In your mailbox: A new bill for solid waste

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Whatever Twin Falls County decides to do with its solid waste, the taxpayers will pay for that solution — and that cost soon will hit home.

The county will send out notices of a new solid-waste fee to an estimated 18,500 residential and 2,074 business property owners early next month.

The Twin Falls County Commission has not set the amount of the fee yet, but it will likely range from $35 to $50 for each unit of trash that a household or business produces annually, the commissioners said Monday.

A unit of trash is the average amount of garbage that a household produces in a year — an estimated 1.2 tons.

Most residential property owners will pay a yearly fee for one unit of trash because they own only one home. Those who own more than one home will receive a fee for each home.

If someone owns three houses and rents out two of them, for example, the homeowner would be billed for three units of trash — one unit for each house. Homeowners can pass the solid-waste fee to their renters if they wish.

Other property improvements will be charged a fee if those improvements generate trash.

Businesses will pay a fee based on the number of units of trash that they produce.

If a fast-food restaurant produces 10 units of trash in a year, for example, the restaurant would pay the fee for each of the 10 units of trash it produces. The county can get estimates of how much trash businesses produce from the private trash haulers. Commissioner Marvin Hemphelen said.

The solid-waste fee represents the cost of new federal rules about landfills.

Decision in a few days, Perot says

Knight-Ridder News Service

DALLAS — Recapturing center stage in the presidential campaign, Ross Perot produced a day of extraordinary political theater Monday.

Part of it saw President Bush and Bill Clinton dispatch high-level delegations to pay court to the unpredictable billionaire and his band of loyal followers.

The Texas invertebric promised to decide whether to re-enter the presidential race by Thursday after consulting with volunteers brought to town to listen to presentations on the economy from the Republican and Democratic campaigns.

to be a spoiler in a three-way race — are as valid today as they were then, polls indicate.

"There's no great clarion call from the electorate for Ross Perot to re-enter this race," said William Schneider, a pollster and political analyst for CNN. "I don't know who he's listening to. My feeling is that the voices he's hearing are coming from inside his head."

But Perot retains political clout, if only because his supporters could tip the balance in a close election between Bush and Clinton. The election-year game of waiting for Perot had reached bizarre heights by Monday as nine prominent Democrats, five powerful Republicans and more than 100 journalists gathered at the Doubletree Hotel at Perot's bidding.

Ross Perot responds to a question at a press conference in Dallas Monday, above, at which he said ordinary people have something more than money — they have the vote. In St. Louis, President Bush was greeted by this mixture of placards and signs as he left a church where he had spoken. The 'Chicken George' sign refers to the failure of the contenders to debate.

Even Mike Wallace, of CBS's "60 Minutes," called Perot on CNN to ask why he kept revisiting Larry King while ducking mainstream news shows.

The day ended with as many questions as answers.

Perot would not venture an opinion about which campaign's economic program more closely matched his own prescription for fixing the economy.

"This is driven from the bottom up," he insisted. "I just think it's terrific that we're off personalities and onto issues."

A smiling Perot, adding that he wished the entire meeting "could be on television," said "This is democracy at its finest."

But Perot-style democracy meant that the doors were closed when the Perot volunteers heard those high-level sales pitches.

They came from such prominent Democrats as Sens. Lloyd Bentsen and David L. Boren, retired Adm. William J. Crowe and New York financier Felix Rohatyn, as well as such leading Republicans as House Secretary Jack F. Kemp, Sen. Phil Gramm and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft.

Perot abruptly quit the race in July without consulting his volunteers, a decision he now terms "a mistake." The reasons he cited for quitting — that he could not win and did not want with driving without a license, resisting arrest and being a fugitive from justice.

On March 21, Cisneros shipped out of a jail window and eluded officers on foot. He had used a hacksaw blade smuggled in by his girlfriend to saw through the rivets on the window's metal grate.

Sheriff's deputies were outside the jail at the time, but Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold has said they were watching for people trying to smuggle things inside the jail, not for escapees.

Although Gold has acknowledged that his office was warned of a possible escape shortly before Cisneros got away, he said such rumors are common.

Since the escape, the jailer who was on duty at the time has left his job and filed a $1 million tort claim against the county. Gold said David Hood resigned, but Hood says in his claim that he was wrongfully terminated.

"This decision will be made by millions of Americans," Perot said.

"They could decide that the responsible thing to do is not get involved. They could decide that they want support one party or another. Or they could decide that they want me to run," he told King. "I'll leave it up to them."

On CNN, Perot announced that he had set up a toll-free number 1-800-25-1300 — to take calls from those who want him to rejoin the race for president. No such number was set up to tally dissenting votes.

By day's end, with his 800 number, his introduction of his wife and children on "Larry King Live" and his plans to listen to the people and his reluctance to get into the unpleasant details of his deficit-reduction plan, Perot looked more than ever like a candidate.

A Perot coordinator, John Bishop, said Kemp became so worked up during the Republican session that he told the Perot contingent: "Run, Ross, run. Let the chips fall where they may."

Elusive Jerome escapee caught near Salt Lake City

JEROME — The man who touched off a long-running controversy over security at the Jerome county jail by escaping from the facility has been captured over the weekend west of Salt Lake City.

Deputies from the Salt Lake County Sheriff's Department caught up with Gilbert Cisneros, 23, after finding him with a forged driver's license and driving a stolen car Friday night, Lt. Lloyd Prescott said.

He was turned over to the U.S. marshal's office in Salt Lake City and returned to Colorado to face escape charges there.

Cisneros left a halfway house in Denver before turning up in Jerome. He was arrested early this year and charged with driving without a license, resisting arrest and being a fugitive from justice.

On March 21, Cisneros shipped out of a jail window and eluded officers on foot. He had used a hacksaw blade smuggled in by his girlfriend to saw through the rivets on the window's metal grate.

New rules could allow strip mining in forests

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Interior Department is close to approving rules that could open national forests and, in some cases possibly national parks, to strip mining unless the government buys the mineral rights.

But Interior spokesman Steven Goldstein insisted Monday that there are no plans to allow strip mining in national parks because in each of those cases the government would buy up mineral rights or arrange for a land exchange.

Goldstein said the policy change involves "fundamentally a constitutional issue" over the right of those holding mineral rights to be compensated.

"The rule change makes it very clear there will be no mining in the parks," added Goldstein.

Nevertheless, any hint of the government possibly allowing strip mining within national park borders or national forests that often are adjacent to parks has caused ripples of concern among conservationists.

"This could be the most disastrous action taken by any administration in the 76-year history of the National Park Service," Paul Prichard, president of the National Parks and Conservation Association, a private advocacy group on park issues, said in a statement.

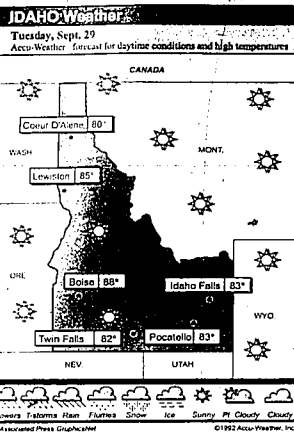

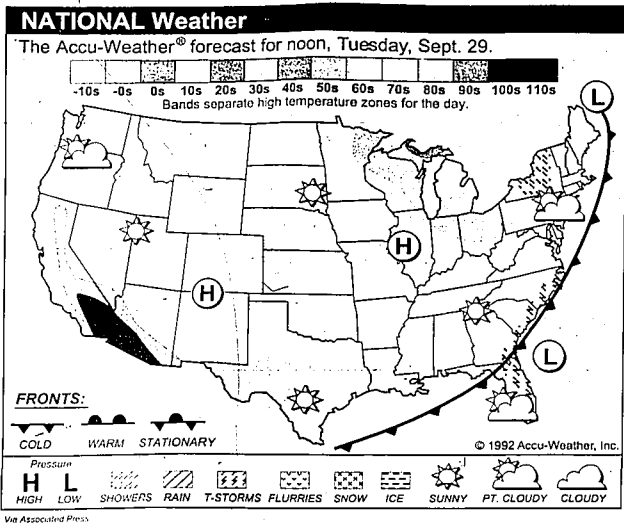

An association spokeswoman, Kathy Westra, said the issue of compensation should not be dealt with administratively, but left to the courts, and that the proposed Interior policy change could strain the department's fund for handling compensatory claims.

Strip mining has been prohibited on federal protected lands for 15 years, ever since Congress enacted broad-reaching strip mine legislation in 1977. But the law exempted those mining interests that held "valid existing rights" to coal deposits prior to enactment of the law.

Southwest sizzles but Nebraska, Alaska shiver

A tropical depression hovering off the coast of Florida kept thunderstorms brewing in the South on Monday, while high wind warnings were posted for the Great Lakes. Sizzling autumn temperatures baked extreme southern California.

The tropical system, with winds less than 39 mph, was no threat to land but related thunderstorms drenched parts of Florida, coastal Georgia, Virginia and the Carolinas. Rain also fell in southern New England.

In the West, advisories were posted for unseasonably high temperatures around San Diego, Calif., through today, with high readings topping 100 degrees.

High winds in the lower Great Lakes region brought gale warnings. A gale is defined by sustained winds between 39 mph and 54 mph.

A cold front moving toward the Northeast brought freeze or frost advisories over Wisconsin, parts of Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska.

Valentine, Neb., chilled to 24 degrees overnight, setting a new low for the date there, edging a 1952 mark by one degree.

Nome, Alaska, had a low of 9 degrees, setting a record for the month of September. The previous low was 15 degrees.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT included 1.88 inches at Athens, Ga., 1.1 inches at Wilmington, N.C., and .91 of an inch at Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 39 degrees at Marquette, Mich., to 107 degrees at Glis Bend, Ariz.

The low temperature for the lower 48 states was 18 degrees at West Yellowstone, Mont.

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says summer-level temperatures will return to southern Idaho. High pressure will continue to build over the state today. Clear skies and warm temperatures are expected to produce near record heat over southwest sections of the state as a result. Low pressure developing over California later in the week will bring some cooling and a chance of thunderstorms to southwest Idaho.

No measurable precipitation was reported over Idaho during the past 24 hours. Overnight winds were generally from the east and less than 15 mph.

Skies were mostly clear over the state on Monday afternoon with temperatures ranging from the 60s to the 80s.

Winds were generally from the east statewide at 10 to 15 mph.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 90 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley reported the coldest at 18 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 110 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif. The lowest was 12 degrees at Pinedale, Wyo.

Witnesses describe massacre

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two former prisoners from Serbian detention camps have given accounts to U.S. officials of the slaughter of about 3,000 Muslims last spring in what the State Department described Monday as the worst massacre of the six-month war.

Department spokesman Richard Boucher said the witnesses were former prisoners in a brick factory who independently estimated that 3,000 men, women and children were killed in Breko in May and June.

"They claim to have witnessed the spontaneous murders of up to 50 prisoners at a time," Boucher said.

He said the administration is giving the information to U.N. officials.

Escapee

An investigator from the Idaho attorney general's office looked into the circumstances surrounding the escape and turned over his report to Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan last month.

Horgan has refused to release the report to the public, saying it is part of a continuing investigation into possible criminal charges in the connection with the escape.

After fleeing Jerome, Cisneros continued to elude officers, despite his having entered in the National Crime Information Center computer system.

But Friday evening, deputies were called to the community of Magna, an unincorporated community in Salt Lake County, by someone reporting a suspicious person, Prescott said.

A deputy asked for the man's identification and was given a drivers license that turned out to be fake, he said.

When the deputy went to his patrol car to call the station and report the license plate number on a nearby blue Ford Mustang, Cisneros ran away.

The car had been stolen from Denver, Prescott said.

Cisneros was caught a short time later, and charged with possession of stolen credit cards that were taken in a burglary, Prescott said.

Utah authorities then learned that Cisneros had two outstanding arrest warrants for escape.

Cisneros was taken to the jail in Littleton, Colo., by U.S. marshals, Jerome County Undersheriff Gerald Brant said.

A warrant charging Cisneros with escape has been sent to the Colorado jail, he said.

Cisneros is scheduled to be released (from the Colorado jail) in 1996. We won't get him here in Jerome until after that," Brant said.

"This takes a lot off people's minds. Maybe justice does get served," Brant said.

Fee

The rules, called Subtitle D, outline new ways to bury trash and mean that the county must build a state-of-the-art landfill. The county also must close its current landfills by Oct. 9, 1993.

County Assessor Dorothy Hamby estimated that solid-waste fees could be set for between 32,000 to 35,000 units of trash in the county.

County residents now fund the landfills through property taxes. While the new landfill fee cannot be attached to property taxes, the commissioners said that might be changed through the Legislature.

The solid-waste fee bills will be sent out separate from property tax notices.

Twin Falls County now is looking for a site to place a new landfill. The county had joined the Southern Idaho Regional Solid Waste district but the county commission recently voted 2-1 to leave the district.

Even so, the county has stayed with the solid waste district, the solid waste fee would have been enacted.

