A political Halloween

$50 solid waste bill coming

By Phil Sahn
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The county commission plans to send a $50 solid waste fee to Twin Falls County homes and businesses next week.

The county hopes to raise an estimated $1.6 million from the fee, Commissioner Jim Freddy said this week.

The commissioners in September estimated that the fee would range from $35 to $50 a unit of trash. Given the need for money to build a landfill the commissioners settled on a $50 fee, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said Friday.

"Looking at the numbers, it didn't seem that $35 was going to be enough," Hempleman said. Homeowners with the circuit-breaker exemption will not pay the fee and Hempleman said he expects others might protest the number of trash units for which they are charged. A unit of trash is the average amount of garbage that a typical family produces in a year - an estimated 1.2 tons.

Homeowners will be charged $50 for each residence they own. If someone owns two homes, for example, and rents out one, the homeowner will receive fees for each house and can pass the $50 fee to the renter.

Businesses will receive fees for the number of trash units they produce. The county talked with some private haulers to estimate the number trash units for many businesses, Hempleman said.

The $50 will not be negotiable, he said. Those who want to argue the number of units of trash they produce must prove how many units they produce.

The county has estimated that 18,500 homes and 2,074 businesses will receive solid waste fees. This totals 32,000 trash units in the county.

Filing complaint targets initiative author

The Associated Press

BOISE - The Idaho League of Women Voters has filed a formal complaint with the Secretary of State over the acknowledged failure of the author of the One Percent Initiative to file a required financial disclosure statement by last Tuesday's deadline.

The complaint, filed Friday, also alleges Ron Rankin, who is also president of the Idaho Property Owners Association, failed to disclose financial expenditures connected with gathering the signatures last spring needed to put the proposition on the ballot.

During a statewide televised debate Thursday night, Rankin acknowledged that he had yet to file the report on his organization's spending in support of the scheme to cap property taxes at 1 percent of actual market value.

They have filed previous reports, and this one they were aware that they needed to file and they didn't," Kay Frances, president of the league. She said Rankin's statement during the debate "gave the impression that

Helicopter crash in Great Salt Lake claims 12 lives

The Associated Press

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah - The Air Force on Friday confirmed 12 people participating in a special military exercise were killed when their helicopter crashed into the Great Salt Lake.

There was one survivor. Hill Air Force Base spokesman Dave Kazdora said all of the bodies had been recovered and the Air Force had initiated an investigation into the Thursday night crash.

The helicopter was on a training mission when it went down about 9:15 p.m. MST Thursday about 100 yards off the northern tip of Antelope Island.

A heavy storm, with snow reported in higher elevations, hampered search efforts.

The survivor, a 27-year-old airman, was pulled from the water and listed in serious condition Friday at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center with lacerations to his face and right leg.

The Air Force said it was withholding the names and hometowns of the of the victims until relatives were notified.

Kendziora said the MH-60G Pave Hawk helicopter was attached to the 1st Special Operations Wing at Hurlburt Field, Fla.

Lt. Col. Frank Urban, public affairs officer for the Air Force Special Operations Command at Hurlburt, said it was a modified craft with "night, low-level, adverse-weather and avoidance capability" and used to insert special forces behind enemy lines.

The only squadron that flies the Pave Hawk is the 55th Special Operations Squadron at adjacent Eglin AFB.

Urban said the squadron was participating in a special forces training mission with the Army's 75th Ranger Regiment, headquartered in Fort Benning, Ga., and the 16th Special Operations Aviation Regiment, headquartered at Fort Campbell, Ky.

It was not immediately known whether the victims included both Army and Air Force personnel.

One source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said several of the bodies had

Costs rocket to gain seats in Congress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The great race to reshape Congress, propelled by voter discontent over gridlock and scandal, a wave of retirements and redrawn districts, is quickly running up the largest tab in election history.

The government reported Friday that spending by this fall's congressional candidates through mid-October jumped 25 percent over 1990 and easily eclipsed the record pace of 1988.

"When you combine redistricting with scandal, you find more vulnerable incumbents, more individuals running and an unprecedented number of open seats. The increased competitiveness increases the need to spend," explained James Thurber, an expert on Congress at American University.

"It will be one in the record books for at least a few years," Thurber added, predicting turnover in Congress will set a post-World War II record.

The biggest spenders were both from California: Republican House challenger Michael Huffington, who is bankrolling his own $4 million bid, and Barbara Boxer, who has already doled out more than $8 million.

Senate incumbents fighting for their political life, such as New York's Alfonse D'Amato, Oregon's Bob Packwood and Wisconsin's Robert Kasten, all Republicans, are also waging multimillion dollar campaigns.

Overall, congressional candidates in this general election raised $415 million and spent $380 million through Oct. 14, beginning the campaign's final three-weeks with $109-million-in-cash on hand, a Federal Election Commission analysis showed.

Spending was up $75 million from two years ago and $70.6 million from the 1988 election, the FEC reported.

The greatest jump came on the House side, where a wave of retirements and incumbent primary losses left about 100 seats up for grabs. Many races became more competitive when legislatures remapped districts after the 1990 census.

"It is an incredibly competitive year. Everybody is out hustling money. What is interesting is it's

Stallings cries foul over NAFTA letter

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Richard Stallings Friday dismissed as "political grandstanding" a letter written to Republican Sen. Larry Craig by U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills.

In the letter, dated Oct. 29, Hills told Craig that the North American Free Trade Agreement would not expose the American sugar industry to unfair competition from Mexico.

Hills, a Republican appointed by President Bush, was responding to an earlier letter signed by Craig and 29 other senators. That letter supported several changes to NAFTA sought by the sugar industry.

NAFTA's sugar provisions, as well as market conditions in the United States and Mexico, indicate that the domestic sugar industry will not be hurt by expanded Mexican access to the U.S. sugar market, Hills wrote Craig. "I would be pleased to continue the dialogue with you, your colleagues, and members of the sugar industry - first as we work to draft legislation to implement the agreement, and later as we work to put the Agreement into practice," she wrote.

Craig released the letter Thursday in Burley, at a campaign event for Stallings' GOP opponent, Boise mayor Dirk Kempthorne.

The trade agreement has been a major point of contention between Stallings and Kempthorne.

Stallings has called NAFTA a bad deal for Idaho sugar beet growers and says he will oppose it, hoping thereby to force the Bush administration to reopen negotiations with Canada and Mexico.

Kempthorne has taken a softer approach, saying that the agreement can still be modified to address the sugar industry's

Weather summary

The National Weather Service says moist weather will continue over the Gem State following a snow advisory issued Friday night for mountains above 5,000 feet.

A large storm system centered off the Pacific coast is bringing the wet weather to Idaho. Most of the state Idaho receives measurable rain, with some snow reported as low as 5,800 feet on Friday. Snow levels were expected to drop to near 5,000 feet Friday night as cold air with this storm spread over the northwest.

"Burley reported a thunderstorm Friday morning with hailstones. Some precipitation reports included .32 inch at Caldwell, Mullan .26, Moscow .30, Malad 31, Lowell .20, Grangeville .08, Fairfield .80, and Rexburg .44.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 64 degrees at Hagerman. Stanley reported the coldest at 16 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 93 degrees at Alice, Kingsville, and Laredo, Texas. The lowest was 14 degrees at Hibbing, Minn.

Major storm dumps snow, rain across much of West

The Associated Press

The season's first major storm lingered over the West Friday, dumping snow, rain and sleet high in the Sierra Nevada and northern Plains.

Clouds shrouded much of the East and record cold gripped Alaska. Skies were sunny and warm over Texas and Florida.

More than 2 feet of snow fell on high peaks at Lake Tahoe in western Nevada.

Snow also covered high ranges of the Sierra in California and the Cascade Mountains of Oregon. Up to 6 inches blanketed the Salt River range in western Wyoming and 2 inches fell in Williston, N.D.

A snow advisory was in effect above 5,000 feet in parts of Idaho, and a winter storm watch was posted for Utah's mountains.

The storm, which moved in Thursday, shut down

Interstate 80 westbound over Donner Summit in California. The tail of the storm dropped rain Friday on Northern California and Oregon. It scattered thunderstorms across the Rockies and a slippery mixture of rain, sleet and snow over western North Dakota.

Rain also fell from the Gulf Coast to the Ohio Valley.

Rain for the six hours ending at 1 p.m. EST included 1.39 inches at Mount Wilson, Calif., and .73 at Bakerfield, Calif. Nearly an inch fell by noon in Memphis, Tenn.

The low temperature of 18 degrees at Fairbanks, Alaska, was the coldest October reading in seven years. A low of 28 below zero at Manly Hot Springs was 2 degrees above the October record.

Afternoon temperatures were in the 30s and 40s, from Montana to New England. Readings were in the 80s by midday in parts of Texas and Florida.

The low temperature for the lower 48 states was 14 been taken to Hill Air Force Base where they were x-rayed for unexploded ordnance. They were to be taken to the Utah State Medical Examiner's office for autopsies to be conducted by special Air Force teams flown in for that purpose.

The Pave Hawk can carry 15 passengers, including a crew of three — winds, accompanied by lightning and rain, periodically hammered the search area Thursday night and early Friday. The search was suspended at 4 a.m. MST due to darkness and stormy weather, but search crews returned to resume their efforts.

Kendziora said search helicopters spotted debris and clusters of bodies in deeper water northwest of the crash site, apparently pushed there by high winds and tides.

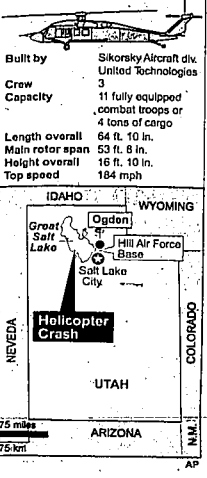

Security guards kept reporters and photographers more than a mile from the crash site on a causeway leading from the mainland to the island.

In addition to crews from HAFB, search and rescue teams from the Weber, Davis and Salt Lake County sheriff's departments participated in the efforts.

George Grimes, a spokesman for the U.S. Special Operations Command at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., said the helicopter was involved in an exercise called the U.S. Special Operations Joint Mobility and Readiness Exercise.

HAFB public affairs spokesman Len Barry described it as joint

He did not know what role the helicopter was playing in the exercise.

"I find this incredible," Stallings said at a news conference at the Canyon Springs Inn. "No other members of the Senate or of the House signed the letter, have received a response from Ms. Hills."

But Lewis Eilers, Craig's Twin Falls representative, said Craig received Hills' response first because he was the one who pressed her to write it.

"Larry called Carla Hills and said 'You've had this long enough. We need a response so we can talk to our sugar beet growers,'" Eilers said.

Fighter crashes on interstate

SOUTH WEBER, Utah (AP) — Air Force crews plan to resume picking up the pieces of an F-16 fighter bomber today that crashed on Interstate 84.

The jet plummeted into the median of the highway about 2 p.m. MST Friday and took out a section of the westbound lanes before coming to rest, said Weber County sheriff's spokesman Penny Benford.

The pilot, Capt. Gary Deschane of the Hill Air Force Base 15th Test Squadron, ejected and was found hanging by his parachute from a nearby tree. He did not suffer any serious injuries.

"He was at the scene, apparently OK and talking," Benford said.

Hill Air Force Base spokeswoman Sylvia LeMons-Liddle said crews made a sweep of the area until dusk Thursday and planned to return Friday morning.

The crash occurred between I-84's South Weber overpass and Utah Highway 89. There was no traffic on the stretch at the time, but the crash forced the temporary closure of the road, LeMons-Liddle said.

Hill spokeswoman Valerie Burke said the plane was on an intercept mission for pilot proficiency. She said he ejected safely.

they had no intention of filing."

Deputy Secretary of State Ben Ysursa notified Rankin and his wife, who is treasurer of the pro-initiative campaign committee, to respond to the complaint by Monday. Violations of the reporting law carry a fine of $10 a day until the report is filed.

Rankin has previously said that pro-initiative forces have only spent about $30,000 in their attempt to revive the property tax revolt that has dominated since 1978.

Perhaps the most telling sign is that incumbents who have amassed large war chests over the years have been dipping deeper into them this time after being battered by voter anger over government gridlock and the House bank and post office scandals.

The average House incumbent has spent about $85,000 more in this election than in 1990.

House candidates overall spent $233 million through mid-October, up 38 percent from 1990, raised $256 million, up 24 percent, and started the last three weeks with $79 million left.

Incumbents still held a substantial financial advantage, out-raising and outspending House challengers by nearly a 4-to-1 margin and accounting for 86 percent of the remaining cash on hand.

But challengers were still faring better than ever, raising and spending about twice as much on average as in 1988 or 1990, the FEC analysis showed.

Overall Senate spending is also above normal, with both seats up in expensive California, an open seat in Illinois and incumbents locked in tight races in New York, Wisconsin, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Through mid-October, Senate candidates had raised $159 million and spent $147 million, beginning the final stretch with about $23 million left. In 1988, Senate candidates had spent $143.7 million through the same period.

The four candidates for California's two Senate seats both finished in the top 10, with Boxer dishing out $8.53 million, followed by Democrat Dianne Feinstein at $6.91 million. Among Republicans, Sen. John Seymour spent $6.1 million and Bruce Herschensohn $5.77 million.

On the House side, Huffington led with $4.4 million in expenditures, followed by Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., the House's top fund-raiser, at $2.69 million.

House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., locked in a tight battle in a new district, was third with $1.67 million.

Ghost haunts firehouse in Poe's neighborhood

William Tobin says a ghost inhabits this firehouse.

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a midnight dreary, firemen pondered, strong — but fiery ... in Poe's quaint and curious neighborhood of New York.

While they nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping

As of someone gently rapping, rapping at their chamber door. 'Tis the Firehouse Ghost and nothing more!

The mystery unfolds on West Third Street in homey, artsy Greenwich Village, at a four-story, 86-year-old firehouse that fire patrolman Joe Crawley says is "kind of a scary, old place."

Across the street, so it happens, stands a peeling brownstone where Edgar Allan Poe lived in 1845, a year after he published "The Raven."

In his spirit, therefore, is offered The Tale of the Haunted Firehouse.

The ghost wears an old-fashioned, double-breasted, red fireman's shirt, blue or black pants, shoes with buckles or high laces, and a helmet. He's around 40, with salt-and-pepper hair and a moustache.

He favors a long, narrow storage

I can feel when he's up there. At nighttime, you can hear him walking around.'

— William Tobin

room with 20-foot ceilings, but also has appeared on the staircase and in the basement coal bin.

Firehouse pranksters? "I'm Irish — come back on St. Patrick's Day and I'll show you some leprechauns," Chief of Fire Patrol Francis J. Dempsey said, chuckling.

But listen to William Tobin, a 25-year veteran of Fire Patrol 2, whose members work alongside city firefighters to minimize property damage.

"I don't look for him. But I know he's here," Tobin said matter-of-factly. "I can feel when he's up there. At nighttime, you can hear him walking around."

As a kid, Tobin heard about the ghost from his father, also a fire patrolman. "He was trying to scare me, telling me ghost stories," his son figured. "I believe him now."

Tobin said he met the ghost around 1971.

"I heard somebody coming down the stairs. ... An old pair of black shoes and dark pants — that's all I could see." When he turned to answer the phone, the figure vanished.

"'Tis the wind and nothing more!"

Another patrolman pointed to a 150-pound wooden dolly. "See that cart over there? That moves," he said, giving his name as "Jimmy, just Jimmy. I don't want to be known as a wacko."

But that isn't the half of it. About 1½ years ago, Jimmy was in his firehouse bed around 2:30 a.m. The ghost "was leaning over me, staring down at me. I woke up screaming," he said.

His buddies said he leaped out of bed and shadow boxed.

"I said, 'Leave me alone!'" Jimmy recounted. "That was 1½ years ago. I haven't seen or heard him since."

"Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there wondering, fearing, doubting, dreaming..."

"It could have been a nightmare," Jimmy offered with a sheepish smile. But rookie Jon Ielpi wasn't smiling.

A week ago, he was headed down the narrow, spiral staircase with his hand on the center post. Suddenly, "It felt 'like somebody was lightly patting their hand on my hand. I was kind of bugged out," said Ielpi, who beat a hasty retreat.

About 12 years ago, another fire patrolman encountered a ghostlike figure coming out of the coal bin in the spooky basement, said Sgt. John Sheehan.

He said the patrolman has more stories but "is scared to talk about it."

Sheehan, a non-believer, jokes about Elvis sightings. Still ... he doesn't venture to the top floor at night.

"Here I opened wide the door: Darkness there And nothing more."

Weinberger notes contradict Bush statements on Iran-Contra affair

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush's denial that he knew of arms-for-hostages swaps in the Iran-Contra affair — and that two Cabinet officers opposed them — are contradicted in a second indictment of former Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

The indictment, based on Weinberger's handwritten notes, said that then-Vice President Bush attended a Jan. 7, 1986, meeting where President Reagan and his top aides discussed a straight swap of arms for hostages with Iran.

Bush has admitting knowing the Reagan White House was sending arms to Iran and that some hostages were being freed from Lebanon.

But he said it "never became clear" to him that there was an arms-for-hostages swap until he was briefed in December 1986 by the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee — a month after the operation became public.

The indictment also indicated that Bush knew from the same January 1986 meeting that Weinberger and former Secretary of State George Shultz opposed the Iran arms sales. Weinberger's notes directly contradict Bush on that point.

Weinberger was charged in the new grand jury indictment with one felony count of making false statements to Congress about whether he took notes relevant to its investigation of the Iran-Contra affair. He already faces trial on three false statement and two perjury charges, and all the charges will be combined at one trial, set to begin Jan. 5.

Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and $250,000 in fines.

The indictment was part of the Iran-Contra investigation of Independent Counsel Lawrence E.

Walsh. Bush has criticized Walsh's $32.8 million investigation as too lengthy and too expensive. Walsh said in September that he was closing the criminal investigation, but would proceed with the prosecutions already begun.

While Bush has described himself as being "out of the loop" on Iran-Contra matters, Weinberger wrote of the Jan. 7, 1986 meeting:

"Met with president, Shultz, Poindexter, Bill Casey, Ed Meese, in Oval Office. President decided to go with Israeli-Iranian offer to release our 5 hostages in return for sale of 4000 TOWs to Iran by Israel — George Shultz + I opposed — Bill Casey, Ed Meese + VP favored — as did Poindexter."

Casey was CIA director, Meese the attorney general and John Poindexter the national security adviser at the time. TOWs are anti-air missiles.

FBI investigates treasury scheme

WASHINGTON (AP) — The woman whose name appears on all U.S. currency is under investigation in an alleged influence-peddling scheme involving a Georgia telecommunications company she once helped run.

U.S. Treasurer Catalina Vasquez Villalpando — who has been in and out of the Reagan and Bush administrations three times in 12 years — was placed on administrative leave Thursday at her request.

The firm, Communications International Inc., enjoyed phenomenal growth because of federal contracts over the last decade. With White House approval, Villalpando retained her stock in the company when she became treasurer.

Largely ceremonial, the treasurer's job pays $112,300.

On Wednesday, the FBI conducted five searches: three residences, including Villalpando's; a commercial storage locker, and a suite of company offices in Norcross, Ga.

Villalpando, 52, had been a partner and a senior vice president at Communications International before the president Bush nominated her for the treasurer's post in 1989.

In 1980, she directed Hispanic voter recruitment for Bush's unsuccessful bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

The treasurer's job is one of the oldest in Washington, established in 1777. The treasurer's office supervises the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, the Savings Bond Division and the Mint.

The FBI is probing whether Villalpando, as treasurer, accepted travel, lodging and other benefits from Communications International, said sources familiar with the probe who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The search warrants allege fraud, racketeering, bribery of public officials, conspiracy to defraud the government and making false statements, said Frank Scalfidi, a spokesman in the Washington field office of the FBI.

It is a misdemeanor for a senior federal official to accept compensation or benefits from a former employer.

One FBI search was the home of Ernest Olivas, who has been working for the Bush-Quayle re-election campaign. Olivas took leave from one of Communications International's two Washington offices to become director of Hispanic outreach for the Bush-Quayle campaign.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal workers routinely provided unauthorized motorcade and security services to VIPs moving New York, and even drove officials to sporting events and Republican fund-raisers, says an investigative report released Friday.

The federal report documented 129 instances between June 1988 and December 1991 when General Services Administration employees provided transportation, communication, escort services and protection to dignitaries ranging from top Bush administration officials to a Vatican representative.

The GSA manages the federal government's real estate, and the workers involved guard federal buildings.

"Taxpayer money was being wasted on these trips, and GSA is primarily responsible for letting it go on as long as it did," said Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who released the investigation by the GSA's inspector general. The practices have been stopped, Glenn said.

