demonstrating has a price tag of $100,000 and a top speed of 45 mph. It has an on-board computer system, but still must receive guidance on turns from a bank of computers evaluating its video images in a nearby office building.
"This is a first step," said James Albus, chief of the NIST's robot systems division. "Essentially, you can think of this as an advanced cruise control system."
The ultimate goal is to have a fully computerized car, truck or van that uses video cameras to "read" the road, setting proper speeds and distance behind other vehicles. Other variables, like the road grade and weather conditions, also would be factored in.
"We would be trying to eliminate human error," Bishop said.

Russian sub heads to Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Russian-built submarine purchased by Tehran has set sail and is expected to reach the Persian Gulf in several weeks, a Pentagon source said Friday.
Russian officials have defended their sale of three non-nuclear submarines to Iran, saying the $750 million deal gives Moscow much-needed capital to implement economic reform and might even improve stability in the Persian Gulf.
The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the submarine is a Kilo-class, diesel-powered craft that appears to be headed to the Iranian port of Chah-Bahar, located on the southern coast of Iran outside the Persian Gulf.
The submarine appears to be manned by an Iranian crew, but Russians also are on board now, the source said.
The vessel, which got under way Thursday, is expected to travel through the Atlantic Ocean, the Mediterranean Sea, Suez Canal and Red Sea to the Arabian Sea, the source said.
The trip is expected to take about three weeks, the source said. "They're traveling at about 30 knots, rather slowly," the source said.

U.N. chides Iraq for atomic weapons

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The U.N. nuclear watchdog agency censured Iraq Friday for continuing to conceal its atomic weapons program, but member countries headed off an Arab-backed provision criticizing Israel.

The International Atomic Energy Agency criticized Baghdad on the last day of a weeklong conference that focused on nuclear safety and strengthening the agency's safeguards system. Its 116 members include Iraq.

In fourteen missions to date, agency inspectors have monitored the destruction of Iraqi nuclear facilities as required under the terms of the 1991 Persian Gulf War cease-fire.

But Iraq has so far refused to identify the suppliers of its nuclear equipment.

U.N. may ship aid to Kurds, Shiites in Iraq

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United Nations may ship humanitarian aid to the Kurds in northern Iraq this winter across the Iranian and Turkish borders if Baghdad won't cooperate with the world body, officials said Friday.

Discussions with Iraq's foreign minister on reviving the U.N. aid program for the Kurds and Shiites were at a standstill, said one U.N. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. After the Gulf War, efforts by Iraqi Kurds and Muslims Shiites to overthrow Saddam Hussein's government failed, and the Kurds retreated to the north.

The American, French and British forces still in the region mounted an emergency aid airlift for the Kurds in the spring and summer of 1991, and eventually turned the operation over to the United Nations.

Iraq's foreign minister, Mohammed al-Sahaf, met Thursday with the U.N. undersecretary for humanitarian affairs, Jan Eliasson, and indicated Iraq had no objections to the winter aid program for the Kurds.

ment and technical aid, as requested under U.N. Security Council resolutions. The issue is a key obstacle to declaring Iraqi compliance with the resolutions, which could lead to the lifting of U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

More inspections are planned and are to be announced in the next two weeks.

The resolution approved Friday said the atomic energy agency "strongly condemns Iraq's non-compliance with its nuclear non-proliferation obligations, including its safeguards agreement with the agency."

A total of 67 countries voted for the resolution, and 11 abstained. Iraq was the only country to vote against it.

The Iraqi delegation called the resolution "a black day in the history of this organization," claiming "the United States has again shown its hegemony over this conference."

The resolution calls on Iraq to "submit a full, final and complete declaration of Iraq's nuclear program."

Earlier, the conference followed the lead of the U.N. General Assembly by banning Yugoslavia from all agency activities.

The move was part of stepped-up diplomatic sanctions against Yugoslavia, which is accused of provoking warfare in the former Yugoslav republics of Croatia and Bosnia-Herzegovina.

For the first time in 11 years, there was no Arab resolution seeking Israel's expulsion from the atomic energy agency during its annual conference.

But before a scheduled vote on a resolution on nuclear safety and control in the Middle East, seven Arab countries introduced a paragraph directed against Israel.

It said the conference "further calls on those states in the Middle East which have not done so to accede to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty as soon as possible," meaning Iraq.

But the effort was defeated by a British motion saying the Arab call was unfair and would have to be addressed to all countries that have not joined the non-proliferation treaty.

De Klerk, Mandela revive summit

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — President F.W. de Klerk and ANC leader Nelson Mandela hope to resuscitate black-white political talks today at a summit the ANC said became possible when the government gave in to its demands.

The meeting, considered crucial for easing political strife, formally ends a three-month boycott of the talks by the African National Congress, the nation's leading black group.

The white government agreed on Friday to release hundreds of black activists convicted of politically motivated crimes, meeting the key ANC demand for a de Klerk-Mandela summit.

ANC secretary-general Cyril Ramaphosa said the government would free 150 right away — with some released on Friday — and the rest by Nov. 15. The ANC submitted a list of more than 500 people it considers political prisoners, Ramaphosa said.

Russia still aims nuclear missiles at U.S.

MOSCOW — Russia is still aiming its nuclear missiles at the United States and is awaiting a U.S. response to President Boris Yeltsin's initiative to point the weapons elsewhere, the commonwealth's military chief said Friday.

Russia also should resume nuclear tests if Western countries don't stop conducting them, Marshal Yevgeny Shaposhnikov said in a speech to students of the Moscow State Institute for Foreign Relations. Shaposhnikov heads the unified army headquarters of the Commonwealth of Independent States, which is made up of most of the former Soviet republics.

Yeltsin said last January in a speech to the United Nations, weeks after the collapse of the Soviet Union, that Soviet missiles were no longer targeting the United States.

Asked about that statement, Shaposhnikov said: "There is a certain period of time between a political statement and its practical implementation, depending on the statement's importance."

Marcos' rivals say decision a warning

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opponents of Ferdinand Marcos said Friday a U.S. court decision finding the late president's estate liable for torture committed under his rule serves as a warning to dictators to respect human rights.

On Thursday, a U.S. District Court judge in Honolulu decided the Marcos estate should compensate thousands of victims of atrocities committed before Marcos was ousted in 1986.

A separate trial will be held to determine how much money as many as 10,000 plaintiffs will receive.

City wants refund on sewage treatment

POCATELLO — The city of Chubbuck has asked a state judge to roll back the nearly 90 percent increase the city of Pocatello imposed in 1990 for treating Chubbuck sewage.

The suit, filed in 6th District Court, also asked that Pocatello refund the increased charges it has been collecting for two years.

Pocatello officials, who had no comment on the suit, increased the rate for Chubbuck from 43 cents per 1,000 gallons of waste water to 81 cents in the fall of 1990 based on a rate study that showed the lower charge was not covering the cost of the service.

Chubbuck officials contend that study was flawed and should be abandoned for an earlier study used to set the 43-cent rate.

Judge reinstates trespassing conviction

REXBURG — A district judge has affirmed a jury's decision in Rexburg's much-publicized "popcorn" case and has reinstated a trespassing conviction.

Seventh District Judge Marvin Smith, Idaho Falls, this week issued his decision in a long-running dispute that started in May, 1991, when two women tried to take a bag of popcorn purchased elsewhere into the Holiday Theater in Rexburg.

Joan Bowman, Layton, Utah, was convicted of obstructing justice, battery on a police officer and trespassing. After the trial, Magistrate Colin Luke dismissed the trespassing count. Bowman appealed to district court, but in a 23-page decision Smith said there was enough evidence to convict the women.

Luke ruled that a person must have done something to revoke their license to be on the property, in this case the purchase of tickets into the theater, since it was open to the public.

Judge postpones trial for maggot study

CALDWELL — A district court judge has postponed until early next year the first-degree murder trial of a Middleton man so scientists can examine maggots found on the victim's body.

The trial for Darin J. Milburn, 24, was rescheduled for Jan. 11. Milburn is charged with the shooting death of Carey Lynn Shaddy, whose partially burned body was discovered in a ditch northwest of Middleton on April 11. Shaddy had been shot in the head, back and leg.

Authorities hope the analysis by an entomologist at Washington State University of the maggots that appeared on Shaddy's body will help determine the time of death.

Murderer faces charges in another killing

SODA SPRINGS — Condemned Idaho murderer Timothy Dunlap has been returned to Ohio to face first-degree murder charges in yet another slaying.

Dunlap, 23, was transferred to Cincinnati earlier this month to face charges in the Oct. 6, 1991, killing of Belinda Bolanos at the beginning of what became a cross-country odyssey ending with his capture in southeastern Idaho following a fatal attempted bank robbery.