Employees of an explosives plant at Lohi, Utah, fled the blast scene in this damaged pickup truck Monday morning. Smoke from a fire at the site billows into the sky in the distance.

Investigators due today at Utah plant blast site

LEHI, Utah (AP) — Investigators into the early Monday explosion at the Ireco Inc. plant near Utah Lake plan to inspect the damage today.

The explosion at 4:35 a.m. Monday reportedly broke home and business windows as far away as Lehi and Provo, and awakened some Utah County residents.

Three employees and a security guard escaped moments before the explosion, and were 75 yards from the plant when the explosion shattered the back window of one of their escape vehicles.

Lehi Fire Dept. firefighters said firefighters felt the explosion-caused fire burn its course at the plant 12 miles west of Lehi. All of the combustibles blew up or were burned, and the last of the flames were doused just before 5 p.m. Monday, he said.

Company inspectors and sheriff's investigators then entered the building to ensure hot spots were quenched. They expect to make a more detailed assessment over the next several days.

"It will be investigated and analyzed to death," Fernstedt said. "We want to make sure this doesn't happen again."

Utah County investigators and officials from OSHA and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms are due at the site today.

In a 1983 explosion at the same Ireco plant, four employees were killed.

This time, though, the employees raced out of the building at the first sign of trouble.

Monday's blast was caused when 40 pounds of nitrate salt mixture overheated in a blender, exploded and detonated another 2,000 pounds of nearby explosives in Ireco's steel industrial building at its site A facility. That lit another 3,500 pounds of a non-explosive nitrate oxidizer.

A second minor explosion occurred at 7 a.m. and appears to have been the result of petroleum oil catching fire. This oil is used during normal operations to maintain temperatures.

Ireco vice president Jay Anderson said the explosive emulsion was being mixed when four employees noticed the product was heating. They turned off all the equipment and evacuated the building.

He said a piece of equipment likely malfunctioned, causing the product to overheat. The plant had reinforced "blast" walls so the explosion went upward. The plant was in a depression, so earth absorbed much of the blast force.

Monday's campaigning

The Associated Press

Here are Monday's developments on the presidential campaign trail:

THE CANDIDATES:
 GEORGE BUSH: Ventured into an inner city neighborhood in St. Louis to make a stop at his Democratic rival's record on crime. He said the crime rate in Arkansas during Clinton's tenure as governor rose at more than twice the national rate, and he asserted that too many corrupt criminals in Arkansas are let out of jail before serving their full sentences.

BILL CLINTON: appeared on NBC-TV's "Today" and said that by refusing to debate by rules proposed by a bipartisan commission "George Bush was like a kid in a play yard. He said, 'I don't want to play that way. I don't like that. We'll do it my way or no way.'" He no other public appearances.

AL GORE: Campaigning in North Carolina, said that Bush was owned "lock, stock and barrel" by the cable TV industry as the Democrats sought to expand a consumer issue into a political one as well.

DAN QUAYLE: Said in Colorado Springs, Colo., that times are difficult but "not as bad as we're being told" and cautioned voters against putting Democrats back in control in both the White House and Congress.

NEWS OF NOTE:
 Ross Perot said there was "a lot of commonality" between his economic views and Clinton's as the Democrat and Bush made unprecedented overtures to win the support of the Texas billionaire and his followers. Perot said he would decide Thursday whether to enter the presidential race for the final month.

UPCOMING ON TV
 Bush will appear on ABC's "Good Morning America" on Wednesday and Friday at 7:30 a.m. EDT.

Taped interviews with Clinton will be on NBC's "Today" on Wednesday and Friday.

rights has been the subject of controversy between environmentalists and mining interests for years, leading to a number of court cases as well as debate within the Interior Department.

The department informally has defined those with "valid existing rights" as anyone who had made "good faith efforts" to mine the coal prior to Aug. 3, 1977, when the strip-mining law went into effect.

But several court decisions have said the prohibition amounts to an unconstitutional taking of property unless the government compensated those holding valid permits.

Goldstein said the new regulation, which has been in preparation for more than a year, is an attempt to deal with these issues of fair compensation and not an effort to provide less protection to parks.

"This is fundamentally a constitutional issue. Can the government take someone's right to develop their private property without compensation," he said. "The department believes that under the 5th Amendment that cannot be done."

The extent of the coal reserves between the federal lands is unclear.

Officials say massive bust wipes out drug ring

ROME (AP) — Two alleged drug kingpins who walked out of an ice cream parlor in the heart of Rome were the first rounded up in a vast dragnet that authorities Monday said smashed a worldwide drug and money-laundering operation.

"Operation Green Ice" caught some 200 people over the weekend in the United States, Italy, Britain and Costa Rica, Italian officials told a news conference. Tens of millions of dollars in cocaine, cash, jewels, securities and property were seized.

Achille Serra, a top police official, said the ring sent cocaine from Colombia through the United States and Spain for distribution in Italy and other European countries.

George Terwilliger, a deputy U.S. attorney general, called the case truly a crippling blow to the Colombian cartel.

While officials in Rome said 201 people were nabbed, U.S. officials held a news conference in Arlington, Va., and put the number of arrests at 153. The discrepancy could not immediately be reconciled.

Authorities in Rome reported 34 arrests in Italy but gave no breakdown of the total.

Robert Bonner, head of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, said seven people arrested account for "most of the key financial operations" for the Cali cocaine cartel in Colombia.

Authorities said the operation also struck a deep blow to organized crime groups in Sicily, Naples and Drug Enforcement Administration Administrator Robert Bonner announces the results of 'Operation Green Ice' Monday in Washington, D.C.

Calabria, which have a stranglehold on southern Italy.

"Never has there been a strike of such importance against the Mafia, Camorra and 'ndrangheta," national police Chief Vincenzo Parisi said, referring to the mobs in those areas.

Parisi said the operation began Friday with the arrest in Rome of Colombians Jose Duran, whom he described as a Colombian cartel boss, and Pedro Villaquiran, a reputed leading cocaine distributor in Europe and Duran's aide.

Authorities were led to them when police trailed a Dutch woman to an ice cream parlor in Rome's famous Piazza Navona, the news agency AP said.

Officers watched as she sat at a table. Duran, reportedly known as "the Pope," and Villaquiran joined her. As they left the bar and walked a few steps past the fountain in the square, police quietly arrested the three.

Rodrigo Polonia Gonzales Camora, identified as the head of the foreign office of the Colombian National Bank, also was arrested Friday in San Diego, Calif., Serra said. Camora reportedly has represented his country on international anti-drug commissions.

Also arrested were four businessmen in Palermo who reportedly received shipments of hundreds of kilograms of cocaine. A kilo is 2.2 pounds.

Officials said they are linked to Salvatore "Totò" Riina, 62, a fugitive considered the head of the Corleone Mafia clan and reputedly the most powerful mob figure in Italy.

The trail to Italy began in San Diego, one official said.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said information developed there by the DEA on money-laundering was passed on to the DEA office in Rome.

Working with the data, Italian investigators were able to discover the organization's drug-trafficking activities in Italy, the official said.

Mafia investigator Giovanni Falcone reportedly was investigating connections between the Colombian cartel and the Sicilian mob, particularly money-laundering operations, before he was murdered in May.

Monday's case was the latest in a series of victories against the mob here since the killings of Falcone and colleague Paolo Borsellino in May.

Pentagon sent jets to show

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department recently sent at least $161,700 to send nine of its top-line jet planes and helicopters to a military contractor marketing show in England, according to an internal Defense Department memorandum.

The aircraft display was authorized in mid-August by Deputy Secretary of Defense Donald J. Atwood, a few weeks before the Senate formally approved legislation intended to make U.S. defense contractors pay for such aircraft displays at marketing shows.

Energy bill moves to compromise

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators racing to work out a compromise-energy bill are close to scrapping an ambitious program requiring private fleet operators to buy alternative-fuel vehicles.

That provision has stymied members of the two houses, who have been trying for three weeks to merge energy bills previously approved by wide margins — one in the House, the other in the Senate.

Staff discussions on major parts of the bill continued over the weekend. Senators and representatives themselves were to resume talks today under a deadline of having a completed bill by week's end.

The complex legislation, running to more than 1,300 pages, would set new standards for lights and electric motors to foster energy conservation, make it easier to build nuclear power plants, and use tax benefits to promote renewable energy sources and open the electric utility industry to more competition.

Most of these issues, including the conservation measures, have been agreed upon.

But as Congress begins its final week before adjourning, the legislation's sponsors expressed concerns that major remaining differences may force them to scuttle key parts of the bills, which were approved by the Senate 94-2 in February and by the House 381-37 in March.

At the top of the hit list has been a Senate proposal to require private fleet owners to begin buying vehicles that run on fuels other than gasoline. The provision was seen as a key to introducing into general use by the turn of the century large numbers of vehicles that run on such fuels as natural gas or electricity.

Wallace critical, but improves slightly

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Gov. George Wallace showed slight improvement, but remained in critical condition Monday with a massive blood infection, a hospital said.

"The improvements are marginal, but they are improvements," said Vicki Jones, a spokeswoman at Jackson Hospital. "The physicians are cautiously optimistic and continue to hope for a slow, steady recovery."

Wallace, 73, was being treated with antibiotics for septicemia, an overwhelming blood infection brought on by a urinary tract infection common in paraplegics.

U.S. retains dominance over Cactus

Knight-Ridder News Service

The last two weeks of September saw heavy rain in the Solomonis. Attacks by the Japanese 11th Air Fleet at Rabaul against Guadalcanal slowed. However, on Sept. 27 the Japanese sent a large strike of 27 "Betty" medium bombers escorted by 42 "Zero" fighters. Henderson Field scrambled 34 Navy and Marine F4F "Wildcats" to intercept.

Using Marine Capt. John L. Smith's tested tactic of going for the bombers' fuel tanks, the fighters, four of which were shot down, and three others suffered heavy damage that they did not make it back to base. The Cactus pilots had five of their fighters damaged, but no pilot or plane was lost.

Two days later, the Japanese tried to lure the Americans into a pure dogfight. Nine bombers, lead by 27 Zeros, took to Guadalcanal. Alerted by coast watchers of the incoming strike, 33 Wildcats went up from Fighter-1, the new airstrip built by the "Seabees" of the 6th Naval Construction Battalion. However, only the 15 Navy pilots of VMF-5 found the enemy. In the melee, each side lost one plane and pilot.

By the end of September, the Japanese had lost 200 aircraft in aerial combat to only 32 for the United States. Capt. Smith had 19 kills, was promoted to major and awarded the Medal of Honor. More important than the aircraft were their pilots. Few of the downed Japanese survived. The Zero was an agile, fast aircraft but had no protection for the pilot, nor did the Zero have self-sealing fuel tanks. They thus exploded more readily than the Wildcats. The F4F also had an armored seat and heavier construction to shield the pilot.

Another major factor was that while American pilots wore parachutes, Japanese pilots rejected it as against the warrior spirit.

The Americans were also fighting closer to friendly territory. The same Australian coast watchers who served as the early warning system for Guadalcanal formed a pilot rescue service, as well. Many downed pilots managed to walk through the jungle or ride back in an island dugout canoe. Maj. Bob Galer, who shot down 13 enemy planes by the end of September, had been shot down three times.

On Sept. 30, Adm. Chester A. Nimitz, Commander in Chief, Pacific, flew into Henderson Field. Rain and a lack of experience in this area required his pilot to use a map from an issue of National Geographic magazine to find the airfield.

The First Marine Division commander, Maj. Gen. Alexander Vandegrift, assured the admiral that his men could hold the area around the airfield but that they were not strong enough to occupy the entire island. He requested more ground troops and airpower, and Nimitz sent him more of both in October. Nimitz also awarded Vandegrift the Navy Cross. Many other Marines were presented decorations as the admiral toured their positions.

On the way out, there was a scare when the B-17 Nimitz was riding in failed to reach takeoff speed on the short main runway. The bomber did a ground loop and nearly skidded into a ravine.

Nimitz did not seem bothered. The B-17 made it into the air on the next attempt.

Drivers poorly trained to drive in fog, board concludes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Motorists should be given better training and testing on how to drive in the fog, the National Transportation Safety Board said Monday.

That observation came in a report on a 99-vehicle pileup in Tennessee that killed 12 people and injured 42.

The board said 6,804 people were killed in accidents on foggy highways from 1982 to 1991.

"Ultimately, the problem rests in the hands of the driver," said board member John K. Lambert.

The board said the Dec. 11, 1990, accident on Interstate 75 near Calhoun, Tenn., occurred "because drivers responded to the sudden loss of visibility with varying reductions in speed."

Lambert said this is what makes driving in fog so scary.

"On the one hand, you want to slow down, but if you slow down, some kook is going to run up your rear end," he said.

The board also studied pileups on fog or dust-shrouded highways in California, Utah and Virginia, but did not reach any conclusions as to their cause.