Glenn has also asked GSA Administrator Richard G. Austin to calculate the precise cost of such unauthorized activities.

GSA spokeswoman Katherine Gaddy said no laws were broken.

"It's a perception problem more than anything," she said. However, she added, the agency has stopped providing drivers but still supplies VIPs with cars and communications equipment, such as phones and beepers.

"And if they feel they need security, they provide their own security," she said.

Writers hope for Super resurrection

NEW YORK (AP) — Look! Up in the sky! It's Superman!

And he's not floating toward heaven.

Never say die. Especially if you're a beloved superhero who has been around for 54 years.

Superman's writers, editors and artists were huddled all this week at a Rye hotel "hashing out" how to resurrect the Man of Steel, who will die in the "Superman" issue that hits newsstands Nov. 17.

"There's nothing firm I can tell you," DC Comics spokesman Martha Thomases said Friday. "They're all still at their annual retreat figuring out what's going to happen, how and when."

But she confirmed what most super-heroes lovers know all along: Metropolis' best-loved crimefighter will somehow survive his death at the hands of the super-villain Doomsday.

Yeltsin vows peace on city tour

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin on Friday denounced hard-line lawmakers who are threatening to force him out and roll back its economic reforms, and he did not rule out imposing a state of emergency.

Yeltsin

Congress of People's Deputies. It is dominated by former Communists elected before the Soviet collapse.

It was Yeltsin's latest attack on hard-liners ahead of a Russian parliament session scheduled for Dec. 1, a meeting he is fighting to delay until spring.

Although political posturing and dire warnings have preceded previous legislative sessions, Russian lawmakers and media have been talking for the first time about a state of emergency — an ominous prospect just more than a year since the failed Soviet coup.

Russian newspapers have reported that Yeltsin's advisers are urging him to introduce presidential rule to prevent a showdown with opponents in parliament — the 1,060-member

The president has issued a flurry of decrees and orders in the last week aimed at keeping his opponents off balance and steering their thunder on issues such as protection of ethnic Russians in other Soviet republics.

Yeltsin defended his decisions earlier this week to ban the hard-line National Salvation Front and to dissolve a controversial security force controlled by his powerful foe, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov.

The front was formed last week to unite pro-Communist and ultra-nationalist groups against Yeltsin. He has accused the group of calling for the overthrow of the democratically elected government.

Yeltsin's team also apparently is trying to make the most of the president's special powers over the economy and government to squelch complaints that he has not acted decisively.

"Despite sharp attacks by revenge-seekers, we'll safeguard peace and democracy in our society by all means," the Interfax news agency quoted Yeltsin as saying Friday during a tour of the Caspian Sea port of Astrakhan.

Presidential rule would allow Yeltsin to govern the country without submitting laws and decrees to lawmakers for approval, and give him the power to dissolve parliament.

3 Baltics condemn withdrawal

MOSCOW (AP) — The three Baltic states, struggling with the legacy of Soviet domination, on Friday condemned Boris Yeltsin's decision to stop withdrawing troops from their countries.

They called it a move to appease his hard-line critics.

"The Russian president said Thursday he was suspending the withdrawal because of 'deep concern' for the rights of the Russian-speaking minorities in Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

Yeltsin's Russian nationalist critics in parliament allege the Baltic governments are discriminating against those minorities. Critics in the military say the troops have nowhere to go because of a housing shortage and should be kept in place for now.

The three Baltic states, however, see Yeltsin's decision as a setback to their decades-long campaign to get rid of the troops, whom they consider an occupying force threatening their independence and security.

The Red Army occupied the Baltics in 1940, under a secret pact between the Soviet Union and Nazi Germany.

Western and Baltic estimates of the number of foreign troops in the Baltics vary from 130,000 to 200,000. The Russian government has declined to release figures, and it is not known how many troops have already withdrawn.

Tidal wave takes 4

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A tidal wave hit a coastal province in southern Vietnam, sweeping away hundreds of houses and leaving four people missing, the official Vietnam News Agency reported Friday.

Several thousand people in two districts of Soc Trang province, 186 miles south of Ho Chi Minh City, were left homeless by the tidal wave, which struck early Monday morning, the agency said in a dispatch received Friday in Bangkok.

Iraq offers information to help track missing Scuds

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq has provided U.N. weapons experts with information that could help them locate missing Scuds and determine whether the military can still make the missiles, a U.N. official said Friday.

The United Nations has set up a special commission that is charged with scrapping Iraq weapons of mass destruction under the terms of the Gulf War cease-fire.

Western intelligence reports have indicated Iraq is hiding up to 200 Scuds, the type of missile Iraq fired at Saudi Arabia and Israel during the war.

Nikita Smidovich of Russia, the leader of a 50-member inspection team that completed a two-week visit to Iraq on Friday, said the information his experts collected will help determine the number of missing Scuds.

"It would be many other things as well on the understanding of the Iraqi missile program," he said upon arriving in Bahrain, the regional headquarters of the special U.N. commission.

"And in fact, we hope the result of that inspection will help the chairman make a decision on whether the Iraqis have complied with Resolution 687."

That is the U.N. Security Council resolution requiring elimination of Iraq's weapons. Commission chairman Rolf Ekewe is empowered to recommend to the council lifting international sanctions against Iraq if it has complied with the resolution.

More Haitians take to boats since U.S. order

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard said Friday the number of Haitians fleeing in U.S.-bound boats is rising, a phenomenon refugee groups attribute to the end of hurricane season and hopes for a new American government.

The number of Haitians intercepted by the Coast Guard so far this month is 711, the highest monthly number by far since May, when President Bush ordered U.S. authorities to turn refugees back without determining whether they were fleeing political persecution.

From June to September, the Coast Guard picked up 460 refugees, said Coast Guard spokesman Roger Wedderell.

Still, the latest wave is much smaller than the thousands who fled in the first eight months after a military coup in September 1991.

A Haitian human rights leader, Jean-Claude Bajoux, told The Associated Press that rough waters during hurricane season stopped many Haitians from leaving the hemisphere's poorest country.

He also cited hunger, unemployment, political repression, hopelessness and "lack of faith in any possible improvement under the present government."

Other Haitian refugee advocates in Port-au-Prince and New York say supporters of ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide hope for a change in U.S. political and refugee policy if Bush loses his re-election bid to Bill Clinton.

Vatican to end Galileo case

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II is bringing 13 years of study by Vatican experts to a close today with a major speech on the church's review of its 17th century condemnation of the astronomer Galileo.

A Vatican statement said the Commission for the Study of the Ptolemaic-Copernican Controversy had finished its work. But it didn't say whether Galileo Galilei would be "rehabilitated" — a course some Italian newspapers suggested the pope would follow.

John Paul has taken great interest in the case. He named the study panel in 1979 and admitted church errors in condemning the astronomer.

LaRocco's child support bill now law

Congressman Larry LaRocco's bill requiring consumer credit reporting bureaus to include information on overdue child-support obligations has been signed into law by President Bush.

The Idaho Democratic's legislation requires credit agencies to report child-support delinquencies of more than $1,000 along with other credit information.

Effective Jan. 1, his measure requires the child-support information to be included only if provided by an official state or local child support agency to bureaus that issue credit reports often requested by employers, landlords, mortgage brokers and other loan officers.

Appeals court rejects negligence claim

BOISE — There is no such thing as a tort or injury allegedly caused by negligent investigation by law enforcement officers, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Friday upheld a lower court ruling dismissing a tort claim filed by two hunters investigated for game violations in Idaho County.

Court records show Forrest L. Wimer and Jack Hodge were investigated by Fish and Game officers for illegally killing elk. Hodge was never charged. Wimer was acquitted of a charge of killing elk in a closed area but found guilty of misdemeanor license violations.

Jury finds farm worker innocent

CALDWELL — A farm worker who said he acted in self-defense was found innocent of second-degree murder by a Canyon County jury.

The 10-woman, two-man panel reached the verdict Thursday night after six hours of deliberations on testimony from the three-day trial.

Jesus "Manuel" Zuniga, 29, had been charged with the March 7 stabbing death of Hermenegildo Rojo Armenta. The two men were arguing about a minor traffic accident that had occurred sometime earlier.

No peer education on AIDS in state

BOISE — Letting teen-agers educate each other about AIDS is an idea gaining a foothold in schools nationwide, but not in Idaho, a special AIDS conference says.

"There's no program currently being implemented in the schools," said Anne Williamson, HIV-AIDS health-education consultant for the Idaho Department of Education.

There's been talk of peer counseling, Williamson said. In Idaho, only one teen-ager is recorded as having AIDS. Five others are positive for the HIV virus.

Perot, Crapo, Kempthorne win student vote

BOISE (AP) — Idaho was among only five states where students gave Texas billionaire Ross Perot a victory over President Bush and Democrat Bill Clinton in a national mock presidential election.

Voting Thursday by 12,595 Idaho first- through 12th-grade students, coordinated by the Secretary of State's office at more than 50 schools, found support for Perot's independent candidacy from 4,722, or 37.5 percent.

Bush was backed by eight fewer students — 4,714, 37.4 percent. Democrat Bill Clinton was a distant third with only 2,347 votes, 18.6 percent, and independent candidate Bo Grizz got 417 or 3.3 percent.

The National Student-Parent Mock Election

Ballot, sponsored by the Justice Department and a number of private companies, found Clinton outdistanced Bush overall by almost 15 percentage points to win nationally.

A smattering of parents were included in some state balloting. But elections spokeswoman Penny Ysursa in the Idaho Secretary of State's office said parents did not participate in the Idaho voting.

In nationwide balloting, it was 2,101,543, or 45 percent, for Clinton to 1,413,916, or 30 percent, for Bush and 1,116,125, or 24 percent, for Perot. Clinton carried 35 states with 459 electoral votes, Bush nine states with 53 electoral votes and Perot five states with 26 electoral votes.

More than 4.6 million students and parents voted in the mock election, which has been held since 1980.

Idaho results also gave Republican Dirk Kempthorne a nearly 2-to-1 victory over Democrat Richard Stallings. The Boise mayor received 7,166 votes to 3,607 for the four-term congressman, a 66.5-percent to 33.5-percent margin for Kempthorne.

And in the 2nd Congressional District, Republican state-Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo out-pollled Democratic state Auditor J.D. Williams 3,126 to 1,368. Two independent candidates received a total of 459 votes.

Idaho students also overwhelmingly opposed the One Percent Initiative to cap property taxes at 1 percent of actual market value, 8,105 to 2,319.

Surplus offers Medicaid hope

BOISE (AP) — Officials faced with the state's $14.3 million deficit in its beleaguered Medicaid program are pleased by the news Idaho is taking in more tax money than expected.

During the first quarter of the fiscal year, the state collected $8 million more than anticipated. Sales taxes led the increase, legislative budget analyst Dick Burns told a Medicaid committee Thursday.

That encouraged former state lawmaker Brent Brooks, who leads a panel trying to find a way to bail out Medicaid. The public health-insurance program for the poor and disabled could go broke in April.

His committee, appointed by lawmakers, is scheduled to issue its findings before Thanksgiving.

Also Thursday, committee members discussed the possibility of taxing health-care providers to raise money for Medicaid. Twenty-six states have a provider tax.

Investment suit decision for Simplot

POCATELLO (AP) — A group of investors headed by J.R. Simplot has won a $28.5 million court judgment against Cloyce K. Box and CKB & Associates Inc. of Dallas, the J.R. Simplot Co. reported Friday.

The verdict was returned Thursday by a federal jury in Texas following a two-month trial. Meanwhile, a state jury in Pocatello began deliberating a civil suit filed the J.R. Simplot Co. against a Canadian company that built one of the phosphate fertilizer company's sulfuric acid plants in 1986.

In Dallas, a federal judgment of $26.3 million was assessed against Box and CKB for past and future damages. Another $2.2 million in punitive damages were assessed against Box.

Simplot said the money would be awarded to Box Energy Corp. and should benefit all shareholders.

The federal jury also found that Box and CKB had engaged in a pattern of racketeering activity under the federal Racketeering, Influence and Corrupt Organization Act. Box is president of Box Energy Corp., which until earlier this year operated under the name OKC Ltd. Partnership, a publicly traded oil and gas business.

The case of Simplot versus Chemetics International of Toronto, Canada, went to a jury Friday.

Lessons from a faraway firebell in the night

I'm home. Never has Idaho looked so good.

For a person who is never homesick, I really missed home. I missed the dusty pickups and cowboy hats, the greeting at the store, my family and friends, I missed the security of our community, our shared experiences, our particular perspective on life. And I realized how vulnerable every community is.

I was one of only two people from Idaho serving in Florida. I met people from all over the U.S., Canada and Latin America. Each of us had an experience uniquely our own. I will remember them a long time and look forward to seeing them at some other Red Cross function. Red Cross is really just an extended family.

But the people I will remember the most are the ones I met and didn't meet who lived there. I didn't meet the local drug kingpin, but I remember him well. I watched him daily conducting business next door, and he watched me. We would know each other anywhere.

I did meet the children who still looked afraid, I met the parents who needed help and also looked afraid. I met the relief workers from every agency and organization you can think of. And they looked afraid too. Afraid that what they were doing was just not enough, and there weren't enough hours or enough dollars to ever do enough.

Never have I seen so much destruction and so much concentrated misery. This was the first Level VI disaster we have ever had. It was a daily dose of heartbreak. I knew sometime I would come home; for them, this was home. And my three weeks seemed like three years.

One of my assignments was to get local volunteers to help us. It is not easy asking someone who has lost everything to give more. But I did ask and they did give of themselves. And they did it with regrets. I think especially of Pierre, who needed a job so much. He apologized for having to take time to go look for work. But he came every day to help, even before he was able to be paid. For him, the population at large who assumed that Red Cross had lots of money to pay people and were very surprised to learn that most people were volunteers.

I remember Olga, who came from Miami every day and probably will not move back to Homestead. I remember Ethel, who came from Atlanta, and Laura, who came from St. Croix. And I remember Pastor Martin, who tried to do something — anything — to help.

Ruth Young Letter home

I think of our clients who would come and sit for hours, waiting and never complaining. We worked with FEMA and most people qualified for grants from them as well as our vouchers to supply emergency foods, clothing, furniture and bedding. Sometimes people would bring back our vouchers saying they didn't feel right about accepting them when they had FEMA money. Sometimes they would go to 10 different Red Cross service centers and apply for aid at each one. I met good people and bad people, most just trying to put their lives together again any way they could.

I was most impressed by the inner strength of people. Most had little before the hurricane, and nothing afterwards. Yet they bore this loss with dignity. In our heavily Haitian Creole area, we found full churches on Sunday, even if the church had no roof on it. The one set of extra clothes we gave them vouchers for was often something for church. Sacred Heart Church was destroyed, so Father Jean Pierre used it as a warehouse, and held church elsewhere. The newly formed lines on his face and pain in his eyes bore mute testimony to the suffering of his congregation.

And every day a little progress was made. The Army Corps of Engineers was in charge of removing debris. They would work hard every day taking trash away, the next day there would be more. The huge geographical area affected is one reason progress was so slow. There is only so much you can take in a day.

Every power line and phone line had to be restrung, and yet we had power and phones in the center only three weeks after the storm. It was a great help when the spotlights were hooked up one by one. The Army and National Guard helped with traffic control, but they have mostly gone now. There were few accidents, though, since everyone became used to four-way stops everywhere. Just getting from there to town now required detours for many weeks.

You can tell things are returning to normal. City Hall is now closed on Sunday. The Army has vacated the library and school is in session. There is no football team this year; too many kids have moved away, and besides the tents on the field have turned it to mud.

But publishers are sending new books to the library and to the schools that somehow survived. The free clinics are closed, the doctors from all over the country have gone home. The bank is open; but the lines are long and the wait endless.

Now, however, the worst homelessness is just beginning. Many left right after the storm to go live with family or friends or to start a new life elsewhere. The condemned houses are being bulldozed, one by one, each time taking the last shred of a home where people lived and loved.

But I am left with the sense that South Florida will survive. It will never be the same. People have died and lives have changed. But these are great people and determined people. The cleanup

I started these letters home for several reasons. I wanted the people here to have some idea of what had happened. I didn't want to scare people, but I wanted them to be aware and start preparing for a disaster that could strike us. I was proud to be part of the massive effort the Red Cross is doing and will continue to do. And I know people will continue to donate to the Red Cross Disaster Fund. The next family helped could be yours.

It was a tough assignment, and one I don't want to repeat soon. I hope I can use what I have learned to help the Sawtooth chapter. I would like others to get involved and help with the next disaster, wherever it is. I can guarantee you a very hard and rewarding experience.

Ruth Young, office manager of the Sawtooth Chapter of the American Red Cross, spent three weeks in Homestead, Fla., helping with disaster relief in the wake of Hurricane Andrew. She shared her observations with Times-News readers periodically by fax.

Peavey-Martin race draws top-dollar

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Nine-term state Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, and GOP challenger Elaine Martin, R-Boise, have raised more than $41,000 between them in their battle for the District 21 Senate seat.

Peavey, chairman of the Senate Democratic Caucus and a possible contender for Democratic leader, has raised $22,223 and spent $15,307 through Oct. 19, according to financial disclosure reports filed with the secretary of state's office in Boise.

Martin, a Ketchum resident and former member of Senate staff, had raised $19,159 and spent $16,103 as of Oct. 19, according to the reports.

The third candidate in the race, Libertarian Joseph A. Rotner III, had raised only $640 and spent $568, all but $150 of it his own money, on his campaign.

Most of Peavey's contributions came from individuals and businesses in Ketchum and Sun Valley, although his single largest contributor was David Donovan of Berryville, Va. Donovan gave Peavey $1,000.

Other contributors included Bill and Glenn Janss, former owners of the Sun Valley ski resort ($750), Leonard Harlig, a candidate for Blaine County commissioner ($250), law partners Keith Roark and Michael Donovan ($300), the Idaho Committee on Hospitality and Sports ($500), Coeur d'Alene Mines ($250), and Washington Water Power, Spokane-based utility that sells electricity in northern Idaho ($300).

Peavey, in turn, donated $1,000 each to the election campaigns of Sen. Cynthia Scanlin, D-Boise, and to the Senate campaigns of Boise Democrats Don Lojek and Kelly Buckland.

Martin's campaign is being heavily underwritten by the Idaho Republican Party, which has spent a long-running and mutual feud with Peavey.

The state GOP gave Martin $3,000 in cash and has contributed in-kind services valued at $5,426, and the Senate State Affairs Club kicked in an additional $1,500.

In addition, Sen. Joyce McRoberts of Twin Falls and Rep. Maxine Bell of Jerome each gave Martin $100, and former legislators Donna Scott of Twin Falls, Mack Nébar of Paul and Tom Morrison of Gooding have contributed to Martin's campaign.

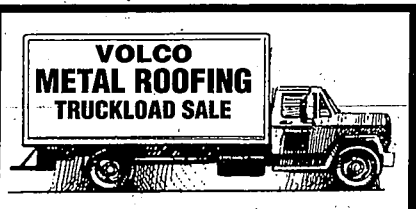

Her other contributors include Jim Cimino of Sun Valley ($1,500), Boise

Cascade Corp. ($300), West One Bancorp ($250), the Idaho Farm Bureau's political arm ($500), and the conservative PAC 5 ($200). Martin has loaned her campaign $175.

In another District 21 race, Rep. Patie Nafziger, D-Wendell reported raising $165 in small contributions between June 2 and Oct. 22.

Nafziger, who faces only write-in candidate Tim Meyer in her quest for the District 21B House seat, said she spent no money during the reporting period.

Lincoln County sheriff race mirrors primary

Swenson: Promote better relations with counties

Southwick: Lack of finances hampers department

By Pat Voloshen
Times-News correspondent

RICHFIELD — Timothy Swenson said he wishes to promote a better relationship with Lincoln County residents and throughout the sheriff's department.

A Republican, Swenson is challenging Lincoln County Sheriff Stephen Southwick as a write-in candidate. He lost in the primary by nine votes.

Swenson makes his home in Richfield and since August of 1991, has served as deputy sheriff.

A better working relationship with neighboring counties and the Idaho State Police would improve investigative techniques and patrolling ability, also providing the opportunity for more involvement with area schools, Swenson said.

Swenson said substance abuse is a major problem in Lincoln County,

He said he would like to see the training heightened for deputies, dispatch operators, and other staffers and believes such efforts would have

DIETRICH — Incumbent Lincoln County Sheriff Stephen Southwick said his experience qualifies him to continue improvements in the law enforcement office that faces its own battles — it operates on one of the smallest budgets in the Magic Valley area.

Southwick was appointed sheriff nearly a year ago by Lincoln County commissioners after the death of Sheriff Darwin Mills in November 1991.