Caribou County Prosecutor Clyde Nelson said he was working with authorities in the Cincinnati area to obtain testimony from people in Idaho who may be needed in proving the Ohio charges against Dunlap.

The Sellersburg, Ind., man was sentenced to death in Idaho last spring for the Oct. 16, 1991, shotgun slaying of teller Tonya Crane, 24, during an attempted robbery of the Security State Bank in Soda Springs.

Proposed waste compromise draws criticism

The Associated Press

A proposed compromise on a bill that would allow the Energy Department's Waste Isolation Pilot Plant to begin a test phase has drawn sharp criticism from environmental activists.

Senate negotiators in a House-Senate conference committee, including Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., offered a compromise Thursday that would shorten the time during which regulators could review plans for testing waste at the New Mexico site.

It also would shorten the period for retrieving waste if the site proves unsatisfactory as a permanent repository for radioactive waste from federal facilities including the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory at Idaho Falls, they said.

The eight-point Senate compromise also would ban public hearings on such plans but would permit public comment.

It is similar in some ways to a plan that House negotiators offered last week, and Bingaman said he believes it closes the gap between the two bills significantly.

"I think it gets us a long way," Bingaman said. That's important if the conferees hope to produce a bill before Congress adjourns next month.

"I don't see how anything good is going to happen for New Mexico to get out of this session without a bill," Domenici said. "I think the time has come to do this and do it this session."

But Don Hancock of the Albuquerque-based Southwest Research and Information Center, a longtime critic of WIPP, said the compromise goes too far — and that Bingaman abandoned a pledge he made to environmentalists last month on the sorts of safety assurances he would seek in the bill. Bingaman had pledged to support public hearings and oversight by agencies other than the Energy Department, Hancock said.

"And none of those things are in this bill," he said.

Bingaman replied: "No, it's not true. The Senate proposal is essentially similar to the House proposal, the senator said.

"And that's exactly the kind of thing we talked about (in August)," Bingaman said. "It's very, very close to what we discussed."

He said the Senate has agreed that waste disposal standards must be in place before experiments begin at WIPP.

Domenici said 13 state and federal agencies will oversee health and safety at WIPP, which would bury plutonium-contaminated waste from the nation's defense industry 2,150 feet below the surface in salt beds 26 miles southeast of Carlsbad, N.M.

"There are 37 assessments, reviews, certifications and approvals (for procedures)," Domenici said. "I am as determined as possible to make sure (WIPP poses) no risks and no danger or harm."

N. Idaho cleanup plan insufficient, groups claim

KELLOGG (AP) — A plan to spend $68 million to clean up the Barber Hill Superfund site fails to address health issues or contamination of the Coeur d'Alene River drainage, two groups contend.

The Environmental Protection Agency on Tuesday signed a "record of decision" on the cleanup alternative, clearing the way for negotiations on payments from current and former mining companies.

The plan proposed in June calls for tearing down contaminated buildings at the former lead and zinc smelter, creating wetlands to filter polluted water and capping dirt fills contaminated with lead and other metals.

But on Thursday, representatives of a citizens' group and an Indian tribe said the plan approved by the EPA and the state does not go far enough.

"It will be a superficial cleanup. The problems will still exist," said Barbara Miller of the Idaho Citizens Network in Kellogg.

Miller's group wants the EPA to set aside a $5 million trust fund for health intervention. About 255 of the estimated 300 people who responded to the cleanup proposal this summer favored the fund, she said.

"What's going to happen to these people who have the highest blood-lead level in the nation?" she asked. "I feel this is an agreement by the polluters and the EPA — not the residents who were supposed to have a say in what takes place."

But Nick Ceto, EPA project manager, said his agency has no legal authority to establish such a fund. The preferred option includes some monitoring of blood-lead levels, as well as cleaning of homes with certain levels of lead dust, he said.

"We've received pretty overwhelming support," Ceto said. "Basically, we've had good response from the public."

The Coeur d'Alene Indian Tribe also wanted more from the cleanup, spokesman Bob Bostwick said.

"It only addresses 10 percent of the problem. We need to address the entire basin ... from Burke to the mouth of the Spokane River," he said.

The project covers a 21-square-mile area that includes Kellogg, Pinhurst and Smelterville.

Plea withdrawal sought

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Rigby teen-ager Michael Book has asked to withdraw his guilty plea to murder in the shooting death of Danny Disney of Ammon last year.

In a written request filed this week in 7th District Court, public defender Stevan Thompson did not explain why Book should be allowed to change his plea, but he asked for a hearing to make a case.

"This motion is based upon the records and files to date, and oral argument is requested in support of said motion," Thompson wrote.

During a court hearing in August, Thompson said Book would try to change his plea. Deputy Bonneville County Prosecutor Gil Gardner has said he will oppose the move. Judge Marvin Smith will hear arguments on the request Oct. 26.

Tougher sex offense laws goal for '93

LEWISTON (AP) — Attorney General Larry Echohawk said he will ask the 1993 Legislature to approve tougher sex offender laws.

Among his recommendations will be bills requiring convicted sex offenders to register with local law enforcement agencies and mandatory sentences for repeat offenders, Echohawk said Thursday.

Echohawk

Both proposals have failed to win legislative approval in the past. But the attorney general said a new Legislature and recent events may help change that.

"My experience has taught me that tough laws and cooperation are the keys to our winning this battle," he said. "Neither works very well without the other, but together they're a powerful force against those who would victimize our children."

Law enforcement officials say a sex offender registration law might have prevented a recent series of rapes in Ada County, Echohawk said.

States surrounding Idaho all require sex offender registration, he said. "Idaho must not become a safe haven for sex offenders."

He also said child sexual abusers should be made accountable for their crimes with tougher sentencing laws.

Echohawk and Gov. Cecil Andrus, both Democrats, have tried for several years to get mandatory sentences for repeat child molesters through the "Republican-dominated Legislature. Passage last winter of a law requiring similar sentences for major drug dealers convinced Echohawk to try again.

"We are not tough enough in sentencing laws, in finding them accountable," he said. "We simply have to do a better job than we are doing now."

Police kill dogs after attack

COEUR D'ALENE — Three pit bulls were shot to death and a neighbor rescued a pedestrian when the animals attacked the man and two policemen.

Randy Watson, 33, was rushed by the dogs at about 5:40 p.m. Thursday as he walked in front of a home owned by Glenn Laam, witnesses said. The man crawling up on Laam's front porch, screaming for help as the dogs bit his legs, arms and chest.

Laam shot two of the dogs through a screen door, killing one, with a .22-caliber pistol after he was unable to beat them off with an ax handle.

A neighbor called 911, and the dogs turned on the policemen as soon as they arrived.

One officer was bitten on the thigh as he and another officer tried to control the dog with batons. The attack ended when the officers fired five rounds from their 9mm pistols, killing the dogs.

Gay protection sought at U of I

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho should change its anti-discrimination policy to add protection for homosexuals, a student leader says.

"There are people who believe the time has come," Thomas Talbot, a law student from Boise and attorney general for the Associated Students of the University of Idaho, said Thursday.

"It's not just an issue of sexual preference," he said. "They are people and human beings and are deserving of respect."

The university now has a policy barring discrimination on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, sex, age, disability or status as a Vietnam-era veteran.

Judge keeps alive canal companies' lawsuit against water development

By N.S. Nokkentved
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state's objections to two canal companies' suit have been thrown out. Fifth District Court Judge Daniel Hurlbutt this week denied the state's attempt to block a suit by the Twin Falls and North Side canal companies to halt water development in the Upper Snake River Plain.

The canal companies asked the court for an injunction against the Idaho Department of Water Resources from taking action on permit applications for new ground or surface water use upstream from Milner Dam.

The companies charge that the department is not protecting their senior water rights by permitting groundwater applications and thus injuring their water rights.

The issue of how ground and surface water interact and thus how they should be managed to protect senior water rights holders while still allowing development of the available water resource already has surfaced as the state settles who has what water rights in the massive Snake River Adjustment.

The canal companies' water rights dating from the early 1900s are part of the adjudication.

Idaho water law is grounded on the premise — first in time, first in right — that the first to put water to a "beneficial" use has the senior water right, which is given preference during times of shortage.

The canal companies say that new groundwater development in the upper plain is reducing the flow of springs near American Falls, which form a substantial part of the companies' water rights.

The water resources department argued that Hurlbutt's court, in its role as the Snake River Basin Adjudication court, does not have jurisdiction to rule on the suit.

The department also argued that the companies' complaint does not include any claim for which the court may grant relief because the companies had not gone through all available administrative remedies.

"Allegations of unlawful administrative action or inaction which causes or will cause irreparable injury is a subject matter over which this court has jurisdiction," Hurlbutt wrote.