It recommended that federal highway officials revise driver license and education materials

"to ensure that guidance for driving during limited-visibility conditions is uniform and complete."

It urged the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and state motor vehicle administrators to develop model test questions, covering driving in bad visibility, for use in licensing examinations.

The board said warning signs and flashing beacons installed in the Calhoun area by the Tennessee Department of Transportation did not consistently reflect the fast-changing fog conditions.

It also said that neither weather forecasts nor routine highway patrolling are sufficient to detect the potential hazard.

"A comprehensive limited visibility countermeasure system must include a combination of visibility sensors and traffic flow detectors that automatically activate traffic control devices when hazardous conditions occur," the board said.

It recommended that the Federal Highway Administration "ensure the continued development of effective fog and other limited-visibility countermeasures and make information about these countermeasures available to all states with fog problems."

Shake-up: Aid for Bush or votes for Clinton

By Tom Raum
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ross Perot's flirtation with a renewed presidential bid could provide the final catalyst for the break in Democrat Bill Clinton's momentum — that Republicans have been seeking.

That's the best-case analysis from the Bush camp on the latest developments in Dallas.

The worst case, from the GOP view, is that Perot will not run but will keep praising Clinton's economic policies as closest to his own.

Some Perot insiders were promoting the latter scenario on Monday, a day when the Texas billionaire and supporters from all 50 states heard presentations from the camps of both major-party candidates.

Democrats are advancing the notion that a Perot candidacy at this time would make it harder for Bush to carry two of his must-win states: Texas and Florida, which together have 27 of the 270 electoral votes needed for victory. Thus, they argue, a new Perot candidacy would help Clinton the most.

But no one seems able to say for certain how Perot's re-entry might play in tossup states and those where a majority of Clinton voters reflect an anti-Bush protest vote.

Bush — way down in the polls with just five weeks to go to Election Day — needs something dramatic to help break him out of a rut.

And the Dallas billionaire's latest maneuverings are at least diverting some attention from the president's continued poor standing in the polls.

A formal Perot candidacy "would reshuffle the deck and cause everyone to take a new look," said Bush political adviser Charles Black.

Furthermore, Black and other GOP operatives argue that since more Perot supporters went to Clinton than to the president when Perot "withdrew" last July 16, Clinton debate between Perot and Clinton. That could resemble the 1980 debate between Republican Ronald Reagan and independent John Anderson. President Carter sat that one out.

Would Bush sit on the sidelines? A three-way debate among Bush, Clinton and Perot would inject yet another wild card. And with the president so far back in the polls, any degree of uncertainty can be seized on as a target of opportunity by Bush's operatives.

Although you could not tell it from the degree to which both Clinton and Bush camps have courted Perot over the past few days, many analysts continue to think Perot will have only limited impact, no matter what he does.

"Ross Perot has become in many ways a marginal candidate now. This is not the Ross Perot we saw storming through this process earlier this year," said Gregory Lebel, a political scientist at George Washington University.

"In states where things are close, he can do some harm. He's sort of a glorified John Anderson," Lebel said.

Some familiar with Perot's thinking say he has no real stomach for an all-out campaign and really wants a face-saving way to not enter the race.

Having both camps make presentations on their economic plans to his people could give him an out, one Perot associate suggested.

"Now Ross will turn it over to his people and he will let his people decide. And his running for president will not be an option. And he will allow them to endorse a candidate, and most likely, his group will turn around and endorse Clinton," said the associate, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Perot's dislike for Bush is well documented. And after meeting with the Democrats on Monday, he said he had "a lot of common ground" with the Arkansas trip, a political scientist at George Washington University.

Black voters dislike Bush, wary of Clinton

BALTIMORE (AP) — Kwameba Hardy, like many black voters, doesn't feel much enthusiasm for Democrat Bill Clinton and running mate Al Gore.

He's undecided about how to cast his first presidential ballot, but allows that he'll probably vote Democratic.

"It's going to be hard, but I have to," says the 19-year-old student at Morgan State University, who turned out to hear Gore speak at a recent rally in Baltimore.

Politicians in both parties "use their pulpits to say things to our people that will butter them up and get us to vote for them, but in the long run they turn around and stab us in the back," Hardy lamented.

His ambivalence is not unusual.

Clinton's effort to win over working-class whites who deserted the Democratic Party 12 years ago has left many black voters feeling ignored.

At the same time, however, many blacks "feel that they've had Reagan and Bush in office for 12 years and any change would be better," says David Bositis of the Washington-based Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies.

A nationwide poll taken for the bipartisan center and Home Box Office in June showed that 77 percent of blacks disapproved of the job Bush was doing.

Clinton's challenge will be to lure those blacks out to polling places on Election Day.

Despite the polls, Bush has not conceded the black vote.

now has more to lose than Bush if Perot returns.

In states such as California, Michigan, Colorado and New Mexico, a Perot candidacy could absorb some of the anti-Bush vote that Clinton now enjoys.

"There are only two things that can turn it around for Bush: Perot's re-entry or the debates. The foundation has settled and voters have basically made their choices. For Bush to win, he's got to shake that up," said GOP pollster Frank Luntz, who has done polling for Perot.

If Perot becomes an active candidate — no means a certainty — it also could change the dynamics of presidential debates.

With the Bush campaign so far resisting a debate format favored by Clinton, there is the possibility of a

Economic plan details for Bush, Clinton, Perot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a look at the economic plans offered by President Bush, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Ross Perot.

Taxes
• Bush has proposed cutting the income tax rate for all Americans by 1 percentage point and increasing the personal income tax exemption by $500. He would cut the capital gains tax in half and eliminate it entirely for newly issued small business stock. He would reduce the corporate tax rate for small businesses and increase deductions for newly purchased income-producing equipment.

• Clinton would raise taxes on the wealthiest Americans and offer others a tax cut or children's tax credit. He would tax profits made by foreign companies doing business in the United States and end tax breaks to U.S. companies that move plants and jobs overseas. He supports an investment tax credit for new plants and equipment and a 50 percent tax exclusion for long-term investors in new businesses.

• Perot would raise marginal income tax rates on individuals, making more than $55,550. He would raise the tobacco tax and increase the gas tax 10 cents a gallon every five years. He would eliminate capital gains taxes on investments in new small businesses and reduce the rate for long-term investments. He supports investment tax credits. He would cut some mortgage deductions and trim business-lunch deductions.

Deficit Reduction
• Bush says he would cut spending $300 billion in five years and devote the savings to reducing the annual deficit, currently $334 billion. He says he wants to cut entitlement programs, but hasn't specified which programs. He has proposed a checkoff box for taxpayers who want to earmark 10 percent of their returns for deficit reduction.
• Clinton says he would cut the deficit in half in four years. He would cut 100,000 federal jobs and impose a national ceiling to hold down private and government health-care costs.

• Perot says he'd save $754 billion over five years and end up with a $10 billion surplus. He would cut 15 percent from programs other than debt costs, defense and entitlements. He would eliminate farm subsidies to large corporations. Upper-income Social Security and Medicare recipients would pay more in taxes and premiums.

Defense Cuts
• Bush would cut defense spending by $50 billion by 1997.
• Clinton would cut defense spending by at least $100 billion by 1997.
• Perot would cut defense spending by about $90 billion by 1997.

Investment
• Bush has proposed a $10 billion job training program but hasn't said how he would pay for it. He pushed for and signed a six-year, $150 billion transportation bill.

• Clinton supports greatly expanded job training and would have businesses devote 1.5 percent of their payroll to finance it. He has proposed an apprenticeship system for students not bound for college. He would start a $20-billion-a-year Rebuild America fund for public works, communications and environmental projects.

• Perot has not proposed any major initiatives.

If new convention center won't float, don't launch it

A convention center in Twin Falls near future looks like a remote possibility at best.

A consultants' study on the project, released last week, recommends that the community "consider development" of a center. But the suggestion is not what you'd call wildly enthusiastic.

It has good reasons not to be. The key finding is tucked into a politely worded paragraph toward the end of the executive summary. To stay afloat, it says, a Twin Falls convention center would probably require a public subsidy.

Ah, tax money. There's the rub.

Convention centers are the heroes of many cities' economic development scenarios; but economics is their tragic flaw. Too many towns have seen them turn from boom to boondoggle when the bottom line is computed.

A center in Twin Falls has always been a questionable proposition. Conventioners want lush scenery, mountains overlooking the water hazard, snooty restaurants and some spicy night life.

Let's be blunt: Twin Falls is a grand place to live, but it's no convention mecca.

In fact, the study by a Seattle-area consulting firm says a center here couldn't survive on the regional and state conventions it would aim to draw. Like other Idaho convention facilities, it would have to draw most of its business from hometown groups.

The problem, according to the study, is that while many local businesses and organizations think a convention center is a swell idea, they can't be counted on as paying customers.

Which brings us to the subsidy issue.

A fair question to ask is whether local taxpayers should pay to operate meeting rooms where business types can lecture one another about free enterprise. We think we know how most taxpayers would answer.

The report doesn't say so, but its inescapable conclusion is that Twin Falls isn't ready for a convention center.

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce task force that commissioned the study plans to continue studying. That's fine. But unless it can find some non-government money source to plug the likely revenue gap, the idea should be mothballed for a few years.

Maybe someday Twin Falls will be ready for a convention center. There's an easy way to recognize that day when it comes: The private sector will want a convention center badly enough to pay for it.

Why all the hubbub over a debate?

Theo Lippman Jr.

The Commission on Presidential Debates keeps saying it wants President Bush and Gov. Bill Clinton to stand up face to face before a single moderator and an audience and debate.

Why? Presidents of the United States are called on to perform a lot of different functions, but nothing in the Constitution or the U.S. Code suggests a duty in which a president needs to debate anybody.

I have read a lot of history, and while I may have missed or forgotten something, I know of no instances in which a president furthered national aims by public debates of the sort the commission and the Clinton camp keep insisting on.

In fact, I know of only six occasions in history when a president of the United States debated publicly even in the format Bush proposes — with several journalists as questioners. These six times had nothing to do with presidential duties. They all had to do with election politics. They all took place during presidential campaigns.

President Ford debated Jimmy Carter three times in 1976. President Carter debated Ronald Reagan once in 1980, and President Reagan debated Walter Mondale twice in 1984. Did the debates change things? I don't know.

Here are some poll figures. You decide: In 1976, a Gallup Poll found that by a margin of 32 percent to 25 percent viewers of the first Ford-Carter debate thought Ford "won." Ford gained on Carter in the presidential preference polling, promptly going from a deficit of 36 percent to 54 percent to 42 percent to 50 percent. A Carter loss of 10 points. Ford kept gaining to within 2 points of Carter, then dropped to 6 behind after a second debate in which he made an incredible gaffe, saying that the Soviet Union did not dominate Eastern European nations.

After a dull third debate, Gallup had Ford a point ahead. Carter won the election a few days later by 3 points.

In 1980, President Carter led Ronald Reagan by 45 percent to 42 percent in a Gallup Poll on the eve of their late October debate. In that debate Reagan asked the public, "Are you better off now than you were four years ago?" and Carter said the economy wasn't the main issue, nuclear weapons were — he knew because his 12-year-old daughter Amy told him so. A week later Reagan won the election by 51 percent to 41 percent.

The two 1984 debates between President Reagan and Mondale were so boring that no one remembers any details about them. I don't, and I just re-read news accounts of them an hour before writing this. Gallup found viewers believed by a wide margin (19 percentage points) that Mondale won the first, and by a slight margin (3 points) that Reagan won the second.

But Reagan lost only 6 points of his 18-point lead in the polls after the first debate and by election day he was back to 17-point victory.

Rights steadily eroding

This morning I woke at 3:30 a.m. disturbed about the trend in our land to take away our remaining freedoms. I am sure you have heard about the old balloon game? You start with a stick of balloon and someone starts taking very small slices until you are left holding the string? It is happening.

Victims have no rights, the criminals, ACLU and like associations now have the rights. Employers are closing down plants and moving to other countries because of being choked to death by regulations. It is my opinion that lower wages is not the basic problem. Not when you cannot ask a future employee if he or she has AIDS. I've answered applications with, "Do you have or have had heart trouble, epilepsy, TB, etc. Why not AIDS?"

When are we going to get those so-called "bushy" laws, protecting us from these so-called "do-gooders"? Why should someone who does not even live in the community have a right to come in and tell the majority how we are supposed to live and think?

Do one person's so-called rights take precedence over the rights of two, 10, 100 people? Why should someone on the Eastern Coast, California, Illinois, Texas or any place, tell us how to manage our land, water, schools? In order for a person or organization to file a nuisance suit, why not a law that they must be a permanent resident of the district that it will effect?

My family has been in the United States a number of years, since approximately 1620, and fought to protect our freedom. We the "little rickles" need to unite and get laws passed to protect us from "Big Brother." Now while there is yet time.

Afterthought in this election: I am for Aja for sheriff, limited terms for Congress, a line item veto for the president, a gross income tax and will vote for "none of the above for president" and against plea bargaining.