The Republican won the primary after being challenged in the primary election by Deputy Sheriff Tim Swenson — and won by a slim nine votes. Swenson is continuing his challenge of Southwick as a Republican write-in in the Nov. 3 election.

Southwick said one of the biggest problems facing Lincoln County is lack of finances, something he doesn't see easily remedied.

Lincoln County employee wages are some of the lowest in the state, he said. The department suffers because it isn't able to hold onto employees, losing dispatchers to other jobs with less responsibility and higher pay.

Southwick also said he would like to see better working relations with city law enforcement.

Southwick said he has made substantial contributions to the office such as improving the efficiency of the processing and service of papers, and improved communications.

He feels that his leadership experience is an asset that has prepared

If 1% passes, chief proponent wouldn't implement it as written BOISE (AP) — The chief legislative proponent of the One Percent Initiative said if the property tax limitation measure passes on Tuesday, he would not support implementing it exactly as written.

The One Percent Initiative as it is now is just a broad policy statement," state Sen. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, said Thursday night after an hour-long debate broadcast statewide on Idaho Public Television.

But two critics said Hawkins' admission showed the plan to limit property taxes to 1 percent of actual market value would create incalculable problems for legislators and local leaders.

"His initiative raises far more questions than it answers," said Jim Weatherly, director of the public affairs program at Boise State University.

In fact, Hawkins said if the initiative passes he already plans to introduce a bill next year to reduce the vote it requires for approval of property tax increases.

The initiative, slipping further behind in voter approval in two new polls released Thursday, requires support for tax hikes from two-thirds of all qualified voters in a taxing district. Hawkins said he would make it two-thirds of the voters actually casting ballots — the most stringent requirement in current law and one often still missed in local tax elections.

He said he might even support major increases subject to simple majority approval in a general election if the change came along with more sweeping tax and election reform, including consolidation of voting dates and full state financing of maintenance and operation for local schools.

"We need reform in the area first of all taxation. We need reform in the area of the way we fund schools. We need election reform," Hawkins said during the debate sponsored by the Idaho Press Club.

"I don't think there's any question about the initiative is going to require some work to get it implemented should it pass."

But Idaho Property Owners Association President Ron Rankin, who joined Hawkins at the debate on behalf of the initiative, discounted the difficulty of implementation and said the two-thirds approval requirement was intended "to make it as close to impossible as possible" to raise property taxes.

Stallings knows the facts

I could swear I heard President Bush say that he was fully supportive of the North American Trade Agreement during the Oct. 19 debate.

Yet in October during "Viewpoint," a show on Channel 7, Dirk Kempthorne said that the president has not accepted it as is. I was under the impression that the legislation was negotiated by the president and lobbied for by him.

Richard Stallings has said from the beginning that he opposes the agreement, because of what it would do to Idaho's farmers.

1. For one, will be voting for a man who knows the facts, Richard Stallings.

Stallings aids potato farmers

As a farmer in the Magic Valley, I would like to encourage people to support Rep. Richard Stallings in the Senate. He has been helpful to us in the potato industry by supporting the Market Promotion Plan to help expand our export markets. For example, since 1982 we have gone from 39,000 metric tons of frozen product to a high of 150,000 metric tons in Japan alone. So it is imperative that we keep someone in office in Washington, D.C., that understands the needs of Idaho farmers.

I highly recommend for the people of Magic Valley to exercise their right to vote and to do so on Nov. 3. Remember, if you don't vote, you have no right to complain about the situation of government.

Who gets the scholarships?

According to Rep. Stallings' latest ads, his main claim to fame is that he did not vote himself a pay raise. He should know better than anyone what he is worth. During my salary days, I thought I was worth more than I was being paid and would have voted to raise my salary on numerous occasions.

If I remember correctly, when we started paying the congressman this salary increase, he announced that he was going to put the money into scholarships. This is after he cleaned up some personal debts that had accumulated.

Where are these scholarships? Rep. Stallings' background is as a professor at a privately owned Ricks College in Rexburg, Idaho. Are these scholarships equally available to everyone regardless of race, color or religion?

Congressman serves citizens

I'm not a Democrat, but I am going to vote for Richard Stallings for U.S. senator. Why?

Between 1987 and 1990, I was state editor of the newsletter for Delta Kappa Gamma, a women's teachers' honorary. A postal bigwig from Salt Lake City arrived in 1989 to audit our second-class postal permit. He insisted that we owed $307.04 in back postage from 1986 to 1989. I contested the decision, asking how can we owe back postage when the post office calculated the mailing charges which we always paid.

Delta Kappa Gamma's budget could have been devastated by $307 since we are a non-profit organization raising scholarship money for teachers to further their education.

I visited Richard Stallings' Twin Falls office with copies of all necessary papers - thinking he would probably not bother with my little problem. I was very surprised to receive a letter from Mr. Stallings saying he had talked to postal officials in Washington, D.C. About a month later, I received another letter from Mr. Stallings with a copy of a letter from the postal service saying, "... further review found that postage revenues were not deficient, but actually exceeded costs by $41,597." (This amount was deducted from our next mailing.)

Can you ask for anything better than that? Richard Stallings "went to bat" for our organization, so I'll "go to bat" for him. Vote for Richard Stallings on Nov. 3. He cares about you.

Kempthorne weak on issues

I have watched the debates between Kempthorne and Stallings.

I have yet to hear or see anything from Kempthorne on the issues of this campaign or what has to be done to correct the problems facing this country.

On the other hand, Stallings talks intelligently of the issues and what has to be done to correct the problems facing this country.

All I have heard from "Symms' clone" is the same negative and sleazy campaign; and no wonder, Kempthorne is using Symms' staff and money to wage his campaign.

What Idaho doesn't need is another Symms in the U.S. Senate.

Richard Stallings needs and deserves your vote on Nov. 3.

Kempthorne not consistent

I have become very confused about Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne's position on foreign aid. I believe that the press has not done the citizens of Idaho a very good service by letting the mayor get by with double talk on this important issue.

The mayor said during a debate in Twin Falls that he would not support any foreign aid. This was important as it was about the final issue which the mayor has taken a firm stand on. Unfortunately, it didn't last long.

The Idaho Post Register soon thereafter reported that Mr. Kempthorne had sent a letter to the American Israeli Political Action Committee and told them that he not only supported continued economic aid, but military aid as well.

What is the mayor's position with the opposing statements, Mr. Kempthorne's press secretary said that if you looked very closely at the wording of the letter to AIPAC, it said that while the mayor supported foreign aid it didn't say that he would vote for it.

Again, unfortunately, the Idaho press hardly reported this to you at all.

Well, Mr. Mayor, I hope you look closely at your support in the Senate race. Just because someone says that they support you doesn't mean that they will vote for you.

Stallings represents all of Idaho

Of course Boise and the rest of Ada County would like to have their own U.S. senator. They already have a thriving, growing economy, a well-funded university and a tax base that is the envy of the rest of the state. Now they'd like to send their own mayor to Washington to represent them in the U.S. Senate.

But Idaho's farming industry, natural resources, (mining and mining industries are not in Ada County. Neither is the vast majority of the population. Idaho needs and deserves a U.S. senator that will represent all of Idaho, not just one county.

Richard Stallings has spent the best part of the last decade representing all of Idaho in the U.S. House of Representatives and has served the entire state of Idaho well. The Boise mayor's advertisements do not criticize Richard Stallings' voting record. Most Idaho people agree with his voting record. They don't criticize his character because most Idahoans know Richard Stallings is a man of integrity.

The Boise mayor's advertisements reflect a slick advertising campaign which attempts to show the mayor as a handsome outsider.

Let's hope the voters of Idaho don't take the bait. In January we need Richard Stallings, the senator from Idaho, not Dirk Kempthorne, the senator from Ada County.

Thanks go to Stallings

I am writing this letter as a thanks to Congressman Richard Stallings and his aid Charles Barnes.

While I was working overseas, I met and married a woman from Trinidad and Tobago. A few days after the wedding I had to return to Twin Falls, she decided to call some of the government offices to see what help they would offer.

Gloria had to make three phone calls before anyone even offered to help. Her first call was to the office of Sen. Steve Symms, and her second call was to McClure's office. The response from both offices were "We cannot help at all. It is your problem. You will have to work it out the best you can."

The third phone call was to the office of Congressman Richard Stallings. They said they could and would help in any way they could. Stallings' office sent letters, called the American Embassy in Trinidad, and the Naturalization Service to find out what could be done to expedite the process and get her to the United States. Stallings and Barnes were there every step of the way and stuck with it until Sita was in Twin Falls, Idaho. They didn't stop there either. It is time for me to file the petition to have the conditional statute removed from Sita's visa, and Stallings' office is helping again.

Richard Stallings is the only elected official that would even lift a finger to help. As I see it Richard Stallings is a man that cares about the individuals of Idaho and he is not too busy even during election to continue to help an individual. My family and I would just like to say thank you and keep up the good work.

Kempthorne plays politics

Dirk Kempthorne is campaigning for the U.S. Senate on a theme of a change from the status quo in Washington D.C. His ads are filled with all kinds of promises to make elected officials more accountable to the people, exactly the kind of thing people want to hear. However his record as a student body president at the University of Idaho in the mid-1970s shows Kempthorne can play politics as usual with the best of them.

Kempthorne was elected in 1974 and began his term as Moscow's top politician. He was proud of it. Once in office, he went on record as opposing any student fee increases, saying "I do not feel this is the time for it to come about." This, of course, is the kind of thing college students want to hear.

Unfortunately Kempthorne's "no fee increases" pledge was nothing more than hot air. In September of the same year, Kempthorne reversed his position, supporting a 14 percent hike in student fees.

Later in the year, he requested a $1,075 travel allowance to attend regent's meetings despite the fact university policy at the time was to exclude the ASU president from attending the meetings in the first place.

According to an April 26, 1974 editorial in the Argonaut, Kempthorne and the ASU vice president at the time, Rick Smith, gave different justifications for the allowance.

Smith said the money was to insure another ASU officer's presence at the meetings, while Kempthorne claimed the money wasn't for regent's meetings at all, but for other meetings such as the Big Sky Conference meeting. This from the man who was to "put Washington right?"

Given his record as a young politician in training at the U of I, is this really the man we want as our U.S. senator to put Washington right? On the contrary, it would seem Kempthorne would fit right in with the status quo there.

Kempthorne will deliver

Recent letters to the editor have talked about how Rep. Stallings could do a better job of serving Idaho in the U.S. Senate than Mayor Kempthorne. The argument is that his congressional experience and a Democrat makes him a better choice. I have a contrary opinion.

Consider this scenario. Stallings is elected and he goes to Washington and talks to Sen. Mitchell who is the president of the Senate and a Democrat.

Stallings asks to be appointed to at least the agriculture and interior committees. Sen. Mitchell says fine, but you will vote on our taxing and spending plans? Oh! I've promised the Idaho voters to vote the conservative plan; no taxes and reduced spending. Great, you keep your promises to the voters and you'll not be either the agriculture or interior committees!

Now consider the scenario if Mayor Kempthorne is elected. He will report to Sen. Dole, the Republican leader, with the same request to be on the agricultural and interior committees. Sen. Dole will ask how Kempthorne will vote on the conservative agenda of reducing taxes and spending. Kempthorne replies that that's exactly what I've promised the voters. Thanks Kempthorne! You'll be on both the agriculture and interior committees.

Both candidates have promised to reduce taxes, spending and government regulation, etc., only Kempthorne can deliver on those promises. Stallings will be hostage to the agenda of the East Coast tax-and-spend liberals.

If national issues matter to you and well they should, then vote for Kempthorne for U.S. senator!

Stallings strong on health care

Citizens interested in selecting the candidate for U.S. Senate most likely to promote practical health and medical care reforms for Idahoans will vote for Richard Stallings.

Rep. Stallings demonstrated his concern regarding the need for more accessible, affordable quality health and medical care long before it became topical. He and his staff have spent many hours visiting health and medical care facilities around Idaho, listening to people, and recording ideas and opinions from numerous providers and recipients of health-related services.

Registered nurses in Idaho have worked together with Richard Stallings during his terms in Congress to assist him in educating lawmakers in Washington D.C. about the realities of health care in a rural state like Idaho.

Richard Stallings does not shy away from doing the unglamorous but important hard work of research before making a decision. Then, after taking a position on an issue, he remains open-minded about evaluating new evidence. Stallings combines this thorough, common-sense approach to problem solving with genuine compassion for people, and a willingness to work with people of diverse personalities and political persuasions. These characteristics are significant qualifications for anyone attempting reforms in our complicated health/medical care system.

As a nurse, I know that in order to rehabilitate a body, whether it be a person or an institution like Congress, it is necessary first to support what is working well before trying to correct dysfunctions. Richard Stallings has worked well with members of both political parties in Congress and with fellow Idahoans. He has served his state effectively and earnestly to work with people of diverse personalities and political persuasions. These characteristics are significant qualifications for anyone attempting reforms in our complicated health/medical care system.

Vote to send Stallings to the U.S. Senate to continue his efforts to make our government healthier for us all.
MARDO EATON, RN

Stallings means independence

What are politicians? They are a maligned breed, most often with good cause: ambitious, self-serving, and deceitful. It is rare when you find a politician today who is a true public servant, someone who listens and represents you. We have one in Idaho, and if the polls are correct, we might let him slip away. How can we let that happen?

Richard Stallings has worked his way up in the U.S. Congress since 1984, not by holding the party line, but by being "as independent as Idaho." His conservative, thoughtful and intelligent approach has earned much respect, in contrast to the flamboyant and embarrassing behavior of former Idaho politicians in Washington.

We are now victims of another flamboyant, big-bucks campaign for the U.S. Senate. The typical political machine in action. Our retiring senator has hand-picked a successor, Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne. I can't imagine anything more presumptuous in a democratic government. It's more like a monarchy where an unqualified, undeserving person can take over just by virtue of birth.

Dirk Kempthorne does not have the experience, he has not paid his dues, and he has not earned the right to be our senator. If you really want a change in government, don't fall into this political trap.

Richard Stallings is a decent, honest, person who truly cares about our needs. He works on issues. He refuses to play the political game. Richard will restore the respect Idaho has lost in the U.S. Senate. He will not embarrass us or insult our intelligence by skulking around the halls of Congress playing Candid Camera with his sneakers.

Don't be fooled by the media, by advertising campaigns, by the powerful machine that tries to control Idaho politics. Vote for a statesman, not a politician; Richard Stallings.
JUDE HAWKES

Stallings takes strong stands

There is one man in the Idaho Senate race who is a change from the same old thing. Even though it may cost him some support here and there, Richard Stallings isn't afraid to stand up and be counted. His opponent, Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne, avoids taking a position on almost every issue just like typical politicians.

Richard Stallings has voted for campaign finance reform, because he knows there needs to be a change in the system so the people can reclaim their government. The mayor has said nothing about how he would change the system.

Richard Stallings has raised his own pay more than $20,000, just like the other politicians. Richard Stallings voted against the pay raise, and has given more than $100,000 to Idaho scholarships. That is not like the typical politician.

I am voting for change, and I am voting for Richard Stallings.

Slick ad conceals the truth

There is a fairly slick political advertisement, a negative advertisement, concerning a free-spending Congress and the people who have been employed there. Unfortunately, Congress does deserve a great deal of our collective ire concerning fiscal irresponsibility or down right self-serving spending. It is obvious that there are grave problems in Washington, which makes a wonderful whipping post.

And, however, that is individualistic, anti-government "folk" in Idaho love to focus beyond our own back yard when the problem has gone on right here by those who are pointing their fingers at Washington.

Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne somehow order to get another job, the representative from Idaho's 2nd District, neglects his own congressman not only voted against his pay raise but gave it back to the people by acts of scholarships.

Further, while the mayor of Boise decided to take a leave of absence from his job in order to get another job, the representative from Idaho's 2nd District, neglects his own fulfilling his obligations to his constituents.

I guess if you cannot run against an individual's record of accomplishments, you find out what the voters perceive to be the problems of government, regardless of your own involvement with those problems. You paint a deceptive portrait, neglect your own shortcomings and pray that the people will not find out the truth.

Symms draws little praise

In reading my favorite part of The Times-News, the opinion page, on Oct. 28, I was impressed with the editorials which put the election in focus so well. Also, the letter from Karen McCall and Jim Dutcher from Sun Valley was right on target in my opinion — re: no need for another Symms. It brought to my mind a little article in Time magazine on Oct. 19 in its Grapevine Column under the heading, "How's that again?" and read, in part: "As Congress wrapped up its business last week, effusive farewells were given for senators and congressmen who will not be returning to Capitol Hill. Some kudos fell a little flat. Then the article went on to lambast Congressman Bill Danneberg, followed by this: 'Sen. Steve Symms, praised for bravely defending the rights of gun owners, is notable for little else.'"

Imagine that after 12 years, and he is sponsoring Kempthorne to replace him. Kempthorne says it's time for "change," and hence — not replacing Symms with Stallings is the "change" we need. Symms for Secretary of the Interior? I hope not.

Stallings lets farmers down

I wonder how Richard Stallings can stand before us and consistently say he is pro-farmer with his constant barrage of taxpayer-funded mailings.

That fact is that since being elected to Congress, he has shown a downward trend on his support for agriculture.

As an example, in 1986, Richard supported 86 percent of the legislation supported by the Farm Bureau. In 1992, his support of Farm Bureau-supported legislation has slipped to 50 percent.

How can you say you are for agriculture's best interests, Richard? You talk a good story and you make headlines with your pet high-profile causes while, in fact, you are consistently undermining our very way of life.

I am supporting Dirk Kempthorne for a consistent, responsible voice in the U.S. Senate.

Say no to Stallings, PACs

Third-voter wants and deserves change in Washington, D.C. This election, Idahoans have an opportunity to effect that change.

Richard Stallings has abandoned his House seat in a race for a non-constitutional position. His voting record is not one that is representative of most Idahoans. The bulk of his money comes from out-of-state political action committees that really do not care about Idaho. If Richard Stallings can't say "no" to the PACs, then we, the voters, can!

On Nov. 3, vote for Dirk Kempthorne, whose money comes from Idaho. Dirk Kempthorne has an impressive agenda for less government at a critical time when people know that's the only way we're going to be able to address our serious deficit problem.

Third-voter chance to make a real change.

We can count on Kempthorne

In 1990 when Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait, the largest coalition of countries ever united in history joined together to stop him. This coalition, which was represented by leaders from both the free world and communist nations, knew that the stability of the world was at stake. Hussein, literally one man, possessed the ability of disruption of the Middle East oil supply and of jeopardizing world peace by finalizing his nuclear capabilities.

Richard Stallings, who had only a fraction of the information available to the world leaders, voted not to support Hussein. I thought that he knew more than the largest group of world leaders every united for one cause.

Lack of intervention would have threatened the stability of the world. We need a responsible voice in the U.S. Senate.

Stallings brags too much

Frankly, I am tired of Richard Stallings gloating and bragging about the fact that he is giving money to tax-deductible charities, whether it is for scholarships or anything else. Anyone who would like to ask Steve Symms or Larry Craig would find that they "quidly" give a great deal of money to charity.

A huge gift is one given quietly from the heart, not one that is "exploited" or bragged about. Richard Stallings' constant bragging about what he describes as gifts displays a totally self-serving campaign play and arrogance which is not appropriate and personally has public service at heart.

Symms' charges not true

On Tuesday, Oct. 13, Times-News, Sen. Symms was reported as blasting Congressman Stallings for opposing the North American Free Trade Agreement and implied that Stallings was improperly misquoting the sugarbeet growers about NAFTA to get elected.

Senator, you know very well that these concerns are not only Congressman Stallings' but that of the entire domestic sugar industry from Florida to Hawaii. If you disagree with this and feel that NAFTA is structured to protect the sugar industry, as you suggest, why did you feel it necessary to sign onto a letter to U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills and Secretary Madigan along with 27 other senators warning them that failure to change the sugar section could jeopardize the Senate approval for NAFTA?

The sugar industry is very appreciative of Congressman Symms' unending efforts while serving on the subcommittee on cotton, rice and sugar, as well as Sen. Craig's work as co-chairman on the Senate Sweetener Caucus and your help on behalf of the Idaho Sugarbeet Growers; but please, senator, stop trying to confuse and mislead the growers by playing politics with our livelihood.

America needs Gritz

Can you remember a time of so much unrest, distrust, confusion in our national government? In general, most people think we've been had. There is little hope. The Constitution is hanging by a thread.

James "Bo" Gritz comes forth as a shining light, bringing new hope that our Constitution and our freedoms may be preserved.

It is time to "wake up" with the understanding that if we don't save the Constitution from the dangers that threaten it, we will have a lot more change of government than we want. That is the kind we Bo Gritz supporters don't want.