Police watch turn lane near elementary school

TWIN FALLS — A new turn lane on Falls Avenue East at Madrona Street is drawing attention from city police officers after a school crossing guard was struck by a careless motorist.

Cpl. JoAnn Loveland said she issued two citations Friday morning to high school students using the turn lane to pass other cars.

She also stopped two adults and warned them for driving five miles per hour over the speed limit.

Police have been spending more time patrolling the area after a crossing guard was hit by a car last week. She was not seriously hurt, Loveland said.

The speed limit in the area is 35 mph, but drops to 25 mph when children are present. School buses turn at the intersection to go to the high school.

Smaller children from nearby Sawtooth Elementary also cross the street frequently in the area, she said.

Sawtooth Press Club sponsors Williams-Crapo public debate

TWIN FALLS — Second Congressional District candidates Mike Crapo and J.D. Williams will square off next Tuesday in a debate sponsored by the Sawtooth Press Club.

Crapo, a Republican state senator from Idaho Falls, and Williams, the Democratic state auditor from Preston, are vying for the seat being vacated by Rep. Richard Stallings, who is running for the U.S. Senate.

The forum will be held at noon at the Mandarin House restaurant in the Blue Lakes Shopping Center. The public is invited to attend.

Work-release center offers open house, dedication

TWIN FALLS — A controversial work-release center that will house convicted felons working in the community is opening its doors to the public Monday and Tuesday.

The public is invited to an open house at the Twin Falls Community Work Center, 616 Washington Street South, from 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday and from 10 a.m.-2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

A formal dedication will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

The project is the second of its kind in the state and will house up to 54 felons who are nearing parole or are on probation. Neighbors in the area have waged a year-long legal battle to stop the project, saying it threatens their safety and property values.

The center's administrator, Larry Hauber, said inmates could begin arriving at the center by the second week of October.

Idaho Housing Agency offers 1-day workshop for landlords

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Housing Agency will hold a one-day workshop for landlords on Oct. 7 at the Canyon Springs Inn, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Topics to be discussed include tenant screening, getting the most from your rental property, the 1920 Affordable Housing Act, ways to expand Idaho's rental housing stock, federal fair housing regulations, and the agency's section 8 rental assistance programs.

The workshop's $25 fee includes lunch. People interested in attending should call Kris Hudson at the Housing Agency's Boise office, 336-8488.

Delegate Walker to speak to Democratic women's club

JEROME — Twin Falls resident Mary Walker, a delegate to the 1992 Democratic National Convention, will be the guest speaker at the Jerome County Democratic Women's Club meeting Tuesday.

The club asks members to bring their husbands and/or a guest to hear Walker discuss her experience at the July convention in New York City.

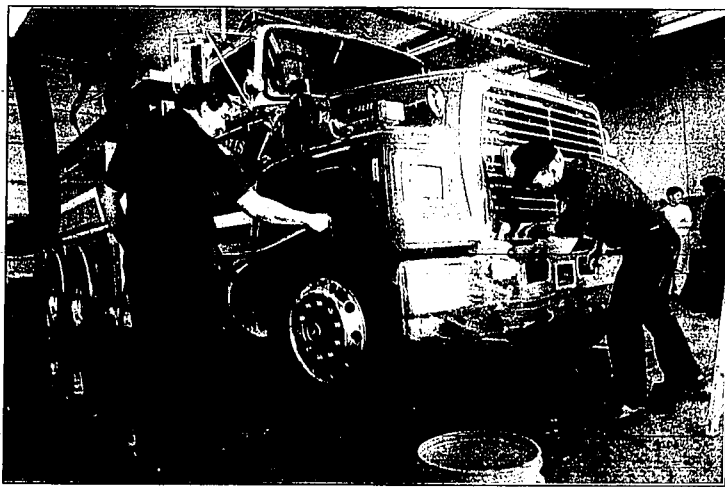

Members will also discuss a coordinating campaign to help citizens register to vote, ensure that they will vote and help plan transportation to the polls for anyone needing assistance.

The meeting will take place in the Jerome City Library meeting room at 7:30 p.m.

Rural fire district gets new truck

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Rural Fire District's new 3,500-gallon tanker truck arrived Friday as it prepares for its first day of protection next week.

County residents voted to form the fire district last year. The district's first day of operation is Thursday.

The district will contract for fire-fighting services from the Twin Falls Fire Department and also will buy $400,000 in equipment, said Jim Bieri, one of the district's three commissioners.

That includes the tanker, a pumper and small-pumper truck, and other equipment.

The fire district's boundaries run outside the city limits from 2600 East to 3300 East and Idaho Highway 74 to the county line on the Snake River.

Bieri reminded district residents to use their county grid address if reporting a fire.

"If they give a road out there that we're not familiar with, we're not going to be able to help them," Bieri said.

He also said the district wants to talk to anyone who has water storage, such as a water tank or a swimming pool, because water isn't available in all parts of the county, especially in the winter.

With the Twin Falls County Mutual Fire Insurance Co. leaving the fire-fighting business, other county residents not protected by city fire departments likely must form fire districts too.

The private insurance company will continue to insure property but has announced it wants to stop fire-fighting by Feb. 1, 1993 because of high costs and the liability of providing fire protection.

Father charged with threatening to kill girl's alleged sex-assailant

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

JEROME — Police arrested a 69-year-old Jerome man Friday morning and prosecutors charged him with trying to have sex with an 11-year-old girl, while her father was in jail for threatening to kill him.

Lt. Dean Larsen of the Jerome Police Department said the elderly man invited the girl to his home Thursday night at about 9 p.m.

The man took the girl's clothes off and tried to have sex with her, but she refused and ran home and told her father about the incident, Larsen said.

Police were called a few minutes later to East Avenue G, where the girl's father was standing outside the home of Jose L. Gonzales with a knife in each hand yelling at him to come outside, Larsen said.

The father was arrested and charged with aggravated assault. He spent the night in jail but was released on his own recognizance Friday afternoon.

He was ordered to have no contact with Gonzales, his family or property. Gonzales was arrested Friday morning and is charged with lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor.

He remained in the Jerome County Jail Friday after 5th District Judge Daniel Mechl set bond at $25,000.

Larsen said police wanted to arrest Gonzales because they feared for his safety if he was placed in the jail with the girl's father.

If convicted, the girl's father could be sentenced to five years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine. The maximum penalty for lewd and lascivious conduct is life in prison.

Developers fight against negotiating over berms

By Michael Hofferber
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A view-obstructing row of berms stands between Blaine County and developers of the proposed Flowers Bench Subdivision north of Ketchum.

Responding to an outcry from neighboring property owners worried that their view of Bald Mountain and the surrounding area will be obscured, the Blaine County Commissioners placed conditions on the Flowers Bench preliminary plat approval last month.

They ordered the developers, Elizabeth Gray and Constance Gray, to provide view corridors through the berms or come to some other agreement with the neighbors.

Prosecuting Attorney Fritz Haemmerle told the Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday night that the county has no authority to make those demands. The county has no berm ordinance defining standards for their height and location, although one is presently being drafted.

"This body cannot request that the applicants negotiate with the neighbors as a condition of subdivision approval," Haemmerle told the commission during a hearing on the Flowers Bench final plat.

Despite Haemmerle's advice, most commission members said they agreed with the conditions.

"We can do what our consciences dictate, or we can face reality," said Commissioner John Gladies. "I would suggest that we do what we feel is right."

Commissioner Tom Bowman moved to deny the Flowers Bench final plat "because the developer has not made an attempt to comply" with the conditions.

Bowman said he felt the commission should not try to override the county commissioners, who will have the final say on the plat next month. His motion died by a 2-4 vote.

As an alternative, Gladies proposed that the planning commission approve the final plat with the conditions intact.

"I also want to emphasize that we feel that the applicants and the neighbors need to come to some agreement," he said, suggesting that the county planning staff should act as facilitators. Gladies' motion passed 5-1.

Golf resort may receive mining claim

Idaho Conservation League wants to make a point about reform of state's mining laws

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Despite the mining claims staked out at the Elkhorn Resort's golf course earlier this week, the Mine-All-Mine Mining Co. doesn't plan on excavating the mother of all divots.

In fact, the half-serious, half-satirical company established by the Idaho Conservation League plans to offer its mining claim to the resort today.

The idea, says ICL public lands director Mike Medberry, is to enlist the help of Elkhorn and the Sun Valley Company in banning mining from the resort area and Bald Mountain, and ultimately from all public lands in the Wood River Valley.

"We don't want to hurt them economically, the way a miner could if he weren't as scrupulous as Mine-All-Mine," Medberry said. "We're not in the mining business. We're in the business of making a point about reform of the mining laws."