CLARA WOOD

Stallings' promise unfulfilled

Open letter to Rep. Richard Stallings: Your current clever but deceitful TV commercials are but campaign rhetorical presentations.

In one you say, "We got to reduce the deficit" and "We've got to balance the budget." Your "we" must refer to Congress, the only government body which can assess taxes and spend such money, and vote to increase deficit financing. You have been a member of Congress and therefore are a part of your "we."

Rather, the people need to know what Richard Stallings has done. Repeatedly you have said you will stand on your record. Yet you run from that record and accuse others of dirty politics when they insist you stand on it.

You have accepted over $350,000 of PAC money. Yet your party's platform states, "We must limit the disproportionate and excessive role of PACs."

During this session of Congress, you voted for expenditures of about $90 million to 100 million (or was it billions?) above the budget agreement which you voted for. You said you could and would justify and explain every such addition to our national deficit. We are still waiting for you to do so.

You have consistently opposed enactment of the Line Item Veto, which has consistently worked well in 34 states, including the state of Idaho, whose citizens you claim you represent.

Early in this campaign, you said you would run on the issues and your record. I, and a large majority of Idaho voters are still waiting for you to do so.

John Birch Society is OK

I have to admit that I was one among the gullible that swallowed the vicious propaganda put out by the establishment in the '60s concerning the John Birch Society. However, I was awakened by a stranger who talked to me and loaned me her "Blue Book," which explains the aims and reasons for the existence of the John Birch Society.

Instead of being a secret society of evil Neo-Nazis, fascists, KKKs, anti-Semites, and un-American citizens, I found it to be just the opposite. They were a group of dedicated patriots who were deeply concerned over the conditions of our country. They were making monumental efforts to preserve our great Constitution, which was being attacked from many different angles, especially by the Communists.

When we found out the true facts, we joined the organization and did our part to help. That was almost 30 years ago.

In looking back, what has transpired since then many people can see that our freedoms are slowly being eroded. Creeping socialism is gaining and we are finding ourselves losing our freedoms more and more each day through unselected bureaucrats who dictate what we can and can't do... like FDA, OSHA, EPA, AMA, DOD, ... and on and on!

And we let it continue. The John Birch Society does not suggest who one should vote for in any election. They do call attention to our elected representatives' voting records and let us decide for whom we should support. The issues are discussed and we are warned about the events that are weakening our Constitution. It is a purely patriotic group that are doing everything to save our great Constitution and the freedoms that we now enjoy, which we do take for granted. If we find ourselves slaves to the New World Order, we will have no one to blame but ourselves. Let's wake up and do something before it is everlasting too late!

Griz has the right agenda

America needs James "Bo" Griz for president. He will restore constitutional government, preserve individual rights and put America first.

In their heart, Americans know that neither Bush nor Clinton will restore U.S. prosperity. Both are confirmed socialists who belong to freedom-destroying organizations like the Council of Foreign Relations that are working for the New World Order by destroying U.S. independence and placing us under the godless United Nations authority. Jobs are being destroyed to accomplish their goal.

James "Bo" Griz has made the following pledge to all Americans. As president, he will (1) oppose global government and Bush's New World Order; (2) establish debt-free constitutional currency and eliminate the privately owned Federal Reserve System; (3) end foreign aid to our enemies and the buy-out of America; (4) balance the federal budget by eliminating unconstitutional spending; (5) halt runaway spending by Capitol Hill; (6) institute "Workfare" as a lie of welfare; (7) roll back the unconstitutional federal bureaucracy and legislative statutes by revoking laws and agencies contrary to the U.S. Constitution; (8) restore states rights and personal liberty; (9) rescue our prisoners of war; (10) establish fair trade, not free trade, to keep jobs at home; (11) put Americans first by keeping the United States independent and free.

Don't vote the lesser of two evils. Vote James "Bo" Griz for president to restore America to greatness again.

U of I contests critical state report

MOSCOW — Leaders of the University of Idaho faculty are taking issue with conclusions of the state Board of Education that administration on the Moscow campus is lean.

Michael DiNoto, president of the school's American Association of University Professors chapter, called the report used to reach that conclusion "budgetary sleight of hand." Jim Calvert, head of the American Federation of Teachers local, maintained expenses tied to administration are being camouflaged as academic.

And even if the increase in administrative expenses at the University of Idaho has been lower than the administrative spending increases at the other three colleges, DiNoto claimed that was nothing to be proud of. At any rate, administrative spending at Idaho has exploded in the past decade while spending on teaching has not, he said.

The board study showed Idaho's administrative expenses rising just under 66 percent in the last 10 years. Boise State University was up 136 percent, Lewis-Clark State College was up 93 percent and Idaho State University was up 71 percent.

Science board advises pursue funding

MOSCOW — Idaho's universities should pursue more support through a National Science Foundation research program, even though they lost their bid for money late last year, the program's research advisory board said.

The state has received $1.8 million through the NSF's Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research (EPSCoR) in the past three years and the state has provided an equal amount of matching funds.

Roughly 90 percent of the money has flowed to the University of Idaho, the state's primary research institution, and its researchers in biochemistry, biology, chemistry and physics.

Late last year, Idaho's universities lost their bid for $4.5 million over a three-year period through the NSF EPSCoR.

Roll-over claims Coeur d'Alene woman

SALMON — A Coeur d'Alene woman died in a one-vehicle accident during the weekend in northern Lemhi County.

The Lemhi County Sheriff's Department identified the victim as Louise P. Chavez, 38.

Authorities said Chavez was southbound on U.S. 93 Saturday night near Four of July Creek north of Salmon when the pickup truck she was driving left the road as she tried to pass another vehicle.

Chavez apparently overcorrected and then rolled the pickup, ejecting both herself and passenger Le Ann Semanko, 19 of Rathburn, from the cab. Semanko was listed in good condition in a Montana hospital.

Idaho racing official defends betting

SOUTH JORDAN, Utah — The executive director of the Idaho Racing Commission says horse racing and parimutuel betting can be a safe, cost-efficient industry.

Duane Didericksen spoke Monday at a horse farm here at the behest of Citizens to Put Utah First, which backs a pari-mutuel betting referendum on the Nov. 3 general election ballot.

If passed, voters in each of Utah's 29 counties would decide whether to permit pari-mutuel gambling within their borders.

The Mormon Church is among several organizations and individuals who argue that horse-race wagering would cost taxpayers thousands of dollars a year to operate a racing commission, and that betting on races could lead to other types of gambling and erode the community's moral fiber.

Didericksen, a Mormon who oversees regulation of the $8.2 million Idaho industry, said both the church and horse racing "have been good to me."

Didericksen said Idaho's racing commission, which oversees a track in Boise and eight "fair circuit" venues, is financially self-sufficient and last year ran a $100,000 surplus.

Choice rally draws few supporters

BOISE — A sparse crowd gathered at Municipal Park in Boise Sunday for a Freedom Means Choice political gathering and the chance to talk with pro-choice political candidates.

Jesse Berain, Republican candidate for the District 17 state representative seat, said he does not believe in government involvement in abortion decisions.

"I believe in the rights of the people to make their own choices," the first-time political candidate said. "I don't think it's a political issue at all. It's a personal issue."

Berain was one of three pro-choice Republicans scheduled to appear at the fund-raiser.

Fifteen Democratic pro-choice candidates were expected to appear at the 4-hour rally, which was attended by about 75 people.

Andrus says state won't have to pay EPA

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus was confident on Monday that the state will show as unwarranted the contention that it must repay $3 million to the Environmental Protection Agency in connection with the Bunker Hill Superfund cleanup.

And an EPA spokesman confirmed that discussions have been under way since last week to resolve the allegations raised in the draft report from the agency's Inspector General.

"There were indications last week from staff people at EPA and staff people at the Division of Environmental Quality that a packet of information would be sent to EPA that would be helpful in EPA evaluating the recommendations made by the Inspector General," federal spokesman Bob Jacobson said.

The draft report accused the Andrus administration of violating state and federal procedures when it selected an Oregon-based company for the cleanup engineering contract in 1987 over an Idaho firm that posted a higher score on the raw assessments.

It also claimed inadequate state financial controls resulted in the state billing the federal government for $800,000 in employee vacation and holiday pay.

The Inspector General said the state should repay that month along with the $2.2 million in paid to the Oregon company that was not the top-rated bidder for the contract.

Officials said the state was advised of the findings last June and given 30 days to respond. When there was no response, the draft report was issued earlier this month.

Andrus administration officials said the draft was sent to the wrong address and the bureaucracy then proceeded to bury it. The documents justifying the contract selection and other expenses are now being forwarded to EPA Regional Administrator Dana Rasmussen, who will decide by Dec. 15 whether the Inspector General's recommendations should be followed.

"I guess you can second guess, but the main thing is to have the area cleaned up and it being cleaned up," Andrus said, discounting the possibility that the state would have to make any of the payments called for in the report.

The question of the contract award was raised shortly after it was made, and again last month when the Coeur d'Alene Press reported that it was politically motivated. But the owner of the Idaho company that lost out said at the time he did not believe the selection was politically motivated although he questioned the way it was handled.

State officials said the material reviewed by the federal auditors was inadvertently missing the documents detailing the additional positive aspects of the Oregon company that made it preferable to the Idaho one.

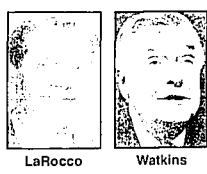

The Inspector General's report said such documents could justify overriding the results of the raw assessments.

Governor backs environmental legislation

LaRocco Watkins

Bill. The Energy Department has not made its position public beyond saying it would comply fully "should President Bush sign the legislation."

While the prospect of financial penalties would finally give states the leverage they need to enforce environmental laws against federal facilities, the bill also includes deadlines for negotiating with states on certain waste cleanup that the Energy Department said might be unrealistic.

That three-year deadline for a cleanup plan covering mixed wastes — combined hazardous and nonhazardous wastes — could disrupt a number of waste management projects at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, where more than 112,000 tons of the material is now stored, the department contended.

Officials said there is not adequate technology to handle mixed wastes yet.

Andrus told Bush that while the overall bill does not include every provision he wanted, "I believe it strikes a good balance between the competing interests of affected federal agencies and the states to bring environmental compliance to federal facilities."

"Without this legislation, the federal government can continue to act as if it is above the law," Andrus said.

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus on Monday urged President Bush to sign legislation overwhelmingly approved by Congress that would subject federal facilities to the same environmental laws that private businesses must comply with.

In a letter to the president, Andrus said the bill will "ensure the ability of the states to protect our nation's air, soil and water from radioactive and other hazardous wastes generated by federal facilities."

The measure eliminating the sovereign immunity loophole federal agencies have slipped through in the past to avoid penalties for environmental noncompliance cleared the House with only three dissenting votes. It won endorsement without objection from the Senate and has been backed by officials in all 50 states.

But Idaho Congressman Larry LaRocco said Energy Secretary James Watkins is calling on Bush to veto the

Lottery automates scratch ticket redemption system

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Lottery has automated its scratch ticket redemption process for prizes under $600, allowing winners to collect their money at retailers other than where the ticket was bought.

"We think this will make our scratch games and the entire Idaho Lottery a lot more convenient and fun to play," Idaho Lottery Director Wally Hedrick said Monday.

Spokeswoman Stephanie Hawkinson said the $2.5 million computerized Instant Ticket Automation System, allowing players to cross-redeem tickets almost everywhere in Idaho, will be paid for from the Lottery's administrative budget over three years.

No Lottery revenue earmarked for schools or state building projects will be used, she said.

Idaho's is the smallest lottery system in the nation to offer Instant Ticket Automation, which Hawkinson said confirms winning scratch tickets and registers the information from bar codes much like credit cards are verified at retailers.

Lottery officials unveiled six new instant-winner scratch tickets Monday to be used with the new system. Sales of the 10 old games still at retailers officially ended Monday. The new games include Top Banana, $20,000 top prize; Idaho Match 3, $5,000 top prize; Wizards of Odds, $10,000 top prize; 21, $2,100 top prize; The Tac Dough, $20,000 top prize; and Swing on a Star, $50,000 top prize.

Besides convenience for ticket purchasers, Hawkinson said the new system will improve Idaho Lottery security. When someone tries to redeem an altered ticket, the verification computer will tell the retailer the ticket being checked is not a winner.

Winning instant tickets for $600 or more still must be redeemed at the Idaho Lottery headquarters in Boise, and many retailers do not redeem winning tickets over $50.

Man charged with Aguilar's murder

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

GOODING — A 21-year-old Gooding County man remained in jail without bond Monday night, charged with first-degree murder.

The first-appearance in court for Jeffery H. Thomas is scheduled for this afternoon, Gooding County Prosecutor Phil Brown said.

Thomas lives in eastern Gooding County near the border with Jerome County, not far from where the body of Sacramento Aguilar, 46, was found on Aug. 31.

Twin Falls city police helped arrest Thomas on Blue Lakes Boulevard North Saturday.