If you Clinton, Bush and Perot supporters want this kind of change, then vote for one of them. Then when things start going wrong, don't come back and tell us "we didn't know." You all have been given the chance to try to fix it.

There have been articles in the paper with phone numbers to call. There have been numerous meetings to attend. It's been on the radio 1400 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day and 580 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day. It will be on KMTV Saturday (Oct. 31) at 3:30 or 4 p.m. directly following any game that may be on.

Will any of the other three sign a performance agreement that says if he does not do what he says in his campaign speech, we the American people can fire him?

For a change, let's take America back to its roots. Let's elect Bill Clinton. He will be easy, but together, we can do it. Vote Bo Gritz for president and Cy Minnett, vice president.

Gritz will make us proud

Have you wondered why there are more letters to the editor in favor of Bo Gritz than any other candidate? Were you surprised with the KMTV-KIDD (of Idaho Falls)-AT&T poll when the results were Gritz, 35 percent; Bush, 28 percent; Clinton, 22 percent; and Perot, 15 percent?

Do you ever wonder why this patriot has to offer that the politicians lack?

There is going to be a Bo Gritz special on KMTV, Saturday, Oct. 31 at 3:30 p.m. to give you an opportunity to learn what this man has to offer — the common sense method of turning America back to the kind of country we ever so very proud of.

This is your chance to educate yourself before you cast your vote for the lesser of the three evils.

DONNA HUNTER

Choose a righteous president

It seems all you hear these days is if I can do it, vote for the lesser of two evils. We as a nation have been misled. These candidates are normal or standard procedure or just the things way are.

If you check your spiritual history, you will find that whenever the people chose a wicked king, the people suffered. If they chose a righteous king, the people prospered. Ask yourself if Bush, Clinton or Perot fit the righteous category or the wicked category. I haven't heard any of them express any religious interest at all.

We all know that the Constitution of the United States was an inspired document as those people testified. These candidates have led their citizens out of their lives, which is a disgrace to anyone who is running for the highest office of our land, which we all know was set under divine help.

Col. James Gritz professes his Christianity in every greeting and every videotape I have seen or been to. He realizes that our creator is our real king. He uses scriptural examples to explain his platform and how we got where we are today.

Let's be true patriots of our creator and true patriots to our United States. Remember with righteous kings, the people prosper. Don't I hope you longer.

Arkansas is proud of Clinton

Life in Mountain Home, Ark., where Bill Clinton meant no kindergarten or Head Start, a distressed economy, and no hope for a brighter future for the people of Arkansas, has been a success since he moved there in 1977.

Yes there was a sense of a quality of life of being "home," that I never felt before in the suburbs of Chicago, the desert of New Mexico, update New York, or Lansing, Mich.

That feeling of quality was intensified when I saw Bill Clinton shake my hand while campaigning at the Baxter County Fair and asked me to vote for him for governor. His face held all the hope and promise of a better Arkansas, the same face with our only hope for a better America.

Well, I voted for Bill Clinton that year and every term thereafter, until I moved to Twin Falls in 1990.

Under Bill Clinton's leadership, I watched Mountain Home grow from a small, poor town of about 1,500 people to a thriving community, abundant with retirees from every state of the country.

With Gov. Clinton at the helm, over half of all high school graduates go on to college. Because of Bill Clinton's leadership, the number of manufacturing jobs in Arkansas grew 10 times the national average.

People in Arkansas are very proud of their state and of their governor. Let's join together and bring that hope and promise to Idaho and to America and elect Bill Clinton as the next president of the United States.

Democrats' legislation harmful

I think that it is important for Idaho voters to have a preview of the type of legislation that they can expect to see if they put a Democrat in the White House and place Democrats in control of both houses of Congress.

The legislation I am referring to is entitled "Leave Them Care Family Security Act of 1992," and is further identified as HR-4848. This bill was written by the session of Congress that just adjourned. Its sponsor in the House is Congressman Gephardt and the sponsor in the Senate is Sen. Mitchell. The bill contains 233 pages and 4,766 lines of text.

Hidden in the maze of law are 20 lines that dramatically change the inheritance tax coverage. While today's law exempts the first $600,000 of assets, the new law would lower the exemption to $200,000. All assets in excess would be taxed at rates of 32 percent to 53 percent.

It doesn't take much imagination to see how many small farm owners, homeowners and business owners would be affected. When an inflation factor is added, more people will be hit as the years progress.

This law was never debated or passed as the leadership of the Democratic-controlled Congress realized that President Bush would veto it.

Instead, they chose to hold it until the new Congress convenes with what they hope will be a Democratic president. Then they will pass it and the president will sign it and it will be the law. You and I will have to pass along to your children or to a favorite charity will be seized by the federal government for redistribution to special interest groups.

The choice is yours. Vote Nov. 3 to protect your right to control what will benefit from the assets you have acquired by your hard work.

Voting for Gritz helps Clinton

Interested Bo Gritz supporters! It's been an attention campaign. You've made your point. But now it's time to come down out of the clouds and face reality. Which is the fact that a vote for Gritz is a vote for Clinton, Seary, but true.

Let's face it. Gritz doesn't have a snowball's chance to win this election. He probably won't get even his home state. So plan to vote for him to make a statement, right? Sorry, but statements don't put men in the Whitehouse.

I will be the first to admit that our slate of candidates is pathetic, but one of them is going to be president. The only sensible thing to do is vote for the man who can do the least damage but still have a reasonable chance to win.

George Bush is a long way from what you like about Bo Gritz, but compared to Bill Clinton, he's fantastic. Bush inherited an economy that has been rotting since the Roosevelt period. Clinton has lots of ideas of how to fix it, but every one of them involves more deficit spending which is the whole problem in the first place.

Bush doesn't like abortion. Clinton and Gold deserves appreciation

I want to thank Larry Gold for the job he has done in Jerome County as county sheriff. He has been fair and has improved the office during his term of office. He has put in long hours in service to this county.

We should be very grateful for his experience, professionalism and concern for the citizens of Jerome County.

Does Silver obey the law?

The letter written by Dan Sulr, treasurer for George Silver III, claims that Larry Gold has two different treasurers on his political signs and then accuses him of not upholding the law.

I personally saw signs for Pee Wee without any disclaimer at all and one attached to a highway sign (one mile south of Jerome) and another in the highway right-of-way (two miles east of Jerome). These incidents violate the law.

Does being the chief of police in Jerome County excuse "Pee Wee" from obeying the law?

So let's face it, folks. Since Gritz can't win, your vote for him is one less vote for Bush, which is the same as a vote for Clinton or Perot. Perot certainly is for increased abortion and gun control.

Jerome sheriff

Gold is only qualified candidate

Why have we heard so many negative comments about our sheriff prior to Election Day?

It is true the person who is making the most waves will have conflicts. Anyone in a leadership position that is doing their job well is going to make a few enemies.

Especially in law enforcement where there are arrests and convictions.

Maybe those who are not in the news at this time have not stirred the water enough to make a wave but have been content to let things be at a standstill or coast-by.

But the resume of Sheriff Gold next to any of his opponents, and anyone voting for the right reasons can clearly see that Gold is the only man with the true qualifications to lead our growing community.

Times are changing. Our town needs more than a small-town education on crime. We need an experienced and educated man as our sheriff.

On Nov. 3, we can only hope that the citizens of Jerome can band together and unitedly vote for Sheriff Larry Gold, a man who will continue his programs on drug and crime to protect us and our children in the "ever-changing future."

BRIAN AND RANEE CAPPS

Thank you, Larry Gold

So you want the people of Jerome County to end the law enforcement turmoil by electing Sheriff Silver and ousting Sheriff Gold. Thanks for the advice, but no thanks.

Things were quiet in law enforcement in our county for years. No controversy, no complaints, no action. It was quiet, but not because everyone was happy with the service we were receiving. It was quiet because it didn't do it for the people.

Sheriff Gold had it quiet for the first year of his term. Quiet because we were all watching — watching to see if he could be trusted, watching to see if our complaints would bring action. When we found out things were indeed going to be different, we started to come forward and we have not been disappointed.

The people of Jerome County wanted a revolution in law enforcement and we got it. The people of Jerome County don't mind the turmoil and controversy because we've seen results.

What kind of people do you think we were anyway? Do you think we will abandon a good man who has done more for our county in four years than was done in a decade because of some controversy?

You may be willing to ignore all the good that has been done in favor of a little quiet, but we aren't. We've had the quiet that Mr. Silver represents. We'll make our noise at the polls.

Thank you, Larry Gold.

Gold worth more in Jerome

Let's talk law enforcement budgets. Jerome County Sheriff's Department had Budget 1992: Total budget $4,337 (Does not include DARE which is funded by a grant); employs 21 people; provides service to 16,000 citizens; patrols 600 square miles; processes 750 civil papers per year; issues 6,200 driver's licenses per year; gives driver's tests to 5,100 people per year; runs a jail and serves 34,000 meals per year at an average cost of $53 per meal; provides dispatching for City and County officers; Jerome ambulance, and 911 service.

Sheriff Gold accomplished all this and still turned money back each year.

Jerome City Police Department Budget 1992: Total budget $424,945; employs 12 people; patrols four square miles; serves 6,000 people; no civil paper processing; no driver's licenses responsibilities; no driver test responsibilities; no jail.

I think we have the best value for our money in Sheriff Gold.

Reconsider Silver

For several days now, I have been reading the letters in the newspaper about how wonderful George "Pee Wee" Silver is, and have had enough.

A while back, I wrote a letter about a dog that was driven from a home and destroyed while no one was there. My friends that this happened to were told by the dog catcher that the man who gave the order was Chief Silver. Obviously he has no values.

Is this the man you really want to vote for? If I lived in your county, I would choose another man.

Interview draws response

It bothers me that the mayor of Hagerman, Jim Marlin, did not tell the truth in his interview with KMVT on Friday, Oct. 23.

Wednesday while in the post office, my wife heard the mayor tell several people that "we don't have to build the drinking water, there is no problem and never was."

In my mind, it's not that he's right or wrong. I want to know why the devil's just admit that he spoke too soon? It would have been a statesman-like position for him to take and he'd have lost nothing.

I recently voted for Jim in the recall election, and I'd like to hear him admit that he now made two mistakes in public and clear the air.

I have known Steve to be extremely honest and above reproach. He is always willing to work above and beyond the call of duty for the people of Lincoln County. He has

Ignore rumors, smears

I worked with Steve Southwick in the sheriff's office for eight years and have known Steve for 12 years.

Steve has worked hard for the county and has improved and upgraded the sheriff's office in many ways, doing so on his own time.

Since the primary, I have heard many rumors but have chosen not to pass them on, but have tried to ignore them, realizing that they were started as a smear campaign. I figured Steve would be short lived. But it seems as though the more hurtful the rumors or lies are the harder they die.

Steve isn't one to try and hurt anyone even when he has information that could help his campaign. But he wouldn't use smear tactics if he knew the facts would be hurtful.

I hope the people of Lincoln County will stick to facts they know and not listen to the hurtful and mean lies and rumors being spread for vendetta.

If the citizens of Lincoln County aren't careful, they will have a sheriff that does not have the maturity and experience to keep him from being used as a pawn by people with ulterior motives.

Crapo will clean House

On Tuesday, we have the opportunity to send a representative to Washington who believes as most of us do - that Congress must be changed.

Mike Crapo is a candidate who has provided clear and rational solutions to many of the problems our country faces today. He is aware of the needs of the 2nd District, and he is well-prepared through education, leadership and experience to take our fight to Washington.

Support of Mike Crapo on Tuesday will send a message to Congress that Idaho is ready to "clean the House." Your vote will make a difference.

Back Harlig in Blaine

We, the mayors of Blaine County's four cities, are deeply concerned with the manner in which Blaine County government is being operated. County spending has grown in just three years from $5.3 million to $9 million, an amount greater than the budgets of Ketchum, Sun Valley, Bellevue and Hailey combined.

The citizens we represent make up 67 percent of Blaine County's total population. Two-thirds of all county property taxes are collected within the four cities. Yet, county government consistently ignores the city resident who is taxed for city services and taxed again for county services. City residents need county commissioners who will address the problem of double taxation with an open mind.

We have met publicly with all five candidates and expressed our concerns about fair treatment for you, the city resident. We are pleased with the forthrightness of all five candidates and will work with whoever is elected to make county government more efficient for all taxpayers.

In the two-year race, we are unanimous in support of Len Harlig. Len has more hands-on experience with the problems and processes of county government than the other two candidates combined. His knowledge of county operations and spending is unequalled by any candidate. Len is not committed to any special interest group and has the knowledge, experience and desire to serve the people of this county without distinction.

Without fundamental changes in the attitude of our county commissioners, our city taxpayers will continue to be ignored and poorly served. This county desperately needs the kind of firm, competent leadership that Len Harlig can and will provide.

We appreciate the perspective and personality of Rupert House, but this needs to be balanced with the energy, focus and experience of Len Harlig. We hope the voters will join us in supporting this dedicated and qualified candidate.

Gambling is destructive

What did casino gambling do to Atlantic City, N.J.?

The city's crime rate is the highest in the state, the police budget tripled, 72 percent of high school students gamble, and it brought in organized crime. (Not to mention 59 million state tax dollars paid to regulatory agencies to monitor the city's casinos.) Even video poker games are now called the "Crack of Gambling."

Country forgets religion

After listening to the debates of the three presidential candidates stating what they believe in and stand for, open-ended promises and an over abundance of mudslinging, I am left wondering just where Americans' priorities lie.

Our country was founded on faith in God but, that same God has been removed from our schools, homes, and quite obviously, from our nation. When you see a presidential candidate who is pro-abortion, pro-homosexual, pro-lesbian, stand before the American public and claim to be a Christian, you begin to wonder why Sodom and Gomorrah was destroyed. It was destroyed for the very same reasons that some Christians are supporting.

It is time that the Christians in this country stand back and take a long, hard look at what Christianity stands for, which side they are on, and if their priorities are in their pocket-books or in the moral and ethical values that this country was founded on.

Yesterday we allowed God to be removed from our schools, today we kill the unborn, sanction homosexual activities in our society (and any other godless thing that comes along) and tomorrow we will be sanctioning euthanasia. Then the aged, non-productive and retarded will be "quietly and mercifully" exterminated from our society.

Sodom and Gomorrah could have been spared had they forsaken their ways, but God's judgment fell because they took pleasure in their sins, and it seems to me that there is a very strong similarity between the sins of that city and the sins of our country as it stands today.

We hear these same candidates so glibly say "God Bless America," and one slight alteration should be made. Instead of "God Bless America," it should be "God Help America." God has blessed America and smiled upon it with His love and protection and now we flaunt our godless laws and deeds before our Creator and laugh in His face. How long before we as a nation will be judged as that city of old will?

Vote for Gara Newman

Regarding Gara Newman, candidate for Minidoka County prosecuting attorney:

When searching for the right person to fill a public office, it's our responsibility as voters to check into that person's background, references, education and aptitude to hold the office they are seeking.

It has been my privilege to know the Newhall family for many years. I have found that Gara Newman is an honest person in her dealings with her fellowmen. She has had many years experience in law. Having been a public defender for Minidoka County she is able to see both sides of an issue and will represent Minidoka County well.

Please pledge your vote along

Tragic death appalling

My deepest sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Baruffa. What an absolute hell they must be going through - not knowing what happened to their child.

I don't know how two or three cars could drive by and hit a human being lying in the road and not stop. This to me is appalling.

Hearing on rural fire district boundaries set

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Rural Fire Protection District will hold a public hearing Monday, Nov. 9, to expand the district's current boundaries.

The proposed extensions are as follows:

- Southern boundary from 3600 North intersecting with 3300 East and 2600 East to 3150 North intersecting with 3350 East and 2450 East;

- Western boundary from Snake River where 2600 East intersects to 3600 North moved to Snake River where 2450 East intersects to 3150 North;

- Eastern boundary from the Snake River intersecting with 3300 East to 3600 North moved to Snake River intersecting with 3350 East to 3150 North;

- Northern boundary will be the same; the middle of the Snake River.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. at the main Twin Falls fire station, 345 Second Ave. E.

Hospital board to discuss forming new committee

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center board members will discuss the establishment of a new committee to recommendations new board members at 7 p.m. Monday at the hospital. The public is invited to attend.

Big changes in health care are inevitable regardless of which presidential candidate wins, and it is critical to find strong board members to serve during that reform, hospital Administrator John Bingham said.

Blaine Recreation District elections set for Tuesday

HAYLEY — The Blaine County Recreation District will hold an election for one of its three board of directors positions on Tuesday, Nov. 3, in conjunction with the general election.

Butch Harper, a member of the rec district board since 1978, has decided not to see re-election. Candidates for his replacement to the northern district seat include Keith Perry, Ken Corroek, Ed Lynt and Charlie Noble.

Rec district election personnel will be set up in each of 12 polling sites in Blaine County from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. on election day to distribute and collect ballots.

Cost of dumping tires at Jerome landfill increases

JEROME — Starting Monday, dumping tires at the Jerome County landfill will cost more.

The Jerome County commissioners approved doubling the price recently. Starting next week, it will cost $2 to dump passenger car and pickup tires, $6 for truck tires, $10 for farm implement tires and $300 per ton for earth-moving tires.

The county contracts with Idaho Tire Recovery, Inc. to dispose of scrap tires from the landfill.

Tickets available for Nov. 12 speech by William J. Bennett

TWIN FALLS — Tickets are still available for the Nov. 12 speech by William J. Bennett, who was secretary of Education under President Reagan and "Drug Czar" under President Bush.

Bennett will be speaking at the annual Success Breakfast sponsored by the Twin Falls Chamber Ambassadors and the College of Southern Idaho. The Success Breakfast will be at 7 a.m. at the CSI gym and Bennett's speech will be from 8:30-10:30 a.m. at the Fine Arts Auditorium.

Tickets cost $35 for Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce members and $45 for non-members. For tickets or more information, call 733-2634, extension 272.

R-rated film aired in class stirs criticism

Bliss parents call for written policy

By Suzanne Huxhold — Times-News correspondent

BLISS — Michael Jackson videos aren't what parents want their seventh-graders watching during school time, some concerned Bliss parents say, and they want a policy that will make sure it doesn't happen again.

A letter was sent to Superintendent Wendell Anderson Tuesday, asking that when administrators show movies in school, they follow the same rating guidelines established by the Motion Picture Association of America.

The flap over films at school started after Bliss agriculture instructor Steve Nance showed a tape of Jackson's recent HBO concert to his seventh-grade students last week.

"The kids had been working really hard, and I thought they might enjoy the music and the dancing," Nance said Friday.

But after a couple of students told their parents about the video, which contains scenes of simulated masturbation, and those parents called the school, Nance said he realized showing the tape wasn't such a great idea.

"I apologized to the class and told them I hoped that no one was uncomfortable or embarrassed," Nance said. "I said it was an error in judgment on my part, and I thought that would be the end of it."

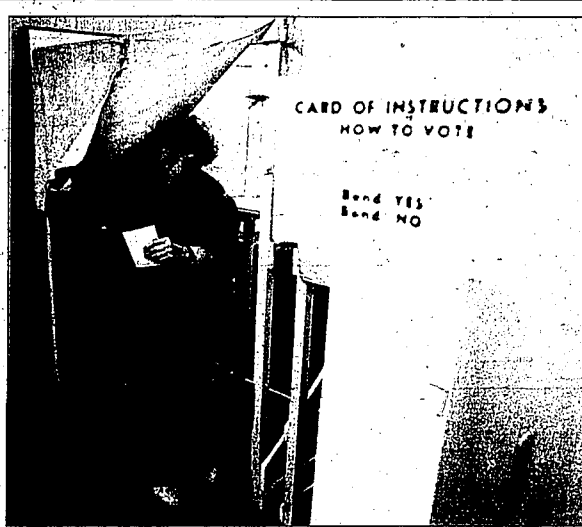

Anderson said he presented the letter to the School Board Wednesday night during a special session, but that no decision was made on the matter.

Anderson said Bliss has always had an unwritten film policy but that a written policy may benefit the school and the teachers.

The parents who mailed the letter to the board asked that R-rated films that were of significant educational value, like "Romeo and Juliet," for example, be shown only with parental consent.

It also asked that only G-rated movies be shown to elementary classes, PG-rated films to junior high students and PG-13 films to high schoolers.

The letter was signed only "Concerned Parents" and did not have personal signatures. Anderson would not comment on who sent the letter.

Hagerman passes water bond

By Terrell Williams — Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Hagerman residents Friday gave the go-ahead to city officials to improve the water system and save taxpayers a lot of money in the bargain.

A total of 84.6 percent of residents cast ballots in favor of a maximum $500,000 user fee bond issue Friday, allowing the city to apply for matching funds and in turn receive additional grant money.