At a news conference scheduled for 10 a.m. today outside the Sixth Street Environmental Center, 411 E. Sixth St. in Ketchum, Medberry and other principals in Mine-All-Mine plan to offer their claims on Bald Mountain and the golf course to the Sun Valley Company and Elkhorn Resort.

They also plan to place stakes across the Grayhawk and Hemingway ski runs on Baldy, to underscore the site's openness to mining under the 1872 Mining Law.

On Wednesday, a surveyor and three Mine-All-Mine representatives spent about an hour planting stakes on the Elkhorn golf course under the watchful eye of a Sun Valley police officer.

The ICL hopes that Mine-All-Mine's activities will persuade the resort owners to join them in asking the federal government to close off the staked areas to mining.

The 1872 law targeted by the ICL allows miners to extract minerals from federally owned land without paying royalties.

They can then "patent" their mining claim and buy the land for $2.50 or $5 an acre — prices set 120 years ago and never changed.

Earlier this week, congressional negotiators rejected two proposed changes to the mining law: a one-year moratorium on new claims on federal lands and a slight increase in the prices paid for the land.

The rejections make major changes to the mining law unlikely before Congress' scheduled Oct. 3 adjournment.

But a more far-reaching measure, which the ICL supports, is still alive in the House.

That bill would, among other provisions, allow the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management to reject mining claims in sensitive areas; end patenting of claims; impose tighter reclamation standards for mined areas; and require miners to pay the government a royalty for minerals extracted from public lands.

The Idaho Mining Association has taken a dim view of Mine-All-Mine's activities. Jack Lynton, the IMA's executive director, says the company's claims are invalid because it has no intention of actually developing a mine.

But Medberry responded that many of the dozens of claims that have been staked throughout the Wood River Valley are not intended to be mined, but are merely plots to convert public lands to private property on the cheap.

"In the 19th century, the law encouraged mining," he said. "Today, it encourages land speculation. Real miners don't build condos."

Utah crime might give Rupert pawn shop murder new lead in pawn shop murder

Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — A sketch of a man who reportedly tried to kidnap a 13-year-old Murray, Utah girl Tuesday near Salt Lake City resembles a drawing made of a man wanted for questioning in the Randy Walker murder case.

"They do look similar," said Rupert Police Chief Paul Fries.

He said Minidoka County Sheriff's Department Detective Terry Quinn will check to see if the two people depicted in the composite sketches could be the same person.

After Walker was stabbed to death in his Rupert pawn shop April 13, law officers distributed a composite drawing of a man they believed could have been involved with the crime.

The suspect was said to be white, 5-foot-9 to 6-feet tall, 180 to 190 pounds, and have brown hair that hung over his ears.

He was also said to be between 30 and 40. The composite, Fries said in April, was "probably as close as anything we've got."

It was given by a woman who said she saw an angry-looking man headed in the direction of the murder shop minutes before the murder took place, said Fries.

Rupert police and state investigators haven't been able to learn who the suspect might be.

Jerry Fines, 18, was arrested and charged with the murder of Walker, but evidence seems to show that two people might have been involved in the crime.

A customer who entered the pawn shop at the time the murder was taking place said she was knocked to the floor from behind upon entering the store, and upon looking up, saw a brown haired man who resembled Walker, Fines said.

In the Utah County Police Department, a man tried to identify Fines as the man who entered the pawn shop. The man, a victim named her over his shoulder a short time later.

The girl did not cause the man to be a victim in the crime, but she was able to identify the man at the scene, police said.

The girl said she is about 30 years old, curly, sandy hair and

Judge denies murder defendant witnesses at county's expense

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Fifth District Judge George Granata turned down several requests Wednesday to hire expert witnesses at county expense during a pretrial hearing for murder defendant Jerry Fines.

Randy Stoker, appointed to represent Fines, 18, had asked Granata permission to hire a psychologist, forensic pathologist and others.

Fines faces charges in the April 13 slaying of Randy Walker, a pawn shop owner in Rupert.

Granata, so far, has allowed Stoker to hire a DNA expert to help identify blood left in a hand print.

Granata questioned Minidoka County prosecuting attorney David Haley on why he initiated the DNA testing. He said the cost to the county could be "almost astronomical."

Haley said the DNA test would cost $1,200, and another $1,000 to fly the expert from Nevada.

Stoker wanted a psychologist to testify what happens psychologically when people witness a crime. Stoker also asked for a forensic pathologist to testify to the number of wounds received by Stoker.

Because testimony by some witnesses points to a second person at the crime scene, Stoker said he believes the prosecution needs to prove that it was Fines, who delivered the fatal blow in order for him to be convicted of murder.

So far, Fines is the only one charged in the slaying, and police say they have exhausted leads into a second suspect.

Stoker, during the hearing, also requested an assistant attorney at county expense, saying the complexities of the case are hard to keep track of.

Granata denied Stoker's request for co-counsel, but later allowed Stoker to hire an investigator to assist him.

Stoker said it would be best for the county to allow the hiring than to have to pay his $100 hourly fee to do routine business.

Religion Column 'slaps' some in the face

The "Faith Today" column in The Times-News of Sept. 19 was a gratuitous slap in the face to me and all other members of the 2.6 million-member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.

The Rev. Clark Morphew feels free to air his negative assessment of my church, its leaders and its mission without ever referring to his own background. It may be of interest to readers, and to your editors, to know that he is a clergyman of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, the largest and most liberal of the Lutheran Church bodies in this country.

Reader comment
Rev. Lawrence Vedder

The theological stances of the Rev. Morphew on church on various issues (biblical inerrancy, homosexuality, abortion, ordination of women) do not meet with my approval. However, I can't find any justification to attack the structure of his church as a result of my failure to agree with it. Evidently, the conservative nature of the Missouri Synod was more than the reverend columnist could abide.

He indicts the LC-MS on this evidence and a bias that has obviously affected his memory. He decries the fact that the Rev. Ralph Bohlmann was not re-elected to the Synod's presidency at our triennial convention in Pittsburg in July. He fails to mention, however, that the Rev. Bohlmann came to Pittsburg as a five-time incumbent. Perhaps it was just time for a change. Even we muddled conservatives recognize the value of a periodic change in outlook.

Mr. Morphew asks "why won't they (LC-MS members) pray with other Lutherans?" The answer is simple. We do pray with other Lutherans, and Christians of other denominations as well. We do draw the line at some forms of joint worship because we don't wish to give false impressions of unity that don't actually exist. But we will pray with others because it is a privilege and one privileged to communicate with a loving God.

The separations that exist in Christianity are based on different views of how God communicates with us. I think the Rev. Morphew may have been confused with some other denomination. It's an interesting way to attack, even though it's untrue. By the way, Rev. Morphew, have you stopped beating your dog?

Finally, and most maddening, is the columnist's abuse of the LC-MS position of ordaining women. He suggests that a male power structure quakes in fear of female intrusion into the pastorate. He doesn't mention the fact that the synod's position on women's ordination is based on our interpretation of scripture. It is the height of irresponsibility to ascribe to political expediency a doctrinal position based on a careful and proper biblical examination of God's word.

The Rev. Morphew need not agree with us, but he must be honest in telling others what we believe. Every document our church has produced on this topic has clearly explained that certain passages in scripture, not a concern for political correctness, shape our view. The Rev. Morphew should fairly explain the reasons behind the views he ridicules.

The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod is a conservative church body. We value the word of scripture above all other advice and opinion. That word of God leads us, compels us, to take some positions that may be troublesome to observers. So be it.

The column characterized the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod as being a study in confusion. I suggest that the confusion is largely the Rev. Morphew's, and he needs to do a great deal more study. Until that is done, perhaps he can limit his venom to his own church.

The Rev. Lawrence Vedder is the pastor at the Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls.

Lutherans hurt by Morphew's words

I am writing in regard to the write-up which you printed in your paper last week (Faith today, Sept. 19) about our Lutheran religion.

I think that was a terrible thing to do and we agree with Pastor Vedder on the letter he wrote to you (printed above). We all are very hurt by what you did. I think you owe an apology to every Lutheran pastor in this valley.

God-centered life opens one's mind to countless opportunities

"... Take care of yourself ...
... You deserve it ...
... Watch your backside ...
... Look out for No. 1 ..."

Dan Miller
Clergy's corner

Just a few phrases that are indicative of a deep inner concern for safety and well being. If you don't look out for yourself, it's probable that no one else will! Self-interest and self-preservation is kind of a God-given early warning device that is so critical for survival and success in this challenging arena that we know as life.

However, self-interest that is carried to the extreme, where it becomes the primary motivation in life, will not only steal your potential for fulfillment and true happiness but can be deadly. In fact, it's very easy for healthy self-interest to be twisted into raw self-centeredness or self-worship.