Aguilar, a Mexican citizen working in the U.S. as a legal farm worker, was found by his car alongside the old Wendell-Jerome highway with several gunshot wounds.

He lived south of Wendell and had been working in the area for about 15 years.

Aguilar was drinking earlier in the evening and had stopped his car beside the road, Brown said.

Blood samples revealed that Aguilar was driving under the influence of alcohol and had either driven off the side of the road or stopped voluntarily before being shot, he said.

A Jerome County sheriff's deputy found the man after a passer-by told him of a car off the road.

Investigators have not yet determined a motive for the crime, Brown said. But Gooding County Sheriff Robert Aja and his deputies have put together enough information from various sources to place Thomas at the scene of the crime, the prosecutor said.

Despite the lack of a motive, Aja said his office spent many hours building a case against Thomas and he feels the case is a strong one.

Thomas graduated from Jerome High School and his family lives in the area.

Aguilar's two sons and a brother live in the area. He has six or seven other children and a wife living in Mexico.

Bond set for man charged with shooting

TWIN FALLS — A judge set bond at $10,000 Monday for a Garden Valley man charged with shooting a man in the foot along U.S. Highway 93 north of the Idaho-Nevada border Saturday.

A preliminary hearing for Kit R. McPherrin, 40, is set for Oct. 9 on a felony charge of aggravated battery. Tony Garey, 28, of Boise and his wife, Marcia, were driving north on the highway when they stopped to help a woman who was being beaten by a man, Cpl. Bob Gauthier of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department said.

When he got out of his pickup, Garey was shot with a small handgun. Another witness called the emergency 911 telephone number from his mobile phone, and McPherrin was arrested about 25 miles northwest of the scene.

Child molester receives 15-year jail sentence

TWIN FALLS — A child molester who a prosecutor said is obsessed with his young victim will be spending at least 10 years behind bars.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt sentenced Terrance L. Martin, 34, of Twin Falls to the maximum sentence — 15 years in prison — for sexual abuse of a minor. He will not be eligible for parole until 2002.

Martin pleaded guilty in July to the reduced felony charge as part of a plea agreement.

He was originally charged with lewd and lascivious conduct for having sexual contact with a girl, now 13, in 1989.

Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Martin has been obsessed with the girl since she was seven years old and that his greatest fear is that she will marry someone else before he gets out of prison.

Public Defender Lisa Barini-Garcia said she thinks the sentence is too harsh for someone with no prior felony record and she may file a motion asking the judge to reconsider.

Studded tires become legal again on Thursday

TWIN FALLS — The weather may not be exactly frightful, but starting Thursday you can still put on those studded snow tires.

Studded tires — snow tires with small metal cleats embedded in the tread — are legal between Oct. 1 and April 15 in Idaho, the Idaho Transportation Department says. "Studded tires are normally put on the vehicle's drive wheels only," said Jeff Stratten, the department's public affairs officer. "But they can be fitted on all four wheels in extreme driving conditions."

Snow tires, studded or other, must be of the same construction and size as the other tires on the vehicle. Non-radial ply tires, for example, should not be put on the rear wheels when radial ply tires are used on the front wheels.

Studded tire laws vary from state-to-state. In Utah, they're not legal until Oct. 15, and in Washington, not until Nov. 1. In Oregon, they can't be used until Nov. 30.

Idaho National Guard seeks food, cash for Andrew victims

TWIN FALLS — Idaho National Guard units in the Magic Valley are collecting food and cash for victims of Hurricane Andrew in Florida and Louisiana.

As part of a statewide relief effort, the guardsmen are asking for donations for canned foods and money. The army and air guard hope to raise more than $10,000 and thousands of cases of canned food over the next two months.

Collection points in the Magic Valley include the headquarters of 116th Cavalry units, located at the armories in Twin Falls, Jerome, Burley, Buhl, Rupert, Gooding and Hiley.

At the end of October, the food and the money will be delivered to Boise and prepared for shipping by the American Red Cross.

Elko toddler dies after dad ran over him with truck

ELKO, Nev. — An Elko toddler was killed when his father ran over him as he backed a truck out of the driveway, police said.

Officers said 19-month-old Curtis Williams died of injuries received in the accident late Sunday.

Investigators said the child's father, Donald Williams, apparently did not see the youngster follow him outside.

Neighbors cringe at work center's opening

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state's controversial new work-release center opened its doors to the public Monday, but neighbors aren't rolling out the welcome wagon.

A two-day open house will continue through today with the official dedication set for 3 p.m.

The center, located at 616 Washington St. S., could begin filling up with inmates by the first week of October, director Larry Hauber said.

The first week of never would be too soon for nearby resident C.E. Bradley.

He says he's selling his home and getting out of town because of the way state and local officials have gone about putting Idaho's second work-release center for men in Twin Falls.

"I'm gettin' the heck out of here," Bradley said Monday. "I disagree with the whole concept."

Not only has the work center soured Bradley on living in south Twin Falls, but the City Council's June decision to change a zoning ordinance that would have kept inmates out of the center has prompted him to leave the city altogether.

A judge ruled in April that Twin Falls city zoning laws would not allow inmates to live in the center. The City Council remedied the situation by changing the ordinance two months later.

George Cunningham likewise is not putting out the welcome mat for the 54 convicted felons that will soon be his neighbors.

He vowed to continue the legal battle that has fought the project since it was announced in June 1991.

"We're taking it to the Idaho Supreme Court," Cunningham said. Hauber, a retired state probation officer, knows he has a difficult public relations job on his hands.

"I'd almost bet that in a year's time, the neighbors will drive by this building and they won't think twice about it," he said.

Peggy Newby isn't so sure.

"We're just hoping that nothing bad happens," she said.

Hauber acknowledges that he can't guarantee someone won't walk away from the facility or from their jobs in town.

But the people who run jails and work-release programs for jail inmates can't guarantee those folks won't get away either, he said.

Approaching from the north, the work-release center looks more like a large office building than a dormitory for the what the state calls "low-risk" felons. There are no barbed-wire fences, no heavy metal doors, and the grounds all will be landscaped by next spring.

The center was built in a pasture by private developer Reed Good, who lives next door. He leases the building to the state for $125,000 per year.

Final construction figures aren't in, but early estimates put the cost of the building at $800,000.

Each of the building's 27 rooms can hold two inmates. Sex offenders and violent criminals will not be allowed in.

Kemphorne: Free trade deal backing conditional

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Republican Senate candidate Dirk Kemphorne said Monday that his support of the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement would depend on how it would affect Idaho agriculture.

Stallings' vote record — B2

Speaking to the Twin Falls County Republican Women, the Boise mayor said that while the concept of free trade "has a great deal of merit," he will wait for Idaho commodity groups to study the agreement in depth before deciding whether to support it.

"Canada and Mexico (the other parties to the agreement) already are our first- and third-largest trading partners," Kemphorne said, adding that NAFTA has the potential to greatly expand the market for U.S. and Idaho, farm products.

"But if the agreement is not good for Idaho, I won't support it," he said.

Low funds stall cheese plant completion

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A year after Jerome voters approved issuing revenue bonds for $1.51 million to pay for upgrading the municipal waste-treatment system to accommodate operations at the new Jerome Cheese Co. plant, the city doesn't have enough money to finish the project.

"There aren't enough funds to do this thing right," City Administrator Larry Paine said last week. "We could be as much as $50,000 short."

Changes in the amount and kind of sludge generated in cheese processing will make the cost of expanding the city's waste-treatment plant higher than expected, Paine said. The methods of handling the waste must be different than originally planned, he said.

Jerome voters gave the city the OK to issue $1.51 million in revenue bonds last September to upgrade the city's waste-treatment system. A $450,000 grant from federal taxes was also received by the city for the plant expansion.

"When we put the bond together we didn't have enough information to calculate what would be needed," Paine said.

"It's not the cheese plant folks' fault — they didn't really know how this whole thing would work. This is the first plant like this one that they built."

The City Council has considered several possible solutions to the problem "but there is no talk of changing the bond," Paine said. The bonds will be retired with revenue paid by the Jerome Cheese Co. for using the city's waste-treatment facilities.

"We could change the design or we could pull city employees from their normal jobs and use them to do some of the work," Paine said.

Another alternative would be to lease-purchase some of the equipment "which turns the cost into an operational expense" not applicable to the bond, Paine said.

A lease-purchase arrangement would cost more, he said.

Bids for some of the waste-treatment equipment will be opened Oct. 15. On that date, the size of the budget shortfall will be known, negotiations with the low bidder will begin and then the City Council will decide how to fund the project.

The cheese plant, owned by the Minnesota-based LeSueur Co., is scheduled to open at the end of the year.

Hundreds give thousands to save Jerome woman

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — An 18-year-old Jerome woman is a little closer to overcoming a life-threatening illness, thanks to the generosity of her neighbors and the kindness of strangers.

"We are really grateful to everybody," said Jennifer Baird, who needs a bone marrow transplant to treat aplastic anemia, a disease that causes adults to produce deficient red blood-cell production in the bone marrow. "People are calling wanting to be tested (as potential donors), or to give money."

Hundreds of people have contributed a total of about $4,500, and five possible donors for the bone marrow have been identified.

None of the five match Baird's marrow exactly, but doctors may decide to take a chance and use one of them.

"It's very dangerous without a full match," Baird said. "There could be infection or the donor's marrow could reject me or my marrow could do the rejecting," she said.

If the transplant didn't work, she would die.

A search of British and French computer registers for perfect match donors may be done if additional testing of possible donors reveals the risk involved is too great.

Baird is also getting a new drug.

"The first treatment didn't work, but I'll be getting more treatments," she said. "Doctors say it works about 20 percent of the time. If it would work on me I wouldn't need the marrow transplant."

"A transplant is the very last thing to try, so we're trying everything else first," she said.

Baird said she's a little behind on her thank-you notes.

"We try to send them all thank-you letters, but it's hard to know who they all are," she said.

Stallings earns 'A' for fall attendance report card

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Unlike several of his colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives who are running for Senate seats, Rep. Richard Stallings has had a perfect voting record so far during the House's fall session.

And, rather than hurrying his bid for Idaho's open U.S. Senate seat by keeping him off the campaign trail, Stallings and aides say it was a triumph.

"Roll Call," the Capitol Hill weekly newspaper, reports in this week's edition that only Stallings, a Democrat from the 2nd Congressional District, and Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., have made all 28 recorded House votes between Sept. 8 and Sept. 23.

Like Stallings, Dorgan is running for an open Senate seat in North Dakota.

In contrast, Democratic Rep. Barbara Boxer, who is running for an open Senate seat in California, has made only 14 percent of the votes.

In this year of the anti-incumbent, conventional political wisdom has been that incumbents in tight races — such as Stallings' battle with GOP nominee Dirk Kempthorne — should distance themselves as much as possible from Washington, D.C.

But "Roll Call" quotes Stallings aide Melodie Rydahl as saying Stallings would try to make his incumbency a campaign plus, by presenting himself as a hard worker.

The strategy, she said, is to "show the people of Idaho that he will be a good Senator by being a good congressman."

Kempthorne

Kempthorne's Democratic opponent, Rep. Richard Stallings, has condemned NAFTA as a sellout of American farmers, particularly Idaho sugar beet farmers.

In an interview with The Times-News, Stallings said that he, too, supports the idea of free trade. But he added that, unless some provisions of NAFTA section dealing with sugar are changed, he will vote against the agreement.

Kempthorne said Monday that Stallings' adamant stance against NAFTA as written means the 2nd District congressman would be a "player" in the current and future negotiations on the agreement between Congress and the Bush administration.

"Certainly you can't say 'I don't like this part and change it' agreement unilaterally," he said. "But there is the opportunity to do some fine-tuning through the administrative process."

But Stallings replied that under "fast-track" legislation passed last year, Congress cannot change the agreement and has to either accept it or reject it as is.

The Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, the agency that negotiated the NAFTA for the United States, said Monday to confirm his support for the agreement.

According to trade official Chris Allen, Congress has up to Dec. 17 to look over the agreement and recommend changes. However, the pact itself cannot be changed unless negotiations with Canada and Mexico are reopened, Allen said, and that isn't likely.

"The administration and (Trade Representative Carlos) Hills have said from the beginning that there's no reason to reopen negotiations, that this is a good agreement for American workers and American businesses," he said.

President Bush can sign the agreement anytime after Dec. 17, he said. After he does, Congress will have 90 legislative days — which could stretch out to eight months or more — to approve the agreement and its implementing legislation.

"That implementing legislation will contain such things as programs to help workers displaced by NAFTA, Allen said, but nothing in it "can change the intent of the agreement."

Stallings has accused Kempthorne of using the promise of future changes to avoid coming down definitively for or against NAFTA.

The Idaho Sugar Beet Growers' Association has already studied the pact's sugar section and is recommending several changes. According to Executive Director Mark Duffin, the association wants to:

- Eliminate a provision under which Mexico could export unlimited quantities of sugar to the United States.