On Friday, residents cast 199 votes in favor of the bond issue and 36 against it, prompting one resident who promoted passage of the matter to happily describe the vote as a "runaway."

"Ultimately, this decision will save the citizens of Hagerman a lot of money," said local businessman Leon Urie. "Now, we won't have the federal and state government ordering us to build the system they choose and ordering the payback through water bill increases."

City Clerk Mary Moreland reported that the 235 voters passed the bond with well over the 51 percent needed.

The city can now offer matching funds of up to $500,000 when it applies for grants to improve the city water system. Grant applications are due by next Friday.

Urie said the results prove the people of Hagerman are looking forward and planning for the future.

The bonds will be paid by user fees expected to be between $5 and $7 per month per household for 20 years.

Without the help of grant funding, user fees were predicted to reach $28 per month if the city had to pay for a new water system on its own.

Urie said city officials and a large group of other local residents worked to help educate the people on the importance of this bond.

JUB Engineer Scott Bybee deserves special thanks, Urie said.

City officials are hoping to be awarded almost $2 million from federal and state programs to improve the water system; so it will meet new state standards. Cities must comply with those new standards by July of 1994.

The awarding of grant funds will be announced in March.

If the Hagerman project receives funding, a final project design would be made, and the bonds would be collected through taxes.

Construction would begin in September of 1993 with completion expected by June of 1994.

EPA lifts ban on drinking water

By N.S. Nokkewent — Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An order to boil drinking water in Hagerman was lifted shortly after noon on Friday.

The order was issued on Oct. 19 by the state Division of Environmental Quality, when water samples showed unacceptably high levels of bacteria in the city's drinking water supply.

The high bacteria levels were the result of problems with the city's chlorinator, which introduces disinfecting chlorine into the drinking water, said Greg Misbach of the Twin Falls office of DEQ.

The bacteria, known as coliform and fecal coliform, originate in the intestines of warm-blooded animals. Their presence may indicate the presence of other, disease carrying bacteria.

Gooding Jaycees hope thank you won't spook donors

By Suzanne Huxhold — Times-News correspondent

GOODING — It was a dark and stormy night. The townspeople had been warned not to go to the haunted house at the Gooding-Fairgrounds, but they were drawn there by the eerie screams wafting from beyond the railroad tracks.

One by one, the children were drawn into the building by the ghostly hand of a black-robed woman.

From inside, the waiting parents could hear the shrieking of their children as they came across another ghoul, a rat-infested maze, a vampire en-coffined, a witch's evil brew.

In groups, the children were spat from the mouth of the haunted schoolhouse, faces flushed and talking wildly. "Oh man, she was tweeking out," yelled Troy Braga, pointing to his friend Lori Koyle.

"It was surprising," admitted Lori, who was making her third trip through with pals Lexi Lee and Levi Faulkner. "I got spiderwebs in my hair; it was scary."

The Gooding teenagers, their laughter obviously a result of the terror they had just encountered, were merely the latest victims of a demented band of Gooding Jaycees, who spent four months cooking up this chamber of horror as a spooky way to thank the townspeople for their support.

"We hope to make this an annual project," said Kent Seifert, owner of Seiferts Jewelry, as he collected the $1 ticket price from a tent outside the haunted house. "Everyone seems to really enjoy it."

So much so, in fact, that the long line of revelers, old and young alike, stood happily in the rain waiting for the macabre mistress in the black robes to escort them through.

Cathi Norris, another Jaycee volunteer, said more than 100 kids had gone through in the first two nights.

"Some of them go through several times," Norris said. "It's been a lot of fun."

Seifert said the Jaycees, a fledgling group of young Gooding business people, held a fund-raising event earlier this year to pay for the 3-day Halloween extravaganza, which included a wall of dread with grasping arms, an execution chamber, a very scary Frankenstein (Brad Phillips), an evil witch (Cathi Gough) and a demented doctor who used a hacksaw and whose patient's hollowed-out chest cavity coughed smoke.

They were also assisted in the madness by the Save Our Seats committee, which donated the use of the old school building, and by radio station TNT in Gooding, which did a live remote from inside the dark and forbidding cavern of creepiness.

Seifert said the group will definitely consider another, even scarier haunted house next year. Be afraid. Be very afraid.

Backing Jax cost towing firm county business, owner claims

By Brad Bowlin — Times-News writer

GOODING — The owner of a Gooding towing company says Sheriff Robert Aja has shamed him out of accident towing since he began supporting Aja's opponent in the race for sheriff.

Javier Lejardi, owner of Western Towing, filed a lawsuit against the county Thursday seeking $10,000 in damages.

Going County Prosecuting Attorney Phil Brown said Friday that the county has denied the claim, and Aja dismissed it as a "last-minute political ploy."

Aja is a Republican, but Lejardi is a Democrat and has been in Lejardi's office. Democrat John Crandall also is running.

Lejardi said his tow truck carried Jax campaign signs in the county's annual fair and rodeo parade Aug. 20. Since then, he hasn't been getting his share of calls to accidents in the county, he said.

In Gooding County, as in most other counties, the towing companies have an agreement with local law enforcement agencies about how to divvy up accident calls.

When there is an accident, the victims can request their preferred towing service. If they have no preference, the officers on the scene call the closest or most available truck, Aja said.

If more than one service is available, the three towing companies are called on a rotating basis, the sheriff said.

But Lejardi said friends who work in the county office told him of a note from Aja instructing the dispatchers not to call Western Towing.

After a few days of listening to a police radio scanner, and realizing he wasn't getting the calls he should, Lejardi called an attorney.

Aja denies taking Lejardi's company out of the rotation, and he points to the number of towing calls since Aug. 20.

Lejardi and the other company in the city of Gooding have split the eight calls there since the parade.

In the county, Aja said there have been

Fellow hunters defend Gold's action in incident

By Brad Bowlin — Times-News writer

JEROME — Two men who were hunting with Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold during an Oct. 17 confrontation with another group of hunters say the sheriff is not to blame for the fracas.

The Idaho Bureau of Investigation looked into the matter and has sent its report to Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan, but Horgan said Friday he had not received it.

The incident began on a sunny Saturday afternoon — the opening day of pheasant hunting season — in a Jerome County beet field.

Gold became involved in a verbal conflict with a group of five Twin Falls men hunting in the area when he entered a sugar beet field the other hunters were planning to hunt.

The Twin Falls hunters — recent law school graduate Tug Worst and his brother-in-law, Jason Phair; Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Vice President Ken Deibert and his teen-aged son, Ryan — yelled at Gold to stay out of the field where they had been given permission to hunt.

Dr. Donald Pica, a Twin Falls physician, arrived a few minutes later.

The hunters from Twin Falls say Gold verbally attacked them, placed them under arrest and demanded to see their identification and hunting licenses.

The hunters say they were shocked and intimidated by Gold's demeanor during the incident.

"He was way out of line," Worst said.

Tribe leaders accuse opposition of lies

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Indian leaders, looking to reinforce polls indicating they may succeed in defeating a proposed ban on reservation gaming, are accusing their supporters of misleading voters through misconception and outright lies.

Heading into the final weekend of the 1992 campaign, Nathan Small, gaming manager for eastern Idaho's Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, said specifically cited a pro-amendment television and radio advertisement that claims gaming would bring with it prostitution, crime and a sleazy atmosphere.

Labeling that advertisement totally false, Small said the Shoshone-Bannock bingo operation has been inspected by agents from the Justice Department, including the FBI, the Interior Department and local law enforcement agencies.

"And not one of them has indicated this place is sleazy," he declared while spokesman Dave Archuleta called the ad an insult not only to the tribes but to all Idaho voters.

But Gold's hunting partners say it was someone in Worst's group that was out of line.

"These people are really off-base," Bob Norton of Twin Falls said after reading public accounts of the incident from the other hunters.

Norton, a long-time friend and former partner of Gold's when the two worked for the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department, and Terry Hancock, part-owner of the Rock Creek Restaurant, and Hancock's son were hunting with Gold that day.

"The person doing most of the yelling" whom Gold identified as Worst himself "came totally unglued," Norton said.

"The first thing he said to the sheriff was, 'Who the f--- are you doing here?'" Norton recalled.

That is not true, said Worst, who has maintained all along that neither he nor anyone in his group ever used profanity during the incident. So has Deiben.

"There was absolutely never any profanity used by myself, Tur or my son," Deibert said. "The only person talking in a loud, uncontrolled manner was the sheriff. He is the culprit in this, not us."

During the incident, Worst said Gold's shotgun was pointed in his direction as the sheriff cradled it in his arm.

Both Norton and Hancock said Gold unloaded his weapon when he climbed over the fence between fields to retrieve his downed pheasant.

The only time the gun may have been pointed in the general direction of Worst's feet was when Gold shot his weapon from one hand to the other while checking the men's hunting licenses.

Gold and Norton both say Worst wouldn't let the situation die. He was very disrespectful to the sheriff, who acted in a professional manner, Norton said.

Worst countered by saying Norton wasn't even there when the conflict began.

Norton said he was about 30 yards away when the argument began, but he walked to the scene after a few minutes to offer support to Gold.

Hancock and his son remained some 50 yards away during the incident, but Hancock said he could hear someone in the group yelling profanities at the sheriff.

"The guy kept runnin' his mouth," Hancock said.

The sheriff acknowledged that he mistakenly thought the Twin Falls hunters were in a field that had been declared off-limits by another hunter. Gold said he asked to see their hunting licenses but never told the hunters they were under arrest.

Worst points out that neither he nor any other person in his hunting party has any reason to lie about the incident, and they are credible, professional people in the community.

Hancock said he doesn't know, Gold well, but hates to see him take a beating in the press over the incident.

He said he had only met the sheriff twice before the Oct. 17 incident, when Gold had dinner at the Rock Creek. He only went on the hunting trip because Norton asked him along.

"There's two sides to this story," he said. Norton and Hancock were not available to tell their side of the story immediately after the incident because they were elk hunting near Challis.

Horgan said he may ask several people to review the report from the Idaho Bureau of Investigation and ask their opinion whether any criminal prosecution is warranted.

If so, a special prosecutor or a member of the Idaho attorney general's office would have to handle the case to avoid a conflict of interest.

Help cure crime by following less-traveled paths, Wood says

By Brad Bowlin
Times-News writer.

SHOSHONE — Fifth District Magistrate R. Barry Wood of Shoshone says he wants to make a difference in people's lives beyond his court room.

Sending people to jail doesn't always solve the problem that brought a criminal to court in the first place, Wood said.

"It ultimately comes back to us," he said, adding that one of a judge's roles is to identify alternative methods of curbing crime.

"We know, for instance, that putting an alcoholic in jail doesn't work," he said. "We've got to convince that person to get on with treatment" and cure the root of the problem.

Lincoln County voters will get a chance Tuesday to decide whether to keep Wood on the bench or to open the seat for a new appointment.

Juvenile crime is another area where judges need to keep people from entering the courtroom, Wood said.

"By the time I see them in the courtroom a lot of times it's too late," he said. "The search is not for what he did, but why he did it."

If that search is successful, "maybe we'll never see him again," the judge said.

Being involved in the community and working to help people rather than just sitting behind a bench and passing judgment is what makes someone a good judge, Wood said.

Anybody can pick up a set of law books and recite the law, he said. But a judge must be thorough and fair and he must listen to all sides of the issue before making a decision.

Like Camas County Magistrate John Varin, Wood spends a lot of time traveling to other areas of the 5th Judicial District. Time on the road and circuit takes longer than routine magistrate matters combine to keep Wood's case load lower than that of some other magistrates.

But the word never really "stops for Wood."

"Rarely do I ever leave it," he said. "I'm always thinking about issues or problems that have come up in court."

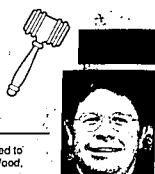

Wood scored high on the Times-News survey of 5th District attorneys, with a 3.58 overall grade-point average.

The results point out the consistency of his tenure on the bench, Wood said. Four years ago, the responses were almost identical.

"I think the consistency is a sign I'm stable — that I have the temperament to do the job we're

The most recent water samples show no bacteria, Misbach said.

DEQ also checked the springs that supply the city with drinking water. One was clean, but "the other spring has a problem," Misbach said.

The agency will rule by next spring whether the city's water source should be considered "surface water impacted." If it is, it would have to comply with surface treatment requirements.

The chlorinator has been repaired, and Hagerman water is safe to drink.

But disinfecting drinking water with chlorine is not without risks. When chlorine comes into contact with organic material it forms chemicals known as trihalomethanes, which scientists believe may cause some forms of cancer.

The Environmental Protection Agency has established acceptable levels in drinking water. But the agency doesn't require monitoring of systems that serve fewer than 10,000 residents.

The Twin Falls water system is monitored but levels are below EPA levels of concern. Larger distribution systems need more chlorine to insure there is sufficient chlorine in the far reaches of the system to prevent regrowth of bacteria.

EPA, however, is considering monitoring smaller systems.

Towing

27 calls split among three companies. Lejardi got six, four of which were non-preference calls, he said.

A Wendell company went on 13 calls because most recent accidents have been on Interstate 84, Aja said. "The other Gooding company got eight calls, but only three were non-preference," he said.

Those four calls only came his way by chance, Lejardi said. Two came in before the county deputy had a chance to call a towing company. Another came when a city officer was first on the scene, and he received a fourth because the other towing companies were unavailable, he said.

He's accustomed to getting three or four calls per week, with each call bringing in about $100, Lejardi said.

The timing of Lejardi's complaint is an obvious attempt to influence Tuesday's election, Aja said.

Lejardi said he filed the action as soon as he could after making sure he was being shut out of the rotation.

"You just add it up," Aja said of the timing. "I don't get involved in that. I'm just here to do a job."

Cassia County may increase fee for killing weeds

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Cassia County commissioners are considering raising the fee for weed spraying to keep up with competition from private weed-killing businesses.

Currently, landowners are asked to spray their own weeds. If they fail to do so, the county sprays the weeds and then bills the farmer or other entity.

The county has been spraying weeds cheaply, charging about half the cost of what a business in private enterprise would.

"We need to spray with competitive rates," said Commissioner John Adams. "We are competing with private enterprise and doing it for half the price."

Gordon Edwards, county weed supervisor, said at a recent county meeting he will prepare a five-year plan on the county's role in weed control and submit it to the commissioners for their consideration.

The county may gradually phase itself out of doing significant spraying, but may still have to do some spraying of hard-to-reach areas that private businesses have a hard time getting at, commissioners said.

Edwards said the department will need a new pickup truck if the county plans on taking a more active weed-spraying role.

Adams said he thought it important that Edwards have a sprayer in his truck; so he can spot spray weeds he sees along roadways.

New report: Haley tops Newman in spending

By Douglas S. Jones
Mini-Cassia News Service

RUPERT — Minidoka County Prosecutor David Haley filed an amended campaign disclosure report Thursday, establishing he spent more in his campaign for prosecutor than independent candidate Gary B. Newman.

The original reports, filed by last Tuesday, showed Newman had raised and spent more money than her Republican opponent.

However, Haley said Thursday a campaign staffer overlooked a $1,278.15 bill for yard signs which has not yet been paid. The signs were printed by a company listed as Print Graphics.

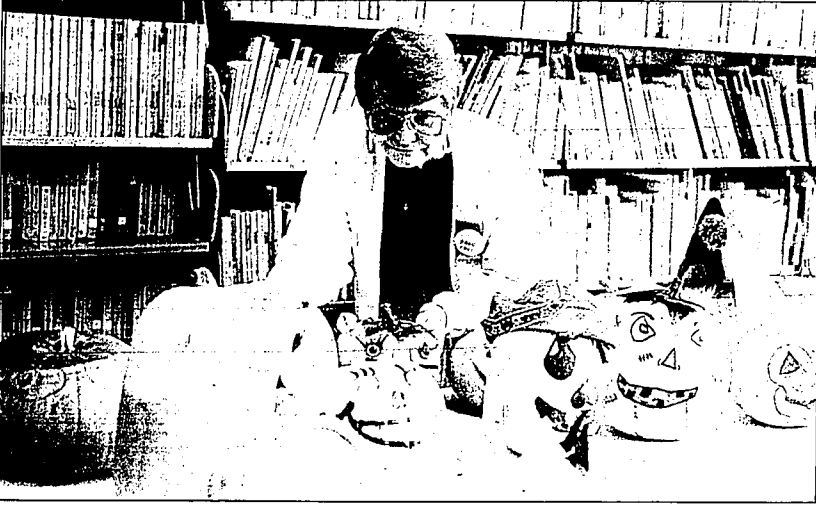

That cost puts Haley's total campaign expenditures at $2,987.38. He raised $1,893.06 and had $183.83 on hand at the end of the period June 6-Oct. 19.

During the same period, Newman spent $2,442.75, raised $2,202.91 and had $698.85 on hand.

Haley, 33, was appointed prosecutor in mid-August by the Minidoka County Commission after then-prosecutor Charles Creason Jr. stepped down to accept a position as general manager of Project Mutual Telephone Co.

Newman, who has been the county's public defender for the past five years, filed to run as an independent against Creason before he resigned.

Man held on firearms charge

BURLEY — A Colorado man was charged with possession of an illegal firearm after law officers pulled him over after allegedly not paying for gas, deputies say.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff's Department, an employee of Mr. Gas on North Overland Avenue in Burley reported a driver had left the station Thursday morning without paying for his fuel.

A deputy later pulled over the man, identified as Randall Scott Cox, 28, of Hotchkiss, Colo., who denied he got gasoline and refused to pay for it. The man was charged with petit theft, and his vehicle was impounded. When officers searched the vehicle, a sawed-off shotgun was located with its serial number filed off. Also taken into possession was a book containing a list of several different law enforcement agencies.

Jury listens as sheriff notifies bar owners of federal agents

MOSCOW (AP) — Federal court jurors donned headphones and listened to the FBI "sting" Shoshone County Sheriff Frank Cmkovich on the day a massive gambling raid hit the Silver Valley.

Cmkovich is on trial in U.S. District Court in Moscow on federal charges of racketeering, obstruction of law enforcement and two counts of illegal gambling. Prosecutors allege he was paid to tip off bar owners about law enforcement visits.

Prosecutors Dan Butler and Nancy Newcomb mapped out a four-month FBI sting in 1991 that led to charges against the sheriff. In the fourth day of testimony before U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge, the Justice Department neared the end of its case Thursday afternoon.

Witnesses said three times, the FBI fed Cmkovich information that state or federal agents would be in Shoshone County investigating illegal gambling at more than 50 bars. The agents made sure only Cmkovich received the information to prove he was feeding it to bar owners.

In one tape, then-undersheriff Dan Schierman called Cmkovich at his home in June 1991 to warn him that the raid was coming.

In a taped wiretap, informant Schierman tells the sheriff special agent Wayne Manis had given him a "courtesy call" to say "he has assembled a group of agents to serve some search warrants" on five bars.

Federal agents testified Cmkovich left his home at a "brisk pace" and sped through Kellogg in his patrol car to meet with video poker machine vendor Terry Douglas.

FBI agents raided the Shoshone County bars, taking gambling machines and what they said was evidence of illegal payouts.

The proceedings are scheduled to resume again Monday, when Cmkovich attorney Sam Eismann will begin presenting the defense's case.

Residents arm selves against flu

By Eric Goodell
Mini-Cassia News Service

BURLEY — Mini-Cassia residents are pouring into doctors' offices and health districts to get flu shots.

"We've been getting a lot of people," said nurse Bonnie Thueson of Dr. Edward Boas' office in Rupert. Thueson said her office has been giving flu shots to an average of four people per day.

The elderly and those who work with the public are the primary recipients, she said, in what has become an annual ritual for many.

Mary Ann Huber, secretary of the Cassia County public health office, said workers have been giving flu shots since Oct. 16. She said officials believed the numbers of people getting shots would decrease this year because Medicare is not paying for immunizations.

However, Huber said numbers appear to be up this year.

A registered nurse at the office of Dr. Walter Peterson in Burley said people have been coming in since August to receive their shots.

Some areas of the nation reportedly ran low or were depleted of flu vaccine in other years, but Thueson said that supplies look good here.

In order to receive a shot at the public health office, patients must be more than 60 and must be under care for a chronic illness, or live with someone being treated for a chronic illness, or be giving care to the elderly.

People not in that category need to go to a doctor's office to get the shot, Thueson said.

Separation of church, state not in Constitution

The Constitution does not state there is to be a separation of church and state. People have misinterpreted these words from a letter written by President Thomas Jefferson as he wrote to the Danbury Baptist Association of Danbury, Conn., in 1802.

Erroy Weixel
Clergy's corner

The occasion for the letter must be considered. The Baptists heard a rumor that the congressional denomination was about to be made the national denomination of America. They got in touch with Thomas Jefferson, expressing their concern.