Self-centeredness is a true characteristic of the mentally ill who can only see life from this point of view. You can't reason with this individual because he has been so damaged by his response to life that his total frame of reference is S-E-L-F and there is no point of contact outside of his self-made prison.

Efficiency, productivity and satisfaction are greatly diminished in the self-centered person. Life becomes increasingly ingrown. To illustrate, diagram life as a spiral turning always inward. You find it gets more confined and tighter all the time until it reaches dead center - then there is no place to go. The final payoff is futility and an empty tank.

However, there is a great option! The God-centered life is like a spiral turning outward and there is just no limit - in its unwinding process, it becomes wider and wider. Praise God! This is a life filled with God's love and possibilities. Someone has said man is much like a hole - the more you take away, the bigger it gets.

Who is at the center of your life? Does Christ rule and reign within? Is life getting bigger and better due to God's endorsement and ability in you? If not, give yourself a break. Give yourself away to him right now and then experience the joy of living by him, through him and to him. You have the potential for greatness. Don't fall into the booby trap of navel-gazing. Look up. See Jesus. He cares and does have a wonderful plan for you.

Christian craftsman

Bill Kuiken stands in front of the stained glass window he designed for First Baptist Church.

Kuiken's 'knack' for stained glass graces area churches

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Twelve years ago, Bill Kuiken found just what he'd always wanted under his Christmas tree - and he didn't even know it at the time.

"My son gave me a stained glass kit that Christmas, and I was looking for a hobby because my last child had just left for college," Kuiken said. "It was the one who had empty nest syndrome."

Kuiken enrolled in a stained glass class and soon found that he had the knack.

"I have no art background, and I don't consider myself an artist," Kuiken said. "I think of myself as a craftsman."

Around town, Kuiken's craftsmanship has become increasingly apparent. As a gift to his church, First United Methodist, Kuiken created a 3-by-6-foot stained glass window in an elevator tower. Then, Lucille Routh commissioned him to create three 5-by-8-foot windows in the First Baptist Church in memory of her late husband, Vern. Some 200 hours and six months later, the first of those three windows is now in place.

Using stained glass purchased in Denver, the window consists of more than 250 pieces, intricately fitted together to form the resurrection scene. The crosses stand before a rising sun. A tiny butterfly signifies new life.

Now working on the second window in the series, Kuiken is busy designing a nativity scene. The third will be a depiction of the baptism of Christ.

Crossing his fingers for good luck, Kuiken said, "I plan to have the second window finished by the end of the year."

Catholics need visionary leadership

It's no secret that Catholic religious orders have been going through hard times as the numbers of brothers, sisters and priests dwindle and monasteries close across the nation.

But a new study by the Center for Applied Social Research at DePaul University in Chicago shows that some orders are emerging from the declining numbers and the difficulty of recruiting new members.

The keys will be visionary leadership and reconnecting with the original purpose of the order, according to the survey, which included interviews with 9,999 brothers, sisters and priests who belong to the 816 religious congregations in the United States.

The Rev. David Nygren, an organizational psychologist and a Vincentian priest, and Miriam Ukeritis, a clinical psychologist and a Sister of St. Joseph of Carondelet, were co-directors of the study.

The biggest problem some orders face, the survey shows, is not declining numbers but weak leadership that cannot formulate a vision for the future or carry out effective programs. Unless fresh leadership can emerge from the orders and be effectively trained, those organizations will continue to decline.

But an order that sets out to discover its founder's purpose and is able to interpret that philosophy for this day may have a chance to survive. And the possibility of renewal will increase if members are willing to make sacrifices and serve the most vulnerable people.

That, however, will be a tall order. Not only are young people less inclined to join religious orders, but members of existing orders are becoming less obedient to church leaders. And many of those members are unwilling to make the necessary sacrifices that a ministry to the poor requires.

Clark Morphew

For example, the Sisters of the Visitation of Holy Mary, a contemplative order with eight monasteries nationwide, has spent the past several months rediscovering their founder's original purpose and formulating a vision for the future, according to Mother Superior Philomena Tisinger. The Visitation sisters understand that their most immediate challenge is recruiting new members. Toward that end, they have launched Vital Call, "a vocation-awareness project that will solicit prayers asking God to invite young women from their schools to extend monastic experiences and summer service in the monasteries.

Although they have closed two monasteries recently, the Visitation sisters are also hoping to open poor communities in kind of island neighborhoods as a sign of "island of gentleness in a violent society."

The first of those monasteries, established in Minneapolis, is attracting children for after-school activities. There, the sisters chant the divine office four times a day, and neighbors are invited to join them.

The Visitation order recognizes that its grade schools and high schools for young women are the best source for new members. It is vital, Tisinger says, that girls are given opportunities to spend time in the monastery so they can evaluate their compatibility with the monastic life.

"We will be inviting more young people and adult lay into our monasteries as a way of de-mythologizing the monastery," Tisinger says. "We all have a responsibility to talk about vocation, to tell others. And we're going to ask parents to provide an environment in which religious life is not thought of as weird or something to be feared."

Visitation is an example of an order that has faced its challenge and formulated a vision for its future. But the willingness of Visitation sisters to accept those changes and take the risks may be extraordinary.

DePaul study shows that members of many orders are not able to move into the future with confidence. Beyond lacking visionary leadership, many orders are also dealing with a demoralized membership.

"During the last three decades of extensive change, many religious congregations have lost their sense of purpose and mission," says Nygren. "We have also witnessed congregations in which the members have lost heart because the central mission of the order is not lived out clearly."

Nygren says the "impulse to generosity" in many orders has been "weakened by self-preoccupation, psychological decomposition, stark individualism and a lessening of the willingness to sacrifice."

Crop Walk provides chance to aid Somalia

I don't know about you, but I have not yet responded in much of a personal way to the severe hunger crisis in Somalia or the victims of the recent hurricanes.

I am aware that our church uses some of our benevolence money to assist. And I know that some of our tax dollars are directed toward these needs. That's good. Still, I don't feel that my response has been adequate.

The hurt is there and it's real ... compelling ... enormous. I need to do something personal, something concrete. And now's my chance.

A "Crop Walk" is coming to Twin Falls. It will begin and end at College of Idaho. The event gets started at 2 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 25. The 6.2-mile (10-kilometer) route will take us along a well-marked and supervised walk with all ages in mind (wheelchairs OK). The purpose of the walk is to both raise awareness and money for people whose suffering we can touch with material assistance.

CROP is a program of Church World Service, the outreach arm of a 32-denomination member organization (National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States of America) which includes Adventists, Baptists, Catholics, Evangelicals, Jews, Lutherans, Mennonites, Methodists, Reformers, Unitarian, etc. "Crop Walks" have an excellent reputation and are held in cities and communities across the nation.

For this Twin Falls community event, we are looking for persons of all faiths to join in. Walkers use pledge envelopes to receive and record contributions before they walk - usually donated on "so-much-per-kilometer (or mile) basis. Seventy-five percent of all proceeds go to CROP or one of 16 specific voluntary agencies which can be specifically designated for contributions (such as Heifer Project International, Project HOPE and CARE). The remaining 25 percent of all the receipts will stay locally in Twin Falls for hunger/emergency needs. This is strictly a voluntary activity. West One Bank will carry this special short-term account.

Routes will be well marked and supervised. Refreshments and aid stations will be provided. Seniors may walk the "barb park" on the CSI campus to fulfill their pledges. All others will walk together at their own pace as a family of concerned persons of all ages, faiths and colors. Interested? Certain churches have CROP materials; otherwise, contact the shared facility (Valley Christian Church, Our Savior Lutheran Church) at 1708 Heyburn Ave. E. to pick up sponsor record forms and other pertinent information. Questions? Call 733-3222 or 733-3774.

I need to go for a walk. How about you?

Couple present concert
TWIN FALLS — Pat and Hank Murray will present a concert of gospel music at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Airport Free Will Baptist Church, 800 Washington St. S.

The Murrays, of Carlbad, N.M., spend approximately 10 months of the year traveling throughout the United States performing their unique style of southern gospel music. They have used their music to minister to a variety of churches and to host a gospel music radio program in Arizona. To date, they have recorded eight albums and produced three music videos.

For more information, call the Rev. Jim O'Donnell at 734-7149.

Catholic education begins

TWIN FALLS — Religious education at St. Edward's and Guadalupe Catholic parishes is set to begin this week. The orientation sessions (the first class for all age groups of both parishes) will be held at St. Edward's Parish Hall Sunday.

Kindergarten through sixth grade students will meet during 9 a.m. mass. Junior high students (seventh and eighth grades) will meet after the 11 a.m. mass, and senior high students will meet following the 6 p.m. mass.