Include high-fructose corn syrup with sugar in determining whether Mexico is a "surplus producer" of sugar.

• Extend "Section 22" import protection for refined sugar and sugar-containing products for 15 years, rather than 10.

Stallings, along with 10 other members of the House Agriculture Committee's subcommittee on cotton, rice and sugar, have written to Hills endorsing the changes sought by the sugar growers.

Generator upgrade nears end

PALISADES DAM (AP) — The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation's $12 million upgrade of four massive electric generators at the Palisades Dam power plant is almost half complete.

The plant's first generator was overhauled last year. The second now is being dismantled and improvements on the other two will follow in consecutive years.

When the project is completed in 1995, the plant on the Snake River 50 miles east of Idaho Falls will generate up to 178 megawatts of electricity. Its current capacity is 130 megawatts.

The additional energy will be enough to supply a city of 13,000 people.

In comparison, Idaho Falls' proposed hydroelectric project in Shelley would cost $40 million and produce about 10 megawatts of electricity.

"Basically we aren't using our generators to their full capacity," said Ken Rice, Palisades power plant manager. "The tear-downs will allow us to improve our efficiency."

The Palisades power plant was built in 1957 and the last generator was brought on line a year later. The generators were last upgraded in the 1960s.

Improvements include installation of new components and windings to make the plant more efficient. New temperature, pressure, level and flow switches, and conditioning devices also are being added to allow future automation of the power plant. The entire process takes about 10 months.

General Electric is under contract to rewind and upgrade the first two generators. Other work is being done by power plant staff.

Center

The work-release center will fill gradually with a half dozen new inmates arriving each week, he said.

Most of the inmates will be sent there by the courts who order them to the 120-day evaluation programs, he said. Eligible prison inmates nearing parole dates or probationers having difficulty complying with terms of their probation also may end up here.

The men will be trained in grooming and job interview techniques to help them get jobs. In fact, a full-time employment development coordinator already has moved into her office at the center.

The inmates must pay one-fourth of their gross income to offset the cost of the program, he said. They also are responsible for doing their own laundry and keeping the place clean.

"There was a steady stream of visitors Monday, Hauber said. Nobody who came in seemed upset by the center's opening.

Some of the people asked questions, and they seemed a lot more comfortable with it after we explained the program to them," Hauber said.

The man's body was found Sunday in the desert about 1/2 miles from the truck about 60 miles northeast of Elko.

Sheriff's deputies say there was no sign of foul play.

SHOSHONE — Gregory Hadley Jay Jr., three-month-old infant son of Gregory H. and Terry Wartull Jay Sr. of Shoshone, died Sunday, Sept. 27, 1992, at his home.

Gregory was born June 22, 1992, in Twin Falls.

FAIRFIELD — Judge Charles Oscar Samuel Scoggin, 83, of Fairfield, died Thursday, Sept. 24, 1992, at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Plans to upgrade Minidoka County buildings for disabled set in motion

By James Prichard
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Minidoka County officials, concerned about poor accessibility by the disabled to county buildings, have taken the first step toward compliance with federal mandates.

At their meeting Monday, county commissioners instructed employees Bill McClung and Paul Aston to begin gathering bids on work to upgrade several types of doors at the 5th District Court building.

The county plans to install "panic hardware" on conference room doors at the court building, as well as similar equipment on some or all of the three doors leading into the building.

Panic hardware, as McClung called it, allows locked doors to open automatically from the inside in case of an emergency. Several of the county's departments frequently conduct meetings, including public hearings, within the conference room.

The county also must widen the doorways of the building's bathrooms 1.5 inches and rearrange some bathroom fixtures to meet the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

However, the most significant expense the county must eventually incur involves installing an elevator or wheelchair lift inside the county courthouse.

The cost of the wheelchair lift — the least expensive option — is expected to be about $32,000. The county also must upgrade the courthouse rest rooms to be accessible to the physically handicapped, which will cost at least another $3,000.

Commissioners agreed to address as many of the changes as quickly as possible, beginning with the installation of the panic hardware.

Aston, who for more than seven years has served as a building inspector and plan reviewer for Minidoka County, was appointed Monday by the commissioners to succeed McClung as the county's zoning administrator and buildings and grounds supervisor.

Aston will assume his duties Wednesday. McClung is retiring at the end of the year after more than 18 years of service to the county.

In other business, the commissioners agreed to look into installing an identifying sign in front of the courthouse.

Cassia County puts moratorium on junkyards

By Eric Goodell
Times-News Service

BURLEY — The Cassia County commissioners say they won't approve any new permits for junkyards, at least until work is completed on changes in the zoning ordinance.

The commissioners toured the property of O.T. Ryan Monday as part of their bi-monthly meeting.

Ryan, who had applied to the county for a junkyard license, was under pressure from the county to clean up his property.

After the tour, commissioners said Ryan has done well in complying with the county's request, and that Ryan's property looks better than some of his neighbors' land.

"I think he's in compliance," Commissioner John Adams said.

"If he isn't there are a lot of others who aren't."

He noted that Ryan's property now has a fence around it, while many other properties don't.

The commissioners this year have pledged to work on the county zoning ordinance, but were reluctant to grant the junkyard license because the county would be obligated to let Ryan keep the facility even if it later decided to ban junkyards in that part of the county.

To deter people from establishing junkyards within the county, Commissioner Weldon Beck suggested that the fee for junkyard licenses be raised from $100 to $500.

In other business, the commissioners agreed to allow the city of Burley annex the part of the Cassia County Fairgrounds that lies outside the city limits.

Development threatens Twin Falls' watershed plans

By Phil Sahm
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The possibility of development on state lands north of Twin Falls has city officials worried.

Area Supervisor Howard Kestie made it to the Twin Falls Rotary Club. Kestie told the Rotarians that he receives several calls a week from people who want to develop the area and said that the area likely will be developed.

City officials say that development there could threaten the city's plans to protect the watershed that feeds the city's water supply.

records clerk of the police department.

Allen suggested that if the deductible on the insurance plan were raised from $200 to $500, the city might be able to save money unless that along to the workers.

So they are going to ask Idaho Department of Lands officials to meet with them and delay any decisions about developing 1,620 acres north of the Perrine Bridge.

City officials are going to ask Idaho Department of Lands officials to meet with them and delay any decisions about developing 1,620 acres north of the Perrine Bridge.

If the city receives any money back from the state for having a low worker accident rate, the council might be able to use some of that money for raise, Allen said. But that wouldn't come until later in the fiscal year.

In a letter to department Director Stanley F. Hamilton, city Manager Tom Courtney said the city "may be interested in obtaining either title to the land or the right to develop the land." The city would like to see the land remain as open space, Courtney said.

Development along that land could jeopardize the Twin Falls' plan to protect the watershed. Protecting the watershed would be a major part of the city's effort to escape filtering.

The Twin Falls City Council gave Courtney the OK Monday to set up a meeting with lands department officials to convey the city's concerns. The council members and Mayor Howard Allen signed the letter that will go to Hamilton.

The city's health insurance premium rose 35 percent this year, mainly because of several catastrophic illnesses. Council members said they had to balance that against giving raises.

Courtney's letter followed a speech that the Department of Lands

City employees also talked with the council at its work session Monday. In this fiscal year's budget, which takes effect Thursday, employees received a wage and benefits increase of a little more than 4 percent.

2 charged with assault in I-84 incident

DEULO — Two teen-age Utah brothers have been charged with assault with a firearm after one of the boys allegedly pointed a revolver at a semi-trailer truck on Interstate 84.

According to a report filed with the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department, trucker James E. George III of Spanaway, Wash., was eastbound on I-84 at about 4 p.m. Sunday when a Nissan pickup entered the interstate from the Burley-Rupert highway.

When the vehicle passed George's rig at milepost 214 about three miles east of the Rupert-Deulo interchange, a passenger in the pickup truck allegedly pointed a revolver at George, who immediately slammed on the brakes.

The incident was reported to the sheriff's department. About 45 minutes later, the suspects' vehicle was stopped by Pocatello police, and two Smithfield, Utah, brothers — one 17, the other 15 — were arrested.

Pocatello police allegedly found a .22-caliber handgun and a .30-60 rifle inside the pickup. The boys were charged and released to their father's custody.

State team gives Jerome schools passing grades

By H.R. Weisel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome schools have brought home a pretty good report card.

A member team representing the Idaho Department of Education tested the schools for everything from academics to zeal. The resulting 39-page report card is filled with commendations, good marks and recommendations for improving the Jerome School District.

The report, which came after a year of split sessions at the Jerome Middle School, found that "faculty and staff demonstrate a positive attitude in the face of adverse conditions such as physical plant inadequacies and uncertainty as to assignment."

Jerome voters approved a bond issue election earlier this year to build a new elementary school, which will eliminate classroom overcrowding and the need for double sessions.

"Through it all our teachers and staff have been most understanding and willing to put up with whatever it takes to give the best in education for our students," Superintendent Will Brown said.

"The confusion of moving and/or the possibility of moving to another building due to the overcrowding situation has caused the level of concern to rise. This does not appear to carry over into the classroom," the state report said.

Lack of parental involvement, a shortage of input from teachers on school district decisions and the way the district uses computers were concerns highlighted in the report. Improving the kindergarten center playground and buying additional library books and equipment were cited as needs.

The food service program was clearly the best of the elementary school buildings in the Jerome School District, the report said. "Classrooms are of an adequate size and there is provision for special-needs students."

The food service program was commended. About 93 percent of the approximately 1,500 elementary students are eating at the schools.

Cooking facilities and equipment appeared outdated and inadequate at Washington and Central schools, the report said.

The evaluation team recommended Washington Elementary School be replaced as soon as possible.

"It is unsafe and inefficient," the report said.

"Innovative use of space and the obviously can-do-make-do-with-the-facilities—we have attitude that seemed pervasive throughout the buildings," the report said.

With the receipt of the report, the Jerome School District staff must prepare a seven-year action plan to carry out the recommendations as required by the state education system.

The on-site visiting team consisted of administrators, principals and superintendents from other southern Idaho school districts.

The new magazine promises lots of changes.

Age of Brown opens in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Even if you didn't know that the issue of The New Yorker on the stands Monday was the first under the magazine's new editor, Tina Brown, a glance at the cover tells you something's afoot.

Since the drawing of a pucker sprawled in a horse carriage in Central Park is by Edward Sorel, a New Yorker standby, but what about the print?

The words, "The New Yorker" and the date and price have all been laid flat, like pasted-on letters. Now, black-shaded, the magazine's name lifts subtly off the page.

Inside are lots of changes, as promised, but also lots of reassurances.

"People here seem to love it," Brown, 35, said at her office. "Some of the people who've been here a very long time have come in to me today and said it feels very vivid and vibrant, still The New Yorker, but with an extra vitality to it."

A limping Vanity Fair turned glitzy under Brown's eight-year tenure. When owner S.I. Newhouse pegged her to take over The New Yorker, some people reacted as if Madonna had been named director of the Metropolitan Opera.

But a fair number of the 67-year-old weekly's 630,000 readers, along with advertisers, felt it needed shaking up. Brown's maiden effort, dated Oct. 5, is 178 pages, one of the biggest issues of recent times, and is printed on slick paper 25 percent heavier than its predecessors.

Her inaugural brought in 85 pages of ads. The weekly had been losing money with an average of 24 pages under the previous editor, Robert Gottlieb.

Overall, the design has been made lighter on readers' eyes. Some of the drawings are in color; a black-and-white photo or two also appears.

Haughty old Eustace Tilley, with monocle aimed at butterfly, is still atop the table of contents. But that page has now been revamped to offer solid clues of what articles are about.

Now comes a TV critic, James Wolcott, with reviews of the new season's shows. Television was a subject for incidental pieces before. Some readers felt a TV column was overdue.

Another first-time feature is a boxed "Fifty Years Ago in The New Yorker," which will appear regularly. "It would be a shame not to expose readers to the things that they've missed," Brown said.

The byline — that assertive listing of an author's name atop stories — has arrived, replacing the more understated signature at the bottom of a piece.

News breaks, the little end-of-column fillers that skewered howlers, pomposities and banalities printed elsewhere, continue to atrophy. There's only one in this issue.

Contrary to some published reports, Brown said she has not blackballed long pieces, the 20,000-words that often went unread.

"There will always be a mix of short and long," she said, pointing to the centerpiece of her first issue, Mark Singer's 22,000-word account of what befell a marijuana dealer who claims young Dan Quayle was his regular customer.

Brown said she had a number of 20,000-word pieces in the works, but they "have to be earned ... to have a compelling narrative to tell."

In general, the first issue has made Brown "proud and happy," but without much time for reflection.

Unlike the monthly Vanity Fair, "with The New Yorker, you're always closing," she said, "I came in today thinking about last week, and suddenly I'm closing this week's. It's a whole new rhythm for me."

'People here seem to love it. Some of the people who've been here a very long time have come in to me today and said it feels very vivid and vibrant, still The New Yorker, but with an extra vitality to it.'