On Jan. 1, 1802, Jefferson addressed this group of Baptists, and in that address, he assured them that "The First Amendment has created a wall of separation between the church and state, but it is a one-directional wall; it keeps the government from running the church, but it makes sure that Christian principles will always stay in government."

Jefferson was simply assuring the Baptists that the government would not "run the church." It was the plain intent that the nation would not recognize one denomination over another. There would be no "state-run church." Now, does that sound like Jefferson said the Baptists can't put a banner across Lincoln Street?

George Washington's farewell speech, excluded from American history books for at least 40 years as being too religious, stated, "If you remove religious principles from government, you are going to lose national morality."

Also, in a more in-depth summary of the misconception, we must come to grips with the influence of William James, who was a strong opponent of Christianity and religion. James coined the phrase, "There is nothing so absurd, but that if you repeat it often enough, people will believe it is so."

So from 1947 on, the attack the courts began to take was "Separation of church and state" without consulting Jefferson's speech and without quoting any of the founding fathers.

This concept was repeated until 1958, when in a case before the court, one of the justices wrote this stinging dissent. "If this court does not stop talking about separation of church and state, people will believe it is part of the Constitution." But the court continued to talk and talk, until in 1962 in a case called Engel vs. Vitale.

In this case for the first time in America's almost 200-year history, we had a court ruling that by June 17, 1963, would separate biblical principles from education and government. This case, with two others, removed prayer and Bible reading from America's schools. So radical was the court's ruling that the 1963 World Book Encyclopedia states this case was the first time America had separation of church and state.

Legal research shows how absurd these rulings were. Prior to 1962, courtroom procedure was to check for historical precedence and legal precedence to keep court rulings consistent. However, in the case that stopped school prayer, the court gave zero historical instances, the court gave zero legal precedence. The court simply made the announcement, "We will not have prayer in your schools because it is unconstitutional."

In the School District of Abington Township vs. Shipp case of 1963, the court did check on what percentage of Americans did believe in God and religious instruction. The court discovered that in 1963, 3 percent of Americans had no belief in God, no belief in religious instruction. The court did another first — the court sided against the 97 percent and, for the first time in America's history, the 3 percent became the majority.

The 97 percent, according to court ruling and announcement, would conduct business according to the philosophy of the 3 percent "majority."

So next time someone harps about "separation of church and state and the violation of their rights," remember they are of the 3 percent that are in the "majority," not according to the Constitution's right or intent but solely by court ruling, court announcement, and they are speaking out of no historical precedent or base, nor from a legal procedural or base, but out of ignorance and stupidity!

Could it be that the 97 percent "minority" are being held hostage by the 3 percent "majority" because of non-intelligent court announcements and rulings?

We the people of America have allowed the wrong rulings to continue to the harm of our great American heritage. Let's string the banner of godly principles and the truth of our founding fathers' intent high in our lives so God can once again bless America — the land of the free!

Lutherans mark Reformation Day

TWIN FALLS — Lutherans from throughout the Magic Valley will gather at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Immanuel Lutheran Church, 2055 Filer Ave. E., to celebrate Reformation Day. The public is invited to attend the service.

The worship service will use pastors of the Magic Valley area's Lutheran congregations to portray characters involved in the life of Martin Luther during his years of ministry to protect and spread the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Six characters, both friends and enemies of Luther, will share their stories and views of Luther and the scriptural message he proclaimed. The service will also feature choirs and brass and organ music performed by various Lutheran church musicians.

St. Ed's offers faith-sharing groups

TWIN FALLS — St. Edward's Catholic Church is organizing several small faith-sharing groups. Sign-up sheets will be distributed in the pews Sunday.

The groups will focus on chosen subjects of the Catholic faith for a limited period of time. For more information, call Pauline Harper at 734-6244.

Baptists gather for women's prayer day

TWIN FALLS — An observance of the Baptist Women's World Day of Prayer is set for 7 p.m. Monday at the Eastside Southern Baptist Church, 201 Eastland Drive N.

The program will tell about needs, prayer requests, praises and cooperation from and among Baptist women around the world. An offering will be taken to provide funds to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ to all women throughout the world and to provide communication among Baptist women and leadership training opportunities.

All Baptist women are invited and encouraged to attend. Each church attendee is asked to bring three dozen homemade cookies. Beverages will be provided by the host church.

Christian Women plan prayer meeting

TWIN FALLS — The Christian Women's Club of Magic Valley has planned its monthly prayer coffee meeting for 9:30 to 11 a.m. Tuesday at the home of Connie Basham, 849 Harmony Road. For more information, call 734-6058.

Joining forces ... and voices

Magic Valley church choirs to perform together Sunday

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Nearly 40 years ago, 102 singers packed the choir loft at the First United Methodist Church and sang the "50s. Now, as First United Methodist's choir director, he's preparing to stage a similar program. Five church choirs will participate in Sunday's Church Choir Festival. Each choir will present two favorite anthems. Then, the whole group will join forces and voices.

Performance information

The Twin Falls Church Choir Festival is scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday at First United Methodist Church. A reception will follow. The public is invited. No admission will be charged.

Clarence Dudley, now 67, used to sing in those community choir festivals during the '50s. Now, as First United Methodist's choir director, he's preparing to stage a similar program. Five church choirs will participate in Sunday's Church Choir Festival. Each choir will present two favorite anthems. Then, the whole group will join forces and voices.

"We had to take the pews out of the choir loft and make double rows in the old days," Dudley said. "This time, we will probably put extra chairs around the loft."

Dudley, a local photographer, has a picture of a 102-member combined choir, circa 1955. Again this time, by coincidence, the choir will number 102 — and Dudley plans to take another picture.

"I remember in the post-war era, we would have huge rallies downtown," Dudley said. "Often, we would release all day, have supper for the choir and give evening performances."

Some of the music in Sunday's program will be taken directly from the programs of old. Other selections are contemporary.

The First Christian Church choir, conducted by Mary Nelson and Sylvia Osterman, will sing "I Can Smell an Angel," "The Spirit of Jesus in This Place."

The Episcopal Church of the Ascension choir, conducted by Dennis McCracken, will sing "Deck Thyself My Soul with Gladness" and "The Heavens Resound."

The First Presbyterian Church choir, conducted by Linda Stevens, will sing "Sing Praises" and "We Lift Our Hearts in Praise." The church's handbell choir, under the direction of John Bennett, will perform "Now Thank We All Our God."

The Twin Falls Reformed Church choir, conducted by Lori Ann Lee, will sing "Where Two or Three are Gathered" and "Written in Red." Dudley will lead the Methodists in "Go Not Far from Me, O God" and "Kyrle Elevation." Then, he will lead the combined choirs in "Open Our Eyes" and "O Praise Ye the Lord." Sarah Benton will be the organist.

The audience will be invited to join the choir in song during one congregational hymn.

Ministers assisting in the program are Rev. Wayne Weld-Martin and Rev. Anne Weld-Martin of First United Methodist and Rev. Mike Bullard of First Presbyterian.

Letter

We are awakened by the Lord's midnight cry

The first 13 verses of the Chapter 25 of Matthew tell a very interesting story about a pertinent time in our history — today Verses 5 and 6 tell us "While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight, there was a cry, 'Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.'"

If all were asleep, from where came the cry. If not from mankind, who were all asleep, then surely it must have come from our Heavenly Father who never sleeps. How, we ask, Revelation 14:6-7 tells us "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on earth; and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."

God has dealt with mankind by angels since the beginning of time. Angels announced his first coming when they appeared to Mary and Joseph and foretold a pending birth, and also to the shepherds to announce his birth as they watched over their flocks.

Surely Christ's second coming is as important to mankind as his first, maybe more so. Why then would God not send an angel or heavenly messenger to announce his second coming. Indeed, he has. Malachi 4:5, "Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord."

We should thank God that he has not forsaken us but has caused the book of remembrance of Malachi 3:16 to be written and brought to earth by an angel from God. This is the midnight cry. We are awake.

Episcopalian Bush has history on his side in re-election bid

NEW YORK (AP) — The main contenders for the U.S. presidency are products of three historically rooted Christian traditions — Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopalian.

If past denominational trends carry any weight, President Bush has the best shot at it. Bush is the 12th Episcopalian president. That's more than any other denomination, even though the Episcopal Church is the seventh largest in the country.

While such statistical measures or denominational affiliations don't seem to have any clear impact in national elections, polls repeatedly show that most American voters want a believer in the White House.

"We've got that in the present three principal candidates, Democrat Bill Clinton, a Southern Baptist; independent Ross Perot, a Presbyterian; and Republican Bush.

Both denominational connections count for anything in winning the top office, Presbyterians have the second best track record — six of the past 40 presidents, exceeding that tradition's proportion of the population.

Bush

Perot was raised a Methodist but he and his family have been members of the 6,000-member Highland Park Presbyterian Church in Dallas for about 25 years.

"Whenever he's in town, he comes to church very faithfully," said the senior pastor, the Rev. B. Clayton Bell. "He has a basic Christian faith, very much middle-of-the-road Presbyterian."

As a member, he has taken the church vows that include "faith in Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord and a willingness to live by the disciplines of the Scripture and the church."

Perot's wife and their son and three daughters also are members. Bell said, while a fourth daughter became an Episcopalian on marrying — husband of that denomination.

Perot is a "great family man," Bell said. "He loves his wife and children — he's really devoted to them."

As a Southern Baptist, Clinton's denomination of 15.2 million is the largest Protestant body in the country. Only two previous presidents have been members — Harry Truman and Jimmy Carter.

Clinton belongs to Immanuel Baptist Church, a prominent congregation in Little Rock. While there, he attends services nearly every Sunday and sometimes sings in the choir.

The Rev. Brian L. Harbour, pastor there until 1990, said Clinton was "very faithful in his attendance."

In a recent interview on VLSN, an interreligious faith-and-values cable channel, Clinton said:

"My faith tells me that all of us are sinners, and each of us has gone in our own way and fallen short of the glory of God. Religious faith has permitted me to believe in my continuing possibility of becoming a better person every day.

"If I didn't believe in God, if I weren't ... a Christian, if I didn't believe ultimately in the perfection of life after death, my life would have been much more difficult."

In the prolonged Southern Baptist struggle in which moderate Baptists have been pushed to the sidelines by a controlling administration of biblical fundamentalists, Clinton says he has been saddened and many hurt by the controversy.

He classified himself among moderates, who stress the historic Baptist principle of "soul liberty" of the individual to interpret Scripture as each understands it.

Bush, a longtime member of St. Martin's Episcopal Church in Houston, attends various churches in Washington and elsewhere, and is a close friend of evangelist Billy Graham.

Their families usually spend some vacation time together at the Bush home at Kennebunkport, Maine.

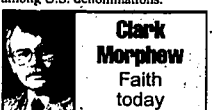

He has said that faith was a "given" in his family. "God just was. There was no debate about it."

Bush has courted evangelist conservatives in the campaign, speaking and cheered at their rallies. In a speech last spring to the National Religious Broadcasters, he said: "I believe one can't be a member of America without a belief in God and in prayer."

Membership in his denomination, the Episcopal Church, is about 2.5 million. It is independent, but linked spiritually to the 70 million-member worldwide Anglican communion stemming from the Church of England.

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) has about 3.8 million members, making it sixth in size among U.S. denominations.

Bishops: Wives need not submit to abuse

NEW YORK (AP) — Women are not bound by the Bible to submit to abusive husbands or to remain in abusive relationships, the nation's Roman Catholic bishops say in their first official statement on spouse abuse.

"Violence in any form — physical, sexual, psychological or verbal — is sinful," the bishops say in "When I Call for Help: A Pastoral Response to Domestic Violence Against Women."

The joint statement of two bishops' committees was proposed in March, and approved last month by the Administrative Committee of the U.S. Catholic Conference.

Lori Beaman-Hall, a Canadian researcher studying religion and wife abuse, said the statement is "a good starting point" to challenge attitudes that the Bible sanctions abuse or that clergy should encourage abused spouses to return home.

"It's a concern to people who work with abused women," the University of New Brunswick researcher said. "Churches to some extent are very materially supportive, but when it comes to actually sending people to transition houses, they are still not very supportive."

Abuse is a topic no one likes to think about, the bishops said. They presented the statement "as an initial step in what we hope will become a continuing effort in the church in the United States to combat domestic violence against women."

The bishops in particular warned church leaders about biblical passages encouraging wives to be submissive to their husbands, saying they have been taken out of context to justify spouse abuse.

"Abused women say, 'I can't leave this relationship. The Bible says it would be wrong.' Abusive men say, 'The Bible says my wife should be submissive to me.' They take the biblical text and distort it to support their right to batter," the bishops said.

The statement makes clear that violence against women is never justified, and that the parish must be a place where both abused women and men who batter can come for help.

It encourages parish churches to dedicate a weekend to educate parishioners about domestic violence, and to build relationships with police and domestic violence agencies to help abused women seeking assistance.

To further reduce domestic violence, the bishops encourage parishes to work to see that women are well represented in parish leadership positions and to insist that religious education is free of sexual stereotyping.

"Battering thrives on sexism," the statement said.

The statement by the bishops' Committees on Marriage and Family and Women in Society and in the Church was drafted relatively quickly and quietly, in contrast to a controversial pastoral letter on women that the bishops have worked on for nine years, which may be headed for defeat this fall.

The statement was never discussed in an open meeting of the full complement of bishops, as was the unapproved letter, which backs sexual equality but stops short of calling for women priests.

"We wanted to get something out quickly," said Sheila Garcia of the Secretariat for Family, Laity, Women and Youth. "It's been a hidden problem for a long time."

Garcia said the statement that abuse is never justified is "tremendously significant" to Catholic women.

"It tells them that they do not have to take this. This is not right," she said.

Roman Catholic marriage tribunals grant more than 90% of requested annulments in '91

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Roman Catholic marriage tribunals, which administer the process for granting marriage annulments, decided 38,448 cases in 1991, approving more than 90 percent of them, according to the Canon Law Society of America. The number of cases decided was up 3.7 percent over 1990. More than 8,500 cases involved mixed marriages between Catholics and non-Catholics, and 7,919 cases concerned marriages in which neither spouse was Catholic. In those cases, annulments were sought by persons either intending to enter the Roman Catholic Church or to marry a Catholic. The society said 48,029 petitions were submitted for annulments in 1991, and 43,321 cases were accepted.

Mormons rejoice in and preach teachings of Christ

Someone asked, "Are Mormons Christians?" Yes, Mormons are Christians. We use the Bible and also have the scripture, the Book of Mormon as another testament of Jesus Christ.

The Bible testifies of Christ in Bible lands, and the Book of Mormon testifies of Christ when he came to this, the American continent, bringing his same gospel. "Other sheep have I that are not of this fold."

Both books are Christ-centered. On the title page of the Book of Mormon is written, "To the convincing of the Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations."

More than one-half of all the verses in the Book of Mormon refer to our Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Jehovah of the Old Testament.

Some form of Christ's name is mentioned more frequently per

Ruth Heiner

In the small Book of Moroni in the Book of Mormon, there are 215 references to Christ in 13 1/2 pages.

The Book of Mormon centers on God the Father and his son, Jesus Christ. I began a list of names that are used for our Lord Jesus Christ in the scriptures, and I have more than three pages of two columns, such as Creator, Comforter, King, Endless, Mediator, the Light, Omnipotent, Omniscient, Redeemer, Ruler, Savior, The Rock, on and on.

The Book of Mormon is the keystone of our religion and is the most significant gift that has been given to the modern world. The keystone is the central stone in an arch and holds all the other stones in place. If it is removed, the arch crumbles! The Bible and the Book of Mormon testify of Christ, and Christ himself is the cornerstone of everything we do.

The Book of Mormon is another testament of Christ. Testament is the English rendering of a Greek word that can also be translated as "covenant." Thus, the Book of Mormon is a "New Covenant" or another witness of Jesus Christ. In it, we find a pattern for preparing for the Second Coming, and the dangers of materialism, such as setting our hearts on the things of this world.

The Gospel, the plan of salvation, was for all of God's children who desired to return to his presence.

Some "Other sheep that are not of this fold, them too I must bring" were on this continent where he came after his resurrection and organized his church and taught his gospel.

The Book of Mormon teaches truth and bears testimony of Christ, our savior and king. "We talk of Christ, we rejoice in Christ, we preach of Christ" (Moroni 63).

The name of our church bears his name. We are Christian.

Ruth Heiner lives in Burley, where she is a member of the Burley LDS 3rd Ward, Burley West Stake. She teaches a monthly spiritual living lesson in Relief Society and is Sunday school chorister in her ward.

Missionaries

Two young people from the Magic Valley area have been called to serve missions for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Woolstenhulme

Elder Wesley James Woolstenhulme, son of Larry and Sherry Woolstenhulme of Twin Falls, will serve for two years in the Mexico Monterey West Mission. He will speak in sacrament meetings at 2:50 p.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls 13th Ward chapel, 421 Maurice St. N., and will enter the Mission Training Center in Provo, Utah, Wednesday. Family and friends are invited to an open house from 5 to 8 p.m. Sunday at the Woolstenhulmes' residence, 1886 Shoup Ave. E. Woolstenhulme graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1991 and attended Ricks College in Rexburg for one year.

Jenkins

Sister Jennie E. Jenkins, daughter of Ronald and Naomi Jenkins of Filer, will serve for 18 months in the Texas Dallas Mission. A farewell service was held Oct. 25 and she entered the MTC Oct. 28. Jenkins is a 1989 graduate of Filer High School and a graduate (completion of four years) of the seminary program, a religious education program sponsored by the LDS Church Educational System. She also graduated from Ricks College with an associate degree in arts and sciences. Jenkins has two brothers who have recently completed missions and one brother currently serving a mission.

Capital crushes Bruins, 32-0

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

BOISE — Living up to his pre-game billing, quarterback Jake Plummer accounted for all of the points and most of the yardage Friday night in leading Capital past Twin Falls 32-0.

Plummer threw for four touchdowns and sneaked another for a fifth as the Eagles completed a 9-0 regular season and Twin Falls dipped to 6-3.

This was a typical artificial turf game as the Eagles simply used Plummer's throwing arm and faster receivers to finessse Twin Falls. There was little of the slam, bang physically of last week's loss to Nampa. "At least we didn't roll over and die," said Twin Falls Coach Jon Jund. "I thought we played hard and it was the kind of game that can get us into next week's playoffs with a little momentum."

The Bruins will probably be host to Highland, but possibly Nampa in a first round game at Twin Falls next Saturday at 1 p.m.

Twin Falls, down to 33 players in uniform due to extensive injuries, had the game plan of running the ball and the clock to keep the Capital offense off the field. It worked fairly well in the first half where the Bruins were only caught twice for delay of game and actually had the ball a third more of the time than Capital.

But a couple of lapses in the defensive secondary kept the plan from working perfectly. A 31 yard pass to Casey Richards on the first play of the second quarter got Capital on the board and after recovering a fumble at the Twin Falls 23 yard line, a fourth-and-11 pass to Nate Peterson carried Capital to the Bruin 1. Plummer sneaked over on the next play.

The Eagles missed both extra points. Twin Falls had a chance in the closing minutes when it rolled to a first down at the Capital 7-yard-line, but then was stymied at the 4.

"I thought the first half we did a good job of controlling the football if we could've put that on one in just before the half. It would've been a real pick up for the second half," said Jund.

Capital scored on a 46-yard pass to Richards and a 7 yard strike to Jared Rainey in the third quarter. In the fourth, Plummer and Jason Smith hooked up on a 13 yard strike. Capital let the clock run out when it had the ball on the Twin Falls 2 yard line.

Capital 6 12 12 12 0
C Richards 21 passes from Plummer (14-14-0)
C Peterson 11 passes from Plummer (14-14-0)
C Richards 46 pass from Plummer (14-14-0)
C Peterson 11 pass from Plummer (14-14-0)
C Smith 13 pass from Plummer (14-14-0)

Kansas City slugger will be back in 1993

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — George Brett, who got his 3,000th hit with a dramatic 4-for-5 day in the final week of the season, will return to play a 20th season with the Kansas City Royals, his agent said Friday.

"As of today, he says he's ready to come back and play," Dennis Gilbert said.

Gilbert said he was told by Kansas City general manager Herk Robinson "that the Royals would exercise their option on Brett for next season. It is the second of two option years tacked on to a five-year contract."

Brett will earn $2.5 million in base pay with incentive clauses that could pay him another $600,000. Kansas City could have bought out the contract for $1 million.

Incentives include $60,000 for 550 plate appearances, $90,000 for 600 plate appearances and $100,000 for 625 plate appearances. There are also award incentives.

Senators, Bulldogs near repeat titles

By Mike Maller
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Defending champions Gooding and Cambridge stayed on track to repeat in the Class A-3 and A-4 state volleyball tournaments at College of Southern Idaho.