Under a new format, junior and senior high students will select their own areas of study for six-week learning modules with sessions to be held at the teachers' homes. High school students have chosen Sunday as their primary day of study. Junior high sessions will be held on weekday evenings selected by the teachers.

According to Pat McNamara, director of education, a second class for kindergarten through sixth grade is in the planning stage for Wednesday afternoons and is expected to begin Oct. 21.

Fall Roundup scheduled

WENDELL — The Wendell Presbyterian Church on First Avenue East has planned its annual Fall Roundup for Sunday.

The event will be held during church school and worship from 9:40 to 11 a.m. It will feature a visit from two mountain men, a snake named Floyd, gospel music, a toe-tapping sing-along and barbecue food with all the trimmings.

The public is invited. Western attire is encouraged.

Movie shown in Gooding

GOODING — "Eye of the Storm," a new dramatic movie from World Wide Pictures, will be shown at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at the Gooding Christian Church, 334 Fourth Ave. W.

The film tells the story of an award-winning TV journalist, Tom Edwards, who has returned from the Persian Gulf War, and his producer, Patricia "Pete" Peterson. Their assignment to keep the ratings high puts them at odds, because Edwards feels the best "story" is one that would trash the faith of returning servicemen and women.

Edwards' real war is at home with his daughter, Jill, and with his own heart. Following his wife's death, he immerses himself in his work, leaving Jill hurt and alone. Through stories of soldiers from the war and the support of Peterson, Edwards is able to find peace in the midst of his personal storms.

Cast members include Jeff Conway ("Taxi," "Grease") as Edwards, Connie Sellecca ("Hotel," "P.S. I Love You") as Peterson and Deborah Tucker as Jill. Other noted personalities appearing are John Tesh ("Entertainment Tonight"), Ken Magee ("Mississippi Burning"), Cyndi James Gossett ("Ghost Dad"), Kirk Duncan ("Layner and Shirley"), and Joanne Baron ("The Eyes of Laura Mars").

World Wide Pictures is the motion picture industry of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association.

Mission services set

TWIN FALLS — The First Christian Church, 601 Shoshone St. N., will be the host for the Northwest School of Missions services this week.

David Pietatt, a representative for the Bibles for Russia Mission will speak at 7 p.m. Sunday. A time of fellowship will follow the service, and refreshments will be served.

All area Christian churches are invited to participate in a potluck dinner set for 7 p.m. Monday. Chester Parker of the Ross World Mission Fund will be the guest speaker at 8 p.m.

Rick Grove of the Ninos de Mexico Speaker will be the featured musician at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The public is invited, and area churches' missions committees are especially encouraged to attend.

All services are open to the public. Freewill offerings will be taken at each service.

Concert set for Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — Calvin Taylor, pianist and recording artist, will present a live concert of sacred music at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Twin Falls Seventh-day Adventist Church, 131 Grandview Drive (corner of Addison Avenue West). A unique mirror and lighting system will allow the audience to see the entire keyboard.

Taylor has toured throughout the world, performing in North and South America, Europe and the Far East. He holds degrees in music from the Oberlin Conservatory and the University of Michigan and has authored several music books, including "Spirituals for Piano." He also has 10 solo albums to his credit.

Taylor was awarded a full scholarship to the Oberlin Conservatory.

His ability to improvise led him to become the only student in Oberlin's more than 150-year history to improvise a graduate concert encore. Taylor's unusually large hand span of more than 1 1/2 octaves allows him to present sounds which would normally require four hands.

The concert is free and the public is invited.

Retreat, meeting planned

TWIN FALLS — The Presbytery of Kendall will hold its annual retreat in conjunction with a stated presbytery meeting Oct. 1-3 in West Yellowstone, Mont.

Ed White, a senior consultant with The Alban Institute, will lead the retreat portion of the three-day convocation of Presbyterian leaders from throughout eastern Idaho. He will speak on "Reconstituting the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.)."

White is an ordained Presbyterian minister and a former executive presbyter. The Alban Institute, located in Washington, D.C., assists Christian churches in matters ranging from pastor/congregation relationships to church growth.

In addition to worshipping, discussing and sharing meals, the presbyters will gather in West Yellowstone to administer the work of the Presbyterian Church in southeastern Idaho.

The First Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls is one of the 18 churches in the presbytery. Each of the churches will send at least one clergy and one non-clergy representative as commissioners to the representative body which serves the function of bishop in the area.

The Times-News welcomes news of church events. Send information to Ellen Thomson, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, ID 83303. Deadline is noon Thursday for publication on the Saturday religion page.

Graham: I won't slow down

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham intends to maintain the strenuous pace of his worldwide ministry, despite his health problems and advancing age.

"I don't think that I can find any body in the Bible that retired," Graham, 73, said in an interview Wednesday with the Associated Press. "The Lord retired though and I think God will retire me in time."

"There was a time when probably I'm not physically or mentally able to conduct the crusades," he said. "Till that time I'm just going to keep going the way I've been going."

Wednesday night, more than 40,000 people gathered to Portland Civic Stadium for the opening of Graham's five-day crusade.

The 3,000-member choir fell silent and the crowd cheered when Graham finally walked toward the stage.

Graham told them: "You didn't realize when you came to Portland that your life would be changed and you would walk the road of Christ, but that's going to happen to many of you tonight."

Earlier this year, Graham acknowledged he suffers from the early stages of Parkinson's disease. While not fatal, Parkinson's leaves its victims with worsening tremors, stiffness and loss of movement.

Mormons send aid to Africa

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church is sending a $1 million package of food and money to drought-stricken Somalia and other African countries.

A million pounds of food staples like dry milk, wheat flour, corn meal and beans is being distributed at 10 feeding locations through established relief agencies.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints also is funding several water and agriculture development projects, its humanitarian service division said in a news release.

Members of the church throughout the world are donating the food, cash and materials like medical equipment, a delivery vehicle, soap and clothing.

Glass

ish by Christmas." Kuiken, 61, has set up shop at a work table in his garage. He has purchased a grinder, but noted that his hobby doesn't require much equipment. Once he has drawn a plan and cut each piece of stained glass to size, he wraps the pieces with copper foil and solders them together. Color placement decisions are made in conjunction with his wife, Edna.

Until now, Kuiken's hobby has been solely a labor of love, but, having completed his first major work for sale, Kuiken is starting to think about opening a small commercial enterprise when he retires.

"The popularity of stained glass in people's homes is growing," Kuiken said. "I'm not sure how strong the market is, because it can get pretty expensive."

Stained glass costs $5 to $10 a square foot, Kuiken explained, but that only represents about a third of the cost of a finished piece. You have to figure in labor and time, too, and prices vary according to intricacy. "If you put 30 or 40 hours into a stained glass hanging, you would try to sell it for at least $150 or $200," Kuiken said.

The stained glass items Kuiken has fashioned for his own home are varied. Three hangings decorate a living room window. One, a peace dove flying before Trinity circles, was modeled after a church pulpit cloth. The other two are a Dutch windmill and a Dutch boy and girl, inspired by a porcelain figurine and by the fact that the Kuikens are of Dutch descent.

planter sits on the Kuikens' coffee table, a stained glass lamp is on an end table and a stained glass parrot, made from a pattern found in a book, resides in the home office. Kuiken has also made mirrors with stained glass borders for each of his three children.

Born in Illinois, Kuiken moved to Twin Falls from Oregon in 1975. He is the warehouse supervisor for the South Central Community Action Agency. On vacations, he likes to travel the country in his fifth wheel trailer with his wife, a Lincoln School teacher.

The two scour the country for interesting pieces of stained glass.

Astros will hang up Scott, Cruz numbers

HOUSTON — The Houston Astros said they will retire the numbers of two of their most popular former players, pitcher Mike Scott and outfielder Jose Cruz.
The numbers will be retired during a ceremony before the Oct. 3 game against the Los Angeles Dodgers in the Astro-dome. Scott, who wore No. 33, was the National League's Cy Young winner in 1986. He also became the first pitcher ever to throw a no-hitter in a clinching situation when he shut out the Giants 2-0 to wrap up the NL West title Sept. 25, 1986.
With his split-fingered fast ball, Scott won 110 games for the Astros between 1983 and 1990.
While playing the outfield from 1975 to 1987, Cruz became the club's all-time leader in six offensive categories, including games with 1,870, hits with 1,937 and RBIs with 942.

Football player taught at home may play at college

AKRON, Ohio — A University of Akron football player whose eligibility was questioned because he was schooled at home will be allowed to play, school officials said Friday.
Akron sports information director Mack Yates said linebacker Jason Taylor's appeal was upheld, and the 6-foot-6, 210-pound freshman is eligible to play.
"He's clear and will be out practicing with our football team shortly," Yates said.
The NCAA said earlier it did not believe the 3.85 grade-point-average Taylor earned at home was a good measure of his education.