— Editor Tina Brown

A short story by John Updike, a piece of baseball commentary by Roger Angell and Andy Logan writing about city politics are all comfortably familiar.

So, too, the lineup of cartoonists. But wait, what's Jules Feiffer, a regular contributor to the weekly newspaper Village Voice, doing here. His take on Woody-Ann, feminists and men who don't "get it" runs for two pages, in color.

Brown said it was an impromptu offering from Feiffer and she hopes he and other cartoonists respond frequently to her having declared space open in the magazine.

She also said she hoped for more letters.

The magazine finally has a "Mailbox." The first letter is from a New York Fire Department doctor, taking issue with a recent cover that suggests firefighters still roar to the rescue of freed cats.

Man's heavenly chimes another's unholy racket

DEAR ABBY: I think the lady who hung her wind chimes an equal distance between her house and a neighbor's had a lot of nerve. I think she should have asked her neighbor first if she minded her hanging them there. Her neighbor was completely justified in taking them down and placing them on her lawn chair with a note explaining why.

Wind chimes do scare the birds — and the racket is something else! I live in a condo, and we are not allowed to hang wind chimes from our balconies, thank heavens!

— LOVES PEACE AND QUIET DEAR LOVES: The wind chimes controversy — can't more than a mere tinkling sound. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: Good for the person who took down her neighbor's annoying wind chimes. I would have met the neighbor in the yard, told her what I thought about her wind chimes, and held the ladder while she took them down!

Then I would have suggested that she hang them in the living room with a fan blowing. Thus, the neighbor could listen to the noise to her heart's content without bothering anybody else.

— ELMER MC KAY, DULUTH, MINN.

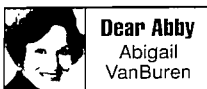

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Likes My Wind Chimes," I would like to say that wind chimes are themselves rude and inconsiderate. The sound does not stay in its own yard but can be heard by the whole neighborhood!

You hear them when you wake up in the morning, all day long, and you hear them when you are trying to fall asleep at night. There is no escape from them. You can't enjoy the chirping of birds, the rustling of the leaves or the other wonderful sounds of nature.

To "Likes My Wind Chimes," may I suggest you hang them in your house and turn on a fan, but keep them away from the rest of us!

— MARY KERN, MINNEAPOLIS

DEAR ABBY: You suggested

Dear Abby
Abigail VanBuren

that the person who was bothered by her neighbor's wind chimes should talk to her neighbor about it. Well, listen to this.

Our neighbor is a widow whom we have helped many times in many ways, so when she put up wind chimes just a few yards from our bedroom window, I did speak to her about it because they disturbed our sleep, but I was not prepared for the nasty answer I got, and those wind chimes are still up!

What a shame. She lost two good friends who had done so much for her over the years. Please don't tell where this letter came from. She knows who she is.

— ANTI-WIND CHIMES

DEAR ABBY: I know how "Bafled in Beaverton, Ore.," felt when he held a door open so the lady behind him could enter a public building, and she said sternly, "I am perfectly able to open doors for myself."

I mentioned that incident to my Uncle Duane, and he laughed and said, "When someone sails past me without saying 'thank you' for holding the door, I say, 'If you're not going to thank me, tip me!'"

I thought this was so funny, I couldn't resist trying it. I didn't always get a thank-you, but the expressions on some of the faces were priceless!

— HOLDING THE DOOR IN HAMPTON BAYS, N.Y.

Dolphins sign All-Pro Jackson

The Associated Press

Keith Jackson and Garin Veris, two of the four former holdovers who were given free agency by a federal court, took advantage of their freedom on Monday to change teams. Jackson, a three-time Pro Bowl selection at tight end for Philadelphia, agreed to a four-year deal with Miami. The Dolphins said he would arrive Tuesday to sign the contract and hold a news conference. Veris, a former New England defensive end, signed a two-year pact with the San Francisco 49ers.

Another great quarterback, I think I can fit in a lot better in Miami." He feels he can contribute quickly. "I hope I'll be in uniform this weekend," he said. "I'm going down to meet with the coaches and try to learn the offensive scheme. Last year, about four games in, Roy Green came to us and had a big game. I hope I can do the same."

Eagles president Harry Gamble said he was disappointed that Jackson decided to leave.

Eagles president Harry Gamble said he was disappointed that Jackson decided to leave.

"Keith is certainly a very talented player and in this business, you never like to lose talented players," he said in a statement. "At the same time, however, I feel very comfortable in saying that the Philadelphia Eagles made an extremely attractive contract offer to Keith. Apparently, Keith has made what he considers to be a decision that is in his best interest."

Dallas and Detroit had expressed interest in signing Keith. Please see NFL/B7

Russians again seek spot in America's Cup

SAN DIEGO — The St. Petersburg Yacht Club in Russia has submitted the fifth foreign challenge for the 1995 America's Cup.

Commodore Vladimir Koubilda, who led an unsuccessful renegade challenge for the 1992 regatta, filed the Holy Russia challenge last week and posted the $75,000 entry fee with the defending San Diego Yacht Club.

"This is an exciting development for America's Cup in that Russia has never before sailed in these races," said Chuck Nichols, president of America's Cup '95.

Guard, forward join Jazz for Oct. 9 training camp

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz added two players to the club's training camp roster Monday — guard Tim Legler and forward Mike Higgins.

The additions boosted the roster to 14 players scheduled to participate in the camp beginning Oct. 9.

Legler, a 6-foot-4 guard out of LaSalle, played briefly in the NBA for Denver and Phoenix in 1990. The 6-9 Higgins averaged 9.3 points, 10.8 rebounds and 3.0 blocks in the 6 games he played for Omaha in 1991-92 after starting the season in Spain.

Stray bullet from fight hits football player on campus

LOS ANGELES — A Southern Cal football player was struck in the arm by a stray bullet Monday during practice on a campus athletic field.

The freshman linebacker, who wasn't identified, sustained a minor flesh wound, said James Dennis, vice president of student affairs. "It was a superficial flesh wound, and the student walked off the field on his own," Dennis said.

Police said the bullet came over or through a fence at the Howard Jones Field on campus. The gunfire apparently stemmed from a dispute about a block away from the campus. It wasn't known if there were any arrests, Dennis said.

The tournament was to be played at Kauai Lagoons, but the hotel's Kiele Course sustained damage from the Sept. 11 hurricane and won't be ready for guests until December.

Chiefs down hapless Raiders

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The biggest crowd in Kansas City in 20 years got exactly what it wanted Monday night, watching the Los Angeles Raiders plunge to their worst record in 28 years.

Quarterback Dave Krieg scored two touchdowns and Barry Word muscled up the middle for 125 yards as the Chiefs (3-1) beat the Raiders 27-7, leaving the Silver and Black with an 0-4 record for the first time since 1964 and putting any hope of saving their season severely in doubt.

The raucous crowd of 77,486, the Chiefs' largest since Nov. 11, 1972, was warned several times by officials to quiet down while the Raiders had the ball.

Word, a 245-pound working mostly up the middle, went over 100 yards against Los Angeles for the third straight game as the Chiefs won their sixth in a row over their old NFL rivals and maintained a first-place tie with Denver in the AFC West.

Krieg, who spent 12 years with Seattle before signing with Kansas City this year as a Plan B free agent, used Fred Jones' block on Ronnie Lott to dash 7 yards into the end zone on the first play of the fourth period for a 17-7 lead.

Krieg also scored on a 3-yard run in the second quarter, becoming the first Chiefs quarterback to score two touchdowns in a game since Bill Kinney in 1983.

Nick Lowery's 41-yard field goal midway through the final period made it 20-7 and Charles Minney returned his first career interception 25 yards for a clinching touchdown with 1:52 left.

After a dull, scoreless first period, the Raiders seized a 7-0 lead 4:36 into the second quarter when Eric Dickerson sprang through a big hole over right tackle and sped 40 yards to the end zone untouched, outrunning Charles Minney the final 20 yards.

After punting on their first four possessions, the Chiefs finally got moving.

Starting from their own 30, Kansas City needed just 9 plays to forge a 7-7 tie. Krieg hit Tim Barnett for 26 yards on third-and-13 before Word began pounding the middle, picking up 12 yards on second-and-10, then lumbering 16 yards to the 3. Krieg curled around to his right looking to pass, but got a good block from tight end Jonathan Hayes and darted into the end zone.

Los Angeles receiver Sam Grady bobbles a first-quarter pass during Monday's game against the Kansas City Chiefs in Kansas City.

Schedule, injuries, rare excitement combine to bring NFL back to earth

The Associated Press

The NFL probably would do just as well to forget Week 4 of the 1992 season.

Not only did the league lose again in court when four unsigned players were declared free agents by Judge David Doty, but Sunday was a day of sinkers and snozers.

That is, after three weeks of good, exciting football, we had games like Denver's 12-0 win over Cleveland (four field goals); the Rams' 18-10 win over the Jets (four field goals and a safety); Buffalo's 41-7 blowout over New England, and Minnesota's 42-7 win in Cincinnati that brought the Bengals down to earth.

Why?

1—After games like Buffalo's 34-31 win over San Francisco, the Giants' near comeback against the Cowboys (from 34-0 to 34-28), the Cleveland-Miami Monday night fourth-quarter shootout and John Elway's 20th game-winning drive over the Raiders, we were due for an off-week.

2—The luck of the schedule. The league's best division, the NFC East, was off, idling the Cowboys, Eagles and Redskins. That doesn't explain it all, of course. Phoenix and Indianapolis were also off.

3—Injuries. The Browns were playing with their third quarterback in three weeks: Mike Tomczak, picked up 10 days ago. And John Elway still operates behind a questionable offensive line and without Vance Johnson, Steve Sewell, Sammie Smith and Michael Young, four offensive weapons he needs.

Not that every game stunk.

The 49ers' 16-10 win over the Saints, the best matchup of the day, wasn't decided until Eric Davis picked off Bobby Hebert's pass in the end zone with 10 seconds left. And Detroit's Brett Periman was tackled at the 3-yard line as time ran out in Tampa Bay's 27-23 win over the Lions.

Moreover, Dennis Green's Vikings re-established the form of their 4-0 preseason with a 42-7 rout of Cincinnati as Rich Gannon solved the blinding defenses of Ron Lynn, the Bengals defensive coordinator.

Gannon, playing with a slight break in his throwing hand, was 25 of 32 for 318 yards and Boomer Esiason was benched for Donald Hollas.

Pittsburgh's bubble burst with a 17-3 loss in Green Bay as Rod Woodson, one of the few name players on Bill Cowher's startup team, made three major mistakes that led to both of the Packers' TDs. And Brett Favre continued to upstage the injured Don Majkowski.

Tampa Bay's 27-23 win over Detroit showed the Lions how tough it is to stay at the top after going from 6-10 to 12-4 in one year.

Now it's Tampa Bay with all the expectations.

The reason is Sam Wyche, who has taken the talent the Bucs got with so many high first-rounders and gotten it to play. On the winning TD pass to Ron Hall with 49 seconds left, Wyche sent in two plays, then let Vinny Testaverde choose one. Now, Testaverde is playing with confidence for the first time in his career.

The Wildcats, led by quarterback Jamie Martin, are No. 1 in both the Big Sky and Division I-AA in passing offense, averaging almost 346 yards per game.

Martin, a senior, is atop the league and second nationally in total offense with 340 yards per game.

But he trails Eastern Washington sophomore Mark Tennesson and league-leading junior Doug Nussmeier of Idaho in passing efficiency.

Nussmeier, ranked fourth nationally, has completed 63.1 percent of his 84 passes and has not been intercepted.

On the other end of the passing offense, Boise State's Mike Wilson leads the Big Sky and Division I-AA in receiving. Wilson, a junior, has caught 33 passes for 413 yards and two touchdowns in four games.

Idaho State also leads the Big Sky in pass defense.

But Montana State, despite giving up 47 points to Weber State, has the conference's best overall defense through four games.

The Bobcats lead the Big Sky in total defense, giving up 309 yards per game, and scoring defense, allowing opponents an average of under 16 points per game.

Montana State also has the Big Sky's best turnover record, with 7.1 interceptions, fumbles and eight interceptions and giving up only one each of their own.

Braves can clinch tonight if Reds help

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves, whose big lead dwindled during a road trip as the second-place Cincinnati Reds staged a last-gasp winning streak, are ready to clinch the NL West title at home.

Entering the final home game in two with seven games to play, they once had a 10 1/2-game lead, but the Reds closed to 4 1/2 on Friday as they extended their winning streak to nine games.

Braves fans were able to relax a little when the Reds lost to San Francisco on the road and the Braves pulled out a pair of 10-inning, 2-1 victories at San Diego over the weekend.

The Braves host the Giants tonight and can clinch the title if they win and the Reds lose in Los Angeles. "We didn't want to get, where it's the last week," said pitcher John Smoltz. "We want to clinch it as quickly as we can, rest some guys and play the weekend series preparing for the playoffs."