Both schools won their first two matches Friday to advance to today's winners' bracket finals at 1 p.m.

The A-3 and A-4 championship contests will start at 6:30 p.m.

Gooding looked strong and relaxed in defeating Firth and Homedale in two-game matches. The Senators take on Butte County first today. The Pirates battled into the Gooding match by outlasting Fruitland 15-12, 17-19, 15-13 in the semifinals.

Butte County bested Clearwater Valley in the first round.

Cambridge won a pair of two-game matches from Hagerman and Caldwell. Shoshone, runner up to the Bulldogs last year, also remained in the winners' bracket.

The Indians picked up victories over Greenleaf Friends Academy and Kendrick.

In A-3 action, Orofino and Firth were dealt two losses and eliminated from the tournament.

Today's schedule starts with loser-out matches. Firth plays Fruitland at 10 a.m. Homedale meets Clearwater Valley at 11:30.

North Gem and Midvale were ousted from the A-4 ranks.

Today's matches begin with Kendrick facing Hagerman. Caldwellse follows against Greenleaf Friends.

The semifinal and last loser-out matches begin at 3:30 p.m. and 5 in both divisions.

If a second championship match is needed in the double-elimination format, it will start at 8 p.m.

After finishing second at the Class A-4 state volleyball tournament in 1991, Shoshone lost five starters to graduation.

That worried him enough that he picked his Indians to finish third in the Northside Conference.

Returning to the state tournament seemed like it might be a little out of reach.

"I had doubts about it at first because we were so young," said junior setter Ramie Maestas, the only starter back. "I didn't think we'd make it at first, but then we started beating everybody."

It seems the Indians weren't short on talent, just time spent in high school.

"These sophomores and freshman girls really have some skills. They just needed a chance to work on them," said senior Sharalyn Duffin, the Indians' strongest hitter.

With four or five players capable of being setters on the floor at all times, Shoshone has the quickness and accurate passers to play the great defense its know for.

"The sophomores include Lindsay Payne, a solid hitter and deceptive tipper, Becca Messick, leadoff server and scrappy defender, and Jamie Arossa, who is keeping alive Shoshone's tradition for good setters. The freshman, Nike Solonga, has the potential to be one of the best all-around players in the Magic Valley before she gets through high school.

"When I play out there I can't feel the difference between the grades," Duffin said. "I know they're out there because they can play. They have the ability to do it. I just think of us as all one level."

In a triangular at home, Shoshone lost the first match to A-2 Buhl. While in the locker room waiting for Gooding and Buhl to finish, the Indians received a lecture.

"That was one of the few times I gave them a pretty good chewing, because I thought we should have beat Buhl," said

Shoshone Coach Larry Messick. "A few of the girls just got with everybody and talked."

Shoshone returned to the floor and upset A-3 power Gooding 15-8, 15-7.

"That was a turning point, because then they knew they could beat anyone," Messick said.

To defeat Gooding, the Indians jacked each other's emotions up and rode the high to a win. "The key to our success is if we're up. If we're not, we don't do too good," Maestas said. "Volleyball is all in your head. If you're down inside, you're not going to win."

Now the Indians have ridden the formula into the winners' bracket finals of the state tournament, turning a rebuilding season into a success story.

"It's been one of the more enjoyable teams I've coached," Messick said.

Reds make move again, boosting Perez to manager

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Marge Schott has what she wants: A manager who knows the Cincinnati Reds and will tolerate her dog. And it doesn't hurt that his nickname is Doggie.

Bating instructor Tony Perez, who has never managed, was given a one-year contract that underscored the team's hesitance to make a long-term commitment. Former manager Lou Piniella got a three-year contract in 1990.

"It gives the manager the opportunity, if he does really well, to be able to get more money down the road," general manager Jim Bowden said. "By the same token, for the club, it gives us a chance to evaluate him."

The Reds now have the youngest general manager in the major leagues — Bowden is 31 — and one of the most inexperienced managers. Perez, 50, has spent the last six years as first-base coach and batting instructor.

He had three things in his favor: Schott's affection, his knowledge of the organization and his popularity in Cincinnati, where he was a key player in the Big Red Machine's 1975-76 World Series titles.

He also showed a willingness to get along with team mascot Schottzie 02, whose pre-game romps on the field have irritated players and kept the grounds crew busy cleaning up after him. The seven managerial candidates were asked during their interviews how they felt

Pence, Sackman, Reinke past Senators past Trojans

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Senators cruised past the Trojans in the second round with an easy victory.

Net play by the trio of Dusty Pence, Carol Sackman and Tara Reinke led the Gooding attack.

After a Reinke ace put Gooding up 4-1 in the first game, Pence stepped out to serve for a pair of aces by Pence and a block by Sackman at the net, the Senators led 9-2.

Homedale tried to comeback and cut the lead to four points late in the game, but a Reinke spike and a block put the game away.

Gooding dominated the second game leading 7-0 behind Reinke and some Homedale errors. The lead grew to 10 and Gooding ended up winning by a dozen closing the game out with a Pence spike.

"It seemed like they (Homedale) offense didn't get set up," said Gooding Coach Joleen Toone. "We're just playing very well. We're hustling and picking up balls that should be hitting the floor. We came out of district fired up. There's two more to go."

Butte County 15, 17, 15, Fruitland 12, 19, 13

Butte County pulled out a win in the longest and closest match of the tournament.

The Pirates held a 12-5 lead in the deciding game but barely held off Fruitland.

"We had the most disgusting match we've ever had," said Butte County Coach Dean Goodworth. "They just couldn't get together as a team. Everyone was down. Nothing was happening."

"I'm excited that we won it though."

Indians surprise favorite Greenleaf with win

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Greenleaf came into the A-4 tournament with victories over powerhouse Gooding making them the favorite at the tournament. In fact, it was ripped off by the Shoshone Indians.

"The serving of sophomore Lindsey Payne and the net play of Niki Solovaga, a freshman, put Shoshone up to a surprising 10-1 lead in the first game.

The Grizzlies cut the lead in half, before Sharylyn Duffin decided to take it upon herself to end the game.

Her block at the net gave the Indians the ball and Duffin served up four aces in a row to put the game out of reach.

A small mental error in the second game gave Greenleaf the ball and a hard spike from Kristi Mylander gave the Grizzlies a 3-2 lead. That would be the biggest lead for Greenleaf.

Duffin spiked the ball back at the Grizzlies for a side out and Payne and Duffin smacked a couple of shots back for an 11-7 lead. "I think we caught them a little flat-footed," said Shoshone Coach Larry Messick. "In that first game, there were no volleys. It was going back and fourth."

Cambridge 15-15, Hagerman 8-0

Welcome to the Cambridge school of volleyball.

The uphill climb for Hagerman started

Jerome downs Buhl to earn state playoff spot

The Times-News

BÜHL — Jerome recovered six Buhl fumbles enroute to thrashing the Indians 26-6 and capturing the South Central Idaho Conference title and a state playoff berth.

Jerome will travel to Holt Arena in Pocatello next Saturday to take on Preston in the first round.

The Tigers piled up 246 of their 326 rushing yards and all their points in the first half.

Josh Bay led the ground assault with 108 yards and one touchdown while Robert Miller had 92 yards and a touchdown in the half.

Bay finished with 122 yards and Miller had 116 as much of the Tiger offense rested in the second half.

Aaron Bay connected with Spencer Loti for two touchdowns despite just 44 passing yards in the game.

"Jerome just came in and dominated the game. I think Jerome has an outstanding team," Buhl Coach Bob Clark said.

Brian Chivers scored Buhl's only touchdown on an eight yard run as time expired in the second half.

 Buhl 0 0 0 0 — 6
 — Loti 7 pass from A. Bay (kick failed)
 — J. Bay 1 run (run failed)
 — Loti 10 pass from A. Bay (kick failed)
 — Loti 16 pass from A. Bay (kick failed)
 — Chivers 8 run (run failed)

A-3 volleyball

All three games were filled with lengthy rallies for points and siccouts.

Butte County's Wendy Owens and the Grizzlies' Jill Foreman provided occasional hitting highlights.

But mostly, the ball sailed back and forth until someone hit it into the net.

"We made too many errors on our side, and they had too many errors on their side," said Fruitland Coach Bill Betts. "We made some mistakes, but we played some real good ball, too."

Gooding 15, 15, Firth 7, 5

The Senators put a triple block on Firth to negate the Cougars' quick-hitting game.

"My front row got that ball blocked," said Gooding Coach Joleen Toone. "I thought if we went to three blockers, we'd get them out."

The frustrated Firth attack quickly fizzled into tips instead of spikes.

"In the game of volleyball, you got to hit the ball, posted said. "You might get one tip now and then, but that's it."

Gooding posted good leads in both games of the match.

"We just weren't ready to play," said Firth Coach Tommie Cox. "The first game, they had 15 points, and we had 13 unforced errors."

Homedale 6-15-15, Orofino 15-9-6

After Orofino won the opener, it looked as if Maniaa Coach Tammy Jaroline's return to the Magic Valley would open spots.

Leading by a game, Orofino took a 4-0 lead over the struggling Trojans. Homedale got on a roll scoring the next eight points and shutting down the Maniaa offense in the second game.

The Trojan offense didn't stop there out as a steep incline as Cambridge lobbered the Pirates in the opening round.

A-4 volleyball

It was 9-0 before Hagerman scored in the second game, they didn't score at all until a surprising 10-1 lead in the first game.

"We made some errors both on our side and receiving," said Cambridge Coach Terry Walker. "I had no reason to be proud of his teams efforts as Diana Eichelberger served the Pirates back into the first game cutting the Cambridge lead to 9-4. An Eichelberger block got Hagerman within four points, but the Pirates got it no closer."

Tough net play, especially in the second game, by junior Tecena Fortin, shut out the Pirates.

The Grizzlies utilized the net play from Lora Richel and the serving of Kami Edwards to win the first game.

Cambridge 15, 15, Culedesa 8, 5

Both squads slipped into second-game blahs, but Culedesa was affected the most.

"Some of the girls had a harder time getting ready for the game than they usually do," said Culedesa Coach Terrie Hines.

"I wasn't a happy camper," said Cambridge Coach Terry Walker.

Kami Edwards led the Bulldog hitters with seven kills in as many attempts.

Culedesa 15-15, N. Gem 10-9

In the Wolves' two game victory over North Gem, both games had many similar moments.

Both were tied at 4-4 and after that one team would reel off four in a row to take an 8-4 lead. Then both teams were tied after the next set for four point lead.

Cambridge just seemed to take advantage late in the game to win at the end.

Minico 27, Hillcrest

IDAHO FALLS — Minico recorded its second win over an A-1 school this year with a 27-7 win over Hillcrest Friday.

Nick Benavidez ran for a touchdown and threw for another to lead Minico. Benavidez completed 7 of 14 passes for 123 yards. James Dayley caught six passes for 85 yards and two touchdowns.

"I'm really happy for our seniors. They've worked hard all year for this," Minico Coach John Billezet said.

The victory was the Spartans' third in its final four games to give them a 4-5 record for the season.

Carey 44, Camas 20

CAREY — Carey exploded for 20 points in the fourth quarter to secure a 44-20 victory over Camas County and a spot in the state playoffs.

The win put the Panthers in a tie with North Gem at 7-1, but the Cowboys claim the Sawtooth Conference title and the top playoff seed because of their victory in the head-to-head matchup earlier in the season.

Butte County 15-15, Clearwater Valley 9-2

"The Pirates held off the Rams dominating the second game in the match and getting some good net play in the opener."

Up 9-4, Butte County, watched as Clearwater Valley made a comeback that cut the lead to 9-8. That's when the Pirates went to work.

Bucky Owens served an ace to extend the lead to 10-8. Jennifer Garnett added a spike and Owens added one of her own to put the game away.

A pair of Amy Thurmon aces helped the Pirates in the second game take immediate advantage of the Rams. —

Butte County led 7-0 before Clearwater Valley scored. Owens closed out any idea of a Ram comeback by serving up a pair of aces to end the match.

Fruitland 15, 2, 15, Grace 9, 15, 13

Grace led by at least five points in all three games.

"I really think our freshmen made quite a few mistakes at the beginning," said Fruitland Coach Bill Betts. "Then they got into the flow of the game."

Grace built leads of 5-0 in the first game, 9-0 in the second and 9-4 in the third.

"We shouldn't have lost the match," said Grace Coach Ray Yamauchi. "They did it with being crafty, just tip the ball to open spots. They weren't overpowering. They're real unconventional team."

Fruitland rallied down two of its last three points with tip at the net by 5-9 senior Carlos Christensen.

Shoshone 15, 15, Kendrick 15, 15

Momentum was the key.

"We just needed to keep the momentum up," said Culedesa Coach Sharon Meador. "It's our first time ever to state."

North Gem 4, 10

With a complete turnaround from its morning play, Hagerman advanced to Saturday's bracket.

The Pirates kept a steady flow of passes coming to senior server Rena Eichelberger, who fed Hagerman's numerous hitters.

"We probably eliminated our mistakes by about 90 percent," said Pirates Coach Dennis Edwards. "Our kids were a lot more relaxed than they were this morning."

Hagerman broke open the first game after leading 6-3. Ashley Nelson served the next seven points.

"Our kids really wanted this one," Edwards said. "We played error-free, and if you do that, you have a lot of success."

In the second game, Hagerman rang up four straight points to lead 10-6. The Cowboys closed with just one before Hagerman again pulled away.

"We just never got untracked," said North Gem Coach Ralph Peterson. "Hagerman played a good match. They were hitting a lot better than they did in the morning, and we just didn't have any real spirit."

Kendrick 15-11-15, Midvale 4-13-13

The first game of the morning session was perhaps the most exciting.

As Kendrick mangled the Rangers in the opener, Midvale came back to take the second game and almost got the third game as well.

Firth 8, 15, 15, Orofino 15, 12, 8

Firth got over its state tournament jitters and Orofino was stung by an old problem.

"We're starting to play," said Firth Coach Randy Cox. "They're starting to loosen up."

Orofino took a 9-3 lead in the first game and never let Firth get closer than four points.

"I don't know what it is," said Orofino Coach Tammy Jiroitnik. "All year we come out and pound them the first game. I can't figure them out, why they go flat that second game."

The Cougars took a 7-2 lead in the second game. Orofino tied it, but fell behind again and stayed 2-1 points back the rest of the way.

Firth took a 10-1 lead on the Maniaa in the deciding game that virtually clinched the win.

"We're starting to play a little smarter," Cox said. "It's the first year they've been to state. It's still new to them. They're learning what it takes to win here."

Clearwater Valley 16, 15, Grace 14, 9

Alana Coulter had eight kills and two soft blocks to go with Kally Lytle's six kills to lead the Rams in the evening loss.

Missy Howard set for 17 assists. Tara Biesecker shined with her passing.

"When we played Butte (in afternoon), it was like we weren't out there," said Clearwater Valley Coach Kay Garland Strihlas. "They just decided to play volleyball."

CV held a 9-3 lead in the first game before Grace rallied. Grace had the second game tied at nine, but the Rams pulled away and finished the match on a Coulter kill.

Fruitland 27, Glenny Ferry 12

GLENN'S FERRY — The Fruitland Grizzlies defeated the Glenny Ferry Pilots 27-12 in the second-ranked Pilots fell for the first time this season.

The Pilots only trailed 15-12 at the half, but Fruitland came out after the break and scored twice putting the game away.

Jake Farris rushed for both Pilot touchdowns.

Shoshone 15, 15, Kendrick 15, 15

Shoshone stuck with an old formula for tournament success.

"You got to win your first one, and you got to win your ugly one," said Indians Coach Larry Messick about Shoshone's second match victory.

The Indians steadily built leads throughout both games, but did so without their usual fire.

"We never emotionally got into it," Messick said. "It wasn't very impressive."

Justin Cummings capitalized on the Indians' best weapon at the net.

Kendrick suffered from the same lack of fire as Shoshone, only more so.

"We missed too many serves (six in the first game) and we're going to work on that," said Tigers Coach Barb Heimington. "Usually we're good on our serve receive, but it wasn't there tonight."

Greenleaf Friends 15, 15, Midvale 11, 5

After an early scare, Greenleaf Friends Academy topped Midvale in a loser-out match.

Andy Winters' hitting sparked the academy in the second game.

In the first game Greenleaf stumbled and fell behind 6-2, 8-4 and 10-6. But Midvale failed to capitalize on the Grizzlies slow start. "It was a poor display of gamesmanship on our part," said Midvale Coach Jim Warren. "I don't think you can miss six or seven serves in eight serves and still win."

of the season." Murtaugh Coach Jim Hamblin said.

Justin Cummings rushed for 217 yards in the game. Cummings totaled more than 1000 yards in eight games this season, earning praise from Hamblin.

Chris Wright contributed to the rushing attack with 128 yards. Brian Ward had nine tackles to lead the Devils' defense.

"They're a great bunch of kids and we had a fun year," Hamblin said.

Jerome got to the third game by overcoming a sloppy first game to easily defeat Lakeland in the second game.

In the first game, the Hawks had a 5-0 lead and never looked back. The Hawks' Janet Kennedy, Michelle Ebel and Michelle Lockhart led the way with a strong hitting game.

Jerome was able to close the gap to 7-5, but then Lakeland scored 7 unanswered points to take away any hope the Tigers had.

In the second game, the Tigers put everything together. The serving of Driessel Hamilton, Lloyd and Bailey combined with the net play of Landis Barnes, Lloyd and Hamilton staked the Tigers to a 12-1 lead. The Hawks, who looked flat at the beginning of the game, caught a spark and put together 7 points in the second game.

The Tigers closed things out forcing the third and deciding game with the serving of Bailey, who accounted for the Tigers' final three points.

Valley teams fall in A-3

The Times-News

It was the District 3 teams beating the Canyon Conference Friday night at both Magic Valley football playoffs and the Idaho State Class A-3 football playoffs.

Melba 14, Gooding 3

GOODING — In a defensive battle, the Melba Mustangs tipped the Gooding Senators 14-3 knocking Gooding out in the Idaho State Class A-3 playoffs.

"They're real well," said Gooding Coach Jeff Jefferies of the Mustang squad. "They played well."

Melba did all of the damage in the first quarter as the Melba quarterback was good on seven of a dozen passes in the first quarter.

Gooding countered with a Chris Comstock field goal cutting the Melba lead to 7-3, but that was the closest that Gooding could get.

he was leaving.

"Mr. Piniella said that several newspaper articles about the Reds just prior to the end of the season were uncalled for and upsetting," her statement said.

"That's not true," Piniella responded. "You know what? It was only embarrassing because the club let it get that far."

Perez's promotion wasn't the only surprise Friday. The Reds also named a coaching staff short on major-league experience to help him.

Ron Oster, who has less than one year's coaching experience in the minors, was named first-base coach. Dave Miley, who has been a Reds' minor-league coach the last six years, will help Perez make game-related decisions as the bench coach.

Both Oster and Miley interviewed for the managing job. The other four candidates were former Reds player Ken Griffey, who declined an assistant coaching job to remain with the Seattle organization; former Pittsburgh minor-league manager Marc Bombard; former New York Mets manager Davey Johnson; and former Texas Rangers manager Bobby Valentine.

The Reds also named former pitcher Don Gullett as their bullpen coach. Pitching coach Larry Rothschild, who has one year left on his contract, will return. A third-base coach hasn't been named.

At Bowden's introductory news conference, Schott made it clear she expects to return to the World Series next year. Perez accepted the one-year contract aware of the pressure.

knot the game 4-4. From that point on, Jerome outscored Kamia 13-3 to advance to a match with Sugar-Salem Saturday in a loser out contest.

Sugar-Salem lost to St. Maries 15-3, 15-2 to get bumped to the losers bracket.

The Tigers' opening round game could best be described as a nightmare from the service line.

"You can't miss serves in the third game and expect to win," said Clark.

In all, the Tigers missed eight serves in the deciding game to cost them a chance of advancing in the winners bracket. Jerome held a 7-4 lead over the Hawks before the serving went south.

"I thought we had them," said Clark.

After the Tigers serving went south on more points than they scored, scoring 11 of their own to collect the win."

'Ugly' putter helps Azinger look good

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Paul Azinger, reunited with his putter, took the lead while the rest of golf's millionaires disappeared into the depths of the field Friday at the halfway point of the Tour Championship.

"It looks like a fishing lure," Azinger said of the borrowed putter he is using in competition for the first time in the season-ending, $2 million tournament.

"Real goofy-looking. It looks odd, real ugly," he said.

But, in comparison with his efforts on the greens the rest of the field, it's effective.