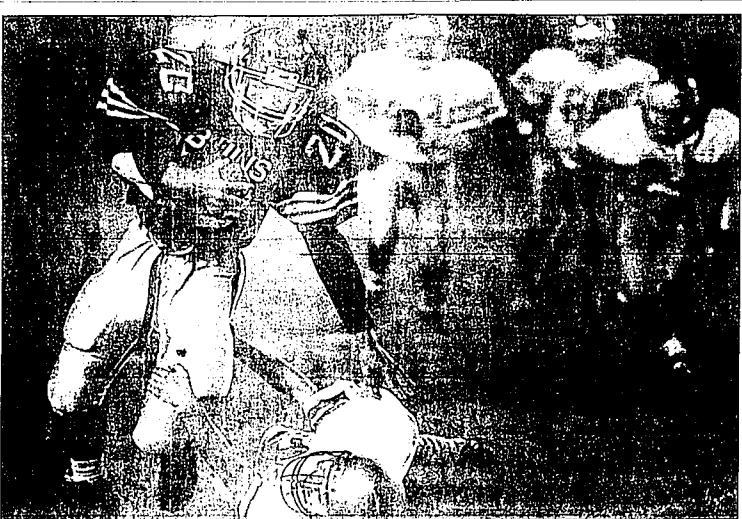

Judge rejects suit seeking to lift Oilers game blackout

HOUSTON — A state judge on Friday denied a request by an elderly Houston Oilers fan to lift the local television blackout of Sunday's game against the San Diego Chargers.
Ida Nona Frenzel, 86, filed a lawsuit in Houston against the National Football League, NBC and Houston television station KPRC, but District Judge Eugene Chambers refused to issue a temporary restraining order that would have permitted the game to be shown in the Houston area, attorney Wes Hocker said.

Junior back pairs with Starley to lead Bruins over Minico 40-13, remain undefeated

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — Junior running back Josh Amundson continued to expand his repertoire with an 85-yard kickoff return and pass interception, and the undefeated Twin Falls Bruins rolled over Minico's Spartans 40-13 Friday night.
For the second week Amundson was the spark that turned the Bruins loose, combining with Greg Starley to dominate the middle quarters.
Starley made the move to quarterback from wideout when senior Nate Gehman sat out the week with injury. That move by Twin Falls Coach Jon Jund apparently led Minico mentor John Billetz to shut down the Bruin running game and force Starley to the air.
That's what happened early as Twin Falls tried to counter Minico's eight-man front with some passing. Starley's percentage wasn't high but his 26-yarder to Jason Ringenberg set up a two-yard plunge by Amundson, and early in the second period he and Ringenberg collaborated on a 65-yard scoring play that pretty well broke it open.
In the third quarter, after Twin Falls had opened up a 33-0 lead, both teams went liberally to their benches and plays whizzed up and down the field for a short while.

Amundson, who picked up 180 yards last week, had 101 yards in 14 carries in the first half and ended the game with 134. But his big run came after Minico's first touchdown late in the third quarter.

He took the kickoff on his own 15, got outside where he benefitted from a Geoff Pierce springing block and outspinted two defenders to the end zone.
Josh Baron, who had two partial punt blocks last week, came up with a major play and a prime assist against Minico. First, he picked off a Nick Benevisez pass at the Minico 37 and returned it to the seven to set up the third Twin Falls score.
Early in the third quarter, he deflected a pass away from a Spartan defender. The ball popped up in the air, giving junior linebacker Joe Peavey time to pick it off on the dead run and romp 37 yards to score.
As the team record hit 4-0 for the third-ranked Bruins, Jund credited the ability of individuals to make major assignment shifts and still make major contributions.
"Greg (Starley) handled it (shift to quarterback) pretty well," Jund said. He added continued problems with the Twin Falls line jumping the gun was "inattention. It had nothing to do with the quarterbacking."
"The other thing that was good was we were able to play everyone tonight. It's about time some of these kids got to play," he said.

Senators run over Bulldogs 20-0

By Jeff Hoskisson
Times-News writer
GOODING — The Gooding Senators running game proved to be too much for the Kimberly Bulldogs to handle Friday night as the Senators collected a 20-0 Canyon Conference win.
"The ball control offense worked well," said Senators Coach Jeff Jeffries.
The Senators rushed for a total of 261 yards on the night. The big man for Gooding was senior running back Jim Sorenson. He carried the ball 26 times for 124 yards and one touchdown.

Gooding controlled play for most of the first half but was able to score only once.
"We shot ourselves in the foot," Jeffries said of the Senators' collection of a 20-0 Canyon Conference win.
The changes worked to perfection. After losing the ball on a fumble on their first possession, the Senators' defense held the Bulldogs on four consecutive plays to get the ball back. Gooding then held on to the ball for more than eight minutes, ending with a 1-yard TD run by Sorenson.

The Senators ran off 17 plays of which Sorenson carried the ball on 10 of them.
"They were strong up front," said Bulldogs Coach Randy Potter.
Kimberly, which crossed mid-field only twice in the game, was shut down all night by the Senators' defense.
"We had a hard time running the football," said Potter. "We were hurt also."

NFL ruling opens door to flood of big bucks

The Associated Press
With the elimination of Plan-B free agency, the four NFL players just declared unrestricted free agents can go ahead with "Plan A."
Haven't heard of Plan A? That's the one in which agents make lots of phone calls, players make lots of demands and owners make lots of zeros on contracts.
Keith Jackson, arguably the NFL's best tight end, is the most notable of the four players who on Thursday were given five days to sign with any team in the league by U.S. District Judge David Doty. The others are wide receiver Webster Slaughter, defensive end Garin Veris and running back D.J. Dozier.
In his ruling, Doty said the players were still suffering the effects of the Plan B system outlawed by a jury on Sept. 10. Protected under Plan B but not under contract when it was annulled, the players will learn Tuesday if Doty intends to

Most Americans believe players should have choice of free agency

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — Americans favor unrestricted free agency in the NFL, according to a Louis Harris poll released Friday but conducted before the courts declared the league's Plan B free agent system illegal.
Of those polled, 53 percent favored free agency, 42 percent favored the current system and the rest were unsure. Black Americans were most heavily in favor of free agency, 76 percent to 19 percent.
Males favored free agency 49-46, females 59-34. Whites favored free agency 49-45.
The question was asked this way:
"Do you think that at the end of their contracts, all NFL players should be able to change teams for any reason they wish, or do you favor the current system under which players designated as vital to their team are prevented from becoming free agents while players not considered vital to their team are eligible to become Plan-B free agents?"
In the meantime, the bidding for Jackson, and perhaps for Slaughter, figures to be fast and furious. "Keith will be in uniform playing football for someone in the NFL a week from this Sunday, or Monday," Jackson's agent, Gary Wichard, said. "I don't plan on having Keith tied up in court beginning next Tuesday. We have this window of opportunity now and we'll pursue it, because Keith's return to the football field is long overdue."
Jackson's old team, the Philadelphia Eagles, has a bye this week and plays NFC East rival Dallas on Oct. 5. Wichard seems intent on having his client in uniform by then, but exactly what that uniform will look like appears entirely up in the air.
Wichard said he was "just talking to some teams," but declined to say how many or which ones. "I really don't want to get into it. They're requested confidentially."
Dallas is thought to be interested in the tight end, and that by itself may be enough to get Washington to call. Add the Eagles,