Entering the final home game, the Reds' winning streak made the Braves realize the race wasn't over, Smoltz said.

"We can't expect to play just 500 and win it, and it was kind of a plus that they did that," he said. Third baseman Terry Pendleton said he'd like to see the Braves clinch as soon as possible.

"We better get our rear ends in gear and go ahead and do so. Myself, I'd like to see a day off real soon," said Pendleton, who has been playing despite a painful leg injury.

"I think it's important that we go home. I think our fans will enjoy it a lot," said Smoltz. "We want to clinch at home," Pendleton said.

The big lead, Pendleton said, made the Braves relax too much. "If you're going to bury a team, bury them and go ahead and win the game with it," he said.

The Reds haven't quite given up, but they know it's unlikely they'll catch up. They are now 5 1/2 games behind.

"Hey listen, at this point we're chasing a rainbow. The Reds manager Al Leiter's winning streak made the Braves realize the race wasn't over, Smoltz said.

"We're just thinking about ourselves," said Blue Jays veteran pitcher Jack Morris, who was on the 1987 Tigers team that set apart Toronto fans. "We can't help what Milwaukee's doing. It's exciting. But if we can do our job, we don't have to worry about anyone else."

If Toronto wins three, Milwaukee would clinch the final home game of the season Monday at the SkyDome. "They have great pitching, great team speed and can manufacture runs with the best of them, so we're not taking anything for granted," Cone said.

And when the Blue Jays have gotten into the playoffs, well, it's exciting for the fans. In 1985, Toronto led Kansas City three games to one, then lost the next three, including the last two in Toronto.

In 1989 and last year, the Blues Jays beat 4-1 in playoff series, first by Oakland, then by Minnesota.

Denkinger and McSherry each will be working their seventh playoff. Brinkman, Clark and Merrill will be appearing in their fourth for the AL, while Coble will be in his second and Young in his first.

Montague, a 17-year NL veteran, will be in his fourth for the NL. Both Marsh and Davis will be appearing in their second playoffs, while Rippley and Darling are making their post-season debuts.

Brett sits out Monday game

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — George Brett's status for his 3,000th career hit was put on hold Monday night when he did not start for the Kansas City Royals against California because of a sprained left shoulder.

Brett, with 2,996 hits, fell pain in his shoulder during batting practice, the Royals trainer said. The Royals have six games left after Monday, and it is uncertain when Brett will play again.

Brett's status will be day-to-day. Veris, reliever and a two-year contract with Detroit, says he's ready to go.

Old doubts about Kohl arise as he enters 2nd decade in office

BONN, Germany (AP) — On Oct. 1, 1982, a portly politician with a satisfied smile sat on the chancellor's bench in the German parliament. Helmut Kohl had good reason to grin. The Bundestag just had elected him the new leader of West Germany. A lot of people were surprised Kohl could make it that far. Even fewer could have imagined that Kohl — viewed by many as a bumbling and uninspired politician — would steer the two Germans to reunification eight years later, or that in 1992 he would be one of the world's most influential leaders. Kohl celebrates the completion of 10 years in office Thursday, two days before Germany marks its second anniversary as a reunited country. Kohl, 62, is fond of taunting his critics: "I like to be underestimated. I've managed very well by being underestimated." But as Kohl enters his second decade in power, new perils and challenges for Germany have revived old doubts about his abilities. Kohl has been unable to stop daily attacks by right-wing radicals against foreigners and a growth of German xenophobia. Economic problems are piling up because of government borrowing to pay the costs of unification. His ratings in public opinion polls are low and his dream of a United States of Europe is in trouble because of other countries' worry they will be dominated by an economically powerful Germany. Eastern Germans, who once lionized Kohl, are turning against him because they are unhappy with the slow pace of their region's reconstruction. People in western Germany are angry because he raised their taxes to pay for unification after promising that he wouldn't. In a recent poll, 75 percent of 2,000 people questioned said Kohl's government is incompetent. Critics scoffed at Kohl when he first announced that he wanted to become chancellor, viewing him as a provincial politician with little knack for leadership. But when the liberal Free Democrats pulled out of a coalition with Kohl's Social Democrats, the Democratic chancellor, opposition leader Kohl was there to pick up the crown. "Kohl is a highly talented politician but he's no strategist. Konrad Adenauer and Willy Brandt had vision. I wouldn't include Kohl among them," says Eberhard Jaeckel, professor of history at the University of Stuttgart. But there seems to be no German politician who is not in Kohl's overshadow. The opposition Social Democrats have provided little competition, a main reason Kohl has been able to beat them in three consecutive elections. "This country has a desperate dearth of first-class politicians. That is Germany's greatest problem," says Jochem Thies, editor of Europa-Archiv, a Bonn-based political journal. Kohl, however, has made a career out of being underrated. Critics scoffed at Kohl when he first announced that he wanted to become chancellor, viewing him as a provincial politician with little knack for leadership. But when the liberal Free Democrats pulled out of a coalition with Kohl's Social Democrats, the Democratic chancellor, opposition leader Kohl was there to pick up the crown.

Since then Kohl has been profited from two factors: the Free Democrats' continued allegiance to the coalition, and the Social Democrats' inability since 1982 to present a credible challenger. Kohl expanded West Germany's influence during his first eight years in office and deepened Bonn's friendship with the United States. But he has been prone to serious gaffes. In 1985, for example, he sparked an uproar by inviting then-President Reagan to visit a war cemetery in Bitburg where Nazi SS troops were buried along with regular soldiers. Jewish leaders worldwide accused Kohl of insensitivity. Corruption scandals involving important government ministers also marred Kohl's image. At times, it appeared that Kohl's government was foundering. Kohl's fortunes changed dramatically in 1989. When the Communist East German government collapsed, Kohl has become a rallying point for people outraged by the far-right attacks. It has also worsened Germany's international image, already hurt by tight monetary policies that have wreaked havoc on other currencies and fears that German economic interests could dominate those of other nations. On Monday, organizers canceled a controversial event that had threatened to create even more embarrassment for Germany: a ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of the first firing of the Nazis' deadly V-2 rocket. The ceremony was to take place on Oct. 3, the second anniversary of German reunification.

Attack tests country's ideals, chancellor says

BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Monday a suspected arson attack on a Jewish memorial at a former Nazi concentration camp is a test of every German's commitment to democracy. He called it "a form of terror" that should alarm every German. He also said Germany must guard against the kind of extremist chaos that led to the Third Reich. Kohl's remarks were the toughest so far on the daily far-right violence in Germany, most of it directed against refugees. Saturday's blaze at the Sachsenhausen camp north of Berlin has become a rallying point for people outraged by the far-right attacks. It has also worsened Germany's international image, already hurt by tight monetary policies that have wreaked havoc on other currencies and fears that German economic interests could dominate those of other nations. On Monday, organizers canceled a controversial event that had threatened to create even more embarrassment for Germany: a ceremony marking the 50th anniversary of the first firing of the Nazis' deadly V-2 rocket. The ceremony was to take place on Oct. 3, the second anniversary of German reunification.

Matthias Kleinert, spokesman for Daimler-Benz, manufacturers of Mercedes luxury cars, said his Berlin company's experts are being harmed by "the picture of the new Germany" as a country where right-wing radicals roam out of control. He did not release any export figures. Kohl voiced anger and worry about Saturday's fire at a wooden barracks that had been showing an exhibit on Jews killed at the former Nazi concentration camp at Sachsenhausen. "The fire at the 'Jewish barracks' of the former Sachsenhausen concentration camp should stir up every person who cares about our free democracy," Kohl said. "This arson and the violence that keeps flaring up against asylum-seekers are a form of terror... which must alarm every German," he said. Kohl also said Germany must "ward off" the sort of rightist and extremist violence that led up to the Third Reich. "We will combat all those who want to drive our democracy into a test between extremists on the left and on the right," Kohl said. "That is the most important lesson to be drawn from the failure of the Weimar Republic." Chaos resulting from conflicts between rightist and leftist extremists during the Weimar years paved the way for Adolf Hitler's rise to power.

Widespread criticism prompts organizers to cancel Nazi rocket commemoration

Youngsters view a German World War II V-2 rocket at the Imperial War Museum Monday in London.

BERLIN (AP) — Facing international criticism, organizers on Monday canceled a ceremony for the 50th anniversary of the first firing of the Nazis' missiles from a V-2 rocket. For Britons, Belgians and others, the V-2 was one more symbol of the savage Third Reich. It's estimated the V-2 attacks killed 2,500 people in England alone. After a weekend of bitter criticism from London, the German government pulled out of the event, which had been scheduled for Saturday. Hours after the government announcement, the organizers called off the ceremonies. The German Association of Air and Space Industries said it understood the emotional reaction that forced the move, but defended the group's original intentions. Association President Karl J. Derselt said the V-2 provided the "basis of all space technologies in the world, for example the American shuttle in the north and the successful European Ariane rocket." Even today, the Concise Columbia Encyclopedia refers to the V-2 as "the first long-range guided missile," without mentioning the killing of millions during World War II. A Bonn government spokesman said Chancellor Helmut Kohl hadn't been notified in advance of a high-ranking official's planned "patronage" of the event. "If he (Kohl) had known about it, he would have stopped it," spokesman Dieter Vogel told reporters. The ceremony would have taken place on Oct. 3, the 50th anniversary of the first successful V-2 firing and the second anniversary of German reunification, providing an uncomfortable reminder of the country's Nazi past and its current economic dominance in Europe. It had been set for the Peenemuende test-site in northeastern Germany, and would have further strained already tense German-British relations. The ceremony also would have cast a shadow over Queen Elizabeth's trip to Germany next month. The British monarch will stop in Dresden, the eastern German city that was devastated by British firebombing.

Last U.N. troops expected in Somalia — MOGADISHU, Somalia — The final contingent of 500 U.N. troops is expected to arrive in this devastated capital Tuesday to protect the port and airport where relief supplies arrive for starving Somalis. The 500 Pakistani soldiers are to be deployed in about a week in an attempt to insure a steady stream of relief shipments through the airport and the waterfront where clan warfare and looting have hampered delivery of aid. Andrew Natsios, of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said a lack of security was crippling attempts to deliver food by sea to Mogadishu and by road to the countryside.

Chinese Leninist hardliner dies at 81 — BEIJING — Hu Qiaomu, a hard-line Marxist theorist who played a key role in purging liberal intellectuals in the past 10 years, died Monday at age 81. He was the fourth important hard-liner to die this year. The state-run Xinhua News Agency said Hu died of an unspecified illness. Hu recently declared: "The bourgeois politicians have clamored: Marxism is dead and so is socialism. Let them clamor and boast their victories and seek comfort in their dreams. We are holding high the banner of Leninism and triumphantly developing the socialist cause." He was the fourth member to die this year of the hard-line camp that has opposed senior leader Deng Xiaoping's efforts to push market-style reforms and more openness to the outside world. The deaths weaken the hard-liners in advance of the national Communist Party congress scheduled for October.

Officials charge top Japanese politician — TOKYO — Prosecutors on Monday charged Japan's most influential politician with pocketing $4 million in illegal contributions, but he won't have to show up in court and faces only a $1,700 fine. The furor over the case could slow the workings of government. Party kingpin Shin Kanemaru, 78, was charged with accepting the money from a mob-linked executive of a trading company, said a Tokyo District Court official, speaking on condition of anonymity. In an apparent deal, prosecutors chose to issue a "summary indictment" that spares Kanemaru from a potentially embarrassing court appearance.

Liberia contends rebels kill at least 300 — ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — Liberia's interim government on Monday claimed rebels burned homes and killed at least 300 people during factional fighting north of the capital Monrovia, but the rebels denied it. The fighting further weakened a nearly 2-year-old cease-fire. ULIMO, a rebel group based in neighboring Sierra Leone, launched an offensive against rival rebel leader Charles Taylor's forces a month ago, saying only force would make the him disarm and demobilize his men. THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Nine times out of ten, in the arts as in life, there is actually no truth to be discovered; there is only error to be exposed."

"I could hardly find the diamond shift," was East's weak ally. "How was I to know that you had the ace and declarer didn't?"

Study the play to see if you can find the flaws in East's excuse. West led the spade deuce and South assessed his prospects before playing low from dummy.

A low club was led to dummy's queen and East's ace, and East was quick to return a spade. East put up his 10, and South fished, winning with his ace.

West led the spade deuce and South assessed his prospects before playing low from dummy. East put up his 10, and South fished, winning with his ace.

East said something about the need for a study at trick one, but he was out of line. Declarer is entitled to plan his play before he plays from dummy.

His first mistake was playing West for the spade king. His second mistake was failing to recognize the true club position.

After South played the club deuce and West the trey, it was odds-on that West had three small clubs (low-high promises an odd number).

The real danger was not in giving South the diamond trick he didn't have; it was in not taking two tricks the defense had.

How could South go down if he had the diamond ace and a super trump suit?