With that strange looking instrument borrowed from his next-door-neighbor, he holed a 10-foot eagle putt and made five birdies in round of 56 that got him through two trips over the famed No. 2 course at Pinehurst in 136, 6 under par.

While he was keeping alive his chances of extending his five-year streak of winning at least one tournament a year, Davis Love III joined his fellow millionaires down deep in the standings.

Love, who shared the first-round lead, bogeyed three of the last four holes, shot 76 and was tied at 144 with PGA champion Nick Price and John Cook.

Price and Cook, each the winner of more than $1 million this season, had second round 70s.

While they were tied for 19th in a field of only the top 30 money-winners of the season, they still remained in contention over the "Fred Couples in some season-long races."

Couples, the Masters champion who came into this season-closing event as the leader in money-winners, scoring average and at the top of the PGA Tour Player of the Year standings, plummeted to the bottom of the pack.

Paul Azinger misses an eagle putt on the 16th hole Friday, but generally did well on the greens.

He struggled to a 78 and two-round total of 151, by four shots the high score in the field. "Just playing bad," Couples said. "I drove it bad, hit the irons bad, putted bad. If I played real good, I might have shot 74. But it doesn't matter. It's not like I was going to beat anybody."

Senior Tour's ironman grabs Kaanapali lead

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — Albus, who has played professional golf than any other player on the Senior PGA Tour this year, shot a 6-under-par 65 on Friday for a one-stroke lead in the $500,000 Kaanapali Classic over George Archer and defending champion Jim Colbert.

Seven players were at 67, two strokes off the lead.

Albus, 52, a former club pro from Long Island, has played every round of each official tournament this year, a feat unmatched by any other player. This is his 35th event.

"It's new and adventurous," he said. "It hasn't bothered me at all."

Albus birdied all three par-5 holes during a six-hole round and closed with six straight pars. He had six birdies.

"It was a fairly easy 65," he said. "I didn't miss any easy ones and I didn't have any three-putts. My longest putt was only eight or nine feet."

Unusually calm conditions prevailed at the par-71 Kaanapali Resort North Course.

"I don't know if we can keep this weather," he said. "This is less trying on your brain. It really scrambles you when the wind blows; it sure tests your will."

Albus' only victory was last year in the Senior Players Championship. His best showing this season is a tie-for-second in the Northville Classic, played near the Piping Rock Club on Long Island where he was the head pro for 14 years.

Albus resigned to play the tour full time in 1992. He never played the PGA Tour on a regular basis and made 20 senior starts in 1991.

Albus has six top-10 finishes this year, with earnings of $362,533 to rank 14th on the money list.

Colbert birdied three of the last four holes to join the hunt for the $75,000 first prize and his second straight win. He had six birdies in his round to offset a single bogey.

Buffaloes, Cornhuskers clash

The Associated Press

Because voters in The Associated Press college football poll were unable to separate Colorado and Nebraska in the balloting this week, those teams will try to do it on the field.

The Big Eight rivalry has 1,046 points in this week's balloting, and are tied for eighth place in the Top 25. Ironically, the schedule sends them against each other Saturday at Nebraska.

The game is a study in offensive philosophies. Nebraska's punishing ground game leads the country with an average of 347 yards. Colorado prefers to travel through the air and averages 334 yards that way, fourth best in the nation.

Nebraska's ground game is handled by I-backs Calvin Jones and Derek Brown, both averaging over 100 yards. The twin runners leave Colorado coach Bill McCartney envious. "They're both great players," he said. "They're both going to have to get the flu."

Nebraska coach Tom Osborne might have the same feelings about McCartney's passers — Kordell Stewart and Kay Dimer, brother of the former BYU Heisman Trophy winner.

Osborne thinks it's wrong, though, to focus on the formidable attacks of those two teams. "There will be many other factors in winning or losing this ballgame besides running and throwing the football," he said.

In other Top 25 games, it's West Virginia at No. 1 Miami; No. 15 Stanford at No. 2 Washington; No. 3 Michigan at No. 5 Texas A&M at Southern Methodist; No. 6 Florida State at No. 23 Virginia; No. 7 Georgia vs. No. 20 Florida at Boosters pledge support for black college bowl

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A civic group has pledged to sponsor a proposed 1992 Heritage Bowl, which organizers said was the only bowl game for historically black colleges.

"We need sponsors," said Broward County Commissioner Sylvia Potter, head of the new organizing committee. "Everybody's afraid because of what happened last year."

That event attracted only 7,728 fans and lost $320,000, which is still owed to former sponsors around the southeast. Last year's prime sponsor, Alamo Rent A Car, dropped out, as did the original organizers, and Potter's group took over.

Potter made her remarks Thursday after Broward County's Tourist Development Council pledged $50,000 toward the cost of putting on a second Heritage Bowl game at Miami's Orange Bowl.

But the pledge, expected to be approved next Tuesday by the County Commission, cannot be spent by Heritage Bowl organizers unless they first secure enough money to put on the event, according to a stipulation made by the tourist panel.

The $50,000 pledge brought the total promised so far for this year's Heritage Bowl to just $63,200.

The only other contributor is the city of Fort Lauderdale. Organizers say they'll need $500,000 to mount the event, which is tentatively scheduled for Jan. 2.

The tourism council said backing the Heritage Bowl would be a good investment for Broward County. The Black Entertainment Television network is scheduled to televise the event, along with ads on Broward and on the game itself.

Unbeaten foe blocks Ruddock rematch road

LONDON (AP) — Two years after being maneuvered out of a title fight with Mike Tyson, Razor Ruddock aims to guarantee one with current heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield.

First, he has to become the first boxer to beat 1988 Olympic super-heavyweight champion Lennox Lewis.

Saturday night's fight at Earl's Court is billed as a final eliminator for a world title contest. Holyfield has signed a contract to fight the winner, provided the champion beats Ruddock in Las Vegas on Nov. 13.

Even if Bowe wins, Ruddock hopes a world title fight won't escape him again.

He was set to meet Tyson in 1990, but the former champion's handlers switched instead to James "Buster" Douglas. Ironically, Tyson was knocked out by underdog Douglas in Tokyo.

Ruddock finally met up with Tyson in a non-title fight in March 1991 and lost in seven rounds. Three months later, Tyson beat Ruddock again on a decision.

Ruddock rebounded from those two defeats by beating former world champion Greg Page in eight rounds and unbeaten Phil Jackson in four. Now he is the World Boxing Council's No. 1 contender. "I know what I am. I know what I've got," Ruddock said. "You are looking at the man who's going to be the next world heavyweight champion."

Donovan 'Razor' Ruddock watches his upcoming opponent British boxer Lennox Lewis try on a glove during their weigh-in for tonight's fight in London.

Now the American-born Canadian meets Lewis, the No. 2 contender. Although Lewis won the Olympic title for Canada, where he was raised, and trains, he now lives in the United States. But he was born in London and is British.

That puts a big weight on the 6-foot-5, 21-year-old's shoulders.

Non-British heavyweight has won the world heavyweight title this century. The last to do so was Bob Mississippi State at Kentucky; and No. 25 Texas at Texas Tech.

No. 4 Alabama and No. 21 North Carolina State don't play this week.

After surviving its own schedule crisis with close wins in consecutive weeks over Arizona, Florida State and Penn State, No. 1 Miami is sitting back, waiting to see how No. 2 Washington does with its own back-to-back burden — No. 22 Stanford on Saturday, No. 17 Arizona next week.

Don Cockell, Brian London, Henry Cooper, Joe Bugner, Richard Donohoe and Frank Bruno.

Lewis recalls how British trainer Freddie Roach lost in five rounds to Tyson in February 1989.

"Everyone was saying 'Oh, wow, that's our Frank brace.' He was a hero," Lewis said.

"I thought to myself, 'What will I do when they actually have a winner?'"

Despite the local fans' support, Lewis, Ruddock, (27-3) is rated as 11 favorite by British bookmakers.

The 6-foot-3 Ruddock weighed in Friday at 231½ pounds. Lewis, at 230½, weighed 227½.

Besides Tyson and Page, Ruddock has fought former world champions Mike Weaver and Michael Dolev.

Weaver is the biggest name in Lewis' record, and critics say the British fighter has taken an easy path toward a title fight.

Saturday's fight is easily Lewis' toughest yet. He is expected to be faster and more mobile than Ruddock, and could hurt his opponent with combinations.

Ruddock has a hard left jab. But with his trainer, Floyd Patterson, himself a former two-time heavyweight champion, believes Ruddock has a more varied arsenal of punches.

"You will see his style has changed considerably," Patterson said. "Before it was left hands only, but now he jabs and has a lot more right hands to the head and body."

Trio of top horses meet on mile track today

HALLANDALE, Fla. (AP) — Arazi, who lost a Kentucky Derby; A.P. Indy, who missed a Kentucky Derby; and Strike the Gold, who won a Kentucky Derby, will get a chance to strut their stuff in Breeders' Cup races.

Arazi, the beaten Derby favorite this year, will be seeking a second Breeders' Cup victory when he meets 13 rivals in the Mile on the turf Saturday at Gulfstream Park.

The French-bred colt won the 1991 Breeders' Cup Juvenile in his first race on the dirt. His performance established him as the Derby favorite, but he finished eighth in that 1 1/4-mile race.

A.P. Indy was considered a top Derby contender, but he was scratched the morning of the May 2 race because of a left-front foot injury.

He will try to snap a two-race losing streak with a victory in the 1 1/8-mile Classic. The colt's last victory was at 1 1/4 miles in the Belmont Stakes.

Strike the Gold will be trying to become the fifth Derby victor to win the $3 Million Classic and the third to do so a year after taking the Derby.

Ferdinand won the 1986 Derby and 1987 Classic, and Alysheba won the 1987 Derby and the 1988 Classic.

The two colts who won the Derby and Classic in the same year were Sunday Silence in 1989 and Unbridled in 1990.

Eddie Delahoussaye, who will ride A.P. Indy, will have mounts in six of the seven Breeders' Cup races.

He lost his mount in the 1 1/8-mile Juvenile when Tactical Advantage was scratched Friday morning because of a chipped left front ankle.

Chris McCarron is the only jockey scheduled to ride in five races. His best bet for a fourth BC win appears to be with Gilded Time — unbeaten in three starts — in the Juvenile.

Pat Day, who will ride early favorite Sky Classic in the 1/2-mile Turf, has six mounts, as does Jerry Bailey. He will ride contenders Educated Risk in 1 1/8-mile Juvenile Fillies, Sea Hero in the Juvenile and Sultry Song in the Classic.

Day has six winners, tying him with Luffit Pineau Jr. for the overall Breeders' Cup lead. Perret has three wins.

Pincay will increase his lead in starters to 50 with three mounts Saturday.

All three will be betting outsiders. McCarron will have had 48 starts after Saturday.

Shug McCaughey, who has three Breeders' Cup victories, will send out six starters, tops among trainers. His best chances appear to lie with Educated Risk in the Juvenile Fillies and Versailles Treaty in the 1/2-mile Distaff.

D. Wayne Lukas has 10 victories, by far the most among Breeders' Cup trainers. But he hasn't won since 1989.

He will send out four starters in a bid to end his drought. His best chance could lie with Mountain Cat in the Juvenile.

Four starters will give Lukas a total of 77 in the series that started in 1984. McCaughey will be second with 27.

The 5-2 early favorite in the 6-furlong Sprint is Rubiano, to be ridden by Julie Krone. No female jockey has ever won a Breeders' Cup race.

Krone, who has had five BC mounts before Saturday, also will ride Shaved Interest in the Distaff.

Also in the Sprint will be Sheikh Albadou, British-bred and based, who won that race last year.

He and Arazi will be the only two 1991 winners to run Saturday.

Rockes sign 3 more for a dozen

DENVER (AP) — The Colorado Rockies on Friday signed three free agents — pitcher Balvino Galvez, catcher Gilberto Reyes and infielder Trout Hubbard — bringing their total of free agent signings to 12.

Galvez, 28, a right-hander, was signed by the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1984. He spent most of nine seasons in the minor leagues, making his only major league appearance in 1986 when he was 0-1 with a 3.92 ERA in 10 games. His best season was 1987, when he went 12-7 with a 3.77 ERA in 23 games for Triple-A Portland.

Reyes, 28, played for the Montreal Expos in 1991, hitting .217 in 83 games. Originally signed in 1987 by the Dodgers, Reyes spent nine seasons with that organization.

Racial tensions threaten disruption of NYC Marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — An Orthodox Jewish community, angered by the acquittal of a black teenager in the stabbing death of a rabbinical student, is threatening to disrupt the New York City Marathon, race director Fred Lebow says.

Lebow said Friday that he was notified of the possible disruption "by some residents in the Crown Heights neighborhood of Brooklyn, at about the 10-mile mark of the race, has been in turmoil since Thursday night when 17-year-old Lemrick Nelson was acquitted on four charges of murder and manslaughter in the death of Yankel Rosenbaum, a 29-year-old Hasidic scholar from Australia.

Nelson was accused of stabbing Rosenbaum in August 1991 during racial violence that erupted after an auto accident in which a 7-year-old black boy, Gavin Cato, was killed and a cousin of his was injured.

Lebow said that if the disturbances or the demonstrations prevent the race from being run through Crown Heights, "we have some alternatives."

"In that case, the route may be longer" than the customary 26 miles, 385 yards, he said. He did not elaborate on the alternatives.

Meanwhile, Lisa Ryan, a spokeswoman for the Department of Transportation, said there were no immediate plans to change the route.

"We've heard there may be some community disruptions, but we have no plans to change things at this point," she said. "It's too late to change the route. And if a group is intent on causing a disruption, they will."

Asked if the marathon would be disrupted, Rabbi Shmuel Butman said it would not.

Norman Rosenbaum, brother of the slain victim, said that in view of a proposed federal probe of the case, he thinks those who have pledged civil disobedience would re-examine their plans.

The federal investigation "adds a new complexion to some extent," he said.

Mayor David Dinkins pleaded for calm and announced a $10,000 reward for information leading to the conviction of Rosenbaum's killer.

"In order for the route to be changed, the marathon organizers, the New York Road Runners Club, needs the permission of the Department of Transportation.

Ryan added there was a possibility that extra police would be added at points along the route, but even that was not definite.

The race, with a field of approximately 26,000, begins at the Verrazano Bridge in Staten Island and traverses through the city's five boroughs, before ending in Central Park.

"For 22 years, the New York City Marathon has been a multi-ethnic, multi-cultural event that has unified the city," Lebow said in a statement.

"It is a positive and peaceful event representing 91 countries embracing a variety of beliefs and ideals. Everyone runs together and celebrates similarities instead of differences.

"I come from a very religious family with a very strong tradition of respect and acceptance of other communities and cultures. In that spirit, I sincerely assure our neighbors in Crown Heights to support our efforts in presenting one of the great symbols for all New Yorkers."

Waitz will raise funds during run

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a good thing that Grete Waitz, nine-time winner of the New York City Marathon, isn't thinking about winning Sunday's race.

"My preparation for this marathon never has been as thorough as that of a 39-year-old Waitz, who has retired from elite competition. "I've never been in worse shape in my life. I'm running so slow."

Notebook

Waitz will not have to run fast. She is running only to accompany race director Fred Lebow in his first New York City Marathon start since 1971. The two are running to help raise money for cancer research.

Lebow was stricken with brain cancer in 1990 and with thyroid cancer last year.

He is sympathetic with Waitz.

"She's going to have to run twice as slow as usual," said Lebow, who hopes to finish in less than five hours.

"I'm going to have fun, she's going to suffer."

RAISING MONEY: Like race director Fred Lebow and nine-time women's champion Grete Waitz, Rev. Tom Blaney of Raytown, Mo., will be running in Sunday's New York City Marathon for a good cause.

Blaney will be trying to raise money through pledges per mile for two 4-year-olds, Jordan Pingleton of Raytown and Allison Coates of Lee's Summit, Mo., who have leukemia. Blaney is a veteran runner and a Presbyterian minister.

TRYING AGAIN: Kamila Gradus of Poland, one of the women's favorites in Sunday's New York City Marathon, will be making her season debut at the marathon distance in Sunday's race.

That's not the way she planned it. Gradus was set to compete in the Olympic Marathon, until about a week before the Games. Then, she suffered an inflammation of the right knee while training with the Polish team in France and had to withdraw.

"France is too hilly a place to train," said Gradus, who has run the marathon in 2 hours, 26 minutes, 55 seconds, the 19th-fastest ever.

For the New York race, she has been training at Boulder, Colo. "Boulder is a good place to train," said Gradus, winner of last Sunday's 5-mile marathon tuncup race in Central Park.

BRIDGE SHOCK: When Steve Brace of Britain ran the New York City Marathon for the first time in 1990, placing third, he was surprised to find a bridge crossing at the 16-mile mark.

"I was thinking the course was a lot flatter," Brace said. "I was shocked the last time I ran it ... because of the bridges."

Brace, 31, will be one of the most experienced competitors in Sunday's New York City Marathon. This will be his 42nd attempt at the 26-mile, 385-yard distance since 1981.

"I started as a fun runner knocking out times over three hours," he said. "Now, I run only two or three marathons a year."

Brace said it took him more than 30 marathons to become an elite runner. "I learned by my mistakes," he said.

A KILLER SCHEDULE: Kim Wan-Ki of South Korea went into the Olympics with big aspirations. He came out of the Barcelona Games, with much dismay.

Kim wound up 28th, 27 places behind his countryman, gold medalist Hwang Young-jo.

What happened?

"Two months prior to the Games, my condition was not that good, so I didn't run as well as expected," Kim said through a translator. "At Barcelona, I checked my time while I was running and I was worried."

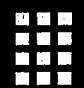

"I had no injury, but I overtrained."

When asked how hard he had trained, Kim replied, "About 250 to 300 kilometers (150 to 180 miles) a week."

That's an average of more than 20 miles per day, not much less than the marathon distance.

Meet Your Match

What a fantastic way to meet someone with whom you share things in common (whether it be carpentry, outdoor activities, or dating). You'll find all types of people - tall, short, energetic, young, old, friendly searching for a perfect match.

It's easy! All you do is write an ad describing yourself, your interests and/or the type of person(s) you would like to meet. No names, addresses, or phone numbers will appear in the ads to maintain confidentiality. Simply wait for the responses to be forwarded daily, and choose who you would like to contact.

Reading the section daily will increase your chances of finding an intriguing ad that sounds like it may describe your perfect match. Then, you can respond by writing to the box number. All correspondence is handled with the strictest confidence by The Times-News.

1. Write a letter to those individuals to whom you wish to reply. Include something about yourself, your interests, Don't forget to include how the person may get in touch with you. You may answer in my ads at your wish.

2. Put each letter in separate envelope. Write the box number shown on each advertisement on the front of the envelope in the lower left hand corner, affix the proper postage and seal the envelope.

3. The forwarding fee for each letter is $3.00 (or two letters for $5.00). Cash, checks and money orders are acceptable.

4. Enclose your envelopes and payment in a large envelope, seal it, affix the proper postage. Address to: MEET YOUR MATCH c/o The Times-News P.O. Box 548 Twin Falls, Idaho 83303

We will send your letters on the individuals for you. The person can then contact you directly.

* Participants must be 16 years of age or over

* We request we cannot forward letters to individuals who do not respond to the correct residence.

* We will keep all letters sent without proper forwarding fee, for 30 days, after which they will be destroyed.

• Ad Cost: 10/1 week, 11/5 2 weeks, 20/3 weeks. Includes: Daily in The Times-News, Tuesday in Chart and Saturday in Ag Weekly.

• Reply Cost: 13 per response or 2 for 15

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Turkish proverb.

Today's South relaxed when he saw the dummy Thanks to the opening lead, he could count an easy 12 tricks. This is always a time of danger and South proved it by his overconfident and careless play.

An initial spade lead would have caused some discomfort, but West started with his club ace, since the bidding marked dummy with a singleton club at most. The lead was a dubious choice.

A low spade came next and South saw no reason to finesse — he could count 12 tricks. He knew he could win one spade, four hearts, two clubs, ruffs and five trumps. Good counting but bad execution. He cashed out two high trumps and was awakened when West discarded. He ruffed a club in dummy and led a heart back to his ace to ruff another club. He cashed the king and queen of hearts, discarding his losing spade, but when dummy's last heart was led, East ruffed. South could overruff but was left with a losing club.

Where did South go wrong?

After the spade shift, South should have "dummy's spade" ace, lead a trump to his ace and ruff a club. Another trump is led to his king for another club ruff in dummy, and South leads to his heart ace to draw the last trump. Now he can safely cash dummy's high hearts and his total reaches 12 and a bonus.

Sharp-eyed analysts will note that a dummy-reversal plan will land the game whether the opening lead is the club ace or a spade (ruffing out of dummy's spades high and concede only a club loser).