Receiver returns to Tide

The Associated Press
Alabama and Tennessee, on course to play for the Southeastern Conference's Sugar Bowl berth, may get stronger with returns by key people this weekend.
Marshall Faulk of San Diego State also returns after a week off, and the nation's leading rusher will be looking to atone for his worst day as a college starter when the No. 21 Aztecs square off against No. 11 UCLA.
Alabama, 3-0, ranked No. 7 in the country and leading the SEC West Division, gets wide receiver-kick returner David Palmer back from a three-game suspension prompted by two drunk driving arrests.
Tennessee, 3-0, ranked No. 8 and the leading SEC East Division, gets Johnny Majors back after a three-week absence caused by heart bypass surgery.
After the regular season is over, the SEC will hold a playoff between the East and West Division winners for the right to play in the Sugar Bowl. The Tide and Vols meet on Oct. 17 at Tennessee, but may play again in the playoff.
The Crimson Tide, winners of 13 in a row, will have Palmer for the first time this season when they meet Louisiana Tech, which had a 12-game win streak snapped 16-13 by Southern Mississippi last week.
The Volunteers, surprise winners against No. 18 Georgia and No. 13 Florida already this season, will have Majors on site for the first time this season. The recovering coach will be in the press box for the game against Cincinnati.
In other games involving top 25 teams, Arizona is at No. 1 Miami; Wake Forest is at No. 3 Florida State; Houston is at No. 4 Michigan; Purdue is at No. 6 Notre Dame; Maryland is at No. 9 Penn State; and Iowa is at No. 10 Colorado.
Also, No. 14 Virginia is at Duke; Arizona State is at No. 15 Nebraska; No. 16 Clemson is at Georgia Tech; Mississippi is at Georgia Tech; Jose State is at No. 19 Stanford; No. 23 North Carolina State is at North Carolina; and Michigan State is at No. 25 Boston College.
Palmer, who piled up 1,113 total yards as a freshman last season, resumes his career after sitting out three games and undergoing counseling.
"Simply put, I'm trying to help David make the right decisions and I feel at this time it is in his best interest to get David back on the playing field," coach Gene Stallings said in announcing Palmer's return.
"The reason I let him come back is not because he's a good football player. That has nothing to do with it," Stallings said. "Obviously he's a good player, but we're 3-0 without him."
Tennessee, under interim coach Phillip Fulmer, greets a Cincinnati squad which, despite its 0-2 record, seems much improved on the field.
The Bears, 81-0 losers to Penn State last year, lost 24-20 to the Nittany Lions in last year's Fiesta Bowl.
"All those players remaining from last year who played against Penn State remember an outstanding football team," Majors said of his team. "I'll certainly line up with them and hang in there, it speaks well for them."
At Los Angeles, Faulk will show up with impressive credentials — 519 yards and six touchdowns in two games — and bad memories — 79 yards on 15 carries in a 37-12 loss to seven-time SEC Aztecs seek to break through against UCLA.
"They have the team speed, the size. They're really disciplined, they have some good players," Faulk said of the Bruins, who are 14-0 against San Diego State with eight straight wins. "They're just great athletes. They can afford to mess up and still have some good come out of it."
The Aztecs are ranked for the first time since 1977, and UCLA coach Terry Donahue said they're more than just Jay Faulk, but he's still a critical factor.

Briefly

Connors beats Navratilova in match

LAS VEGAS — Jimmy Connors beat Martina Navratilova in a quarter-final match Friday night and his defeat was mostly her fault.

Or mostly her double-fault, to be exact.

Connors, a 6-foot 4-inch favorite in man-to-woman betting, won 7-5, 6-2 before a sellout crowd of 13,832 outdoors at Caesar's Palace. Both stars came to play and not to create an event, like Bobby Riggs' infamous battle with Billie Jean King at the Astrodome in Houston 19 years ago.

There were few exchanges among the players and hardly any between them and the fans during the battle for a winner's prize of $500,000.

Navratilova committed 11 double faults, and two of them were ace.

With Connors up 6-5 in the first set, Navratilova double-faulted away set point. Connors was leading 3-2 in the second set and was ahead 15-30 with Navratilova serving in the sixth game when she double-faulted again. Connors then broke service, held his own and broke service again to close out the match.

Christie retains World Cup 100-meters

HAVANA — Britain's Lindford Christie solidified his claim as the world's top sprinter and Sandra Farmer-Patrick won her second consecutive title in the 400-meter hurdles Friday night in the rain-plagued World Cup track and field meet.

The confident and cocky Christie, the Olympic 100-meter gold medalist and self-anointed No. 1 in the world, won his second straight World Cup crown.

Two other Olympic gold medalists were winners Friday night in this three-day, finals-only competition among hemisphere, continental and national teams. They were shot-putter Mike Salemi of the United States and women's Olympic 400-meter champion Marie-Jose Percec of France, who captured the 200 Friday night.

Competing on a wet track and against a field weakened down by the absence of Olympic runner Frank Fredericks, Christie's Namibia and record-holder Carl Lewis, Christie prevailed in 10.21 seconds on a hot, humid night. Fredericks was injured and Lewis chose not to compete.

Daly moves into lead of B.C. Open

ENDICOTT, N.Y. — Warmer temperatures and John Daly's growing familiarity with the Fox-Joe Golf Club course produced a 5-under-par 67 Friday that moved him into the lead of the $800,000 B.C. Open after two rounds.

Phil Mickelson helped create a three-way tie, for second by coming through with the tournament's best round, an 8-under-par 63. Joining Mickelson were 1990 B.C. Open champion Nolan Henke and first-round leader Ken Green.

Daly, making his first appearance in the B.C. Open and playing the course for just the third time, played a flawless round with five birdies that left him at 9-under-par 133 after 36 holes.

"That's the first 18 holes I've played this year without a bogey. I hit the ball 10 times better than I did yesterday," Daly said. "I feel a lot that it was warmer. It was so cold yesterday you couldn't get a feel for anything." Today, I took advantage of a couple par-5s and played the par-3s real well. That was one of my keys, to play the par-3s. So far, so good."

Douglass fares well on drizzly day

ALPHARETTA, Ga. — Dale Douglass shot a 4-under-par 68 on a dreary Friday to take a 1-stroke lead after the first round of the Senior Tour's $800,000 Nationwide Championship.

Douglass made six birdies and overcame his only mistake — a double-bogey on the second hole — to take the lead on the par-72, 6,781-yard Country Club of the South golf course.

"It is one of the longer courses we play," said Douglass, 56, a two-time winner this year and seventh on the money list. "The older guys are the ones having problems. I don't play as well as younger seniors."

Tied at 69 were George Archer, Don Bies, John Paul Cain and Bob Brue at 21 players in the field of 78 shot par or better on a course soggy from an all-day rain on Thursday.

King rides 3-hole blitz into share of lead

BUENA PARK, Calif. — Betsy King had a birdie-eagle-birdie run on the front nine en route to a 2-under-par 70 and a share of the second-round lead in the Los Coyotes LPGA Classic on Friday.

King, who began the round at 4-under, was tied with Hollis Stacy, who shot 71, with a 6-under 138 total.

First-round leader Tami Tatum and Tracy Kerdyk were one back at 139. Tatum shot a 73 and Kerdyk had a 71.

King began her birdie-eagle-birdie run on No. 2 to get to 8-under. She then bogeyed Nos. 5 and 7 before a birdie on No. 8 put her at 7-under.

"My problem today was off the tee," King said. "I made some mental errors. It just shows I'm not as smart as I think I am."

It isn't funny, but it's a fact: Most of the young people eligible to vote will not exercise their right to do so in the upcoming election. And, they're the big TV watchers.

If you want to reach the Active Electorate, look to The Times-News, your local, daily newspaper. Newspapers reach almost 90 percent of adults each week. Their heaviest readership is among adults most likely to vote in an election.

These adults are professionals, high-income earners, well-educated and between 35 and 64 years of age; people who are politically active and concerned about their communities and quality of life.

Introducing... THE 1993 JEEP GRAND CHEROKEE

With the introduction of the New Jeep, comes the widest range of 4WD choices anywhere. First there's Command-Trac™ a part time system that lets you shift on the fly from two wheel drive to four wheel drive to help you through mud, snow or slick pavement conditions. Next, the optional Selec-Trac™ is an enhancement of the shift on the fly design, allowing for different wheel speeds between front and rear axles. Finally there's the all-new Jeep Quadra-Trac™ representing the ultimate in Jeep four wheel drive response. This all-time system reacts automatically when conditions become more difficult. The new MAGNUM SMP1.5 liter V-8 engine has more horsepower than Ford's 5.8 liter V-8 and Chevy's 5.7 liter V-8; 230 hp at 4,800 rpm, with 280 pound-foot of torque at 3,200 rpm. Sequential multiport fuel injection helps deliver high efficiency for quick starts, increased power and torque, plus good fuel economy.

THE ACES ON BRIDGESM BOBBY WOLFF

"Posterity is as likely to be wrong as anybody else."
— Heywood Braun.

Who gets the last word in the analysis of today's defense? West claimed he did all he could, and East complained about his luck. What do you think the Friendly Kibitzer had to offer?

West led the heart king, and when dummy's singleton appeared, East had a clear shot at guiding West in the right direction for a switch in the attack. In this case, East had diamond strength, so he dropped his heart jack to show strength in the higher-ranking side-suit. (Reverse East's minors, and he would have indicated strength in clubs by playing his lowest heart.)

West dutifully switched to a low diamond to East's ace, and a low diamond came back. However, South guessed right, letting the 10 in dummy force West's king and limiting the defense to only three tricks.

Did East-West do all they could have to beat the game? They thought they did, but the Friendly Kibitzer had the last word.

"It does no good to lead diamonds from the West hand," he said. "You can get three diamond tricks only if East starts the suit. And, instead of indicating suit-preference at trick one, East must do something positive. He must overtake West's heart king with his ace and shift to the jack of diamonds. Now, regardless of how South plays, the defenders must take three diamonds and a heart, sending the game to an early defeat."
